Legal Services for the poor is in financial 'limbo'

Legal Services Corp. of Iowa is unable to accept cases which would extend past the Dec. 31 deadline, according to the corporation's state director.

"It's almost criminal what the Reagan administration is doing to poor people," said John Barrett, state director of Legal Services Corp.

In its attempts to balance the federal budget, the Reagan administration is "diminishing the number of lawyers to past Dec. 31 - the last day the federal turned down each month because the help the poor. And without free legal services the poor are going to be ... up a creek." he said. Legal Services Corp. was organized four years ago to provide free legal help to the poor in resolving civil suits such as divorce, Social Security claims and consumer disputes.

Approximately 460,000 Iowans are eligible for legal services. Barrett said. But approximately 80 percent of eligible applicants are turned down

WHETHER THE Iowa City office will be open after the end of the month is still unknown. "We keep expecting to know one way or another," said Sylvia Lewis, the office's managing attorney. 'We're having problems planning case loads and knowing that nobody else can help these people out is very demoralizing in itself." Lewis added that clients are becomwhere to go for help.

In June, the U.S. House of Representatives passed a bill authorizing that federal funding be cut from $321 million to $241 million for legal services. In September, the House passed an appropriations bill of $241 million for legal services which must be approved by the Senate and signed by the president before becoming law.

Surrounded by local media, Bill Sackter, 68, waves to onlookers as he makes his grand entrance into Hancher Auditorium's capacity crowd Thursday night for the premiere showing of the CBS movie "Bill," starring Mickey Rooney. The

CARP under review by UI board

By Scott Sonner

The status of a UI group affiliated with the Moonies is currently under review by the UI Student Activities

The Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles could find its status changed from that of a social or cultural group to a religious group beause of its affiliation with the controversial Unification Church, headed by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

Wilbur Hathaway, CARP president and recently elected UI student senator, could not be reached for comment Thursday. In September and October interviews, he had said that the group does not deny its belief in the teachings of the Rev. Moon or its affiliation with Moonies. The father of a former CARP member said that last month he and his wife retrieved their daughter Marjorie Laflin from a CARP group in Iowa City after she had been missing for about six months.

LAFLIN SAID Thursday in a telephone interview from his Milwaukee home that his daughter had become involved in recruiting members for the UI's chapter of CARP.

"She would go out with members on weekends and sell flowers to get pay rent," Laflin said. He said his daughter said she had become very dependent upon the group.

"Little Marije indicated to us she was very grateful to be out of the group. She acknowledged she could not get out by herself," he said.

Iowa City Police Detective Bill Kidwell said the department is not investigating the situation because no charges have been filed. However, he said it was his understanding Laflin has been deprogrammed or is being deprogrammed.

LAFLIN, a student at the University of Wisconsin last summer, has benefit-recovered her but is still "very concerned" about the situation, her father said. He said a "carload" of Moonies came to their home and told him their house would be watched.

He said he talked with a UI dean about CARP's methodology but "he didn't seem too concerned about the group."

Dickson said the Laflin incident is unrelated to his request for the status review. The review was under consideration before the Laflins retrieved their daughter.

The board will report on the group's status to the UI Student Senate within the next two weeks, Senate President See CARP, page 7

Students in lottery to get bowl tickets

By Jackie Baylor and Rochelle Bozman

Rose Bowl tickets will be sold to all UI student season ticket holders who signed up for the Rose Bowl lottery. Jean Kupka, UI ticket manager, said Thursday.

Bump Elliott, UI men's athletic director, allocated about 130 extra tickets to students for the season ticket holders in the lottery, said Sheldon Schur, UI Student Senate vice presi-

"I think he did a great service to students," Schur said Thursday, "He took the student needs into consideration."

Schur said Elliott decided to make the allocation after comparing the number of tickets available with the number of applications from students with season tickets.

EVEN IF MORE tickets are sold to students than initially allotted, "We had a few held back so that if student demand exceeded the number allotted we could provide them with tickets,'

Assistant Men's Athletic Director Larry Bruner said Thursday.

"If it had been over 700 (additional requests) we couldn't have done it, but since we could do it, we felt that the students should be given the tickets,' Bruner said. "After all, it's their football team. They deserve to go.'

Sen. Andy Piro, a student representative to the Board in Control of Athletics, said Thursday during the senate meeting, "Fortunately, all (student) season ticket holders who applied for the lottery will get a ticket. We, as students, should be pretty happy with

ALTHOUGH THE total number of Rose Bowl tickets the UI will receive has not been determined, the UI will receive at least 21,500 tickets.

A specified number of tickets must go to the state and UI officials and their spouses, the families of the footcoaching staff, and members of the athletic staff with official duties in California

Students attracted to classic courses

By Mary Schuver

Enrollment in Greek and Latin language courses has reached its highest peak in at least a decade partly because UI students are returning to the basic grammar classes, said Erling Holtsmark, chairman of the UI Classics Department. To meet student demand for the classical languages, a third section was added this semester to an elementary Latin course, Holtsmark said Thursday.

The enrollment increase in the courses is a result of a departmental campaign to push enrollment in the classical languages and other cultural and historical courses in the department, he said.

Holtsmark said. "We tried to make a concentrated effort to let the Classics Department be known in the univer-

Enrollment "is very good related to past years." Holtsmark said. Because Latin was a basis in the development of English, students are taking the courses to acquire "a sense of how our own language functions," he said.

"STUDENTS ARE more concerned about being able to do simple things" and seem to be "fascinated with the history of the English language." he

This semester, 82 UI students were enrolled in three sections of Elementary Latin at midterm, according to departmental records. In the fall of 1980, 52 students were in the twosection course.

Enrollment in Greek has increased to 22 students this fall, compared to 16 in the fall of 1980.

Funerals and burials have become a commercial event in recent years instead of a personal reminder that a life has ended, according to Sandra Eskin. president of the Iowa River Valley Memorial Society.

"In the American and British tradition only, as far as we know, morticians have become the prime buriers of people and basically have commercialized burying as a business," she

The funeral ceremony has become so professionalized that families are finding it difficult to mourn their kin without going "the whole extravagant commercial route," Eskin said.

A memorial society is a consumer group that studies funeral practices so that members can intelligently choose what type of funeral and burial sermystified and surprised when they are faced with a funeral, she said.

"WE ARE DEDICATED to promoting dignity and economy in matters relating to funerals, mortuary and cemetery practices. We try diligently to follow these practices and speak out on the issues which we feel would be best for the funeral consumer, as opposed to the best deal for the cemetery owner or mortician," she said.

Members pay a small, one-time lifetime membership fee of $10 and are kept informed about funeral practices through a newsletter, Eskin said.

One way to save on funeral expenses is not to have the body embalmed. Iowa law requires that a dead body be embalmed if it is not disposed of after 48 hours. Eskin said. "Embalming is like the entree into display. It keeps the body looking lifelike for three or four extra days. The person looks nice and for some people this justifies the elaborate casket. I feel there is no reason you couldn't look at the body unembalmed," she said.

