Showdown AWACS vote gets 10 more supporters

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan Tuesday rounded up 10 more votes for his $8.5 billion Saudi Arabian arms package and seemed on the threshold of a major legislative victory in today's showdown vote in the

The chief Democratic opponent of the largest foreign arms sale in U.S. history conceded late Tuesday that Reagan had gained significant ground in his uphill battle to gain the 50 votes he needs to win what he has made a major test of his foreign policy and legislative prowess.

"I think the odds have shifted in favor of the White House on the sale, although the final tally is not in," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the assistant Democratic leader.

As he left the White House for Richmond, Va., to make a political appearance, Reagan was asked for a prediction. "Well you know how it is ... these things can go one way or another. I think it looks good. We've been busy, it looks good," he said.

LATER, at a rally for Virginia Republican gubernatorial candidate Marshall Coleman, Reagan warned that rejection of the arms package, which includes five AWACS radar planes, could hurt the chances for Middle East peace.

"We need the good will of the Saudis," Reagan, suffering from a cold, told a crowd of 600 in an extremely hoarse voice. "They provide us with a significant amount of our oil, yes. But more than that, they represent a moderate force in the Middle East." "Rejection tomorrow," Reagan said, "I'm afraid would be a step billion arms package for Saudi Arabia scheduled for 4 p.m. (Iowa time) today, a United Press International tally showed 52 senators opposed to or leaning against the sale, 47 favoring it and only one member still uncommitted.

SEN. John Melcher, D-Mont., made a late-afternoon declaration in favor of selling the sophisticated radar planes to the Saudis.

Sources close to the leading Senate opponents of the sale indicated Tuesday that two more Republicans - now inclined to vote against the sale - may ultimately switch their positions and support Reagan.

They were identified as Sens. Slade Gorton of Washington and Mark Andrews of North Dakota. They are among the 18 Republicans who originally sponsored the resolution of disapproval.

That could make the final Senate tally 50-50 and give Reagan the victory he has been fighting for with "quiet persuasion." The disapproval effort will die unless it wins a majority vote.

MELCHER HAD been counted as undecided by UPI. In another shift, a representative for Sen. Russell Long said the Louisiana Democrat "remains uncommitted ... and is not leaning to either side." Long had been counted as leaning for the sale.

In a day that saw 10 senators formally stake out positions on the cotroversial weapons package, Reagan seemed to be gaining the upper hand in a contest that began with 60 members considered to be against the sale.

Earlier. White House communications director David Gergen spoke with reporters after Reagan met with five senators during the morning. Gergen described the meetings as "quiet per-See AWACS, page 6

Jepsen, Grassley to vote for AWACS

WASHINGTON (UPI) -Senators Roger Jepsen and Charles Grassley, who each doubted the merits of the sale of AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia, declared Tuesday they will vote for it as a necessary part of U.S.

In a joint news conference, the Iowa Republicans said the sale of the sophisticated radar planes was essential for U.S. security and President Reagan's leadership in foreign policy.

Grassley, who was leaning against the sale, met with Reagan shortly before the news conference. Jepsen is a cosponsor of the resolution to disapprove the sale.

Both senators mentioned the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in explaining their decisions.

Controllers union denied delay; court revokes bargaining power

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A federal appeals court Tuesday refused to delay a government decision to decertify the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization while the union appealed the matter.

The action means that in the eyes of the law, PATCO no longer has the authority to bargain on behalf of federal air traffic controllers.

In handing down its two-page decision, a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington also hastened the litigation schedule in the case by giving the union 10 days to file papers appealing last week's decision by the Federal Labor Relations Authority.

The authority ruled 2-1 PATCO could no longer be the exclusive representative for Federal Aviation Ad-

IN ITS ORDER, which dissolved the temporary stay the panel had issued last Thursday, the appeals court said PATCO had not made a proper showing of why its decertification should be postponed until judicial review.

But the panel also criticized the government's presentation of reasons for going ahead with decertification.

Price index to be changed

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The government announced Tuesday that its inflation yardstick - the Consumer Price Index - will measure rents instead of house prices and mortgage interest costs beginning in 1983.

The change could eventually make billions of dollars of difference in federal revenues, either up or down, as new "indexed" income tax rates begin in 1985.

Gorsuch resignation sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., chairman of a subcommittee that oversees the Environmental Protection Agency, said Tuesday that EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch should resign because of malfeasance in office.

"Her policies of massive program reductions, severe personnel cuts and gutting of regulations demonstrate that she has no intention whatsoever of carrying out her obligations under the law," Florio said.

ERA media campaign starts

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Equal Rights Amendment ratification campaign got a push Tuesday as groups representing over 5 million ERA supporters announced a $1 million media campaign in unratified states.

ERAmerica, the umbrella group coordinating the effort, said the radio campaign will provide an element missing until now - an educational campaign at the grassroots level.

Iranian nominated for post

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) - Iran's president, rebuffed by parliament in his attempt to name an American-educated doctor as prime minister, nominated a candidate Tuesday with the purest Islamic revolutionary credentials.

President Sayed Ali Khamenei nominated Foreign Minister Mir Hossein Mousavi, who helped found the ruling party, to the post.

China vetoes Waldheim

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) - China used its veto in the Security Council Tuesday to block the renomination of incumbent Kurt Waldheim for United Nations secretary-general, diplomatic sources said.

Despite the veto, Waldheim's bid for an unprecedented third five-year term was picking up increasing support at the expense of his challenger, Foreign Minister Salim Ahmed Salim of Tanzania.

Solidarity gears for strike

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) - Solidarity called on its workers Tuesday to walk off the job in a nationwide general strike Wednesday and plastered the capital with giant posters in the biggest confrontation with the Communist government in eight months.

Poland's army accused the union of playing with "the fate of the homeland."

Bomb scares sweep London

LONDON (UPI) - Scotland Yard warned Londoners Tuesday that the IRA, responsible for three bomb blasts in 16 days, was likely to strike again. Bomb scares played havoc with traffic and shopping, forcing the evacuation of stores and offices.

Using state attorneys could save Johnson County funds

By Molly Miller Staff Writer

Johnson County could save about $1,750 or more every time an indigent convict appeals a conviction by using state-provided defenders as appeals

The State Appellate Defender's Office would charge a maximum of $750 for any type of criminal appeal by an indigent person. According to defender's office figures, a private attorney handling an appeal for an indigent client is paid about $2,500. An appeal in a murder case can cost anywhere from $5,000 to $7,000

Members of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors said they were not aware of the defender's of-fice until Chief Appellate Defender Frank Hoyt spoke to them Tuesday.

Hoyt said Tuesday night that Johnson County has about a dozen appeals pending.

JOHNSON COUNTY has not used the office since it was established, the office's report states. It is up to the judge handling an indigent criminal case to recommend use of the office.

Hoyt said the UI College of Law and the number of attorneys in the area make judges in this district confident that area lawyers can handle the indigent criminal cases that come up

NEW YORK (UPI) - A $35,000-a-year income tax examiner for the Internal Revenue Service was charged Tuesday with duping at least 10 female students into submitting to spankings on the pretext of getting bit roles in movies.

Stephen Davidson, 42, of Glen Rock, N.J., an examiner at an IRS office in Manhattan, was charged with forgery and a scheme to defraud, said District Attorney Robert Morgenthau. The victims complained to the employment offices at their schools after Davidson failed to give them

Morgenthau said Davidson, posing as Steve King or Bob Ewell, posted notices offering a movie role for female students on employment office bulletin boards at New York University, Columbia University, City College and Hofstra.

The role was that of a young woman who got spanked by a professor for getting bad grades

A football briefing

Iowans should be relieved to know that their interests are being pursued vigorously on Capitol Hill. Why, just last week Iowa Senator Roger Jepsen met with the President about America's Middle East policies.

After the meeting, Jepsen stated that, "the President had not been able to keep up on what has happened so far." A number of Americans have suspected that, but to have such confirmation from a Republican senator. .

