Regents keeping tabs on bills in Iowa Legislature

By Rochelle Bozman
Staff Writer

Action taken by the Iowa Legislature on several pending bills will have an impact on the UI and the state Board of Regents. The regents mostly want well enough left alone.

The regents follow many bills through the legislature. Some are actively opposed, others are supported and some are just watched with interest. This session the regents oppose 41 bills, while supporting only three.

One of the bills supported by the regents for the 1982 session is Senate File 438, making employment applications confidential records and allowing their discussion in closed session.

As approved by the senate on April 8, 1981, the bill adds "To discuss the appointment or hiring of an individual," to the Iowa Open Meetings Law, as a reason for a closed session.

It also amends the Public Records Act to provide that "information contained in applications for employment received by public bodies" be included in confidential records.

After passing the senate, S.F. 438 was sent to the House Committee on State Government where it was amended to make applications confidential only on the applicant's request, when the disclosure would cause needless and irreparable injury to that individual's reputation.

THE AMENDED version requires publicizing of the applications of the five semi-final applicants. It also deletes an exception from the open meetings law.

This bill was not acted on in the house and so was returned to the Committee on State Government. The regents support the unamended version of the bill.

The regents are on record as opposing House File 860, a bill that would limit the number of employees to the equivalent number of full-time employees during fiscal year 1981.

The board believes that this plan would not allow filling health care positions or personnel needs caused by enrollment increases.

H.F. 860 was approved by the House Appropriations Committee during the last session but was not acted upon by the house so it returned to the committee.

Dennis Nagel of the UI Office of Public Information said the regents do not expect approval of this bill.

Another bill opposed by the regents would rewrite the current law on educational leaves for state employees. While regents institutions would not be under the broad rule-making authority created for the state comptroller, the regents would be forced to adopt new rules in conformity with the comptroller's rules.

THESE RULES would be subject to review and would give the comptroller See Bills, page 12

Reagan asks 'bold stroke' of America

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, pledging not to raise taxes or allow any tampering with his economic program, urged Congress Tuesday to "change the face" of government by transferring $47 billion in federal programs to the states.

Delivering his first State of the Union message to the assembled Congress, the president laid out a sweeping proposal to place responsibility for scores of programs, including most welfare, directly in the hands of state and local officials.

Reagan ruled out any tax increases this year — a vow greeted by sustained applause. He insisted his program of aggressive budget cuts and tax reductions has paved the way for economic recovery this year and warned Congress it cannot waver from that path if inflation and recession are to be eliminated.

"SELDOM HAVE the stakes been higher for America," Reagan told a capacity audience in the House chamber of Capitol, which included his Cabinet, members of the Supreme Court and other dignitaries.

"What we do and say here will make all the difference... to millions of everyday Americans who harbor the simple wish of a safe and financially secure future for their children," he said.

Reagan offered a general outline of his sweeping proposal to end a "jungle" of welfare programs and create a "New Federalism" — "a single, bold stroke" that would dramatically realign responsibility for such things as urban development and highway maintenance as well as welfare.

Social Security will not be affected.

HE ADVOCATED giving the states full control of more than 40 programs in social services, education, community development and transportation. The shift would take place over eight years, beginning in 1984, with a special trust fund helping states foot the bill.

Democrats in Congress assailed the new program and even some Republicans were critical of parts of the program. Senate Finance Committee chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Reagan's proposal to turn the food stamp program back to the states may not work.

In a taped Democratic response to Reagan's speech, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said the president was "putting the American dream beyond the reach of average people, reserving the American dream for the wealthy few."

Reagan said his plan was a "spirited initiative that I believe can change the face of American government and make it again the servant of the people."

Board picks Cruise after heated debate

By Elizabeth Flansburg
Staff Writer

Heated debate surrounded the final vote Tuesday night on the Iowa City School Board's choice of legal counsel.

Local attorney John Cruise was selected in a 5-2 vote as board member Classic Hoyle expressed "strong reservations" on the choice.

"It was clear to me that Mr. Cruise did not meet the basic qualifications," Hoyle said, adding that he admittedly did not meet the board's criterion of handling district cases in court. He "talked away his lack of experience saying that the firm could pick that up," Hoyle said.

Cruise works with the Barker, Cruise and Kennedy firm.

Board member Michael Hart said

Cruise "clearly indicated" that by hiring him, the board, in essence, would be hiring a firm. Hart said he understood the board had decided against hiring a firm and therefore Cruise was not the best candidate.