Commercialized funerals add to costs

But Michael Lensing of Donohue Lensing Mortuary, 13 S. Linn St., said he supports embalming "for sanitation reasons. It is also much easier to have the body shown for public visitation. I feel most people want the body to have a life-like appearance. One thing extremely important to the family is to have a good memory of the deceased."

A "TRADITIONAL SERVICE" which includes embalming, vault, casket, visitation and funeral service costs range from $2,000 to $3,000, Lens-

Another way to save money on funeral expenses is to arrange services outside of a mortuary.

A family can take a dead body to the

they have obtained a copy of the death certificate and have the proper county papers signed, she said.

Another piece of advice that the society gives to its members is that they should not buy their cemetery plot ahead of time.

"Commercial cemeteries promote advance sales because if they can get your bucks in 1980 and you don't die until 2004, they've got your money all that time and they're using it. You might die on vacation in Hawaii and never use the plot you bought," Eskin said.

But John Daine, owner of Memory Gardens Cemetery & Chapel Mausoleum Inc., believes in purchasing plots ahead of time. Ninety-five percent of the lot owners at the cemetery are bought before the occupant's death, he said.

Most people buy their cemetery lots ahead of time because they would crematorium in Cedar Rapids after rather take care of the funeral and the family at the time of their death, Daine said.

THE AVERAGE cost to bury someone at Memory Gardens - if you buy ahead of time - is around $1,250. This includes a lot, vault, grave opening, memorial bronze plaque and date ribbons, he said.

You save yourself around $360 by buying ahead of time, Daine said.

Lot owners who move are allowed to barter their Iowa City space for a plot in their new hometown, he said.

"In case a person moves, we have a dollar-for-dollar exchange program with other progressive cemeteries. For example, if you bought one lot from me and then decided to move to Arizona. we would set up an exchange program with a cemetery there. You could apply the money you had here toward a plot in Arizona," Daine said.

Two sailors killed on ship

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) - An arresting cable snapped as a Navy light attack bomber attempted to land on the flight deck of the carrier USS John F. Kennedy Thursday, killing two sailors on deck and injuring three others.

A navy official said the steel cable separated as the A-7E Corsair bomber attempted to hook into it during maneuvers in the Caribbean Sea.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Max Friedersdorf, who played a pivotal role in President Reagan's budget victories on Capitol Hill, resigned Thursday as Reagan's chief congressional lobbyist and was appointed U.S. consul general for Bermuda.

White House sources said Reagan tapped Kenneth M. Duberstein, Friedersdorf's chief deputy, to take over as assistant to the president for legislative affairs starting Jan. 2.

Mail shouldn't arrive late

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Postmaster General William F. Bolger said Thursday neither snow nor sleet - or fewer airline flights - should keep the Christmas mail from getting through on time.

He also predicted a "slight increase" in Christmas volume despite the recent hike to 20 cents for a first-class letter. Testifying before two congressional subcommittees. Bolger said he had checked with greeting card salesmen and sales appear to be up from last year.

Health good, getting better

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Americans are getting healthier and living longer, the government reported Thursday, with fewer deaths from heart attack and stroke and a lower infant mortality rate paced the improvement.

But there are trouble spots. The cost of good health has continued to rise - personal spending for medical care hit $1,067 per person in 1980, triple what it was in 1970.

Solidarity threatens strike

RADOM, Poland (UPI) - Solidarity Thursday threatened a 24-hour shutdown of the entire Polish economy if the Communist regime passes an anti-strike law and promised a general strike of unlimited duration if the government tries to break up such a protest.

The union's pessimistic assessment of relations with the government appeared to be the most direct and outspoken opposition yet to the regime of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski.

ISEA seeks $43 million in state funds for schools

DES MOINES (UPI) — The president of the Iowa State Education Association Thursday said the Legislature will be asked to restore the $43 million in school aid that was eliminated last winter.

"Legislators sent shock waves through Iowa classrooms this fall when they reduced the amount of state aid educators were told they were going to receive by more than $40 million," said ISEA President George Duvall.

Duvall said the reduced state aid, coupled with the cuts in federal funding, forced school officials to make significant program changes. He said 1,297 teaching positions were eliminated for the 1981-82 school year. He emphasized the future of public school education in Iowa is "at a crossroad."

Schools could receive the money in two ways, Duvall said. Lawmakers could change the school aid formula for the 1982-83 school year. He said 4 percent could be added to the allowable growth rate, which determines the spending capacity for local schools.

THE OTHER IDEA is to increase by $6 the amount of money the state pays per pupil to more accurately reflect what is being spent.

Duvall said an increase in taxes, particularly sales taxes, could be one way the legislature could raise the extra money. But he agreed there was no assurance schools would be a priority for the money since substantial cuts also have been made in numerous Social Services programs.

But he pointed to a public opinion survey that showed Iowans are willing to provide schools with additional funds to maintain present programs even if a tax increase is required.

The legislature in March approved a $622 million school aid bill. The amount was $42 million more than the school received last year, but still about $38 million short of what the legislature had promised

The new law, which became effective in April, set the allowable growth at 5 percent for 1981-82 and at 7 percent for the 1982-83 school year.

Tenants may face eviction

Tenants who refuse to pay a rent increase at Parkview Mobile Home Park may face eviction, according to the owner of the park.

Tenants protested the rent increase two weeks ago, saying the $20 per lot increase is out of order because of poor conditions at the trailer park, located one mile west of Kent Park near Oxford.

Owner Gordon Russell said he posted notification Oct. 1 that lot rents would increase from $70 to $90 per month effective Dec. 1 or Jan. 1, depending on when the tenants' leases expire.

Russell said "the law requires that if they don't pay the rent they can be evicted." Several tenants have already paid rent, he said, but evictions will occur before Jan. 1 if others do not pay their rent.

MEMBERS OF the Parkview Mobile Home Park Tenants Association have previously threatened to withhold October rent because of excessive sediment in the water. Health department officials examined the water and reported that it was safe to drink but high in iron content.

Russell installed a new water filtration system that significantly improved the water problem, according to health department officials, and the tenants association did not withhold rent.

Russell said he also made other improvements over the past year, and those repairs have cost him between $18,000-$20,000. Some of the improvements

- · Building a playground and basketball court. Building another access road to Highway 6.
- Installing speed bumpers.
- Hiring a manager who lives at the mobile-home
- · Enforcing an evening curfew for children.

Frat goes on the wagon

Members of the University of Nebraska chapter of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity became temporary teetotalers as part of an annual "Week on the Wagon.

"We want to help demonstrate to students that there are alternatives to drinking, and you don't have to go to the bars to have fun," said organizer Tom Hupp.

The idea was born three years ago in the wake of the bonfires and destruction that resulted from a drunken revelry in conjunction with the Nebraska-Oklahoma football game.

"The campus was getting a bad name by the community. They probably thought that all we did was drink and run wild like that,"

The fraternity was joined for the first time this year by two sororities, bringing the total number of participants to about 250 or 300, he said.

Researchers at Iowa State University are seeking $814,000 from the U.S. Army for further research on the effects of nerve gas. The controversy surrounding the ISU proposal, which concerns the propriety of conducting military research at state universities, is also relevant to the UI.

