The state Board of Regents will be asked to tentatively approve tuition rate increases for 1982-83 that range from 9.5 percent to 33.3 percent when it meets in Council Bluffs Wednesday. The proposed increases, if given final approval in October, would be in addition to tuition hikes the board approved last fall. Those increases, which went into effect during the summer, ranged from 13.7 percent to 83 percent.

Approval of the increases would break the regents' decade-long tradition of considering tuition increases only every other year. The board can amend the proposal, but will take a final vote on the matter at its October meeting in Iowa City. R. Wayne Richey, regents' executive secretary, said he will propose the increases because the three state universities need money and because the board has been "under extremely strong pressure from the executive and legislative branches - particularly the latter" to raise tuition in the middle of the 1981-83 biennium

IF APPROVED, the increases would be a "dramatic change" in policy, Richey said.

Last fall, the board set tuition on the assumption that it would be for the entire biennium. But the proposal received by UI administrators late Wednesday afternoon would increase that amount a minimum of 9.5 percent for in-state undergraduate students at the UI and Iowa State University. At the University of Northern Iowa, instate undergraduate tuition would increase 10 percent.

At the UI, the hardest-hit students would be those in the professional colleges, such as medicine and law: • Tuition for in-state medical students increased 83 percent this year; it would increase another 19.9 percent under the proposal. Tuition for nonresident medical students, which went up 46.1 percent this year, may go up an additional 33.3 percent next year.

· Resident law students, whose tuition was increased 13.7 percent this academic year, could face an ad-ditional increase of 20.3 percent during the next academic year.

RICHEY SAID the higher tuition rates would be accompanied by an increase in financial aid. At the UI, financial aid would be increased 11.4 percent, he said. About $980,000 would be distributed among the three universities.

UI student government representatives were given details of the proposal Thursday morning. By Thursday night, the Student Senate had unanimously passed a resolution condemning the increases.

Senate President Tim Dickson said that during the meeting with the administration, the tuition increases and data on tuition fees at universities in an 11-state Midwestern area were explained. The data shows that the UI's tuition is less than the average in that area, and that the increase would push the UI's tuition closer to the median in each of its 10 colleges.

SENATE AND Collegiate Associations Council members said they have begun an all-out campaign against the proposal, and will speak against it at Wednesday's regents' meeting.

Lori Froeling, CAC president, said that student government representatives will gather information on the cost of living in Iowa City to use in See Tuition, page 8

$37 billion more may have to be cut from budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Congress would have to cut $37 billion more from the budget by the end of the month for President Reagan to meet his projected federal deficit next year, con-gressional budget experts said Thurs-

Earlier this year, Congress agreed to $35 billion in spending reductions for the new fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, after months of political battles and intensive White House pressure.

A recent Congressional Budget Office forecast showed Congress would have to find about $37 billion in additional budget cuts for the administration to meet its projected budget deficit of $42.5 billion in fiscal 1982. Since new cuts of that magnitude are doubtful, Budget Office Director Alice Rivlin told the House Budget Committ deficit

grim, fiscal 1984 - the year Reagan hopes to balance the budget - is far worse

Rivlin said, "If you keep to what you are committed to on defense spending and don't touch benefit programs ... you would essentially have to close down the rest of the government" to reach a balanced budget in 1984.

"I DON'T expect you to do that," she said. "It's just an illustration of how difficult it will be" to balance the budget.

She explained that projected defense spending and funds for social programs that are set by law will absorb almost all of the scaled-down revenues collected as a result of the new tax cut bill. That will leave no room for other federal funding if the budget is balanced in 1984, Rivlin said. "If you are eager to have a balanced budget ... you can't wait until 1984 to do it," she warned the lawmakers. "You have to do it right now." Despite the gloomy budget forecast, the Budget Office predicts a steadily improving economy in 1982, including moderate improvements in inflation, interest rates, unemployment and economic growth. Having decided on a range of spending cuts for future Pentagon budgets. Reagan met Thursday with his entire Cabinet to divide remaining shares in a shrinking federal money

DEPUTY WHITE HOUSE Press Secretary Larry Speakes said the report showed "some honest differences in assumptions." Speakes said Reagan feels "our budget is on target and it's a can-do budget ... that he is determined to accomplish."

Rivlin explained her budget experts were less optimistic about declining interest rates than the administration and assumed the government would spend more on defense outlays and collect less tax revenues than the administration's projects.

Speakes said, "There is an honest forecasting difference, but we think ours is more realistic and more likely than theirs. We feel that the Reagan tax cut would stimulate the economy more than they do."

Budget committee chairman James Jones, D-Okla., and his fellow Democrats chided the administration for its overly optimistic economic assumptions.

"I MUST reiterate what this committee said last spring about the importance of being honest about economic assumptions in building a realistic federal budget," Jones said.

"If we play 'Alice in Wonderland' with those figures, it does not mean they will go away," referring to the recent souring of the economy that has sent administration strategists scrambling to find further program cuts to stay within its budget goals.

Reagan hopes to hold the figure to $42.5 billion.

But an administration aide attributed the huge disparity to "an honest forecasting difference," and said budget office economists still fail to acknowledge the possibility that Reagan's policies will have a positive impact on the economy.

Reagan decided on a range of military budget cuts Wednesday after hearing the guns vs. deficit arguments of budget director David Stockman and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. No figures were released, but administrative officials have suggested cuts of $30 billion in military spending during fiscal 1983 and 1984. The president is expected to announce his new austere spending levels for those two fiscal years at a Cabinet

Souvenirs sell well as first game nears

By Martha Manikas

Local merchants have prepared for the season's first football game by stocking up on Iowa sweatshirts, jackets and mugs. The busiest season for Iowa Hawkeyes souvenir sales has begun and will continue until Christmas, said Jim Cole, a supply manager for Iowa Book and Supply Co. The Iowa souvenir business "gets better closer to the game." Cole said. Business improves when the alumni arrive in town for the game, he said. "On the Saturday of a home game, 90 percent of the people in here are from out of town," he said. When students return from summer vacation they are ready for the football season and are in "the mood to buy,' Cole said. Iowa souvenir sales are high until homecoming: sales after that depend on how well the team is playing, he said

Crum said. If football fans are in a good mood, "they're in a spending mood," he added

"Everybody likes to associate themselves with a winner," he said. Crum said students returning for the fall semester, and alumni buying gifts, purchase many of the Iowa souvenirs.

JIM CHRISTY, supply buyer for the Union Bookstore, said Thursday that sales to students are rather steady throughout the football season, but a poor season affects the impulse buyers - the alumni and visitors who are in Iowa City for only a day. The sale of "rah-rah stuff drops drastically" when the team loses, he said.

A roll of quarters from UI Student Senate President Tim Dickson is all that is needed to make many complainng students happy.

The quarters are necessary so staff members at the UI Main Library can change the ribbons in several coinoperated typewriters provided for students by the senate. The machines must be turned on to center the carriage before the ribbons can be replaced, said Bill Sayre, adistrative assistant at the library. Secretaries in the library change ribbons and correction tapes on the typewriters whenever necessary, but their responsibility to the machines stops there, Sayre said. Instead of "taking the quarters out of their pockets," Sayre said he and his staff are waiting for Dickson to "bring over some quarters" so they can change the Four electric IBM typewriters were installed in the library three weeks ago as a result of senate research on the need for the machines. One of the machines now has a broken ribbon carriage and the others need new ribbons, Dickson said. He said the ribbons should be replaced next week. The machines have broken down on several occasions since they were installed because people damaged them trying to change ribbons and doing their own repairs instead of contacting library staff members, Dickson said. Dickson put up signs in the typewriter stalls reminding users to handle the machine carefully and notifying them of the senate phone number to call in case of maintenance problems

'The (library) staff was not really enthusiastic about taking over the project," Dickson said.

The typewriters are rented through the UI Rental Pool by the senate. Major maintenance problems are handled by Terry's Office Products Service, 402 S. Linn St.

The senate paid about $1,000 for the ribbons, correction tapes and one year's rent for the typewriters. Students can use the typewriters at a rate of 25 cents per half-hour, Dickson said.

'We've had some growing pains with the project," he said. Sayre said, "Who knows, this may just have been a bad run.'