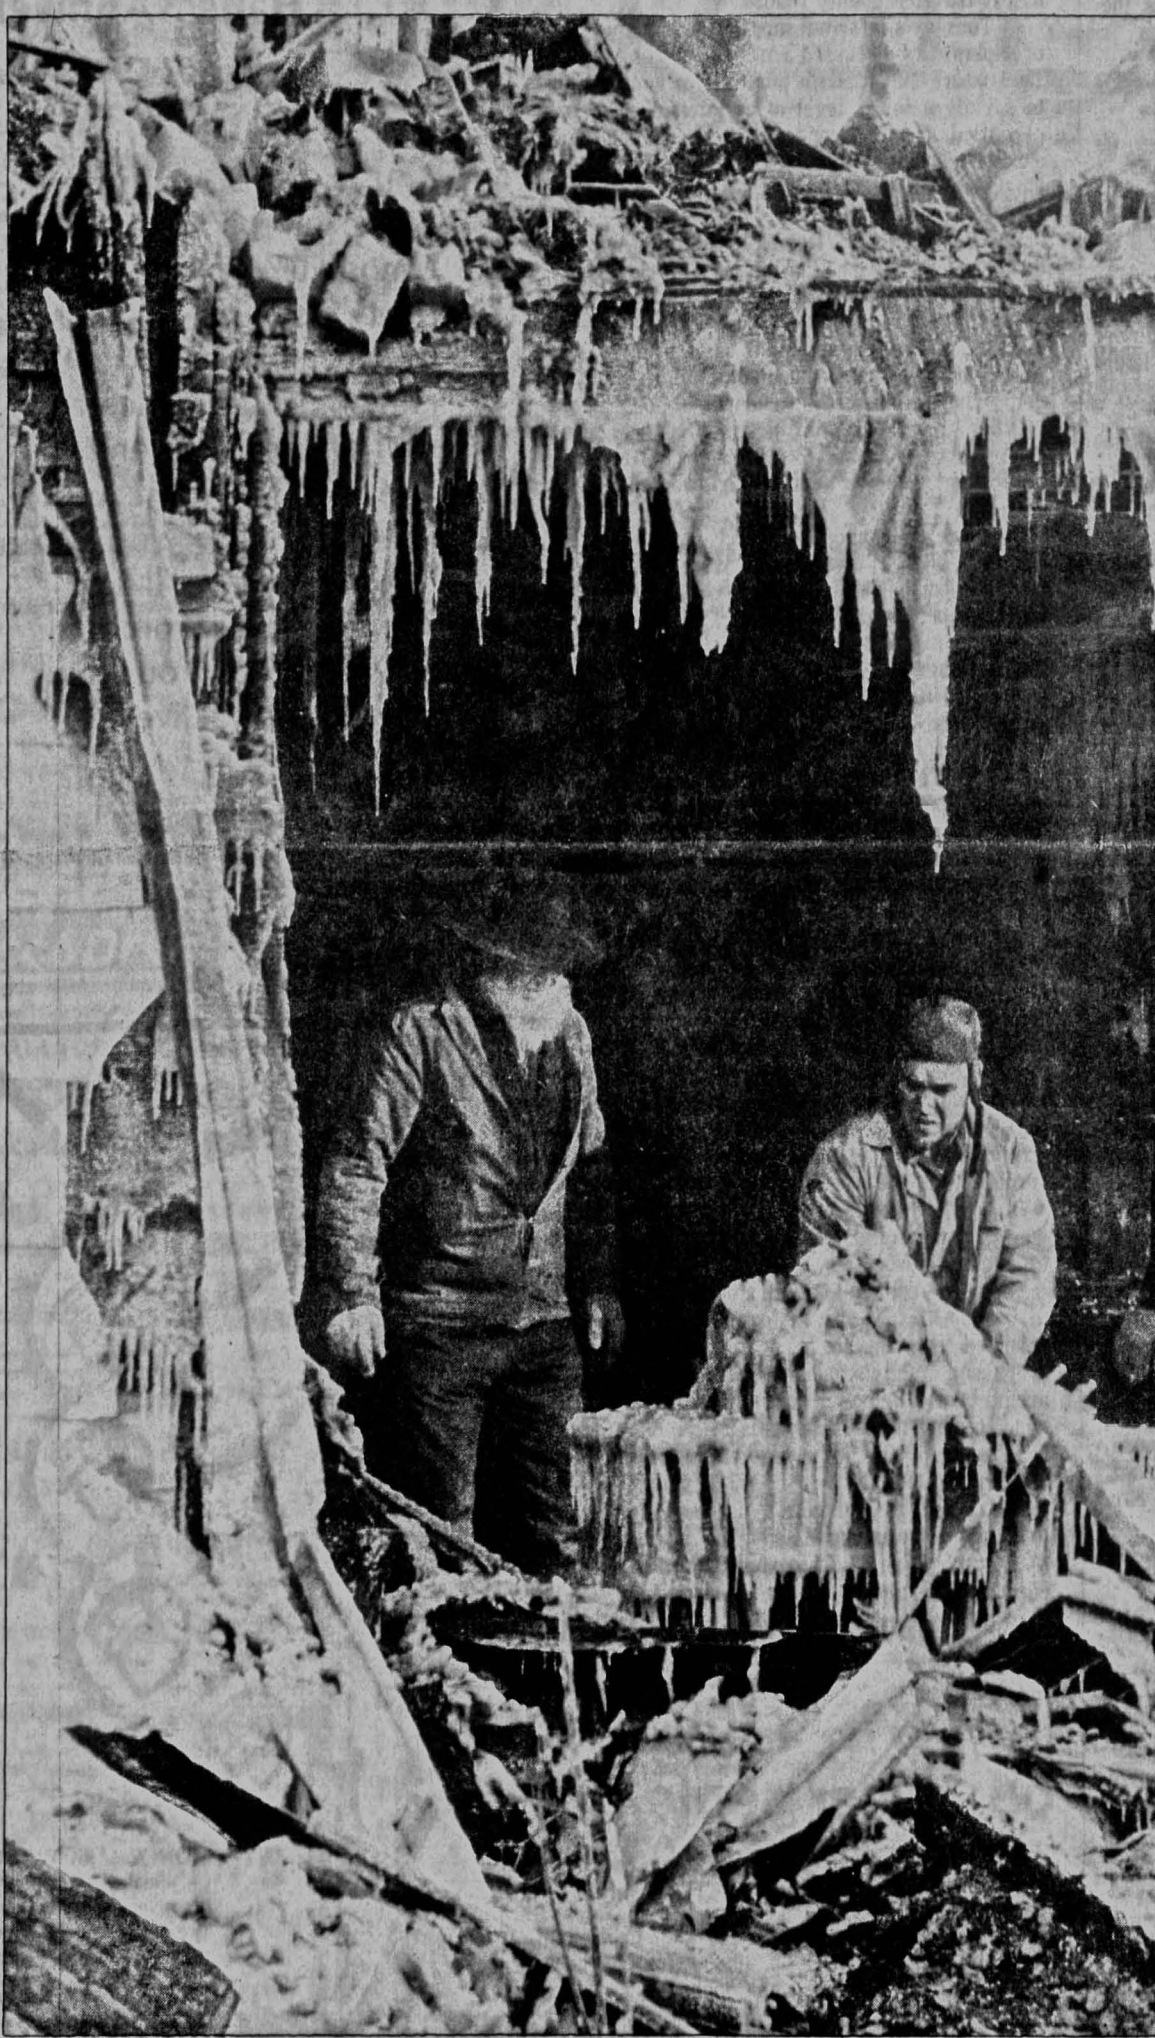

HART ADDED that he was more positive about the other candidate, Patricia Kamath, because she is a "very intelligent person and very articulate person."

Board member Dorsey Phelps asked Hoyle, who served on the board's search committee for legal counsel, why Cruise was ever put on the list for consideration if he wasn't qualified.

Hoyle responded that she was opposed to even considering Cruise, but other committee members voted to Help is offered to Kalona family

Neighbors search through the rubble of the Firman Hershberger house, which was destroyed by fire late Monday. Four children died in the blaze, which may have been caused by a faulty light fixture.

This story was written from reports by DI staff writer Glenn Townes and United Press International.

Residents of the close-knit community of Kalona, Iowa, are offering their help to the family that lost four children in a fire believed to be caused by a defective light fixture.

The home of 31-year-old Firman Hershberger, a dairy farmer, was destroyed in a fire that started before 11:30 Monday night. Hershberger, his wife Sovilla, 36, and 3-year-old son Darwin survived the blaze.

The victims were identified as Juanita Ann Hershberger, 10; twins Virgil Lyle and Verton Lynn Hershberger, 9; and Keith Daniel Hershberger, 6.

The Hershbergers, who are Conservative Mennonites, spent the night at the home of neighbor Frank Yoder, who said that the Hershbergers had received numerous supports of help.

"People have been calling offering food, clothing and support," Yoder said. Mennonites in six states have phoned wanting to offer some kind of aid to the family.