Research grants from defense agencies totaled $1.1 million at the UI last year. It is expected that military grants will make up an increasing share of all federal research funds in the future, at the UI as elsewhere.

Unfortunately, universities are being drawn into an ever-closer symbiotic relationship with the Pentagon, wherein they find money to replace that lost from other sources, while the Department of Defense finds research facilities already intact and begging for something to research.

Meanwhile, there is the question of how the research will be used. William Farrell, associate vice president for Educational Development and Research, has said that research at the UI must contribute to the institution's educational mission. Hermann Robl of the Army Research Office, however, told a UI audience in October that "there is the expectation that the information will be applied to develop weapons.'

Some UI officials, including acting president Duane C. Spriestersbach, have tried to duck the issue by saying that all research has military potential. But the fact is that funds are being actively sought with the certain knowledge that the research will be used to develop weapons. How is that to be reconciled with the UI's educational mission?

At the very least, defense agencies should be required to detail, in layman's words, how they will use research information. If that use is not compatible with the UI's mission, DOD should be told to take its dollars and stick them up its gun barrel.

Air controllers

"First you say you will and then you won't, you're undecided now ..." This has been the Reagan administration's theme song this week about the air traffic controllers.

Wednesday morning two White House aides said Reagan had not "closed the door" on rehiring the controllers to their old jobs. That evening the administration clarified its position and said that it was only considering lifting the three-year ban on hiring fired controllers for any federal job. The same song had been played all day Tuesday: morning reports of rehiring and evening suggestions of other federal jobs.

Meanwhile, the air transportation system limps into the holiday rush and winter weather with too few, and over-worked air controllers. The situation shows no promise of improvement. A high failure rate in the replacement class and allegations of artificially inflated grades make the future bleak.

The administration's indecision does not help. It makes no sense to take highly trained workers, fire them, and then rehire them but not at the jobs they were trained to do. That is a no-win situation: the administration gets criticism from the hardliners for rehiring the controllers, but no one benefits because the controllers are sweeping floors not directing air traffic. Stupid.

The wrongs of the situation on both sides cancel each other out: Reagan promised during the campaign to meet their requests for shorter hours and better equipment; the controllers promised not to strike. Enough. Rehire them.

MX deployment

How many budgets can you balance on the warhead of an MX missile? The Senate, by a surprising 90-4 margin, voted Tuesday to find out that very thing when they blocked the expenditure of $334 million for research into "superhardening" existing missile silos in which President Reagan has proposed deploying MX missiles. It is hard to fault the Senate for voting against such a radiantly addled idea as that. However, before we congratulate them, we should consider that they want to spend more for a mobile MX

The mobile MX system idea has gone through various permutations. First, MX missiles were going to be loaded on trains that would chug to and fro between various shelters. That way, the Russians wouldn't know which shelters contained missiles and which didn't so they wouldn't know which ones to attack. Why no one thought the Russians wouldn't just blow up all the shelters is anybody's guess.

Then, the Armageddon Choo-Choo idea was shelved and it was decided that trucks would be better and the shelters should be stronger and more numerous. The problem with that idea was that it would have required most of Nevada, whose governor and congressional delegation furiously lobbied President Reagan to put the MXs somewhere else. They got their wish when Reagan proposed the superhardened silo system.

The Senate is cool to this idea because of the "survivability" issue: If the Russians attack first, how many of our missiles will be left to counterattack? Probably the only way to ensure the MX's survival in such a situation would be to ring each and every one with anti-ballistic missiles, the cost of which would be stagger-

The issue becomes academic when one considers humankind would be decimated by any nuclear exchange, and that presently existing land- and sea-based missiles would accomplish this quite nicely even if the MX were never deployed. Ultimately, the best place to deploy this next nail in our collective coffin is in the wastebasket.

Reagan's new brand of 'ethics'

WASHINGTON - Ask a top official in the Reagan administration if he is as pure as Caesar's wife and he'll probably tell you: "Sure, I knew Caesar's wife before she was a virgin.'

This country is caught up in the saga of Reagan's national security adviser, Richard Allen: Could Allen really stash away a $1,000 thank-you fee from a Japanese magazine, intending to turn the money over to the government, and just forget it for eight months? Could he really sell a business in 1981, just prior to taking a top White House job, then forget and mistakenly sign a declaration that he sold the business in

Americans should understand that neither Allen nor the many questions about his bizarre conduct is the real issue. The overriding question is whether the Reagan administration has a code of ethics - and if so, what is

The whole business of federal employee ethics, as it has developed since the days of the Harry Vaughn deep freezer mess under Harry Truman, the Sherman Adams-vicuna coat embarrassment of Dwight Eisenhower and the Watergate scandals that engulfed Richard Nixon, is that top federal officials must never fall into a position where they have to beg the nation to believe their cry, "I am not a crook." They must, indeed, so conduct themselves that the citizenry can say: "He is beholden to no one but the American people.

AGAINST THAT background, it seems beyond comprehension, on first thought, that the Reagan administration has not limited the damage of the Allen affair by asking him to resign, especially when ugly new rumors and admissions about Allen seem to pop up every day.

On second thought it becomes obvious that Allen has survived on the White House staff because the president knows that he and Mrs. Reagan and other Reagan appointees are in the same boat: All have taken gifts and favors that make it impossible for them to say, "I am not beholden."

Nancy Reagan permits this fat cat and that one to contribute $10,000 each to buy new dishes for the White House a seemingly innocent matter until you think about the fact that the president and his wife become beholden to the donor of $10,000 in a way they will never feel obligated to 10,000 families who have been laid off their Louisville, Ky., jobs at Thanksgiving-Christmas time. It just doesn't occur to the Reagans that the government, not their rich pals, ought to buy whatever china the White House has.

THE REAGANS are not going to go out of their way to harm those who give the president $1,000-a-pair boots, or who "loan" extravagantly costly jewelry and gowns to Mrs. Reagan. Reagan has brought to town a

"power-has-privilige" code of ethics in

William Casey can, in effect, declare themselves honest and then decide that they need not try to avoid the appearance of wrongdoing It takes a special kind of arrogance for Casey to ignore the examples of his CIA predecessors and refuse to put his stockholdings ($1.8 million to $3.4 million estimated net worth) into a blind trust. So Casey, who has access to an incredible amont of information about oil, gas, mineral and other financial dealings of foreign countries, continues to make stock transactions under circumstances where the opportunities for wrongdoing are almost

We can assume that Reagan blinks at this not just out of arrogance, but also out of loyalty to his presidential campaign chairman.

IT IS MUCH harder to understand or explain this incredible business of Reagan taking legal advice about the Allen mess from a man, Fred F.

