Dental aptitude exams stolen

By Holly Miller

More than 90 prospective dental students who took the Dental Aptitude Test at the UI College of Dentistry last fall had their exams stolen from a file cabinet in the office of Janet McFarland, associate dean of student services.

"I think it's fairly obvious that someone single that exam," said Logan, who said she had no idea how many exams were stolen. "I'm surprised this didn't happen sooner and the third is a convenience for banks. The Killeen, all wearing military uniform, jumped out of an entry truck at the head of their unit and paraded to mark the October 19th against Israel. It was the first time as Egyptian official confirmed any of the casualties as civilians.

IN THE SAME newspaper, Maj. Gen. Mohamed Eissa, commander of the Republican Guard charged with protecting the state, said "Gaddafi's" regime is "contrary to the Egyptian people's interests," adding that Gaddafi's regime is "incompatible with the Egyptian people's interests." In a statement to the media, Egypt's foreign ministry said that the Egyptian people's interests are "the same as the people's interest in any other Arab country.""The people are entering into the elections, and they will vote according to their conscience," said the ministry.

COVER STORY

A student government proposal that will benefit the campus and improve the lives of students was passed by the Student Government on Tuesday night.

The proposal includes the establishment of a new campus newspaper, "The Daily Iowan," and the creation of a new student organization, "The Daily Iowan Student Association." The new newspaper will be a paid, student-run publication that will cover local, national, and international news.

The proposal was supported by 15 student government members and opposed by 7. The vote was 15 to 7.

The new newspaper will be published weekly on Tuesdays and will include news, sports, feature stories, and opinion pieces.

The Daily Iowan Student Association will be responsible for the daily operations of the newspaper, including hiring staff, setting editorial policy, and determining content.

The association will also be responsible for raising funds to support the newspaper.

Indian lands

A Nebraska Indian tribe is fighting a modern-day version of an old battle to wrest back land it fought to win. The tribe's present-day journey began in 1795 when the U.S. government signed the Treaty of Fort Jackson with the Ponca tribe. The treaty granted the Ponca land west of the Mississippi River, but the U.S. government failed to honor its promises. The Ponca were forced to move to the Indian Territory in the 1870s, where they faced various forms of mistreatment, including forced relocation and displacement. The Ponca's struggle to reclaim their land is just one example of the ongoing challenges faced by indigenous peoples around the world in their efforts to protect and secure their ancestral lands.

After Sarad...

Now that the shock is receding, the speculations about what will happen next in Iraq, and in the region, are increasing. The United States is in a difficult position. US President George W. Bush has the support of the American people, but his policies in the Middle East are not popular. The question is whether the US can continue to exert influence in the region, or whether the situation will escalate into a full-scale war.

Congress approves military pay raises

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A comprehensive plan to provide military personnel with a major pay raise was approved by the Senate and sent to the House Wednesday and said the White House.

The measure, which the White House strongly supported, would expand in this month's pay raise if President Reagan signs the bill promptly, as expected.

The pay and bonus package was worked out by a House-Senate conference committee that approved the bill in the House, on a 316-96 vote, and then passed by the Senate on a voice vote.

The pay hike is expected to cost about 8.7 billion dollars in fiscal 1982 and 10.7 billion at a hospital, said .

Sadat funeral a security nightmare

CARLISLE, Pa. (UPI) - The funeral of former Egyptian leader Anwar Sadat will bring together the three living former U.S. presidents, Secretary of State James Baker and the slain Egyptian president's widow, Jihan Sadat, for a security nightmare for Egypt's hard-pressed police.

There were indications Wednesday that the funeral procession for the slain Egyptian president's funeral, which is held in Cairo, will be a massive event attended by world leaders, including the three living former presidents, Secretary of State James Baker and the slain Egyptian president's widow, Jihan Sadat.

Sadat funeral takes its place in history as the third time in less than a year an Egyptian president has been assassinated.

The funeral of former Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who was killed in a coup in 1981, will be attended by the three living former presidents, Secretary of State James Baker and the slain Egyptian president's widow, Jihan Sadat.

Sadat, 69, was killed in a coup in 1981, and his funeral became the third time in less than a year an Egyptian president has been assassinated.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah., said he had been informed the Reagan administration was working on an agreement with a number of large telephone companies to end the antitrust probe of the industry.

Hatch said the administration had been considering reaching an agreement with the companies to allow them to pay fines rather than face continued legal and regulatory challenges.

The antitrust probe, which has been ongoing since 1992, has focused on the industry's compliance with the Sherman Act and the Robinson-Patman Act, which prohibit unfair methods of competition in the sale of goods and services.

Hatch said the administration had been considering a settlement that would allow the companies to avoid further legal and regulatory challenges but would also require them to pay fines.

He added that the administration had been in discussions with the companies about the terms of the settlement, including the amount of fines that would be assessed.

The companies have been under increasing pressure from federal regulators and consumer groups to settle the probe and avoid further legal challenges. The probe has been ongoing for nearly a decade and has resulted in a number of legal and regulatory challenges for the companies.

Hatch said he had been informed that the administration was working on a settlement that would allow the companies to avoid further legal and regulatory challenges but would also require them to pay fines.

The settlement talks have been complicated by the ongoing legal challenges and the companies' desire to avoid further legal and regulatory challenges.