"At least six people have offered their homes to them," he said.

AT LEAST A DOZEN horse-and-buggy teams intermingled with automobiles on the Yoder farmyard Tuesday as Amish and Mennonite families rushed over to help.

Yoder said Hershberger broke down and sobbed out the story of his frantic efforts to save his children. Awakened by a smoke detector, Yoder said, Hershberger raced upstairs but was stopped by flames and smoke in the hallway.

Barefoot, he then ran outside and climbed a wall leading to the window of the bedroom where his children were trapped, Yoder said. Hershberger pounded on the window with his bare hands until it broke, cutting and bruising himself in the process, Yoder said. But, as he tried to climb through the window frame, the metal gutter supporting him collapsed and he fell into a snowbank, Yoder said.

Yoder said Hershberger then tried an alternate route by climbing over the garage roof to another bedroom, but when he broke out another window, the fresh air fueled the flames to an even greater intensity and he had to leave.

YODER SAID he was stopped by a passerby who alerted him to the fire, which was visible one-half mile away. When he arrived, Yoder said he found Hershberger sitting in a car, bleeding profusely, his lone surviving son and wife wrapped in a blanket.

Yoder said he gave them his coat and tried to convince the family to leave with him.

Librarian brings special books to UI from all over the world

By Elizabeth Zima
Special to The Daily Iowan

Ceres Birkhead was the kind of child who read under the covers while everyone else was asleep. Her father gave her books from all over the world to read.

She read many things; Charles Dickens, Mark Twain, Hans Christian Andersen, Agatha Christie, Ellery Queen, Italian fairy tales like Pirandello, stories of the great detective Sherlock Holmes, and the French detective Arsene Lupin.

Birkhead, who grew up in Brazil, said her father brought home books translated into Portuguese from the bookstores and libraries. "Whenever my dad brought books home we fought over them." The family read constantly, "everything and anything."

"The woman who cooked for us thought we were crazy. My mother overheard her telling someone, 'Even the little one sits in a chair and reads all day,'" she said.

Birkhead no longer reads under the covers. Instead, as an order librarian at the UI Main Library, she brings books and materials from all over the world to library patrons, like her father once did for her. She also occasionally selects books for the library's Latin American collection.

She came to the United States in 1965 to study at Tulane University, where she received a bachelor's degree in English. In 1968 she married Douglas Birkhead, and in 1976 they moved to Iowa City. She received her master's degree in Library Science from the UI in 1978.

BIRKHEAD SAID choosing the materials for the Latin American collection is the best part of her job. She reads catalogues from all over the world; Latin America, Great Britain, Spain, Portugal, France, and Germany.

She said her knowledge of languages helped her get her job. The books and manuscripts requested are often written in foreign languages, and the materials she obtains for the Latin

Polish martial law legalized

WARSAW, Poland — The Polish parliament rubber-stamped a minor cabinet shakeup sought by military chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski Tuesday and then ended a two-day session that legalized martial law.

In Geneva, Switzerland, Secretary of State Alexander Haig met Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko for nearly eight hours but said the "long, dark shadow of Poland" blocked progress on nearly everything they discussed.

Socialist elected in Finland

HELSINKI, Finland — Prime Minister Mauno Koivisto was elected Finland's first Socialist president Tuesday and pledged to maintain traditional close ties with the Soviet Union while seeking to foster detente.

The 58-year-old Koivisto, a Social Democrat, defeated a field of right-wing rivals by a 167-134 vote in the electoral council.

Soviet chief Suslov dead

MOSCOW — Mikhail Suslov, who rose from peasant background and became a hard-line ideologue in the ruling Politburo, has died at the age of 79, the official Tass news agency said today.

Suslov reportedly died of a heart attack and had been in critical condition Monday, an authority said. Suslov became one of the most influential politicians in the country as the guardian of orthodox Marxism.

Man killed by flying rock

BLACKWOOD, Va. (UPI) — A miner sitting in a truck was killed when a dictionary-sized rock chunk from a mine blast more than a half-mile away shattered the truck's back window, a state official said Tuesday.

The rock measured 11 inches long, nine inches wide and four inches thick and shot through the window during a scheduled blast Monday, said assistant mine inspector Louis Wheatley of the state Division of Mines.

Negotiation for Dozier told

ROME — Italy's state radio said Tuesday the CIA is conducting secret negotiations with Red Brigades terrorists demanding a record $9.6 million ransom to free kidnapped U.S. Army Brig. Gen. James Dozier, U.S. and Italian officials denied the report.

The report said the Red Brigades were demanding a ransom of 12 billion lire — about $9.6 million — for Dozier's release.

U.S. wheat sold to China

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department said Tuesday that private exporters have sold 130,000 metric tons of American wheat to China.

The soft red winter wheat will count toward sales in the second year of a U.S.-China grain agreement. The second year began Jan. 1.

Youth testifies in Atlanta

ATLANTA — A 15-year-old youth testified Tuesday that accused killer Wayne Williams made homosexual advances to him. It was the first time the prosecution has suggested a motive for the 28 black slayings that rocked Atlanta.

The youth, who was not identified by agreement of opposing attorneys, also testified he saw Lubie Geter, one of the victims, get into a car with Williams.

UAW, union face deadline

DETROIT — Facing a Thursday deadline, United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. bargainers Tuesday resumed intense sessions aimed at winning union contract concessions and drastically reducing car prices.

UAW Vice President Owen Bieber said he saw "no reason" why negotiators could not reach an agreement by the deadline.

City banks to wait on savings charge

By Scott Sonner
Staff Writer

Iowa City banks do not plan to follow the example of several others that charge service fees on savings accounts to help offset transaction handling costs, officials at four local banks said Tuesday.

Although no plans exist to initiate the charges "in the near future," decreased federal regulation and increased costs of new techniques such as electronic banking have forced some bankers to keep "all options open," officials said.

Banker's Trust Company in Des Moines will begin charging a $2 monthly service fee and a 20 cent per withdrawal fee next month on savings accounts with a balance of less than $200. The fees will not be charged to senior citizens or minors.

BANKER'S TRUST COMPANY Director of Communication Ed Redfern said the new policy is indicative of a "total change in the direction of banking."

"If you keep up a balance in an account, the services will be free, because the bank generates profit off that balance. If you don't, then you will have to pay a fee. That's somewhat of a switch in the philosophy of banking," he said.

Banker's Trust Company was reluctant to follow the trend that began about a year ago, he said. But "we can no longer afford to bury our head in the sand ... and ignore the costs," Redfern said.

Many of the costs are a result of federal deregulation of banks, Redfern said. The government is now charging banks for services it once provided for free, he said. Deregulation of banks also forced competitive banks to pay higher interest rates than ever before, he said.