Fielding, who has been Allen's lawyer and crony during other smelly episodes when both were in government and both were in private life. As the Reagan administration "stonewalls" on the Allen affair, does Reagan count it a blot or a blessing that his "counsel to the president," Fielding, is the same lawyer who was deeply involved in Nixon's attempted Watergate

Reagan's sinuses must be harder than his saddle if he cannot smell a conflict of interest in these relationships. That leaves us with my opening premise that this president isn't much concerned with what he seems to regard as falderal over ethics. I sup pose that when a president has the gall to deliberately and openly foster a Trojan-horse scheme to take from the poor so as to further fatten the rich, he isn't likely to lie awake nights wondering if the masses think he is purer than Caesar's wife - or whether his top aides can say truthfully. A simple little Hawkeye anthem

To the editor:

What great days these are in Hawkeye country! Finally, after 23 years of labor, we are the "chosen" ones for the Rose Bowl. It certainly came as a welcome surprise to thousands of Hawkeye believers. After we defeated Nebraska back in September, the sweet smell of victory floated to my head. I sat down to write a small verse, actually to reconstruct the words to the theme song of "The Beverly Hillbillies" TV show:

Let me tell you about a story 'bout a man named Hayden,

Is chivalry dead?

In these times of an uncertain future, it would be refreshing to think that chivalry still exists. Developed in the age of feudalism, chivalry originated as a strict code of military conduct. During the Middle Ages and DOONESBURY

Renaissance, it evolved from a set of military codes to rules of social behavior, involving courtesy, generosity and sincerity. Today, chivalry is more closely defined as etiquette - rules established for behavior in a "polite" society.

Any society needs a basic set of social rules; in our culture today, there is not much emphasis on chivalry. But when someone performs a chivalrous act, (say, opening a door for another person), both the performer and the beneficiary are affected by the understanding that someone does care about another, even if they are unacquainted. If chivalry were practiced more often, then these feelings of sincerity would help bind us together.

Chivalry also strengthens and promotes relationships within society. such as the male-female, parent-child and worker-employer relationships, encouraging the development of mutual respect between them.

Maybe chivalry does still exist, but how much longer will it last? The enforcement of social rules is almost non-existent and each generation of our society becomes less and less chivalrous. I for one hope that this trend can be halted. Brian Buffum

I've always been curious why you print crap like Musser and Green. Iowa does not have the musical performances that the east and west coasts do. The next best source is Chicago, but that's 250 miles away. So here we are stuck in the middle where few bands ever come to play. And then when they do, they get reviews like that Musser dumped out.

I can see why music groups don't want to chance coming out here to play. What if no one shows up? I know you'll say, "Well, the Stones were sold out." Consider that the Stones have a past history of excellence, a reputation. Luckily Musser saw through that and wasn't fooled. (The critic's fallacy: report how you didn't like something and everyone will think you are incredibly knowledgeable in music. One big ego trip.) But back to opinions. Ready for some reality? Leary maligned

The article concerning the Nov. lecture given by Dr. Timothy Leary (DI, Dec. 1) is another example of the shabby journalism and plain bad quality of The Daily Iowan. Leary's lecture was not about drugs and rebellion; if anything, it was a lecture designed to express hope for our future - an optimism the DI obviously does not share. Quotes from the lecture were taken out of context and humorous statements were made look ridiculous Leary is hardly a "Messiah of LSD." He is a humanistic psychologist who advocates personal growth through a responsible use of drugs. In his lecture. he attacked many sacred cows of our society, including religion, science. politics and sex. But these attacks were made with the intention that the audience see these institutions as manmade and changing, rather than as laws designed to control our lives.

The DI made it sound as if Leary is living in another world. He knows what is going on here and he wants to see our generation grow; we are the "Third Wave," the people who are going to take civilization off this planet and into undreamed of worlds - not necessarily drug-related ones.

The DI's coverage of the Leary lecture was an insult to a man who cares a great deal about the future of humanity. He deserves an apology for this prejudiced and poorly conceived the Daily Iowa Reagan handed defense victory with Senate okay of B-1 bomber

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate Thursday night approved production of the new B-1 bomber, handing President Reagan a major victory for his policy of modernizing and strengthening America's strategic

After a seven-hour debate, and by a 66-28 vote, the Senate approved $2.43 billion in production and research funds for the aircraft that will replace the aging B-52 as the mainstay of the Strategic Air Command. The Senate, working on the record defense bill since Monday, earlier rejected attempts to cut part of the $2.01 billion requested for the MX missile - the other key ingredient of Reagan's new $180 billion strategic weapons program.

A 60-35 vote against an amendment seeking to cut $354 million in research and development funds for the MX assured passage of the funds requested for the new

The Senate also rejected an attempt to cut the defense budget by $1.73 billion and refused to reduce the classified funds included in the bill for research of the Stealthtechnology bomber.

REAGAN HAD URGED approval of his entire $180 billion strategic weapons package, including the B-1 and the MX missile, to bolster America's military might and give it more leverage in arms control talks with the Soviets.

The B-1 decision virtually assures passage by the Senate of its $208.5 billion defense appropriations bill that contains the largest weapons program in U.S.

The Senate continued debate on the bill in a late night session with Democratic members planning amendments to add funds. A final vote is expected today. The House approved a $196.6 billion bill on Nov. 19 that would fund both the B-1 and MX projects.

"If the B-1 bomber is denied," said Sen, Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, floor manager of the huge defense bill, "the entire strategic modernization program of the Reagan administration will be rejected.

'All of the efforts to strengthen nuclear deterrence and the president's strategic arms reduction negotiations (with the Soviet Union) will be defeated," said Stevens just before the final vote on the B-1.

The key B-1 vote came when the Senate defeated an amendment by Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., and Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., which would have shifted the $2.43 billion Reagan requested for the B-1 to 14 other defense programs, including $300 million for research and development of the radar-evading Stealth advanced technology

Odell to mull Hughes' eligibility

Hughes will formally ask Secretary of State Mary Jane Odell today if she will allow his name to be placed on the Democratic gubernatorial primary ballot next year, despite questions about his residency.

lowa economy is growing slowly

DES MOINES (UPI) - Iowa's economy weakened during the month Comptroller Ronald Mosher said

With the slow growth, Mosher said he may be forced to revise revenue estimates for the remainder of the 1982 and 1983 fiscal years. He added a new appraisal of the revenue estimates will be available in January and possibly incorporated into Gov. Robert D. Ray's budget proposal to the Iowa

"It is generally agreed that the national economy is sputtering," he of November with tax receipts increas- said. "The question at hand is, to what. ing at a disappointing 5.2 percent, state extent will the Iowa economy follow the same pattern?'

Mosher said the 5.2 percent increase in tax receipts lowers to 8.3 percent the overall growth rate for the first five months of the fiscal year. The overall growth rate had been estimated at 9.9

But, Mosher emphasized the ongoing revenues have increased by 6.7 percent during the five-month period as compared to a projected increase of 6.5

PERSONAL INCOME taxes strengthened during November, while sales taxes weakened.

Mosher said the increase in November's personal income tax receipts exceeded the growth rate of the prior four months. In November, withholding taxes increased by 12.5 percent compared to November 1980, raising the year-to-date withholding tax growth to 11.9 percent.

The overall personal income tax growth rate rose to 11.8 percent. Sales tax collections last month fell registering a 5.6 percent decline. Mosher said the decrease was largely a technical correction and was offset by a surge in October.

Mosher said the quarterly remittances of sales tax were received more in October this year, whereas last year the receipts were more heavily weighted toward November.

For the four-month period, Mosher said corporation-final payments with returns are 3.9 percent higher, while estimate payments are 1.4 percent lower than the previous year.