Two fun-filled annual UI events will be held tonight to prepare students for this fall's football season and help those who are interested find out about the many different campus organizations. The Seventh Annual Chamber of Commerce Bed Races, sponsored by the UI Women's Panhellenic

Association and the Iowa City Chamber of Com-merce, will be held on Clinton Street beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Sixteen teams, representing recognized student organizations or university housing units, and the local businesses that sponsor the groups will compete in the races.

The teams will include two men and two women who will push a bed along the Clinton Street race course, in front of the Pentacrest. A representative of the team's sponsor must ride on each bed.

SANDY ORTON, chairwoman of the bed-race committee, said the bed race is "a pep rally. It promotes school spirit."

She also said the races are a promotion event for Iowa City merchants and the Chamber of Commerce. "It lets them get to know the students. It's their one main project with the university," she said. Each of the sixteen groups competing in the races must have a theme and dress according to that

Traveling trophies, which can be kept one year and must be returned for next year's race, will be awarded to the team with the most creative costumes and to the first- and second-place winners of the race. The annual Activities Fair, sponsored by the Student Activities Board, the Office of Campus Programs and Student Activities, and the Union, will also be held tonight.

THE FAIR, which will be from 7-12 p.m. in the Union, offers students a variety of entertainment. About 80 campus organizations will participate in the fair by staffing information booths and giving demonstrations in the Union from 7-10 p.m.

"The purpose of the fair is to acquaint students who want to get to know about the different organiza-tions on campus and what they offer," said Brenda Ames, vice-director of the Student Activities Board. Ames said 1,500-2,000 students attended last year's fair. "We expect even more this year because of the advertising," she said.

Musical entertainment at the fair will be provided by Brooklyn Heights, a folk music trio; Keith Kozacik, a folk guitarist; and The Movies, a live band. Video movies will also be shown in the Union Landmark's lobby.

Free beer and refreshments will be provided, and drawings for door prizes will be held each half hour. Union specials during the fair include a Wheelroom Happy Hour from 4 p.m. to 11:45 p.m. and half-price coupons for bowling, billiards and Bijou movies.

Student's work retracted

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) - A graduate student withdrew Thursday from Cornell University after school officials discovered discrepancies in his work that forced them to retract claims of a major cancer research breakthrough.

"It was a very exciting result but actually there was no result at all," Professor Volker M. Vogt, who discovered the discrepancy, said Thursday. Vogt said the findings of Mark B. Spector, 24, would have uncovered a part of a cancerous tumorvirus, a part that had never before been identified. Dr. Richard McCarty, a school official, received a one-paragraph letter Thursday from Spector which said: "Considering the circumstances that have taken place over the past six weeks, I would like to withdraw my Ph.D. thesis, and, in addition, withdraw from the graduate school."

Campus NAACP

The formation of a UI chapter of the NAACP is both a distressing reminder of the retrenchment that the cause of racial equality has suffered in recent years and an encouraging sign that the need for renewed activism is being addressed.

The great progress that was achieved by blacks in the 1950s and 60s somehow failed to carry over into the 1970s. Legal attacks on affirmative action programs, continuing high levels of black unemployment and recent budget cuts, that hit the poor and disadvantaged the hardest, are all seen by black leaders as evidence that blacks generally are worse off today than they were a decade ago.

What's more, they say, blacks have to a large degree, lost access to the political process. Delegates to the National Conference on a Black Agenda for the 1980s, held last year, voiced their concern that white politicians have become desensitized to issues involving civil rights and social equality. Richard Hatcher, mayor of Gary, Indiana, summed up this feeling when he told the conference, "the worst thing that can happen to black people is to be ignored."

The conference also reached the consensus that the only way to reverse this trend is for blacks to become more involved in local politics, and organizers of the campus NAACP want to do just that. They have said the new chapter will consider UI administrative policies, curriculum and faculty hiring and firing.

All members of the university community, not just blacks, should be concerned about the issues of civil rights and race relations at the UI, and the NAACP can help focus such concern. It is a welcome addition to the list of campus organizations.

A time for planning

The construction work on Iowa Avenue this week closed the sidewalk and, as is to be expected, inconvenienced both pedestrians and motorists. It also pointed up major and minor problems that need to be looked into in the future.

On the whole, both Iowa City and the UI are to be commended for the way in which they handled the inevitable disruption of automobile and pedestrian traffic caused by the completion of the Madison Street sewer project. However, when the Iowa Avenue sidewalk was blocked off Thursday, pedestrians spilled over on to the street between classes, creating potentially hazardous conditions for themselves and the narrowed lane of auto traffic.

Students using wheel chairs found their access to EPB blocked. They had to cross the grass to get to the sidewalk in order to utilize the north side ramp. The situation could have been improved by a plank or something similar.

These are relatively minor problems, but ones which point to a larger one: should automobiles be allowed on Iowa Avenue or Madison Street, particularly between Washington and Jefferson? Everyone knows how pedestrians and drivers vie for control of the crosswalks.

It's a sticky situation requiring the cooperation and the combined planning of Iowa City and the UI. A plan for a pedestrian campus has been around for 10 years. It's time now to pull it out and look into what can be done.

For them, as for myself, those first rosy promises of the Reagan program "an American renaissance" seemed marvelously simple. Reagan would simply reduce spending on programs to aid the poor, cut sharply taxes on the rich, and Americans would be inspired to work harder, invest more, and there would be an expansion of supplies that would devastate inflation. Then, voila! There would be a surplus in the federal budget, even after colossal increases in military spending. Then almost all of us would

WELL, UNEMPLOYMENT is rising (up by 155,000 in one month), inflation remains woeful, and the likelihood is that the deficit next year will be 50 to 100 percent higher than the president projected. So Reagan's supply-siders have reconsulted their abacuses and concluded that they've got to cut some $30 billion out of the proposed defense budget which begins in October next year. They are saying that social programs will have to be whacked more, and that Social Security and Medicare programs surely will have to be cut. They are even arguing that to avert fiscal disaster the United States must go back to a standard linking the dollar to gold.

Reagan has kept his popularity up so far with a series of timely jokes, causing people to leave him with the comment, "Well, what the hell, he sure in near-desperation now. is an affable guy!'

They weren't chuckling over Reagan's quips last week when he

Defense foul-ups

The Sunday Chicago Tribune published a recently declassified report from the congressional General Accounting Office (GAO) indicating that a main cog in the nation's defense system, the cruise missile, had "two potentially dangerous flaws."

It may be a seasonal weapon that will not work when snow is on the ground. Snow confuses the cruise missile's radar sensors. Further, the missile's computer systems cannot be properly programmed because U.S. Intelligence has failed to provide "accurate details about the contours of landmarks in parts of the Soviet Union." The GAO report criticizes the haste in planning and execution of the weapon system.

Unfortunately, the sound is all too familiar. It points up fundamental deficiencies in the long-range planning capabilities of those in charge of the national defense system. Obviously, if you are going to target a low-flying, terrain-hugging weapon, such as the cruise missile purportedly is, you need a road map. It also helps to test the missile in conditions similar to the ones under which it must perform. According to the GAO, the missile was tested over "Point Mugu, California, where there are practically no trees, little snowfall, and a general, rolling terrain." Does that sound like the route into Moscow and Leningrad?

The cruise missile was the Carter Administration's baby, but what has happened to it is no more characteristic of one administration than another. The M-16 debacle and the computer malfunctions that have plagued both the F-15 and the F-16 fighters are symptomatic of a military defense system in which the left hand does not communicate with the right.

These design and construction problems are all the more worrisome now that the Reagan administration has vowed to beef up the nation's defenses at the expense of other programs, promising a 7 percent growth in defense spending annually until we have a $1.5 trillion leg up on the Russians. The only hope is that the Russians are designing missiles for New York and Chicago that will actually hit the Kremlin.

To the editor:

In reference to 'Iowa's prisons' (DI, Sept. 4) by Scott Kilman: It is patently obvious that he has never visited the Iowa State Penitentiary in Fort Madison. As a citizen of that city my entire life, I know the facts behind that "rotting warehouse where Iowa hides its backwash"

The inmates at Fort Madison are there for very good reasons, such as murder, rape and robbery. The reason they are there is because they violated the civil rights of a person or group of people. They aren't in there just to have something to do until they can get a job. Are you going to let the man who murdered your child get a job where you work? Or the man who ripped you off for over five hundred dollars? I'm positive that you liberal-minded people out there would. What you actually do is send them to us, the ignorant people of Fort Madison, who actually like them in the Pen, right where they are. The only thing that could be better is if they still had capital punishment here in Iowa, so that most of the inmates who took part in the riot would either be in solitary or dead. We don't like them any more than you do.