First National Bank in Iowa City is not considering charging savings account service fees "at the present time," according to Lynn Rowat, second vice president.

Hawkeye State Bank and Iowa State Bank and Trust Co. have no plans to implement the service charges, bank officials said.

IF HIGH COSTS forced initiation of such fees, they would only apply to "very small balances, less than $50," Jim Schulze, executive vice president of Hawkeye State Bank said. The only purpose of such fees is to offset the cost of handling transactions, he said.

"Computer charges per account, per month are the same whether the balance is 10 cents or $10,000," he said.

The decision not to charge for savings accounts is based on a "public relations standpoint. A lot of people wouldn't understand," he said.

UniBank and Trust has "not mentioned the idea at all," said Jim Cooley, assistant vice president.

Cooley acknowledged the cost of maintaining inactive accounts but said he favors alternatives that would "help people with stressed budgets, especially the unemployed."

Businesses tend to overreact when the economy is depressed, Cooley said.

"IT IS a managerial responsibility to maintain low costs. The easy way to do that is to pass the cost on to the customer. The hard way is to reorganize ... It's a matter of rolling up our sleeves and taking the hard way not the easy way," he said.

"Management sometimes has to look in the mirror and respond with increased effort on their side of the table. It's a two-way street," Cooley said.

Reclassification of county roads is controversial

By Kevin Cook
Staff Writer

Johnson County may make use of a recently passed state law — yet to be affirmed in the courts — that would cut down on required maintenance of lightly traveled county roads.

At Tuesday's informal meeting, the county Board of Supervisors discussed a 1981 decision by the Iowa Legislature that made it possible for county boards to specify a lower level of maintenance for roads classified as Area Service B. The board could lower a road's classification after consulting with County Engineer O.J. Gode.

BOARD MEMBER Dennis Langenberg voiced his disapproval of such a plan, saying it would be "nuts" and a "boondoggle."

The law states a class B road would not have to be bladed or cleared on a regular basis. The B designation would also clear the county of liability if an accident occurred while the road was in poor repair.

Other than load limit posting for bridges, the county would not have to place signs on B roads except at entrances to warn of the lower maintenance status.

However, Gode and the supervisors expressed concern that the resolution had not been tested in court. Gode added that he knew of no other counties that had "jumped on the bandwagon" of the resolution.

Gode said that the plan could reduce the cost of maintaining "stub roads" that lead to dead ends, and mentioned the possibility of designating roads that are traveled by fewer than 30 cars a day as B roads.

CODE TOLD the board that the county is not in a position to act on the measure now, and recommended the board discuss the legality of the resolution with Assistant County Attorney J. Patrick White and representatives from other boards and counties.

In other action:

• The board looked at the possibility of cutting into the more than $1 million cash balance in the county's farm-to-market budget.

Board members discussed possible regrading and paving of County Road K, but Gode said that the supervisors should be prepared to condemn privately owned land and fences in order to complete the project.

Gode said that the board has been reluctant to condemn land in the past.

• Bids to provide the county with health insurance were presented to the board by Dave Carrell of the Cleveland Associates.

The board contracted with Cleveland Associates to garner bids on health insurance, and the firm reported receiving six plans from four companies.

• Johnson County's physical plant manager and the architect who helped design the county jail were on hand to clear up dealings with 27 items that needed repair during the jail's one year warranty period that ended Dec. 31.

The repairs ranged from a discolored formica top to a leaky dishwashing machine, but all will apparently be taken care of at no expense to the county, according to Roland Wehner, project manager for the firm of Wehner Nowysz Pattschull and Pfiffner of Iowa City.

Man gets probation on 5-year sentence

By Ed Conlow
Staff Writer

The prison term of a man who pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in 1981 was reduced to probation Tuesday in Johnson County District Court.

According to court records: Michael Wally Adekat, who has served since October a maximum five-year sentence in the Men's Reformatory in Anamosa, was placed on two years probation and ordered to enroll in an alcohol treatment program by Judge Thomas Horan.

Courts

The involuntary manslaughter charge stemmed from a March 20 auto accident that claimed the life of Alan Rothermel. Adekat was charged with his third drunken driving offense since 1978, and for unintentionally killing Rothermel.

One of the reasons Horan cited for reducing Adekat's sentence was an August 1981 letter by the deceased man's wife, Betsey Rothermel, of West Liberty, Iowa. The letter asked that the court sentence Adekat in a manner "that would maximize rehabilitation for Mr. Adekat's alcohol problem ..."

Rothermel did not ask that Adekat be incarcerated but requested that Adekat be put on strict probation that would include abstinence from alcoholic beverages.

"In my mind the only way Mr. Adekat can ever compensate for the tragedy for our automobile accident is to live his life in service to his creator and to try to serve other persons, as I believe my husband would have done if he were alive today," Rothermel wrote.

In re-sentencing Adekat, Horan also cited the defendant's good prison behavior.

Keep on trucking

Remember last summer's double-bottom truck debate? A trucking company challenged Iowa's law prohibiting 65-foot double-bottom trucks from using the state's highways. The state steadfastly defended the law, appealed the case to the United States Supreme Court, and lost. The Iowa Transportation Commission grudgingly agreed to let the trucks in, if they never strayed more than five miles from an interstate highway.

It now appears that the commissioners may not have been as reluctant to allow the monsters into the state as they appeared at the time. They have just ruled that the big trucks may travel in large areas of the state where they have not, until now, been permitted.

Last summer, commissioners offered compelling reasons to bar the trucks from the state. Heavy trucks are harder on highways; studies indicate that it takes 10,000 automobiles to do the same damage as a fully loaded semi. The road use taxes truckers pay do not nearly make up for the damage caused by their trucks.

Safety is also an important consideration. Accident rates for oversize trucks are from 67 to 347 percent higher than for standard semis, depending on the type of road they use. The worst rates occur on two-lane highways — the kind that commissioners want to open up to the behemoths.

Assuming that double-bottom trucks have grown neither lighter or safer, there seems to be little justification for the new ruling. There has been speculation that the order was an attempt by Republican Governor Robert Ray's administration to curry favor with the trucking industry, traditionally a stronghold of democratic support.

There seems to be no other explanation. It is unfortunate that the commissioners have sacrificed the safety and tax dollars of Iowans to satisfy short-term political ambitions.

Pennies from Reagan

For those busy inverting umbrellas in anticipation of a deluge from the trickle-down theory, don't bother. Those aren't pearls, they're hailstones. A case in point is the expected 4.8 percent increase in the residential property tax rate to be levied by our own Iowa City fathers. Other tax hikes are anticipated from the legislature.