Ray calls for lowering of prices

DES MOINES (UPI) - Prices are excessive and must be adjusted downward to stimulate the economy, Gov. Robert D. Ray said Thursday.

Ray said inflation and interest rates are the main reasons for the economic lull. For example, he said the price of farm machinery, such as tractors, has skyrocketed. Most farmers are keeping old machinery, while those who recent layoff of hundreds of workers

They have the purse strings right in their little fists," Barrett said. He added that a rumor has been circulating in Washington, D.C., that nine of the 11 people to be appointed to the board are right-wing, anti-legal services who are opposed to public funding for the poor. Even if we get by with the current funding, it's almost dead certain that Reagan will install his own foxes in our chicken coop and dismantle us internally."

CURRENTLY, there are 11 offices in the state — four fewer than in January. "Satellite" offices in Decorah and Spencer were recently closed in an effort to maintain the 11 regional offices across the state. With only 11 offices operating, there are fewer than two lawyers per every 10,000 persons eligible for free legal aid, he said.

The Iowa City office serves clients in six surrounding counties. Because it is only 28 miles from the Cedar Rapids legal aid office, the office at 401 S. Gilbert St. will probably be one of the first regional offices to close if funding is further reduced, Barrett said.

Clara Oleson, chairwoman of the Johnson County Bar Association's Committee for Legal Services/Lawyer Referral, said private attorneys at a bar meeting Tuesday were "highly distressed" that the legal services in Iowa City might be closed or operate in a "truncated form."

But Zimmermann said he had 'heavy doubts" that if legal services is closed that private attorneys will pick up the slack of poor clients. "I don't think there will be a lot of people rushing to get the referral cases" from legal services. "It's not that they mind taking some of the cases but it's really a problem trying to absorb all of the about their policies on free or reduced non-paying clients," he said.

'La Ronde' revolves 'round sex and love

By Roxanne T. Mueller

Playwright Arthur Schnitzler took the cliche "love makes the world go round" quite literally when he wrote La Ronde at the turn of the century. Life and, more important, sex move in a circle of inevitable encounters, pulling together bedfellows stranger than anything imagined in polite society.

University Theaters opened its production of La Ronde Wednesday night at E.C. Mabie Theater. Guest director James J. Christy, who chairs the theater department at Villanova University, has fashioned a genteel, almost delicate production that fairly swirls through a little more than two hours of running time.

Scene designer Gerard Leahy's impressive carousel and the use of the revolving stage are a perfect match to the play's proceedings. But the waltzing of the characters before and after the bulk of the play, though a good idea, doesn't work because of the actors' awkwardness on stage. They just don't seem elegant or comfortable tripping over the fantastic carousel's lights.

SCHNITZLER'S CLEVER plot contrivance follows a series of characters through succeeding sexual exploits. one character proceeding to another encounter with a person of a higher social class than the last. Thus, a soldier starts out with a prostitute and moves on to a parlor maid; the parlor maid, in turn, is seduced by a young gentleman, with the young gentleman going on to an unfaithful wife, and so

The interplay between the various characters ranges from innocence to jaded boredom. With the exceptions of the prostitutes, the males are the aggressors, their hands nervously pawing at the women's long Victorian gowns. Most of these people are hardly interested in world events - their lives are wrapped around a limited view. with the gaining of physical pleasure

And who are these people? There's the Sweet Young Thing (Julia Gibson), whose coquetry will probably get her in trouble by the time she's 20; there's the Poet (Michael Keene), who is probably the only one who's truly in love with the idea of love rather than with the sexual aspect of it - the type who pauses in the midst of taking his pants down to listen to the sound of crickets chirping; and there's the Count (Scott Smith), whose melancholy and concern with age make him the only character who seems to have any depth.

A violinist (Sandra Dietrick in tuxedo and mustache) musically comments on the action and serves as the public's entertainment while the couple at hand engages in more passionate concerns. The first blackout was best: when a soldier and a prostitute fall on a bench, the lights quickly go down, the tiny sparkling lights of the carousel come up, and the violinist rushes out to the middle of the stage and dives into a song. The succeeding blackouts could have used the split-second timing of the

THE LITTLE TOUCHES are what keeps the show afloat, like when the Actress (the wild-haired P.J. Casteel) raises her foot to the Count after he exclaims, "I kiss your hand." Christy chooses to keep the comedy low-key and natural, which works best as far as taste goes, but which tends to drag on the pacing ever so slightly.

Gerard Leahy's costumes - when the characters keep them on - are as lovely as his carousel.

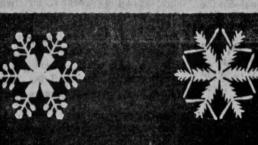

La Ronde continues at 8 p.m. today, Saturday, Dec. 11 and 12 and 3 p.m.

The band's sound is that of restrained brilliance - the capacity to break loose is always there, but except for some well-placed solos, the band is content to bubble under the surface. The album was recorded at Curtis Mayfield's Curtom Studios in Chicago. Jim Tullio's production gives Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows a warm, expansive feel - heart and soul, ice and fire. The work of the Jessie Dixon Singers on backing vocals is reminiscent of the best moments of Ray Charles' Raelets, and the horn charts are superbly written and realized. The Mellow Fellows are led by Pete Special, whose guitar work echoes the great Steve Cropper (the R&B duitarist of the '60s' on rhythm but

THE HIGHLIGHTS of this album are many - every cut, in fact, is highly recommended. From the opener (a oyous, chunky rendition of folkie Steve Goodman's "It Would Be You and Me") to the closer (a moving cover of Bonnie Koloc's "Children's Blues" that evokes Brook Benton's classic reading of "Rainy Night In Georgia"). the disc is packed with state-of-theheart rhythm and blues.

Book reveals Lincoln's defense of slavery in Coles County trial

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) - Nearly every schoolchild knows Abraham Lincoln freed the slaves. But Lincoln's little-known defense of slavery in a Coles County trial is recalled in a book published this month.

It was the only time Lincoln ever defended slavery in a law case.

The book, published by Southern Illinois University Press, is a collection of letters and journals by Dr. Hiram Rutherford, who opposed Lincoln at the slave trial in Charleston, Ill., in 1847.

The book is edited by George and Willene Hendrick. Hendrick is a professor of English at the University of Illinois and his

"Of the subsequent history of Mr. Lincoln we are all familiar; and while I would detract nothing commendable therefrom, still justice demands that it be said that neither his speeches nor his conduct at and during this litigation was worthy of his name and subsequent fame." The doctor's neighbor, Robert Matson, a Kentucky planter, brought his slaves from the South to work his Illinois farm in the summer. Five of the slaves learned they were to be sold and fled to Rutherford for

In later years, Rutherford remembered. 'I rode down to Charleston to hire a lawyer. I had known Abraham Lincoln several years, and his views and mine on the wrong of slavery being in perfect accord, I determined to employ him.

"I FOUND HIM at the tavern sitting on the veranda, his chair tilted back against one of the wooden pillars, entertaining the bystanders and loungers gathered about the place with one of his irresistible and highly flavored stories.'

