Officials back two differing opinions

WASHINGTON (UPL) - The State and Defense Departments, speaking as one voice in a joint statement, acted Thursday to clarify a top-level contradiction over American nuclear policy by declaring that two conflicting statements were both correct.

The dispute surfaced publicly when Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger denied a statement by Secretary of State Alexander Haig that NATO has a plan to set off a nuclear warning blast to block a Soviet assault on Western Haig, testifying before a Senate committee Wednesday, said "there are contingency plans" in the North Atlantic alliance "to fire a nuclear weapon for demonstrative purposes" to head off Soviet aggression.

Weinberger appeared before the Senate Armed Services Committee. where Sen. John Warner. R-Va., said Haig's remark had sparked "a great deal of concern

But Weinberger, questioned Thursday about a potential display of atomic muscle, said, "There is absolutely nothing in any of the plans that I know of that contains anything remotely resembling it - nor should it.

A joint statement, produced by both the Pentagon and the State Department, tried to unravel the conflict and an official said both Weinberger and Haig had spoken correctly.

THE JOINT statement - also released at the White House - said the NATO alliance considered such a "demonstration shot" a number of years ago as "a possible option."

However, the statement said, "as Secretary Weinberger indicated, there is no precise NATO military plan and there have always been significant doubts expressed in NATO - doubts which the United States shares about the utility of this option.

The conflict over nuclear policy was doubly sensitive - it was certain to agitate Europeans already worried about muddled administration declarations on nuclear policy, and it also put President Reagan's two top cabinet officers publicly at odds for the first

The suggestion Haig erred in his remark came at a time the secretary is battling to preserve his credibility against what he has called a "guerrilla campaign" being waged against him by a high White House official. The president has acted sharply to curb administration sniping at the secretary.

State Department spokesman Alan Romberg, reminded former NATO commander Haig said there was a contignency plan while Weinberger said none existed, was asked who was right.

"BOTH ARE right." he said. Secretary Haig was correct in noting that demonstrative use is an option that has been considered by NATO. Secretary Weinberger was correct that this option has never been translated into a military plan.

The defense chief responded by saying the warning blast idea was just "a suggestion in the 1960s of some one of the military planners."

At the White House earlier in the day, chiei spokesman David Gergen indicated there was no dissatisfaction with Haig's testimony. "The secretary was simply stating a matter of traditional" policy, he said.

"The secretary was making points on NATO doctrine," Gergen told reporlers, adding that such defense planning "envisages a range of options."

Swedes suspect Soviet sub held nuclear arms

KARLSKRONA, Sweden (UPI) -The Soviet submarine aground inside secret Swedish waters carried Uranium-238 and in "great probability" eight nuclear-tipped torpedos, Sweden announced Thursday. Officials were to allow the craft to leave early today.

Sweden said there appeared to be no radioactive fallout on islands in the restricted Bleckinge Archipelago, where the diesel-powered whiskeyclass submarine ran onto the rocks nine days ago.

Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin ended the 10-day crisis by calling the Soviet trespass "the most flagrant violation since World War II ... of Swedish territory and sovereignty." Sweden was neutral in World War II. but Nazi troops passed through in their invasion of Norway.

The craft, crew and nuclear cargo will start its journey out of Swedish waters early this morning, a Defense Ministry official said. The size of its escort was undecided, but a Swedish pilot will probably board the craft and guide it through the archipelago, officials

"THE INVESTIGATION we have undertaken of this submarine has shown that in great probability it contains nuclear weaponry," Falldin told a news conference. "It has Uranium-238 on board and there is no reason why it would have this on board unless it has nuclear warheads."

Naval officials said all the 52 similar Soviet whiskey-class submarines in the Baltic probably were crammed with nuclear warheads, a fact not suspected

Cmdr. Sven Carlsson of the lining for U-235. Karlskrona naval base, commenting on the inspection of the sub, said a torpedo tube containing U-238 was "live" and the weapon could have been fired.

Submarine specialist Cmdr. Gunnar Rasmussen said eight torpedos "also probably carrying nuclear warheads" were present.

A Defense Ministry source said the use of depth charges to chase off suspected foreign submarines in Swedish waters may be ended. "Depth charges would have caused plutonium and uranium nuclear pollution" if they had struck the weaponry, the source

"THEY WOULD have contaminated the ground in the area forever," said Professor Karl-Erik De Geer of the Institute of National Defense.

The prime minister said Sweden had asked Soviet authorities to confirm their suspicions about the nuclear weapons, but "we have not received an Falldin did not spell out the exact connection between the approximately 20 pounds of U-238 and the possible nuclear weaponry. In Washington, Pentagon experts said the Soviet sub could carry nuclear-tipped torpedoes or missiles and that U.S. submarines carry the same sort of devices.

The Pentagon sources said that although the patrol submarine that became grounded is one of the oldest in Soviet service, it can carry the SSN-3 anti-ship or tactical nuclear missile. About 270 whiskey-class subs were built between 1951 and 1957 based largely on Nazi World War II U-boats.

THE PRESENCE of the uranium on board first puzzled U.S. scientists. They said that U-238 itself is unenriched and is useless for atomic weapons. U-238 must be bombarded in a nuclear reactor and made into U-235 before it can be used in atomic bombs or atomic warheads.

But Professor Leonart Holm, formerly of Sweden's Institute of National Defense said the U-238 can be used as a

One defense official said a "certain suspicion" had prompted a check of one torpedo tube that yielded the U-238. The disclosure came a day after Sweden said it had been testing a secret anti-submarine torpedo when the gray Russian craft ran aground with a crew of 56, just 11 miles from the testing site in the restricted Blekinge Archipelago.

Congress allowed veto of Reagan on MX, B-1

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate said. Thursday night approved a $130.7 billion defense authorization bill that gives Congress the right to veto President Reagan's decisions on the MX missile and new B-1 bomber.

The 1982 authorization bill worked out by a House-Senate conference committee was approved on a voice vote by a nearly empty Senate chamber and sent to the House.

The bill authorizes expenditures and lays down the ground rules. Later, an appropriations bill must be approved to actually produce the money. Final approval of the appropriations measure is not expected until at least March.

During the debate, Democratic senators announced they will formally introduce two resolutions to disapprove Reagan's MX and B-1 programs and a third one to increase operations, maintenance and readiness funds by about $675 million.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, replied to this by saying he was 'delighted to hear there seems to be a (Democratic) Party plan to add money" to the defense bill.

"I HOPE this is a commitment" that will be honored by other Democrats See United Way, page 6 during the appropriations process, he

The authorization measure approved Thursday night is nearly $420 million over Reagan's revised budget request, but "right on the mark" in terms of projected outlays, according to Tower.

The total is $6.2 billion less than what the president proposed in March. A revised defense figure was submitted last month as part of the administration's overall budget-trimming effort.

The bill was approved without amendment to what was submitted to the joint conference committee, which decided on the "veto" provision for the MX and B-1.

Under that provision, both the House and Senate would have to agree to disapprove the president's plans for a basing system for the MX or his decision on the next U.S. bomber.

REAGAN HAS announced he wants to place MX missiles in existing Titan and Minuteman silos and wants to build 100 B-1 bombers, to be followed later with a radar-evading "advanced technology" or Stealth aircraft.

Tower, among others, has objected to Reagan's decision on the MX missile. The critics of Reagan's decision want to proceed with the Carter administration plan to hide the missiles See Senate, page 6 media in general can be trusted. Journalists can avoid fictionalized news and improve everyday coverage by conducting investigative critiques of news stories that explain how the stories were put together, which sources were used, the interests of those sources and how the interviews were conducted, he said.

News audiences need to be educated about how the news is put together so they can understand its implications. The public should be educated about how the media functions through the school system and by watching television' programs about the news, Gans

POLITICAL figures, used as regular sources by journalists, know that dramatic behavior and issues will receive more press coverage, he said. Such sources only want their special interests to receive coverage and shun media criticism, Gans said.

'Journalists are caught in the middle," he said, because although they desire the "empirical" truth, they are in competition with the other news organizations. They then seek the more dramatic story because of that competition, Gans said. "The most desperate outcome (of that competition) is the hoax," he said.

Journalists also face competition from the more popular, dramatic subjects of fiction novels and docudramas, Gans said.

Starport reopens, bar license withheld

By Kevin Cook

A local tavern and game room has had its liquor license withheld by local officials pending a review of the document's validity.

The Starport, 18-20 S. Clinton St. was closed down Wednesday by the Iowa City Police Department Wednesday because of possible discrepancies in

Starport's owner, John Wakefield, said that the license is being withheld because the city views the agreement between Wakefield and Weston Frank, the bar's operator, as a partnership and not as an owner-operator relationship

Wakefield said that the liquor license must indicate who owns the establishment, and city officials apparently view Frank as part owner. Wakefield said that he leases the property and Frank is paid a salary olus incentives for doing more "If our relationship is a partnership,

Assistant City Attorney Linda Woito, who is handling the case for the city, could not be reached for comment Thursday night. DET. WILLIAM KIDWELL said that the opinion of the Police Department and the city attorney's office is that the present license is invalid. Neither Kidwell nor City Manager

Neal Berlin would specify exactly why they view the license as invalid. "The complaint has not been drawn up by the city," Berlin said. "It would

City officials, workers to renegotiate '83 wages

equities were the two major demands made Wednesday to Iowa City by a local union.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 183, Council 61, which represents about 200 city employees, is negotiating wage demands for fiscal year 1983, which will start next July.

