Senate delays stopgap measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leaders, hoping to avert a presidential veto by proposing to cut an additional $3.6 billion from a stopgap funding bill needed to keep the government running, delayed action Thursday as they tried to gather the necessary votes.

As a result, the Senate met and worked into the night on the bill designed to keep the government operating today past midnight. Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said he would offer the proposal as an amendment to the $417.4 billion spending bill that President Reagan has threatened to veto for being too costly.

"We're trying to get a bill the president can sign," Baker told reporters. ALTHOUGH BAKER predicted his amendment would pass the Senate, sources said prospects deteriorated throughout the day as the Republican leader had problems holding his party's support. Baker, aided by White House lobbying efforts, then turned to some Democratic senators, hoping to persuade them to back the amendment and assure its passage.

"We won't bring it up unless we are certain it will pass," an aide to Baker said. Without the money-saving amendment, the stopgap funding bill was sure to be vetoed by the president, he said, forcing the government to shut down today at midnight.

THE REPUBLICAN PROPOSAL is only slightly different from a measure the House rejected Monday that called for $3.7 billion — or 5 percent — in domestic spending cuts. The measure, if approved by the Senate, would then go to a House-Senate conference committee, which would work out the differences between the Senate and House versions.

Meanwhile, Reagan began "contingency planning" for shutting down government operations if Congress fails to pass a bill he finds acceptable. Under federal regulations, Reagan must put contingency plans in place to make sure vital government services in health, safety and defense continue to operate in case of a funding cutoff.

Congress has sent Reagan only one of its 13 fiscal 1982 appropriations bills, a measure providing $557.1 million in funding for the District of Columbia.

Hughes to run if found eligible

Former governor and U.S. Senator Harold Hughes said Thursday "I'll be a candidate" for governor — if the courts agree the Democrat is still an Iowan and eligible to run in the 1982 elections.

But Democratic supporters at the UI and in Iowa City said Thursday night that if Hughes can surmount the residency question, he will have a good chance for the position against Republican Gov. Robert D. Ray.

This story was written by DI staff writer Mary Schuver and United Press International.

Hughes told reporters at a hastily called news conference that the "serious" question was discovered earlier in the day by a staff member on the exploratory committee.

The state constitution requires a candidate for governor to be a resident of the state for two years before the date of the election.

Hughes, 69, was governor from 1963-1969 and served one term in the Senate, and has been active in religious work on the East Coast since his Senate term expired in 1974.

HE RETURNED to Iowa early this year to work for a real estate firm, touching off speculation about a return to politics. He allowed formation of the exploratory committee a few weeks ago.

Ray, elected governor in 1968, has not announced his plans.

Hughes generally shied away from questions about residency, saying it was a complex issue. He said he voted in Maryland in the 1980 presidential election and has been a registered voter in Iowa since May, when he purchased a house in the Des Moines area.

The residency question complicates planning for other Democrats because of the approaching elections. Nominating petitions for state offices must be filed between March 15 and April 2. The primary election is June 8.

Former U.S. attorney Roxanne Conlin, one of several Democrats interested in running for governor, said Hughes' problem casts "an enormous shadow."

UN BOWL OFFICIALS tried to get on the negotiations, but were not the choice of either conference. We'd like to have Iowa." at the Sun Bowl has now is a Alabama-Houston match-up. Iowa's cross-state rival, Iowa State, go to the Independence Bowl in New Orleans, La., if it defeats Oklahoma State. If not, the Cowboys will earn the right to challenge Texas A&M.

Missouri has decided to take a Tangerine Bowl berth and will face either Mississippi. And Wisconsin will face Tennessee in the Garden State Bowl.

UI officials are making plans for a bowl trip. The UI Alumni Association will sponsor a tour to whichever bowl Hawkeyes compete in. Final plans won't be known until next week. The UI Student Senate is also planning a bowl trip, but final plans won't be known until Monday.

Stones fans heed quick concert tips

By T. Johnson
Staff Writer

So much to say and so little time; here are quicky lessons in how to survive tonight's Rolling Stones concert.

1) Drive carefully. The roads between Cedar Rapids and Waterloo/Cedar Falls are narrow, host too much truck traffic and are heavily rutted. Buckle up and stay within the speed limits if for no other reason than one ambitious state trooper could make a year's quota of OMOVUI arrests in a couple of hours, particularly after the concert.

2) Whatever chemical sacraments you may take with you — be they booze or things more exotic — take only enough to get you through the concert. The only thing worse than getting busted for drunk driving is getting busted for drunk driving and possession of a controlled substance. Every spare cop in Iowa is going to be hanging around Cedar Falls and Waterloo and it will be open season on anyone who messes up.

3) Preferably, everyone should make arrangements to stay in Cedar Falls. It would be much better driving home at 9 a.m. with a hangover than driving into a tree at midnight with a good buzz on.

4) Listen to KUNI, 91 on your FM dial, on the way up. "Iowa P.M." and "Nationtime," the two regular KUNI evening shows, have been pre-empted for special coverage of parking, traffic, weather and other hassles involved in a concert of this size. KUNI's studios are right across from the UNI-Dome and the whole staff is going to be running itself ragged, so if anyone knows anything it'll be KUNI. And they'll be playing solid rock, too. If you don't have an FM radio in your car, beg, borrow or steal a portable to take with you.

5) Take the map appearing in The Daily Iowan today with you. As KUNI fills you in on where to park, you can look at the map and plan your route. Parking is going to be a real problem because much of the UNI-Dome's usual space is being dug up for some sort of drainage project. It happens to every college town.

6) Carpool. It's amazing how many people drive to something like this two to a car. It'll ease parking, gas will be cheaper and there will be more to talk about on the way up and back if there highways. Traveler's advisories were issued for most of the state except the extreme northwest.

THE CONDITIONS were expected to ease by this morning as snow diminishes to flurries and winds subside.

The state's climatologist, Paul Waite, said the weather was a sign of things to come.

"We're in a weather regime — that means weather in which moisture levels will be higher than what we've gone through in the past year or so."

Waite forecasts 30-40 inches of snow will fall in the Hawkeye state this winter — well above the 32-inch average snowfall amount. He also predicts temperatures during the three months will dip 5 degrees below the 22-degree average from December through February.

IOWANS MAY HAVE been spoiled by last year's "Kansas" winter, which averaged temperatures about 4 degrees above normal and only 15.2 inches of snow during four major storms, Waite said. Last year's snowfall amount was the third lowest recorded in Iowa, he said.

"This is getting us pretty much back on schedule," he said. "It's quite a shock, of course, to come back to the reality of this kind of weather."

He said Thursday's storm, which occurred about six days before the average date for the initial measurable snowfall, officially "launches us into the throes of winter conditions."

Although the snow was falling Thursday evening, it wasn't staying very long, as this time exposure taken from the Clinton Street parking ramp shows.

First snow sign of things to come

The first blast of what the state climatologist says will be a severe winter moved into the state late Thursday as the Iowa City and Cedar Rapids areas received about one-half inch to one inch of snow.

And in preparing for the winter season, Iowa City and Johnson County street and maintenance authorities said Thursday night they are ready for any emergency situations that may develop on the roads.

The storm dumped one to three inches of snow over much of the state and combined with strong northerly winds to cause drifting snow on many

Hawkeyes foresee invitation to bowl

By Mark Ballard
Staff Writer

It would be an understatement to say that Iowa has enjoyed its best football season in more than 20 years.

In fact, the 1981 Hawkeyes could very possibly be the UI's finest grid squad since the glory days of Forest Evashevski and his Rose Bowl victories in 1957 and 1959.

Ah, the Rose Bowl, the granddaddy of all post season college bowl games. Played on New Year's Day, it rings in the new year in the highest of fashion. If Lady Luck is on the Hawks' side when they face a hungry Michigan State ball club Saturday, Iowa fans can rejoice in the streets and prepare for warmer climates.

The smell of roses and the warm Pasadena sun may greet the Hawks — but only if Ohio State upsets Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich. Everyone should realize by now the difficulty of that task. Michigan is an eight-point favorite. If the Wolverines win, look for Iowa to be headed for Memphis, Tenn., and the Liberty Bowl.

Even if the Hawks should lose on Saturday, a bid for the Liberty Bowl seems likely. Unless the Rose Bowl bid comes through, the Hawks will face the Midshipmen from Navy Dec. 30.

For Saturday's game, Kinnick Stadium is once again expected to be filled to the brim. Among the 58,800 Iowa fans will be 1,200 Michigan State supporters determined to see their 5-5 team come away with a winning season. But there are also other factors which may motivate the Spartans' wish to conquer the Hawks.

"Naturally our first priority is to have a winning season," Mike Pearson, Michigan State's assistant sports information director said Thursday. "We also would like to play the spoiler role. We're still in contention for a bowl bid ourselves. We've had a strong finish and we've been winning convincingly."

The Spartans have not appeared in a bowl game in 15 years. Pearson said they are still in contention for the Garden State Bowl and the Hall of Fame Bowl.

Iowa fans can also look forward to the half-time show presented by the Hawkeye Marching Band. Morgan Jones, director of the band, said that the band is planning a tribute to Hayden Fry and the Hawkeyes. "Considering the outstanding year Coach Fry and the team has had, we thought it nice for the fans," Jones said. "The lyrics were based on the football season and will be set to 'White Christmas,' which might be appropriate for Saturday."

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A Protestant paramilitary group Thursday rejected the plan of Rev. Ian Paisley for a one-day general strike to protest IRA terror tactics in favor of "more positive action."

C.R. boy rises from sewer to fame

By Scott Sonner
Staff Writer

Extraordinary? Amazing? Unbelievable? No, the story of how 11-year-old Steve Schmitz of Cedar Rapids escaped death by dog-paddling through the 24-inch storm sewer he was sucked into last summer is incredible.

A production crew from the television series "That's Incredible" will arrive in Iowa City this weekend to film a segment on how Schmitz survived the ordeal by remaining calm and keeping his head in an air pocket as he was pulled several hundred feet by the swirling current.

People involved with Schmitz's rescue June 29, said they have been asked by the show's officials to participate in a re-enactment of the rescue attempts.

Connie Schmitz, Steve's mother, said details of the filming will not be worked out until one of the show's segment associate producers contacts her later today. Reenacting the incident may be difficult because a grate now covers the opening where Steve fell into the sewer, she said.

Steve said he is not nervous about being on television but he "doesn't really want to go through it again. If it happened again it would make me feel weird."

Preparations were being made to drag the Iowa River for Schmitz's body when he was discovered clinging to the ladder at a storm sewer intersection near Highway 6 and Rocky Shore Drive in Coralville.

The show's researchers apparently became interested in the story when they received a letter from Steve's mother attributing his survival to an episode they ran on the importance of keeping calm in a drowning situation. A researcher told Schmitz her letter was chosen from the nearly 1,000 letters they receive daily, she said.

Officials of "That's Incredible" in Hollywood, Calif., contacted by The Daily Iowan Thursday declined to comment about specifics of the filming. Information about the filming is not supposed to be released until two weeks before the show is to appear on TV, according to Erin Dittman, a public relations assistant for the show.

Pre-filming publicity "takes away from the show. The story wouldn't be as big a thrill when you see it on the air," she said.

Brad Sedlacek, Steve's cousin who ran to the Siesta Motel for help after Steve fell in, and Steve said their friends don't believe they are going to be on the show.

Sedlacek said he is excited and nervous about being filmed.

He said he sometimes thinks about the incident, but "now that I know he's safe, it doesn't bother me to talk about it. It might be different if he was still down there."