To Rutherford's great indignation, he found that Lincoln had already agreed to represent Matson.

Rutherford hired other lawyers, won the case and the slaves were freed. But he never forgave Lincoln for having compromised his anti-slavery ideals, the letters

He took a measure of satisfaction in noting that, after the trial, Matson fled the area and never paid Lincoln his fee.

Rutherford's indignation at Lincoln's defense of "the strong against the weak" and the doctor's own vivid account of pioneer life are detailed in the Hendricks'

When Rutherford left Pennsylvania in 1840 to seek his fortune in Illinois, the price of "a first-rate farm" in Oakland was $8 an acre, pork was 3 cents a pound and a large venison roast was 75 cents.

Woman claims she heard screams same night Wood drowned in cove

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - A guest on a yacht anchored in the same cove when Natalie Wood drowned last weekend said a woman repeatedly screamed for help about that time and someone yelled that he would rescue her, it was reported Thursday.

However, other people on boats anchored off Santa Catalina Island near the 60-foot vacht owned by the actress and her actorhusband Robert Wagner said they heard nothing unusual late Saturday or early Sun-

Marilyn Wayne told the Los Angeles Times that last Saturday night "my friend woke me up on our boat around 11:45 p.m. and said, 'Do you hear a woman calling for help?' I listened through the porthole and I could hear someone saying, 'Help me, somebody help me.'

Wayne said she heard an answering voice call several times, "We're coming to get

THE CORONER said the 43-year-old actress died early Sunday after she apparently slipped and drowned accidentally while trying to climb into a rubber dinghy from the yacht Splendour. The movie star, who had been drinking before her death, had been spending the Thanksgiving weekend with her husband, actor Christopher Walken and the yacht's skipper.

Assistant Coroner Richard Wilson said Thursday toxicological tests on tissue samples taken from the actress indicated she had "insignificant amounts" of the pain killer Darvon, an anti-motion drug and caffeine in her system when she died.

'That means she took a headache pill, a seasickness pill and had a cup of coffee," he said. "It's nothing.

Wilson said the report of a woman's screams would be checked out by the sheriff's department, adding it "actually substantiates our initial report."

'There was no evidence of foul play," he said. "She accidentally fell in the water and

She named Wagner guardian for her 11-year-old daughter, Natasha, by an earlier marriage. Wayne, a Los Angeles commodities broker, said the cries for help stopped about 12:10 a.m. The sheriff's department reported Sunday that Wagner discovered his wife was missing "sometime after midnight," but the precise time of Wood's disappearance has not been established.

Wayne would not identify her friend or the boat she was on.

She told the newspaper she did not go to the aid of the crying woman because she thought the woman might have been with people who were having a "loud party" and because she heard the answering call, "We're coming to get you."

AT ABOUT 6 a.m. Sunday, Wayne said, she and her friend asked the Harbor Patrol if a woman was missing "and they said, Yeah, they're looking for her now.' We told the lifeguards what we had heard, but they didn't seem interested.'

Doug Oudin, harbor master of Catalina's Isthmus Cove, told the Times that while he and others were looking for Wood, Wayne told him she thought she had heard a woman calling for help the night before.

"We asked her if there was anything else and she said no ... she thought she heard someone yelling for help, but that was all,'

Voices of Soul sings, educates

The Voices of Soul, a 35-member group of UI students, will perform in concert at 7:30 tonight in Clapp Recital Hall. The group, now in its 11th year of existence, is devoted to performing gospel music, traditional black spirituals and original music composed by the group's director, Raleigh

According to Williams, the group's function isn't just to perform, but to educate. "We're keeping alive a tradition that doesn't really exist in Iowa City," he said. "Education is an important part of what we do. We also do special performances for the elderly and the handicapped - we try to reach the isolated parts of the community.'

Williams has been championing the cause of indigenous black music for years. He took over the directorship of the Voices of Soul in 1978 and has been nurturing and developing the group's style to the point that it is regularly asked to perform outside of Iowa City.

WILLIAMS HAS steeped himself in the history of Afro-American gospel music and writes copious program notes to aid the uninitiated in understanding. He quotes gospel music historian Pearl Williams-Jones, who characterizes gospel music "by its use of texts of poetic imagery, poly-rhythms with strong emphasis upon syncopation, melodies based upon the 'blues scale' (which consists of the lowered thirds, fifths and sevenths) and European harmonies."

Jazz musician and composer Donald Byrd has described gospel music as one of the few black art forms that has not evolved into something else. "There hasn't been any evolution in it like there has been in jazz or folk, with the changing of the beat, the basic construction and even the harmonic techniques. It's one of the pure strains in the black heritage that hasn't changed from its birth in Africa, except for the first adaptation to the white man's church.'

As Williams himself points out, gospel music has had and continues to have an influence on American popular musical forms. "Gospel music is no longer only a genre but a whole style of singing freely adapted by performers of other forms of music. It has influenced the Beatles, Little Richard, Lou Rawls, Nina Simone, The Commodores and many others."

Besides the educational aspect of the Voices of Soul, Williams points out that the natural energy that emanates from the stage when the group performs hooks the audience emotionally. "It's participatory music, too," he said. "We involve the fact Baltimore is hosting the game has kept the odds down to 12 points, also an indication the Cowboys may go without quarterback Danny White, who has a painful rib injury.

"He doesn't look good just to look at him." Coach Tom Landry says of White. "I have no idea whether White will play or not. That will first be determined by the doctors and once they give the OK it will be up to Danny White whether he plays or not. If he can go, he will go.

Kansas City has owned or shared its division lead in seven of the last 13 weeks, but is rated a three-point underdog to Denver for this game at Mile High Stadium. The Chiefs beat the Broncos 28-14 in an earlier game this season, but there's no overconfidence, especially after a 27-10 loss to Detroit on Thanksgiving Day.

'You can't think about playoffs," says Kansas City Coach Marv Levy. You have to think only about Den-

There still is uncertainty about Levy's choice of Bill Kenney or Steve Fuller at quarterback for the Bronco game. Kenney hit on 4 of 8 passes against Detroit for 38 yards and was intercepted twice. Levy sent Fuller in as a second half replacement and he completed 10 of 17 passes for 131 yards.

"I think they are both solid, young guys who are learning," Levy says. My confidence in players, with whom we've worked from the beginning of camp and beyond, doesn't change as swiftly as somebody's from the outside might with players on the basis of a play, a game or a half."

Levy said that pressures are part of a quarterback's maturing process nine-game losing streak since opening the season with a startling upset of third-ranked Alabama. "This is like another opening game for both teams because we both had three week layoffs," said Dooley, referring to the fact that both had back-to-back open dates to accommodate ABC-Television which needed a game, any game, to put on ahead of Army-Navy.

'Georgia Tech's win over Alabama was no fluke," Dooley said. "In an opening game like that, with three weeks to prepare, they can do many different things the other team doesn't expect. The similarities between their game with Alabama and their game with us are interesting.

"I'm certain Tech will try some new things against us." he said. When you are a team with a good record, you don't change much. But Tech hasn't got anything to lose by changing some and gambling more."