The union is in the first year of a twoyear contract with the city; however, the contract has a provision to require renegotiation of wages for the second contract year. Because of the provision, negotiations will have to center on wage demands.

Freedman ponders chances of prof's new tenure vote

Ralph Smith, the black faculty member who was denied tenure by the University of Pennsylvania Law - headed by UI president-select James Freedman - will probably be reconsidered for a tenured position.

Smith was the center of a racial controversy, and one factor that called into question Freedman's affirmative action record

"I'm probably going to release a statement Monday or Tuesday." saying the tenure dispute matter is still going through channels within the law school,

"There's going to be reconsideration and I'm popeful of a favorable outcome," Smith said. He adled that this will probably be his last public statement until the end of the semester, when the faculty is expected to act on his request.

"THEY WILL probably reconsider (the tenure decision) at the end of the semester. Things are movng more slowly than I thought they would." Smith

Freedman said he does not know what the result of Smith's request will be

"Without any question, when he asks the faculty to reconsider it will assemble and move from there,'

He added, however, that the faculty does have a choice on whether to reconsider Smith. They can say they won't or they can say they will and then proceed to reconsider. I would certainly suspect that what the faculty will do is the latter.

Because no one has ever been reconsidered for tenure in the law school, Freedman said the procedure for reconsideration has not been esablished and the faculty members will decide on the procedure they want to use "I think it would be premature to guess how the faculty will go about the process of reconsidering."

UI President-select James Freedman

SMITH SAID he believes the situation is not hopeless because the faculty voted 10-9 to deny him

He said, "It couldn't be any worse. With a 10-9 vote there is reason to hope there will be a change." Freedman's record on affirmative action was questioned by faculty members of the University of Pennsylvania because of a continuation of the decline in minority and female student enrollment in the law school and the lack of any tenured black or female faculty members in the law school. Freedman said preliminary reports show an increase in the number of female law students, while the number of black students remained constant this

Color guard's use of sabers at game protested by senate

The UI Student Senate voted Thursday night to condemn the use of sabers by an ROTC color guard at Saturday's football game.

The resolution passed by the senate also asked the president of the University of Iowa to intercede" in the Board in Control of Athletics' decision to allow the use of sabers because the board did not contact its student representatives before making

At its Oct. 27 meeting, the board approved the use of "an unarmed color guard" to present the flag. Board Chairman Frank Kohout said that at the ime of the vote, the board did not know that the ROTC "field manual does not allow a military field unit without some kind of weapon," he said.

should allow ROTC to appear with sabers instead of mock guns." Kohout said. Until the next board meeting later this month, "we are interpreting it as no guns or mock guns," he said.

If the board were to say the color guard must appear unarmed. ROTC would be excluded from participation and that is not the intent, he said.

Lt.Col. Michael Bartleme said Thursday morning that an ROTC color guard will "certainly" be at the game Saturday. He said Kohout told him Wednesday that the color guard could wear sabers.

There is "no such thing as military color guard without arms." It is "not in accordance with military tradition...protocol," Bartleme said.

KOHOUT SAID the saber "is obviously a weapon; it's just that 'unarmed' was put in there and is obviously ambiguous language.

The approval of a color guard means that different groups could present the flag, board secretary William Trease said Thursday. The guard would not have to be military, "but I question whether anyone else would want to" participate in the color guard, Trease said.

Bruce Burger, member of the color guard, said Thursday morning the guard will begin practicing with sabers today

It is a "part of patriotism to defend our country. It symbolizes that we have a strong country by having the color guard there," he said. "It is a way for groups and student organizations to show more to the school than just one facet," he said.

"The thing that intimidates me a little is what kind of student response we'll get," Burger said.

Beer: the calming cola

Beer was sold at a rock concert in the Hilton Coliseum in Ames for the first time several weeks ago, and officials there say it may have a calming effect on the crowd. The sale of a 14-oz. cup of Pabst Blue Ribbon beer for $1 at concerts is believed to give officials better control of the crowd and drinking, said David Ryburn, manager of house and concessions at the Iowa State Center. Concert-goers are less likely to try to sneak alcohol into the coliseum if they know beer will be sold, Ryburn said. However, there are no plans to sell beer at athletic events or at concerts where a young crowd is expected. For example, the center sold beer at a recent Moody Blues concert, but not at a concert by the Kinks. "If you sell beer at a concert that is going to draw a young crowd, you're asking for trouble, Ryburn said.

Tradition is a spittin' image

Tradition seems to be on the way out at Indiana University. At least the Old Brass Spittoon isn't as popular as it used to be.

Student government at Michigan State University offered the spittoon to Indiana as a football trophy in 1950. But the illustrious Indiana football team has only managed to win the trophy five times since then, most recently

This year, as the Indiana-Michigan State game approached, Mike Pearson, Michigan State's assistant sports information director, began the search for the "trophy" at the request of an IU student.

Pearson had never seen the spittoon. He soon learned it was not in the school's trophy case, so he called his boss, Michigan State sports information director Nick Vista. Vista was a Michigan State student when the spittoon tradition began.

Vista finally found the long-lost trophy. "We found it in the football room," he said. It was a little battered, but it was like that when we started it. It has scores engraved on it through 1958 but nothing after that.

So much for tradition. Michigan State beat Indiana Saturday 26-3. -From the Indiana Daily Student.

For years, the Swedes have been chasing mysterious submarines skulking around in their territorial waters. The Swedes knew who the subs belonged to, but had no proof. Now they not only have proof, they have an actual Russian sub complete with

It's not much of a sub as subs go - a little diesel-powered pufferbelly of a thing — but the Swedes aren't taking the matter lightly. The sub and its crew can go only when the captain tells Sweden exactly what his sub was doing so close to a secret Swedish military installation where anti-sub weapons were being tested.

It is events like this that serve as a reminder that the Reagan administration's warnings of Russian military superiority are a bit overwrought. Administration spokesmen have fallen into the habit of describing the Russians in almost supernatural terms, warning of their huge arms build-up and far flung military adventurism.

While it is true the Russians aren't going to win any citizenship awards for their recent behavior, a major portion of their fearsome military expansion has been directed toward consolidating past gains rather then aiming at new ones. The events in Poland and the possibility of a spread of the Polish workers' revolt into the rest of Eastern Europe, symptoms of growing restiveness in their Central Asian constituent republics, their very own quagmire in Afghanistan, Russian insecurity and their obsession with fortifying their border with China are the main factors leading to the Russian build-up, not some supposed plan for world domination.

While it is undeniable they have undertaken a major material expansion in arms and military technology, the quality of those arms is questionable. For example, the Russians have the largest submarine fleet in the world, but only 10 percent are ever actually at sea because they break down so often they spend most of their time at anchor. Moreover, most of the ports are frozen for most of the year and getting the subs out to sea undetected is very dif-

Other apparent proofs of Soviet superiority are equally illusory. There are approximately three and a half million men in the Russian armed forces. But a half million are trained only as construction workers or border guards. And almost half of the Red Army is made of up ethnic minorties - most of whom do not even speak Russian. They are not trusted enough to be given regular army training and many are not permitted to have weapons. Most Russian soldiers don't know how to read a military map.

The Russians have major technological and personnel problems. So whether their sub beached in Sweden because of a compass malfunction or because it's a lousy sub, the truth is the Russians aren't likely to be coming with the troops they have on the subs they have. The aground sub tells more about the Russian "military machine" than all of Alexander Haig's paranoid speeches.

Refugee plight

The detention and deportation of Haitian refugees has generated considerable attention in the United States in recent months. Less well known is the plight of Salvadoran refugees fleeing the fighting

The United Nations Central American refugee office in Costa Rica estimates that 500,000 Salvadorans, or 10 percent of the population, have left El Salvador in the last two years. The conditions they leave behind are disturbingly similar to those in Nicaragua prior to the fall of the Samoza government - villages are bombed, homes are burned and peasants are murdered if they even sympathize with the insurgents.

Those who leave their homes are harassed by the army and by right wing paramilitary groups both before and after they reach one of the many U.N.-sponsored refugee camps scattered throughout Central America. In March of this year, U.N. relief workers witnessed an attack by Salvadoran troops in two U.S.supplied helicopters on a group of 4.000 refugees who were crossing the border into Honduras. The helicopters fired rockets and machine guns, killing several of the refugees.

U.S. military advisors have also witnessed such attacks on civilians. Last month, the State Department reported that two U.S. Army officers and an American engineer were aboard a helicopter that fired on a group of peasants who were herding cattle inside El Salvador. Though the Americans were not directly involved in the shooting, it is the closest U.S. advisors have come to hostilities in that country.

Many of the refugees make their way north. The United Nations estimates that 140,000 Salvadorans may be in Mexico and 200,000 in the United States. But while Mexico has shown a willingness to reconsider its policy of sending the refugees back to El Salvador, the United States has not. The U.S. government calls the Salvadorans "illegal economic migrants," and says the 700-800 deportations per month will not stop. No one can guarantee their safety once they arrive in El Salvador.