Scott Schmitz, Steve's 16-year-old brother, said at first Steve didn't want to talk about his experience but now he does not mind.

"For about a week he was so spoiled," Scott said, but a fight between the brothers "settled him down."

Connie Schmitz said Scott told his brother he would have to get used to the attention. Most of the attention came from adults who told Steve how lucky he was, she said. She said her sister-in-law bought Steve a T-shirt that read "I survived Iowa City."

Donna Smith, an employee at the Siesta Motel, said the show is "going to try and re-enact it as close as possible. I don't know how they are going to do it, but that's what they said."

Smith said she's excited about being asked to give her version of what happened on TV, but "I got awfully wet that day running around in the water. I hope they don't want me to do that again. I already ruined one pair of tennis shoes."

Sgt. Charles Stubbs of the Coralville Police Department has also been asked to participate in a re-enactment or give an interview. He said he is "kind of excited, but apprehensive."

"I've always been kind of camera shy," he said.

Union, city close meeting on pay raise

By Michael Leon
Staff Writer

Contract talks between the city and most of its employees were closed to the public Thursday, after city negotiators offered workers a 2-percent, across-the-board pay increase.

Negotiators for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees asked for a 14-percent increase Nov. 4. AFSCME represents the nearly 200 city employees who are not firefighters and police officers.

After the city presented its offer at a mandatory public meeting, negotiators for both sides voted to enter closed session. "It's not that it's so secret," said Assistant City Manager Dale Helling, Helling said, however, that closed sessions often ease negotiations.

REPRESENTATIVES for the fire and police unions have turned down city requests for closed negotiations in their contract talks.

Firefighters and the city agreed Wednesday to a tentative contract that calls for a 7.5-percent increase. But police contract talks, also held on Wednesday, were deadlocked after the city offered a 3-percent increase in response to a union proposal for 10.8 percent.

AFSCME, presently in the first year of a two-year contract with the city, is negotiating a wage increase for the contract's second year, which begins July 1. Helling said contract talks will be generally limited to wages because the contract has a "wage re-opener" clause.

THE UNION had also asked for the creation of a wage inequity committee. The committee would have members from the union and city. The committee would be given $30,000 to distribute to persons it ruled were not making enough money.

Helling said the city is willing to discuss the proposal.

"Basically, it's a mechanism that would provide input (on employee classification) instead of arguing with each other," Helling said.

Chief Union Negotiator Phil Nychay said he will take the city proposal to the union members. "There are a lot of questions that will have to be addressed by the union rank and file," he said. "We need to find out how they feel."

Nychay said the city proposal will be presented to the union at a Dec. 8 meeting, when the union will also elect new officers. The next negotiating session is scheduled for Dec. 18, he said.

Jury finds local man guilty of sexual abuse

By Andrea L. Miller

A jury found an Iowa City man guilty Thursday in Johnson County District Court of two counts of second-degree sexual abuse.

According to court records, a jury found Kevin R. Christianson, 27, C 20 Meadowbrook Estates, guilty of committing sex acts with an 8-year-old boy and a 5-year-old girl.

Complaints filed August 7 state that on the evening of July 26, the boy told a sheriff's deputy "he was required to perform certain oral sex acts upon Kevin Roy Christianson." The girl made the same statement.

Sentencing is scheduled for Dec. 30, at 2 p.m.

Also in District Court, two men were charged Thursday with second-degree burglary, and possession of burglar's tools.

According to court records, Curtis H. Arnold, 755 Alpine Road, Marion, Iowa, and Burdell M. Doolin, 1410 7th Ave. S.E., Cedar Rapids, "entered an enclosed area with intent to commit a theft of a locked automobile at Canterbury Inn, Coralville, Iowa."

Courts

Doolin and Arnold were observed by a Coralville police officer Thursday removing property from a parked automobile behind the Canterbury Inn.

The owner of the car told the Coralville police officer that neither Doolin nor Arnold had permission to enter the vehicle and remove property, court records state.

Both men were also charged with possession of burglar's tools. Police officers found pliers and a flashlight on Arnold, and a "thin long wire that could be used to unlock an automobile," in Doolin's possession, court records state.

UI predicts

By Rochelle Bozman
Staff Writer

An early indicator shows freshman enrollment for the 1982 academic year will be about the size as this year's record-breaking freshman class.

High school seniors who take tests indicate which colleges they prefer, and this year's preliminary indicator for early enrollment projections, John Moore, director of Admissions, said Thursday.

The ACT scores from this year and they show that 2,931 students will send their scores to the UI compared with 2,900 who sent their scores last year, Moore said.

Moore said although these percentages are subject to change, he predicts a slight change in the size of the freshman class.

"At this time it looks so much like last year I would predict that we will have the same size of incoming freshman class as we had this year," Moore said.

Students to find bus

The UI will allow a student to sit on the committee searching for a new bus for the College of Business Administration, said Ken Moll, UI vice president for Academic Affairs. The Business Student Senate will meet Dec. 1 to choose the student representative, said business Vice President Ed Koufer.

He said Thursday that the student representative will not be allowed to vote on committee actions, but he will not be excluded from meetings.

Zecher will supervise all of Manhattan's domestic and foreign economic matters.

Koufer, also the Collegiate Actions Council member who represents the associated students of business, said that CAC was concerned that search committee didn't have a student representative. CAC passed resolution this fall endorsing a

UI predicts high fall enrollment

By Rochelle Bozman
Staff Writer

An early indicator shows that freshman enrollment for the 1982-83 academic year will be about the same size as this year's record-breaking freshman class.

High school seniors who take ACT tests indicate which colleges they want to attend, and this serves as a preliminary indicator for early enrollment projections, John Moore, UI director of Admissions, said Thursday.

The ACT scores from this year are in and they show that 2,931 students chose to send their scores to the UI compared with 2,900 who sent their scores to the UI last year, Moore said.

Moore said although these projections are subject to change, he predicts little change in the size of the freshman class.

"At this time it looks so much like last year I would predict that we will have the same size of incoming freshman class as we had this year," Moore said.

MOORE HASTENED to add, however, that the figures are extremely flexible because of possible federal student financial aid cuts.

The administration will have a better picture of the enrollment outlook in December, because about half the applications the UI receives in a year will be processed by then, Moore said.

Ken Moll, UI acting vice president for Academic Affairs, said the administration will continue to watch the figures closely and try to plan accordingly.

But, he said, this is not an easy task. The freshman enrollment this year is 1,253 students more than the outgoing senior class.

Coping with overcrowded classrooms and funding cuts was not easy, UI officials say, and extra students without additional appropriations to pay for them will make the problems more acute.

While studying a long-term enrollment report, members of the state Board of Regents said Wednesday that they must continue to make the state Legislature aware of the problems the additional students cause and remind them that no additional funds have been appropriated to deal with these problems.

HOWARD LASTER, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said the academic administrators will have to take a close look at the figures and be prepared for whatever may happen.

"For two years now we've had to improvise and deal with more students than we've expected," Laster said. "If indeed we do have the same number of freshman students next year — and that's a big if — then we can't simply improvise anymore," Laster said. "We've got to set up a system to handle the students more effectively."

Laster said if indicators next spring still point to climbing enrollment, administrators will be forced to go out on a limb and hire more instructors before they know the actual enrollment.

Laster said the UI will have to depend on the tuition money and hire the instructors earlier this year.

The tuition received from the additional students paid for hiring more instructors late this summer after administrators were more certain of the expected enrollment.

"WE'VE GOT to do more risk-taking even though we don't have the security of knowing we have the enrollment to guarantee we can cover the extra people," Laster said.

"Now having said what the problem is, I guess I don't know how to solve it," Laster said. "This would be the third successive year of crisis."

"I guess we will have deal with it in the same way with a calmer tone," he said.

June Davis, information coordinator for residence services, said the residence halls will handle the extra students the same way they did last year.

"We're just going to do the best we can to get as many freshmen and sophomores in as we can," she said.

UI fraternities to hold forum to elect officers

The UI Interfraternity Council will sponsor a forum to elect 1981-82 executive officers Monday.

According to IFC President Tom Rockwell, sixteen of the UI's eighteen fraternity chapters will each be eligible to cast one vote for each office in what he called "a very competitive election."

Rockwell said an informal period of approximately five minutes will be allowed for each candidate to answer questions following his speech presentation.

Because the men running for office have high qualifications, the candidates will not be required to run only for the office they originally selected.

"For example, we have three candidates running for the presidency, so whoever loses can drop down a position if he wants to," Rockwell said. The procedure is to prevent the election from becoming an "all-or-nothing package deal," and to keep the best qualified people in contention for each office, Rockwell said.

Rockwell encourages everyone to attend. "This would be an excellent opportunity for non-greeks and greeks alike to learn more about the system and the way it operates," he said.

The election will be held at 3:30 p.m. Monday in the Union Harvard and Yale rooms.

Students to be on panel to find business dean

By Jackie Baylor
Staff Writer

The UI will allow a student to serve on the committee searching for a new dean for the College of Business Administration, said Ken Moll, UI acting vice president for Academic Affairs.

The Business Student Senate will meet Dec. 1 to choose the student representative, said business senate Vice President Ed Koufer.

He said Thursday that the student representative will not be allowed to vote on committee actions, but he or she will not be excluded from any meetings.

J. Richard Zecher, former dean of the Business College, left the UI to assume duties as chief economist of the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York City.

Zecher will supervise all of Chase Manhattan's domestic and foreign economic matters.

Koufer, also the Collegiate Associations Council member who represents the associated students of business, said that CAC was concerned that the search committee didn't have a student representative. CAC passed a resolution this fall endorsing a student being placed on the committee.

CAC ARGUED that student representation on the committee was important because the dean of the college makes decisions that will have a great impact on students, Koufer said.

He said CAC had argued that a representative was the best way to get student input to the committee, and that there is a precedent for the placement of students on search committees.

"After presenting our arguments they realized that placing a student on the committee will serve to guarantee that the College of Business Administration will have an effective and responsible dean," Koufer said.

Moll said that there is no precedent for allowing students on search committees. "It's always been the case that students are involved in searches, but not necessarily in a committee. Each committee is an individual situation. Every position receives separate consideration."

Allowing a student on a search committee is "generally based upon the nature of the position — whether it's appropriate," he said.

UI Women's Panhellenic given national award

The UI's Women's Panhellenic Association has been notified that it will receive a National Conference award, according to President Michelle Shopenn.

This is the first time the UI chapter has been awarded commendation by the National Conference.

The recognition of the UI sorority system is for "serving member sororities, promoting leadership, scholarship, high moral and social standards, and for serving the college community," Shopenn said.

Shopenn announced the certificate award at the Women's Panhellenic elections Monday night.

Too many students?

The UI's record high enrollment is having some disturbing consequences. One is that 13 low-income families who receive federal housing subsidies must leave the Mayflower Apartments to make room for more students.

The UI now leases 420 spaces at Mayflower; negotiations for more next year are taking place between the UI and Seldin Development and Management Company of Omaha, Neb., which owns the Mayflower.

Lyle Seydel, Iowa City housing coordinator, said the city received notification that the low-income families will be released from their leases when they find other housing, and that the city cannot take any legal action to extend the leases because the families were given more than the required 30 days' notice.

Seldin Development's motivation for changing its policy of leasing to low-income families is simple: it can make more money from students and the UI. Four students can occupy the space needed by one family.

Such problems will continue as long as enrollment rises. Although enrollment has been expected to decline for a number of years because of demographic trends, it has not. Such factors as a tight job market and the soaring cost of private education have been cited as reasons.