The settlement talks have been ongoing for several months and have been met with mixed reactions from both the companies and their opponents.

Some of the companies have been resistant to the settlement talks, while others have been more receptive. The companies have also been concerned about the potential financial impact of the settlement and the potential for further legal challenges.

Fab T-Birds blend rock, blues, into a spicy Texas repertoire

By Jim Morey

A special blend of Texas music will be served up at the Rosedale tonight and Friday night as the Fabulous Thunderbirds bring their particular brand of blunted oldies with the precision born of years. The Fabulous Thunderbirds (F.T. birds for those in the know).

The band's musical offerings are diverse and eclectic, with familiar names such as Wilson, Rollins, and Lobo being intertwined with obscure gems. The Fabulous Thunderbirds are known for their soulful blend of blues, rock, and Rollin', which they have been serving up at Rosedale for years.

The band is a group of experienced musicians who have been playing together for many years and have developed a unique style that is both familiar and innovative. They have been known to play covers of classic blues and rock tunes, as well as original compositions that showcase their musical abilities.

The F.T. birds are known for their energetic stage presence and their ability to captivate audiences with their music. They have been playing together for many years and have developed a strong following among blues and rock fans.

The Fabulous Thunderbirds bring their particular brand of Texas music to Rosedale tonight and Friday night, offering a blend of blues, rock, and R&B that is sure to please fans of all ages.

Lebowitz's new book is funnier, but she's still no Dorothy Parker

By Eric Grevent

Social studies books are serious and nearly always heavy in content. In 1979, Fran Lebowitz, a columnist for the New York Times magazine, and the author of several books, decided to write a book about her own experiences with social studies. The result was Social Studies, a humorous and insightful commentary on the subject.

The book is divided into two main parts: the first part is a collection of essays on various topics related to social studies, while the second part is a series of letters to the editor of the New York Times in which Lebowitz responds to other people's letters.

In Social Studies, Lebowitz challenges the conventional wisdom about social studies by questioning the assumptions that underlie the subject. She argues that social studies is not about teaching students about the world, but about teaching them how to think about the world.

Lebowitz's humor is a key element of Social Studies. She uses wit and sarcasm to critique the system of social studies and to show how it fails to provide students with a useful understanding of the world.

One of the most memorable essays in Social Studies is "The Power of the Pen," in which Lebowitz describes her experience of writing letters to the editor of the New York Times. In this essay, Lebowitz writes about her passion for writing and her desire to use her voice to challenge the assumptions of social studies.

In conclusion, Social Studies is a book that is both funny and thought-provoking. It challenges the conventional wisdom about social studies and provides a fresh perspective on the subject. Whether you are a student, a teacher, or simply curious about the world, this book is sure to provide you with something to think about.

New Wave protests Coors' rec backing

By Mike Condon

The UI Office of International Student Affairs, along with UI student body president Patrick Smith, has formed the Coors Recouner Council to protest a recent decision by Coors to change the status of the Coors Recouner to a "professional" rec center which would allow it to charge admission for athletic events.

Summertime may run for Senate

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A summer-long Senate campaign is reaching a climax in a race that's too close to call.

The Senate race has been one of the most hotly contested and most expensive in recent years, with both candidates spending millions of dollars on television ads and traveling the state frequently.

The race is between Republican incumbent Rick Scott and Democratic challenger Bill Nelson. Scott has held a slight lead in most polls, but Nelson has made significant gains in recent weeks.

The outcome of the race could have significant implications for both parties, with the winner likely to become a key player in the upcoming election cycle.

The race has become even more competitive in recent days, with both candidates making last-minute appeals to voters.

Scott has emphasized his record in Washington, D.C., while Nelson has criticized his handling of the government shutdown and other issues.

The race is expected to be closely watched by both parties, as well as by other candidates running for Senate in other states. The winner is likely to have a major impact on the balance of power in the chamber.

The race is too close to call, with both candidates vying for the votes of undecided voters and those who are considering switching their allegiance.

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Dave McCatty pitched a three-hitter, allowed two runs and got a key hit Wednesday at Memorial Stadium as the Kansas City Royals beat the Minnesota Twins 2-1 in the first game of a three-game series.

McCatty, who had lost his previous four starts, scattered only three singles and did not allow a walk. He was helped by the Twins' five errors, including four fielding mistakes and one throwing error.

The Royals scored both runs in the fourth inning when McCatty hit a two-run triple to the right field corner.

"It's a good win for us," McCatty said. "We played well together.

The Twins' only run came on a ninth-inning homer by Ken Holtzman, who had pinch-hit for McCatty in the seventh inning.

The Royals improved to 5-6 in interleague play and had won their first two series against NL teams.

Defense fails as spikers lose

In a game that had everything, the University of Iowa women's volleyball team fell to the University of Minnesota 3-2.

The Hawkeyes, especially at defense, failed to score the rest of the first game.

According to head coach Marv Digney, Iowa's biggest problem was in putting down Minnesota to take a 2-0 lead. In Minnesota the Hawkeyes were able to put down the Gophers in the second game.

"You can't be out there and have the chance to win," Digney said. "The Gophers made it easy for us to win."

The Hawkeyes will try to turn it around on Saturday when they play Iowa State.

The Gophers played a little better than the Hawkeyes in the second game, and Minnesota played well in the third game.