But Jepsen went on to explain that he was referring specifically to the progress of Iowa football teams. Since this was one of those rare moments when Jepsen had the President's personal attention, as well as that of the room's three other occupants - Vice-President Bush, national security adviser Richard V. Allen, and presidential assistant for legislative affairs Max Friedensdorf well, naturally he told them. In fact, he said he used up most of his allotted 15 minutes discussing football and Reagan's days as a sports announcer in Iowa.

Jepsen said that the President was "obviously pleased to hear about" the exploits of Iowa, Iowa State and Drake. One can imagine that this was a truthful assessment. The President was probably worried that Jepsen might bring up politics again. Besides, mention of Iowa allowed the President to reminisce about his happy times as a radio broadcaster at WHO radio in Des Moines.

But one must be somewhat disappointed in Jepsen. Although he represents the entire state, he evidently made no effort to update President Reagan on the pigskin progress of Coe, Wartburg or

The meeting's principal purpose was to discuss the AWACS sale. No mention was made of whether the Saudis might be able to pick up the Hawkeyes on the sophisticated AWACS radio equipment.

Election at UN

Kurt Waldheim is running for a third term as Secretary-General of the United Nations, but is being challenged by Salim Ahmed Salim, foreign minister of Tanzania.

How does one run for U.N. Secretary-General? Unfortunately, that simple question has no simple answer. The procedure calls for the Security Council to recommend a candidate to the General Assembly, which then votes its approval or disapproval. But the process by which the Security Council selects that candidate is not set forth in the U.N. charter, and is not published in any rule book.

This time, the 15 members of the Security Council will apparently be given one ballot for each candidate, with which they can vote yes, no or abstain. What if both candidates receive a majority? What if neither gets a majority? Simply put, no one knows.

Further complicating matters is the veto power of the five permanent members of the Security Council over the selection. Knowledgable observers expect China to veto Waldheim and the United States to veto Salim, a situation that could cause the election to become extremely protracted.

The five year term of the next Secretary-General will see important changes in the focus of U.N. debate and policy questions, from the tensions between East and West to those between North and South. (In fact, participants at the Cancun summit agreed to continue their work through the U.N., rather than through a specially created commission.) A Secretary-General from a developing nation such as Tanzania might be much better equipped to deal with his shift. Perhaps just as important, a clearly delineated, or process for choosing Secretaries-General of the future would help ensure a truly equal voice for all members of the family of nations.

Funds for the arts

The ancient Greeks believed in the Muses, nine goddesses who were the special patrons of the creative arts. And if you think that belief must have been hard to swallow, you haven't heard the Reagan administration's present views on patronage of the arts.

When the Reagan team was still working on Budget Plan A, it proposed that all government subsidies to the arts be abandoned a plan that was itself temporarily abandoned after a hue and cry. A Presidential Task Force on the Arts and Humanities was then formed to study government's relationship to art.

Since this elite panel was organized by those who wanted to cut the budget, some cynics suggested that the panel's purpose was to find sufficient evidence of waste and abuse to justify budget cuts. Meanwhile, the Reagan people volunteered the standard suggestion used for all the other stranded organizations and individuals: "replace the money with contributions from the private sector."

But the Task Force provided a pleasant surprise by pursuing its study with uncommon conscience and zeal. The Task Force's report, released two weeks ago, exposed the administration's failure to understand the contradictory complexities of its own programs.

According to the report, the peak year of federal donations provided only ten per cent of the money necessary to maintain the funded organizations and activities. The remaining 90 percent came from the private sector. But such private donations have not been totally philanthropic. The beneficial tax write-off that came with the donation has been a frequent ulterior incentive.

But the Task Force pointed out that the new tax laws have lowered the tax rates for those with the most to give while simultaneously decreasing the tax advantages of such donations. In effect, the administration was telling those in the arts and humanities to solicit more private donations while making it unlikely they will receive as much as in the past.

Well, one can always invoke the Muses. . .

Cancun: the rich distain the poor

WASHINGTON - The summit conference on world poverty and wealth that began Thursday in Cancun, Mexico, is a splendid idea. Too bad it had to take place at a time when the United States is headed by people who are so steeped in "free enterprise" cliches that they have only disdain for the poor, and who lack any meaningful understanding of America's dependence on people and nations that are not rich.

Mexico's outgoing president, Jose Lopez Portillo, and the Canadian sponsors are surely dismayed that President Reagan, in speeches just prior to the Cancun gathering, gave the back of his hand to Third World nations, exhorting them to turn to "free enterprise" if they want to live the way Americans do.

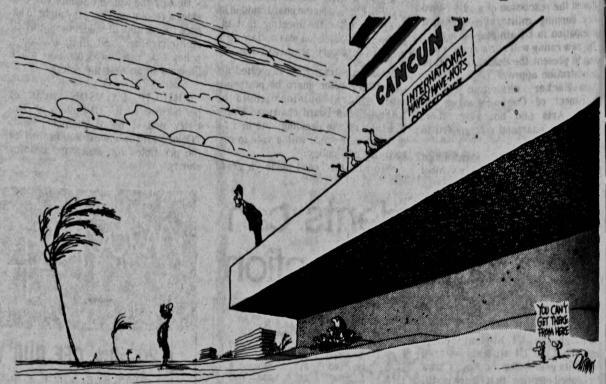

Reagan might just as well have posted the advertisements saying,"WE'RE COMING TO MEX-ICO, PO' FOLKS, BUT WE AIN'T GIVING NOBODY NOTHING!

That shouldn't surprise Lopez Portillo. He must reason that if the Reagan administration gives only a kick in the belly to an American woman who heads a family and works hard at poverty pay, it isn't going to lavish compassion and assistance on the poor of other lands.

Reagan has not watched flies nibble at the eyeballs of children dying of hunger in parts of Africa, so it is simple for him to tell these babies and their governments in Mali, Niger, Upper Volta, to pull themselves up by their free-enterprise bootstraps.

WHEN REAGAN luxuriates in conspicuous consumption with the lords of capitalism, he is not about to admit that many of the leaders of Third World countries are running away from "free enterprise" because they have seen their countries rooked repeatedly by Yankee and European

Prices fall, often disastrously, for Jamaican bauxite, Malaysian tin, Liberian rubber, Ghanain coca, Columbian coffee, Nicaraguan bananas, but they almost never go down for cars, tractors, fertilizers and other manufactured goods from the United

WHAT IS BOOTSTRAPS, SENOR?

States. Only the oil producing Third World nations have escaped the exploitation of the "free enterprisers." And their OPEC is maligned regularly in rich industrial countries

Can you imagine how galling it is for the leaders of long-abused countries with sparse resources to have to listen to Reagan harangue them about following the example of the American settlers who "faced a wilderness where poverty was their daily lot and danger and starvation their close compa-

A Malian official who battles drought after drought and watches the desert swallow up more and more arable land

each year must choke on this, knowing as he does that while those U.S. settlers may have found some "wild Indians," they also found wild turkeys and some of the best agricultural land on earth — that land bathed in reliable rainfalls, warm suns and cool nights.

THOSE MEETING Reagan at Cancun surely know that even with our cornucopia of resources and our ability to exploit the raw materials of other lands, we Americans need not brag about our "system." For it has produced a great depression, many recessions (including a current one) and it has left almost 30 million Americans living in poverty, some 8 million job-seekers unable to find work, with blacks and other minorities lashed to a status of chronic unemployment and degradation.

I hope the leaders of the 21 nations gathered at Cancun understand that though elected in a landslide, Reagan does not speak for the America that has given some $80 billion in foreign aid since World War II; he thinks welfare money for 9 million needy American children is a "give-away." so why shouldn't he think of foreign aid as a handout? Let those leaving Cancun believe that millions of Americans still understand that we feed and clothe needy American children, and we feed and build schools for needy children in Latin America and Africa, because both efforts serve our national interest. Many of us Americans accept the truth that $2.9 billion, or 70 percent of the foreign aid dispensed in 1980, ended up being spent in the United States, creating or sustaining 87,000 to 116,000

Cancun may not move Reagan or his advisers, but it is a needed reminder to other Americans of some realities of international life.