Now as to the prison itself. It's a stone structure, with about fifteen towers guarding it from all sides. The stone is not rotting. It definitely is not a warehouse. As for it 'squatting' along the Mississippi, well, everyone should have such a good view of the river. The outer wall slopes down from the bluff to about half a mile from the Sante Fe Bridge. It is surrounded by Country Club Lane, Highway 61, and the bluff. Assuming anyone would escape from the prison proper, they invariably head for the bluff.

It is a known fact in Fort Madison that the prisoners pollute their water. Most guards take their own food because the prisoners put things in it, such as glass. My uncle, the General Electric dealer, is always up there fixing the televisions. It is a puzzle why they do that. It's a waste of time and money.

On Wednesday, the prisoners showed us how screwed up they actually are. They set fire to such non-essentials as the kitchen, classroom, chapel, infirmary, and a building scheduled for remodeling this week. Now does this show intelligence on the part of the prisoners? Many of the residents of Fort Madison had a simple solution for the riot: bomb all of them. We're tired of getting blamed for not caring and having those people there. If Kilman does indeed want a lot of smaller prisons where the prisoners can be next to and mingle with society, let him look into the drug ring that was run by inmates who were on workrelease, or the prisoner who escaped while helping to deliver furniture around Iowa, or even ISP's own Church of the New Song. For the non-violent prisoners we have three prison farms (minimum security facilities) near Fort Madison. For the violent, we have the Pen. Putting them in with the citizens of Fort Madison, or Des Moines, or Iowa City (sure, why not?) will not restore to them the basic human characteristics of love, duty, and responsibility. Wednesday's display, their lawsuit (which got them the Indian sweat tent they wanted) and their actions show they aren't ready for society. Little children have better manners. Visit the Pen, Kilman. Talk to the men who led the riot. Tell me then that your solution is still valid. And if you think it still is, tell me where Iowa is going to get the money. There are many obstacles. The main one is the behavior of the prisoners.

To the editor: In reading recent issues of the DI, it is certainly clear that we are not in want of controversial issues to debate. These include such things as legal abortion, gay rights, ERA ....

Until very recent times, these and other such issues were not even open to debate. For almost 200 years, things progressed quite nicely in this country without them. Now, in the name of "progress," these issues are, to coin a worn-out cliche, coming out of the closet.

Perhaps the issue causing the biggest dispute, at least locally, is the referendum proposed by Ian Johnson to adopt the Bible as a supplementary text in the Clear Creek school district. Mr. Johnson appears to be bucking a great deal of opposition in his quest.

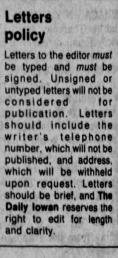

Strange how the book that our country was founded upon is now treated like poison by so many. God's Word teaches decency and morality. What do the opponents of the referendum have to fear from these teachings? I would guess that the Bible steps on the toes of many people who consider themselves modern liberals, though for many of them, I'm sure that it's not a question of morality; rather it's often a case of "I want to do my own thing, and if I like it, it's moral for me." The Bible teaches us to be considerate of others and the consequences of our actions upon them.

I do not mean to intimate that all recent social developments are bad. But we must be careful not to get carried away. "We've come a long way, baby." But what have we come a long way from and toward what are we going? Have we come a long way from ignorance toward utopia or from a sense of regulation toward perdition?

"I sent ABC a bill for $1,000. I don't think that's unreasonable," Baker said. "If they don't like it, they can get back to us." The bill was sent to KCRG, the ABC affiliate in Cedar Rapids, for forwarding to the network, he said

"The ABC people were very nice and asked us to send them a bill," he said. Baker said the network set up equip-ment for an interview with Johnson in a Clear Creek High School classroom. 'They set up the room, used phone

THE NETWORK'S live interview with Johnson, the UI law student who introduced a referendum to adopt the Bible as a supplementary text in Clear Creek schools, was canceled. The room was used by KCRG, Baker said. KCRG reporter Tom Moore said the station received the bill and forwarded it to ABC. "It was pretty reasonable, he said. "ABC asked us to set up the equipment so they could interview Johnson, so the cost accrues to them." WMT also used a classroom to interview Johnson the night of the referendum vote, Baker said. The district will bill WMT "about $20" for the use of the room, he said.

Mark Casey, assistant news director for WMT, said, "We have never been billed before for the use of a public building. He said WMT "did nothing more than set up for a normal taped broadcast." The WMT crew set up lights, but did not use phone lines or any other school facilities, Casey said.

The election results were made available when Johnson was at the school, so WMT made arrangements to use a room there, Casey said.

The fraternity has been using teeter-totters to raise money for the March of Dimes since 1974 and the sorority has been included in the project for the last three years.

"It's not only a good service," said Iva Mae Bendt, Lambda Chi's housemother, "but it's a nice social function. It's a good chance for the freshmen to get to know one another.'

In addition to the seesaw station in front of the fraternity, 222 N. Clinton St., a teeter-totter will be traveling around town.

Its first appearance will be outside Kinnick Stadium during Saturday's football game. The group will be seesawing at the north end of the Dubuque Street pedestrian mall during the marathon's last hour next Thursday from 5-6 p.m.

There will be 114 women from the sorority seesawng at least one hour each, and 60 men from the fraternity will be putting in a total of four hours each during the week.

Iowa City rental property owners can appeal code violations cited by housing inspectors to the Iowa City Housing Appeals Board.

The seven members of the city Housing Commission serve on the board, said Carol Karstens, board vice chairwoman. Five are regular members, two are alternates, she said. They are appointed to the Housing Commission by the Iowa City Council for three-year terms.

If a housing inspector issues a report listing housing code violations at a rental property, the owner is given an appeal request form along with the violaion papers, Karstens said. "That way they know that they do have an option" of contesting the violation. She said the owner is mailed notification of the time that her or his case will be reviewed. The owner is given the opportunity to testify, Karstens said.

and safety standards in rental properties, not to close down buildings, she said. "We are aware of the housing shortage in Iowa City, however we have to be concerned with health and safety standards," Karstens said.

The appeals board functions somewhat like a court of law because the inspector and the owner are sworn in and their testimony is recorded, said Goldene Haendel, board chairwoman.

David Brown, an assistant city attorney, said the board can either uphold the violations or grant a variance. A variance is granted if the owner can show that meeting the code would cause unnecessary hardship or that it is structurally difficult to make the repair, he said.

If a violation upheld by the board is not corrected, the city can take the property owner to court, Brown said

Karstens said the appeals board was given the power to grant variances in December 1980. No variances were granted before then, she said.

Ray says prison 'lockdown' might be proper, safe plan

DES MOINES (UPI) - A six-month "lockdown" at the Iowa State Penitentiary in Fort Madison "might be the proper response" to assure safety while repairs are made at the heavily-damaged facility, Gov. Robert D. Ray said Thursday.

Ray said the period of time a lockdown should be in effect at the 144-year-old prison is a "decision that has to be made by those in charge of running the facility."

Prison Warden David Scurr has indicated prisoners will be kept locked in their cells for at least six months following the Sept. 2 disturbance that left seven buildings damaged.

No official damage estimate has been released, but officials have indicated the repair cost could be more than $1 million.

TWO SMALL groups of inmates held 12 hostages for more than 12 hours during a tense prison takeover last Wednesday. One inmate was killed during the disturbance, and rampaging prisoners set fires and vandalized structures.

Scurr said prisoners' movement will be restricted once the lockdown is lifted.

"A lockdown might be the proper response," Ray said. "I'm not in a very good position to judge that." He said additional uprisings are "a possibility" in response to such disciplinary action. But he said the tight measures may be necessary to ensure safety at the damaged prison

ON A RELATED subject, Ray said he disagrees with a proposal by state Rep. Stephen Rapp, D-Waterloo, to draft a statewide bond-issue referendum to construct a new maximum security prison. "I hadn't heard that proposal," Ray said. "I think those things are best handled by the duly-elected officials. If we go to referendum on every single subject that comes to mind, we probably wouldn't need a legislature."

Ray noted that the losses would have been much greater last week had the prison been a new facility.