But the UI administration should realize that it can't keep taking in more students than it has facilities for, especially in light of current budget constraints. The issue has to be faced: either the legislature provides more money for building and financial aid or ways will be found to limit future enrollment. The trend is toward limitation by income and not by ability; students may be priced out of the UI with ever higher tuition and board rates; it is preferable to curtail enrollment by raising admission standards.

The UI's failure to cope with enrollment puts an unfair strain not only on UI facilities, but on Iowa City and at least 13 families who must now find new homes.

'Ban the bong' laws

The Iowa Commission on Substance Abuse has joined the movement, present in several other states, to ban the manufacture, sale, possession or advertising of drug paraphernalia, such as bongs, roach clips and coke spoons. Specifically, the commission has recommended the adoption of a law modeled on a Nebraska act that was drafted by the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration and has so far survived court challenges by the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

The commission's concern is understandable. The merchandizing of paraphernalia, once limited to a few specialized outlets in large urban areas or college towns, has expanded into more "respectable" stores in less metropolitan communities. The presence of such utensils in stores frequented by children, who may be attracted by the glamor associated with drug use while unable fully to understand all the ramifications of such activities, does present some danger to those children.

But will banning such items really stem the growth in drug use? Coke spoons are not necessary for cocaine use and bongs and roach clips are not needed to smoke marijuana. Most roach clips are nothing more than alligator clips, which are available by the gross in any hardware store, and cigarette papers are available anywhere that sells tobacco.

Drug paraphernalia is, in the main, only symbolic. Doing away with such symbols will do little to lessen the activities they symbolize, just as banning shot glasses would certainly not stop alcoholism. As hard as the commission's attitude is to oppose, and as admirable as their instincts might be, the "Ban the Bong" movement is simply beside the point.

Getting less for more

The House of Representatives defeated an effort to delete $1.9 billion for the B-1 bomber and $1.9 billion for the MX missile from the record $197.4 billion-plus Pentagon spending bill. The Reagan administration submitted a $200.8 billion plan.

A few years and many billions of dollars from now, (about $38 billion more in the case of the B-1, which is projected to have a useful life of about three years), the United States will have: 100 B-1 bombers; 100 MXs; eight over-budget and under-welded Trident submarines (each will be two and a half years late, current ones are already 35 percent over budget and one-third of the welds proved defective); and some other odds and ends.

The Pentagon, the defense contractors and now the Reagan administration and the House have decided that it is better to have a few fancy toys which cost a lot than to have more toys that are more simply made but more dependable. As it stands now many of the sophisticated planes, such as the F-16, are out of commission one-third of the time. There is money to buy B-1 bombers but money is lacking for repairs and spare parts for weapons now in use.

The result is a few big-ticket items that break down because they are so complicated, because there is no money left over for spare parts for them and because skilled technicians are leaving the services in record numbers. What Americans get is less defense for more money. In fact the only beneficiaries of the system are the contractors who build the big planes, tanks and submarines. Americans end up with fewer and fewer planes, tanks and ships; these cost more and more per item, break down more often and stay out of commission longer. That is not rational defense planning.

Is diversity of opinion scary?

By Gerald Zimmermann

The following is what I presume to be the full transcript of an interview with Bruce Gronbeck, UI professor of Communication and Theater Arts, that was aired October 4, 1981. I understand that the segment aired was part of a longer interview. The topic was "The Information Explosion," and was broadcast on a radio show "Outlook" by station WHBF in Rock Island, Ill. The transcript was supplied by the station.

Interviewer: "Cable and satellite communications herald the 'desmassification of the media.' The public will not have to rely on only the major networks for information but will have hundreds of channels from which to choose. Just what does such diversity of information mean? Dr. Bruce Gronbeck, Professor of Communications at the University of Iowa explains."

Gronbeck: "If we don't watch the Guest opinion

... where the country fragmented into small groups in spite of mass media. The country almost fell apart. It got back together. But now we're in a position if we become divided in terms of the kind and the amount of information we have and the kind of values we're seeing lived out in our television programs and so on, we face the possibility of going through another 60s perhaps."

Interviewer: "And just why is it scary?"

Gronbeck: "You know, this country went through that in one sense in the 60s where we lost unanimity of opinion

... where the country fragmented into small groups in spite of mass media. The country almost fell apart. It got back together. But now we're in a position if we become divided in terms of the kind and the amount of information we have and the kind of values we're seeing lived out in our television programs and so on, we face the possibility of going through another 60s perhaps."

IT MUST BE granted that in such a short interview it is difficult to explain one's opinion fully, especially on such a complex topic. Furthermore, it must be granted that the interview, as aired, may have suffered from selective editing by the radio station. Whatever the case, the message is clear: "...that unanimity of opinion, I think can all but disappear and that's kind of scary. You know, this country went through that in one sense in the 60s where we lost unanimity of opinion..." The logical conclusion to be drawn from Gronbeck's remarks is that diversification of opinion, information and values may be dangerous to our society, and that such diversity may have led to the troubles in the 1960s.

Gronbeck is a professor of communications so I must assume he is aware of what he is communicating. One might presume that his message has been significantly altered by selective editing, but his expertise should have made him sensitive to this possibility and steps should have been taken to avoid it. If these are indeed his views, which I doubt, we should all be aware that a professor of communication sciences is an advocate of unanimity of opinion in the mass media. If these are not his views he needs to take the time to set the listening public straight.

Church schools and state rules

To the editor:

Liz Bird, in her editorial (DI, Nov. 12) correctly quotes the scripture "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." (Matthew 22:21). She fails to point out that Christ was referring to taxes, not children. Our children are God's (Exodus 10:8-12; Deuteronomy 6:6-10; Ephesians 6:4; 1 Corinthians 7:14).

It should also be pointed out that the Suburban Heights Baptist Church of Fairfield cannot comply with the reporting requirement unless it has first been included on the state Department of Public Instruction's list of approved schools (Iowa Code, sections 299.3 and 299.4). In order to be on that list, the church school would have to agree to implement in all the branches taught in the public schools a "multicultural, nonsectarian curriculum" according to a plan approved by the DPI. (Iowa Code, section 257.25, with Iowa Administrative Code, sections 720-3.1(1), 720-3.5(3) and 720-3.5(5).)

Thus, submission to approval by the DPI would mean submission to state authority to approve the doctrinal or ideological content of most of the school curriculum — a church-state "entanglement" problem of major proportions would be created. As cause to withhold approval, teaching the Biblical position on the roles of husband and wife could be called "sexist;" teaching of creationism could be called a violation of the "multicultural" requirement.

The church, by submitting its school under the present regulations, would submit to those regulations and waive its right to object when the DPI decides to drive offensive religious doctrines out of the private schools. So the Suburban Heights Baptist Church is doing the only thing reasonable under the circumstances — unless it wants to become the Suburban Heights Amish Church and qualify for an exemption under section 299.24.

Endorsements

To the editor:
In your endorsement of Kate Dickson (DI, Nov. 2) you stated that her knowledge of city government was "disappointing." It is unfortunate that you did not realize this before the primary. Your endorsement of Dickson in the primary was the reason many voted for her, and provided her margin of victory over liberals who knew much more about city government.
Because there were so many liberals running in the primary, it was obvious that only one would survive to the general election, and this one liberal would win in the general election as the conservatives would split their votes. I

Humanities funding

To the editor:
This refers to an article concerning humanities funding cuts (DI, Nov. 10). While I cannot argue with the reality of what was reported, I wish one further point had been made. Even though current endowment spending is limited to $74 million, humanities faculty should keep in mind other money available to support research, fellowships, curriculum development and other projects.

Voter responsibility

To the editor:
After reading the voter turnout in the city council elections (DI, Nov. 4) I was appalled. The Daily Iowan stated that 25.7 percent of those registered actually voted and only 7.1 percent of the registered students voted. These are lower percentages than the previous year, which seems to suggest voter turnout is on the decline. Although this is not the year of a presidential election, which attracts more voters, the turnout should be greater.

Voting is a constitutional right guaranteed to all U.S. citizens, yet too many people choose not to exercise their right, saying registering is a time-consuming hassle and polling places are too far away. Others feel that their votes wouldn't make a noticeable difference. A person chooses whether to vote, but not voting means not contributing to our representation in government.
Voting is a privilege not available to people in many other countries. People who complain about government and its policies are very often the ones who didn't vote. I hope someday everyone will realize how important their vote is and use this guaranteed constitutional right appropriately.
Tammy Zehr
3322 Burge Hall

Humanities funding

The temptation for faculty not to bother to apply is understandable, but now is a most appropriate time to seek external support. The staff of the National Endowment for the Humanities is concerned that the number of proposals received has dropped. It is aware that if it cannot demonstrate demand for the funds it has available, it will not be in a position to argue for more.

Just this week the House and Senate Conference Committee established an appropriation level of $136 million for the Humanities Endowment and $149 million for the Arts Endowment for FY 1982. A final vote must be taken in the full House and Senate and the President must sign the bill; what action he will take is unknown. However, there is clearly a supportive atmosphere among some groups in government, in spite of official negative comments. It is important that those in humanities disciplines continue to apply for funds. If funds for the humanities are not used for the humanities, they will certainly be used for something else.

Students who try to cancel housing contracts will have a hard time unless they have good reasons as specified in housing contracts according to UI housing officials. Van Oel said contract cancellations are accepted from students leaving school, getting married, mental or physical disability should not live in a residence.

ANOTHER ACCEPTED reason for contract cancellations is if the student is planning on financial aid such as a grant, loan or job that "didn't come through."

U.S. eyes foreign student cuts

By Cal Woods
Staff Writer

The number of foreign students studying in the United States could be severely reduced and give the Soviet Union an even greater advantage in attracting foreign students if a request to reduce funds for a branch of the International Communication Agency is approved by Congress.

Charles Z. Wick, director of the agency, has proposed a 66-percent reduction in the Education and Cultural Affairs branch of his agency to a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee.

The agency provides funds for international research and student exchange programs, including Fulbright-Hays scholarships, the Hubert H. Humphrey Fellowship Program, and the National Committee on U.S.-China Relations.

THE REQUEST to reduce a particular branch's budget is an attempt to maintain other agency programs at full strength, according to a publication of the National Association of Foreign Student Administrators.

Voice of America and other informational organizations are among the groups whose budgets would be left intact.

The requested reduction, if accepted, would mean that one agency branch would shoulder all of the 12-percent budget cuts the Reagan administration has handed the agency.

The publication also charged that the proposed cuts "reverse the intent of legislation which created the International Communication Agency... and usurps congressional authority."

The Soviet Union already has four times as many students enrolled in universities than the United States, and if the proposed cuts are implemented, it would soon have 10 times as many students, according to Wayne Young, a foreign-student adviser with the UI Office of International Education and Services.

THE PROGRAMS in the branch to be cut are a means of personal communication between the United States and developing countries, Young said. "If this country decides that it's important to win the hearts and minds of people in Third World countries, it seems foolish that we would cut back so drastically on funds to bring them in."

Young questioned the wisdom of sparing impersonal radio broadcasts and other informational methods at the expense of educational programs. "I don't know how much attention people pay to radio programs," he said.

Darold Dandy, legislative assistant for Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, said the House subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State and the Judiciary, which is chaired by Smith, approved a 9-percent increase over last year's $88.7-million budget for the agency in September, prior to the Reagan administration's call for additional budget cuts.

