Dental records identify body as UI student

By Kevin Cook

A partially decomposed body that had apparently been submerged in a well for several years has been identified as a former University of Iowa student.

Police, after several months' investigation, said Wednesday that the remains are those of Raymond Clarence Hartfield, 24, of Clinton, Iowa, an associate professor at the UI College of Dentistry who died in a 1982 car crash.

The remains were found last week in a well located in Johnson County, where Hartfield lived. Authorities said the body had been submerged for several years, and that the remains were identified through dental records.

Hartfield was last seen in the area in 1982, and his disappearance was never formally reported to police. The authorities did receive a report from a neighbor that he had been seen in the area, but they were unable to make a formal report.

The authorities said the body was found by a caretaker who was cleaning the well. The caretaker said he had noticed a disturbance in the water, and that he had reported it to authorities.

Police said they believe Hartfield's body had been in the water for several years, and that the remains were identified through dental records. The authorities said they believe Hartfield's body had been in the water for several years, and that the remains were identified through dental records.

Cheaters beware

Two students at a college in Colorado recently turned in identical papers. They hadn’t worked together or copied. They’d bought their papers from Pacific Research of Seattle, Wash. A research firm would not admit or deny it was guilty of cheating widely at the UI and other campuses. Students may choose from a catalog listing thousands of pre-written research papers, offered at $8 a page. They can also buy “custom researched” papers for $10 a page.

The 1980s are here, Pacific Research, the nation’s leader in research paper production, and its president, Mr. Michael Humes, were quoted by a Seattle Times reporter as saying that the firm is on its way to becoming the world’s leading supplier of research papers. Mr. Humes said that the company is now producing 5,000 papers a month, up from 1,000 last year. He added that the company is planning to triple its output in the next year.

Soil conservation

Purdy’s writing of soil conservation programs prompted by both Iowa senators, Roger Reamon and Charles Grady, is one of the most urgent of the state’s immediate need for the health and conservation of the state’s soil.

In 1970, Senator Ted Kennedy and Senator Grady introduced a bill to establish a program of soil conservation in the United States. The bill passed both houses of Congress in December and was signed into law by President Jimmy Carter.

The program was designed to help farmers in the United States adopt soil conservation practices that would reduce erosion, prevent soil degradation, and improve soil quality. The program provided federal assistance to farmers who implemented soil conservation practices, such as terraces, contour plowing, and buffer strips.

The program was successful in promoting soil conservation practices across the country. By 1980, almost 50% of the farmland in the United States was enrolled in the program. However, the program faced funding issues in the late 1970s, and its funding was cut significantly in 1981.

Despite the funding cuts, the program continued to be successful in promoting soil conservation practices. By 1985, almost 60% of the farmland in the United States was enrolled in the program. The program was ended in 1986, but its legacy continues to be felt in the United States today.

Arms to Chile

The Senate last Thursday overwhelmingly approved a measure allowing the re-export of military equipment to Chile. This reversal of the Carter administration’s ban on arms sales to the South American nation is the latest in a series of actions by the United States and its allies to increase military aid to the region.

The measure, which was introduced by Senator Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and passed by a vote of 99 to 0, would allow the United States to sell weapons to Chile, including tanks, aircraft, and other military equipment. The measure takes into account the importance of the region to the United States, as well as the need for military assistance to Chile, which is facing a serious threat from the Marxist government of General Augusto Pinochet.

The measure was opposed by the Carter administration, which had previously blocked all arms sales to Chile. However, the Senate overrode the veto, citing the importance of the region to the United States and the need for military assistance to Chile.

The measure is expected to be signed into law by President Ronald Reagan, who has expressed support for the sale of weapons to Chile. The sale of weapons to Chile is expected to have a significant impact on the region, as it will increase the military capabilities of Chile and help to deter further aggression by the Marxist government.

The measure is also expected to have a significant impact on the United States, as it will increase the military capabilities of Chile and help to deter further aggression by the Marxist government. The sale of weapons to Chile is expected to have a significant impact on the region, as it will increase the military capabilities of Chile and help to deter further aggression by the Marxist government.

If you see a student who seeking survey, wish

they didn't have to work.

A student who wished his college life was survey on behalf of the

Bread for the Accuracy

of the campus.

The survey consisted of a number of questions to the students, including:

- What are you

- Are you

- What do you wish

this term?

- What do you wish

your college life?

The survey results were analyzed by the

Bread for the Accuracy

of the Campus.

The survey results

indicated that the majority of students that the classes were

The survey was completed by 1,000 students.

The results showed that

80% of students wished

LETTERMAN QUALITY PACKS HOUSES

By Michael T. Huddleston

While some young people may find the name of the house that makes the packs light, others may be too young to know how to take the packs home, and still others may be too young to get the packs at all. But what if you don't know how to take the packs home? What if you never get the packs at all? Some of the packs may be easier to get if you know how to take them home. For example, a group of green and brown bags may be easier to get than a group of green and brown socks. If you know how to take the packs home, you may be able to get them more easily than if you don't know how to take them home.

Music

At 6 p.m. Friday at Union Park Pavilion, the Three Decades that made up the 1970s will be featured by the 1980s. Gary Pike, who sang with the Three Decades, will be joined by three vocalists from his group to perform songs from the Three Decades. Pike, who was heavily into operatic training at the University of Southern California, sang with the Three Decades for 10 years, often with the Three Decades group. Although Pike's popularity has waned since they're hidden under the Three Decades' stage, he was very清·于 the group's music. And Butala, urged on by his producing partner, Jim Head, had no idea how important the Three Decades were, but he's accepted it very well.