"Some people assume if you have a new prison, you'll never have an uprising," he said. "I don't think you can assume that."

Ray said there are other ramifications that must be considered when constructing a new facility, especially finding a location.

He noted the public resistance and opposition that was raised when state officials converted the state mental health facility in Mount Pleasant to a minimum security facility several years ago.

Gov. Robert Ray

THE GOVERNOR also added: "If you look at the results of Tuesday's school elections, you'll find people are not eager to pass on bond issues aftirmatively

'We may need a new facility, but if the people say no - where are you then?" Ray said. "It's best to leave it up to the legislature.'

The governor defended Iowa as "still one of the safest places in the country to live," in light of the FBI's Uniform Crime Report released today which showed serious crime increased in the state last vear.

Serious crime was up 10.6 percent in 1980 over the previous year, slipping Iowa from third to eighth position among the nation's safest states. Ray said serious crime has increased in the state's rural areas recently.

DES MOINES (UPI) - The Governor's Conference on Crime Prevention will be held in October. the first state crime conference to be held in Iowa, Gov. Robert D. Ray said Thursday.

Ray said the conference, scheduled for Oct. 6-7, will include more than 800 participants chosen from the state's 99 counties. The participants will represent a wide-range of backgrounds in the criminal justice system, he said.

Drug and alcohol abuse, consumer fraud, volunteer crime prevention programs and employment programs geared at preventing juvenile delinquency will be among the topics discussed at the conference, he said.

JACK EGNOR, special agent-in-charge of the Denver FBI office, said the two were arrested without incident. A witness said one of the suspects was armed with a large handgun.

"They got a little too greedy," said Egnor of the suspects. "When a robbery becomes the biggest, our agents tend to really go after the suspects. It's just a little extra motivation.

Both men had been in Denver two or three times since the robbery of the Tucson bank in April, Egnor said.

Three men overpowered a janitor and branch manager of the Tucson bank before it opened last April 22, forcing the manager to open the safe, Egnor said.

Fenimore was arrested June 23 in a suburb of Des Moines and about $1 million was recovered. He was sentenced to 20 years in prison Aug. 6 by U.S. District Court Judge William Stuart for his role in the robbery.

Oliver was arrested May 7 in Springfield, Ill. Grandstaff and Brown previously had been indic-ted by a federal grand jury in Des Moines in connection with the robbery of the jewelry stores.

Rat race humanized in 'Mon Oncle'

By Craig Wyrick

We're all living in a rat race. A being's only reason for being is being, or so believes Henri Laborit, a behaviorist whose experiments demonstrate aggression among laboratory rats.

Laborit's experiments sound more like grist for psychology lectures than material for a film, but add three humans with common problems, a few short clips of their role model movie heroes and you have Alain Resnais' latest and best film, Mon Oncle d'Amerique, a movie that's more than Skinner-deep.

Mon Oncle d'Amerique opens with a mini lecture by Laborit accompanied by photographs illustrating, often humorously, his contentions. The photographs, as we realize later, are taken from scenes in the film. What follows is a slow fade-out from Laborit's lectures into the lives of three people who recite their childhood memories. At last, the crux of the film surfaces as Rene Jean and Janine try to survive the mousetraps of everyday living.

LOVE, HATE, anger and anguish run through the film, but Laborit's academic voice, interspersed throughout the film, reminds us that the emotions all fit into the behaviorism of rats. And these human rats don't desert what could be a sinking ship. Instead, through their believable actions, they support Laborit's hypotheses. At the end, Laborit states that, "Until earth's inhabi-tants know that the brain's function is to dominate, we can't stop aggression.'

Resnais is the director who wrestles with this bizarre idea, as written by Jean Grualt. In the past, Resnais has produced the detached academia of Providence and the humorless and faceless Last Year at Marienbad, neither of them totally successful except among academic types. In

Sun. 9-4

Mon Oncle d'Amerique, when his characters have the most likelihood of becoming. dehumanized rats in a maze, Resnais breathes life into them, a quality that's been missing in his other films. Nicole Garcia gives a haunting performance as the woman who gets the short end of the man's behavior.

IT'S A CONTROVERSIAL, compelling film. True, the three characters handle their problems in an ordinary, very human, fashion, but this only makes Laborit's contentions all the more terrifying when they are proved correct.

If Resnais had taken the subject too seriously, it might have signaled the film's death knell. Instead he spices it with humor, to the point of making the actors re-enact scenes wearing rat costumes.

If only regular lectures would combine this much information and humor.

'Foxfire,' is a heartfelt play about land's influence on man

By Roxanne T. Mueller Arts/Entertainment Editor

MINNEAPOLIS - In a theater world that tends toward the hysterical at times, with plays that shout "Look at me, I'm relevant!" or stress spectacle over content, Foxfire is a beautiful change of pace, a gentle play that paces itself leisurely and builds characters and situations so imperciptibly that you find yourself surprisingly anxious at intermission — you itch to get back in your seat to find out what happens, an occurrence that's as rare as hen's teeth in too much of the current theater fare of regurgitated classics and mechanical revivals.

The Guthrie Theater, revitalized under the hand of its new artistic director, Liviu Ciulei, continues to make inroads into regional theater excellence. Foxfire is proof that the Guthrie name can still attract professsionals of the highest caliber. The director is Marshall W. Mason, a New York import who directed Talley's Folly and Fifth of July on Broadway, and has five Obie awards under his belt for such Off Broadway productions as Hot L Baltimore.

FOXFIRE BRINGS back the husband-wife team of Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy, the couple whom Tyrone Guthrie brought in for the Guthrie's premiere season 18 years ago and who have returned time and again in the interval. Foxfire is very much Cronyn's baby. With playwright Susan Cooper, he combed the Foxfire books, a successful series of books written by Appalachian high school students about the long-time settlers of northern Georgia, and fashioned a heartfelt play about love of land and the threat of development.

The Guthrie production marks Foxfire's American to the Guthrie.

Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy throws up his hands and says, "I don't have to hear this" and walks away.

RICHARD COX plays Dillard, the youngest offspring of the Nations' family, who left the mountain to become a country-rock star. He resents the developers tearing up the beautiful land for debut, revised from its world premiere a year ago at condos and luxury resorts, but would like to convince the Stratford Festival in Canada where Ciulei saw it his mother to come live with him. The pull of the and extended Cronyn an invitation to bring the play land, however, is strong, and the tension between holding on to his roots and pursuing his music

FOR A FREE CHILE On September 11, 1973 a bloody military coup overthrew the democratically elected government of President Salvador Allende of Chile.

Since that time gross violations of human rights have occured: arbitrary imprisonment, executions, systematic use of torture and the disappearance of political detainees.

Today, we want to extend our solidarity to the Chilean people in their struggle for democracy.

FOXFIRE STRESSES homely values, and thus the danger of sentimentalizing the piece is omnipresent. In lesser hands, the story of a gentle, grandmotherly mountain dweller who talks with her dead husband and must decide between hearth and home and a developer's offer to sell her land, would be ripe for cloying cliches. As it is, Tandy's characterization of Annie Nations hits a balance between plain, country simplicity and wise pioneerish faith. Cronyn plays Hector Nations, an irascible farmer of the old school who scraped out a living in the mountain foothills before succumbing to old age and exhaustion. A kind of Our Town commentator, Hector ambles on and off stage, appearing to the lonely Annie and taking his place in several cks. When the ghostly Hector hears Annie start to confess to their son Dillard that life was hardly a bowl of cherries with Hector, the old man reaches a crisis point.

One of the more startling moments in the action comes when the audience is allowed a glimpse of Dillard's career. The tall, blue-jeaned Dillard of the mountain cabin is transformed into a fringecostumed lounge entertainer who adopts a mock hillbilly accent and grating Tony Orlando sincerity. Knowing Annie is in the concert audience, you cringe in embarrassment for her. And when Holly (Katherine Cortez), the young conscience of the piece who freely admits her satisfaction with mountain life, describes his costume as resembling a lampshade, you cheer her on.

While not a great piece of theater, Foxfire is a moving, appealing work that calls to mind a heritage that is all too quickly disappearing. With the constant talk of vanishing resources and a world that's ever-shrinking, Foxfire is a provocative reminder of our collective American past.