Both the House and Senate have pending bills that would allow increased budgets for the agency and would eliminate any need to reduce the agency budget, Dandy said. However, if they are passed, the possibility that Reagan would veto them is still strong, he said.

UI dorm contracts hard to cancel

By Jennifer Shater
Staff Writer

Students who try to cancel their UI housing contracts will have a hard time doing so unless they have good reason, as specified in housing contracts, according to UI housing officials.

"It is a contract and they (students) did have an opportunity on several occasions to know the reasons that are accepted for cancellations," Maggie Van Oel, manager of the UI Housing Assignment Office, said Thursday.

Van Oel said contract cancellations are accepted from students who are leaving school, getting married or have mental or physical disabilities and should not live in a residence hall.

ANOTHER ACCEPTED reason for contract cancellations is if the student was planning on financial assistance such as a grant, loan or job at the UI that "didn't come through," Van Oel said. Van Oel said she listens to the reasons given by each student attempting to cancel a housing contract and decides if the request will be granted. In an extraordinary circumstance, a special exception is sometimes made, she said.

But for students who don't have an accepted excuse or special circumstance, getting out of the contract may be difficult or impossible.

One sophomore interviewed by The Daily Iowan said she has been trying to cancel her housing contract because residence-hall living makes studying difficult.

"I'm a pre-med student, and it's very difficult to live in the dorms," she said. "It's a lot of stress and hassles."

THE STUDENT SAID she thinks canceling a residence hall contract should be easier. "I think the first obligation the university has to me is academic, and if I can't concentrate on studying, going to classes and getting grades, it's worthless for me to be here.

"With living in the dorms, I'm not getting the quality education I think I deserve," she said.

The student said she has talked to Van Oel about her problem, but "she told me she could only let me out for the reasons in the contract."

About 75-100 students try to cancel their housing contracts each semester, but most of those cancellations are not approved.

THE ONLY OPTION students have, after their requests to cancel are denied, is to buy out their contracts by paying 80 percent of the remaining cost of the contract.

George Droll, director of residence services, said contracts are made for an entire academic year because semester contracts would raise the cost of living in a residence hall.

"We could have a higher vacancy rate, and the cost would have to be absorbed by the students living there," Droll said. "Semester contracts would significantly increase the cost for all students who choose to live in a residence hall."

The occupancy rate for the residence halls is up from 99.2 percent at the end of October 1980 to 99.7 percent at the end of October 1981.

Droll attributed the increase to a greater demand for housing in Iowa City.

Van Oel said the number of current vacancies in the residence halls is about 140 to 170 vacancies each for men and women. She said 156 students who have filed applications to move into the halls at mid-year will probably get a space because there is not a large demand for housing at the fall semester's end.

Blown in a barn

Students at the University of Kansas in Lawrence don't put animals in the dairy barn that is part of campus. They blow glass in it.

The dairy barn, purchased by the school in 1963, has been renovated and now serves KU art students as a glass-blowing studio.

But the renovation wasn't without its pitfalls. Students had to wear hardhats last month when the barn's roof was replaced.

"We had nails falling on our heads," said Bob Hedges, a graduate student. "That's what we have the hard hats for."

"We might have had dirt coming down on us, but it was worth any inconvenience we had to suffer." —From The University Daily Kansan.

Phoney phone survey asks sexy questions

Burlington, Vt., officials are investigating complaints about a fraudulent telephone survey purportedly studying human sexuality.

Residents in South Hero and Grand Isle, Vt., say the caller asked personal questions about their sex lives and identified himself as "Jeff Hopkins," a University of Vermont student doing a project on sexuality. But university officials said Wednesday there is no such person on their list of students and no such survey. Moreover, a spokesman said such a research technique would be "ludicrous."

State police, the New England Telephone Co. and university security officials are investigating. —From United Press International.

Police chief seeks more officers; needs $104,000 increase in budget

By Kevin Cook
Staff Writer

The streets of Iowa City are not patrolled as much as they should be due to a shortage of officers, according to Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller.

Miller said Thursday that he is seeking to add six new officers to the police department in the next fiscal year.

Miller said when he became chief in 1975, he had a staff of 50 officers and police received about 24,000 citizen's requests each year.

But there are presently 49 officers, and the police department receives an estimated 40,000 citizen's requests annually, Miller said.

Miller said that Iowa City's officers/resident ratio is the lowest in the state for communities of this size.

The request for the increase is being made to City Manager Neal Berlin, who prepares Iowa City's administrative budget. Miller said that Berlin makes the initial decision on whether to include the budget increase on the final city budget that he submits to the city council for approval.

BERLIN SAID Thursday that he couldn't comment on the likelihood of the increase being granted because he has not yet received a copy of the final request.

Miller said the chances of receiving an increase in the police budget are "zero to none."

"The need for more officers is very apparent," said Miller, "but the department is keenly aware of the city's financial status." Miller estimated the cost of hiring and training six new officers at $104,000. The current police budget is about $1.7 million.

Miller said that the downtown patrol, investigative services and services for youth-related crime are especially understaffed. He added that the department is unable to spend much time working on crime prevention.

Miller said that the police department is "service-oriented" rather than "enforcement-oriented."

THIS MEANS that the majority of cases that police handle are not crimes. Miller said that a lot of police time is spent handling such things as accidents, noise complaints and family fights.

More officers would allow police to better handle the high demand for its resources, he said.

Miller said that UI-related events, such as football games and Hancher Auditorium events, are especially "personnel-draining."

But Miller added that UI students help to deter crime in Iowa City. While students may be involved in a lot of alcohol-related incidents, he said, the presence of students on the city's streets at all hours helps to deter more serious crimes.

The next fiscal year starts July 1, 1982, and Miller said that if the request is approved, the new officers would undergo training and begin duty sometime around January 1983.

Miller said that he has requested additional officers each year since becoming police chief.

Federal aid foul-ups spur reform

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Stung by a study showing up to $452 million was overpaid last year to students who applied for federal grants to the needy, Education Secretary Terrel Bell said Thursday he intends to tighten the program.

"Radical changes are called for if we are to reduce payment errors substantially," Bell said.

The Education Department released preliminary findings of a study of 305 college financial aid offices and 4,000 applicants for Pell grants, under which $2.4 billion was distributed to 2.7 million needy students in the 1980-81 school year.

Projected nationwide, the study found $340 million in overpayments to students due to inaccurate information they supplied, and $112 million in overpayments because of school financial aid officers' miscalculations of grant amounts.

The study also found $51 million in underpayments because of inaccurate information furnished by students, and $97 million in underpayments because of financial aid officers' mistakes.

FEWER THAN 10 percent of Pell grant applications are now verified, mainly by schools themselves.

"The root of the problem is that unlike most other need-based federal programs, we generally accept on faith the information provided by students and parents on student aid applications," Bell said.

He said there is not enough time to begin major reforms before January, when students begin applying for next year's aid, but income verification will be greatly expanded.

The Education Department may also impose verification procedures for other federal need-based student aid programs, including supplemental grants, college work-study and national direct student loans, which are administered by colleges.

Department officials have told student loan officers they will be required to validate incomes for guaranteed loan applications beginning in 1982-83.

Police beat

OMVUI: An Iowa City man has been charged with hit and run and OMVUI in connection with an accident that occurred early Thursday.

According to Iowa City Police records, Scott M. Dolezal, 20, RR 1, was charged after police received a report that a man had witnessed a green Mustang strike another car near the 300 block of South Johnson Street and leave the scene.

Dolezal was charged near the intersection of Linn and Washington streets.

Burglary: Burglars broke into an Oxford, Iowa, tavern and escaped with an undisclosed amount of cigarettes, beer and money, according to Johnson County Sheriff's Department records.

Records show that the Alibi Tavern, Oxford, was burglarized sometime early Thursday after the culprits gained entry to the bar by smashing the front window.

Survival kit a necessity for stranded motorists

Drivers should prepare a blizzard survival kit to carry in their cars at all times, according to the Iowa Department of Public Safety.

The kits should include a snow shovel, two blankets, matches, candles, a flashlight, a coffee can for melting snow and two garbage bags to be used as body wraps. Other items that can be included are extra clothing, non-perishable food, a sack of dry sand, a radio, jumper cables, a tow chain, a hand ax and a CB radio.

Motorists stranded in a winter storm should:

- Stay calm. Work slowly when pushing a vehicle or shoveling snow.
- Stay in the vehicle.
- Keep fresh air circulating. Open a window and run the motor sparingly to prevent carbon monoxide buildup.
- Keep active. Clap hands and move arms and legs vigorously to stay awake and stimulate circulation.
- Turn on the dome light to make the vehicle more visible.
- Be certain someone in the vehicle is awake at all times.

Cutler: F of rights

By Michael Leon
Staff Writer

A unsuccessful former congressional candidate Thursday urged civil groups to form coalitions to the dismantling of hard-won rights programs.

At a public forum sponsored by Iowa City Human Rights Commission Lynn Cutler, who ran against Cooper Evans in 1980, and eight civil rights groups addressed the issue, but promoted the message — unite to resist the administration's attempts to dismantle human rights programs.

Cutler was the forum's keynote speaker; Clara Oleson, a local attorney, was moderator. The panelists included: Robert Morris, president of the Iowa City Chapter of the National Lesbian and Gay Organization; Sharon Van Meter, director of the Disabled Services; Janet Lynne, chairwoman of the Iowa City Chapter of the National Organization of Women; Michael Blake of the People's Union; Maria Martinez of the League of Latin American Citizens; Jeanne Williams of the Senior Commission; and Liz Newbury of the Lesbian Alliance.

Johnson County may assume responsibility for half a mile of road extending from River Heights, Iowa City, to the Iowa River.

The Board of Supervisors approved a proposal made by area residents.

The area affected includes the view Estates and Woodland Hills.

Jerry Zieser, a representative of 67 households in the area, said the board agreed in 1959 to take a section of Stewart Road, providing the road was built to county specifications and let settle for one year.

After Zieser's father completed the road, he returned to the board and the board members decided to assume responsibility for the road.

Residents of the development complained to the supervisors Thursday to re-evaluate the road.

They have kept the road in the condition as the adjoining county said resident Eddie Peters.

"You can't even tell where the county road stops and ours begins," said Peters.

THE ASSESSED property value of the area is around $4.5 million.

"The very serious question is whether he is eligible or not," said Ross. "But if Ray decides to run, the race will be a 'most' race. Both candidates, in the particular areas, were the most successful Iowa has had."

Conlin has been campaigning for governor, but said she also considered running for lieutenant governor if Hughes runs for governor.

Cutler: Fight cuts of rights programs

By Michael Leon
Staff Writer

An unsuccessful former congressional candidate Thursday urged civil rights groups to form coalitions to prevent the dismantling of hard-won human rights programs.

At a public forum sponsored by the Iowa City Human Rights Commission, Lynn Cutler, who ran against Rep. Cooper Evans in 1980, and eight panelists representing various human rights groups addressed different issues, but promoted the same message — unite to resist the Reagan administration's attempts to dismantle human rights programs.

Cutler was the forum's keynote speaker; Clara Oleson, a local attorney, was moderator. The panelists were: Robert Morris, president of the Iowa City Chapter of the NAACP; Sharon Van Meter, director of UI Handicapped Services; Janet Lyness, vice chairwoman of the Iowa City Chapter of the National Organization for Women; Michael Blake of the Gay People's Union; Maria Martinez of the League of Latin American Citizens; Jeanne Williams of the Senior Center Commission; and Liz Newbury of the Lesbian Alliance.