Continuing debate on capitalism

To the editor:

Michael Streb, (DI, Oct. 12) in his reply to Jeff Cox's article (DI, Oct. 1). quotes Churchill to the effect that profit is reinvested to sustain economic productivity. Yet growing numbers of people, including Democrats, are coming to realize the waste of capital, which augments private wealth but doesn't strengthen the economy.

This includes the exporting of jobs held by American workers, the wave of mergers and acquisitions, not producing a single job but draining money from the modernization of existing plants, and the speculation in commodities and valuables.

It is interesting how apologists for our present economic system bring up the spectre of total nationalization when capitalism is questioned, as if this were the only alternative, a poor

But they do not see another alternative, namely an economic democracy, with workers and consumers participating in economic decision-making through such means as extensive membership on corporate boards, national and local investment banks which guide capital to where it is truly needed - in housing, mass transit and job creation - worker ownership and control and real union control over pension funds. There would be national economic planning, but its guiding factor would be the participation of the people. We have major economic planning now, but it is done privately, for private gain, with very public consequences.

Such reforms would enable democratic control over capital in order to meet human needs, the essence of democratic socialism. A democratic alternative to capitalism such as this would enhance the land of opportunity, for societal control over the economy is just as important for real democracy as public access to the political structure. Erdahl's record

To the editor:

Regarding the political advertisement by Robert Vevera for Council Committee published in The Daily Iowan last week, not only does it strike the reader as obvious propaganda (lumping Clemens Erdahl's absence, lateness and early departure from Iowa City Council meetings into one percentage figure), but upon further investigation, even more misleading techniques come to

In four years Erdahl never missed a formal meeting where a vote would have made the difference in the outcome of the issues voted on.

The following facts were obtained from the office of the city clerk: 1) The figure Vevera compiled covers only the past two years of Erdahl's service, not the four years Erdahl has served. 2) During Erdahl's and Vevera's service there were 156 formal council meetings. Erdahl missed 14 of those meetings, or 9 percent, and Vevera missed 10, or 6.4 percent.

3) During the two years Vevera didn't count in compiling his statistics, there were 96 formal meetings, of which Erdahl missed eight and Vevera

Further, Erdahl asked two years ago to have Monday afternoon council meetings rescheduled because he had just passed his bar exams, and Larry Lynch, another attorney, had just come onto the council. Monday afternoon at the court house is one of the busiest times because there are trials and hearings which cannot be postponed without jeopardizing an attorney's client. Vevera was the councilor who most adamantly opposed changing the meeting time, knowing Erdahl would either have to come late, leave early or be unable to attend.

often the first two years of Erdahl's service (Vevera used the second two years for his statistics) It should also be noted that Erdahl

In addition, the council met more left certain executive sessions early because of a potential conflict of interest which prevented him from being present during AFSCME bargaining meetings. Vevera used Erdahl's early departure from those meetings in calculating his opposed absence record.

I'd like to conclude my letter by addressing the simplistic suggestion made by the Vevera advertisement: quantity is directly related to quality. one person does something more than another, it doesn't necessarily follow that he or she does it better. personally would rather see Erdahl present, on time and remaining until the end of council meetings 52 percent of the time, even though that hasn't been the case, than Vevera 152 percent

Greeks debate

To the editor: The complaint lodged by Michael Barnes (DI, Oct. 14) concerning the lack of publicity for greek deeds makes

Let's get one thing straight, friend: you get what you deserve. Have you ever stopped to think that people "call them as they see them?" Try acting a little better in public; you'll be surprised at the results you could get. A perfect example of this is the dance last spring. I was so ashamed to be in the same room with some of your 'brothers and sisters.'

Speaking of which, how about a little correction here? I was in that dance too. I danced my 30 hours, and nothing made me feel prouder than to know I made it all the way through and helped benefit people who couldn't be there to dance. I realize the greeks raised a big share of the money; the rest of us will have to work that much harder next CHICKEN K

As for publicity, do you read The Daily Iowan thoroughly, hotshot? Hardly a day goes by that I don't see something in there about the greek way of life. Also, one can't walk 10 feet around this campus without seeing something associated with the greeks. be it hats, shirts, signs, or whatever. Isn't this publicity, Barnes?

If college students choose the greek way of life, so be it. It may not make any sense to others, but everyone is different. But don't come crying on my shoulder, buddy. The pampering you greeks get makes us non-greeks look like refugees from a slum.

Ku Klux Klan

I am appalled by The Daily Iowan's editorial "KKK Rides Again," by Hoyt Olsen (DI, Oct. 22). He attempts to pin the responsibility for the KKK's increased membership on President Reagan and conservatism.

Such a correlation is not only grossly unfair, it is idiotic. The Ku Klux Klan's membership was on the rise long before Reagan took office and can be attributed instead to rising social tensions which were also established before 1980. I am a conservative and challenge Olsen to find a more anti-KKK individual than myself.

The KKK must be neutralized by educating the people about its subversive and prejudiced tactics. The Ku Klux Klan is not an outcropping of conservatism, but just plain ignorance. James D. Vetter ERDAHL SAID he will conduct a low-cost campaign based on pamphlets, brochures and personal contact, and Vevera said he will use radio and newspaper advertising. At a forum last week, Vevera said he has spent about $700 on his campaign; Erdahl said he has spent $50-100.

Erdahl has repeatedly criticized Vevera's voting record, saying he has neglected human service funding, spent too much money on capital improvements, and supported dangerous cutbacks in city staff. "My opponent has neglected or voted against the safety of Iowa City residents," he told a National Organization for Women forum that Vevera did not attend.

Vevera called the attacks "distorted," saying, "It was inferred that I don't care about women and children." He said he cares about human services but does not think the city can afford many of the programs Erdahl supports, such as the city Spouse Abuse Shelter and Crisis Center.

Vevera recently responded to Erdahl's attacks with an attack on Erdahl's attendance record. "There are all kinds of records," Vevera said.

CITY NEWS media last week received an unsigned list, with information later confirmed by the city clerk's office, that showed Erdahl has been absent, late or left early for more council meetings than Vevera. The memo also listed Erdahl - because of tardiness or leaving early - as having missed 927 more minutes of council meetings than Vevera. Vevera later said he made the list in an effort to inform voters Erdahl called the ads "a distortion that makes it appear that I have been absent 48 percent of the time." Erdahl said he has not missed a vote on an important issue and that his attendance record was better during the two years he served as a councilor prior to his graduation from law school in 1979.

VEVERA MISSED eight and Erdahl nine of the 96 formal council meetings in 1977-79, according to information

Erdahl said his law practice demands more of his time than did law school. Erdahl said Vevera blocked a request by Erdahl and Councilor Larry Lynch, also a lawyer, to change the council's Monday meeting time to ease the conflict with court scheduling. He also said Vevera, a realtor, can more easily schedule his time around council

But Vevera later responded: "That's asinine. That's asinine," adding that a councilor should make necessary time

VEVERA'S LIST, checked by the deputy city clerk, shows Erdahl has been absent from about 16 percent and Vevera about 6 percent of the 147 council meetings in 1980-81. The list also shows Erdahl being late or leaving early at about 33 percent of the meetings, missing 1,185 minutes of council action. During the same time Vevera was late or left early from 16 percent of the meetings, missing 258

Both candidates said they want to put the attendance dispute behind them. "I think it was just an effort on Bob's part to put me on the defensive" and cloud the real issues, Erdahl said.

Vevera said he found the matter "distasteful" and hopes he will not vertisements that ask "Where have have to campaign on a similar level

Earlier this month, Grassley said he might vote against the AWACS sale because of White House lobbying for it. He denounced one overture that allegedly would have speeded up action on the appointment of a U.S. attorney in northern Iowa if Grassley voted for the sale to Saudi Arabia.

Grassley also rejected one invitation to meet with the president, allegedly because of the tie-in with the nomina tion of attorney Evan Hultman.

Both houses must reject the deal to prevent it from going through.

For instance, during the first days following the seizure of the American embassy in Tehran there were some 300 Western reporters there. Not one spoke the language. What was missed - what was not explained because of this basic negligence?