Student Senate votes to condemn another proposed tuition increase

By Jackie Baylor

The UI Student Senate unanimously passed a resolution Thursday night opposing tuition increases of 9.5-33.3 percent proposed for the 1982-83 academic year.

Senate executives learned about the proposed increases late Wednesday and announced the proposal made by R. Wayne Richey, executive secretary to the state Board of Regents, at the senate meeting. Senate President Tim Dickson said Richey made the proposal "to beat the legislators to the punch.

The senate resolution stated that the senate opposed the possible increases because the tuition rates were set for the biennium last spring and the board policy has been to raise tuition only every two years to allow students to plan ahead.

IN OTHER business, the senate unanimously approved the executives' summer research because it contains "a wealth of information," said Senator Julie Tigges. Dickson developed ways to improve student lobbying efforts - by creating a student network across the state and registering students to vote - and proposed to "build an advocacy and information bureau on campus" to alert UI students to the financial aid cuts Tigges said Dickson's research on student lobbying efforts is "like a prescription, if followed it will be a great success. Senator Brad Knott said the lobbying research is "very positive. It's a very timely topic. With the tight resources, if we don't watch out we will be burned.

"I think a lot can be accomplished," he said. "It's up to the senate to act on it."

SENATE Vice President Sheldon Schur examined the method of using registration personnel to distribute Optional Student Fee cards and concluded that it should be continued. He also developed ways to increase the marketing of the Student/Staff/Faculty directories by using increased advertising and a continual assessment of where the books are selling. He considered other methods of funding Cambus in his research, but he said he is unable to comment on a possible funding plan because it is still in the planning stages.

Senate Treasurer Mike Moon said he investigated the way the Bijou Commission selects its films. The commission can work with student groups to choose movies to benefit all organizations involved, he said. Moon said he also set up a fiscal year timetable for the senate budgeting and auditing process that does not need to be revised each year

Dickson said he had mixed emotions about summer research. "This year it seemed to work. What we (the executives) did was beneficial. But past research sits on the shelf or the quality is not good enough to accomplish anything.

ALTHOUGH executives are paid timeand-a-half during the summer months for working on research, the extra pay is "basically an incentive to keep the executives here," he said.

Dickson suggested a change in the research procedure because unexpected situations that student government executives must deal with over the summer sometimes slow research. A group affiliated with the senate and the UI Collegiate Associations Council could do all student government summer research, he said

Tigges said she questioned whether summer research should be required. "Things come up that need to be dealt with. Most have pet projects they want to do anyway and would have gotten done. The day-to-day dealings are more important."

The senate also approved a resolution supporting the Voting Rights Act.

Kidwell unsure if he'll contest loss

William Kidwell, who lost his bid for a three-year seat on the Iowa City School Board, said Thursday he had not decided whether to contest the results of Tuesday's election.

School Board candidates' names were incorrectly placed on voting machines, possibly causing as many as 500 ballots to be miscast. Kidwell lost the election by 519 court will be set up to decide who will sit on the board.

The challenge court would comprise one member to represent Kidwell, one member to represent the challenged candidate and the chairman of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, Dennis Langenberg, who would act as judge.

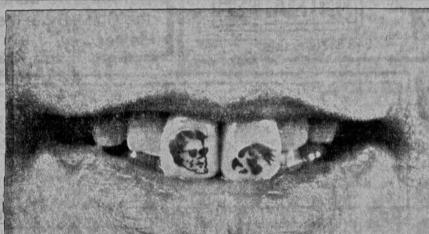

The court could decide that either the challenger or the person challenged would serve on the board, or "throw out the election," which would mean the incumbent would serve on the board until the next School Board election, Slockett said.

Slockett said further study is needed to determine the incumbent. Stan Aldinger, an incumbent, was elected to fill the two-year vacancy created by the death of Nicholas Karagan. Kidwell was appointed to fill Karagan's place until the election.

If the decision of the challenge court is questioned, the case would move to a district court.

WHEN USED in conventional dentistry, the shells are permanently attached to the teeth with resin. The Iowa teeth just snap on. They are easily removed, McNurlen said, but it is unlikely that the teeth would be swallowed. Because they are in the front of the mouth "it'd be more likely that they'd fall out," he said.

Each tooth has a separate cap. "That way if we get a different football coach I won't have to make a whole new set," McNurlen said

McNurlen estimated the teeth would cost $200-$400 per set if they were made by a dentist in private practice.

She said student government will also present information on student financial aid to encourage the regents to support financial aid increases commensurate with any tuition hikes.

DICKSON SAID Thursday, "We don't feel that annual tuition increases are prudent or necessary.

He said the UI central administration "explained what they thought was the rationale. I don't think the administration feels very good about it."

But Dickson added, "They're caught in a hard place" because state and federal appropriations to the UI are decreasing, and faculty salaries are not keeping pace with inflation.

Sheldon Schur, senate vice president, said the request came earlier than expected. "We definitely didn't expect it this soon or on this short notice."

SCHUR SAID Thursday evening that they had talked with ISU student government representatives, who said they may also speak against the proposal. UI Acting President D.C. Spreistersbach said the UI central adminstration is awaiting comments from the deans of the 10 UI colleges - reactions Spriestersbach said he expects to receive before the Wednesday meeting. "We're waiting to get the reaction of the various colleges, of course. We haven't come to a final conclusion."

He said: "We are concerned with the impact this tuition increase may have on accessibility. We are concerned that other kinds of costs are escalating even higher than inflation.'

BUT SPRIESTERSBACH added, "I think there is an attitude that every sector must bear its share of increasing costs."

The deans of the two colleges facing the highest percentage increase - medicine and law - were not available for comment Thursday night

Regents' President S.J. Brownlee was at a meeting Thursday night and was also unavailable for comment.

Although Richey said the Iowa Legislature had pressured the regents into raising tuition, House Majority Leader Larry Pope said it was more "a feeling on the part of legislators that we need more income into the regents' system to keep our system at a high level ... We simply had to go along with the governor's recommendation (on appropriations to the regents) and it was limited, quite frankly." Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, who was on the educational appropriations committee, said she disagrees with the proposed tuition increases, but that until Iowans become angry, they can expect only higher costs.

"I think it's a shame," she said. "But it's going to be that way until parents get angry.

Protesters organize 'sea blockade' against Calif. nuclear power plant

AVILA BEACH, Calif. (UPI) - A small vanguard of protesters set up camp Thursday for a 1960s-style demonstration against a nuclear power plant and said they will defy a Coast Guard order forbidding a seaborne "invasion" of the reactor site. Sheriff's deputies went on 12-hour shifts. California Highway Patrol officers were alerted as reinforcements and the National Guard mobilized 500 troops to provide law enforcement officers with food, transportation and other support.

Workers at the Diablo Canyon reactor site planned a counter-demonstration, saying they would picket the protesters' campground and their command post in nearby San Luis Obispo.

Despite an order by the Coast Guard barring all private vessels from approaching the oceanside facility, "the sea blockade will continue," said Raye Fleming, a spokeswoman for the anti-nuclear Abalone Alliance.

"WE ARE AWARE of the heavy penalties," she said. The penalties are up to a $25,000 fine for violating the zone and up to five years in prison for forcibly resisting its enforcement.

Labor unions representing Diablo Canyon workers said the day the protesters begin their "blockade" to prevent the reactor from being activated, union members will set up picket lines outside their rural encampment and San Luis Obispo headquarters.

"They're bringing all these outsiders here and they're going to cost our com-munity hundreds of thousands of dollars," said spokesman Steve Marquis. "When we can hardly afford sewers and things like that, it's a sizable hunk out of our budget."

Both law enforcement and anti-nuclear activists were gearing up for a longexpected confrontation.

"WE'LL MOVE when we feel we have enough people," said Carl Ziechella, a spokesman for the protesters, "possibly by the weekend, although it's possible to wait

The faceoff was triggered by a federal decision Wednesday clearing the way for final approval in the next two weeks of the bitterly contested nuclear power plant midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The Abalone Alliance, a coalition of antinuclear groups, responded by calling for supporters throughout the nation to flock to the area.

O'Connor hearings progressing again Oct. 5.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sandra O'Connor, under hard questioning on the second day of confirmation hearings for the U.S. Supreme Court, said Thursday she would not have an abortion but approves of the procedure to save a mother's life.

