Jury finds Vesely guilty of voluntary manslaughter

By Andrew L. Miller

In a verdict said to please the defendant, a six-woman, two-man jury found former Iowa Governor Robert C. Vesely guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the killing of his wife, Linda, in 2001. Vesely had been charged with first-degree murder, and would have faced a maximum sentence of 50 years if convicted.

The trial, which lasted for four weeks, was highly publicized and drew national attention. Vesely, a former governor and businessman, was known for his leadership during a difficult economic period in Iowa.

Vesely was found guilty after a six-woman, six-man jury deliberated for several hours. The defense had argued that Vesely was acting in self-defense, while the prosecution argued that Vesely had acted impulsively and with malice aforethought.

After the verdict, Vesely was taken into custody. He will now face a trial by the state of Iowa, unless he pleads guilty to a lesser charge.

Democrats condemn war against the poor

WASHINGTON, D.C. - President Lyndon B. Johnson's War on Poverty was condemned by many Democrats today, who said it was a failure.

The war on poverty was launched in 1964 as part of President Johnson's Great Society. However, it has been criticized for its lack of effectiveness in reducing poverty levels.

The Democrats said they would introduce legislation to replace the war on poverty with a new approach that would focus on creating jobs and providing education opportunities for the poor.

No license to count

No law license means no fish

Supporters of learning more about our waterways are pushing for more profitable hydroelectric sites. Conservationists are concerned that people are trying to get too much power from the water. Some say that licensing probably has to be done already, but they maintain that it is everything. I read it last week.

By Roger Johnson, Editor

The story is about the new law that allows people to fish without a license. The law will be in effect on July 1.

No license required to counsel in Iowa

By Martin Marklen

It is a growing trend these days to bring more of the government into our lives. Whether it is through licensing requirements or regulation, the government is everywhere.

Suppose you are a psychologist seeking to make a living for yourself. You set up a practice and begin counseling a few patients. Suddenly you find yourself before the state licensing board, being questioned about your qualifications. This is a familiar scenario for many of us.

If you are a psychologist in Iowa, you will want to know about the new requirements for counseling. The Iowa Psychological Association has been working to ease the burden of licensing on psychologists. They want to ensure that anyone who wishes to practice psychology is adequately prepared.

However, there is a misconception that all psychologists need to be licensed. This is not true. In Iowa, only those who bill private insurance companies or Medicare are required to be licensed. Those who practice in private practice, with their own patients, are not required to be licensed.

Senator Julia Gentleman, chairwoman of the Senate Standing Committee on Human Resources, was quoted as saying, "There are always some people trying to get themselves into trouble. We have to be careful that they don't do it legally." She also emphasized the importance of licensing.

However, there are those who believe that licensing is not necessary. For example, one psychologist said, "I don't see why we need to license. If someone is good, they will be good. If they are bad, they will be bad." This view is held by many in the field.

One argument against licensing is that it is too expensive. The cost of obtaining a license in Iowa is estimated to be around $325. This is a significant burden for many psychologists.

Another argument against licensing is that it is too restrictive. Those who are already practicing say that the regulations are too stringent. They argue that they are already doing a good job and that licensing is unnecessary.

The debate continues, with some arguing for more regulation and others pushing for less. The important thing to remember is that licensing is a matter of personal choice. Each person must decide for themselves if they want to be licensed or not.

New federalism starts

President Reagan's new federalism goes into effect today and the people in the city and the people is likely to be rough for a number of reasons.

Abortion debate

There are those who are involved in the abortion debate who believe that the government should not be involved in the decision of whether or not to have an abortion. They feel that the government should stay out of the private lives of individuals and leave the decision up to the individual. Those who oppose abortion believe that it is a matter of personal choice and that the government should not be involved in that decision. They feel that the government should ensure that women have access to the resources they need to make informed choices about their reproductive health.

Washington, D.C., October 1, 1981

To the editor:

I thought the account of President Reagan's so-called 'New Federalism' was spot-on in today's issue of The Daily Iowan. It was a must-read for me, especially in light of the serious situation of unemployment.

It seems to me that the president's policy is based on the assumption that the federal government is somehow to blame for the current economic difficulties. This is not only inaccurate, but it is also a dangerous idea. The federal government cannot solve all of the problems of unemployment, but it can play a积极作用 in helping to create jobs and stimulate the economy. We need to focus on finding solutions that work for everyone.

