If you don't already have a job, chances are you'll have a difficult time finding one.

There are more students landing for job than there are available, said Dave Baysen, an interviewer for Job Services of Lee County, Monday.

The UI personnel office has been told 12 people to seek work, and has asked, "Are we a problem," one of the UI personnel office, said.

Baysen and the new hiring last fall need to be now working full-time for the first time to be.

Student volunteers make it difficult for the personal officers to place them, Baysen said, getting a job through the UI personnel office.

"It's so difficult to find a school's work," the UI personnel office, said.

The UI personnel office was recently available only once a week, some were part-time positions, she said.

U.S. hypocrisy

The United States was the only country to vote with United Nations Security Council members against S. Africa in the Third World committee condemning the South African invasion of Angola. Angola offered the vote that guaranteed the South-West Africa People's Organization using Angolan as a base to harass S. Africa. Namibia is an ally of the present U.S. adviser, and Cuban troops in Angola, only fuel the violence in the area.

That explanation is false and insufficient for three reasons: First, the South-West Africa issue contradicts the Second World War, in which the South Africa invasion was condemned by the United Nations. Second, some members have the right to vote on another country: if it does not have the right to vote on another country: it is not important. Moreover, it is important to know what South Africa has done: it invaded Angola in order to maintain S. Africa's influence there. And third, if the Reagan administration wishes to apply the principle of non-intervention, it should propose for itself too, or for itself plus Namibia. If it did, it would be easy to support itself for Namibia and itself.

The Reagan administration should reconsider its position and decide to control the South African invasion. It should also use its influence to pressure South Africa to get out of Namibia.

Gay rights judge

Gay Jerry Brown of California last week appointed Mary Morgan, a San Francisco attorney, to a position in the San Francisco Municipal Court. This would not be remarkable, except that Morgan is a homosexual and the first appointment of her kind will become the nation's first acknowledged LGBT judge.

Brown is to be congratulated. Many governors might have hesitated to appoint such a potentially controversial appointee to a position they do not want to take. Morgan, on the other hand, has never been shy about her views. She opposes the ban on same-sex marriages and has openly defended those rights.

In a statement, Morgan said, "I am grateful to Governor Brown for making this appointment. I look forward to serving the people of San Francisco and the state in this capacity."

Unclear foreign policy

The Reagan administration's apparent lack of any clear cut foreign policy is beginning to tell. The administration seems to encourage the West to act tough with the Soviet bloc, and to support the East to act tough with the West.

The administration has adopted a pragmatic rather than a principled stance on nuclear matters in Europe. The administration has called for a reduction in nuclear arms, but it has failed to take any meaningful steps towards this goal. The administration has also failed to respond to the threat of the Soviet Union's nuclear weapons.

It is not clear whether the administration is trying to encourage the West to act tough with the Soviet bloc, or to support the East to act tough with the West. It is clear that the administration is not taking any meaningful steps towards a reduction in nuclear arms.

Sad season for opening schools

Choosing the right school is an important decision. There are two main factors to consider: the school's qualifications and its moral integrity.

In many cities, parents are going to have to hire their children's lawyers to file suit. The school will not be able to cancel the school opening at the school's discretion.

WHERE THE SCHOOLS ARE OPENING: There will be fewer teachers trying to meet the special needs of too many students. The National Education Association says that it will be difficult for the schools to open on schedule without cutting back on the number of teachers.

More children of America are going to find school a less promising place to renew their two years ago.

The explanation offered for the veto was that guerrillas of the Africa People's Organization under a mandate from the League of Nations. Several students were killed, and the Mexican government, who are always there, and the Mexicans, who are always there, and the Mexicans, who are always there, and the Mexicans, who are always there, and the Mexicans, who are always there.

Because states, cities, and local communities in S. Africa are going to get the last word on whether or not to build new schools, or whether to spend money on the last word on whether or not to build new schools.

Capitol punishment misguided and immoral

Letters

Our proposal is to return to a system of capital punishment, but one which would determine the fate of a human being with extreme care and precision. We believe that the death penalty is the most effective way to deter crime, and that it is the only way to ensure that criminals are not able to have the last word on their own fate.

We urge you to consider our proposal, and to support the return to a system of capital punishment.

We are also proposing a system in which the death penalty is determined by a jury of twelve, consisting of ordinary citizens. This system would ensure that the death penalty is not determined by a few judges, but by the people.

We believe that this system would be more effective in deterring crime, and that it is the only way to ensure that criminals are not able to have the last word on their own fate.

Prevent the death penalty, and support our proposal.

Capitol punishment acts as a deterrent to crime.

This is not to say that the death penalty is perfect. No system of punishment is perfect. The death penalty is not without flaws. However, it is the only system of punishment that has the potential to deter crime.

We believe that the death penalty is the only system of punishment that has the potential to deter crime. We urge you to consider this as you make your decision on how to handle the matter of the death penalty.

Women’s pay still less than men’s

The National Organization for Women (NOW) has taken an issue to the courts in an attempt to force women into the labor market in the United States. NOW is challenging the prevailing wage gap, which it says is a violation of the Equal Pay Act of 1963.

NOW’s lawsuit, filed in federal court in Washington, D.C., claims that the current pay gap is a result of systemic discrimination and that women are not being paid the same wages for comparable work as men.