Georgia is a 21-point favorite over Georgia Tech, but Alabama was a 24-point favorite and lost.

Iowa Men's Gymnastics Coach Tom Dunn is hoping that the Hawkeyes' appearance in the Windy City Invitational this weekend will answer a few questions and give his team a chance to gain a little recognition.

"Nebraska is quite a bit ahead of anybody that will be there." Dunn said. We could finish second as well as 10th. The nine teams in the middle are just that close. I'd say that Illinois Chicago-Circle and Southern Illinois will probably be near the bottom."

Joining the Hawks in the middle nine are Iowa State, Ohio State, Illinois, Northern Illinois, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Michigan and Penn State.

After a strong second place finish in the Midwest Open last weekend, Dunn said the first part of this week has been a little disappointing. "We've had a few little things that have been keeping some of the guys from working as hard as we'd have liked them to work in preparation for this meet," Dunn said. "It's been a little frustrating the first part of the week, but I'm sure we can put together a better performance than we did at the Midwest Open."

Senior Paul Goedecke re-injured his shoulder, but should be able to work most of the events. Kyle Shanton, who has been out with a broken thumb, may see some action this weekend. Iowa's best chances for making the finals will be Joe Leo on pommel horse, Kelly Crumley on horizontal bar and Terry Heffron on still rings. "The competition at this meet will be much

Swim format varied in Illinois Invitational

By H. Forrest Woolard

There will be no second chances to drop times for members of the Iowa men's swimming team this weekend when the Hawkeyes compete in the Illinois Invitational

In most major invitationals there are preliminary races which are used to seed the swimmers for the finals. But in the three-day meet in Champaign, Ill., the Hawks will only swim each event one time. This type of meet is called a time-final meet.

IOWA GOES INTO the invitational as the defending champion, and according to Iowa Coach Glenn Patton, the Hawkeyes have an excellent chance to repeat as the meet winner. Wisconsin, who defeated the Hawks, 62-51, earlier in the season, will be Iowa's toughest opponent. The Badgers finished third in the Big Ten last season, while the Hawks won the championship

Southern Illinois was entered in the meet, but the Salukis will only send a diving contingency. Patton said the Hawks were disappointed that Southern, a regional and Division II power, dropped out of the meet. Other squads competing in the invitational are Iowa State, Illinois and Minnesota.

'We're not hung up on whether we win or lose the meet," Patton said. "We're training right through this meet. Our whole year's training is geared toward Big Tens and NCAAs. We think we can win without resting."

FORTUNATELY FOR the Hawks, the other teams are probably training through the meet also, according to Patton. Since the swimmers will not be rested, times are expected to be slightly higher than in past duals this season. For example, Wisconsin rested before its victory over the Hawks, while Iowa took a two-day break prior to the its 59-54 loss to Indiana two

The only major problem in Iowa's line-up is diving. Because Tim Freed is out of competition with an ear infection, the Hawks will not enter divers in the meet. Randy Ableman, who won the NCAA one-meter diving event last season, is academically ineligible this

The 18-event format for the meet is the same used at the Big Ten and NCAA championships. Several events will be held which are usually excluded from dual competition including the 400-yard individual medley, 1,650 freestyle and 100s for all four strokes.

Season just starting; recruiting under way

By Steve Batterson

With only two games played in the basketball season, the Iowa coaching staff is already planning for next year.

The Hawkeyes have received verbal commitments from two high school players who haven chosen to play basketball for Iowa next season. Andre Banks, a six-foot-four guard from Chicago and 6-7 Brian Boyle, a forward from St. Louis, have acknowledged they would like to play for Iowa after high school. Boyle is the brother of Iowa co-captain Kevin Boyle.

Iowa is also looking at several other quality players, and Assistant Coach Jim Rosborough said that the Hawks will sign no more than four recruits linois preps and two big men, one from Arizona and one from Michigan. Six-for possible scholarships along with 6-8 Sam Hill of Chicago, Ill., and 6-6 Weldon Williams from Crete, Ill.

Rosborough said that all four of the recruits have visited the campus and all four would fit in well in Iowa's program. "Our players have met them and they have liked them. That is one of the most important things to us,' Rosborough said. "We would hope to get a big man at this point. We've had a couple in and we are still involved in recruiting some of them."

He also added that the coaching staff is not actively recruiting any in-state athletes. "There are several people in the Quad-Cities and around the state that we are watching," Rosborough said. "But that is what we're doing, just watching. Proposal should satisfy college grid programs

ST. LOUIS (UPI) - Officials of two major football powers said Thursday an NCAA reorganization proposal should satisfy feuding College Football Association members.

Richard Perry, athletic director at the University of Southern California. and Charley Scott, associate academic vice president at the University of Alabama, predicted the proposal will pass Friday during the NCAA special convention

The proposal would cut Division 1A membership by about 45 schools.

BOTH OFFICIALS SAID the proposal does meet most of the concerns of the 61 CFA members, who want more control over their own programs, including television rights.

'It does get us to where most of the major football playing institutions wanted to be in the first place," Perry The proposal was one of several scheduled to be discussed by NCAA members during a three-hour roundtable Thursday. No formal votes will be taken until Friday. "I think it's got a very good shot," Perry said at a news conference. "It provides an alternative to the college association to reduce the numbers. It also has sufficient flexibility. 'There are about three ways a school can come into Division 1A. Those people sitting right on the borderline are not looking at a hopeless

Scott, one of the early leaders in the college grid revolt, said the proposal would be enough to satisfy Alabama. "It would move us closer," Scott said. "Whether or not it will satisfy all of the institutions remains to be seen." The 61-member College Football Association, which consists of all major football playing conferences and independents except the Big Ten and Pacific Ten, is pushing for the reorganization as a means of controlling its own television appearances. The NCAA proposal, and one by the Big Eight conference, would establish stricter requirements, including higher average game attendance, for Division 1A membership. The NCAA proposal would drop 1A membership from its present 137 schools to between 90 and 95 schools, while the Big Eight proposal would leave about 80 to 85 schools in the top division. The conferences that appear to be threatened the most by the proposals are the Ivy League, Missouri Valley, Southern, Southland, Mid-American and the Pacific Coast Athletic Associa-

Under the NCAA proposal, Division 1A schools would be required to have an average game attendance of 20,000, home and away, and play at least four home games. Under the Big Eight proposal, home attendance would be required to average 17,000, and schools must have stadiums with 30,000 permanent seats.

Dave Hart, athletic director at the University of Missouri, said the Big Eight would be satisfied if either proposal passes. 'We'll be happy with 90 to 95 schools in Division 1A, but 80 to 85 would be more workable," Hart said. "The Ivy League is going to fight this, but some of the schools are going to say, 'What the heck, we'll go to Division 1-AA and see what happens.

Covering sports and the arts are much the same

I got a letter last summer griping about my periodic writing for the sports page. I'm basically an entertainment writer - a critic of music and books, commenter on events - and somehow people just can't accept my ventures into the land of sweat and strain.

good place to begin building a case that sports and art appreciation are much the same. Dance, you see, is a very athletic form. Barishnikov is no less an athlete than Reggie Jackson. It would be entirely possible that a sportswriter could criticize Barishnikov competently because dance is merely a highlydisciplined and beautiful athletic form.

