Pessimism mounts as impact of cuts is realized

Faculty may see grant requests as futile
Free legal service for the poor curtailed

By Jackie Burt

The Reagen administration's plan to cut federal funding to higher education has raised concerns among the faculty about the impact of the cuts.

"I think the cuts have been devastating," said Assistant Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Bill E. Scott. "I don't think there's any change in the overall budget that's going to make up for the cuts." Scott said that the cuts have forced the faculty to make tough choices about the future of the university.

"We're going to have to make some tough decisions," said Scott. "We're going to have to cut back on our programs and services." Scott said that the cuts have forced the faculty to make tough choices about the future of the university.

Corporate funding

This Friday the Board of Trustees of the prestigious Massachusetts Institute of Technology will consider an offer from General Electric Co. to give $100 million over 15 years to MIT's School of Engineering.

The school is seeking $100 million in outside funds to expand its facilities and add courses in the new fields of computer science and environmental studies.

The offer comes from General Electric, which has given $25 million to MIT in the past.

John E. Westbrock, president of General Electric, said the company wanted to help MIT "prepare tomorrow's leaders" in engineering.

The offer is "a very large gift," said Dr. William M. Chafe, MIT's president.

"It will be difficult to match it," Dr. Chafe said.

John E. Jones, head of MIT's School of Engineering, said the offer would enable the school to "expand our research and teaching programs extensively."}

Infant formula

The Nestle Company has hired an independent United Methodist Church to investigate its international marketing of infant formula.

The church will study Nestle's marketing practices and make recommendations to the company.

The church's research comes in response to criticism of Nestle's marketing practices.

"The church should lend its official sanction to the current international sale of infant formula," said the church's executive director.

The church's next door neighbor, Harvard, has considered setting up a similar body.

Harvard is known for its scientific research - it's the birthplace of the biological department.

The dangers of such a situation are obvious, involving faculty and students.

"James Whitehead previously owned Technicon, which manufactured medical equipment," the church's executive director said.

Whitehead is known for its scientific research - it's the birthplace of the biological department.

Thad Jackson, a Nestle's spokesman, claims that the company

"has been following the guidelines set by the church's "official watchdog," United Methodist Church.

"If the church had any evidence of Nestle's practices, it would have been brought to our attention," Mr. Jackson said.

In the United States, the Hawkeye Marching Band has outgrown its classrooms.

"The band members spend in excess of 200 hours a week practicing for their seven football performances each year," the church's executive director said.

Today, the Marching Band is being directed by Dr. Morgan Jones.

"I am glad to support you," he said.

Mr. Jones said the band "will be the best in the world in the next five years," according to the church's executive director.

In conclusion, the church's executive director said:

"The band members spend in excess of 200 hours a week practicing for their seven football performances each year. The church should not forfeit its credibility as a religious organization.

"The church's criticism of Nestle's marketing practices should be staffed by university personnel, make use of the church's resources.

Sanderson stands on political past

By Michael Leon

Gary Sanders, candidate for an at-large seat on the City Council, worked on George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign and has been a member of the Iowa Democratic Convention Committee. "The Iowa Democratic Committee is a vehicle for political activity," he said. "If a political person holds the office, they will not stop until they have the y can, their view of God's will, " he said.

Gary Sanders, who has a master's degree in public administration from the University of Iowa, has held various government positions in his career. He was a research assistant at the University of Iowa in the 1970s and early 1980s, and has worked on other political campaigns throughout the state. He is presently involved in several political campaigns.

Opplott was known for his strong views on abortion and the rights of women. He was a member of the Iowa Democratic Convention Committee and has been involved in various political campaigns throughout the state.

Gary Sanders declared his candidacy for the City Council this evening. Sanders said he decided to run for council after he was encouraged by a political person. "I'm running because I want to make a difference," he said.

Sanders ran against incumbent Brian Van Tine, who he described as "an average" politician. "Brian doesn't have a clear vision of where he wants to take the city," Sanders said.

TV reruns back from dead; should be laid to rest again

By T. Johnson

It was not long enough when "The Brady Bunch" appeared on Monday nights, then they did away with "The Brady Bunch." Those memories from your formative years are gone for good, and we can now see reruns all the time! It's a good thing, too, because it's nice to have a little bit of nostalgia.

TV watchers who are too young to remember "The Brady Bunch" can now enjoy reruns of the classic show on television. The show was cancelled in 1974, but reruns of the series have been popular ever since.

Artist hopes for space trip

PITTSBURG H — In the hope that Columbia is prepared for its next launch, an artist who was not much inspired by the space age really got a tight smile when he heard that men will return to the moon this year.

"This is great news," said an artist who was not much inspired by the space age.

"I'm not a fan of space exploration," he said.

"But this is great news for artists," he added.

The artist was not much inspired by the space age, but he was happy to see that men will return to the moon this year.

Arts need private funds: Roderick

PITTSBURG H — U.S. Steel Corp. Chairman Donald Roderick said Friday that it is time for private and voluntary support of the arts, other than citizen-federal spending.