Some of these increases are prompted by concerns about inflation and expanding government services, but much of the credit should go to President Reagan's new federalism. Waving the flag of state autonomy, Reagan managed to shift the burden of many social programs to the states and local jurisdictions while decreasing the flow of federal money to them.

A prime example is the projected 12 percent across-the-board reduction in federal revenue sharing for fiscal 1983. This means that state and local governments will be forced to increase taxes just to maintain the status quo, and even greater increases can be anticipated if they are to pick up the slack left by the federal government in the area of social programs.

The tragic part of this pass-the-buck economic policy is that those least able to afford it are being saddled with the cost of the welfare shift. Traditionally, local jurisdictions collect a major portion of their revenues from highly regressive sales and property taxes, placing a proportionately greater burden on low-income families and those with fixed incomes such as the elderly. Thus the president's highly touted program of government reduction will cause the workingman to pay more for services he already had.

So while holdouts for Reaganomics wait for the trickle-down theory to start dumping pennies from Reagan, the prudent will get ready for stormy weather. It may be true, as Reagan says, that the present economic setbacks are only temporary and that April showers do bring May flowers; still it seems "I've heard that song before."

FDR remembered

Saturday, Jan. 30, will be the 100th anniversary of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's birth. The Roosevelt centennial is being marked in Washington partly through a luncheon to be hosted by Ronald and Nancy Reagan.

FDR defined the presidency as being "preeminently a place of moral leadership." To Roosevelt, moral leadership meant the federal government had to assume a more active role in promoting the economic well-being of the American people; this meant a radical departure from the laissez-faire policies of predecessors Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover.

Roosevelt took office at the height of the Great Depression. The nation's banks were mostly closed. 13 million people were unemployed. Roosevelt fought to turn the tide by pumping federal money into the economy. He created the Civilian Conservation Corps, which employed half a million workers to labor on environmental projects. He was responsible for the passage of the Social Security Act. He was also the first president to appoint a woman to his cabinet.

Roosevelt did not end the depression — it took a world war to do that. But his concern and his programs for the disadvantaged made hard times more bearable for millions of people.

He will be honored this week by a president who is actively reducing federal responsibility to the poor and the aged while providing increased tax relief for the wealthy; a president whose minions have sold out the Department of the Interior and the Environmental Protection Agency to business interests; a president who has appointed far fewer women to positions than his predecessors did; a president who admits to admiring the presidential policies of Calvin Coolidge.

What is international terrorism?

WASHINGTON — If international terrorism has replaced human rights as the focus of American foreign policy, then we still haven't defined our terms.

Just what, exactly, constitutes international terrorism? There are plenty of recent examples: the assassination in Paris this week of Lt. Col. Charles Robert Ray, a military attaché at the U.S. Embassy there; the kidnapping of Brig. Gen. James Dozier by Italy's Red Brigades last month; the alleged plots on the lives of President Reagan and other high-ranking U.S. officials by Libyan-backed assassins.

With the help of expert theorizing by authors Claire Sterling and Arnaud de Borchgrave, the administration has been trying to document to Americans that an international network may be responsible for the training and coordination of such factions as the Red Brigades, Irish Republican Army and the Palestine Liberation Organization. If anything, Americans have probably come to think that the only real terrorist is, at least, a Soviet protege.

THERE SEEMS to be a troubling reluctance among Americans, however, to sustain their definitions of

Glen & Shearer

"terrorism" and "terrorist" where U.S. culpability may be involved. Our muted response to government-sponsored slaughter in El Salvador over the last two years has been one indication of this blindness.

Now it's been documented that Cuban exiles in Southern California have broadened an effort initiated last year in Florida: the training of Nicaraguan guerrillas in suburban camps for a possible attack against the Sandinista government in Managua.

WHILE A 187-year-old federal law prohibits the use of U.S. territory to stage an invasion of a country with whom we're not at war, the Reagan administration doesn't appear troubled by the existence of these camps. Assistant Secretary of State Thomas Enders, a Vietnam strategist now trying to redeem his theories as policy director for Central America, has said that the guerrillas are clean "as long as they don't hurt anybody and as long as they don't actually conspire to invade in a specific way."

Indeed, no one has been able to confirm whether the Nicaraguan weekend warriors have the plans to launch a sortie from the Sunbelt against the Sandinistas.

But even if many Americans disregard the U.S.-backed invasion of Cuba by anti-Castro exiles — launched from our shores almost 21 years ago — we may eventually see the hypocrisy in the administration's assertions about a terrorist network. Should we not, then we're only hypocrites ourselves.

PRESIDENT REAGAN'S decision to require administration officials to receive advance clearance before they talk with reporters was the brainchild of the president's longtime friend, Justin Dart. The idea was placed in Reagan's ear by the California entrepreneur over the Christmas holidays.

Meanwhile, friends of Attorney General William French Smith have told us that the Los Angeles lawyer expects to be nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court if one of the current justices retires soon. Under such a scenario, presidential counselor Edwin Meese would replace Smith as chief of the Justice Department.

HOW DOES an American ambassador prepare himself for a new assignment overseas? Reagan friend Ted Cummings, the current envoy to Austria, enrolled in German Berlitz and ballroom dancing courses.

Finally, more of "1001 Uses for a Video Game": Students at the Georgetown University Law Center here can while away their free time at the controls of eight video games in the lounge of the Capitol Hill campus. There's a nice selection for our nation's nerve-wracked young leaders to choose from.

Meanwhile, the student center at Georgetown's undergraduate campus was renovated recently with the help of quarters spend by students on — you guessed it — more video games.

Refurbishing the White House

To the editor:

In J. Fusek's letter (DI, Jan. 18) finding fault with the Reagans' refurbishing of the White House and purchase of new china, he makes a glaring mistake in logic of a degree rarely seen on your editorial page.

To begin with, although all of the money required for the aforesaid purchases was donated by private individuals and organizations for the expressed purpose of remodeling and china purchase, through some alien form of reasoning Fusek implies that in reality, public funds were used.

He argues this point by saying that because the donating individuals received tax deductions for their donations, the tax that was collected from them was less. On this point he is correct. However, he then takes his great leap in logic by following this with a statement implying that public funds were used in these purchases.

On this point, Fusek is clearly wrong. The Federal government has no claim to any portion of an individual's money unless that money was earned during the current year through work, interest, investments and so on. If money is donated to any tax-deductible organization, the donating party has not received any benefit from the money, and hence is not taxed on it. This is because the government has no right to take from your earnings that which in effect, you haven't made.

Thus to imply, as Fusek does, that those were public funds that were spent is an untenable position. The government lost all right to tax the amount questioned the minute it was donated, and so those funds were never in danger of becoming public property.

Fusek's letter, therefore, was sadly lacking in logical content. In this case neither he nor anyone else has the right to tell private citizens or organizations how to spend their money.

