Threats spur
U.S. official to leave Italy

WASHINGTON (UPI) - U.S. Ambas-dor to Italy Murray B. Roberts was recalled in Washington at least two weeks ago, partly because of a threat by terrorists to kidnap and assassinate him, sources said today.

In a secret note dated Aug. 24, U.S.
Ambassador to Libya Robert C.
Montgomery Khalifa said Roberts "would be very dangerous to the interests of the Continental United States " if left in Italy. Khalifa asserted that the Republican-led Congress was likely to approve an arms deal with Italy to be carried out by Reagan's special advisor, Michael Deaver.

The note said the deal "could have been handled in defiance of the United States and the opinion of the Senate, and the president as well."

Deaver, who interrupted his tour of Europe, said he would not comment on Khalifa's charges.

At a White House briefing, a spokesman said Khalifa had been "locked up in a room" by his own security guards.

Deaver, who announced the deal
was still imminently winnable, said Roberts was being kept "in an appropriate setting," but it could not be revealed.

Baker rejected those figures.

Baker said the deal was to provide five sophisticated AWACS (Airborne Warning and Control System) aircraft to Turkey.

"I think we see this deal, and leave it alone," Baker said.

Baker also said the U.S. position on the AWACS sale had not changed.

"Turkey is a friendly ally of the United States," Baker said.

Operations

"If it remains as undecided, but Baker suggested the vote might come as early as next week.

As of late Sunday, Reagan's administration had not decided whether to veto the deal.
President Reagan has decided to order a post-Kennedy review of the nuclear power plant's safety equipment at the problem-plagued Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant.

The president ordered the review on the recommendation of his top energy and safety officials at the White House, according to a NRC official today.

The plant, about 12 miles east of San Luis Obispo, Calif., was ordered shut down last November by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission on charges of poor safety procedures and equipment.

In a letter to Energy Secretary James Schaeffer today, President Reagan said: "I suggested that an independent post-Kennedy review be ordered by the Department of Energy in coordination with the NRC.."

The president said that Davis and Woolsey were driving in Iowa City when they arrested after a police was called on a report of a motor vehicle theft.

The NRC case goes nationwide was 133.75 for Unocal. Another

Europe protests

The past weekend, 38,000 anti-draft demonstrators marched in Rome, protesting against nuclear build-up in Europe. Protests were accompanied by police clashes, although the Soviet Union was not targeted. The same day: 130,000 anti-nuclear marchers protested in London, and American anti-nuclear rallies have also been staged in West Germany, Belgium and Holland.

Officially, the demonstration was the largest in Rome's history. According to Rome's mayor, it was the largest in Italy. It was estimated that over 1.5 million people participated in the protest.

In Rome, organizers reported no incidents of vandalism or violence, but police said they had arrested over 200 people. The protesters, who numbered an estimated 30,000, included students, workers, and members of various political parties. They marched down Via della Conciliazione, the road that leads to the Vatican, and then continued to the Palatine Hill, where they were met by police who used tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse the crowd.

The march was one of many that have taken place across Europe in recent weeks. Other protests have been held in West Germany, Belgium, and Holland, as well as in the United States.

The protests are part of a larger movement against nuclear weapons, which has gained momentum in recent years. The movement has been fueled by concerns about the dangers of nuclear weapons and the risks of nuclear war.

In Rome, the demonstration was held to coincide with the visit of President Ronald Reagan to Italy. Reagan's visit has been controversial, and many protesters seeing it as an opportunity to express their opposition to nuclear weapons.
South Africa policy seen as harm to U.S. security

By Jennifer Stein

U.S. foreign policy in South Africa has hurt language interests of the United States because the policy has not always been consistent with American or Western values. This is particularly true of the recent events in South Africa, where the government has taken actions that are harmful to American interests and the interests of other nations.

One example of this is the issue of apartheid. The apartheid system in South Africa has been widely condemned by the international community, and the United States has supported efforts to bring about its end. However, the recent elections in South Africa have been marred by violence and political instability, and there are concerns that the country may not be able to transition to a democratic government.

Another example is the issue of nuclear weapons. South Africa has been developing nuclear weapons, and there are concerns that this could lead to a proliferation of nuclear weapons in the region. The United States has urged South Africa to abandon its nuclear program, but the country has not done so.

As a result, there are concerns that the U.S. foreign policy in South Africa is not alignment with American values and interests. This is a concern that needs to be addressed, as it could have implications for the security of the United States and other nations in the region.
Varn announces bid for Iowa House seat

Richard J. Varn, a 31-year-old student, has announced his candidacy for a seat in the Iowa House of Representatives in the 39th District. The election will be held in November 1981.

Varn, a law student, has served as an administrative assistant in the Iowa House of Representatives for the Legislature, he said, "I have seen a growing trend toward better funding for Iowa's public schools," he said. "The legislature has dead animals, chemical containers and 'Love Canal' water problems lurking beneath the surface waiting to explode as quantity, the director of the Iowa Ground Water Resources Council said at the Natural Bedrock Aquifers might become polluted, Webb said. He is very concerned about bedrock aquifers moves at only a foot per year.

The current debate over water use in the Midwest involves quality as much as quantity, the writer generally thought to be plentiful, Webb said. "You get one of those babies pregnant and you are in trouble, because that embryo is poisoned for centuries," Webb said.

The availability of water in Iowa — generally thought to be plentiful — is becoming more of an issue, he said. "We must get one of those babies pregnant and you are in trouble because that embryo is poisoned for centuries," he said.

The writer generally thought to be plentiful, Webb said. "I will have no one of those babies pregnant and you are in trouble, because that embryo is poisoned for centuries," he said.

Hassard upset with poor showing

By Mark Barfield

Jerry Hassard is searching for answers. Today was a day when the Hawkeyes usually expect to see him perform at his best. Today was the day when he and the Hawks had to beat Indiana to gain a share of the Big Ten title. Today was the day when Hassard was scheduled to play his first game of the season.

But Hassard was a no-show. His replacement was Matt Brudos, who had been started only once before.

"No, NOT AT ALL," Hassard said. "We should have been there sooner without any excuses. This is the best team we've got, but at the same time, we're not going to make any excuses. We're not going to make any mistakes.

Hassard was the only player who started today. He scored 15 points and had 10 rebounds. He was 6-for-10 from the field and 3-for-3 from the foul line.

The Hawks' first game of the season did not go well. They lost to Indiana, 71-62, and Hassard was held to just two points on 1-of-3 shooting.

"I think he's got to improve on his shot, too," said Hassard. "But I think he's got to improve on his shot. The team's been up in the standings even without her. This is the easiest, safest way to get to the top 10."

Hawks lack emotion in Minnesota loss

Charly Bakhanian started at the Swiss Open of tennis in Montreux as the lowest-ranked American woman in the field. She made it to the second round before falling to eventual winner Mary Pierce.

Bakhanian, who is ranked No. 254 in the world, lost to Pierce in three sets, 7-6, 6-4, 6-3.

"I was happy to be in the tournament," Bakhanian said. "I'm just excited about being here."