CUTLER SAID the Reagan administration is trying to gut several key human rights programs including affirmative action and minority hiring laws, Title IX, which prohibits sex discrimination in any federally funded educational program or activity, and Section 8, which prevents discrimination in federal housing projects.

The Reagan administration has also proposed eliminating the Labor Department's federal contractor compliance agency. The administration wants to rely on the Justice Department to ensure that contractors on federally funded projects follow affirmative action. But Cutler said these actions are only the "tip of the iceberg."

Reagan recently appointed to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission Clarence Pendleton, who has little administrative experience, Cutler said. Reagan's U.S. Solicitor General Rex Lee, who decides what cases the government will press before the U.S. Supreme Court, wrote a book against the Equal Rights Amendment and has worked against Title IX and affirmative action, she said.

The speakers also assailed the Family Protection Act sponsored by Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa. Newbury said, "Anyone who is not a well-off white male needs to worry about the act."

Cutler urged the audience to respond to a challenge: "I've been in too many of these conferences where people are mad and go home and sit on it. I call on you to get involved, to get active and support everything you've ever believed in."

are four or five in a car. There will also be less chance of falling asleep on the way home.

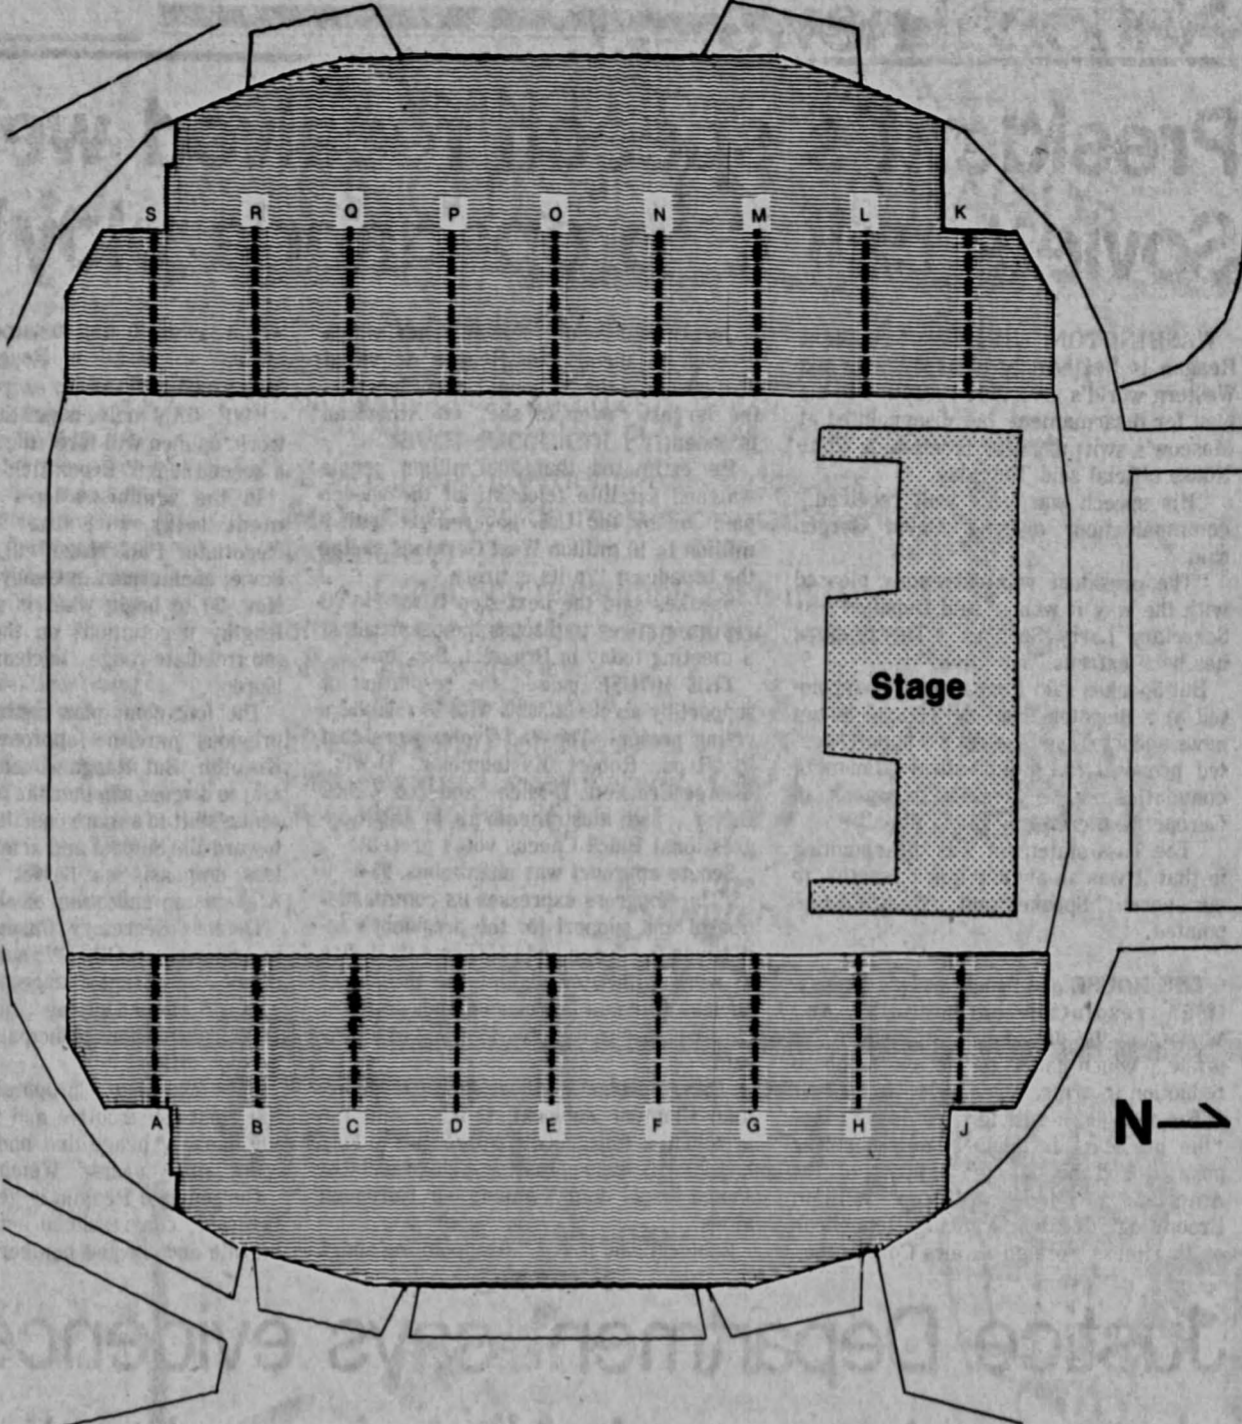

7) Bring some cotton or soft wax or something with which to plug your ears. By all accounts the volume levels have been all but intolerable so far on this tour, and if the roadies and musicians can wear earplugs so can the audience. Even if you're a purist, there's every chance you'll get stuck in front of one of the 60-foot speaker columns and might want to plug at least one ear.

8) Hold on to your ticket stub. Call it a souvenir if you want, but security is going to be so tight you won't be able to get a drink of water without a stub.

9) If you're going to try to buy tickets to the concert at the Dome — and there'll be a lot floating around — you're going to have to do it off the Dome grounds. No one gets in to parking or anything without a ticket. Also, buildings on-campus are being locked up tight at 3 this afternoon, so don't count on using any of UNI's facilities. Also, a lot of the bars in town are closing early out of pure, animal fear.

10) Have fun but, as Dr. Max said for so many years, "Play it safe, take it easy and be careful." Not even the Stones are worth dying for.

This diagram shows the seating arrangement in the Uni-Dome for tonight's Rolling Stones concert in Cedar Falls. Reserved seating is in the bleachers; general admission is on the field. More than 20,000 people are expected to attend the concert.

Residents ask county to maintain area road

By Molly Miller
Staff Writer

Johnson County may assume responsibility for half a mile of road extending from River Heights, north of Iowa City, to the Iowa River if the Board of Supervisors approves a proposal made by area residents.

The area affected includes Riverview Estates and Woodland Heights. Jerry Zieser, a representative of the 67 households in the area, said the board agreed in 1959 to take over the section of Stewart Road, provided that the road was built to county specifications and let settle for one year.

After Zieser's father completed the road, he returned to the board and the new board members decided not to assume responsibility for the road. The senior Zieser let the issue drop.

Residents of the development asked the supervisors Thursday to reconsider taking over the road. They have kept the road in the same condition as the adjoining county road, said resident Eddie Peters.

"You can't even tell where the county road stops and ours begins," Peters said.

THE ASSESSED property value of the area is around $4.5 million and the amount of property taxes the county collects is high enough to justify the cost of taking over the road, he said.

The group is also concerned about their children's safety because school buses cannot travel on the portion of the road that does not belong to the county.

If the federal government decides to start daylight savings time in March, the children would have to walk along the dark road early in the morning, said Mary Buchanan, an area resident.

Assistant County Engineer Gene Bane said the only reservation County Engineer O.J. Gode has is that other developments in the county will want their roads maintained by the county also.

"They'll come in with good reasons, just like these folks, and you're going to find it hard to turn them down," Bane said.

There are between 300 and 400 miles of private road in the county, he said.

"I do not feel that if we pass this, we would have to pass others," said Supervisor Lorada Cilek.

Bane agreed that Stewart Road is a unique situation because of the prior agreement made by the board.

The board deferred action until its formal meeting next Tuesday.

A former faculty member and chairman of the UI College of Medicine's Pharmacology Department died Thursday in Denver, Colo., following a long illness.

about the physiological actions of morphine.

Funeral arrangements are pending at the George L. Gay Funeral Home in Iowa City. Memorial contributions can be made through the UI Foundation to the Dr. Erwin G. Gross Memorial Fund.

Bill Sueppel, an Iowa City member of the Democratic National Committee, said he was pleased the former governor has decided to run despite the hurdle of state residency.

State Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said she was not surprised Hughes decided to run for governor, but she said she felt the residency provision in the Iowa Constitution could be "knocked down" to allow the former governor in the race.

Tom Michels, Johnson County Maintenance Supervisor, said he waits for word from the county sheriff before he spreads sand and salt on the hardtop roads. Michels and his crew take care of more than 980 miles of roads and highways in the county during a snow storm.

Because of low budgets, the county maintenance crews only work on the roads during emergencies and on weekends and holidays, Michels said.

President's speech received well; Soviets call it 'propaganda ploy'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is "extremely pleased" with the Western world's favorable reception to his plan for disarmament, but disappointed at Moscow's swift negative reaction, a White House official said Thursday.

"His speech was very well received," communications director David Gergen said.

"The president was extremely pleased with the way it went," said Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes. "The reaction has been extremely positive."

But Speakes said Reagan was disappointed at a dispatch from the official Soviet news agency Tass labeling his unprecedented proposal for mutual disarmament of conventional and nuclear weapons in Europe "a mere propaganda ploy."

"The Tass statement was disappointing in that it was an awfully quick reaction to our speech," Speakes said. "We are disappointed."

THE HOUSE and Senate passed a bipartisan resolution commending and supporting the president's "initiatives for peace," which called for across-the-board reduction in arms.

The resolution will tell the Soviets that "the president is dealing from a strong position and he has the support of the American people," said Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Gergen said the overseas audience, which listened to the speech Reagan delivered Wednesday at the National Press Club, was the largest "ever to see" an American president.

