The Situation In Poland Today

By George Review

Students should have no problem applying to universities directly, a new report indicates. The report, "Points of View," was issued by the Council on Higher Education, a group of 25 officials from various universities.

According to the report, 85% of the students who apply directly to universities are accepted, while 15% are rejected. The report also notes that many students who apply directly are accepted because they have been given the opportunity to submit their own applications, rather than relying on third-party support.

Terror Arrived

The possibility of a terrorist attack on the United States seems to have increased in recent days. According to reports, two dozen people have been killed in street battles in the town of Wroclaw, Poland. The town is a major transit point for goods and people entering from the Soviet Union.

The attack seems to have been coordinated by a group of city, police, and military officials, and it is feared that more attacks may follow. The government has called for a state of emergency, and widespread fears of a terrorist attack have gripped the country.

Local Woman arrested on Drug Charges

The arrest has caused widespread concern among local residents, who fear that the woman may have been dealing drugs to others in the area. The police have promised to investigate the matter further.

Leach stand lauded

At a time when President Reagan has virtually united sup- port with him, the two most faithful friends of his policy stand would have to be attorney general William Frenchpolved and secretary of state George Shultz. And while there is some evidence that the former has been less than enthusiastic about the latter, there is no question that the two have not been as closely identified as they once were.

Leach questions the administration's conclusion that there is an emerging consensus in favor of the president's goals. He points out that American military forces are not being used to fight the war in the Middle East, that there is no clear strategy for ending the war in the Middle East, and that the president's policies are not being supported by the American people.

Leach goes on to criticize Reagan for going after short-term gains—such as the number of votes he gets in the polls. He contends that the president's policies are not being supported by the American people and that the president's policies are not being supported by the American people.

O'Neill is not 'so fine' in anemic comedy film

By Craig Mykyld

What makes O'Neill 'so fine'? Not that the actor probably has never creased your mind. You may have even forgotten who he is. Well, maybe he's not a big star, but he's a fine actor who has been in films for the last 10 years. So why did he do O'Neill? He's got a great gift for funny film. But we are not so tuned, because the film is so bringing that director-writer Andrew Bergman probably gave him a bad new script.

O'Neill's role is as an English physician in 'Beverly Hills, 90210'. The film is a cryptic murder mystery that probably plays more to the fan than to the mystery genre. The film's theme is that the characters are not really connected. But there is the illusion that 'Beverly Hills, 90210' is the greatest ever made. O'Neill says, "I believe it's the greatest ever made." But it's not. It's just as bad as 'The Godfather' or 'Jaws'.

But O'Neill returns to the role of Dr. Harry E. White, the man's office and version of Beverly Hills, 90210. O'Neill may keep it going to the end of the film. The film is really a vehicle for O'Neill, and not for the characters. O'Neill has said that he wants to keep his character going for the rest of the film. The character is really a vehicle for O'Neill, and not for the film. The character is really a vehicle for O'Neill, and not for the film. A little insight makes a difference in fully appreciating some sports

I have a passion to make the sports world a better place, not just as a fan but as someone who understands the nuances of the sport. I firmly believe that every fan, regardless of the sport they follow, has a duty to learn about and appreciate the game. This is why I feel that every football fan should be familiar with the rules of the game, not just as a casual observer but as someone who understands the intricacies of the sport. By doing so, we can better appreciate the effort and dedication required by the players and coaches, and we can also avoid making assumptions that might be harmful to the sport. It is important to recognize that football is not just a game; it is a way of life for the players and fans alike. By understanding the game, we can better appreciate the sacrifices they make and the joy they bring to the lives of many people. So, let's make an effort to learn about the game and appreciate it more fully.

Ankle sprain sidelines Gannon

By Jay Christensen
Sports Editor

The Gannon University men’s basketball team will return to full strength soon as senior forward Tim LaTourette is expected to return to action this week. LaTourette, who missed the past two games with a sprained ankle, is expected to play in both Friday’s game against Slippery Rock and Saturday’s game against West Chester.

LaTourette’s return will give the Golden Knights a boost on the front line, as he is one of the team’s top scorers and rebounders. In addition, his presence on the court will help to provide some much-needed depth for a team that has been playing short-handed in recent games.

LaTourette’s return is a welcome addition to a team that has been dealing with a number of injuries in recent weeks. The Golden Knights have been forced to rely on their younger players to fill in for the injured starters, and the team has responded well to the challenge.

The Golden Knights will look to build on their recent successes as they prepare to face Slippery Rock and West Chester this weekend. Both games will be tough, but LaTourette’s return will give the team a boost as they look to extend their winning streak.

Lee vital to hockey squad’s defense

By R. Forrest Wrenn
Assistant Sports Editor

Iowa’s defensive strategy has been based on a solid foundation of players who can hold their own in the trenches. One of those players is senior linebacker Mike Lee, who has been a key component of the defense for the past three seasons.

Lee’s leadership and experience have been instrumental in helping the team improve its defense. With his speed, agility, and tackling skills, he is a key player on the team. His presence on the field has been invaluable, and he has become a leader on and off the field.

Lee’s performance on the field has been a key factor in the team’s success. He has been a consistent performer, and his contributions have been recognized by both the coaches and his teammates.

Lee’s contributions to the team have been essential, and his leadership has been a key factor in the team’s success. With Lee back in the lineup, the defense should continue to improve, and the team should be able to continue their winning streak.
