Residents air opinions on Bible issue

By Michael Leon Staff Writer

Two hundred residents of the Clear Creek school district heard a debate Wednesday night on a referendum to adopt the Bible as a supplementary text - a referendum the district may have to defend in court if it is adopted.

Residents present at the meeting, scheduled and moderated by Clear Creek School Superintendent Jon Baker, expressed little support for the referendum, and applauded several times in response to those who said they believed the referendum is unconstitutional. Their reactions were recorded by camera crews from the three major networks and two dozen reporters from around the state.

The five-member forum panel included: referendum author Ian Johnson, a UI law student and Clear Creek district resident; UI Law Professor Robert Clinton; Iowa Civil Liberties Union Executive Director Julie Golden; Iowa Conservative Union Executive Director Phil Sheldon and Tom Gelman, lawyer for the school district.

Opening statements made by the panelists were followed by questions from the audience.

IN HIS opening statement, Johnson gave his interpretation of the referendum: "Very simply, the referendum adopts the Bible as a supplementary textbook - it is completely voluntary. any student could use it to mean his Bible, whether Catholic, Protestant, we teach the Bible when its version of the Koran or any religious book." He added, "It can't be said to

The ICLU predicts the defeat of the Bible referendum.....page 9

HE SAID court interpretations of the First Amendment specify that "state funds cannot be used to further a specific religion or religions in general," he said. Adoption of the Bible as a supplementary text would require the use of state funds, Clinton

Clinton said he questions whether the referendum should have been on the ballot because the state Code restricts school referendums to "textbooks regularly adopted." Any book adopted as a supplementary text would not be 'regularly adopted'' as required by law, he said

'All I can tell you is that of what I know of constitutional law - and I've taught it for nine years - is that this referendum has almost no chance of standing up in court," Clinton said.

"I AM NOT telling you not to vote for this referendum," Clinton said. "If you want to start a constitutional test case, go ahead. In my personal view, if you go to court, that case will lose.

School District Attorney Gelman said he felt the district would be forced to defend the referendum if it were challenged in court.

Johnson was questioned by a high school student. "The reason we are taught something is because it is the best knowledge we have. So why should creation conflicts with the best that science has found?" Johnson replied, "I can take any evidence of evolution and interpret it in favor of Creationism." The referendum reads in part: "Be it resolved that the Clear Creek ... School District ... hereby adopts the Bible as a supplementary textbook in every course, class or unit in every division, Clinton said the referendum conflicts discipline or subject at every level which includes in its regular curriculum explanations of the origins of the natural universe, living things, humankind, human nature, society, personal or social morality, religion or particular religions, or evil and its social and historical manifestations, and that instructors be authorized to make reference to this textbook.

Armed inmates hold hostages, ransack lowa prison

FORT MADISON (UPI) - Rampaging convicts at the Iowa State Penitenliary Wednesday took 12 hostages and ased them in stages throughout the day while fellow inmates plowed down fences with a bulldozer and ignited fires in the prison.

The last seven hostages were released after 9 p.m., prison officials aid. None were harmed.

Three of the 12 hostages were more were released later in the evenng, then the final seven.

A handful of inmates holding the Prison employees at gunpoint agreed earlier in the evening to release the nine hostages remaining at that time in exchange for a news conference at which they aired their complaints about prison conditions.

Officials said after the news conrence, however, that only two of the naining nine hostages were released at the 142-year-old prison, which uses 626 inmates

A SECOND GROUP of inmates took charge of the remaining seven hostages later in the evening and demanded amnesty for their release, officials said.

The original group of inmates tried to coax the other inmates to release the remaining hostages after the news conference, authorities added.

Firefighters were called in to fight several small blazes and one major one leased earlier in the evening, two after inmates were returned to their cells, said Michael Reagen, commissioner of the state Department of Social Services.

We expect the inmates will return to their cells, but there is a good bit of work to do at the institution," Reagen said. He said a major fire was burning at Building 51, which prison officials said houses the chapel and classrooms.

"The extent of damage is not immediately known," said Don Malinger, deputy prison business manager. While he spoke to reporters, a helicopter circled the prison grounds, directing a brilliant spotlight beam on prison property into the yard.

FIVE INMATES, including two convicted killers, used homemade guns and knives to seize four prison employees about 10:30 a.m. Wednesday. Later, eight more employees were found locked in a basement training room of the prison's cafeteria area. The four original hostages - James Menke, John Moline, George Harry and Eldon McKinley - all had been released by 7 p.m. Wednesday. A fifth unidentified hostage also was released. Three other employees in the building's infirmary - two nurses and a female corrections officer - were escorted unharmed by other inmates from the hostage area to the warden's office. More than 100 other inmates milling around in the prison yard outside the building where the hostages were taken refused to return to their cells and reportedly were wreaking havoc

They're tearing the hell out of things inside," Fort Madison

Patrolman R.M. Bever Jr. said. When I left, they were using a bulldozer and plowing down a fence.

BEVER, WHO was patrolling the east wall of the aging penitentiary, said he could see several broken windows in some cellhouses.

Reporters from an Omaha, Neb., television station, positioned on a bluff overlooking the prison, said they could hear sounds of heavy equipment being used and cheers from prisoners as objects fell

Officials confirmed that Michael Gavin, of Ottumwa, convicted earlier this year of the stabbing death of a Davenport man, was among the prisoners involved in the hostagetaking. Gavin was sentenced to life in prisonfor his role in the death of Mark Webb last year.

Prison has troubled past

DES MOINES (UPI) - The Iowa State Penitentiary has been burned, battered and partially dismantled several times during its 142year-old existence, with most of the incidents tied to complaints about living conditions.

Gov. Robert D. Ray, legislators and state officials had hoped the worst of the problems at the Fort Madison facility were close to being resolved since a federal judge had agreed to the state's plan to improve conditions.

The plan was slowly being implemented when a small band of armed inmates grabbed hostages Wednesday in a disturbance that resulted in substantial property damage. All the hostages were released by late Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge William Stuart ruled in February that conditions at the prison violated the inmates' constitutional protections against "cruel and unusual punishment." He issued the order after negotiations with a group of inmates who had filed a lawsuit against the state in 1978.

THE STATE plan included 60 provisions dealing with fire safety. health and sanitary conditions, prison population, prisoner services, rules to deal more effectively with medical emergencies, See Conditions, page 9

No offense, really, but let's be honest: Iowans simply do not understand these things. Iowans say "pop" in-stead of "soda." The ads for Lisa Birnbach's lecture said: "Investigate the 'Gator Phenomenon,'' when actually, the Rene Lacoste emblem is a crocodile, the true Prep symbol is the duck and, anyway, shirts aren't as important as khaki pants and boxer shorts.