He estimated that 200 million people watched satellite telecasts of the speech paid for by the U.S. government with 9 million to 10 million West Germans seeing the broadcast "in its entirety."

Speakes said the next step is for NATO representatives to discuss the proposals at a meeting today in Brussels, Belgium.

THE HOUSE passed the resolution of support by a vote of 382-3 with 14 members voting present. The "no" votes were cast by Reps. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., George Crockett, D-Mich., and Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., and most members of the Congressional Black Caucus voted present.

Senate approval was unanimous, 95-0.

"The Congress expresses its commendation of and support for the president's initiatives for peace and reaffirms its desire to work with him so that the threats of nuclear war can be reduced and, perhaps, eliminated in our lifetime," the resolution said.

House Foreign Affairs Committee chairman Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., said the president's "arms control proposals at long last give us the negotiating high ground and should dispel doubts among our European allies."

Zablocki said it was "disappointing and, I would say, disgusting to witness the Soviets' cynical dismissal" of Reagan's proposals as a propaganda ploy.

"WE CAN only hope the pressure of world opinion will force the Soviets to take a second look," Broomfield said.

In the administration's first disarmament talks with the Soviets, U.S. Negotiator Paul Nitze will meet with his Soviet counterpart in Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 30 to begin what is expected to be lengthy negotiations on the reduction of intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

The four-point plan contrasted with his previous hardline approach toward the Kremlin. But Reagan's aides were reluctant to discuss whether the proposals represent a shift to a more conciliatory approach toward the Soviets and arms talks, putting less emphasis on Soviet "behavior" in Afghanistan and other trouble spots.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, interviewed on CBS-TV, said the initiative is not "an abrupt change of position" but part of an underlying "quest for peace (that) has been his principal goal ever since he took office."

"The president's proposals, I think, are the most constructive and far reaching in the quest of peace that has been made in many, many years," Weinberger said.

Gergen said Reagan is "encouraged" by favorable congressional action on the MX missile and the B-1 bomber.

Justice Department says evidence does not warrant Allen investigation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Justice Department lawyers have recommended against naming a special prosecutor to investigate a $1,000 payment by a Japanese magazine to national security adviser Richard Allen for an interview with Nancy Reagan, officials said Thursday.

The officials, who declined to be identified, said lawyers for the department's public integrity section concluded that evidence in the case does not warrant invoking the special prosecutor provisions of the Ethics in Government Act.

But a department official said the preliminary investigation is not yet complete and no recommendation has been sent to Attorney General William French Smith, who is in California until next week.

"When the preliminary investigation is concluded, the results must be reviewed by senior department officials, with a final review by the attorney general," said department spokesman Arthur Brill.

THE INQUIRY centers on the $1,000

Allen accepted Jan. 21 for helping to arrange the interview with the first lady, and his failure to immediately turn the money over to the Treasury.

Allen said he accepted the money because such payments are a custom in Japan and he did not want to embarrass the reporter. He said his secretary put the money in an office safe and he forgot about it until it was discovered there in September.

The White House confirmed Thursday that Nancy Reagan turned over to the National Archives a lacquered stationery box, valued at about $75, that the journalists sent her and wrote them a thank-you note for the gift May 7.

White House Communications Director David Gergen disclosed that presidential counselor Edwin Meese consulted the FBI on the case Nov. 6 and decided no administrative "disciplinary action" should be taken against Allen.

Gergen insisted that Meese's contact with the FBI, apparently with Director William Webster, was "proper and appropriate."

"I think it was only natural, (Meese) having been the one to turn it (the case) over," Gergen said.

BRILL SAID it is premature to comment on whether Smith will seek the appointment of a special prosecutor to determine if Allen violated any law. "We are in the process of gathering the facts," he said.

The ethics law requires Smith to ask a special court to appoint a prosecutor to conduct an independent investigation of any allegations of criminal activities by high federal officials unless the department's preliminary investigation finds the matter "so unsubstantiated that no further investigation or prosecution is warranted."

Gergen took issue with a report by The Washington Post that a number of presidential advisers believe Allen has become a liability and should be dismissed.

"I have not heard anyone in this administration express that view," he said.

Economists grim on GNP switch

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The economy grew over the last quarter instead of shrinking, the government reported Thursday, but instead of signaling an easing of the current slump, the new figures suggest more recession ahead.

The Commerce Department, making a routine revision of the gross national product's activity from July through September, came up with a not-so-routine turnaround — from a minus 0.6 percent setback to a 0.6 percent advance, at an annual rate.

But Robert Ortner, chief department economist, said the switch is not encouraging.

"This way, it looks like we have more recession ahead of us," he said. The revised figure indicates the recession did not really get a grip on the nation in the July-September period, leading to expectations it may last longer.

The report said the value of all goods and services jumped by $4.6 billion more than was apparent in the preliminary measurement on Oct. 21 because of a factor that has serious implications — a backlog of goods that can't be sold.

ALMOST ALL of the additional value in third-quarter GNP, $3.7 billion, was in those inventories that fill warehouses and also add to unemployment. When inventories pile up, cutbacks in production follow.

The next step, according to Ortner and other economists, is "inventory correction," a phrase economists reserve for hard times.

"That does not augur well for coming quarters," Ortner said. "The data that we already have suggests a fairly sharp decline in the fourth quarter."

"What these numbers indicate more than anything else is that there is likely to be higher unemployment ahead," said economist Sandra Shaber of the forecast firm Chase Econometrics.

After revision and seasonal adjustment, the government report said, the third-quarter GNP grew, projected to an annual rate, to $2,956.6 billion — $2.95 trillion.

THURSDAY'S REPORT also said corporate after-tax profits went up half a percent, following a 9.8 percent drop in the second quarter. But Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the increase was not enough.

Unless this trend is reversed, Baldrige said, "the economic well-being of corporate business will be impaired."

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has forecast a GNP drop in the current October-December quarter of 3 to 3.5 percent.

'A Flag for Sunrise' boldly gives new insight into ways of the world

By Ken Harper
Staff Writer

A Flag for Sunrise, by Robert Stone. Knopf, 1981, 439 pages.

This past year, Robert Stone visited the United States and read the opening segment of A Flag for Sunrise. A macho-afflicted lieutenant from a Central American army unit visits a rummy, Irish-American priest. He begs for confession. He forces the priest to bear witness to a crime. He demands that the priest dispose of the horrible evidence. The priest complies. "amazed at the ease with which it had been done. He felt ... he had gained a thoroughly new insight into the processes of the world." So will the reader of this compelling novel.

It is set in the fictitious land of Compostela on the eve of a leftist uprising against an obdurate oligarchy supported by the United States. Besides the whiskey priest and the macho lieutenant, there is a young nun sympathetic with the guerrillas. Her connection with them is a youthful, flashy priest, a native of Compostela. He, in turn, is known to the Central Committee, which directs the flow of arms supplied by "the other side."

Books

ADD TO this an alcoholic American anthropologist, who once worked for "the Company" (i.e., the CIA) in Vietnam, his Compostelan confederate, now turned out from his family for his recently surfaced homosexuality and a speed freak Coast Guard deserter and you have some of the contemporary evils washing up and over the shores of this fictive Central American land.

A Flag for Sunrise is a heavyweight pot-boiler flavored with Stone's particularly American vernacular. It has its fictional predecessors. Graham Greene's burned-out cases drift through Compostela in alcoholic disbelief, complicated by Conradian preoccupations with "material interests" implicit in American imperialism. There are other types of American opportunism, such as the gun-runners who know a good thing when history presents it to them.

Stone is at his best in the novel's many dramatic scenes. He also displays an eloquent sensitivity for the pained natures of his gringos awash in booze and ideology far from home. But there are gaps in the backgrounds of certain characters that, had they been filled, would have perhaps elevated the novel from the ranks of the excellent to that of the great. One thinks of the anthropologist Holliswell, who feels that he has cut himself off from his family, even though that family is only vaguely sketched at the novel's beginning. And why does the young nun have to be so pretty? Her beauty and the subsequent romance it brings have an unduly melodramatic Hollywood type quality.

THE NOVEL also raises questions about the relationship of fiction and political realities. But these are better left to the reader to puzzle over as the similarities of Compostela to El Salvador, Nicaragua, etc., become apparent.

Stone once described himself as "just another Conradian writer." This is not quite correct. A Flag for Sunrise owes obvious debts to Conrad: "Compost-ela" as a name is not far from "Costa-guano" — birdshit coast — where Conrad's great novel Nostromo is set. But Stone is more than "just another." Reading A Flag for Sunrise will prove this.

'Spider Dan' grounded in Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — "Spider Dan" Goodwin, sentenced to one year's probation for violating a court order against climbing buildings in Cook County, said Thursday he will obey the order from now on.

Goodwin appeared before Cook County Judge Harold A. Siegan Thursday for sentencing on the contempt of court citation handed down last week after Goodwin's Veterans Day climb of the 100-story John Hancock Building.

The judge, however, delayed fining Goodwin for $16,000 in damages caused to the building during the climb until his finances can be examined.

Following the sentencing, Goodwin, 25, of Kennebunk, Maine, told reporters he would not climb any more buildings in Chicago, but said he would continue to develop rescue techniques elsewhere.

Goodwin climbed the world's tallest building — the 110-story Sears Tower — on Memorial Day and a 56-story building in Dallas the weekend before the Hancock climb.

IN IMPOSING sentence, Siegan told Goodwin the purpose of the sentence was to "make amends so that for the rest of your life there is nothing but a reminder ... never again to publicly flaunt your behavior and violate the law."

Siegan dismissed defense claims that Goodwin was just trying to demonstrate a new rescue technique, saying it was done "to gain public and personal aggrandizement."

"Your rights and the rights of all people depend on adherence to the law," Siegan said. "Defiance of the law is a step toward anarchy."

Siegan set May 18 for Goodwin's next court appearance. He will decide then whether Goodwin should have to make full restitution.

Goodwin's attorney, Stephen W. Zucker, said he would appeal the contempt sentence within 30 days.

During his Nov. 11 climb, firefighters sprayed water in Goodwin's path when he was about 20 stories up the side of the Hancock Building, in an attempt to discourage him from continuing.

At one point, Police Superintendent Richard Brzezczek was held out a window to read Goodwin — who was about six feet below — the restraining order barring him from climbing any more buildings.

Friends await Holden's burial at sea

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — In the aftermath of William Holden's death, friends of the actor Thursday awaited word on plans for his burial at sea and dismissed stories that Holden, 63, had planned to be married New Year's Eve.

Holden, whose body was found in his Santa Monica, Calif., apartment last Monday, bled to death after he struck his head on a bedside table in a drunken fall, ac-ording to the Los Angeles coroner. He had been dead four or five days before his body was discovered.

The Neptune Society, an organization that scatters cremated human remains at sea, received Holden's body from the coroner as Holden wished and was awaiting instructions from the actor's family.

Holden's attorney, Dean Johnson, said there would be no memorial or funeral ser-VICES. Pat Stauffer, a friend of Holden's, claimed that she and the actor had planned to be married at the Mount Kenya Safari Club in Africa, Jan. 1, adding that they had been in love for many years.

Actor Glenn Ford, one of Holden's closest friends, said, however, actress Stefanie Powers was the woman in Holden's life when he died.

Grapplers compete in Minnesota Quad

By Jay Christensen
Sports Editor

Iowa Head Wrestling Coach Dan Gable, whose team is rated No. 2 in the first mat poll, said tonight's Minnesota Quadrangular in Minneapolis will be a barometer towards finding the strength of this season's squad.