Deportations are supposed to be decided on a case-by-case basis, but some members of Congress have charged that the State Department routinely rejects Salvadorans' requests for entry because of U.S. support for El Salvador's ruling junta. Less than 3 percent of the Salvadorans are granted refugee status.

Sadly, the callous treatment of Salvadoran refugees is consistent with the barbaric policy of sending arms to help their government carry on a war against its own people. But the U.S. government's refusal to help deal with the refugee problem should shock and embarrass all Americans of conscience.

Why Reaganomics won't work

By Jeffrey Cox

I appreciate the opportunity to respond to William Albrecht's suggestion (DI, Oct. 23) that Democrats should stop opposing Reaganomics and should instead try to make Reagan's program "both more humane and more ef-

Unfortunately, Reaganomics is based upon the fundamental assumption that it is impossible to be humane and efficient at the same time. At the heart of Reagan's program is an attempt to restore our economy to health by restoring certain kinds of "incentives." Let us take a look at some of those incentives.

On October 1, Reagan restored incentives to 4225 families in Iowa by cutting off their Aid to Dependent Children benefits and leaving them without any medical care at all. Most of those families consist of poor single working mothers with dependent children. At the same time, he restored incentives to more than one million unemployed American workers by abolishing their extended unemployment benefits, which are designed for workers in areas of especially high unemployment.

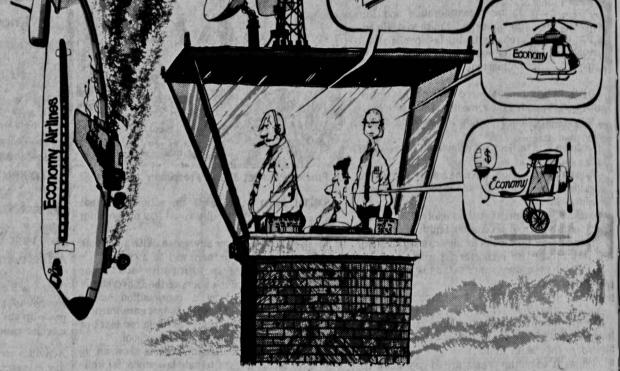

He restored incentives to over 800,000 people by completely eliminating their food stamps. And he almost succeeded in restoring incentives to several hundred thousand poverty stricken widows by completely abolishing their minimum monthly social security benefit.

These are not minor technical adjustments in bloated social welfare programs. They are a cruel blow to the standard of living of millions of people who are the victims of the marketplace. And it is the cruel restoration of incentives like that which lie at the heart of Reaganomics. If Democrats succeed in making Reaganomics more humane they will, according to the theories of Albrecht and Reagan, only succeed in making the economy less ef-

WHILE PROVIDING these kinds of incentives to the poor, the administration is providing a very different kind of incentive to the rich. Inheritance and estate taxes have virtually been abolished. The maximum tax on unearned capital gains has been cut to twenty percent. The corporate income tax, which accounted for nearly 25 percent of federal revenues in the prosperous and inflation-free 1950s, is now down to 7 percent of federal revenue. Working people and middle income people are the only ones left to pay taxes, and they are already feeling the burden of increased state and local Lavish tax cuts for the wealthy have produced a staggering budget deficit, and the Reagan administration is now looking for ways to increase the tax burden on middle income people in order to reduce the deficit. Our big corporations, however, like the French aristocracy of the eighteenth century, have received a virtual exemption from taxation

But will it work? Albrecht ignores a good deal of evidence which indicates that cruelty to children, the elderly and the handicapped is not really efficient at all, and that evidence comes from Great Britain. We know about the failures of Margaret Thatcher's very similar program, and it is possible to make informed guesses about some of the consequences of Reagan's approach by looking at the British experi-

Cuts in domestic spending will only increase the demand for other types of domestic spending. For instance, Reagan is increasing the size of the group labeled 'truly needy' by his assault on the working poor, and that will drive up welfare costs. Furthermore, his tax cuts for the wealthy have already produced a soaring budget deficit, which will drain capital away from productive deployment.

FINALLY, he has no policy to control inflation other than high interest rates, which are already causing horrible problems for farmers and small businessmen. This will drive up unemployment, which will in turn increase the federal deficit by cutting tax revenues and increasing the demand for government welfare programs.

This will lead to further attempts to cut the budget, which will make the administration unpopular with virtually everyone, even Republicans. Margaret Thatcher is now more unpopular than any prime minister since polling began in Britain, and for good reason. There are already signs that Reagan will become similarly unpopular over his handling of the economy. He may have to resort to war or foreign crisis in order to save his party from heavy losses in 1982 or 1984

Democrats should oppose every last detail of this program, and vigorously. Ronald Reagan has no intention of making social welfare programs 'work better." Instead he wants to limit them to a residual group of desperately poor people, the "truly needy," in order to make sure that these programs will be unworkable. The one way to make sure that a social welfare program will not work is to limit it to the poorest of the poor. From the Elizabethan Poor Law of 1601 right down to the latest food stamp program in Puerto Rico, means tested welfare programs directed to the poor and only to the poor have been political failures.

The desperately poor have no political influence, and will always lose out to the likes of the dairy and tobacco lobby in congress. The only way to insure a basic minimum standard of living for all Americans is to provide it through entitlement programs like social security and our public school system. Britain's National Health Service is so popular that even Margaret Thatcher dares not dismantle it, and the Iowa state Democratic platform calls for the creating of a national health service in America.

WE SHOULD also follow the advice of a very skillful conservative political pamphleter named Milton Friedman, and institute a negative income tax, which would free millions from the tyranny of "welfare." Comprehensive, universal entitlement programs have the advantage of being insulated from the attacks of people wishing to restore incentives. Food stamps have been cut drastically; social security hardly at

The poor, the elderly, children and the disabled are not the only targets of the Reagan administration. Our government is engaged in a massive campaign of vandalism directed at public institutions which benefit middle income people and indeed all Americans. Our roads, bridges, sewers, prisons, mental health institutions, museums, railways, schools, universities. libraries and research facilities are being allowed to deteriorate, or even being run down, simply because they are in the public sector. The only exception is the military regain political power in Iowa and in the nation, we will be faced with an enormous task: rebuilding virtually all of our public institutions.

Resources are being transferred from public institutions to the wealthy, and to private corporations which control the government. When Democrats

But that task is also a great opportunity. Such a rebuilding program, when combined with strict controls on inflationary corporate monopolies, fair taxation, and a balanced budget, will not only stimulate the economy and provide millions of jobs for people now on unemployment or welfare; it will raise the standard of living of all

THE NEW Iowa City Public Library is an excellent example of what needs to be done and what can be done all over America. Although no fundamental human rights have been violated by the construction of this library. everyone in Iowa City has had to sacrifice some small degree of freedom in order to build it. This library is paid for out of taxes. Taxes are involuntary. Upon paying taxes, a person loses most of his or her control over that money. But in return we have a library which raises the standard of living of everyone here except for the very, very wealthy. And it also expands the freedom of thousands of people to learn and read, a freedom which is just as valuable as the freedom to spend one's own money privately. Fortunately, the library was built before Reagan began to restore incentives. There is plenty of rebuilding to be done in America, and everyone will benefit when we do it.

Albrecht is right, of course, to explain patiently to Democrats that we can no longer take the creation of wealth for granted. We have to look at production as well as distribution. But we should not take as our model the cruel and regressive experiment now being conducted in Great Britain. which is already a failure. Instead, we should propose alternative ways to create wealth which are both humane and efficient at the same time.

Reader opposes Right-to-Life funding

Hearing about the Student Senate's decision to deny funding to the Student Right to Life Committee while allocating funds to the Student Abortion Rights Action League, I found myself sympathizing with the plight of the Committee. The Senate should have a written policy stating the criteria for denial or approval of funding, void of any preference for political factions. It is crucial to the working of a democratic system that privileges such as funding are not handed out at the whim of representatives.

However, I contend that the Committee's notion that it deserves funds because it is an educational group is far-fetched, because it does not educate. It offers a position which is cloaked in distorted truths and misguided emotionalism.

Letters

In one of the groups pamphlets, 'Choose Life," the reader is immediately bombarded with "facts." Yet upon closer examination the sources become suspect. The most recent source cited is from 1974. When speaking of embryology studies three of seven references are from the 1952-1954 era. The remaining four pre-date

When speaking of legal precedents three of six sources are uncited, one is from 1959 and two are from 1969. Of 45 footnotes only 16 are from the 1970s, the early 70s at that. The rest are from before that time. Most of the other pamphlets that I have seen offered by the Committee have no footnotes or information worthy of footnoting. It is 1219 Quadrangle ironic that an "educational" group would offer a pamphlet which addresses medical and legal issues of today with statistics pulled from the aging files of yesterday.