Birnbach is the editor and chief author (there are 99 names in the Preppy Handbook, now in its 20th printing and making a fortune in stationery, T-shirts, tote bags, gift kits and knick-knacks. It has also put Birnbach on the lecture circuit, and if she hadn't shown up at the Union Ballroom Wednesday night in a cardigan sweater, Lacoste shirt, wrap plaid skirt, pearl necklace and espadrilles, her fans would have been crushed

She was there when the trade-paperback experts of Workman Publishing (who gave us B. Kliban's Cat and The Dieter's Guide to Weight Loss During Sex) proposed the book that made her "the Margaret Mead of prep, the high priestess of prep, the Amy Vanderbilt of prep." The Official Preppy Handbook deals with the entire preppy lifestyle, life cycle and philosophy, instead of just the trappings and Top-Siders everyone jokes about. According to Birnbach, "Preppy is not just alligators. It is the sense of confidence. It is valuing table manners over honesty. It is a sense that girls at Oldfield's sleep around. That's what's important."

Still, in the Ballroom (350 people, moderate applause - enthusiasm is very un-prep), Birnbach was content to deal with college life in terms of preppy one-liners: "You should major in the liberal arts, because they prepare you for nothing."

HER TALK ranged from the appeal of prep idol F. Scott Fitzgerald -

"Young death is very prep. I'd rather look good than have a long resume" -to the preppy version of Introduction to Philosophy: "If I walk into Brooks Brothers and nobody sees me, can I prove that I was there?"

A true preppy can answer any question. Why do people become alcoholics? "Because it helps ... Once you've thrown up or passed out in public, nothing can faze you for the rest of your life."

Complaint is lodged against Wards store

By Martha Manikas Staff Writer

Iowa City photographer and businessman John Zielinski has filed a human rights complaint charging that one of his handicapped employees was mistreated in the Iowa City Montgomery Ward store.

Zielinski, owner of the Iowa Heritage Gallery formerly situated in the store, said Wednesday that Beverly McClelland, who has epilepsy, was ordered by a Wards employee to do stressful work.

McClelland's labor triggered a seizure in early August, her first in 18 months, he said.

Iowa City Civil Rights Specialist Phyllis Williams confirmed Wednesday that the complaint was filed with her office against the Wards store located at Wardway Plaza.

ZIELINSKI SAID he was out of town when a Wards employee ordered McClelland to begin packing the equipment in his photo gallery so it could be moved from the store. McClelland was told to do so because the Wards store is preparing to close Sept. 9, he said.

Zielinski said he filed the human rights complaint because no one in Wards' employ had the authority to instruct McClelland. Zielinski said he hired McClelland with the intention of assigning her only light work at his photo gallery.

McClelland, who was institutionalized for a total of 16 years. has worked for Zielinski for almost a year.

The complaint was filed on behalf of McClelland as "my only way to make a token protest," Zielinski said.

Zielinski did not learn that Wards was intending to close until the day before he left for a July bike trip and was not told the gallery would have to be removed during his absence. He left for his trip after being assured by Ward's operation manager, Vic Cook, that customers would not crowd the store during its going-out-of-business sale until a peak on July 31.

Zielinski said he had made plans to have an additional employee help McClelland operate the gallery July 31, and left Iowa City for the week.

McCLELLAND SAID Wednesday that she ended up working 57 hours during the last week of July because a Wards employee told her to pack up the gallery. She enlisted the help of two others who worked a total of 37.5 hours. She was "pressured into removing everything from the walls," including the nails, Zielinski said. McClelland said she suffered "light seizures" while working July 29. But she was ordered to stay at work by a Wards employee because she did not have a replacement, she said.

McClelland said she had a severe seizure on Aug. 8 from 10:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. She was told in the UI Hospitals emergency room that she suffered the attack because she was "overly exhausted and had not had enough to eat," she said.

ZIELINSKI SAID his gallery has been closed since July 31, although the Wards store delayed its own closing until Sept. 9.

Charles Thorne, Wards news service manager in Chicago, said Wednesday that he could not comment on the human rights complaint "because of the legal matter.'

Williams said she will interview the parties involved in the dispute. Her findings will be presented to the Iowa City Human Rights Commission and the Iowa City legal department if her investigation indicates mistreatment.

Comparable pay

An Equal Employment Opportunity Commission report, issued after three years of study, confirms what most women know. They are still systematically underpaid and segregated into what have traditionally been womens' jobs.

After some 20 years of work by womens' rights groups and tremendous changes in the labor market - including federal laws and regulations prohibiting sex discrimination and a rapid increase in the number of women who work - there has been no change in the relative earnings of men and women. The earnings of full time working women are still less than 60 percent of those of their male counterparts. And occupational segregation is still very pronounced; 70 percent of working men and 54 percent of working women were concentrated in jobs done predominantly by their own sex.

The report, made by a 16-member panel named by former President Carter, suggests one remedy: a comparable pay policy. But it also notes that because women are more likely to work for lowpaying companies, a comparable pay policy would not eliminate all discrimination.

Comparable pay means that jobs with similar kinds of skill, education, and responsibility should be paid an equivalent wage. A comparable pay policy would undoubtly make it illegal for the city of Denver to pay its nurses less than it pays its plumbers. It would undoubtly make it illegal for the UI to pay a secretary I less than it pays a maintanence repairman I. Right now women are frequently paid less than men for work of equal value and productivity.

The combination of this study and a recent ruling by the Supreme Court that women may file suits alleging discrimination on the basis of a lack of comparable pay should encourage women to go to court for their rights. Some women have. Last April a Federal District Court in Pennsylvannia ruled that a wholesale grocer had discriminated by placing women in a separate department and paying them less.

The issue of comparable pay will clearly be the next major issue in the effort by women to gain full equal rights. But without the Equal Rights Amendment it will be more difficult. Even with the Equal Rights Amendment this fight will be long and hard and the potential cost to employers enormous.

Even if the concept of comparable pay were accepted it would either have to be phased in gradually by the government or won slowly in the courts on a case by case basis. In many ways this is the crucial issue. Equal pay for equal work affected few women. The vast number of women are segregated into female ghettos, working at jobs filled mostly by women. Thus the job is discriminated against as well as the woman who fills it, and equal pay for equal work measures fail to bring justice.

It would seem wise for employers to begin the process of phasing comparable pay in gradually. To wait until women begin filing suits in large numbers could lead to large, unexpected expenditures at a time when the economy is weak.

Eventually this issue will be a hot one. As more and more women either choose to work or are forced into the labor market, the inherent inequity of the current wage system will become a greater burden on more and more women. That will inevitably increase pressure for justice.

Amtrak funds cut

Those who want to ride the Amtrak Blackhawk from Dubuque to Chicago should buy their tickets soon. The route was eliminated in a recent round of budget cuts, and service will be suspended on September 30.

It would be hard to make a case for keeping the Blackhawk. On any given day, the train carried only a handful of passengers. Amtrak funding regulations require that in order to stay in service, a train must carry at least 150 passengers on each of its daily round trips and must lose no more than ten cents per mile for every rider.

The Blackhawk regularly failed both tests. It was kept alive only by a grant from the state of Illinois, which ended last summer.