Senate Judiciary Committee members fired a list of controversial social and legal questions at O'Connor, as her potential opponents praised the way she handled herself at the hearings. She answered each with a careful explanation of her personal feelings on the issue, while carefully avoiding giving any legal opinions.

Abortion continued to dominate the hearings on the 51-year-old Arizona appeals court judge, who is expected to become the first woman to sit on the nation's highest court when it meets

ONE OF her sharpest critics, Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., asked where she would draw the line on allowing abortion.

O'Connor said legislators should decide when to ban abortions.

Would she prohibit abortion even if it meant "saving the life of the mother?" asked Denton, a conservative New Right senator staunchly opposed to abortion for any reason.

"No, I would not," O'Connor replied. However, she reaffirmed that abortion "remains offensive to me at all levels.

On the first day of the hearings she testified she would not have an abortion but did not condemn any woman

RESPONDING TO a series of questions on her fitness to join the court, O'Connor steered a careful course. She refused to reveal how she would vote on issues coming before the court.

She assured the senators that President Reagan did not require her to commit herself on how she would rule on specific cases

"I was not asked to make any commitments about what I would do or how I would resolve any issue that would come before the court," she told Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa

Grassley said it was vital to assure that O'Connor would not turn out to be "as great a surprise" to Reagan as former Chief Justice Earl Warren was to former President Dwight Eisenhower.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Gerrymandering, the practice of drawing political boundaries for political gain, is thriving in state legislatures throughout the land, a lobbying group said Thursday.

"Protecting incumbents has been an overriding goal for nearly all of the 14 states that have completed congressional redistricting," said a report prepared by Common Cause.

"Especially where seats were added," said the report, "the party in control of redistricting sought not only to protect its party's incumbents, but also to capture a new seat or seats.

"GERRYMANDERING IS alive and well in the 1980s," said the report prepared by the group's redistricting clearinghouse and based largely on news accounts of congressional plans drawn in 14 states and legislative plans completed in 18 states.

Common Cause used the report to promote its redistricting reform proposal - taking it out of the hands of the legislatures and giving it to independent, nonpartisan commissions operating under strict antigerrymandering rules with their plans subject to quick judicial review.

"The majority party in most state legislatures calls the shots concerning the shape of new districts," it said. "In others with divided party control, bipartisan gerrymandering often protects incumbents of both parties."

In states that have kept the same size house delegation, said the report, counties were shuffled around to balance populations and to "make incumbents more secure."

The report cited what it said were "two already infamous gerrymanders," in Washington state and North Carolina.

Gov't opts against busing

WASHINGTON (UPI) - In a sharp reversal from the Carter administration, the Justice Department Thursday supported a 1978 Washington state initiative that banned school busing to achieve desegregation.

In May, U.S. Attorney General William French Smith signaled a change in the government's position on school busing, saying the Justice Department planned to emphasize remedies other than mandatory busing for school desegregation.

O'Neill discouraged the idea of legislation aimed at lowering interest rates.

The Congressional Budget Office Thursday predicted next year's interest rates to drop an average of 12.4 percent, compared to the administration's projection of 10.5 percent. Interest rates currently are running around 20 percent.

Director Alice Rivlin said her office expects the rates to decline, beginning later this year, but "not to come plummeting.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE, Reagan told a group of private economists he believes the high interest rates that jeopardize the success of his economic licy will decline "in the not too distant future."

But he did not say what, if any, pressure he plans to put on the Federal Reserve Board, which sets monetary policy. "I want to see the Fed use monetary restraint and be the fourth leg of our economic program," Reagan of Illinois hinted Wednesday that members of Congress, flooded with constituent complaints on recent trips home, might become "jittery" and try to get at the high interest rates through

But O'Neill said the Fed is merely following Reagan's policies in keeping the rates high.

IF REAGAN changed policies, O'Neill said, "I think the Federal Reserve would respond."

Members of Congress discovered during their five-week summer recess that high interest rates have replaced inflation or fears of Social Security cuts as the prime concern of most Americans.

In brief speeches Thursday, Democrats blamed the administration for high interest rates and attacked Reagan's optimistic projections for lower rates.

O'Neill, at his regular news briefing, He disagreed with those GOP leaders

Democrats call for modest tax cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Liberal House Democrats, saying Wall Street does not believe President Reagan's economic plan will work, moved Thursday to revive a more modest tax-cut plan that the House rejected in July in favor of Reagan's proposal.

The Democrats said their plan "made good sense two months ago and makes even better sense now" when high interest rates continue and projected budget deficits are larger than previously estimated.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., conceding he was "starting to sound like a Republican," said what the economy "really needs these days is business confidence" and that will only come with balanced federal budgets.

THE GROUP'S TAX proposal would require $40 billion less in government borrowing next year by phasing in tax cuts for individuals and providing smaller reductions for the richest 25 percent of all taxpayers. It also would eliminate provisions described by the Democrats as "corporate welfare." The congressmen cited the "rapid deterioration in the bond and stock markets and the crushing impact of continued high interest rates." despite the administration's optimistic forecasts when it persuaded Congress to pass the largest tax cut in history. REP. DAVID OBEY, D-Wis., anticipating doubts that Congress would reconsider the tax package after only a few months, said, "We have a lot better chance of that happening than meeting the administration's expectations on interest rates.'

"No other proposal offered to date can realistically be expected to cut the federal deficit and federal borrowing for fiscal 1982 by more than $40 billion," the Democratic statement said.

House scolds effort ssociation to use 9-digit ZIPs

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Postmaster General William Bolger tried to assure Congress Thursday that he is not going ahead with use of the controversial nine-digit ZIP codes - something Congress has forbidden until October 1983. Bolger was called before a House government operations subcommittee to explain why he sent out notices to 15 million postal customers giving them their new nine-digit numbers and urging them to begin using the new codes. Those notices were sent out beginning Aug. 10, about two weeks after Congress passed a bill forbidding imelementation of the new ZIP codes until October 1983. The delay is intended to give the General Accounting Office time to review the program and tell Congress if the expanded ZIP codes actually would save all the money the Postal Service claims.

the controversial plan. English told Bolger, "The spirit of that agreement has and is taking a real beating.

"I wish I had not sent them out," Bolger said.

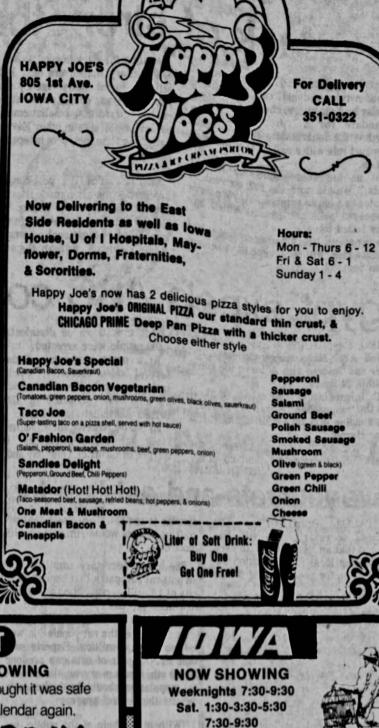

English noted the law specifically bars government agencies from using the new codes. Bolger agreed the agencies would be violating the law if they used the codes as his Aug. 10 notice suggested they do.

Pressed by English, Bolger insisted he had not misinformed the public or violated his own instructions to other postal officials to provide "current and correct" information on the status of the nine-digit ZIP code program.

"What do you want me to do - spend another $1 million to send out another 15 million notices correcting this?" heasked English.

Bolger said he would send letters to

Nationwide crime rate increases by 9 percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The nation's crime rate jumped 9 percent last year with a murder, rape, robbery or ggravated assault committed every 24 seconds, the FBI reported Thursday. The FBI's annual crime index of reported serious crimes for 1980 showed that 13 million offenses were reported by more than 15,000 law enforcement agencies nationwide in 1980. The murder rate nationwide rose by 7 percent to 23,044 cases - one every 24 nutes, the index said. Men between the ages of 20 and 29 were the largest group of murder victims and firearms were the principal weapons used in committing the crimes.

Polish congress entrusts Walesa with task of strengthening union

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) - The first half of Solidarity's national congress ended Thursday by giving union chief Lech Walesa a mandate for a "dictatorship" to strengthen the federation and challenging Communist rule with a call for free national elections.