Also, the Committee attempts to educate through the power of full color blood and gore and the chants of "dead babies" and "baby killers." Honest education should not have to resort to such blatant exploitations of emotions through a crudely presented visual

The right to choose abortion is the vital issue. I sincerely hope that the Senate does not allocate funds to the Student Right-to-Life Committee. The knowledge surrounding its debate deserves more than one side knowingly offering, as education, out-dated information and tear-jerking emotionalism. Shelly Henry

Stereotypes To the editor

In response to the letter written by Steve Ives (DI, Oct. 28) concerning the slander of greeks, I would like to know how you can stereotype non-greeks as refugees. I don't see how you can get to Iowa City on a boat. I also don't believe there are any slums in Iowa City; have you been to New York City lately.

Do you consider yourself mature by attacking the greeks with such a hostile and sarcastic attitude? Concerning "pampering" - we beg to differ. The greek system is not perfect, but greeks work hard to build a good reputation. Greek accomplishments speak for themselves. Everyone makes mistakes - Ives' mistake was to take on 3,000 greeks without trying it first. Heidi Schnell Beth Pleune

Attorneys representing David Carl Oppelt filed a motion Thursday asking for a new Oppelt, 24, was found guilty of seconddegree murder Oct. 13 in connection with the May 27 stabbing death of Steven Scott White, 16, at the Quik Trip store, 225 S.

Oppelt was charged with first-degree murder in connection with White's death, but a seven-woman, five-man jury found him guilty of the lesser charge. Oppelt had pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

In the motion filed Thursday in Johnson County District Court, attorneys Duane L. Rohovit and Philip M. Reisetter gave four reasons a new trial should be granted:

• The court was wrong to overrule a defense motion asking that evidence be exduded from the trial, the motion states. The defense had asked that the prosecuion not be allowed to introduce evidence on the stabbing of Blaine Evans.

Testimony at Oppelt's trial indicated that Evans was standing with White at the Quik Trip and was stabbed once before White was killed. Testimony also showed that Evans was present earlier that day when $30-50 was stolen from Oppelt in an Iowa

North Liberty and Hills have a run-off provisions in their city ordinances that require the votes be canvassed on Thursday of election week, Steinbach said Thursday. This is in case no candidate receives a majority of the votes, she said.

POSTPONING THE canvass until Monday will not matter much for this election, Steinbach said, because in Hills there was only one candidate for each opening and the two winners in North Liberty clearly had a majority, she said.

'The election went very smoothly," Steinbach said. "The only problems with the machines happened before the polls opened

Setting up the voting machines is a complicated process and they can get jammed very easily if all the steps are not followed exactly. Steinbach said.

County Auditor Tom Slockett is planning to go to a training class sponsored by the Automatic Voting Machine Co. in New York to learn how to take care of minor machine repairs and maintenance.

Presently, every time a voting machine needs to be repaired or oiled, the county must pay to have a technician fly in from New York and do the job, Steinbach said.

No one from Johnson County has gone to the training sessions during Slockett's term in office, she said.

The machines are getting old enough that they need more attention and the county will save money in the long run if it can handle the repairs itself, Steinbach said.

Columbia could face further problems and delays

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) -Technicians worked into the night Thursday constructing platforms in the space shuttle Columbia to get to the hydraulic system engines that forced project officials to delay its launch to Wednesday - at the earliest. Launch director George Page said the shuttle's second test flight would be pushed into the following week if engineers find some reason to replace the auxiliary power units in the Columbia's aft section.

He said a firm decision probably would be made Saturday after engineers analyze contaminated oil in gear boxes of two of the ship's three auxiliary power units.

A WAXY SUBSTANCE in the units that power the shuttle's hydraulic system forced cancellation Wednesday of the launch that would have made Columbia, with astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly aboard, the first manned spaceship ever to return to or-

The space agency said assembly of the work stands in the machinery-filled aft compartment of the rocket plane took longer than expected and dragged on into the night. Engle and Truly, who spent five frustrating hours in the shuttle cockpit before being told there would be no launch, did not appear upset and got in some practice flying Thursday morning. In the afternoon, they flew to their homes in Houston.

"THEY TAKE it all in stride," said Donald "Deke" Slayton, the veteran astronaut who now heads the shuttle test program. "They'll be ready to go.'

Technicians were not able to get to the auxiliary power units until the residue of liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen engine fuel was cleared from the massive external tank.

"It is not an easy project," Page said. The problem can be fixed one of two ways. If the lubrication system is drained, cleaned and reloaded, the launch could come as early as Wednesday, Page said. If the decision is made instead to replace the 22-inch-tall units, the launch would not come until the following week at the earliest.

"We won't firm up an actual date until we get a better handle on the status" of the power units. Page said at a briefing. He said that would happen probably some time Satur-

WEATHER WAS STILL a potential problem. Torrential rains hit the Kennedy Space Center again Thursday, at one point completely hiding the shuttle from the main press viewing site 31/2 miles away.

The rain did not hamper work on the Columbia since it is enclosed by a mobile service tower. But there would be no launch in

Tropical storm Katrina turned into a hurricane south of Cuba, but Page said at its present course, it would not be a threat to launching the shuttle on its five-day, 83-orbit

The two contaminated power units - turbines that drive the shuttle's hydraulic system flight controls on launch and landing were both used during Columbia's first voyage in April. The third unaffected unit

PAGE SAID the problem with the two used ones "indicates that we have to do something different after each flight in the way of our maintainence or else there is some design thing" wrong.

Engineers were aware of the problem during the final few minutes of countdown Wednesday but were planning to launch anyway. However, the computer controlling launch found an unrelated problem 31 seconds before blastoff and stopped the clock.

That problem was taken care of, but Page decided not to allow the launch because of the contamination, believed caused by hydrazine fuel for the units seeping through a seal into the lubrication oil.

He said Thursday he thought the power units most likely would have worked, but "if they had sat there in orbit and chilled down and contaminated extensively, they may have caused a problem.'

One of the objectives of the second mission is to sort any bugs out of the system so subsequent launch tries will be smoother. Page said the delay of this flight would push back future missions by as many days as it takes to get Columbia off the pad for the second

Minority law conference to be held at Drake tonight

A minority pre-law conference will be held at the Drake University Law School in Des Moines tonight and Saturday.

The conference is designed to increase minority student awareness of opportunities in the law field, to help them understand the legal education process, and to make them aware of programs available at Midwestern

Among the sponsors of the conference are the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Urban Mission Council, the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Iowa National Bar Association.

Featured speakers will be Thomas Mann Jr., Iowa assistant attorney general; Miguel Teran, director of the Spanish Speaking Peoples Commission and Richard Calkins, dean of the Drake University Law School.

> There's going to be a dance anniversary in Iowa City this weekend. Black Genesis will celebrate its 12th year of existence in "Encore" at 8 tonight and Saturday in E.C. Mabie Theater. The program will feature highlights from he company's past repertoire and will be a reunion for many former Genesis members, including the group's founder, Julie Merritt-Goodlett.

The creation of a black dance company at the UI was part of a complex of activities for the first black history week on campus 13 years ago following the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The group's performance genre is dance-drama, which can involve members in double preparation. Everybody has to audition for everything," explains current executive director Valerie Haughton-Bolden, "although our members may

The concerts this weekend will reflect the expressive latitude that blending or alternating between these arts creates. The 18-member company and several guest artists (including an on-stage flutist and drummer) will perform a program of four thematic segments: Africa and early America, eligion, fantasy and nightlife.

WHAT IS the role of a black dance ompany in a predominantly white munity? To entertain, to teach, to present history, to ponder attitudes hese are but general answers to a question that is complex and, for dance, still new. It is only within the last 10 or 15 years that black concert dance in America has been extensively developed as a performing art. Its accurate assessment by the critical eslablishment remains an issue.

As it is currently being written, the history of black dance in America demonstrates the continuity of its African and Caribbean heritage rather than relies on the obsolete notion that American blacks faced a "cultural void" during and after the slave era. But it is one thing to research and recover steps of the juba or the cakewalk, and another to understand the extent to which black dance forms have been unfortunately stereotyped primarily by blackface minstrelsy.

From the first time white actor "Jim Crow" Rice performed in blackface around 1820 on into the early 20th century, minstrel shows were the most influential public channel for black dance. Although they gave blacks a place in the entertainment industries of stage and film - think of Bill"Bojangles" Robinson or Snake Hips your heels and go see them

Dance

Tucker - minstrelsy and its black caricature limited the role of the black dancer and the subject materials of her

BLACKS WERE restricted to being considered entertainers rather then serious artists. Even when Asadata Dafora. Pearl Primus and Katherine Dunham first established their pioneering dance consorts in New York (1934-1945), the thematic bases of their performances in spirituals, jazz, plantation life or ethnic African and West Indian materials became prescriptive

Recent developments in black dance represent an expansion beyond stereotypes, restricted themes and a critical tendency to isolate "Negro, dance" as a category. Both Alvin Ailev's American Dance Theater and The Dance Theater of Harlem, directed by Arthur Mitchell, have brought universal values to the black dance stage and shown that black dance art deserves and requires extensive training and discipline.

This is thus a significant challenge to double-standard criticism that once held that blacks' natural talent for dance and rhythm was the sufficient condition for black concert dance, rather than additional elements such as training, choreography or intention.