Immigration policy

To the editor: On the side of a large statue in New York Harbor are inscribed the following words:

Not like the brazen giant of Greek fame,
With conquering limbs astride from land to land,
Here at our sea-washed, sunset gates shall stand

A mighty woman with a torch, whose flame
Is the imprisoned lightning, and her name
Mother of Exiles. From her beacon-

Glowed world-wide welcome; her mild eyes command
The air-bridged harbor that twin cities frame.
"Keep ancient lands, your storied pomp!" cries she
With silent lips. "Give me your tired, your poor,

Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore,
Send these, the homeless, tempest-

tost to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

Considering the stand of the U.S. government on immigration, of which the Haitian situation is only the latest manifestation, it would be appropriate to move the Statue of Liberty out of New York to a museum, where it would stand as a reminder of a bygone era.

Praise for jeweler

To the editor: During my years at Iowa as a graduate student I often heard students complain about getting "ripped off" by local businesses. This letter is sent in praise of one local business, Hand's Jewelers, that has bent over backwards to be fair to me.

In the summer of 1974 my fiancée and I purchased a ruby and diamond engagement ring from Hand's. After leaving Iowa we broke up and I was left with a "useless" ring. Assuming Hand's would not allow me to return the ring I took it to several jewelers in the city where I live but, while they all agreed it was "like new" none of them would give me more than a fraction of what I paid for it and all agreed that this type of ring had not appreciated in value.

In November 1981, some seven years after purchase, I contacted Hand's. At their request I forwarded the ring (along with proof of purchase) to them for examination. Within seven days they informed me they would give me credit for the full amount of the purchase price on any other item or items at their store.

I was surprised and totally delighted and recently had a pleasant trip back to Iowa City where I visited friends and used my credit. Hand's Jewelers could not have been more fair and accommodating. They certainly went the extra mile for me. Not all businesses take advantage of students.

Commitment needed — Spriestersbach

By Howard Hess
Assistant Metro Editor

In the face of unprecedented changes in American life, a commitment to higher education is essential, Acting UI President D.C. Spriestersbach said Monday.

"At issue is the ageless and vexing question of guns versus butter. We hear much talk these days about cutting federal spending. A careful look at the Reagan administration's program, however, discloses that government spending will not decrease," Spriestersbach told approximately 100 members of local service groups gathered in the Union Ballroom for an annual state of the UI address.

Military spending will increase by $180 billion while civilian spending will be cut by $140 billion, Spriestersbach said.

Reductions in federal aid hit the nation's universities hard, as student financial aid and basic research were cut deeply, he said.

"Planned rescissions during the '82-83 academic year will take another $950 million out of student aid and reduce most other programs for higher education by 25 percent."

AND UNCERTAINTY "has caused the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health—two of the nation's major supporters of university-based research—to postpone funding for projects already approved or simply to approve no projects at all."

Spriestersbach emphasized the importance of basic research at universities: "A recent study by the National Science Foundation indicated that 70 percent of the 'major advances' in selected fields were the result of research done in universities."

Research and development spending for non-defense purposes has declined 16 percent over the last two years—in fact, 50 percent of the national research budget goes to defense research, he said.

These cuts on the federal level have "shifted the responsibility for funding many established programs to the states... Given the magnitude of the shifts in federal funding, we have no option but to look to the state for the additional resources that will be required to retain the quality of instruction that we have been able to establish" at the UI, he said.

SPRIESTERSBACH said private sector support is not the answer. "Despite several highly-publicized corporate grants to a few university departments, business support for basic research remains minuscule in comparison to the sizeable outlays required."

And the difference between private-sector and university salaries is exacerbating faculty shortages. "Salary differentials between academe and industry are causing faculty to leave for greener financial pastures in the corporate world," Spriestersbach said.

As the '80s begin, Spriestersbach said, "we face a multitude of problems which cannot be resolved so quickly, but can only be lived with, understood, improved and perhaps finally resolved."

He said, "Fulfillment of (higher education's) mission is indispensable to America's continued vitality and justifies a major capital investment."

As UI funding requests are not met by the Iowa Legislature, Spriestersbach said, "We are having to cope with a 'keeping down with the Joneses' psychology which tries to persuade us not to feel bad because times are as bad or worse at our sister institutions. If one pursues that logic, one is led to the conclusion that being at the cutting edge of educational advancement is no longer viewed as a major objective of this state and nation."

OSCAR to hold raffle; semester's tuition is prize

A full semester of in-state tuition will be awarded to the lucky UI student winner of a raffle drawing sponsored by the Organization of Stanley and Currier Associated Residences.

The drawing will be held on Feb. 9 at 8 p.m. in the Currier South Dining Hall, Rita Hellman, advisor of OSCAR and head resident for Stanley and Currier Residence Halls, said.

The $1 tickets for the drawing are on sale now and can be purchased from any Stanley or Currier Resident Assistant or OSCAR representative, Hellman said. Any full-time UI student is eligible to participate in the raffle, she said. The tuition award will be credited to the winner's university bill, whether the student is from Iowa or out-of-state, she said.

HELLMAN SAID the money from the sale of raffle tickets will pay for the free tuition award. Any money that is collected exceeding the $475 cost of a semester of in-state tuition will be used to purchase additional prizes, which will also be distributed to students at the drawing, Hellman said.

Hellman said the raffle's purpose is

The Daily Iowan/Steve Sedam

"to stimulate interest and get people involved" in the residence halls. "What we take in, we want to give back to the students," she said.

In the past, the tuition raffle has been sponsored by Clinton Street Residence Halls. Hellman said the organization has sold from 1,000 to 1,200 raffle tickets at 50 cents each in past raffles.

ATTENTION SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING MAJORS!

The Air Force has openings for young men and women majoring in selected science and engineering fields. Like Aeronautical, Aerospace, General and Electrical Engineering, Mathematics, Physics and Computer Technology.

To help prepare for one of these, Air Force ROTC offers two and four year programs of study which will delay some of your college costs.

After completion of the AFROTC requirement, and upon your graduation, you'll be commissioned an officer in the Air Force. Then comes responsibility, experience in your specialty with some of the best people and facilities in the world, and a mission with a purpose. You'll get excellent starting salary, medical and dental care, 30 days vacation with pay beginning your first year, and more.

Look into the Air Force ROTC program right away. See what's in it for you. See how you can serve your country in return.

EDITOR WANTED

The Board of Student Publications, Inc. and the publisher of the Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for editor of the Daily Iowan to serve in the upcoming year. This position will require a person with ability, dedication, and responsibility to assume editorial control of a daily newspaper with a circulation of more than 18,000 in the university community.