"Let us hide our ambitions in our pockets," Walesa told the 892 convention delegates in a closing statement. "We have a chance to build the Poland which our fathers failed to build."

Against the backdrop of Soviet land and sea military maneuvers near Poland, the official Soviet news agency Tass said Solidarity was "openly provocative and im-pudent toward the socialist countries" for calling on workers in other East European nations to form their own independent trade unions.

WALESA TOLD a post-congress news conference the union made the call because "We want to apply the slogan, 'Workers of the world unite.' "That slogan is the rallying call of international communism.

Nan Doak, a sophomore from Hedrick, Iowa, was named All-American and all-Big Ten as a freshman. She also finished sixth at the Big Ten cross-country meet, and third in the AIAW Region VI meet.

Besides Doak, Hassard's remaining veterans include Penny O'Brien, last year's captain Kay Stormo, and the team's No. 2 runner last year, Judy Parker.

Two other returnees are Erin O'Neill and Jodi Hershberger. An injury currently has Hershberger listed as doubtful for the season. Should she return to action, Hassard warns that "she could be instrumental to the success of the team, if she comes back in time.

WHERE MOST teams have at least a full month or so to prepare for their first contest, the runners have been practicing as a squad for just three weeks. However, Hassard has had his team working on their own throughout the off-season on a fairly tight conditioning program.

"I didn't really have a highly structured off-season program for them insofar as what they were to do daily," Hassard said. "But I did give them an idea of what's expected of them in a running outline, as a guide that they could follow.

"They really have to be physically ready the day they report to practice because the season is so short.

HASSARD EXPECTS strong challenges from Big Ten teams Ohio State, Wisconsin, Michigan State, Illinois, an "improved" Minnesota and last year's conference champ Purdue.

Nationally, Hassard mentioned Idaho State, Texas, Oklahoma, Wyoming, California and Iowa State as the stiffest competition.

On the regional level, Hassard predicts a fourteam race between Iowa State, Kansas State, Minnesota and his own Iowa squad vying for the crown. Saturday's Iowa Triangular brings Western Illinois and Northern Illinois to Iowa City for a meet beginning at 10 a.m. Hassard feels it's a good meet to open the season with.

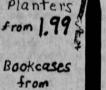

Western should give us a good challenge, while Northern will be good competition, but they'll be the weaker of the two schools," Hassard said. "Of course, Iowa has had a sort of rivalry with Western, because in the past, our cross-country dual meets have usually been close.'

To adjust to her losses. Davidson will use a new system of play in the Hawkeyes' opening game against Purdue today at 4 p.m. on the Union Field. Iowa will play with three forwards instead of four and will increase the number of midfielders from two to three. This will be the first time the Hawkeyes have played this system.

But there are many bright spots in the Iowa lineup. The Hawkeyes have six players who qualified for the second of three tryout levels for the United States team.

> Also expected to see action today is freshman LeeAnn Detwiler. Davidson said the halfback has a good stick and game sense, along with a good competitive attitude Cracking the line-up for the first time since joining the Iowa ranks in 1980 is Lynn Stadtmueller. The sophomore will play right outside forward.

As for Davidson's strategy against Purdue today, she said she has a lot of tricks up her sleeve. Davidson acknowledges the Boilermakers as one of the top two teams in the Big Ten. The Hawks defeated Purdue 2-1 last year at the conference championship on their way to claiming the Big Ten title.

'This will be a tough game to start the season off with." Davidson said. "It will be a real test of how we'll do the rest of the season.

West Texas State is Duncan's toughest opener

(UPI) - Iowa State might be wise to tailback Dwayne Crutchfield. study the football fortunes of the 1980 Oklahoma State Cowboys.

The Cowboys were eligible to play in post-season competition for the first time in four years in 1980 and had every reason to expect such an invitation: they had 17 starters back from a team that finished 7-4 in 1979.

But Oklahoma State lost its opening game at home to West Texas State, 20-19, and went on to finish an embarrassing 3-7-1. So much for preseason optimism.

That same preseason optimism has engulfed the football team, student body and alumni of Iowa State University in 1981. The Cyclones finished 6-5 last year and return 18 starters, in-

THERE ISN'T a ticket left in the 50,000-seat Iowa State Stadium for any of the Cyclones' seven home games. And guess whom Iowa State opens against? West Texas State.

"There's a lot of excitement on our football team and an electricity here in coach. Ames," said Donnie Duncan, Iowa State's head coach. "We're all excited about the coming season.

"But we're well aware what happened to Oklahoma State last year and I'm sure West Texas State will be pointing toward another Big Eight team. This is the toughest opener we've had since I've been here (1979)." Iowa State football generated plenty cluding second-team All-American of excitement last season when the Cyclones started out 5-0 to climb to the No. 18 spot in the UPI ratings. Iowa State went on to lose five straight games from that point but managed to finish above .500 with a season-ending 23-21 victory over, ironically, Oklahoma State — giving Duncan his first-ever winning season as a head

IOWA STATE IS one of six Big Eight teams opening its season Saturday. In other openers, No. 2-ranked Oklahoma hosts Wyoming, No. 6 Nebraska is at Iowa, Missouri is home against Army, Kansas State hosts South Dakota and Colorado entertains Texas Tech in Boulder.

Kansas, which won its opener 15-11 at Tulsa last weekend, will also be home

Saturday to play Oregon, a surprising Chicago. 23-16 loser in its own opener at Fresno State.

Oklahoma is loaded once again with 12 returning starters as the Sooners begin pursuit of their ninth straight Big Some of them are even better Eight championship. Coach Barry Switzer has won five of those championships outright and shared three others in compiling an 83-9-2 record, giving him the best winning percentage of any active coach (.883).

Switzer has sophomore halfback Buster Rhymes as his annual Heisman Trophy candidate and he is further enthused about the prospects for his wishbone offense by a superb group of freshman backs including Freddie Sims of Phoenix, Steve Sewell of San Francisco and Alvin Ross of suburban

"OUR FRESHMAN class has been very impressive," Switzer said. "We thought we recruited well and we did. prospects than we thought they were."

Nebraska will have its hands full with Iowa. The Cornhuskers drilled the Big Ten Hawkeyes 57-0 last season in Lincoln but this year's contest will be at Iowa.

Missouri will find out this week if Mike Hyde can step in as the replacement at quarterback for four-year starter Phil Bradley. If Hyde falters, freshman Warren Seitz is waiting his chance.

They may not have the veterans of last year, but	PER the Iowa women's golf team has the players who can shoot well enough to look like an experienced team. That's how Coach Diane Thomason might describe	LOOKIN Come to Open H this year's squad. "They're very close, only a stroke apart," she said. "Most have been shooting in the high 70's all week (in practice). They've been putting in good scores.

Cookie Rosine, a sophomore, is at No. 1, while senior Sonya Stalberger is at No. 2. Everyone else is new to the Iowa program, including Thomason's three other starters.

One is Therese Ehrhart, a junior college transfer from Illinois Central College. Amy Bubon and Marcia Pekar, the Hawks' other starters, are both freshmen.

THE SIMILARITY OF low scores in Iowa's top five will bring about some extra effort, causing the numbers to be even smaller. "There's some friendly competition betweeen the players for spots to travel," Thomason said. "They're going to go out and do the best they can.'

Two of the Hawks' starters from last year, Elena Callas and Anne Pinckney, have used up their eligibility. Callas, the Hawks' top golfer for the past four years, qualified for last year's Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women National Tournament.

However, Thomason said this year's crop of new players have made up for the vacancies made by last season's starters. "We lost Elena, but we've got more depth and have people who can shoot those

Borg into semifinals with win at Open

NEW YORK (UPI) - Once again displaying his uncanny knack for winning the big points, Bjorn Borg survived three tense tie-breakers to squeeze past a frustrated Roscoe Tanner Thursday and gain the semifinals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Tanner, after a sloppy start when he committed 23 unforced errors in the first two sets, pulled back to within a single point of evening the match in the fourth set tie-break, but the unemotional Swede, claiming he feels "no pressure," held firm to pull out the match, 7-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6.

Borg, in reaching the Open semifinals for the fifth time - but still seeking his first title - won the final set tie-break 9-7 on a backhand pass off his first volley. Moments earlier, Tanner had set point at 6-5, but on the next point he sent a backhand into the net.