THE CURRENT arts scene shows that black dance now embraces a wide variety of styles, forms and themes that combine to make even more compelling its reference to black cultural heritage or the black experience in America. In an international context as well, there is a distinct trend towards connecting black dance with as many dance resources" as possible. A fascinating example of this is the Mudra-Afrique school in Dakar, Senegal, founded by Bejart and directed by Senegalaise Germaine Acogny, whose unique training program for African dance students combines African dance and music techniques with classical ballet and modern

Similarly, Black Genesis works in a composite style and intersperses pure dance with dramatic skits. You'll see bare feet, character shoes and ballet slippers in "Encore," and hear a variety of music from Broadway, the Pointer Sisters, Stevie Wonder and Grace Jones. This will be the group's major concert of the year. Kick up

Musical talent returns, Jarreau to give concert

By T. Johnson

Al Jarreau is one smooth guy. His vocal style is similar to a bevy of soulful fusion-slush performers, but it's not so easy to dismiss Jarreau as one might believe. His music, if not particularly innovative, is at the very least pleasant and probably better than that. He has the ability to get a little raw when he likes and his periodic vocal improvisations well serve his view of the voice as an instrument.

Singing originally started as a parttime job for Jarreau. He used the income to make his way through school, holding a degree in psychology from Wisconsin's Ripon College and a master's from the UI After graduating from Iowa, Jarreau moved to San Francisco, where perforning became his major preoccupation. In 1968, he made the big move. He quit his 9-to-5 job in the Bay Area and moved to Los Angeles in search of the

AGAIN HE changed course. This time he headed for Minneapolis to write and think things out. He put together a new band, but it broke up after a couple of jobs. So he headed back to California and his old haunts - the low-paying music showcases around Los Angeles. One night a couple of Warner Brothers executives in the Troubador, while downing the dregs of their last round, noticed that the kid filling time up on the stage while the main act was taking a break had a nice voice and a distinctive style.

The "Overnight Sensation" signed a contract the next day and was in one of those smooth California studios a fortnight later. Perhaps the studios could serve as a metaphor; the controlled lighting and accoustics match very well the sort of slick funk to which Jarreau is drawn.

But Jarreau is entirely his own musician. No label really seems to fit what he does. His brand of music, within the world of poppy jazz vocals, is uniquely personal. He has certainly not peaked as a singer/songwriter, either popularly or artistically.

Oboist Avril gives UI audience enjoyable performance at Clapp

By David Breckbill

To celebrate Hancher Auditorium's 10th season, two recitals by prominent oboists have been planned. The first. featuring Franck Avril, was Wednesday evening in Clapp Recital Hall, with the second to take place Feb. 19 with the great Swiss artist Heinz Holliger. The two recitals provide welcome exposure to an instrument that is infrequently encountered in a solo recital

Some of the reasons for the scarcity of oboe recitals were readily apparent in Avril's program. Three of the works performed, Schumann's three 'Romances," opus 94, Hindemith's 'Sonata for Oboe and Piano' (1938) and Britten's "Metamorphoses after Ovid for Solo Oboe," opus 49 (1951), are staples of the oboe repertoire. These three works, as well as the Poulenc Sonata, are the most substantial pieces of music that a solo oboist can offer.

THE BAROQUE era is a treasure trove of oboe music, but the music is not heard to best advantage with piano accompaniment. Experimental avantgarde compositions for oboe make such great demands on both performers and listeners that such music cannot be expected to make up the bulk of a

Another strike against oboe recitals is the lack of extremes in both quality and volume inherent in the instrument's constitution. The listener's goal is to encounter a performer whose basic tone makes a very pleasing first impression and is, therefore, tolerable over a long period of time.

Fortunately, Avril is an accomplished oboist whose tone is solid, open, pleasing, rich and alluring all at once. His vibrato is fast and narrow so that one can always tell what pitch is being played. Avril has the ability to make very long phrases meaningful; slowmoving, lyrical lines were almost always exquisitely done at Wednesday's recital.

The finger technique was, for the most part, admirable. The lapses tended to show how fine the rest of the playing was.

Avril's musical profile is one of lowkey but genuine elegance. In this he was nicely supported by pianist

Deborah DeWolf Emery, whose playing was subdued and sensitive.

THE OPENING Sonata in G major by Giovanni Sammartini was an example of a piece that sounded tacky when performed with piano accompaniment. Highly polished playing from Avril, complete with an effective change of color for the third movement, could not keep the piece's combination of instruments from sounding like a high school contest performance.

It was a great relief to be rescued by the Schumann, which was actually conceived for piano and oboe. The clear, restrained playing was effective in the first two "Romances," but the third could have stood more fire.

The Hindemith received a fine performance, with some of Avril's most impassioned playing. After intermission, some reed problems marred the "Niobe" and "Bacchus" movements of the Britten, but these and their partners were tellingly, if soberly, pro-

Odds are that when David Jo Hansen howled those words on the opener of the New York Dolls' 1973 debut, he was singing to some imaginary basket case and not anticipating the Dolls' own predicament. By the following year, the situation had become much clearer, reflected in the title of the band's second and final LP. Decked out in uncompromising drag, the Dolls pumped out a mixture of blistering amphetaminecharged rockers (a la the Stooges, the MC5 and even Elephant's Memory), supercharged blues standards ("Pills," "Don't Start Me Talkin") and '50s remakes.

EMPLOYING camp, lots of moxie and a bare minimum of musical competency, the Dolls were clearly (in Nixon's America) "too much, too soon. Though relegated for some time

Matt Trimble, the No. 1 runner on the men's cross-country team, is a realist hen it comes to predicting the Hawks' dances in Saturday's Big Ten cham-nonship at Minnesota.

"You can never tell how well you can run a meet, but we're being realistic," Trime said. "There are obviously some teams e just can't beat, but we'll be going after

The teams Trimble believes Iowa will have trouble with are "really loaded," acording to Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler. Induded in the list are pre-meet favorite disconsin, Indiana and Michigan. The gosiers and the Wolverines tied for the gig Ten title a year ago. Illinois and Minesota will be trying to repeat their 'topexpected to also vie for top honors.

Page 10-The Delly lower-lows City, Iowa-Bridny November 6, 198

IF IOWA'S CONFERENCE competition this season is any indication of its chances Saturday, the meet may turn out to be something undesirable. The Hawks lost to Minnesota, 19-42, and were slapped with a 15-50 defeat by Wisconsin a week ago. Another problem is the rest of the Big Ten field doesn't look that much weaker.

'We can't make predictions that aren't realistic," Wheeler said. "We will have to come up with our best performance to do well, and we'll be shooting for 200 points or less which should give us seventh or eighth place. If something happens to the other teams we may break up from there, but a seventh or eighth place finish is past Michigan State, Ohio State, and Northwestern. But, as Wheeler points out; it's going to take a team effort. "I don't need to put any pressure on them at this point," he said. "Each guy knows what he has to do for us to compete well. We'll have to come up with a good team performance, and a lot of it depends on how well the other teams run.'

The Iowa field will be comprised of Trimble, Mike Diment, Michael Clancy, Jon Betz, and Evan Clarrissimeaux. The five will be the team's designated scorers, and if one of them fails to complete the fivemile race, Dan Evans will be running to fill

This year is seen as a rebuilding year for the Hawks, and Trimble believes that a good showing tomorrow will be difficult, but it will be important for next year.

Since early this week Hassard has been awaiting a clarification on the qualifying rules set up for Saturday's ssociation for Intercollègiate illetics for Women Region VI Divion I meet at the University of Minnsota golf course in Minneapolis, linn. The meet will determine the mams and individuals who will comte in nationals in Pocatello, Idaho,

THE SPLIT IN THE AIAW and the ional Collegiate Athletic Associaon has caused many of the top teams wstray and go with the NCAA. For instance, midwest cross-country rhouses such as Drake, Missouri, Kansas and Kansas State have all left the region to compete in the NCAA. As a result, only three teams will run in the Region VI meet. Iowa, Iowa State, and Minnesota will be the squads racing for the right to travel West to the

The first and second-place teams that come out of the Region VI fete. will automatically qualify their entire eams for the nationals. Added to the malifiers will be 10 individual runners

The unknown part of the ruling is, if one or more of the 10 runners can be substituted for in nationals. This would allow for an injured runner to miss the regional, but run in the nationals. Herein lies the catch, which is giving

"IF THE 10 RUNNERS can be replaced, it would actually mean that everybody who competes in the region will qualify," Hassard said. "And if that's the case, then I won't have to run Nan (Doak) in the regionals, because she's really not physically ready, and let her rest for the nationals."

Doak, Iowa's No. 1 runner this season, continues to be bothered by knee and leg muscle problems. She has not competed for over three weeks.

With the situation as up in the air as it is now, the Hawks will have to forget the 'what-ifs' and look for a strong performance. And, since the number of teams in the region has been cut down, the harriers stand an even greater chance to repeat as Region VI champions. Unfortunately, the teams Iowa will be facing have come out on top in earlier meetings.

"I HOPE THE TEAM gets their act together a little better this week," Hassard said. "They have to start taking more intiative, and design some kind of direction for themselves.'