The Hawkeyes are scheduled to face No. 5 Northern Iowa and No. 6 Minnesota in dual competition. The meet is expected to be held despite 11 inches of snow Minneapolis received Thursday. "But they are expecting 22 inches," said Assistant Coach Chuck Yagla. "We will make a decision on whether or not to go Friday morning."

If the Hawks do go, Gable expects a tough match. "We have dominated these teams in the past," Gable said. "But we look for the weekend to tell how good we are."

IOWA'S 190-POUNDER Pete Bush, who Gable has been building up as one of the squad's most improved wrestlers, will face two strong wrestlers in Minnesota's George Bowman and Northern Iowa's Kirk Myers. "Mentally we are trying to bring him around," Gable said. "He was second in the Junior Worlds this summer and he beat Lehigh's Colin Kilrain in the Great Plains tournament last weekend. Besides, I've never had an All-American at 190 pounds since I've been a head coach."

Gable has been a head coach for five years, tutoring 29 All-Americans. Bush was the only regular squad member not to make All-American status last season. Gable had considered giving Bush a redshirt, but decided against it. Steve Banach, rated No. 2 at the 190-pound weight, has been plagued with injuries.

THE GOPHERS, expected to be second best in the Big Ten conference to Iowa, along with the Panthers are expected to be much improved over last season.

Gable rates both Minnesota and Northern Iowa in the "third level" nationally. "Oklahoma (No. 1) is in a class by itself," he said. "Iowa and Iowa State are next. Then comes Minnesota, Northern Iowa, Wisconsin and Oklahoma State."

Gable's career head coaching record is an impressive 89-4-1. "I want to beat everybody. A wrestler should not be out standing around and waiting. We strive for the guys to go all the time and, of course, be solid fundamentally and technically. If they want to wrestle at Iowa, they will have to hustle."

Gym intrasquad meet set

By Steve Batterson
Staff Writer

To help prepare for competition in the next two weekends, the Iowa men's and women's gymnastics teams will stage an intrasquad meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the North Gym of the Iowa Field House.

The men are facing tough competition in the Midwest Open and the Windy City Invitational the next two weeks, and the women start their season off with the Midwest Open and the Iowa Invitational.

"It should be a good meet for us to take a look at ourselves and for local people to get an idea of what we have," Men's Coach Tom Dunn said. "On our side of the meet, we won't be at home again until February, so the fans will get a chance to see how we look now."

IOWA WOMEN'S COACH Diane Chapela is expecting her team to gain some good experience out of the meet. "It will give us a chance to get out in front of the judges and fans and the atmosphere will be similar to what they will find in competition," she said. "We won't be as well polished as we will be later in the season, but this is very early in the season and the bulk of our meets won't begin until January."

Dunn is also promising a surprise appearance by a guest performer at the meet. Mum is the word on what it will be, but Dunn would say "it will be enjoyable for the fans. It will give the people who come to the meet a little extra entertainment besides gymnastics."

Both Dunn and Chapela said they will use the scores from the meet to help determine their starting line-ups for the Midwest Open next weekend.

FOR THE MEN, Iowa fans will have a chance to see several gymnasts perform at home for the first time this season. All-arounders Brett Garland, Kelly Crumley and Aaron BreMiller will see more action than they did at the last intrasquad on Nov. 1.

Garland, who has been slowed by a bad knee, received clearance from the doctor on Monday and will compete in all six events. Crumley missed the last intrasquad due to an elbow injury but has competed since that time, finishing seventh in the all-around at the Wisconsin Open. BreMiller has had a broken thumb, but will compete on five of the six events.

But with the good news, there is bad. Sophomore all-arounder Kyle Shanton will be out for four weeks with a hairline fracture in his thumb, while parallel bars specialist Tim Magee will be sitting out this weekend with a badly sprained finger.

Chapela reports her team is also having injury problems as well, but that most of them are "nagging injuries, the type that slow you down, but you still can compete with them."

"The meet will give us a chance to see how our team stacks up as individuals on the team. They will have a chance to find out what they need to work on to better prepare themselves for the upcoming season."

"This will be a chance for people to see some very good gymnastics," Chapela said. "We think we have a stronger squad this year in overall strength in each event, and it will be a good chance for the people to come out and see what kind of team that we and the men will have."

No admission will be charged for the meet.

Iowa swim heading

After the fine performance this year turned in against Minnesota, confidence and spirits are high for the team heading to Wisconsin. Although the Hawkeyes lost to Wisconsin, Iowa set five meet and two process, putting a scare into the squad.

Iowa swimmers confident heading into Badger meet

By Melissa Isaacson Staff Writer

After the fine performance the women's swimming team turned in against Minnesota last weekend, confidence and spirits are high heading into this weekend's meet against Wisconsin in Madison.

Although the Hawkeyes lost to the Golden Gophers, 80-69, Iowa set five meet and two pool records in the process, putting a scare into a strong Minnesota squad.

HEAD COACH PETER Kennedy, although quite pleased with his team's performance last week, is viewing this weekend's meet against the Badgers with concern.

"Wisconsin was fourth in the Big Ten last year," he said. "We've got to be realistic and Wisconsin is really strong. They (Badgers) definitely have more first-place punch than Minnesota. We'd like to give them a good battle if nothing else."

Iowa will be swimming in a different format this weekend. The meet will be run by the NCAA order of events, as opposed to the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women mixed program used last weekend. There is a significant difference between the two formats. The NCAA program does not offer 50-meter events in each stroke, the 200-meter relays or the 100-meter individual medley as the AIAW does.

KENNEDY PREFERS THE AIAW format. "They (the events excluded in the NCAA program) are real quick events and they add a great deal of excitement. The mixed (AIAW) program offers a greater variety of events as well as the opportunity for more people to win."

Two events Iowa counts on for high finishes are the one and three-meter diving events, led by All-American Ann Bowers. Kennedy also looks to the 200-meter breaststroke event, led by Kerry Stewart, as the Hawks' other "best shot at winning."

"We're all real pleased with everything thus far. We're headed in the right direction. We've had the kind of program we've wanted to date. After last weekend's meet, we had probably our best workout of the year on Monday."

Volleyball team takes on Bears in regionals

By Melissa Isaacson Staff Writer

Iowa's volleyball team is a decided underdog going into the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Region VI Championship Friday and Saturday, a role the team has become quite familiar with.

The Hawks, 18-20-1, are used to taking on teams that are physically bigger and stronger than they are, and this weekend will be no different.

Iowa's first opponent Friday at 1 p.m. will be Southwest Missouri State, the top-seed and host of this year's tournament. The Bears, 40-12, are the defending champions for the second year in a row. They have won the regional tournament eight of the last 10 years and have advanced to nationals 12 times, which is as long as the tournament has been in existence.

SOUTHWEST MISSOURI State has captured two tournament titles this year, the Mean Green Invitational at North Texas State and the Autumn Classic held in Springfield.

The Hawks, needless to say, do have their work cut out for them. All things considered, however, Head Coach Mary Phyl Dwight is calm heading into the double-elimination tournament.

"We're going into this weekend very low key," she said. "We'll be satisfied as long as we play the best we can. The key for us is that we're going into the tournament as the underdog which is good for us. We're not the team that Southwest Missouri State is going to be pointing toward."

Iowa did get an extra shot of incentive going into the tournament. Seniors Cindy Lamb and Liz Jones were named to the AIAW North Sub-Region VI team by Region VI coaches. Minnesota had three players and Iowa State one named to the all-star squad. The Gophers and Cyclones are the other two teams entered in this weekend's tournament.

IOWA IS 1-5 against Region VI opponents this year, losing to Iowa State twice and Minnesota three times. Iowa's only win came against Iowa State. The Hawks have not met Southwest Missouri State this year.

"Southwest Missouri State is a perennial power," Dwight said. "They are kind of the institution of volleyball in the Midwest. They are very strong and the favorite to win the tournament."

Dwight, however, did not rule out the possibility of an upset. "It is going to be an interesting regional," she said. "There will be a lot of emotion on the line."

Iowa women cagers lose to Pacific in tourney

By Mark Ballard Staff Writer

Jane Romberg scored 30 points to lead Pacific University to a 81-70 triumph over the Iowa women's basketball team in the opening round of the Straw Hat Pizza Classic in San Luis Obispo, Calif.

The Tigers, who led 42-38 at half time, also received 16 point efforts from both Tracy Glandon and Joy Dana in downing the Hawkeyes, now 0-2 on the season.

Leading the balanced Iowa attack was Donna Freitag with 19 points. Other Hawks in double figures were Kim Howard with 17, Lisa Anderson with 14 and Angie Lee with 10.

WITH HER 19 point output on Thursday, Freitag leads all Hawk scorers, sporting a 15 point average for two games. Although Iowa has dropped the first two games, Head Coach Judy McMullen's woes over the total point effort have apparently been solved for the time being.

The Hawks managed just 52 points in their season opener against Minnesota, which was well short of their 72 point average of last year.

Iowa now will play the loser of tomorrow's California State at Fullerton-Biola contest. It will be the second game for the Hawks in the three-day tournament. Game time has not yet been scheduled.

Phillies acquire catcher Diaz from Indians

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Phillies Thursday acquired catcher Bo Diaz from the Cleveland Indians in a three-way trade that also involved Phillies outfielder Lonnie Smith and St. Louis Cardinals pitchers Lary Sorensen and Silvio Martinez.

The Phillies sent Smith to the Indians in exchange for Diaz. The Indians then traded Smith to the Cardinals for Sorensen and Martinez.

The trade was a puzzling one in the sense that it brought Diaz, a .313 hitter and a member of the American League All-Star team this past season, to a team that already had four catchers on its off-season roster.

But general manager Paul Owens said the deal put the Phillies in a position of strength going into next month's winter meetings and added that more trades were likely.

"We have quite a few ways in which to work," said Owens, whose top priority is a starting pitcher. "We've had a number of conversations with other clubs and I see us going several different ways if things work out. We're in good shape. Maybe this will start to open up some things."

On the line

The final edition of On the Line has spawned a great deal of response from our readers. So much in fact, that 328 ballots have been turned in this week, a record for 1981.

IOWA IS AN overwhelming favorite against red-hot Michigan State, or at least our readers say so. The Hawks received 281 votes to the Spartans' 47.

Our guest picker this week is the honorable Robert Ray, governor of Iowa. The governor was supposed to be our guest last week, but couldn't due to his extremely busy schedule.

Cougars seek first berth in Rose Bowl since 1930

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — For those unable or unwilling to admit they remember first-hand what happened in 1930, the year the Washington State University Cougars last went to the Rose Bowl, here's a little refresher.

For those who don't care, and there aren't many these days as the Cougars play for the Rose Bowl Saturday against the University of Washington, a little history lesson won't hurt.

The population of the United States was 122,775,046.

GIVEN TODAY'S population of over 200 million, its fair to say some Cougar fans got restless and turned to other pursuits during those 51 years. The Stock Market had crashed a few months earlier and the Great Depression, soup lines and mass poverty, were fast becoming realities.

Herbert Hoover was president and Prohibition was on.

History was in the making for some, in spite of the dim economic picture and the dry palate.

Adm. Richard Byrd completed the first flight over the South Pole.

Sinclair Lewis won the Nobel Prize in Literature for his book "Babbitt."

The patent was issued for the vending machine, giving a new meaning to poor taste.

"All Quiet On The Western Front" won an Academy Award.

ON THE NATIONAL SPORTS scene, Notre Dame, under Knute Rockne, won the national championship, same as the year before.

The Irish Sweepstakes was inaugurated to benefit hospitals in the Emerald Isle.