Of course, it is difficult to remember now with news of political executions coming from Iran, but the uprising that led to the shah's downfall was due, in part, to his brutal repression of Iranians. His methods included torture. His military supplier was the U.S. This would account for the seizure

American feeling when Carter admitted the shah into this country for medical treatment. To the Iranians, however, it may have seemed a ruse. Remember, as Said does, that General Huyser was tasked with encouraging the Iranian army to stage a counter-revolt in 1979.

SAID TAKES pains to sketch the vested interests that turn presumably disinterested scholarship on the Middle East into political tools. Scholarship precedes and paves the way for policy, governmental and commercial. Said quotes Leonard Binder, editor of a study of Middle Eastern humanities and social sciences done from 1973 to 1976 at the instigation of the Middle East Studies Association and the Ford Foundation: "The basic motive in the development of area studies in the U.S. has

Finally, Said remarks that "all knowledge that is about human society and not about the natural world...rests upon...interpretations (that) might be called situational." Each situation is affiliated with another: reporters and their cultural biases, scholars and their governmentally funded institutions. These are the filters put over the lenses that focus our views on a portion of the world with which we have had little historical experience. Thanks to Edward Said, another picture is being

And now for the boob tube fans, those long-awaited trivia answers

By Jeffrey Miller

Just as every beehive must have its queen, so must every contest have its winner. And out of the multitudes who entered the First Daily Iowan TV Trivia Contest, Scott Anderson of South Quadrangle had the highest score (89 out of a possible 110). So congratulations to Scott, who will soon be receiving two six-packs of beer and The Complete Directory to Prime Time Network TV Shows. And for the other five who entered, as well as for those who maintain a passing interest in these matters. here are the answers.

Easy (three points apiece)

1. Jim Rockford's cool casual competitor, played by Tom Selleck, was Lance White. 2. When the Ricardos and the Mertzes went to Hollywood on "I Love Lucy," Lucy and Ethel ran into William Holden at the Brown Derby - and dumped a plate of spaghetti on him in the process.

3. "Jeopardy" was hosted by Art Fleming: "House Party" by Art Linkletter: "The Who, What or Where Game" by Art

4. Beaver's teacher and pre-pubescent love object was Miss Landers, played by

5. Producer Irwin Allen's TV shows, all disasters in their own right, have included: "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea." "Lost In Space," "The Time Tunnel," "Land of the Giants." "Swiss Family Robinson" and the current "Code Red."

Not So Easy (five points apiece)
1. Jimmie Joe Jeeter's electrifying demise on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" came when the TV he was watching while taking a bath fell into the tub. (He died, as they said, for the six

2. Video helped the radio stars with these

Television

Theme from The Greatest American Hero" - Joey Scarbury "Welcome Back (Kotter)" - John

Sebastian "Secret Agent" - Johnny Rivers "Theme from The Rockford Files" -

"(Ballad of) Davy Crockett" - Bill

3. Occupations considered by Jethro Bodine on "The Beverly Hillbillies" included: brain surgeon, Army general, Navy frogman, astronaut, vice president of the Commerce Bank of Beverly Hills, movie star, movie director, movie producer, international playboy, "double-nought" spy (sorry, "intelligence agent" is not acceptable), hippie cult leader - in other words, a typical liberal arts student.

4. Who said soap operas were trash? Not these people: Daniel Travanti (Spence Andrews,

'General Hospital'')

Kate Jackson (Daphne Harridge, "Dark Shadows")

Christopher Reeve (Ben Harper, "Love of Life")

Jill Clayburgh (Grace Boulton, "Search for Tomorrow" James Earl Jones (Dr. Jerry Turner, "As the World Turns") 5. Phil Donahue's first guest was atheist spokeswoman Madalyn Murray O'Hair. She doesn't believe in Phil, either.

Hard (10 points apiece) 1. Besides being lousy dates, Johnny Carson, Mike Wallace and Joe Garagiola have all been game show hosts: Carson on "Who Do You Trust": Wallace on "The Big Surprise," "Who Pays" and "Who's the Boss";

2. Mick and the Stones really showed Ed Sullivan who was boss when they went ahead and performed their big hit "Let's Spend Some Time Together." Moral: You don't get to be The World's Greatest Rock 'n' Roll Band without cutting a few corners now and then

3. WJM-TV's Chuckles the Clown lived and died - by his credo: "A little song, a little dance, a little seltzer down your

4. Miskel Spilman, an 80-year-old grandmother, was the winner of the 1977 You Can Host 'Saturday Night Live' Contest." That was also the show in which Elvis Costello reduced network executives and producer Lorne Michaels to obscenities and tears by switching, on the air, the songs he was scheduled to do.

5. Agent Cam Allison, played by current "One Life to Live" star Anthony George, was the only "Untouchable" ever to get touched. He was gunned down by Frank Nitti's mob, dying in the arms of Elliot Ness - an evocation of the "Pieta" that Freudians and structuralists are still trying

Bonus (20 points)

Robert Lansing holds the honor of being the only guest star ever listed in the opening credits of "Star Trek." Lansing played intergalactic troubleshooter Gary Seven in the "Assignment: Earth" episode, which was also the pilot for another show developed by producer Gene Roddenberry.

Lansing's connection with "General Hospital"? He was the first husband of Emily McLaughlin, who plays Nurse Jessie Brewer. By an amazing coincidence, McLaughlin's second husband was Jeffrey Hunter, who played the first captain (Christopher Pike) of the Enterprise. And you thought you never learned anything from the DI.

Sills breaks vow, sings at benefit

NEW YORK (UPI) - Beverly Sills, who retired as a singer two seasons ago vowing never to perform in public again, Monday took to the New York City Opera stage and surprised a benefit audience by singing "Tomorrow.

Sills' rendition of the popular song from the Broadway show Annie, ended a three-hour fund raiser for the opera company, which she now directs after 15 years as its starring soprano. The $250-a-ticket show was billed as "Broadway Salutes the New York City Opera.'

The audience burst into applause as Sills stepped in front of the final curtain and began to sing "The sun'll come up tomorrow..." Then the curtain rose and the entire benefit cast joined in the chorus.

The program was divided into two acts. The first included opera solos, duets, quartets and sextets featuring such City Opera stars as Diana Soviero.

The second act featured Mickey Rooney in his transvestite role of Francine from the current Broadway musical Sugar Babies, Ann Miller with a song and tap dance from the same show and Kaye Ballard, Carol Lawrence and Eve Arden in nostalgic

Also appearing in the Broadway segment were Andrea McArdle, the original Annie, singing "New York, New York," dancer Ann Reinking, and Lee

The show stopper was the appearance of Ruby Keeler, partially paralyzed by a stroke but still game in a dance routine of "I Want to Be Happy" from her last Broadway show, a revival of No No Nanette. "So many opera stars have crossed the line to light up the Broadway stage but Broadway has never saluted the opera before and given us a helping hand," said Sills after the final curtain.

"I think the evening was appropriate and wonder-

Pulitzer winner Durant left mark on civilization LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Funeral services for historian Ariel Durant, who shared a Pulitzer Prize with her husband, Will, for their 11-volume opus The Story of Civilization — a cornerstone of thousands of American home libraries — have been tentatively scheduled for Thursday.

Durant, 83, died Sunday night in the couple's Hollywood Hills home from the effects of a stroke suffered three years ago. Her husband of nearly 68 years has not been told of his wife's death because of his poor health. "We are trying to keep the news from him." a

Durant, 95, was in serious but stable condition Tuesday in the cardiovascular Intensive Care Unit at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center since surgery three

THE COUPLE, who met in New York when Durant kept his 13-year-old future wife after school for joking about his French-Canadian accent, is credited with popularizing the study of world history and broadening the horizons of untold thousands of Durant's death came more than six years after the couple finished the Civilization series with "The Age of Napoleon." The 10th volume, "Rosseau and Revolution," received the Pulitzer Prize for literature in 1968.