Iowa, which faltered to an unprecedented eighth-place finish in the Big Ten championships on Oct. 24, has just two more chances to "prove themselves," according to Hassard. "This is octentially the most important meet of the season, since this will qualify people for the nationals," he said. "We don't know enough about the procedures so we really haven't decided upon any goals for the

Ohio State, Wolves again climbing back into the top two spots move towards top

By United Press International

Ohio State and Michigan can take giant strides this Saturday toward making their annual end-of-the-season showdown a contest that again will determine the Big Ten's Rose Bowl representative.

The Buckeyes are alone atop the Big Ten standings with a 4-1 record, onehalf game ahead of Michigan, Illinois

Michigan, 4-2, hosts Illinois while Wisconsin is on the road at Indiana. Wisconsin is still in a strong contending position because it has already defeated the Buckeyes and Wolverines will try to snap a two-game losing streak when it hosts Purdue, while Northwestern will try to avoid a record-setting 29th consecutive defeat when it entertains Michigan State.

Ohio State is coming off a 45-33 shootout over Purdue, while the Gophers were tripped, 34-13, at Minnesota. The Buckeyes, tops in the league in offense with a 30 point per game average, shellacked the Gophers 47-0 at home last year.

"The Purdue game was a fine team victory with all out effort by the football team," said Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce. "We made a few mistakes, but forced a few mistakes. We came out victorious 45-33 and that's a fine accomplishment against a football team which had lost only once previously at home in 22 encounters.'

IN OTHER BIG TEN games, Iowa

Art Schlichter passed the 8,000 yard

terback will team with Tim Spencer and Jim Gayle, No. 2 and 3 respectively in rushing in the league, to pose defensive problems for a Gopher team that has given up 352 yards per game this season.

MICHIGAN WILL TRY to stop the aerial attack of Illinois led by Tony Eason, No. 2 in the conference in pass-

Wolverine Coach Bo Schembechler said the game will revolve around whether Michigan is more successful with its ground attack than Illinois is in the air.

'Each team has had a 400-yard day, three out of every four yards they get is in the air and three of every four of ours is on the ground," Schembechler said. "Whoever does the best job and scores the most points is going to win.' Illinois Coach Mike White, whose team is ineligible for the Rose Bowl, rated the Wolverines as the best team offensively and defensively in the

"They are as good an offensive team as anyone in the conference and nationally," White said. "We have to hope their offense does not spend the afternoon keeping our offense off the field ' Wisconsin, a 52-0 winner over

Northwestern last week, will attempt to keep pace when it travels to Indiana, a club that shut out the Badgers 24-0

The Hoosiers, 2-4, have relied on the passing of Babe Laufenberg.

Fry: Alt will start

Iowa Head Football Coach Hayden Fry announced thursday that John Alt will start at tight end in Saturday's game against Purdue. Both of the Hawkeye tight ends. Alt and Mike Huf-ford, were sidelined with injuries in last week's 24-7 loss to Illinois. "I think that John should be OK by game time." Fry said The Iowa coach said he was confident that "the Hawks are gonna bounce back Saturday. I know we're going to play a good game."

The Purdue defense has been spotty, according to "When they are hot, they have been excepionally good," Fry said, "and they have played ome poor defensive games. They could have either outstanding or an average defensive game."

Fry said the Hawks worked on finalizing their ofasive and defensive game plans in Thursday's ctice. Iowa also spent time working on its kicking ame, a part of the game Fry terms "very imporant" on Saturday.

Hawks at national qualifying tourney

By H. Forrest Woolard

Although the Iowa field hockey team has already played 27 games this year, a whole new season begins Saturday when the Hawkeyes go after their third consecutive national berth.

In the Region VI championship at Grinnell College Saturday, Iowa will play Minnesota for the right to represent the area at the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women championship in Berkeley, Calif. The Hawks have defeated the Gophers twice this season, outscoring Minnesota, 12-1.

"THERE ARE NO SECOND chances," Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said. "It doesn't matter what you've done in the past. It still hangs on one

The Division I Region VI cham-pionship hasn't always been a twoteam event. St. Louis was the 1980 tournament winner, after slipping past Iowa 2-1. The regional champs, however, decided to vie for a berth in the NCAA field hockey tournament this season.

For the first time since collegiate field hockey championships began in 1975, there will be two post-season finales. Besides St. Louis, the NCAA tournament has lured nationally ranked Old Dominion, Massachusetts and Long Beach State away from the AIAW championship.

"I have regrets about anyone going NCAA," Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said. "The NCAA pulled a power

OBVIOUSLY, DAVIDSON, along with numerous other AIAW proponents, are concerned about the NCAA's institution of tournaments for women But Davidson still maintains the AIAW championship "actually has the strongest field."

While the Hawks have lost two of their last three games, Davidson said "the excitement of competition is coming back. I'm hoping we'll peak a second time. I don't know about the team, but I'm up for it," Davidson said about regionals.

The coacn added she is looking for forwards Anne Marie Thomas, Vickie Sax and Ellen Egan "to really put it together Saturday.'

Holmes favored to beat Snipes title defense

PITTSBURGH (UPI) - Renaldo Snipes isn't given much of a chance of disrupting World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes' plans for a March showdown with toprated Gerry Cooney.

He knows it, the Las Vegas oddsmakers know it, and so do most boxing observers. Snipes, however, is the only one who doesn't believe it.

The undefeated Yonkers, N.Y. fighter, ranked eighth by the WBC, takes on the unbeaten Holmes in the nationally televised (ABC 8 p.m.) bout at the Civic Arena Friday night that promoter Don King has entitled "Imminent Danger.'

"MOST CHAMPIONS WENT into their fights as underdogs when they first fought for the title," said Snipes after weighing in at 215-34 pounds Thursday morning. "The underdog label doesn't bother me. I'm used to it. After Friday I'll be champion. I know

After weighing in first at 213-1/4 pounds, Holmes turned to Snipes and told him he would knock him out.

"We'll see Friday," said Snipes with a sneer. "We'll see who gets the easy payday. You got all your flunkies laughing at you now, but they won't be in the ring with you.

a-half pound weight advantage, said, 'That's all right, you'll just make a louder sound when you hit the floor.'

WITH BOTH ENTOURAGES shouting at each other, Holmes declared, "I will remain champion" as he held his WBC title belt over his head before exiting.

Holmes, from Easton, Pa., is 38-0 with 28 knockouts. He has taken on Snipes as a tuneup for his multi-million dollar fight with the hard-punching Cooney, who is expected to be at ringside Friday night. The last time Cooney was at ringside for a Holmes fight, the two almost came to blows after Holmes defended his title against Leon Spinks in June.

Cooney will tune up in December against former heavyweight contender Joe Bugner

Friday night's bout will be Holmes' third title defense this year and 11th since he won the title from Norton on June 9, 1978. In his last fight, he scored a third-round knockout of former heavyweight champion Spinks on June 12. On April 11, he went the distance with Canadian Trevor Berbick, snapping his record-tying knockout string in title defenses at eight.

Lamb finds time to mix volleyball, books

By Melissa Isaacson

Two years ago as a sophomore, Cindy Lamb contemplated giving up volleyball. Today, as a senior approaching the final game of her career. Lamb has no regrets she stuck with the

Her last year at Kennedy Senior High School in Cedar Rapids, Lamb excelled in softball and basketball as well as volleyball. She was named high school All-American in 1977. In 1978, she was selected first team all-state and played in the Iowa High School volleyball All-Star game. She was also chosen Kennedy's Senior Athlete of the Year.

"I GUESS I WAS considered a big gun in high school," Lamb said. "All I had to worry about was hitting the ball lowa's volleyball team travels to Minneapolis, Minn., to compete in the Gopher Invitational Friday and Saturday.

After basketball season was over, she made the decision to pursue volleyball in college. While Lamb observed both the Iowa State and Drake teams, she was leaning towards Northern Iowa and Iowa because of their business curriculum. Newcomers, veterans give gymnasts high hopes

By Steve Batterson

This weekend marks the first major competition for gymnasts around the nation, and the Iowa Hawkeyes are hoping to leave an impression on teams competing at the Wisconsin Open.

"This will be a good opportunity for us to see how we are matching up against other teams," Iowa Coach Tom Dunn said. "We will find out just how ready we are and we'll find out just what we have to do to get us ready for some of the more important meets.

the Oklahoma All-Around Invitational next weekend.

THE HAWKS WILL be slowed somewhat by injuries, but the situation is improving. "We're looking a little better, but we won't be at full strength," Dunn said. All-arounder Kelly Crumley aggravated an elbow injury prior to Sunday's intrasquad meet, and Dunn said that "we'll have to wait and see how things are at the end of the week, but he will be able to seeing limited action. Due to a knee injury, Brett Garland will only be competing in the pommel horse, and Aaron BreMiller, who has a broken thumb, will have to miss the parallel bars and the pommel horse competition.

Floor exercise specialist Ken Cajet suffered a high ankle sprain last week in a workout and is listed as "questionable" for the meet, although he has been working out.

BECAUSE THE EVENT is an open meet, no team scores will be kept and as possible in each event. The top eight finishers in each event will advance to Sunday afternoon's finals.