Few people will miss the Blackhawk itself. What is disturbing, however, is that the route was eliminated as part of a large-scale funding reduction that will eventually cut Amtrak service by nearly ten percent nationwide. If the Reagan administration has its way, the cuts could go deeper still.

Amtrak originally asked for $960 million to keep its trains in service this year, but said it could survive on $842 million. Congress cut that to $735 million, and the president, faced with the prospect of a massive deficit in the federal budget that could spell the end of Reaganomics, wants to cut that amount still further. His figure is $613 million, more than a third less than Amtrak's first request.

Amtrak should not be made the unfortunate victim of the president's economic miscalculations. Passenger trains are the most fuel-efficient form of mass transportation available, yet they receive proportionately less government support than other segments of the transportation industry. Air and bus travel receive massive subsidies in the form of federally financed airports and highway systems.

At a time when the administration should consider expanding the nation's passenger rail system, it is instead trying to salvage its crumbling and misguided economic policy by making injudicious and short-sighted cuts.

Once again the Daily Iowan has resorted to cheap headline sensationalism. I am referring in particular to the story concerning the nine year old child who was inadvertently killed by anti-Khomeini forces (DI Aug. 28).Where were your attention-getting headlines when the Khomeini regime was systematically executing innocent twelve year old children? Their only crime was their participation in peaceful demonstrations called by the "Mojahideen" against Khomeini's brutal practices and these childrens' distribution of dissident literature. In the future please try and be more conscious of wording when assigning headlines to news reports. You people are giving the journalism profession a bad name!

Abortion "rights"

To the editor:

I must respond to a recent proabortion letter (DI Aug. 27) by one Liz King. In her letter King again embraces the attitude that it should be the sole choice of the woman to continue or terminate a pregnancy. She then states that were abortion on demand to be delegalized, women would be forced to seek unsafe abortions at inflated prices, seeking our sympathy with this plight.

How can I sympathise with those who seek the blood of the unborn? What is the inconvenience of carrying a child and the pain of childbirth in comparison to the value of a human life? Cannot the mother give the child up for adoption after birth if she is unwilling or unable to care for it? Must she rather destroy the being whom she has conceived? How can her discomfort or inconvenience possibly justify her choice to deny her child the gift of life which God has given him or her? Women who choose to destroy their unborn children are unworthy of the gift of motherhood with which they have been blessed. I am not a new right moralist and I am not a Republican or a born again anything. I am, however, committed to the defense of human life in its most innocent and vulnerable form. How often are the innocent condemned. How easy to condemn those who cannot defend themselves. The practice of abortion seems to me a social disease stemming from the generation of "me", "where my head is at" and a myriad of other selfcentered noise which has contributed to the continuing decay of family communication and a divorce rate approaching fifty percent among American marriages.

Obviously abortion is a social issue. I assert that it is a social problem and more importantly a matter of life and death. One cannot simply rationalize away a child's humanity by determining whether or not he has developed sufficiently to live outside the womb, and justify his death if he can't. We respect the sanctity of human life or we don't!

The Vatican's stance with respect to the issue of abortion hinges upon the following statement by Pope John Paul II. "Human life is the gift of a God whose love is infinite. And when God gives life he gives it forever." This is why we must respect life. The statement's allusion to the mission of Christ is obvious. Can we doubt that the man who said "Suffer the little children to come unto me, for it is for such as these that I came into the world" would condemn us for assenting to their slaughter while still in the womb? How can we speak of tolerance, whether racial, cultural or sexual, when it seems we cannot even tolerate the presence of our children?

To ladies facing the question of abortion I appeal. You must not do this thing. Your gentle sex has been entrusted with the lives which begin within you. You must not break that trust and request that your children be butchered so you might avoid the trials of bringing them into the world. Rodney B. Hall 424 S. Lucas St.

South Africa again

To the editor: May I question the appropriateness of the front-page headline - "Africans reportedly invading Angola" (DI Aug. 28)? The invaders were South African and not "African". Would "Americans reportedly invading U.S.A. " be an acceptable description of an alleged Canadian assault on this country?

As it stands, your headline is likely to exacerbate the failure to recognize that the continent of Africa consists of many wholly distinct countries. R.D. Nixon

The program received 49 calls from Iowa City women are being warned January through March and during to take extra precautions against atthat same period in 1980 the program received 37 calls. Miller said.

"I THINK IT'S real important that women know that they are going to have to actively protect themselves,' Miller said.

"They should get in the habit of being aware of their surroundings." she said. 'Self defense is one precaution that can be taken, but that's only part of it." Some of the other safety measures that can be taken include making apartments safe. "We suggest you get a deadbolt lock," she said. "They should take the time to go through their apartments to find places where people could get in or hide.

The reason for the increase in calls Miller said she is in the process of to the Rape Crisis Line can be attributed to an increase in the number of women who report the problem to the program and a higher incidence of sexual assault. Miller said.

THIS TIME OF year usually shows a marked increase in sexual assaults, Miller said.

With students coming back from home we have a greater number of women studying late, working late, that provide what an attacker is looking for.

"An attacker will look for availibility, accessibility and vulnerability," Miller said.

The Iowa City Police Department reports that the number of rapes has decreased this year compared with

From January through July 1981, five rapes were reported to the Iowa City police. but between January and July 1980, 11 rapes were reported. Miller said the number of rapes reported to Iowa City police may have decreased, but the number of actual rapes has not. There were 46 rapes reported to the Rape Crisis Line in 1980 and 15 rapes have been reported to the program from January through May.

MILLER SAID she believes the actual number is probably higher than the number reported since many women feel too humiliated or frightened to report an attack.

'Because of the trauma and humiliation caused by sexual assault, women are hesitant to seek help. 'We feel it is important, however, that a woman has support during this time. We stay with them all the way from the time of attack to months or years later," Miller said.

Creative freshman rides to college on horseback

NORTHFIELD, Minn. (UPI) -An 18-year-old girl rode into town from New York State on a horse Wednesday, ready to enroll as a freshman at Carleton College.

Kyle MacKay, who left home in Richfield Springs, N.Y., June 22, the day after high school graduation, journeyed 1,100 miles on horseback through New York, Canada and the Midwest.

She arrived on her 4-year-old Morgan horse, Dunrovin Jay, with only a tent, bedroll, camera, a few things in saddlebags and the clothes on her back.

MacKay was greeted by a group of white-coated horsemen from a local "Jesse James gang." The group re-enacts a James gang rob-bery of the Northfield bank at a local celebration each year.

"Everybody has been very friendly," she said. "I've dreamed of riding a horse across the country ever since I was seven. I've always wanted to be able to ride as long and as far as I want."

She visited overnight with a few friends and relatives, stayed in farm houses and camped in a tent. The trip cost her $120.

She was stopped by police eight or nine times but didn't get any tickets.

"The police thought I was a runaway," she said. One officer, asked to see her driver's license.

lowa crime up in '80; rape increase greatest

The crime rate in Iowa increased 9.9 percent last year, according to the 1980 Iowa Uniform Crime Report released Monday by the state Department of Public Safety.

