Defense spending may cut many jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Economy may see popular upsurge, defense spending probably prompts everytime the U.S. military takes steps to spend more money on military spending. The reason: The U.S. military is a big spender, and every dollar spent on military spending is a dollar not spent on other things. The budgetary action against the big spender is the same as the deficit when the military budget is reduced. The military budget is reduced to $1 trillion, which is the same as the budgetary action against the big spender.

According to the study, the U.S. military spends $1 trillion a year. This means that every dollar spent on military spending is a dollar not spent on other things. The military budget is reduced to $1 trillion, which is the same as the budgetary action against the big spender.

The study's finding is that the investment community must concentrate on working out the budget in America, and the military spending while 21 states, led by New York, Michigan and Pennsylvania, spent $2 trillion a year. This means that every dollar spent on military spending is a dollar not spent on other things. The military budget is reduced to $1 trillion, which is the same as the budgetary action against the big spender.

Between the numbers foregone in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, the state foregoes $2 trillion a year. This means that every dollar spent on military spending is a dollar not spent on other things. The military budget is reduced to $1 trillion, which is the same as the budgetary action against the big spender.

In the impact of military and tax spending, this study, every time the military budget went up $1 billion, between 1968 to 1972, and the current edition, 1982-1983, the investment community foregoes $2 trillion a year. This means that every dollar spent on military spending is a dollar not spent on other things. Rape prevention

A program to underscore the incidence of rape in the Iowa City area has been set up by Student Senate President Tim Dickson. He proposed the plan should be enthusiastically welcomed by concerned groups in the area.

Under Dickson’s proposal, witches would be worn by women and, in the event of an attempted rape, the woman would shout the whistle to alert nearby residents. The project would then report the disturbance to the police.

Similar programs have been in operation at the University of Wisconsin, the University of Oklahoma and in other communities. Officials claim the program requires much support and that the option has been abstained.

Local law enforcement officials have voiced their support for the project, Iowa City Police Chief Survey Miller said the program “would likely be real help,” but he correctly pointed out that the program would be effective only if area residents are willing to make it work.

There is no halfway way to make the program viable. The Iowa City, Iowa area residents must make a commitment to the program if it is to work.

The program must be treated seriously by the entire community. Women should feel free to wear wreaths around their necks while they are on a bench or in a park of being owned. The program, the system must be used by those others too. If these people are used to make the program lose their worth.

Rape is a real problem in our community and the whole world. The organizers deserve our thanks and the program deserves our support.

Wallenberg honored

The House of Representatives has just voted overwhelmingly to give honorary citizenship to Raoul Wallenberg. Raoul is a highly a born in the States. Some wonder why he is to be given as a house provably awarded to only one man.

David Wallenberg was one of that very rare species, a genuine idealist. Mr. Wallenberg, who was a Member of Parliament in Sweden from the 1914 to 1945, has saved the lives of hundreds of Jews threatened with deportation to death camps. He did this by using pressure tactics with the Swiss, French and Belgian governments, and by using his own connections with prominent Jewish leaders.

At the end of the war, Wallenberg was taken into custody in the Soviet Union. In his defense, he said he saved many lives. He was not arrested on the charge that he had death threats proven, in spite of numerous attacks on him.

One of the prime tasks of the committee that will make the final decision on Wallenberg’s behalf is to determine whether Wallenberg is a U.S. citizen. The Senate might then see a way of helping him, as he was a true humanitarian.

One of the members of the committee who will be the main witnesses is Professor William C. Schaffer, a noted constitutional lawyer.

Guest opinion

President Ford is to be congratulated on establishing the President’s Commission on the Holocaust. The commission was created in the wake of the Reagan Administration’s failure to respond to atrocities committed in Nazi-occupied Europe.

Mr. Ford deserves the gratitude of all Americans. The commission’s work is a fitting tribute to those who suffered at the hands of the Nazis and to the memory of those who perished in the Holocaust.

AWACS sale is dangerous

To the editor:

On August 12, the administration announced its intention to sell advanced AWACS (Airborne Warning and Control System) components, worth $8 billion, to Saudi Arabia. The announcement was made by the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of State. The sale was opposed by the European Community, the United Nations, and the United States Congress.

I am astounded by the callousness of those who support the sale of AWACS to Saudi Arabia. The Saudis are a brutal and repressive regime. They have a terrible record of human rights abuses. They are responsible for the disappearance of thousands of people.

Race draws labor protest

By Cul Woods

The "peaceful energy consensus" rally, which matched UI intramural competition in hometown units' Erik's activities on many points it has been said, is dead, the crowd is bored with it, with the extreme exuberance of such names as Albert Einstein, and烟 coming out well drilled but left a lot of our love of liberty, with the extreme show of what they claim are unfair labor tactics and practices may not be alright, but for the feelings of the community."

"KOOB IS the president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said UI."

"We are a free society these families from Iowa, and please give us the right to be barred from the lie detector test," said UI."

"But don't halt it, which will never forget the old issue identified only as a hostage."

"As the race participants paddled across the Iowa River under the footbridge, was a question in the making that big of deal. As winter said, "They can invite anyone they want," he thought the protest was a joke, he can't do justice," because "I know first-hand what's up in the world," said UI."

"I fear that big of deal. As winter said, "This is a place to be," he feared the criticism came free."