"We will try to get everybody in that we can so they can get some experience," Dunn said. "The compulsories will be a key for us. This year the NCAA has set a minimum score of 52 in the compulsories for an allarounder to be eligible to compete in the national meet, and we have several guys who would like to get that out of

Dunn believes that many of the

they can hit their routines. He is looking for Ali Tavakoli, Paul Goedecke and Crumley, if he is healthy, to do well in the all-around. Tavakoli, a senior, won the event in Sunday's intrasquad meet with a 51.7, taking first in the parallel bars and the horizontal

"HE'S HAD A frustrating fall with injuries," Dunn said of Tavakoli. "But considering that he hasn't had much training time due to his ankle and hand injuries, he's been making some great matter of hitting them.'

Pommel horse specialists Joe Leo and Bob Leverence and still rings specialist Terry Heffron all have "an excellent chance of making the finals," according to Dunn. He lists Jon McCollum and Crumley in the floor exercise, McCollum, Crumley and Kyle Shanton in the vault and Tim Magee in the parallel bars as having the best chances of making the finals. "On the horizontal bar, it just is a matter of execution at this point," Dunn said. "They all have good routines, it's just a

Top-rated Panthers hope to avoid jinx

By United Press International

Pittsburgh's newly No. 1 ranked Panthers, the sixth team to hold college football's hot potato this season, are expected to lead a parade of top-rated teams into the winner's circle this Opposing unranked and apparently out-classed Rutgers, Pittsburgh will be on view at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., and should have no trouble cruising to their eighth straight victory of the season.

PITTSBURGH IS ON a collision course with Penn State, one of the five previous teams to hold the No. 1 rating this season, for a season-ending confrontation shaping up as college football's game of the year.

So far, the "cross" of being No. 1 is being carried rather easily by Coach Jackie Sherrill and his Pitt Panthers. Remember, of course, this was also true of Michigan, Notre Dame. Southern California, Texas and Penn State - before they were bumped off the top perch.

Rutgers, considered a young, resourceful team that is dangerous on offense, has beaten Syracuse, Colgate, Virginia, Cornell and Army and lost to Cincinnati, Temple and Alabama. Its loss to Alabama - a team probably approximately competitive with Pitt -

PENN STATE, RANKED sixth after its upset by Miami (Fla.) last week, is expected to get back on the winning track against North Carolina State. The other teams ranked among the top 10 also are favored.

Clemson, third-ranked and bidding for its first unbeaten season in 33 years, is 8-0 entering Saturday's Atlantic Coast conference game against No. 9 North Carolina, 7-1, at Chapel Hill, N.C. Should Pittsburgh falter, Clemson, with a victory over the highlyregarded Tar Heels, stand a good chance to move past No. 2 Southern California and into the No. 1 rating.

Clemson is coming off an 82-24 triumph over Wake Forest. The Tigers are led by quarterback Homer Jordan, who has accumulated 1,063 yards passing and 388 yards rushing. Tailback Cliff Austin is the leading rusher with 642 yards and Chuck McSwain has 438 vards for the Tigers - rated 10th in the nation in rushing.

The offense averages 32 points a game - ninth in the nation - while the defense ranks third in scoring defense

- allowing 7.75 points per game. In other top games around the country, it will be Southern California vs. California, Georgia vs. Florida and Texas vs. Houston,

Audibles easier said than done

"Blue 39, blue 39! Ready! Hut, hut!" The next time you're at a football game, listen very carefully to what the uarterback is yelling to his team-lates. If the quarterback calls out a series of numbers and colors, and if some of the offensive personnel are readjusting their positioning, then you have probably witnessed a play being called right before the snap.

In football terms, the calling or changing of a play by means of verbal mbols at the line of scrimmage is called an "audible." Since the quarterback calls out the signals, it is he who decides whether or not an audible should be called.

"WE USE OUR own discretion," Iowa quarterback Gordy Bohannon said. "Sometimes we get a play that's called that we can't run because they (defense) have some kind of stunt up there (line of scrimmage), and that's

But at the same time, if we have a good play called, we have the oppormity to check out of it whenever we feel like (the situation calls for) it." Bohannon said audibles for the Iowa offense are based on color codes. The offensive personnel know in advance what colors denote an audible. "We have 'live' colors, and whatever number we say after that is the live (actual) play," he said.

The defense is always paying attention to what colors are being used. So to confuse the defense, Bohannon said the Hawks will use "dead" colors, meaning an audible is not on. "They just don't know whether it's a live or dummy audible," he said. "And even if they did know, they wouldn't know what the colors mean.

"SOME COLORS MEAN pass, some colors mean run, some colors mean play-action. There's different colors Audibles are not restricted to certain plays. They can be called in any kind of situation during any moment of any game. "It's hard to say when you're going to audiblize or not," Bohannon said. "It just depends on the (opposing)

Bowl game at stake for Hawkeyes

Iowa and Purdue, each needing a win to keep bowl hopes alive, square off in a crucial Big Ten conference battle in Kinnick Stadium Saturday at 1:05 p.m.

The Boilermakers are led by sophomore quarterback Scott Campbell, who last weekend threw 31 completions for 516 yards against conference leader Ohio State. Nonetheless, Purdue lost the game, 45-33.

Iowa's cold offense is the opposite of Purdue's. The Hawkeyes have been able to score only 26 points the past three weekends. Thus, Iowa has won only one of its last three games.

This fact has Iowa Head Football Coach Hayden Fry worried. "My assessment of Purdue is if we don't score a lot of points, we don't stand a chance to win," Fry said. "We've got problems. They have a highly explosive

we're still capable of playing very fine

DESPITE THE low point production, oddsmakers have established the Hawkeyes as 31/2-point favorites. That's because Iowa's defense has been among the strongest in the nation

"We're going to play against a strong and physical defense," Young said. "Certainly they have improved their pass defense from a year ago. They held Illinois' quarterback (Tony Eason) under 300 yards passing.

Eason had passed for over 300 yards in the season's first five games.

"It's like we thought at the beginning of the year," Fry said. "We've got a "We're really concerned about our game. We knew we would have trouble hell of a defense, a hell of a kicking

BOWL SCOUTS apparently think both teams can win some games. Representatives from the Sun and Peach bowls will watch the game. But Fry worries about such pressure on his team - even the pressure of winning one more game, which would break a string of 19 consecutive non-winning

"The media has everybody expecting us to win," Fry said. "We're bruised Iowa's films of the Boilermakers' and battered. The best I can do as a defense also has Fry confused. "Purcoach is not put any merit or value due has the most unorthodox defense on winning that next game."

Boilermaker oversteps adversity

People may confuse Tim Clark of Purdue with former professional place-kicker Tom Dempsey. But the man on the field kicking for the Boiler-makers is sophomore Tim Clark, who like Dempsey, has the use of only half his right foot.

only 18 months old. "It's part of my life, I've adjusted to it," Clark said. At the age of four, Clark started kicking a football with his two brothers in the back yard of their Ligonier, Pa., home. Telephone wires provided the goal posts when the trio held contests to see who could kick from the farthest

WHEN JUNIOR HIGH football began, Clark got the go ahead from his parents to try out for the team.
Although he was limited to kickoffs in eighth grade, he eventually took over the extra point and field goal duties in

As a prep, Clark was the first placekicker ever named to the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association "Big 33" coaches all-star squad. He was named "MVP-of-the-Week" by the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette after kicking a Pennsylvania record four field goals in a single game.

Not bad for a kid who started kicking with a cut-off tennis shoe on his right foot. When he arrived at Purdue, a special shoe was designed for Clark, which resembled an "enlarged baby shoe." Walking onto the field for the first time, his teammates kidded him about the shoe asking when he was "go-ing to grow into it."

CLARK SILENCED HIS an-

kicking duties after senior Rick Anderson got off to a bad start earlier this season. He has held onto the position by consistently hitting field goals of over 30 yards. His longest, a 57-yarder, was nullified due to an offside penalty.

Since his first start this season, Clark has made 11 extra points and five field goals. One of his missed field goals came when the ball fell off the tee. Nonetheless, Clark takes the blame for the missed kick.

Not one to sit back and let things happen by chance, Clark spent the summer improving his kicking skills. "My father and I would go out three times a week and I'd kick about 200 footballs," Clark said. "Dad would set the ball down like my holder so I could work on Football coaches at Purdue used to walk through Mackey Arena and joke with Roosevelt Barnes, a senior reserve on the Boilermaker basketball squad. Barnes would joke back, saying he was coming out for football.

This fall, Barnes still sees the coaches. But no longer does he talk to them as they stroll by inside Mackey. Instead, Barnes communicates with them on the field, wearing a helmet and pads, ushering in defensive sets on every other play as an outside linebacker.

"The first game I started was the Northwestern game," Barnes said. "Ever since the Minnesota game, I've been alternating with the other outside

The 6-foot-3-inch, 200-pounder knew what he was getting into when he stepped on to a Big Ten gridiron. But Barnes is holding up well for a newcomer. He has already been named United Press International's Midwest Defensive Player-of-the-Week for his efforts against Illinois.

Although this is his first attempt at college football, don't get the idea that Barnes is a rookie.

At Wayne High School, in Fort Wayne, Ind., Barnes played both ways as the starting inside linebacker on defense and tailback on offense. His prep career was cut short, however, due to an ankle injury that occurred just four plays into his senior season.