There were about 4,728 index crimes reported per 100,000 people last year - up more than 400 from the 4.301 per 100,000 people reported in 1979.

Index crimes include four violent crimes - murder, rape, robbery and assault - and three property crimes - burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft. Motor vehicle theft was the only category to decline with 8.6 percent fewer thefts reported in

The greatest increase in 1980 was in the number of reported rapes, which rose 28.2 percent. There were 412 rapes last year, compared with 319 in 1979. The murder rate increased 9.1 percent with 69 murders last year and 65 in 1979. Burglary increased 16.7 percent, larceny went up 9.5 percent, the robbery rate rose by 9.8 percent and the assault rate increased 8.9 percent last year.

The report is based on information provided by 225 local law enforcement agencies in Iowa.

Two I.C. historic areas nominated for inclusion in National Register

By Jennifer Shafer

Iowa City will nominate two historic districts for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places, a listing of the most significant historical areas in the United States.

The districts were chosen after the city Planning and Zoning Commission gathered information from 1,200 historical buildings and homes located in the north central section of Iowa City. The commission began the survey in May.

"We took pictures and acquired data from each site about the ownership, age, and historical and architectural significance," said Doug Hillstrom, city planner for the Zoning Commission.

The area surveyed was divided into three sections — North Side, "Goosetown" and College Hill — because preliminary research showed that these areas contain most of the historic houses in the city, Hillstrom said.

After evaluating information gathered from the North Side area, located north of Iowa Avenue between Dodge and Madison streets, the two districts were selected.

THE HISTORIC districts selected from the North Side area include most of the area north of Jefferson Street and bordered by Clinton and Dodge streets.

Any decisions about the nomination of historical districts from the Goosetown east of Dodge Street and north of Market Street — and College Hill areas have not yet been made, Hillstrom said. College Hill is just south of Goosetown, bordered by Burlington Street.

"We took on a big job," Hillstrom said. He said information from these remaining survey areas will be studied "over time" and the nomination of other historic districts in Iowa City may be made.

The two districts will be included in the National Register if they are approved by a state Historical Selection Committee that will meet later this year, said Hillstrom. "But we're pretty confident that they (the districts) will be selected," he said.

THE TWO HISTORIC districts, separated by the alley between Davenport and Bloomington streets, were nominated separately due to differences in the historical significance of each, Hillstrom said. South of the dividing line is the North Side Commercial district, where some buildings date from the 1850s, he said.

"That includes buildings from the old Iowa City businesses that (the buildings) have been there since the early days of the city. There used to be old breweries, tin shops, taverns and hotels there," Hillstrom

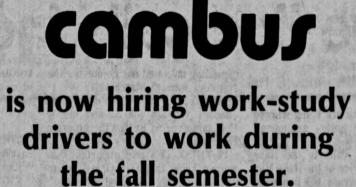

North of the line is the North Side Residential District, which includes homes that date from "1870 to 80 and beyond. That's more of a Victorian age area," he said, adding, "There wasn't any commercial activity there."

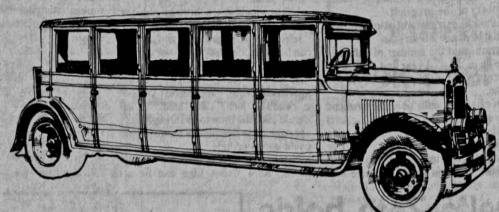

Although it is an honor to own a home located in a historic district, the privilege also has a more practical side. Owners of qualified historic property enjoy favorable tax treatment for rehabilitation. Such property is also protected from federal projects that may damage the area, Hillstrom said.

THE HISTORIC survey cost Iowa City about $1,000, Hillstrom said. In addition, the Iowa Office of Historic Preservation paid for all the photography, and three volunteer workers aided the effort. A $1,000 Resource Development Internship Project Grant was also used, he said.

A public meeting to discuss a possible city historic preservation commission will be held Sept. 9 at the Iowa City Recreation Center, Hillstrom said.

"That's our next step," he said. If created, the commission would promote historical preservation and restoration of homes and buildings in Iowa City.

Tenants' association delays action on silty, odorous water problem

By Cherann Davidson Staff Writer

Residents of Parkview Trailer Court plan to "wait and see" if a newly-installed water filter will solve problems with odorous and sediment-laden water.

The Parkview Tenants Association had threatened to withold $20 of the $70 lot rent for September if the water quality did not improve, said Arden Svoboda Jr., association president. About 30 of 70 trailer owners at the court, located two miles east of Oxford on U.S. Highway 6, belong to the association.

Gordon Russell, owner of the park, said in a statement released through his secretary there was "no need for more publicity" because the water filters had been installed.

Svoboda said "It is a wait-and-see proposition. If the water cleans up, then we won't have any more complaints," he said. GRAHAM DAMERON, director of the Johnson County Health Department, said the water is "bacteriologically safe" but contains large amounts of sediment.

The Health Department has taken samples of tap water since last week and "we have noted some improvement" in the clarity of the water, Dameron said. The quart-sized samples contain about oneeighth of an inch of sediment, he said.

But Dameron said the residents may continue to have silty water. "I think from time to time they will have some sediments in the pipes" due to existing iron deposits in the pipes that cannot be filtered, he said.

Svoboda said the quality of the water is "inconsistent," varying in color and odor. Bill Benham, a Parkview resident, said the residents were told that it would take two or three weeks before all of the homes would see the improvement in the water, but "it has started to taste a little better" since the filter was installed. Jeanette McCune, also a resident, said she was "not too convinced" that the filters will eliminate the sediment.

MCCUNE SAID the water "has a very bad smell — like raw sewage or a rotten egg." The water is sometimes "reddishorange or black," she said.

McCune said the association members "are going on a month-by-month basis." If the water does not clear up significantly by Oct.1, the tenants association may hold back $20, she said.

Svoboda said he had clothing worth approximately $200 ruined because it was stained by the water. "Personally, I'm not into orange underwear," he said.

If he is not reimbursed by Russell for the clothing, "I may take the matter to small claims court," he said.

Benham said about six of his wife's white uniforms have also been ruined by the water.

A new law requires anyone who wants to ride a moped in Iowa after Jan. 1, 1982, to complete eight hours of instruction in the operation of mopeds.

In 1980, there were 478 traffic accidents involving mopeds reported to the Iowa Public Safety Department, one of which was fatal. This was a significant increase over the 385 moped accidents reported in 1979. The reason moped operators are being required to take the schooling is that the low speed of a moped can often create a traffic hazard. Mopeds are required by law not to go faster than 25 mph, which makes it easy for automobiles and motorcycles to pass them.

World hunger and malnutrition may be a world away from Iowa City, but people here have to be made aware of the problem, Julie Meyer, state coordinator for Global Community Network, said Wednesday.

Oct. 16 has been designated World Food Day by the United Nations, and Meyer's group, an international organization concerned with social issues, has planned several local events for the day.