For the series, Durant pored over 5,000 books. jotting down facts and shaping judgments for Will, who told the story in two million words. The first six volumes of the Civilization series, offered as a set, has been a bonus offering of the Book of the Month since 1958 and thousands of volumes have been sold, a company representative said.

DURANT WAS BORN in Russia of Jewish parents May 10, 1898, and was brought to the United States in 1900. Her maiden name had been Ida Kaufman, but Will did not think the name Ida fitted her, so he renamed her Ariel

"I always pictured her about to fly off," Will once said, remembering her gliding along the sidewalks of New York on her rollerskates.

Before Durant's health failed, she and her husband produced one more book, A Dual Autobiography. The account of their lifelong love affair and literary work was published in 1977.

Ariel collaborated with her husband on eight books. He wrote an additional 17 books on his own, but with a great deal of research help from his wife on many of them.

In 1976, Durant said she and her husband had accomplished what they had set out to do - write the story of civilization. And, she said, they were fortunate to have time to enjoy themselves before they

But Will Durant believed in immortality. In a line in The Reformation, published in 1957, he wrote, 'The individual succumbs, but he does not die if he has left something to mankind."

Senate panel reviews CIA role

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate Intelligence Committee Tuesday objected to a Reagan administration plan to let the CIA infiltrate domestic groups, but it approved the rest of a proposed expansion of CIA spying against Americans.

Both the Senate and House Intelligence Committees have been studying the draft of an executive order - which Reagan could put into effect at any time - revising a 1978 order issued by President Carter that sharply limited the spy agency's role.

The committee Tuesday also ended its probe of CIA director William Casey, who was being investigated for past business practices. Its staff was ordered to begin writing a report expected to be made public in late

THE CARTER domestic spying restrictions followed revelations in the early and mid 1970s of illegal CIA spying on domestic radicals and plots against foreign leaders.

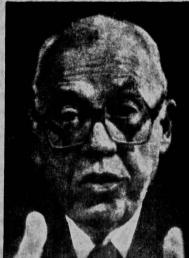

So far, negotiations between the congressional committees and the administration have been secret - and apparently rough - on the civil liberties issues. There is no assurance the Senate panel's objection to the infiltration proposal will influence the final form of Reagan's order.

At its secret meeting Tuesday, the committee also accepted the proposed extension of CIA action into areas currently under the wing of the FBI.

OTHER PARTS of the plan would allow the CIA to conduct covert activities within the United States, spy on Americans who are not the subject of a foreign intelligence investigation, reestablish ties with local and state police and assume some of the powers held exclusively by the FBI in formulating domestic intelligence

A Senate source close to the committee said he believed Reagan has not even seen the draft and that it would have been approved by now - despite congressional concerns - if the White House had not been trying to win support for the AWACS radar plane sale to Saudi Arabia.

Test of shuttle's mechanical arm won't be risked

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) - Pilots of the space shuttle Columbia will omit a key test of the ship's new mechanical arm during next week's flight rather than risk a failure that might require an emergency spacewalk, officials said Tuesday.

Mission planners decided to play it safe after a bearing failed in a test version of the 50-foot robot manipulator at the Spar Aerospace manufacturing plant in Toronto.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly, scheduled to take off Nov. 4, plan to spend part of three days of their five-day flight testing the new III. It is the key to the shuttle's future flights because it will serve as a crane to take satellites out of the ship's cargo hold and drop them off in space.

Besides moving the arm about in a variety of tests to see how it performs in weightless space, Truly had planned to hook the arm's latching mechanism to a special fixture in the cargo hold to demonstrate its ability to grasp satellites. It is that portion of the test that will be omitted.

TERRY WHITE, a spokesman at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, said the decision was made after the failure occurred in the latching mechanism in the test arm in Canada.

There was no indication anything was wrong with the arm mounted on the Columbia for the first time. But White said officials did not want the arm to grasp the fixture in the cargo bay and then not be able to release it.

The arm, developed at a cost of 100 million Canadian dollars and donated to the United States by Canada's National Research Council, is equipped with a device that uses three wires to snag a footlong metal prong attached to each payload the arm will move. The wires are then retracted and the payload is pulled against the housing at the end of the Payloads are released by slackening the wire noose and allowing the metal prong to slip out.

"THE CONCERN was that if you grapple and could not ungrapple, then you have a potential EVA (extra-vehicular activity)," White said.

If the arm could not be released from the test fixture in the shuttle's cargo bay, then the ship might not be able to return safely to Earth. One of the astronauts would have to spacewalk out to release it. If the problem could not be fixed during a spacewalk, the arm could be jettisoned.

Each shuttle crew is prepared to conduct a spacewalk in an emergency, and the astronauts have trained for such an event. But a spacewalk is not part of the regular mission plan.

White noted that all the other planned tests of the arm will be executed. The test omission will delete only about 15 minutes from more than 10 hours of planned arm testing over three days, he said.

U.S. looks for vessel that ferried Haitians

MIAMI (UPI) - Coast Guard cutters cruised the Gulf Stream Tuesday looking for a "mother ship" that may have dropped off 33 Haitian refugees who died when their rickety sailboat foundered within sight of the Florida shore.

The 50-foot Haitian freighter Amelia was searched Tuesday at Port Canaveral but petty officer Sean Smith said it was not the vessel that ferried the small sailboat to within a few miles of the coast. Smith said cutters and other Coast Guard vessels had been alerted to be on the lookout for "any suspicious-looking ship" that could be involved in ferrying illegal aliens to American shores.

The 33 Haitians, including two pregnant women, drowned Monday when their 30-foot sailboat capsized in rough waters off an exclusive area of Hillsboro Beach. Thirty-four others survived.

Broward County Medical Examiner Ronald Wright said an autopsy of the victims revealed "hard and definite proof" the Haitians were ferried to the coast by a freighter.

Doctor builds a country practice

By Karen Herzog Special to The Daily Iowan

As the last patient puts on his seedcorn cap and leaves the Lowden Family Clinic, Dr. Sam Sandberg pauses a moment to collect his thoughts, and then walks out to his yellow pick-up truck.

Just one more stop, a quick patient check at the Jackson County Public Hospital in Maquoketa, Iowa, and he'll be on his way home.

When I was in training, people could see me starting a practice, but they thought I would probably burn out after three or four years," the 29year-old country doctor said. "It's a challenge, it gets frustrating at times, but I want to show everybody that we can make this place go."

While a resident at a Davenport medical center, Sandberg went to Lowden, Iowa - a town of 700 people, 60 miles northeast of Iowa City — as a visiting physician, alternating the duty with other doctors. At the end of his three-year residency, most of Sandberg's companions left for medical centers in

BUT SANDBERG received a National Health Service Corps scholarship in medical school, obligating him to serve as a doctor for three years in a federally designated "health manpower shortage area." For his three years, Sandberg chose to man family clinics in Lowden and Lost Nation, Iowa - a town of 600 people, 15 miles northeast of Lowden. He now wants to develop a practice there.

"There hasn't been a regular doctor here for 10 or 15 years," Sandberg said in an interview at the Lowden clinic. "When I was looking this place over I realized that the people were going to other communities that had regular physicians to establish the good patient-doctor relationship that they needed.

'So many doctors in the National Health Service Corps do their time and split, but I want to make this a permanent practice," he said, adding that he plans to recruit a partner once his practice is established.

SANDBERG'S patients say they are pleased with

"One thing about him is that he has the time to sit down with you and talk your own language, which means a lot," said Dorothy Wiebel, a 69-year-old Lowden resident. "He's not always in a hurry like some doctors in the city who won't give you the time

To Sandberg, talking a patient's language is part of the medicine.

"There's a science and an art to medicine," he said. "You spend time with these people and you both learn. I find out what's wrong with them, and they find out how to cope with their condition."

Sandberg's patients exhibit a variety of ailments. and according to Sandberg, they are keyed to the seasons. "Summers are slow. We usually have a lot of accidents and physicals then. Fall is a busy season

SANDBERG said he treats 100 patients a week, and his usual day begins at 7 a.m. and is 12 hours long. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday he works in Lowden, and on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday he's at the Lost Nation clinic.