Barnes credits his athletic ability to training. "I think you have to train differently for each sport," he said. "It all takes the same amount of energy, but basketball is more running and

Iowa City's population nearly dou-bles on days of home football games, and the influx of people causes restaurants and bars in the area to make special preparations for the overflow of fans.

HORA ALSO THINKS tailgating takes a little income away from all businesses. "People are very conscious about the economy and they try to save money any way they can.

Burger Palace has lost some of their business due to the fact that Iowa games have started earlier over the last few years. "When the games used to start later in the afternoon we would have more people for lunch," said Burger Palace spokesman John Stasi. We are located a good distance from Kinnick Stadium and the earlier starting times have made it nearly impossible for our customers to eat lunch and still make it to the stadium in time for the start of the game."

"We serve our customers on a first come first serve basis " said Power Company Manager John Fisher. "We have a large amount of fans from the visiting schools come in after the games but we still have a good amount of regular Hawkeye supporters that are here after every home game."

A Saturday with Hawkeye football changes the pattern of many Iowa City businesses. If Iowa stops Purdue Saturday, the cash registers will likely ring a little louder and longer.

Iowa fans attending the 1957 Rose Bowl game might not have loaded their covered wagons and crossed the rugged Rockies on their way to the West Coast, but they headed there in masses to root the Hawkeyes on to what turned out to be a 35-19 win over Oregon State.

Francis "Buzz" Graham, then UI ticket manager. remembers the ticket rush. "When we went out the first time, we just had people send in their money if they wanted a ticket." Graham said. "There was no

"We learned our lesson. The next time, we told people not to order them unless they received an application. That first time we must have sent back close to $10,000 in ticket applications.

GRAHAM SAID TIME was the biggest problem in handling the tickets. "It was just more than we were able to handle at the time," he said. "We weren't quite ready for it. We just went through and worked nights. Saturdays and Sundays until we got through the applications. I still don't know how we got

We had to have our whole office moved to Pasadena in three weeks, and students and faculty. who got their tickets for half price, had to pick them up in California. That prevented them from selling them to anybody.

"After we got to California, we found out that Oregon State wasn't able to sell all of their tickets, and they offered us 5,000 of them. We didn't have time to go back and set up a priority system and that created some dissatisfaction. We just didn't have time to organize it well, and we didn't want to turn down the offer for the extra tickets since we had so many people who wanted to see the game.

Graham said that although "it was a great thrill to go to Pasadena twice, I can see why other ticket managers around the league might not want to go every year. For us it hit us right at the time when we started selling our season basketball tickets and that didn't help us out any either.

STUDENTS WERE OFFERED a package deal by the UI Student Council that would cost only $160 for a round trip on the "Herky Special" trains, set up to take the students to California. Included in the deal was a round trip train ticket, a hotel room in Los

Boilermakers' jinx reaches 20

They call it the jinx.

It's no secret that Iowa's football team has had little success against the Boilermakers of Purdue. Since 1960. the Hawkeyes have beaten the Boiler-

In those 20 years. Purdue has dominated the Hawks behind such quarterbacks as Bob Griese, Mike Phipps, Gary Danielson and Mark Herrmann. In some of those games over that span, however, Iowa has played the Boilermakers right down to the wire before losing.

BUT EVERYTHING FROM controversial endings, to blown assignments, to late Purdue heroics have kept the jinx going for 20 years. Here is a brief review of the Hawks' last win over Purdue and some of the close battles the two teams have had over the

The last time Iowa beat Purdue was Oct. 22, 1960. The Hawks were 4-0 and ranked No. 2 in the nation, and Purdue was ranked 10th going into the game. It was homecoming in Iowa City, and the Hawks fielded a contending team under Head Coach Forest Evashevski.

The Hawks won, 21-14, but it was no easy contest. Iowa got off to a seemingly insurmountable 21-0 lead. but had to hold off a late Purdue comeback to notch the Hawks' fifth win of

The turning point of the game was an 80-yard fumble return by Iowa's Dayton Perry just before half time, giving Iowa a 14-0 lead. Purdue had marched the ball down to the Iowa 16yard line with one minute to go in the half. Purdue quarterback Bernie Allen fumbled, as Perry picked it up on the 20 and galloped 80 yards for the score.

EVASHEVSKI CALLED THAT play the turning point of the game as Iowa celebrated a sweet homecoming. Little did Iowa football fans know what was in store for them in the years to come.

Instead, Purdue prevailed, 19-14, as Iowa committed seven turnovers five fumbles and two interceptions. The turnovers proved costly to the Hawks because both interceptions led to Purdue scores, and four of the fumbles occured in Purdue territory.

THE GRIESE-SNOOK match-up ppened again the very next year, as ese kicked as well as threw Purdue to a 17-14 win over the Hawks, spoiling Griese doubled as Purdue's kicker and quarterback during his four years there. In the 1965 game, he kicked a 19yard field goal late in the fourth quarter to give the Boilermakers a 17-14 win. Iowa had now lost five straight to the team from West Lafayette, Ind.

The most controversial game in the Iowa-Purdue match-up occured on Nov. 15, 1975, when Purdue beat the Hawks, 19-18, on the last play of the game. To this day. Iowa players, coaches, and fans at that game insist and the Hawks clinging to an 18-13 lead, Purdue had first-and-goal on the Hawks' seven-yard line. Two plays later it was third and goal on the Hawks' one-foot line. The Boilermakers had no time outs with 32 seconds left. Purdue called two plays in the hud-dle. On the first play Iowa stopped the

The 1979 game was Iowa's last legitimate chance to beat the Boilermakers since that '75 game. Once again, the Hawks lost, 20-14, when Iowa was victimized by a blown assignment on fourth down play late in the game.

Iowa, needing a touchdown and the extra point to win, drove the ball to the Purdue 21-yard line late in the fourth quarter. There the Hawks faced a fourth down and six situation. Head Coach Hayden Fry called for wide receiver Brad Reid to do a square out seven yards down the field to get the

There was confusion in the huddle. Instead of doing a square out, Reid did a fly pattern to the end zone. Quarterback Phil Suess threw the ball to him. but it was deflected away by safety Wayne Smith.

The mix-up in the huddle cost the Hawks a chance to continue the drive. Suess said later that he should have shaken off Reid and thrown the ball to Mike Brady, who was wide open seven vards down the field.

A lot has happened to the Hawks in their past rivalry with Purdue. So far

Purdue's trainer a 'Hawk Hater'

School rivalry is a funny concept. Just the mention of an old rival can turn grown men into little boys just like that.

Take Iowa State graduate Denny "Hawkeye Hater" Miller, now the head trainer at Purdue. Miller is recognized on page six of the Purdue football press guide by a caricature of him holding a Hawk by the neck in one hand, while his other hand is busy winding adhesive tape around its

If a picture like that was in the Iowa football press guide, only with a pathetic-looking Cyclone in place of the Hawk, Iowa fans would no doubt give it a good chuckle. But, put "Hawkeye Hater" in the middle of anyone's name and there is going to be some curiosity about who this character really is.

Since Miller wouldn't talk about his claim to fame as a "Hawkeye Hater." the next logical thing was to get in touch with friends, relatives, colleagues and even casual acquaintances. It somewhat resembled an FBI

He received a master's degree from Syracuse and completed a physical-therapy curriculum at the University of Pennsylvania. He also served as trainer at West Point with Ed Crowley. Iowa's head trainer and Crowley's assistant, John Streif. In 1977. wish I could hate Purdue as much as he hates Iowa." Being a Purdue graduate. however, it makes it rather difficult. Paul Jensen, former Purdue assistant sports information director and now sports information director at Arizona State, is said to be behind the press guide drawing. "Denny is probably my best friend and it's more of a joke than anything else," he said. "But I'll tell you this, he's not a Hawkeye fan. Anytime I want to get him mad, I say nice things about the University of Iowa. Denny's very proud of his home state which he refers o as the Cyclone state."

Tim Lowe, a business professor at Purdue, lives across the street from Miller and is a fellow Iowa State graduate. During this year's Iowa-Iowa State game, the two got together and listened to the game on the radio, which was piped through the phone by a family member in Iowa, and listened via the Lowe's stereo system. The years ago, Denny was required to sing Iowa-Purdue game is so important to the Indiana fight song while walking up Miller each year that, four years ago Happy Hollow Hill (a West Lafayette after the Boilermaker win, former landmark). He still hasn't paid up.

Dr. Bill Combs, Boilermaker team physician said: "Denny likes to see Iowa get beat, but he doesn't hate them half as much as he says he does."

Dr. Gary Prah, assistant team physician, compared the Iowa-Iowa State rivalry to Purdue and Indiana. "Denny hating Iowa is just like we hate the Hoosiers. Every game is important, but we all have our pet likes and dislikes. First and foremost however, Denny is a professional and one of the finest trainers in the country so he's allowed to have any idiosyncrasies he wants as long as he doesn't put something in Iowa's drinking water. Every year, with a little gleam in his eve. Denny says to me, 'There's only one thing better than beating Notre Dame and Indiana, it's beating Iowa.'