Charles Weitz, a member of the Food and Agricultural Organization and a former director of the Freedom From Hunger Campaign, will speak at a community meeting scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. at the lowa City Public Library on World Food recommended that the network facilitate the day's events.

Although the network is an international group. most of its members are Iowans. Meyer said she is aware of only two other groups in the nation similiar to the network. The Iowa City branch of the group has about 80 people on its mailing lists and has 10-20 THE WINNER of an Iowa City high members who meet monthly.

"It's taken me awhile to activate people (on World Food Day)," Meyer said. "We had to activate something for Iowa City. They weren't doing it on their own.

"THIS DAY includes all issues - from things about our junk food habits to the effects of nuclear war on the food chain to infant formulas to promoting Iowa," Meyer said.

The stands adopted by the group are broad, reflecting the diversity of its members, said Global Community Network Meyer said solutions to the hunger problem are almost impossible, but there are contributions the average citizen can make.

We generally feel (people should lean toward) simple living, their own vegetable gardens, just getting away from massproduced foods," she said.

Montana may be refugee center site

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A former Air Force base in Glasgow, Mont., where winter temperatures plunge far below zero, is being considered as a permanent detention center for illegal refugees from Haiti. Cuba and other tropical areas, officials said Wednesdav

Justice Department Spokesman Art Brill said a team of federal officials from the Immigration and Naturalization Service and Health and Human Services Department inspected the facility Monday and met with community officials.

"We're looking at Glasgow but we have not given up on any options." Brill said.

He said Glasgow - in northeast Montana about 60 miles south of the Canadian border is one of several sites under consideration as a permanent detention center for illegal Haitian and other refugees, including 694 Cubans currently held at Fort Chaffee, Ark.

SUB-ZERO temperatures are common in northeastern Montana, and Glasgow frequently has readings of 20 to 30 below.

Officials also are considering a former military base at McAlester, Okla., and several undisclosed sites. Brill said.

Don Beckman, director of the Valley Industrial Park that took over the Montana base, said the majority of Glasgow residents want the center.

"We hope to make this a national refugee center and not just a place for the Cuban refugees," Beckman said. "It looks like at this time we'll probably accept (the proposal). It's not that we'll be helping to solve a national problem - we need this business '

Small cars in Iowa improve fuel usage

lowa's fuel efficiency has improved because lowans are driving smaller cars, according to a report released last week by the state Department of Transportation.

Since mid-1978, the state's fuel usage has declined an average 5.7 percent per year, for a total reduction of 17 percent. The fuel economy in automobiles has improved despite a 2 percent increase in the total ber of vehicles in Iowa, the report said.

The average fuel efficiency rate in automobiles in lowa has increased by 7 percent, the report stated. lowans are also buying lighter cars, according to the report. Only 18 percent of the new cars registered in 1976 weighed less than 3,000 pounds, while that percentage increased to 49 percent in 1980. Although travel had decreased about 3 percent per year since 1978, travel in 1981 was up approximately percent from last year. The figure is still 3 percent below that of 1978, which was the peak year for travel and fuel usage, the report stated.

Ex-Manson follower weds rich Texan

FRONTERA, Calif. (UPI) - Convicted mass murderer Susan Atkins, once a member of Charles Manson's "family," Wednesday married a self-described Texas millionaire in a private prison ceremony, officials said.

Atkins, who was once sentenced to death for her role in the ritualistic 1969 Tate-LaBianca murders, married Donald Lee "Fla$h" Laisure, 52, of Greenville, Texas, at 4:30 p.m. (Iowa time).

Laisure arrived at the prison with two friends a few minutes before the wedding. His gold-colored Cadillac was embellished on the right fender with black-and-gold stick-on letters spelling out his bride's name.

The groom, wearing dark glasses, waved a wad of money and a Texas flag as he walked into the facility in a rural area 35 miles east of Los Angeles.

The couple was granted one hour to recite their vows at the prison altar, then the bride was escorted back to her cell to continue serving her life sentence.

LAISURE, who claims he has been married and divorced more than 30 times, said his marriage to Atkins, 33, was 'something that has been brought on by God, ordained by God. I love her very much and I never did love another woman.

He said only employees or inmates at the prison were permitted to attend the wedding. His wife invited about 16 guests, including a prison captain and lieutenant.

Laisure said he is building a $12 million solar house near the prison and will live there until his wife is released. He claims to have spent $6.4 million in efforts to free his wife and said he is prepared to spend another $100 million

Atkins, who said she became a born-again Christian seven years ago, lost her last bid for parole on grounds she had a criminal history, showed "callous disregard" for the murder victims and displayed no remorse at her trial.

LAISURE, known as "Flash" in his hometown because he likes to carry a big roll of cash, said he inherited wealth but would not reveal where his family made their money.

"I can only tell you that I have more money than I could spend in the next 500 years and that I'm no crook." he once said. Laisure said he met his bride 16 years ago in Southern California. Atkins, who was 18 at the time, told Laisure she was instantly attracted to him and the couple has been "close" ever since, he said

Two years later, she met Manson and joined his cult, becoming one of his most loval followers. She was known as Sadie Mae Glutz in the Manson Family.

She confessed to the Aug. 9, 1969, murders of actress Tate and four others in the home Tate shared with her husband, film director Roman Polanski, and the killing the following night of Leno and Rosemary LaBianca.

ATKINS, along with Leslie Van Houten and Patricia Krenwinkle, were sentenced to die in the gas chamber for the two-night massacre, but the state Supreme Court later overturned California's old capital punish ment law.

Manson was convicted of ordering the murders and is serving a life sentence at Vacaville state prison.

Duke trustees ponder Nixon library

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) - The chairman of Duke University's Academic Council said Wednesday he believes the school's trustees are "willing to listen seriously" to faculty views on a proposed Richard Nixon presidential library.

The 80-member Academic Council, the highest body of Duke's 1,500-member faculty, will meet Thursday to consider several possible resolutions. Nixon is a 1937 graduate of the Duke law school.

Professor Roy Weintraub, chairman of the Academic Council, said reports that the trustees already have made up their minds in favor of the library are "overstatements.'

'The trustees have always taken very seriously the views of the faculty, as expressed by the Academic Council," he said. 'I think the trustees are open-minded and are willing to listen seriously to discussion of the various issues.'

ABOUT 30 people spoke at a general faculty meeting held Monday. Most who spoke opposed the library.

the meeting did not necessarily represent faculty consensus. "The individuals on the council have talked with a lot more than those who spoke

Weintraub said the statements made at Opponents of the library say historical aspects of Nixon's estimated 32 million pages of documents - plus 6,000 hours of the tapes that helped lead to his 1974 resignation during the Watergate scandal cannot be separated from the commemorative nature of a presidential library.

Supporters consider the library a potential storehouse of information for researchers, historians and archivists.

Both sides agreed Monday that Duke does not want to be the home of a structure honoring the only American president ever forced from office.