"I like working with people, and I'm practicing where I'm needed," he said. "If I do a good job here, I'll be happy."

Sandberg chooses to live in Maquoketa, which is about 12-15 miles away from his clinics.

"The nice thing about living away from town is that people don't bug you for piddley gripes. I want to start a practice, but I can't be available all of the time if I want to keep some semblance of a family life," he said.

The Jackson County Public Hospital is close to home for Sandberg. Most of the hospital's patients are from nearby farms and small towns. Arriving there in the evening, Sandberg drops in on two of his patients, and then answers a call to the emergency room where he treats a high school football player injured in a Maquoketa game. After checking an Xray of the player's fractured collarbone, Sandberg plops into a wheelchair parked outside the hospital's

Vanderbilt avenges losses

Southeastern Conference frustration last week by beating Mississippi 27-23, snapping a 33-game conference losing streak.

'We are tired of being told that we are the worst team in the league and in the nation," said Vanderbilt defensive end John Clemens, who had 18 tackles (10 solos) and four sacks against Ole Miss. "I think that to break the 33-game streak was the greatest thing to happen to us.'

However, Vanderbilt fell four losses short of the SEC record, set by Sewanee. When Sewanee established the record in 1940, its made sure they wouldn't extend it by withdrawing from the

CSU coach fired

Sarkis "Sark" Arslanian was fired last week as coach of Colorado State after eight-and-a-half seasons. He posted a 46-46-4 record at CSU, including an 0-6 mark this season. Arslanian came to Colorado State from Weber State, where he had a 50-26-2 record and two Big Sky conference titles.

"I feel fortunate in always having an excellent staff and players who have helped me attain the rank as the 14th winningest coach in America," he said. "But more important to me than all the wins is the fact that over the past 17 years, over 75 percent of my players have attained their college degrees or are still in school working toward it.

Fans, media have slipped into 'bowl fever' syndrome

If there's anyone who has a legitimate right to say "I told you so," it's Hayden Fry.

Despite the Hawks' four-game winning streak and a top 10 national ranking. Fry has been harping to the fans and media that the Iowa football program has not quite turned itself around. Instead of taking heed to Fry's warning, all of us, both fans and the media, were making plans for Pasadena, Calif.

Then came Minnesota.

AT FIRST, that 12-10 defeat to the Gophers came as a shock. But if you stop and think about it for a while, you'll come to realize that the Hawks are no better or no worse than the other teams in the Big Ten. That's what happens when a conference like the Big Ten establishes equilibrium.

Now let's not jump to gloomy conclusions. This is not a mid-season eulogy for the Hawks. Right now, lowa is still very much in the picture for a post-season bid, including the Rose Bowl. But considering the teams the Hawks have yet to play, it would be unwise to look any further than Saturday's game with

And in case you have forgotten, the Hawks still must earn one more victory to wrap up their first winning season since 1961.

What it all boils down to is this: It doesn't matter who you've beaten or who you've been beaten by in the past. What matters is what you have to do to win the next game. Where you belong in the standings at the end of the season will depend on how well you can forget the past, disregard the future and concentrate on the present.

IF LAST SATURDAY'S football game doesn't drive the point across, then the Iowa football fans and media could be getting revved up for a lost cause. For the past couple of weeks both the fans and media have said Iowa will lock up a winning season and a post-season bid simply because the Hawks knocked off Nebraska, UCLA, and Michigan. Even The Daily Iowan published a story last Friday on lowa's post-season possibilities.

Hopefully, last Saturday's game will make people open-minded about bowl games. However, should the Hawks beat Illinois and Purdue in the next two weeks, the fans and media will probably start smelling roses again. But a loss to Wisconsin or Michigan State will dash any hopes of a Big Ten championship.

This letdown has any hopes of a Big Ten championship.

This letdown has happened twice this season. After Iowa's opening-season win over Nebraska, Hawkeye fans started to talk "winning season." But a loss to Iowa State rekindled some of the past pessimism. However, "Rose Bowl Fever" caught on afterwards when Iowa reeled off four consecutive victories, including upsets over UCLA and Michigan. But once again, those high hopes were idled with the loss to the Cophers.

IT'S BAD ENOUGH to let yourself down once in a season. But Iowa supporters have now done it to themselves twice. What do you suppose it would be like if there happened to be a third letdown?

The best thing that everyone — both fans and media — can do is continue to support the Iowa football team. Only this time let's try to suppress the bowl game hype for now. It's hard enough for the Hawks to concentrate on just securing a winning season without the "eternal optimists" jamming "post-season talk" down their throats.

If and when Iowa adds a couple more wins to its record, then it would be safe to start talking about bowl games without running the risk of another letdown.

Yogi Berra said it best about a baseball pennant race: "It ain't over 'til it's over." And about the team that was behind in the NBA championship, Dick Motta said: "The opera isn't over until the fat lady sings."

As for the Iowa football program: You can't harvest a rose garden until you have sown all the seeds

As the intramural football playoffs draw closer to the all-university finals at Kinnick Stadium, the calls of the officials become a crucial part of the game. Their decisions can mean the difference between a win and a defeat.

Leroy Hackley, who supervises the offcials for the UI Recreational Services office, said it is very easy to become an official, but the number of games given to officials vary according to their abilities. "We use the 'catch as catch can' technique of hiring officials, which means we hire anybody who applies," Hackley said. "After they attend a series of rules meetings they are put on the field to officiate games and I evaluate their performance and determine how many games the official will work."

OFFICIALS ARE PAID for their work, and a starting official begins at $3.35 an hour and receives a seven percent increase for each additional year of work as an official. Hackley is also proud of the fact that the UI officials program is well known around the Big Ten. "I receive calls from other schools asking about our system," Hackley said. "I just tell them we have a good working set-up here, and we also have a low turnover of officials."

The UI officials have an association set up where they travel to Big Ten games to observe officials. "The games help us to observe the positioning and techniques used by officials," Hackley said. "We also use the trips to have a little fun and let all the officials get to know each other, and that helps when they work games together."

DAN SHEEHAN IS in his fifth year as an IM official, and he got involved to improve his officiating. "I saw the officiating before I started and I felt it wasn't very good," Sheehan said. "I knew that I could help make that better if I worked hard and improved. It also helps to know most of the players because they respect my decisions, and it makes the job that much easier."

Some become officials after taking the officiating class offered by the physical education department. "I became interested after taking the class from Warren (IM Director Warren Slebos)," said Jim Buitendorp. "This is my second year, and I really enjoy the job and the challenges it brings."

SOME INDIVIDUALS use the job for future plans. "I'm working with the hope of becoming certified to officiate high school games," Mark Anderson said. "The job is really fun, and we (the officials) get along really well."

Officiating is not reserved just for men. "I took the officiating class and I am out here for my class requirements," Michelle Schlomer said. "The abuse from the players bothers me at times, but it is a different experience and I never know what to expect."

Part of the success of the IM officials program is the rapport between the officials and Hackley. "Leroy is a good guy to work for and he tries to make everybody feel like part of the organization," Buitendorp said.

ANDERSON AGREES with Buitendorp. "Leroy just does a great job with the program, and he really does a great job keeping everybody happy and that is not usually very easy under these circumstances."

Hackley and his officials have seen most of the top rated teams play this season and feel the Pikes (PKA) are the team to beat in the playoffs. "Steve Schone is a great quarterback," Hackley said. "I feel if you put pads on the Pikes, they could give Northwestern a good game."

Rain dampens Series, Cey gets day to recover

NEW YORK (UPI) - Wet grounds and the threat of more rain forced postponement of the sixth game of the World Series between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Yankees Tuesday night, enabling Dodger third baseman Ron Cey to get a much needed extra day's rest.