Why the MX is a no-win weapon

President Reagan is scheduled to announce his decision to implement a "modified" version of the MX missile system tomorrow. The President is expected to announce a version of the MX that is smaller and more mobile than the original version, which was designed to be stationed in remote areas of the U.S. and to be able to launch a nuclear attack on the Soviet Union in less than one hour.

According to a report in PBS NewsHour, the President's decision is likely to be met with mixed reactions. Some experts believe that the modified MX will be a more effective deterrent, while others argue that it will do little to deter the Soviet Union from building its own nuclear weapons.

Stamp prices rise to 20 cents in Nov.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service Wednesday raised the cost of mailing a letter from 12 to 20 cents, effective Nov. 1, as an agency with an $18.6 billion budget was facing the incoming Christmas season.

The rate increase, approved by the five-member Postal Rate Commission, will increase the cost of a first-class stamp from 12 cents to 20 cents.

The increase will affect millions of Americans who depend on the Postal Service for their mail service.

Reagan shows dislike of more military cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Wednesday that the U.S. military is in a "dark place" and that he is "seriously considering" further cuts in the defense budget.

The president said he is "seriously considering" further cuts in the defense budget as a way to reduce the federal deficit.

Reagan also said he is considering reducing the defense budget by $10 billion per year, which would be the largest cut in defense spending since the Vietnam War.

Reagan's statement came as he faced growing pressure from Congress and the public to cut defense spending.

Barfuss, Dickinson discuss election, human service

Barfuss, a candidate for an Illinois state representative seat in the northern suburbs, was scheduled to discuss campaign issues with Dickinson during the meeting.

Dickinson, who is running on the Democratic ticket, said she supports a bill that would provide funding for schools, clean energy initiatives, and affordable housing. She also said she opposes the recent cuts to social services and emphasizes the need for increased investments in education.

Barfuss, who is a member of the Republican Party, said he supports tax reform and reducing regulations on businesses. He also mentioned his plans to improve infrastructure and increase job opportunities in the area.

The candidates discussed their views on a variety of issues, including education, healthcare, and the economy. They both agreed on the importance of investing in education and healthcare, but differed on their approaches to economic development.

Barfuss and Dickinson also talked about their experiences in their respective fields. Dickinson has served in the Illinois House of Representatives for several years, while Barfuss is a recent graduate of a local university.

The candidates concluded their meeting by thanking each other for the opportunity to discuss their platforms and expressing their commitment to serving the community.

Fuel loading at Diablo plant delayed by blueprint mixup

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Fuel-loading preparations at the Diablo Nuclear Power Plant were halted at least temporarily Friday because of a mixup in the blueprints. The delay has set back by at least a month a project that was expected to be completed by the end of 1975.

Engineers at the plant confirmed that an handwritten change in a blueprint had been made and now must be corrected. The resulting delay will probably increase the cost of the project, already estimated at $1.75 billion.

The new change in the blueprints was expected to cost between $1.75 million and $2.6 million, a Diablo official said. The original cost of the project was $1.75 billion.

Engineers at Diablo said the costly changes were made after the plant's auxiliary fuel-loading equipment was delivered to the plant. The changes were made to correct an error in the blueprints.

The changes were made after inspectors at Diablo discovered the error and notified the contractor, which is a subsidiary of Diablo Nuclear Power Plant, Inc., a subsidiary of Diablo Nuclear Power Plant, Inc.

The contractor, which is responsible for the auxiliary fuel-loading equipment, will now have to correct the changes. The changes will probably delay the project by at least a month.

Kinnick damage could force fan prosecution

By H. Forrest Wieland

The Daily Iowan

“Destruction of Kinnick Stadium caused by some Iowa fans on Saturday is a real concern for me,” Iowa’s athletic director yelled.

Despite the damage, the team remains in the top 25 in the country in both polls. The Hawkeyes have a tough game on the road against Indiana this weekend.

In the meantime, the university has formed a committee to address the problem of stadium damage.

“I take full responsibility for this,” the athletic director said.

The Iowa State Board of Regents is expected to discuss the issue at its next meeting.
