Majority on City Council now liberal

By Jackie Lauer

The Iowa City Council was almost evenly divided on political affiliation until the 1981-Iowa City election. Now, the council will be 70 percent liberal after the election.

The new members, John Erdahl, Kate Dickson, and Bob Vevera, will join longtime council members Asa McFarland and Glenn McDougal, who are also liberal.

Erdahl, 28, is a graduate student and has a background in labor relations, labor economics, and political science.

Dickson, 26, is a student at the University of Iowa and has a background in sociology and political science.

Vevera, 21, is a student at the University of Iowa and has a background in business administration and political science.

The new council members are expected to bring a fresh perspective to the council and toBuford Garwood, who is the only council member not to be a liberal.

The election results show that the citizens of Iowa City have spoken and have chosen a majority of liberal council members.

Americans were scandalized recently when it was revealed that beer imported from Australia may also have contained marijuana seeds. Kangaroo meat may be the least of our worries, however — the Food and Drug Administration estimates that 10 percent of beer imported into the United States contains illegal levels of marijuana.

Most of the contaminated food comes from Central America. The U.S. Customs service office in Honolulu has found that nearly half of all imported pork products were found to contain levels of marijuana in excess of the legal limit.

The problem is not limited to beer. In recent years, the FDA has seized large quantities of marijuana from shipments of food and beverages. During one recent month, the agency seized over 1,000 packages of marijuana-laced food products, including pasta, bread, and cereal.

The FDA has been unable to determine the source of the contamination. However, it is believed that the marijuana seeds are likely to have been introduced into the food chain during processing or transportation.

The implications of this finding are significant. It raises serious questions about the safety of our food supply. It also raises questions about the role of the FDA in protecting public health.

In addition, the finding raises questions about the role of the international food trade. It is clear that we need to do more to ensure that our food is free from dangerous contaminants.

The FDA is currently working on a new set of regulations to address this problem. It is expected that these regulations will be implemented in the near future.

We must also consider the broader implications of this finding. It raises serious questions about the role of the United States in the international drug trade. It also raises questions about the role of the United Nations in enforcing its own regulations.

We must take steps to address these issues. We must take steps to ensure that our food is free from dangerous contaminants. We must also take steps to ensure that the United States is not used as a haven for drug traffickers.

In conclusion, the finding that beer imported from Australia may also have contained marijuana seeds is a wake-up call for all of us. We must take steps to ensure that our food is free from dangerous contaminants. It is the responsibility of all of us to ensure that our food is safe and healthy.

Trappers urged to be careful of rabies

Animal trappers should take special precautions this year to protect themselves against rabies, which has appeared in Iowa this year, according to the state Department of Health.

Moffett said the trapper could be in a great danger. The saliva or face scratches from a rabid trapper can cause rabies. He said the trapper should get a one-time dosage that every two years must be boosted.

Lack of a cause cited as reason for less visible student activism

By David Seiver

Today's student activism is a very different phenomenon than the one that marred college campuses during the late 1960s and 1970s. In fact, there is a growing sense among students and administrators that the need for change has changed in today's society, including such immediate political or social change. The need for a more positive, yet significant, role in society has increased. Despite the changing student population, there is a strong sense that the past is in the forefront of the need for a cause.

The biggest crowd during the Student Union Senate president said student activism was still strong. "We were dealing with very positive ideas. Things like stopping nuclear war, even stopping pollution," he said.

Hageman and students at that time felt they could change the world.

"But the late 60s and early 70s, people really thought they were doing something about revolutionary change. People have learned that revolutionary change might not come about that quickly. They are more likely to do it a few steps at a time," said the same source.

Sober. The moves are smooth, the lighting and handheld work are authentic to the times. Perhaps all the respect these stories and things of the town receive is more than the seasoned quality of this show.

In addition, hair the equally stylish lacks seems set loose down, lines are shedding, the hair is just a little more vibrant in the very

Developmental year for Iowa golfers

By Mark Kiefer

Having just completed its fall-to-fall full schedule, the Iowa golf team will try to make improvements during winter break in preparation for the spring season.

According to Iowa Coach Diane Thomason, the fall and spring seasons are parts of a "developmental year" for the Hawkeyes. Thomason has been rotating freshmen into lineup positions in the current lineup. The other three players returning are seniors Kristina Miller and sinkers Diane Solon and Diane Solon.

"This fall season has given me the chance to see some new players," Thomason said. "But as far as an immediate impact, we didn't do as well as last year. I think the future is bright. I have a strong group of freshmen and a couple of sophomores, and we're really excited about that."

Thomason has already taken the initial steps to building a new team. "The new players have given us so much experience in the organization to make it run," she said. "But some of them it was an accomplishment to make the team. And for those who traveled, they get to see what the competition is like. They've seen how hungry other teams stack up."

"With the conference tournament and the NCAA Regional in May, we're looking for a strong finish to the season."

Scottie Voss, a junior who is one of these freshmen Rampage players, has matured the most from her fall golf career. "Scottie is right on the plane," Thomason said. "She's brought leadership to the team." Thomason said.

"BRIAN HAS A GREAT COMPETITIVE attitude, a positive outlook," the coach continued. "The girls are very comfortable."}