BORG, SEEDED second, had taken the first set tie-break 7-4 and Tanner the third set by an identical score of 7-

Borg will face the winner of the Jimmy Connors-Eliot Teltscher match in the semifinals.

'If I lose that set point in the tiebreak, he would be back in the match," Borg said. "He took a few chances and made some points.'

Through the first three sets there was only a single service break between the two players, Borg achieving that in the second game of the second set. When Borg broke again in the fourth game of the fourth set and then held to go ahead 4-1, it seemed over for the bullet-serving Tanner. But the ninth seeded American then got his only break of the match in the seventh game to give himself another life. In the 10th game, Borg had two match points at 15-40, but with the sellout crowd at the National Tennis Center cheering him on, Tanner saved both with smashes and then held.

Borg put in only 57 percent of his first serves to 49 percent for Tanner.

Roscoe Tanner approaches the net for a shot against Bjorn Borg in the U.S. Open. Borg won 7-6,6-3,6-7,7-6.

Fry chooses Pete Gales as starter

By Steve Batterson Staff Writer

The question has been answered. Iowa Football Coach Hayden Fry announced Thursday that Pete Gales will start at quarterback for the Hawkeyes in Saturday's season opener against Nebraska.

"Pete was our No. 1 quarterback the last four games of last season," Fry said. "He was our No. 1 quarterback this spring and he hasn't been beaten out.

Fry said it was the media who created the interest in who would be Iowa's starting quarterback. "They said that they both had a great fall, which is true, but your No. 2 quarterback has to be better than your No. 1 or else they don't change positions and that's what happened," Fry said.

"GORDY (BOHANNON) will play in the Nebraska game. I'm confident of that. Bohannon wasn't better than Pete and Pete wasn't beaten out," Fry said. "Gales is one heck of a quarterback. Against Michigan State he was as good as any quarterback in the Big Ten."

Gales, a senior, was put in the starting quarterback's role for the last four games of the 1980 season when Phil Suess broke his wrist. Iowa won two of the games, against Wisconsin and Michigan State and lost to Purdue and Ohio State.

Against Purdue, Gales broke two Iowa records. He passed for 321 yards, breaking a mark set by Mike Cilek in 1967 and totaled 371 yards in offense. He completed 23 of 46 pass attempts against the Boilermakers, including a 72-yard touchdown pass to Keith Chappelle.

In the final game of the season against Michigan State, Gales tossed three touchdown passes, completing 17 sure he's healthy for Iowa State than of 32 passes for 249 yards, in Iowa's 41-0 take a chance."

FOR THE SEASON, Gales hit on & of 152 passes for 882 yards. During spring drills he was 44 of 69, including h for 12 in the spring game.

Bohannon was redshirted for the 198 season, due to an ankle injury. He started several games in 1979 and completed 13 of 30 passes, including two for touchdowns. He also was intercepted twice.

"I'd like to use about a 60-40 ratio Saturday," Fry said. "That's what I'd like to do but there's no real way to schedule any one-two-three kind of thing. I wish we'd have the problem of having two excellent people at every position."

Fry said that several freshmen could see action against the Cornhuskers. "On defense, the only one that will for sure is George Little at defensiv tackle." Fry also said that Hap Peterson, a Bettendorf native, could also see action at nose guard.

ON OFFENSE, Owen Gill at runn back, Kelly O'Brien at tight end, Chuck Long at quarterback and Tom Nichol, a kicker, may see some action Saturday. "I really don't want to throw them in against the sixth-rated team in the nation," Fry said. "It would be different if we'd be opening against somebody else. I do expect that the freshmen who are playing where we've got two seniors this year will see quite a bit of playing time this year."

Fry said there were no new injuries in Thursday's workout, but that "there's a couple we'll be sweating out until kick off to see if the doctors will give them approval," Fry said. "But1 won't put in someone who's questionable. I'd rather have someone like J.C. Love-Jordan sit out and make

Hawkeye fans can learn from Big Red followers

I can hardly wait for the Nebraska-Iowa game this weekend. As a born and raised "Big Red" Cornhusker fan living in Iowa City, this game is the highlight of my fall. Especially since it's my only chance to see the "Big Red" play in person.

As a Nebraskan, raised on the likes of Johnny Rogers, Jeff Kinney, and Vince Ferragamo, then listening to the exploits of I.M. Hipp, Junior Miller and Jarvis Redwine, it's something of a culture shock to attend a school where football has not exactly been successful

noons spent obliviously in red. Not just from the color of my eyes as I imbibed during the game, but also from the overwhelming outpouring of loyalty by the Cornhusker fans. Ask anyone who's

Lincoln. Memorial Stadium becomes a argue with the fact that Nebraskans didn't want to miss the biggest party sea of red on Saturday afternoons. All except, of course, the corner of the stadium where the opponent's fans are seated. games is that of an Indian-summer sky, filled with red helium balloons ascending to the heavens after the first Cornhusker score. Since this usually happened early in the first quarter, one could get down to more serious business - cheering and toasting the Cornhuskers to victory.

Nebraska also boasts over 112 successive home game sellouts. This may love their Scarlet and Cream pig-skin running team.

THIS IS NOT to say Iowans do not But my fondest memory of Nebraska support the Hawkeyes. When first I came to this hallowed institution of higher learning, I questioned the fans' perspective. Here they were turning out weekend after weekend for a team that has had 20 straight non-winning seasons. Now one might call that "loyalty."

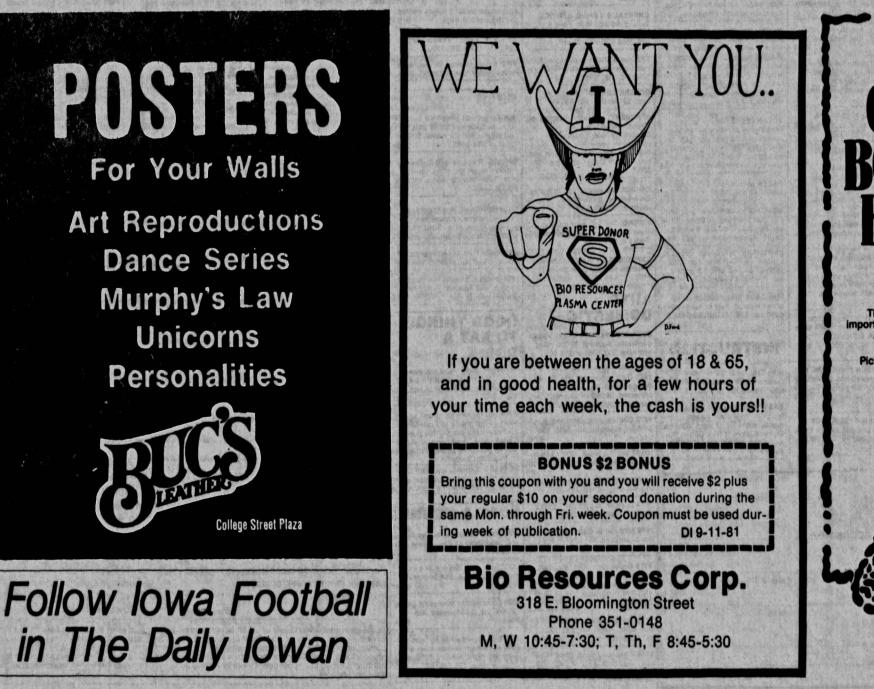

But what could be the logic to it all. Is it because they wanted to see the not be an NCAA record, but you can't Hawkeyes play football, or that they thrown six times a year in the state of Iowa? To me, either reason seems quite valid.

One advantage Nebraska does have over the UI is the lack of a rival institution within the boundaries of the state. Iowans must decide whether to go with the Cyclones or stick by the Hawkeves. And those I've met who actually like black and gold as team colors, are unshakable as Hawkeye fans. (Personally, black and gold reminds me of mud.)

who believes in cheering for the underdog, except against Nebraska, I think the Hawkeye fans could turn Kinnick Stadium into its own sea of gold. Show that Hawkeye support. Go to the game dressed in a yellow shirt, or pants, or hat or something that would make the stadium look like a 60,000 seat ball of mud

Can you imagine being a member of the opposition coming into Kinnick Stadium and seeing only yellow? It might cause you to lose heart and retreat. Turning Nebraska's Memorial Stadium into a sea-of-red certainly BUT AS A fool-hardy football fan hasn't hurt the Huskers over the years.