Cancer surgery avoided with drug

BOSTON (UPI) - Many women past menopause who have advanced breast cancer spreading to other areas of the body may avoid surgery by using a drug originally developed for other purposes, researchers reported Wednesday.

The researchers found the drug aminoglutethimide, not yet available to the public, had fewer side effects than others currently used for metastatic breast cancer, the report in the New England Journal of Medicine said.

The study further boosts the increasing trend away from surgery toward an arsenal of drugs for victims of breast cancer, the

No. 1 cancer killer among women.

There would be no logical rationale for the surgeon to do an extensive operation in light of this study," said one of the researchers Dr. Thomas J. Worgul, formerly of the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center in Pennsylvania.

The study was headed by Dr. Richard J. Santen of the Hershey Center, Patients at Hershey and Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., participated.

THE TYPE OF cancer the drug is aimed at feeds on the female hormone estrogen.

The prevalent treatment for this cancer in women who have not stopped menstruating has been removal of the ovaries.

Aminoglutethimide was first developed 20 years ago to combat convulsions. Ineffective for that purpose, it was approved in the United States a few years ago for treatment of a kind of Cushing's Syndrome, a disease of the pituitary gland, Worgul said.

The drug has been approved in Europe and Australia for use in breast cancer patients, Worgul said. It works by cutting down estrogen production the same way removal of adrenal glands does.

CHICAGO (UPI) - A federal judge Wednesday struck down Illinois' ban on shipments of out-of-state used nuclear fuel, saying the year-old law unconstitutionally interferes with federal authority.

U.S. District Judge Frank McGarr also said the ban illegally restricts interstate commerce. State Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said he will appeal McGarr's ruling to the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Fahner said the state has a long history of selfprotection from environmental hazards and the nuclear ban presents a fair and reasonable principle.

THE LAW WAS put into effect in December 1980 over the objections of Gov. James R. Thompson. It prohibited Illinois from accepting shipments of spent nuclear fuel rods from states that did not accept them from Illinois.

The legislation was intended to stop General Electric's Morris site from accepting more out-of-state shipments, such as those from Southern California Edison Co. As the state's chief legal officer, Fahner filed suit against Edison and General Electric to enforce the new law. The firms countersued.

In his veto, Thompson had warned the ban would unconstitutionally restrain interstate transportation. He said a national solution to the spent nuclear fuel problem needed to be found.

Fahner, who originally shied from supporting the ban bill, repeated Thompson's theme in a news release.

Mom suffers overdose after court takes sons

HOUSTON (UPI) - A mother who allegedly kidnapped her sons from her ex-husband in New York two years ago, but lost custody of them in a Houston court, was in critical condition Wednesday from an apparent drug overdose.

A Hermann Hospital spokeswoman said Harriet Berne, 37, had undergone a series of tests, including a check for possible brain damage, but that results were being kept confidential at the request of her family who watches Congress carefully' agrees that Congress will pass the bill within 10 months. Franks urged members who attended the group's monthly meeting to become informed about the bill and write their legislators to vote against it.

Spokeswoman Marguerite Badger refused to disclose what type of drugs Berne had taken.

Earlier Tuesday, Family Judge Bruce Wettman had ordered Harris County Family Court Services to turn Berne's sons, Scott, 11, and Mark, 7, over to their father, Dale Berne, 43, of Rochester, N.Y.

NANCY COMBS, the organization's membership chairwoman, said in an interview before the meeting that she also fears the bill will be passed.

"It's so close to happening. People don't realize that," Combs said. She said people don't realize the bill would outlaw all abortions, including those for rape victims.

'It looks very, very gloomy. At this point we are preparing for the worst," Combs said. She said, however, that the organization is continuing its mail assault on local, state and federal legislators to demand defeat of the Human Life Bill

Combs said local NOW members will meet with Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, Thursday at his Cedar Rapids office to discuss his stand on women's rights.

Franks said unlike anti-abortion laws in the 1800's, which made the performance of an abortion a simple misdemeanor, the Human Life Bill would consider the performance of abortions murder

SHE SAID she does not think the bill will eliminate abortions, only increase the potential dangers.

People with enough money will go to another country to get an abortion. Those without money will do whatever they can," she said.

Frank told NOW members today's medical techniques make abortions '10 times" safer than childbirth. The death rate of women who have an abortion is 1.4 per 1,000 women compared to 14.4 per 1,000 women who choose to have a child and 3.7 per 1,000 women who use birth control pills, she said.

One in four pregnancies is voluntarily terminated, Frank said. "That statistic is identical to the abortion rate in the early 1800s," she said.

A Dream Come True

Billy Watts, guitarist for Akasha.

Akasha best lowa bar-band; 'keeps it all in perspective'

By T. Johnson

There is nothing easier in the world than looking like a rock musician. The clothes, the hair, the laidback somnambulism of stardom is so imitatable that anyone off the street can do it.

Rock is suffering from that. It has become a medium of form and fashion. The precise, white-bread rock of Journey or REO Speedwagon is easily imitated because it takes no real feeling, no vision.

There are millions of bands in garages and basements with the right equipment, the right look and the right everything hacking away, unable even to get anyone to listen to one song. No one knows what makes success happen. Most people can't even tell the bands apart. They just get slicker and slicker until they either self-destruct or end up in a Holiday Inn somewhere doing bouncy versions of "Feelings" and changing sequined tuxedoes between sets.

BUT ONCE in a while one of these bands breaks out of these doldrums into a sort of bar-band limbo that lies between the time someone starts listening and the time someone listens seriously. It is during this limbo - with the grail in sight - that the vision strikes.

No longer are the limos and other perks of stardom so important. What is, is the possibility that someone is going to ask for not the endless rounds of Doobie Brothers' hits, but the originals: The songs hammered out in motels after shows and on those rare weekends home.

style and verve of John Davidson singing "Happy Birthday.

The Daily Iowan/Max Haynes

"WE KEEP it in perspective," explains Marty Fauchier, the band's keyboard player. "We do this to get here, to get there. This is the reason for this. We look forward to the day we can play all our own music

The highlight of Akasha's performances at Maxwell's - at least to those who go to listen rather than dance - is the original material. There is apparently considerable songwriting talent in the band, but that talent is for a type of music that critics abhor. It's so easy to cut down.

BUT IT IS also very easy to enjoy. Sitting in Maxwell's, Akasha reminded me how much I like rock music. Their sound system was fairly clear and they didn't use all of their volume capacity, a rare display of restraint in these days of Ted Nugent sadism. The band is a lot of fun. They're bouncy and cute, like puppy dogs. Unlike the others, though, they're good. There is only so much one can do about hitting the big time from the Great American Outback of Iowa. Eventually, contest victories and fan adulation aside, they have to test themselves.

"If it turns out that none of the coals in the fire burns brightly enough pretty soon we'll just pick up and leave," explains Fauchier. "We're probably going to leave the area between January and March, depending on what happens."