The game will be played Wednesday night, beginning 7:20 p.m., with the seventh game, if necessary, switched to Thursday night at 7:20 p.m. The forecast is for clear skies the next two

Managers Tom Lasorda of the Dodgers and Bob Lemon of the Yankees said they will stick with their original pitching choices for game six. That means right-hander Burt Hooton will pitch for Los Angeles and left- light rain at the stadium this afternoon hander Tommy John will hurl for the Yankees. John beat Hooton 3-0 in the

SOME FELT Lasorda might go with rookie sensation Fernando Valenzuela as his sixth-game pitcher, but Lasorda said he never considered such a move.

The rainout was the first in a World Series since the first game of the 1979 Series between the Baltimore Orioles and Pittsburgh Pirates at Baltimore. It's the 26th rainout in the 78-year history of the World Series and the first at Yankee Stadium since Oct. 20, 1976, against Cincinnati.

There was a poor forecast with and no possibility of playing the kind of game you would all like to see," said Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in announcing the postponement at about 3 p.m. "The wet field conditions were not getting any better because of the persistent fog and high humidity. The forecast is much better for Wednesday with clearing around noon and present temperature holding.

"IF THE WEATHER service we are using continues to cooperate we should have respectable weather for the next two games. The field was wet. Had it not been for the nature of the forecast it might have been playable, but with rain at 2:30 p.m. and the forecast for more, the field couldn't have taken more water and been suitable.'

The postponement came after a thorough inspection of the field by baseball administrator Bill Murray and umpires Dick Stello of the National League and Larry Barnett of the American League, who were at Yankee Stadium much of the day inspecting weather conditions.

ALTHOUGH LASORDA didn't like the idea of waiting an extra day to try and bring the Dodgers their first championship since 1965, the day off was likely to prove beneficial to Cey, who was hit in the head by a Rich Gossage pitch in Sunday's fifth game. Cey admitted he might not have played Tuesday night after suffering dizzy spells early in the afternoon.

"I felt good in the morning," Cey said, "and I felt good about going to the ballpark to work out. But I did not have a good afternoon. I felt lightheadedness and I felt dizzy. I was told by my doctors that it was normal things that I was experiencing. If they persist, I'm not supposed to go on the field.

"I REALLY DON'T know if I'll be able to play Wednesday night. I won't know until after I workout before the game. I've got to be careful about dizziness. If I'm not 100 percent, I might blackout running around. I don't know what the ramifications of that would be but I'm not going to find out.

The Yankees, too, felt the day off would give their third baseman, Graig Nettles, an extra day for his sprained left thumb to heal. Nettles, who missed the three games in Los Angeles because of the injury, had planned on starting Tuesday night.

Yankees Manager Bob Lemon also said he would return center fielder Jerry Mumphrey to the lineup after a two-game benching. Mumphrey, the team's leading hitter during the regular season, was batting only .200 in Neither pitcher was expected to be affected by the extra day's rest.

Guard Douglas selects Illinois for cage future

QUINCY, Ill. (UPI) - Bruce Douglas, considered by some to be the best guard in the country, said Tuesday he has decided to attend the University of Illinois and play for the Fighting Illini.

Douglas, a 6-foot-3 senior, led the Blue Devils to the state Class AA championship last March and a perfect 33-0 season.

His announcement comes one week after Efrem Winters, a 6-foot-10 center from Chicago's Martin Luther King High School, said he was planning to at-

Cyclones looking to avenge defeat to Hawks tonight

When the Iowa volleyball players roll into Ames tonight, awaiting them will be a 22-year-old head coach and an eager, young Iowa State team, aiming for its first win over the Hawkeyes this year.

The Hawks, 11-13-1, defeated the Cyclones in Iowa City earlier this season in three straight games, 15-7,

The Cyclones, currently 14-14-1 on the season, are in their first season under Head Coach Mary Fischl, who last year at this time was a senior All-Regional selection on the Purdue volleyball team.

IOWA SENIOR Juli Kartel, who hopes to coach volleyball at the collegiate level, remembers playing against Fischl. "We saw her at the Big Tens last year and she was good, very good," Kartel said. "I was watching her at the tournament in Chicago (Windy City Invitational) during time outs and she seemed in control. But I tried to picture myself in that role (as a head coach straight out of college), and I couldn't imagine it. I don't think I could do it. I wouldn't have enough knowledge or experience. I think I would hinder the team more than help them."

Fischl, on the other hand, is extremely confident in her new role. "The players have had to make a real adjustment, but not due to my age," she said. "I have been preparing for this job for a couple of years, so I was ready for the adjustment. My age just wasn't that big a deal at all. The players don't concern themselves with it and I certainly don't."

FISCHL SEES HER age as an advantage in some ways. "My playing career is very fresh in my mind. I remember it distinctly. I know exactly what it is like to be a student athlete. I remember what I hated and what I enjoyed. I try to remember what certain teams did when I played against them, but I'm still learning, like any first-year coach. In a few years, I'm sure I'll be doing some things differently.

'One thing it didn't take me long to figure out is that whenever Iowa plays Iowa State in any sport, it will be a good game," Fischl said.

"I like to play against them (ISU)," Kartel said. "I don't know what it is, I guess the rivalry, that really fires me up. When we meet a team that really challenges us, our intensity stays up. We'll be ready, but it's not going to be easy.

Iowa Head Coach Mary Phyl Dwight, is cautiously optimistic. "We must concentrate and go in there with lots of intensity or they'll take us at their gym," she said. "It's at their home court and they owe us

Martin remembers

NEW YORK (UPI) - Billy Martin, whose fiery exploits while he was managing the New York Yankees caused him to get fired by George Steinbrenner, sent the New York owner two telegrams after hearing he had been involved in a fight in a Los

The first, which Steinbrenner received Monday, read: "George, just heard the bad news. You're

The second, received Tuesday morning, was more personal: "Dear George, I understand exactly how you must have felt in that elevator. I only hope you don't have a good behavior clause in your contract. By the way, the marshmallow man I hit was saying bad things about New York and the Yankees. Seriously, hope you are okay and good luck in the next two games."

Martin, now the manager of the Oakland A's, had ounched a marshmallow salesman in Minnesota during his last year with the Yankees.

On the line

Just as each Saturday this fall has provided football fans with lots of excitement, The Daily Iowan On the Line contest is giving sports enthusiasts a chance for that vicarious athletic experience.

In fact, while you must remain a spectator for college games, you can actually participate in our contest. This week's winner will receive an eight-gallon keg of beer, compliments of the Diamond Mil's.

One hint — remember to follow all the rules. Circle the team you believe will win, including the tie breaker. For tie games circle both teams. The tie breaker must also include your predicted score. Only one ballot per person is allowed. Ballots that do not comply with the rules will be thrown out.

Entry deadline is 5 p.m. Thursday. Ballots should be brought to Room 111 of the Communications Center.

No DI employee or persons under the age of 19 are eligible to win.

Iowa Football Coach Hayden Fry termed the Hawkeyes' practice on Tuesday as "routine. There was nothing special about it, it was just a normal Tuesday workout," Fry said. The scout team has been running more pass plays to help strengthen Iowa's pass defense for Illinois' strong passing attack.
"We emphasize defending against the pass and hope that we can stop them on Saturday. Fry said. "(Tony) Eason is a better passer than Dave Wilson was last year for them."

Hawkeye gymnasts ready; set high goals

The Iowa men's gymnastics team has set its goals for the 1981-82 season, and it has set them high. The team is aiming for a finish in the top five at both the prestigious Windy City Invitational and the National Collegiate Athletic Association Championships.

Other team goals are winning the Big Ten and having individuals win in the Midwest Open. The team will also set in advance the point total it hopes to achieve in dual meets.

"We can get close to those goals if we can't make them," Iowa Coach Tom Dunn said. "We've got the talent and the ability to accomplish them, we just need to keep improving and avoid injuries. The key to it all will be if we can improve as the season goes along.'