Germany's Max Schmeling became the heavyweight champion of the world.

Philadelphia won the world series, 4-1, over

Chicago.

Robert Tyre "Bobby" Jones became the first golfer ever to win the four most important golf tournaments of the day — capturing the U.S. Amateur Championship, the British Open, the British Amateur in Scotland and the U.S. Open in Minneapolis.

"Gallant Fox" won the Triple Crown.

AND ON NEW YEAR'S Day, 1931, the Cougars lost the big one to Alabama, 24-0.

Apologists in those days claimed practicing in Pullman's snow and ice and then going to the sunny climates of southern California for the bowl appearance didn't help.

It's often said that history repeats itself.

Washington State fans are hoping this is the year for the repeat.

The repeat in this case, would be a victory over the Huskies Saturday.

For it was in the final game of the 1930 season that Washington State defeated Washington, 3-0, on a 43-yard field goal by Lyle Maskell and won the trip to Pasadena.

Team's health concerns Duncan

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — A rugged Oklahoma State team stands between Iowa State and its dim hopes for a bowl bid and a winning season Saturday, and once again the Cyclones will enter the game bruised and battered.

"We're minus some key players and we hope they can get back in time to play," Iowa State Coach Donnie Duncan said of Iowa State's season finale.

"That's something that won't be known until Saturday.

"We have some players missing practice time and missing practice affects performance."

Iowa State has slumped to a 5-4 overall record and a 2-3-1 Big Eight Conference mark.

Ainge allowed negotiations with Celtics

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Blue Jays have given permission to third baseman Danny Ainge to negotiate a basketball contract with the Boston Celtics, the baseball club said Thursday.

Cliff Lax, the Blue Jays' lawyer, said the permission extends only to the end of the month. He added that the Blue Jays believe Ainge will eventually have so much trouble reaching an agreement with the Celtics that he might consider giving baseball another chance.

Ainge's hopes of signing with the Celtics were complicated by the Blue Jays' demand for $1 million in compensation, and by their insistence that any negotiations must be concluded by the end of the month.

"Danny Ainge has attempted to convince the Blue Jays that he will not come back to play baseball, and that he intends to pursue a career in basketball," said Lax.

"But so far he hasn't been able to do that either."

"We're minus some key players and we hope they can get back in time to play," Iowa State Coach Donnie Duncan said of Iowa State's season finale.

"That's something that won't be known until Saturday.

"We have some players missing practice time and missing practice affects performance."

Members of Iowa's 1981 Big Ten championship swimming team show that their mental attitude and spirit have as much to do with winning as physical conditioning. The swimmers practiced their pre-meet cheer prior to Thursday's workout. Iowa takes on Indiana tonight at 7 in the Field House pool.

Swimmers face Indiana challenge

By H. Forrest Woolard
Assistant Sports Editor

It's only natural that the Indiana swimming and diving team will be out for blood Friday night when the Hoosiers hit the water at the Field House pool in a match with Iowa.

The Hawkeye-Hoosier rivalry may have been intense prior to the 1981 Big Ten championship, but after Iowa beat Indiana, conference champions for 20 consecutive years, the Hoosiers have been seeking revenge.

Iowa Coach Glenn Patton knows this too well. "It's going to be a pretty tough meet," he said, adding that there are several factors working against Iowa now.

The major problem is the loss of several excellent swimmers and NCAA one-meter diving champ Randy Ableman, who will return next semester. Without the talents of All-American Dan White and Big Ten champ Ron McKeon, the Hawks will have a difficult time defeating Indiana.

THIS WEEK Patton was faced with yet another swimmer who decided to hang up his tank suit to dry. Dean Hagen, Patton's prize recruit freestyle recruit from Glendale, Ariz., is no longer on the Iowa squad. According to Patton, Hagen said he was bored.

With these misfortunes and the Hawks' 62-51 loss to Wisconsin last Friday night in Madison, one would think the Hawks' training camp would be rather quiet prior to their toughest dual of the season. But Patton said the Hawks "have a little more of a killer instinct."

"Losing that meet to Wisconsin was a real blow," Patton said. "Losing made us realize we need to tighten up our belts a little to pick up the slack."

According to Patton, the only way the Hawks can defeat Indiana is to win the 400-yard medley relay. In the Hoosiers' 75-38 victory over Texas A&M last week, Indiana recorded a time of three minutes, 31 seconds in the race. Iowa touched in a 3:32.7 during its loss to Wisconsin.

THE HAWKS' strongest events will most likely be the freestyle races. One key match-up could come in the 200 free when Iowa's Graeme Brewer, an Olympian from Australia, tests his talents against Djan Madruga, who competed in the Games twice for Brazil. While Brewer finished second at Big Tens in the 200, and Madruga opted to compete in other events at the conference meet, the Brazilian has the fastest time of the season. Madruga's time stands at 1:41.6, with Brewer's at 1:42.2.

Tom Roemer, Iowa's Big Ten champ in the 200 individual medley, will definitely be challenged in that event by Indiana's Seth Bretscher. Although the Hoosier swam other events at Big Tens last season, Bretscher claimed conference honors in the 200 breaststroke.

Without Ableman, it will be virtually impossible for the Hawks to outscore the Indiana diving contingency. Indiana divers Robbie Bollinger, Big Ten champ on the three-meter board, and Niki Stajkovic are Olympic caliber divers, according to Patton.

In hopes of turning around a 67-47 dual meet loss to Indiana last season, the Hawks have cut back on their workouts this week. Iowa not only canceled several morning workouts, but dropped its weight training program and dry land calisthenics prior to tonight's meet.

The swimmers' attitudes are the best they have been all season, Patton said.

Magic criticism results in Westhead firing

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — In the wake of an ultimatum by star guard Magic Johnson, the Los Angeles Lakers Thursday fired Coach Pat Westhead.

Assistant Coach Pat Riley was named to replace Westhead with former NBA great Jerry West named offensive coordinator. Although Riley officially will be the team's head coach, West will serve a vital role in designing the Lakers' offense, according to team owner Jerry Buss.

"I have appointed Jerry West as offensive coach for the Lakers," Buss said at a hastily called news conference. "I did not specifically make someone head coach and someone else the assistant coach."

"I feel Pat Riley is very capable of coaching the Laker team but I feel that we need a new offensive coach. I asked Jerry if he would take that job and because of his relationship with Pat, I feel that the two of them can coach the team together with Jerry in charge of the offense in particular."

JOHNSON, in the first year of an unprecedented $25 million, 25-year guaranteed contract, shocked team officials Wednesday night by saying he wanted to be traded. Johnson claimed the game was "no longer any fun" and blamed a new offense installed by Westhead. The Lakers have a 7-4 record.

Buss, who also owns the NHL's Los Angeles Kings, learned of Johnson's statements while attending the Kings' game against Detroit Wednesday night.

"I've got smoke coming out of the engine room," he said then. "And it's time to get down there and investigate what's happening."

Buss made his decision to fire Westhead Thursday morning but at the news conference he said Johnson's outburst Wednesday night had "nothing to do with the decision."

"That was very unfortunate," Buss said. "It really has nothing to do with (Johnson's ultimatum). The outburst last night... the timing was very unfortunate. The meetings that have been concluded this afternoon were started prior to any statements that Magic Johnson made. This is something I feel is very necessary, based simply on the appearance of the team.

"THERE IS NOT a newspaper or television or radio station who hasn't commented on precisely the same thing. Therefore, my reaction is I am doing what I believe every single person realized I had to do."

"After having experienced the excitement of the Lakers and the particular brand of basketball I have grown accustomed to, I have been very disappointed this year in not seeing that exciting team once again. This decision started materializing after the first game or two and reached this proportion somewhere in the last few days. I feel that I am committed to providing the fans of Los Angeles with an exciting, winning type of basketball."

Hawks win first national hockey game

BERKELEY, Calif. — The Iowa field hockey team finally got the monkey off its back, as the Hawks recorded their first national Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women championship victory by defeating the Washington State Cougars, 2-1.

The game went through two overtime periods and two rounds of penalty strokes before going to sudden death. Iowa had the first chance to score in the final tie breaker, as senior Anne-Marie Thomas put her shot away through the lower left-hand corner of the goal. Washington State's Cathie Treadgold then stepped up and sent her shot wide to the left of the goal, thus securing the Hawks' win.

Sue Bury

"IT'S THE FIRST time we won one of these in that kind of pressure," Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said. In talking with Davidson Wednesday, the Iowa coach said she didn't want to go to strokes against the Cougars.

"All I heard from people about Washington State is that they have a good penalty stroke team," Davidson said. "Iowa hasn't won in penalty strokes in two years."

Iowa and Washington State battled to a 1-1 tie at the end of regulation play. The first time the Cougars took the ball down the field, Treadgold scored on a misplay by Iowa's goalie Donna Lee. Iowa responded two minutes later as Sue Bury, on a pass from Ellen Egan, sent a goal in from the top of the circle.

"That was really good was they (Cougars) scored and we came right back," Davidson said. "That's the best thing about this team. They are very poised."

ALTHOUGH TREADGOLD has led the scoring attack for Washington State throughout the season, Davidson said the Hawkeyes did nothing special to stop her. "We were aware of Treadgold, and in the second half when we pulled Pat Dauley out, we put Anne-Marie on her (Treadgold)," Davidson said. Dauley, who has been fighting the flu the past week, was replaced by freshman Dawn Chamberlain in the second half.

The game itself was a defensive struggle between the 25-yard lines.

although statistics showed Iowa controlled the game otherwise. Iowa had 36 shots on goal to Washington State's 11.

"Our defense is very strong," Cougars' Coach Sandy Moore said. "We've had six ties and four ended up scoreless."

Moore, calling the contest a "heart-breaker," said the game "was very fast up and down the field. Both teams were tired by the end of the game. When the two teams got to the overtime they were both hanging on for dear life."

ALTHOUGH DAVIDSON was happy with the result, she was not pleased about the lack of scoring. "They're not getting good shots off," Davidson said. "They needed to be smart. We should have used a lift when we had the sun in the (Cougars') goalie's face in the first half."

Davidson said this year's team is the strongest she has coached. "They're more balanced, more mature and more poised," she said. "The pressure is off us now to win. We can only go up from here."

Iowa's next opponent is Penn State, which defeated the Hawks, 3-0, in the regular season. The Lions defeated Dartmouth, 2-0, Thursday to advance to the semifinals. The Hawkeyes' game is scheduled for 3 p.m. Iowa time today.

Cagers land prep star

Iowa's basketball team has its first verbal commitment for the 1982 recruiting year in Andre Banks, a 6-foot-3 guard from Mendell Catholic High School in Chicago. Banks had narrowed his list down to Iowa, DePaul and Indiana before choosing the Hawkeyes.

Banks, currently in his senior year at Mendell, is a preseason prep All-American. As a junior, Banks averaged 21.7 points, eight rebounds and 4.5 assists a game and shot 65 percent from the field.

Last year Banks made Chicago's all-Catholic League first team and finished third in the League's Player of the Year voting.

THE HEAVILY-RECRUITED Banks made his decision to attend Iowa for competitive scheduling and academic reasons. "I am making this announcement now so I can concentrate on my studies and basketball this winter," he said. Banks is a B-plus student and plans to major in business at Iowa.

Having Banks on Iowa's team next year will be a timely addition, as senior guard Kenny Arnold is now in his last year of eligibility. "Andre is an exceptional player who has benefited from a very fine high school program," Iowa Head Coach Lute Olson said. "We're delighted Andre has chosen Iowa."