An applicant must be either an undergraduate or graduate student currently enrolled in a degree program at the University of Iowa. The Board will weigh heavily the following qualifications: scholarship; pertinent training and experience in editing and news writing (including substantial experience at The Daily Iowan or another daily newspaper); proven ability to organize, lead, and inspire a staff engaged in creative editorial activity; and other factors.

Applications will be accepted only for the full-year term from June 1, 1982 to May 31, 1983

No application will be accepted after 4 pm February 19, 1982.

Application form and additional information may be obtained at:

Precinct caucuses for Johnson County's Republican and Democratic parties will be held Feb. 1 at 8 p.m.

A primary function of the caucuses is the selection of delegates to the county convention. The Democratic convention will be March 27, the Republican will be March 6.

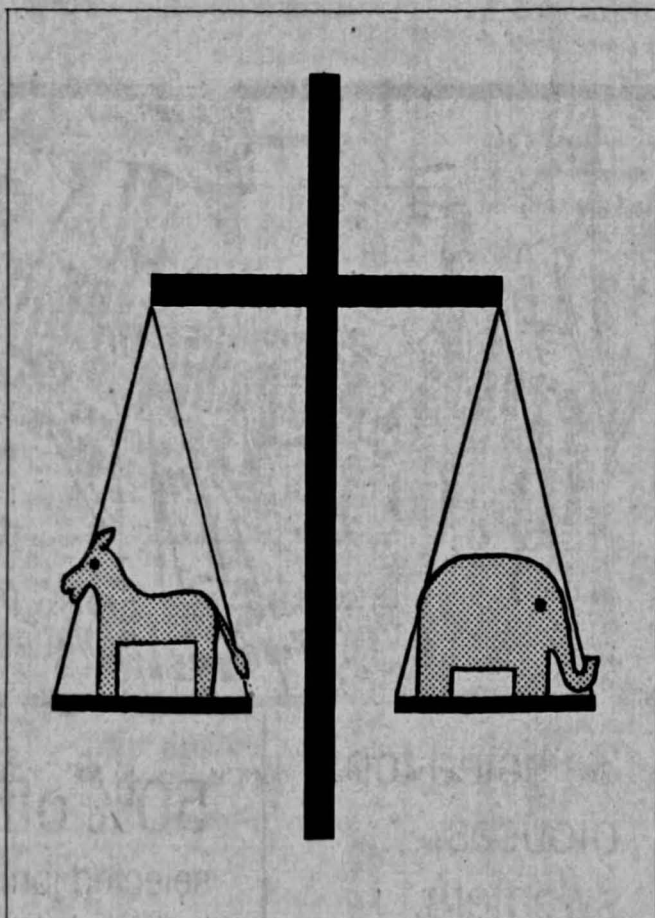

Other functions of the caucuses include:
• Election of party members to serve on precinct committees.
• Signing of nomination papers for party candidates for federal, state and county offices.
• Passage of resolutions intended for the party platform.

Because of voting precinct reapportionment, some voters may be in a different precinct than in the last election. The county auditor's office, 338-5428, can tell you which precinct you're registered in.

For more information on the Republican caucuses, call Republican Central Committee Co-chair J. Sue Thompson at 338-3563.

For more information on the Democratic caucuses, call county Chairman Jeff Cox at 338-4551.

Introducing the Smith-Corona Typetronic.
the first electronic office typewriter at the price of an ordinary electric.

It's more than an ordinary typewriter. It's filled with efficiencies you do need. It's not loaded with things you don't need. And if you can afford an ordinary office typewriter, you can own this extraordinary typewriter. Look at these:

- Memory Correction: Touch a key and remove up to 10 characters.
- Quick change typestyles—with durable and economical printwheels.
- Ribbon cassettes with your choice of correctable film or nylon ribbon.
- Lift-Rite correction tape with twice the capacity of most other systems.
- Preset and programmable margins and tabulation.
- Memory Speed Cushion takes care of high speed typing bursts.
- About half the parts of a conventional typewriter.
- Many, many more features give you speed, ease, quality and convenience at your individual typing station—at a price you can afford.

Professor feels future 'bleak' for federal research funding

By Mary Schuver
Staff Writer

George Knorr, UI professor of physics and astronomy, said he hears rumors of a "bleak" future in store for faculty research.

Knorr is working on a nuclear energy research project with grant money from the U.S. Department of Energy, "the one (President) Reagan wants to abolish."

He received $90,000 from the energy department in 1970 for the first year of the project. The annual allocation dwindled to $25,000 for each of the last two years, and this year, 1981-82, he received $10,000, Knorr said Tuesday.

But $10,000 will not be enough to cover this year's expenses. The money "is expected to run out this year," before the project's completion, Knorr said. "It looks fairly bleak."

Despite the scare over federal budget cuts, matters aren't as bad as they seem, said William Farrell, associate vice president for Educational Development and Research.

THE RUMOR that faculty members will lose a lot of their federal support for research "doesn't seem to be holding true... We've been trying to get out the word," Farrell said.

But Knorr said he hears otherwise.

"What I hear is that (the funding situation) is pretty bad, and that the amount of money we will get from the federal government will be less."

The UI cut approximately 6 percent from the projected research budget for the fiscal year 1981-82 — about $3.2 million of $43 million, Farrell said. The research budget is comprised primarily of federal grants and awards, he said.

Reagan administration budget cuts have hit funding for education, social science and humanities research the hardest. As an example, this year's funding for projects in humanities totaled $135 million, down from $150 million last year, Farrell said.

BUT ON THE WHOLE, the Reagan administration "has been pretty supportive of research," Farrell said. The problem is the projected $100 billion national deficit. "Research is going to have a tough struggle if the deficit continues" to grow.

Margery Hoppin, director of the Sponsored Programs division in Educational Development and Research, said that projects coming through the office after Jan. 1 will suffer a 4 percent cut — a rescission of previously allocated funds permitted by a congressional Continuing Resolution. Previously approved projects will not be affected.

Hoppin said she hopes the cut will not be extended to the fiscal year 1982-83, and that Congress will not rescind more funds.

THE RUMORS have resulted in fewer applications for research funding, Farrell said. Applications decreased 24 percent during the period from February to July 1981, from the same period a year ago — down to 503 applications, compared to 667 during that period in 1980. And Farrell said that since the number of applications are down, "maybe now it's time to apply."

Researchers have experienced other difficulties as well with approved grants. William Stwalley, UI chemistry professor, said he was supposed to receive his grant of $70,000 in July 1981, but didn't get it until November.

Stwalley is working on a three-year-old project researching atom behavior, funded by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"I don't know if they will renew the funding," Stwalley said. National agencies "only look at political issues in deciding whether to fund" research projects, he said.

Farrell said it is too early to tell how fiscal year 1982-83 will fare. He said that "with the impact of inflation, I foresee modest cuts."