Bands like Akasha, however, are in a crowded field. No one can really put a finger on what separates, say, Air Supply from the thousands of other rock/slush bands humping away without anyone paying attention. Being the best bar-band in Iowa may be nice and put Akasha a step above almost everyone else, but the next test is the toughest. We shall see

Three books seized by Moscow censors

MOSCOW (UPI) - Soviet censors seized three of 150,000 titles at the opening Wednesday of the third Moscow International Bookfair and a Soviet author who wrote about his experiences in Soviet prison camps went on trial in central Russia

Anatoly Marchenko, 44, author of the book My Testimony, faced a court in the town of Vladimir accused of "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda," a charge that could result in a sentence of seven years in labor camps and five years internal exile.

The three books confiscated - two by an American Jewish publisher and one by an Israeli distributor - compared with more than 40 volumes seized in 1979

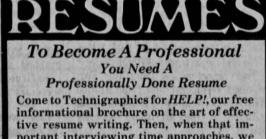

Western organizers at the fair, where about 2,300 publishers from 83 countries were represented, said theft was a greater problem this year than censorship.

ONLY THOSE with official invitations could attend the opening, but books were disappearing at a steady rate from the shelves, with some vanishing during the night when the hall was officially closed. Ten books were stolen from the Los Angeles Times-Mirror Co. exhibit overnight, said representative Michael Colenso.

"I don't mind if people steal books if they love them, but I don't like it if it is for commercial reasons," he said. "This is the worst bookfair we go to anywhere for theft."

Western booksellers expect theft, realizing the volumes they bring are largely unavailable in the Soviet Union. Even those bought by authorities for libraries are lent only to authorized persons. The three censored books all mentioned Soviet attitudes toward Jews. Two taken from the Association of Jewish Book Publishers were a childrens version of former Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban's My People: a History of the Jews and The American-Jewish Yearbook, 1981. The original Eban book was not confiscated.

Woman records life as political prisoner

By Ken Harper Staff Writer

Within the Whirlwind by Eugenia Ginzburg. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich. 1981, 423 pages.

"Just remembering it all to record it later had been the main object of my life throughout those 18 years.

Eugenia Ginzburg was arrested in 1937 during the first phase of the Stalinist purges that extended over two decades. Her crime was a fiction: membership in a Trotskyite counterrevolutionary group. (Her accuser was later charged and found guilty of worse, actual crimes.) Given a 10year sentence, she served her first term and then remained in Kolyma with her second husband, also a prisoner. She was subsequently rearrested in a new wave of post-World War II purges. To describe her experiences as incredible seems apt, but not enough.

Within the Whirlwind is Ginzburg's second volume of memoirs to be published in the United States. The first volume, Journey into the Whirlwind, is synopsized by the publisher and follows Heinrich Boll's introductory remarks. But anyone wanting the full impact is strongly advised to read it before Within the Whirlwind.

JUST HOW Eugenia Ginzburg survived is curious. Luck played a hand. A professor of Russian history at the Kazan University in her "former life," she became a kindergarten teacher in Kolyma, which protected both her spirit and body from the numbing cold. But because her crime had been political in nature, she was considered an infective agent for children receiving political indoctrination. She went to work felling trees, but was saved by a job as a nurse, although her only qualification was the ability to lecipher Latin.

Outdoor labor in Kolyma was tantamount to the death sentence. Prisoners were spared from their duties only if the temperature reached -50 C : even one degree less would not do. Frequently Ginzburg argued with guards that the thermometer pointed to the temperature of reprieve rather than that of slow death. Between the work, the cold and the meager food rations of bread and gruel, prisoners would try to predict how long they would last. Some turned to cannibalism to obtain meat.

YET WITHIN these subzero and subhuman conditions, Ginzburg stayed alive through poetry. She and her fellow prisoners recited stanza after stanza to one another. Her memorization of Pushkin saved her life on the prison train to Kolyma when a guard demanded an extended recitation. Ginzburg notes in the epilogue that her first volume was constrained by a hope that the cultural thaw of Khruschev's time would last and that her writings would become public Russian knowledge. It did not happen. Written directly, humbly, and even more amazingly, with a warm sense of humor, Within the Whirlwind is not tainted by ideological or political daydreams (she was a party member at the time of her arrest). Eugenia Ginzburg is to be respected not only for her writing but the manner of her life.

Teachers in Philadelphia and Boston threatened Wednesday to strike their public school systems to demonstrate their anger at mass layoffs and to back up their demands for higher wages. The walkouts would affect 283,000 students.

Teacher strikes delayed the start of school for 2,900 students in Rhode Island and idled teachers in four Illinois school districts.

Although the fall term has not yet started in most localities, a check of major cities showed teachers were getting ready in Philadelphia and Boston to go on strike next week unless contractual problems are resolved before the post-Labor Day opening of classes.

NEW YORK (UPI) - Stagehand Craig Crimmins was sentenced Wednesday to 20-years to life in prison for hurling a blonde violinist - nude and bound - to her death down an airshaft at the Metropolitan Opera House to cover up a rape attempt.

Soviet naval force seen off U.S. coast

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A four-ship Soviet cruiser-destroyer task force steamed 200 miles off the Pacific coast of the United States Wednesday in the closest such operation to American waters in 10 years, the Navy said.

The ships, first spotted Friday in the Gulf of Alaska by the Coast Guard cutter Boutwell, were identified as a Kara Class guided missile cruiser, two Krivak Class guided missile frigates and a Dubna Class supply ship, the Navy said.

"We have no idea what they're doing there or why they are there," a Navy spokesman said.

The four ships were kept under constant surveillance by American and Canadian warships and planes and by Wednesday reached a spot 200 miles west-northwest of Portland, Ore. They were steaming in a southerly direction at 16 knots, the Navy said.

"It is not commonplace for Soviet naval units to operate this close to the west coast of North America," a Navy statement said. "The last such operation occurred in 1971.'

"All ships are operating in international waters and, for the present, continue to observe each other," the statement said.

The Boutwell, based in Kodiak, Alaska, was placed under the operational control of the Navy after it spotted the Soviet task force, the Navy said. It provided position reports until the ships entered a northeastern sector of the Pacific, which is a Canadian area of responsibility.

The Canadian ships Provider and Kootenay took over observation of the task force and the U.S. destroyer Fife, ordered to sea Saturday from San Diego, joined them Tuesday off the coast of Washington state, the Navy said.

The Kara Class cruisers displace 9,700 tons and are 570 feet long. They carry ship-to-ship, anti-aircraft and anti-submarine warfare missiles. The smaller Krivak Class frigates, 405 feet long and displacing about 3,600 tons, are primarily anti-submarine warfare vessels.

Radiation exposure level makes 35 percent leap

tion exposure of U.S. nuclear reactor workers hit an all-time high with a 35 percent leap last year, and another big jump is expected in 1981, an environmental group said Wednesday.

The Environmental Policy Institute, using Nuclear Regulatory Commission data, said the upward trend in total work force radiation dose signals chronic maintenance problems with atomic reactors.