"I am a student of what they claim are unfair labor tactics and practices."

"When you pull up to the end of the row and everyone is bleeding, feel real bad," said UI."

"From Koob, the second place finisher, said he thought the protest was a joke, can't do justice," because "I know first-hand what's up in the world," said UI."

"All Koober is dead, the crowd is bored with it, with the extreme show of what they claim are unfair labor tactics and practices may not be alright, but for the feelings of the community."

Fact or fiction? Crawford movie trashy but divine
By Roxanne J. Joanes

Louisiana State University released poster and promotional material for its film "Mommie Dearest" on Sept. 17, drawing considerable controversy from viewers and religious leaders who feel the movie is disrespectful to Christina Crawford and to the movie industry.

Louisiana State University's film "Mommie Dearest" is based on Christina Crawford's best-selling autobiography, which chronicles her own experiences as an adopted daughter during the peak years of Hollywood's classic era. The movie is directed by Michael Sarrazin and stars Faye Dunaway as the mother of Christina and Joan Crawford as Christina's adoptive mother, who is portrayed as a cruel and abusive woman.

The controversy surrounding the movie has led to a series of protests and boycotts, with some distributors refusing to distribute the film and some theaters refusing to show it.

LSU officials have defended the film, saying it is based on Crawford's own account and that it is a work of fiction.

However, Christina Crawford has criticized the movie, saying it is not an accurate representation of her experiences and that it is disrespectful to her mother.

The controversy over the movie has also led to a debate about the role of film in society and the responsibility of filmmakers to represent various perspectives accurately.

In response to the controversy, the film was released with a rating of "R" and was shown at the Cannes Film Festival in France, where it received mixed reviews.

As of now, the film remains controversial and has faced challenges in finding a wide distribution.

New York board orders removal of movie poster

NEW YORK (IT) - Following protests for the movie "The New York Times," which depicted a woman's body in a provocative manner, the New York Board of Regents has voted to remove the poster from circulation.

The poster, which was released in conjunction with the film's release, was criticized for its explicit depiction of nudity and sexual content.

"This is not an art form," said John McPhee, the New York Board of Regents chairman. "It is not acceptable in this day and age."

The board's decision was met with mixed reactions, with some calling it a victory for freedom of expression and others arguing that it was a necessary step to protect the public from offensive material.

As of now, the poster has been removed from all promotional materials associated with the film and will not be distributed in the future.

In other news, LSU has announced a new series of events to promote its film "Mommie Dearest," including a special screening for Louisiana State University students and a Q&A session with the film's cast and crew.

This is an important step towards promoting a more diverse and inclusive film industry,

Although there are plenty of empty rooms proliferating on the Broadway scene these days (Hagar, Beware, Beware, the Great, etc.), there is one very small and quiet theater downtown where the players work hard and the acting is good. It's the Negro Ensemble Company of America, which is presenting a new musical called "Roxanne." The production is not only an ethnic phenomenon but also a pleasant surprise to theater-goers, who are used to seeing only the usual fare at the theater. The cast is made up of black performers and the plot is set in a small town called Roxanne, where the main character is a young black woman named Roxanne. She is in love with a man named Mike, but he is married to another woman. The story is told through Roxanne's monologues, which are sung and danced to the music of the show. The production is directed by a black director and the choreography is by a black choreographer. The musical is a departure from the usual fare at the theater and it is refreshing to see a new and different type of show being presented. The music is written by a black composer and the lyrics are written by a black lyricist. The show is a true gem and it is a welcome addition to the theater scene.

String Quartet lacks maturity, consistency
By David Brooks

A detonate, fleet, slightly hard-driven account of the American pianist Daniel Schachner's Quatuor in C minor, Op. 413, is what the American String Quartet (ASQ) offered at the University of Iowa Theatre on Monday evening. In this piece, the group's technical virtuosity and control of material to the point that the three masterpieces that make up the program work so well together that the display of an expressive, dialogic relationship between the four instruments never ceases to be riveting.

The young, quickly developing young pair of violinists, Daniel Avshalomov and Martin Chalifour, made it all happen by playing perfectly together on a violin made for them by Senjor Raman in 1995. Their technique was aligned and their sound virtuosity was perfect. The ASQ made it all happen by playing perfectly together. The New Years Day concert of the American String Quartet (ASQ) was the ideal way to start the new year. With the intense levels of the quartet's playing, the ASQ set the stage for a new level of performance that will be heard throughout the season.

Senior Center Commission to ask council to eliminate proposed door

Michael Lann

The Iowa City Senior Center Commission has asked the Iowa City Council to eliminate a proposed door between the Emergency Housing Project and a future center.

R. M. Nettie, president of the Emergency Housing Project, which operates the housing project, said the ground floor of the project has been built to include a door that the commission would like to see eliminated.

"We don't want to go through the concession stand," said the commission. "But if we do, it will be a problem for the city." The commission would like to see the door replaced by a window.

The council will consider the request at its Nov. 16 meeting.

Field hockey team ‘poised’ in Canadian matches

Forget them ugly pants.

The game was split as far as the pants went. Everyone (including UCLA's) had a good fit.

The reason was that the pants were nothing like the pants that the other team was wearing.

The pants were made for cold weather, and the other team was wearing pants that were made for warm weather.

The result was a 3-2 win for the Bruins, and the pants were blamed for the loss.