The organization argues that the pay gap is not a result of individual acts of discrimination, but rather a systemic failure of the labor market to compensate women fairly.

NOW is seeking damages for back pay, as well as an injunction ordering employers to pay women the same wages as men for comparable work.

The case is expected to set a precedent for future lawsuits challenging the pay gap, and could have significant implications for women’s rights and equality in the workplace.

NOW’s lawsuit is one of many efforts to address the gender pay gap, which continues to be a significant problem in the United States.

Many other organizations and individual activists have also been calling for action to address the pay gap, including the National Women’s Law Center, the American Civil Liberties Union, and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

These groups argue that the pay gap is not just a problem for individual workers, but for整个 workforce and the economy as a whole.

They point to research showing that the pay gap is a barrier to women’s advancement and economic security, and that it is a drag on the country’s economic growth.

The pay gap also has significant implications for women’s ability to support their families, as well as their ability to save for retirement and other important financial goals.

NOW and other organizations are calling for policies that would address the root causes of the pay gap, including increasing the minimum wage, enforcing equal pay laws, and providing family and medical leave.

These policies would help women to secure fair pay and to advance in their careers, and would have the added benefit of boosting the economy as a whole.

NOW is hopeful that its lawsuit will be a catalyst for broader action to address the pay gap, and is urging other organizations and individuals to join the fight for women’s economic security.
Military spending may be revised for benefit of balanced budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Pentagon has shifted the annual budget review to include reviewing their spending priorities so that the final budget is the result of a "natural" process and an "autocratic" one for the first time in its history, according to defense industry sources.

The change is expected to require a major reorganization of the defense department, and is designed to speed up the budget process and reduce the amount of time spent on the budget review.

The shift in process is expected to have a significant impact on the budget, with the military now expected to spend more time reviewing their spending priorities and less time on the budget review itself.

The move is expected to result in savings of up to $10 billion per year, according to defense industry sources.

Iranian 'soft' stance denounced

A UN meeting on pressure to oust the pro-Islamic government of Iran went off track as meeting participants staked their positions and sought to protect their national interests on the international stage.

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) -- Anti-Iranian forces in that country are expected to increase pressure on Iran during a weekend meeting of the Organization of American States (OAS) in Guadalajara, Mexico, which opened Tuesday.

The OAS is meeting to consider if Iran should be expelled from the organization following the bombing of a U.S. military air base in Lebanon.

LAHORE, Pakistan -- Jimmy Carter, who is on his first official visit to Pakistan since being elected president of the U.S., Thursday visited the Mazar-i-Sharif, the largest Islamic shrine in the world.

The visit is the latest in a series of visits by the U.S. to Pakistan, and it was aimed at improving relations between the two countries.

The visit was also seen as an attempt to improve the image of the U.S. in Pakistan, where the U.S. has been accused of supporting the Taliban regime.

But the visit has been criticized by some in the U.S. who say it is a waste of time and money.

Northwestern Bell asks $76 million hike

The Daily Planners

Gov. Robert Ray said yesterday that the company should be allowed to hike its rates 65 percent to cover construction of a new telephone plant.

The 55 percent rise, the highest asked for by the company in the state, would bring the company's telephone rates up to $2.60 per month for a line.

Ray said the company has lost $40 million in rate hikes since 1974 and is now asking for another $76 million.

"They say they just want their fair share," he said. "If this is fair, then I'd like to see them give me the fair share of what it cost me to build the plant.""'

The rate hike would cost the average Bell subscriber $3.20 per month.

"This is not the largest total increase in the history of the telephone industry," Ray said.

"I believe in a balanced rate for a balanced service," he said. "I think the company has not been fair to the ratepayers of the state of Iowa."'

The rate hike would be the largest in the company's history, Ray said.

"I'm not calling for the rate to be decreased," he said. "I'm calling for it to be increased."'

Was (Not Was) sounds like nothing ever heard before

by Jeffery Miller

Funk is a musical style that is a cross between rock, R&B, and soul music. It emerged in the late 1960s as a reaction to the hardships of the civil rights movement and the Vietnam War. With its laid-back groove and soulful melodies, funk became a powerful outlet for expressing the pain and frustration of the time. The group Was (Not Was) was one of the most successful funk bands of the 1970s, and their music remains popular to this day. In the 1980s, funk gave way to hip-hop and electronic dance music, but the legacy of funk continues to influence modern music and culture in many ways.

Records

Funk has been around in various forms since the 1960s, but Was (Not Was) was one of the first funk bands to gain mainstream success. Their music was characterized by its catchy rhythms, humorous lyrics, and playful melodies. The group's success led to a wave of funk revivalism in the 1990s, as artists like Snoop Dogg and The Black Eyed Peas drew inspiration from the genre.

FBI finds Rubens painting in Virginia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agents say they have arrested a man accused of stealing a rare painting by Rubens that was hung for years at the University of Virginia and only recently noticed as stolen. The museum director said the painting had been stolen from a dormitory room at the university in 1981.

Art collector Hirshhorn dies at 82

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joseph Hirshhorn, a Last Supper enthusiast who turned his glittering personal art collection into a dream reality and gave it to the Smithsonian Institution under the condition that it never be sold, has died. He was 82.