The figures also show that increasing numbers of workers are being exposed to the risk of cancer inherent in lowlevel radiation doses, it said, because the Nuclear Regulatory Commission limits each individual's yearly dose to 5 rems, a measure of exposure.

Since there is no limit on total work force dose, said Fred Millar of the Institute, utilities often use large numbers of temporary and often itinerant workers known as "radiation jumpers" to spread out the dose from protracted maintenance projects so no

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Total radia- one person reaches the 5 rem limit.

"THE UTILITIES are ready to use as many of these jumpers as they need to keep these plants running," said Millar. "The workers are getting stuck with the (health) bill.'

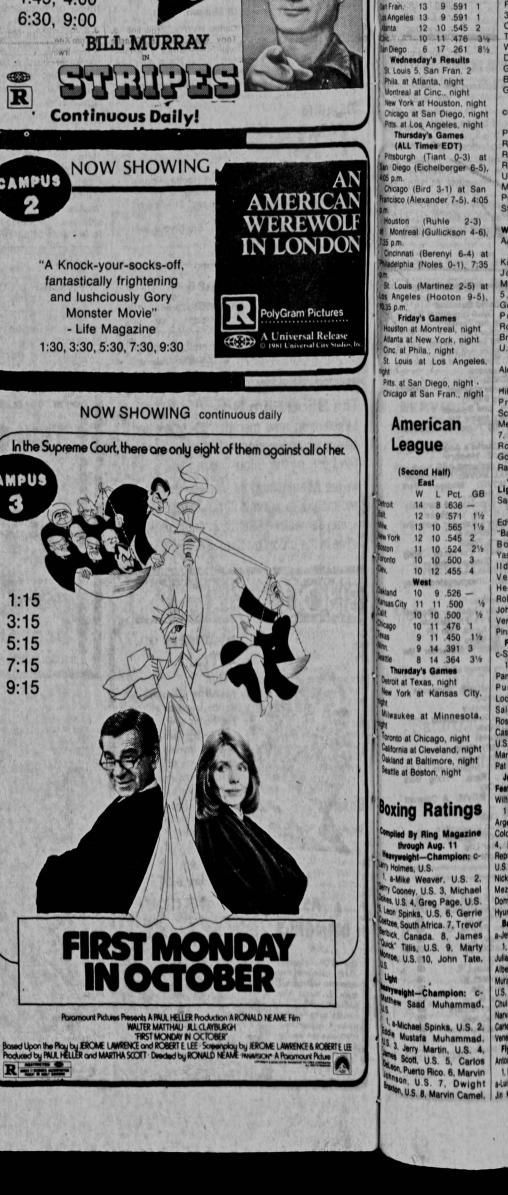

Total worker exposure rose from 39,759 person-rems in 1979 to 53,797 person-rems in 1980 although only one more plant was in operation.

The 35 percent increase followed a 25 percent jump from 1978 to 1979, NRC figures showed. About 75,000 persons worked on reactors last year.

Bill Kreger, the commission's top occupational radiation official, said the agency worries about the figures but expects them to start declining again in 1982 after another potentially large increase in 1981.

"Doses have been very gradually increasing in both boiling water and pressurized water reactors in the 11 years that we have accurate collective dose numbers," he said.

No worry to Hawks on losses of players

By Steve Batterson

Don't panic and unload your season basketball tickets. And don't sell the family farm just yet. The loss of three Iowa basketball players should not have that much affect on the Hawkeyes' record.

"I don't really think that it will have any great effect on our season," said Lute Olson, Iowa's head basketball coach. "We're going to be a good, solid ball club.

"As far as Greg Boyle and Dennis Johnson go, all three players ahead of them at their guard position are returning. And up front, Mike Heller saw only limited action as a freshman."

LAST SEASON, Boyle averaged 1.4 points per game, scoring 17 points in the 12 games he appeared in. He also pulled down four rebounds. Johnson has the best average, 2.2 points, and scored 39 points in 18 games. He grabbed 32 rebounds. Heller, who was redshirted last season, scored four points in 14 games during his freshman season. He had eight rebounds.

Boyle, who would have been a fifthseason senior, decided to forego his final season and pursue a career interest. Johnson and Heller, who both would have been considered sophomores this year, transferred last week. Johnson went to Western Kentucky University and Heller will attend McLennan Junior College in Waco, Texas.

On paper, the Hawks haven't lost that much. "The only effect it would have on us is if we have a number of injuries," Olson said. "We have a lot of confidence in Todd Berkenpas. If anything, this will give him a chance to gain some playing time.

"IF WE WOULD have lost guys with a lot of playing time, it would have hurt, but when you lose reserves it, really won't affect us one way or another.

Iowa City, Iowa-Thursday September 3, 1981-Page 16 Former Hawkeyes still a dime #1981 Student Publications make final NFL cuts

By Betsy Anderson

Two former Iowa football players, John Harty and Jay Hilgenberg, survived final National Football League cuts Monday. They are the first players under Iowa Head Coach Hayden Fry to make an NFL squad.

The Daily Iowan

"It's quite an accomplishment fo them both to have made it," Fry said. 'They're both excellent players.' Harty, a Sioux City native drafted in the second round by San Francisco. was a defensive tackle at Iowa. Harty has moved to nose guard for the 49ers. During the exhibition season, the 6foot-6, 258 pound All-American was credited with one sack and one fumble recovery.

HILGENBERG, signed by the Chicago Bears as a free agent, can be considered something of a rarity. Only two free agents made the Bears 45-man roster this year. Hilgenberg a 6-3, 250 pound center, has gained 20 pounds since last year at Iowa.

"Hilgenberg could have been first team All-American if he hadn't been injured during his senior year." Fry said. "It probably kept him from being picked during the draft."

Hilgenberg's versatility to snap for punts, extra points, and field goals gave him an edge in the Bear's camp. 'As rookies, they'll find it difficult to break into the starting lineups," Fry said. "Both are playing behind veterans and it's hard to replace experience.

Hilgenberg is on Chicago's second team, backing nine-year veteran center Dan Neal. Harty will play behind four-year veteran nose guard. Archie Reese. San Francisco plays a 3-4 defensive alignment.

Due to rising costs, Olson indicated that Iowa was already planning to cut down on its travel squad. "We made a decision to go down to a squad of 12 players on our traveling roster," Olson said. "This will help us cut down on our expenses and that was our intent even before anyone left. If our squad is larger than 12, any extra player probably will be able to dress at home games.

"In the past, we haven't believed in having any large number of players in one class." Olson said. "This year with our recruited athletes, we have two seniors, three juniors, two sophomores and three freshmen. We like to have a balance of the four classes and we try to stay away from having more than three from any one class on the squad.

Olson also indicated he will probably look at two or three walk-ons who will be given the same chance to make the team as any other player.

Named as co-captains of the 1981-82 squad are Kevin Boyle and Kenny Arnold, who have been very instrumental in Iowa's three consecutive NCAA post-season appearances.

In the three years they have played at Iowa the Hawks have posted a 64-25 record, won at least 20 games each season and advanced to the Final Four in 1980.