THE HAWKEYES return a balanced line-up of veterans from last season's 10-4 team, and talented newcomers are expected to improve the team's performance. Iowa finished fourth in the Big Ten last year, its best finish since

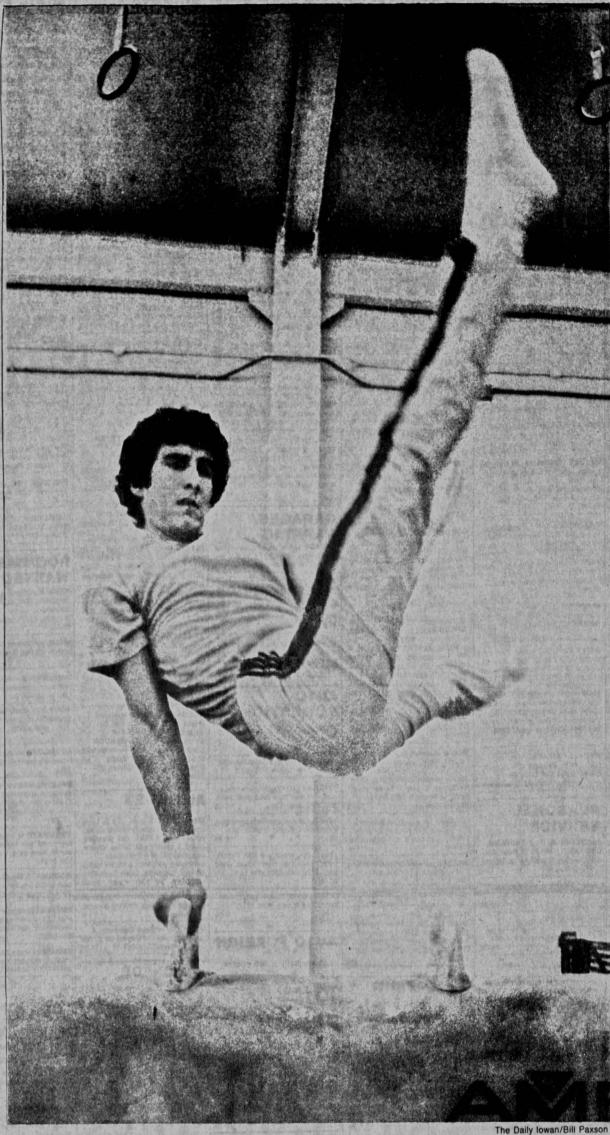

Dunn lists captain Tim Magee and senior Paul Goedecke as the gymnasts who improved most over the summer. "Paul looked super just after he got back," Dunn said. "He's really improved tremendously. The only event he may be a little behind last year is the parallel bars, and we're trying to put in some new things, but in the long run he should be much better there, too. Tim worked out a lot this summer and he's put together a tremendous routine. His form has improved and he may prove to be our best parallel bar

ALSO RETURNING for Iowa is defending Big Ten pommel horse champion Joe Leo, the Hawks' first Big Ten titlist since 1974. "Joe has been working on his routine all summer," Dunn said. "He's really put contention to defend his Big Ten championship. He's got consistency and with all the scores counting this season for the first time that will be important."

Kyle Shanton, a sophomore from Omaha, Neb., will give Iowa added strength on the horizontal bar. "His routine will be sensational," Dunn said. "He's put in a new dismount. It still needs a little work, but the routine in front of it looks fantastic.

IOWA WILL add three transfers from Oregon, a team that finished fifth in last year's NCAA Championships. Oregon dropped the sport after last season. Junior Brett Garland and senior Kelly Crumley, the 16th-place finisher in the all-around at last year's NCAA meet, will give Iowa further strength in the all-around

Dunn describes Crumley, a high school All-American his junior and senior years, as "an outstanding gymnast. He's had a slow fall, but we've tried to pinpoint his weak spots. His scores now aren't reflective of his talent, but he'll be a big help to us down the road.'

Sophomore Bob Leverence, a fourthplace finisher in the Pacific Ten championships last season, will give Iowa a one-two punch on the pommel horse.

transfer from Northern Iowa, has been the surprise to the team this fall. "He's really looking tough in the floor exercise, the pommel horse and on the vault," Dunn said. "He's going to be keeping a lot of our guys honest this

This is definitely the best team Iowa has had since I've been here,'

Dunn said. "It ranks right up there with the 1974 Big Ten Championship team. We have five seniors this year and it is kind of a peak year for us. I'm really looking forward to getting star-

A CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF TH

Fry concerned over Illinois' passing attack

By H. Forrest Woolard

If there is one element that has potential to dictate the outcome of Saturday's Iowa-Illinois football game, it is the performance of the each team's quarterback.

In his Tuesday press conference, Iowa Head Coach Hayden Fry said Tony Eason, the starting quarterback for the Illini, is one of the nation's top college passers. Fry added Eason is probably better than Dave Wilson, Illinois' starter last season who was drafted by the New Orleans Saints.

AND EASON certainly has the statistics to support such comparisons. The Illini quarterback has passed for over 300 yards in each of five Big Ten games this season. Nationally, Eason is the No. 5 passer with his 151-for-245 completion record, throwing for 2,071 yards and 12 touchdowns.

'He has an amazing ability to throw a variety of passes," said Illinois Coach Mike White in a phone interview Tuesday. "He's a guy the pros will be looking at.

Eason has obviously been quite successful this season in the Big Ten, but he hasn't faced the tenacious Hawkeye defense yet. Iowa is 10th nationally in total defense, 13th in scoring defense and 14th in rushing defense.

INCLUDED IN THE Iowa defense is linebacker Mel Cole, named United Press International's Defensive Player of Week. He also received ABC-TV's Defensive Player of the Game for his performance against Minnesota.

'They scare me," White said of the Iowa defense. "They have an excellent defensive team. Their pass rush is as good as any team we've seen."

Illinois owns a 4-3 overall record and is 3-2 in league action following losses to Purdue and Ohio State. The Hawks and Ohio State are tied for first in the Big Ten with a 3-1 conference mark. Iowa is 5-2 overall.

will start at quarterback in Saturday's game, Iowa coaches are in somewhat of a different position. The Hawks' offense was far from satisfactory in their 12-10 loss to Minnesota Saturday.

'Gordy (Bohannon) admits he didn't play well," Fry said of his starting quarterback. "We did not play good football on offense" in the Minne

BOHANNON TOOK over as the Hawks' starting signal caller four games ago when Pete Gales suffered a lower abdominal muscle pull. Fry said he anticipates Gales "will be battling Gordy" for the starting role this week in practice. Both have shown they have the capability to win the big games," Fry said. "I don't care which one starts. just so its the best one. It will be real difficult for Gales to beat out Gordy, but Gordy did have a poor game on Saturday. Normally I go by game performance. I've told people Gales will start if he looks better in practice this

Expected to return to action against the Illini is Eddie Phillips, the Hawks' leading rusher who was sidelined with a sprained ankle. Fry is hoping Phillips will make a difference in Iowa's offense, which has only recorded one touchdown in its last two contests.

LISTED AS A questionable starter is center Dave Oakes. Fry said although Oakes "hobbled" out to practice Monday, he wasn't sure whether he would be used against the Illini. "If we don't play him this week, he will be 80 or 90 percent next week. Iowa's football team will also receive more national media coverage in the Nov. 2 issue of Sports Illustrated. The magazine will carry an article on the "Topsy-Turvey Big Ten Season." The magazine will also have an item in the "Scoreboard" column entitled "Average Omen." which is addressed to Fry. It deals with the Sports Illustrated's ranking of Nebraska and While the Illinois coaching staff UCLA, and the way Fry used the rankwon't have to think twice about who ings to prepare his team for Michigan.

Public ticket policy questioned by Ray

By Betsy Anderson

UI Men's Athletic Director Bump Elliott said Tuesday he had not received word from the governor's office regarding UI ticket sales.

Gov. Robert Ray said Monday he would ask for an investigation into public football and basketball season ticket sale policies at Iowa's three major universities - policies that favor large contributors.

At the monthly meeting of the UI said that he hadn't heard from Ray yet about the issue. Elliott said Ray had been questioned about the ticket policy at a press conference and had been caught by surprise.

Ray's press secretary, John McCarroll, said he didn't think the governor had any direct authority concerning the issue and that it was "up to the individual universities" on how best to distribute season tickets. McCarroll was also "a bit amazed that See Board, page 14