So it is not so much a line I have been crossing as a foggy valley, a zone that is both sport and art. Good sports coverage and good A/E writing have much in common. Both are accounts THERE IS LITTLE in common and appraisals of individual and team and Butch. Arts/Entertainment there, it would seem. But dance is a performance. may have little in common with Sir George Solti, but both have much the same job - coordinating a group of individuals who are working toward the same goal.

THE ARGUMENT THAT art is a form for individual expression may or may not hold water. Just as no orchestra leader can succeed in stamping out the individuality of his performers, no coach can eliminate the quirks of the athlete. Tom Landry, as close to being a digital human being as anyone, could not eliminate Don Merideth's flashy style; no one crosses

Walter Payton and no one can deny the bouncing joy of Stephen Grappelli's most formal performances.

When Iowa basketball player Steve Krafcisin was on the court, he expressed emotional struggle on a very personal level. He suffered for his art. He swore and bled and cried as much as any frustrated and unreadable novelist. He played every game over his head, with courage and desire. The crowd loved him as much for his struggle as for the points he put on the board, just as Emily Dickenson is loved as much for her tribulations and SPORT, BEING DIRECTLY competitive, is often lost to the tyranny of the scoreboard. Its subtleties are deluged by statistics and play-by-play accounts. Like a concert reviewer con cerned only with what pieces were performed, sportswriters often neglect the beauty of the sport.

At any rate, some crossing of lines, some interchange of thought, might benefit both sports and arts coverage. Sports would regain the joy of nuances ost, a pour l'art appreciation of athletic ability. Arts could certainly ise the sportswriters ability to watch isten and enjoy without pretention.

Wrestlers pin Buckeyes, 52-0

It's not known how many lights hang from the roof of Iowa's Field House. but if you want an estimated count, ask an Ohio State wrestler.

The Buckeyes spent most of the evening on their backs as Iowa's wrestling team destroyed Ohio State, 52-0. It was the Hawks biggest victory on the mat since a 56-0 win over Indiana State in 1978.

Iowa scored five pins and Lou Banach won by disqualification as a crowd of 3,158 watched the rout. Banach's opponent, Eric Neily, was warned for stalling several times before referee Mike Allen whistled an

The most unusual fall came at 118 pounds when Barry Davis used an "undetermined or take it as you can get it' move to pin Dane Tuessel in 4 minutes. 12 seconds. "I JUST HAD to get in gear," Frost said. "I knew I could go on the guy. I

Marquette a road test for cagers

By H. Forrest Woolard

To a history fanatic, Marquette is the name of an explorer who traveled the Mississippi River in the 17th century. but to any sports fan, the mention of the university in Milwaukee, Wis., means basketball.

While the Warriors have qualified for the NCAA basketball tournament the last 12 of 13 seasons, their program gained recognition when Marquette won the championship in 1977 under Al McGuire. That victory, along with the fact McGuire often discussed the Warriors' success while announcing for NBC-TV sports, has given Marquette the stigma of a cage

"AL MCGUIRE HAD good players then," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson, whose Hawkeyes meet the Warriors Saturday night in Milwaukee at 8 p.m. "All of that mystique wouldn't hold up if they didn't have good players."

Once again the Warriors have put together a talented squad led by 6-foot-4 guards Glenn Rivers and Michael Wilson. Last season Rivers was named by NBC-TV and Basektball Weekly as a freshman All-American. Other starters for Marquette include

6-7 forwards Terrell Schlundt and Marc Marotta, Dean Marquardt, who stands at 6-9, is the Warriors' center. Although Iowa owns a 2-0 record, it hasn't met a strong Division I opponent so far this season. But Saturday night's game will be a test.

"It will be a very tough ball game for us," Olson said. "They're probably as tough a team on their home court as anybody we'll hit before our Big Ten games. Very few teams go in and win at Marquette.

OLSON KNOWS FROM experience that veterans Kevin Boyle and Kenny he was personally nominating "Tree" Arnold can hold up when somewhat un- for Iowa's most valuable player award ruly spectators begin to harass the this season. Hawks. But newcomers Michael Payne, Greg Stokes and Todd Berkenpas haven't competed in such circumstances vet:

"This game will give us an idea of what kind of road team we'll be this season," Olson said. "We'll also b able to see how our newcomers respond in other than friendly confines."

Payne has earned a spot in Iowa's line-up as the starting center. The 6-11 freshman leads the Hawks in rebounds with eight per game and has als averaged 9.5 points.

Continuing to make progress is Stokes, a 6-11 freshman from Hamilton, Ohio. "He's giving us second and third efforts without thinking about it now," Olson said. "Now it's just second nature.'

THE THIRD HAWKEYE vying for that starting center spot was junior college transfer Jerry Dennard, who had back surgery Thursday and will not make the trip to Milwaukee. The surgery went without complications and Dennard can possibly return later this season. Olson is considering, however, a redshirt for Dennard.

In the meantime. Mike Henry, for mer Iowa team member and current graduate assistant with the Hawks, has been filling in for Dennard. Olson said

Marquette is expected to play a two three zone behind the "strong guard play" of Rivers and Wilson. Olson sai the Hawkeves "need work against tha type of zone." so the game would be a

Cofield hopes Badger freshmen will age quickly

By Steve Batterson

CHICAGO, Ill. — Wisconsin Basket-ball Coach Bill Cofield is looking a set of bookends in the eve this year.

The Badgers, like many teams in the Big Ten this year, will be starting freshmen. The problem lies in the fact the Badgers will be starting three freshmen along with two seniors and lost three starters off a team that finished ninth in the league last season.

'We're not on top of a lot of people's lists," Cofield said. "We're one of those two or three teams that everybody is picking to finish in last or ninth - maybe even eighth if we're

THE VICTORIES PROBABLY won't come easy for either Cofield or the Badgers. Six of the 15 men on the Wisconsin roster are freshmen and gone are nearly 70 percent of the teams scorers and over 75 percent of the teams rebounders from last year.

Off to greener pastures through the NBA draft are the team's top two scorers, Claude Gregory and Larry Petty. Replacing them has been a priority with Cofield and he had to go to the high school ranks to bring in the talent he believes he'll need to win games in the Big Ten

Wisconsin will be starting the shor-

Carl Golston earning one of the guard positions. And Cofield is making no apologies. "He might be small, but he has dominated seven of our eight scrimmages," Cofield said of the freshman from Phillips High School in Chicago. "Golston is just physical and tough. He is a motivating type of player." He averaged 24.8 points a game last season for Phillips.

Another Chicago freshman, Cory Blackwell, will be starting at the forward position as will the third freshman, Brad Sellers of Warrensville Heights, Ohio.

THE TWO PEOPLE who hope to

John Bailey at guard and Keith Mitchell at center. Bailey started all 27 of Wisconsin's games last year and is the team's top returning scorer, carrying a 12.3 average from last season. He totaled 13.1 points per game in the Big Ten. Only 6-3, Bailey is known for his iumping ability and was the team's best field goal shooter although an injury late in the season lowered his