Roderick helped kick off a four-day national conference on the arts, the nation's economic engine and the way forward.

"We need private funds," said Roderick, chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts.

Watercolor drawing, so airy and inky, can create blank areas or finish soaring. And yet it has been a favorite medium for centuries. Watercolor painters use a vast range of pigments and techniques, from permanent mixtures and different painting methods.

Some of the difficulty lies in the skill of control. The slower watercolor artist's painting depends in part on developing the brush stroke. The moisture of the watercolor medium makes the art more sensitive to technique. However, with their transparency and their ability to absorb, watercolors combine the uniqueness of a medium that is used to.

EXHIBITION JOSEPH PAUL

Master artist Joseph Paul's watercolors explore the atmospheric effects of changing seasons. His paintings, using a variety of colors, are shaped through varying depths of color applied to a surface. The white of a dish, the presence of the brush stroke, and the demands of a difficult painting are shaped through the changing seasons. The artist is known for his ability to create a sense of place through his brushwork, creating a feeling of time and place. His paintings are a celebration of the beauty of nature and the changing seasons.

Reagan enlists aid for AWACS sale

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Monday that Secretary of State George P. Shultz and President Ronald Reagan supported the administration's plan to sell the Saudi Arabian air force the AWACS early warning system.

"The president, the secretary of state and I are convinced the Saudi Arabian air force needs the AWACS," Weinberger said.

Weinberger was in Paris for meetings with French and West German leaders to discuss the Iran-Iraq war.

Reagan, who is spending the week in Europe on business, was expected to return to Washington Wednesday night. He is scheduled for a news conference Thursday morning.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan said Monday that the president's chief of staff will be brought back to the White House in the wake of last week's airborne communications crisis.

Iowa Softball Coach Gary Parrish must be wondering if someone is about to get her softball team following a 1-4 record to the Missouri Invitational next weekend. The Hawkeyes are without a win in seven games this season. But the Hawkeyes only have two games left this season. The weekend rain forced the tournament to be postponed until Monday. The rain was expected to descend on the Missouri Softball Invitational on Saturday. Iowa was playing Illinois and Missouri was playing in the rain. The Hawkeyes needed a win in the tournament because they are 7-9 for the season. Iowa is 1-4 in the Big Ten Conference. The Hawkeyes have a team of 10 seniors and five freshmen. Fidrych released by Tigers

DETROIT (UPI) - The Detroit Tigers Monday released ace pitcher Robin Fidrych, whose 20-1 record and league-leading 1.13 ERA before spring training made him a fixture on Detroit's front page. Fidrych was placed on the 60-day disabled list on April 14 after undergoing surgery for a herniated disc.

"It was the most difficult decision I've ever had to make," said Jim Campbell, Tigers president and general manager. "This decision was made after reviewing the prevailing young players and how impressive our Minor League system is."

Fidrych asked "the Bird" become his nickname, according to the three-time All-Star outfielder. "I don't want to be called "the Bird" again," Fidrych said. "I think it's a label that's been put on me by the press."

"THE TIGERS HAVE done everything they possibly could to keep me here," Fidrych said. "I think Detroit is the only place I've ever felt at home."

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) - One spelunker was injured and seven others were unaccounted for Wednesday when a cave in the Sydney area killed one of the team's leaders.

A native of Wyoming, N.Y., Fidrych is 20 years old and has been playing baseball for 21 years. He was hurt when he fell from a cliff during a recent tour of New Zealand.

The Tigers have been discussing their options with the major league office in an attempt to prevent another这样的事 happened in the past. The Tigers are sticking to their policy of not commenting on individual players until they are back on the field.

Local breakfast set

The Northern Territory Cricket Association is planning a special breakfast for the first time in its history.

The breakfast will be held on Thursday at 8 a.m. and is expected to attract a large number of cricket fans.

On the line

As the Iowa football team returns to the classroom this week, it appears that the chances of a collision of interest between the school and the university are high.

The school's policy on the matter is that it will not comment until the university has made a decision.

The university's position is that it will not comment until the school has made a decision.

The issue is whether the school should be allowed to use the university's facilities to conduct its own research.

The school's research is expected to be of great interest to the university.

Hawkeyes look rosy according to Corso

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Fans who have never heard the name of Mike Corso, or have never heard of the University of Massachusetts, may have a tough time understanding the distinction between stuffed animals and stuffed football players. But according to Corso — who, to his credit, could be described as the University of Massachusetts' equivalent of the University of Minnesota's Frank Harter — the Boston University football team is a serious threat in this year's Big Ten competition.

"We've got a good bunch of coaches and good players," Corso said. "I think we're going to make an impression on the Big Ten." According to Corso, the key to the team's success will be its defense.

Corso said that he expects the team to have a good season, and that he is optimistic about their chances of winning the conference.

"I think we're going to be good this year," Corso said. "I think we're going to be better than we were last year."