Lack of housing no real problem for new sorority

Iowa City's housing shortage hasn't dimmed the spirits of the women in the UI's newest sorority, Sigma Kappa. They went ahead and established the chapter without having a house to call their own.

Ernestine Collins, Sigma Kappa national president, initiated fifty-five women into the chapter Saturday, and they are already an active part of the Greek community, according to Kathy Carroll, the sorority's travelling consultant.

The UI Panhellenic Council approved colonization of Sigma Kappa on the UI campus last fall after the council passed a proposal to expand. Since then, the chapter has participated in informal rush, elected officers, organized its program and initiated members.

"Our main goals now are to find a house and to plan another informal rush for later this semester," said Jennifer Haerer, Sigma Kappa president.

HAERER SAID the national officers have retained a real estate agent to look for chapter housing, but have not released housing information to the chapter.

"With 55 women, it's a little hard to find a house big enough. It's a sketchy issue because housing is scarce," Haerer said.

It is hoped the Sigma Kappa women will have a house by next fall, Carroll said. But until then, they will meet at the Union.

"Not having a house isn't going to change things that much," Carroll said. Sigma Kappa will have exchanges with UI fraternities, participate in a scholarship banquet, and do almost everything else other groups do, she said.

Student leadership workshops planned

The UI Office of Campus Programs and Student Activities and the UI Counseling Service are offering seven two-hour student leadership workshops.

The workshops will cover goal setting, recruitment, motivation, team building, transferring information from old members to new members and advocacy, said Susan Brasel, workshop coordinator.

The topics chosen for the workshops were determined by a student group survey last fall, she said.

"The workshops are not limited to just student organizations, anyone who feels he can benefit from the workshops can attend," Brasel said.

There is no fee for the series and a person may attend one or all of the workshops, she said. Persons can register in the campus programs office in the Union.

The first workshop is on goal setting and will be at 6:30 tonight in the Union Michigan Room. Anyone interested may call 353-3116 for more information.

The times and locations in the Union of the other workshops are:

Recruitment, Feb. 2 at 6:30 p.m. in the Indiana Room.

Motivating Members, Feb. 9 at 6:30 p.m. in the Yale Room.

Team Building, Feb. 17 at 6:30 p.m. in the Yale Room.

Aid issue uncertain

DES MOINES (UPI) — House Speaker Delwyn Stromer Tuesday told school officials it is uncertain if the Iowa Legislature will "open up" the school aid formula to add $6 to the state's per pupil aid.

"The jury's still out on whether we'll open up the school aid formula as the governor proposed," Stromer told a convention of the Iowa Association of School Boards.

"Some legislators are reluctant to open up school funding because it may open up a barrage of amendments."

ONTARIO, N.Y. (UPI) — A cold nuclear power plant shutdown Tuesday reached cold shutdown Tuesday officials said they probably were able to assess damages and repairs until the weekend.

Rochester Gas and Electric technical spokesman John said the 470-megawatt plant east of Rochester reached cold shutdown at about 4:40 p.m. — 31 ter radioactive steam began into the atmosphere — when the temperature of the reactor dropped 200 degrees Fahrenheit.

Shortly before noon, the plant taken off "alert" status and in a "recovery phase" by RO the consent of a Nuclear Regulatory Commission inspector at the

The autopsy report attributed three deaths to "cardiac arrest" as a result of Freon gas. Anoxia is a total lack of oxygen causing the heart and brain to malfunction.

McDonough said Durr and Fields' ship's sound and security was speculated they had been over the gas while checking one of forward air conditioning components.

He quoted other crewmen as Sullivan — who was assigned another command but reported moonlighting on the Bainbridge private contractor — sound alarm and returned to the command.

BOSTON (UPI) — Two people missing and feared killed in the World Airways DC-10 that hurtled runway and broke apart in flight, officials said Tuesday.

Authorities said there was a missing from the jumbo jet runway at Logan International evening until two relatives in Massachusetts Port Authority.

"The son and daughter told me they had been trying for days to reach officials and they (World Airways) Dedham police," said Mass. Moscaritolo.

Port Authority officials said they asked World Airways — which they with a passenger list — to check its records.

Cold shutdown reached at plant

ONTARIO, N.Y. (UPI) — The crippled Ginna nuclear power plant reached cold shutdown Tuesday, but officials said they probably would not be able to assess damages and begin repairs until the weekend.

Rochester Gas and Electric Corp. technical spokesman John Oberlies said the 470-megawatt plant 20 miles east of Rochester reached cold shutdown at about 4:40 p.m. — 31 hours after radioactive steam began leaking into the atmosphere — when the temperature of the reactor dropped below 200 degrees Fahrenheit.

Shortly before noon, the plant was taken off "alert" status and declared in a "recovery phase" by RGE, with the consent of a Nuclear Regulatory Commission inspector at the site.

ON MONDAY, when a ruptured pipe resulted in the automatic venting of radioactive gas into the atmosphere and flooding of a containment vessel with 11,000 gallons of radioactive water, the accident was classified as a site emergency.

A site emergency is the second most serious classification and the Ginna mishap is the first nuclear accident so designated since the 1979 incident at Three Mile Island.

Workers at the plant, located on Lake Ontario, returned to the facility on regular shifts Tuesday.

"From what we know there were no reluctant workers," Oberlies said. "The workers are in planning repairs and maintenance. Some are still involved in testing at our survey sites."

"THERE'S PLENTY FOR them to do," said Oberlies, when asked exactly how the 150 to 200 workers would be deployed.

One of their first cleanup chores will be to take the radiation out of water now in the plant's primary coolant loop. However, that cannot be done until the reactor temperature drops to 140 degrees.

Workers will then begin pumping and purifying the 11,000 gallons of water that flooded a containment vessel underneath the generators so technicians can inspect the damage.

Officials said damage assessments and repair procedures would probably not begin until Saturday.

Area residents seemed to be returning to their normal routines.

"I'M NOT ABOUT to pack up and move," said Gary Webec, 42, who has lived about two miles from the plant for two years. "The plant's there and there's nothing you can do about it. It's a big toy that we can handle," he said.

Sheila Angelone, 19, of nearby Webster, had similar feelings. "The people here, especially the younger ones, figure if you're going to go, you're going to go, and there's nothing you can do about it," she said.

Round-the-clock testing detected no abnormal levels of radiation outside the plant.

The utility said searchers discovered "a minor amount" of iodine in two samples of snow, one near the plant and another a short distance away. Iodine is a gaseous byproduct of nuclear fission and can cause thyroid problems or even cancer if found in high-enough quantities. The samples found were taken to laboratories for testing.

DR. RONALD HAYNES, Region I administrator for the NRC, said it appeared that RG&E "displayed good training and good judgment" in handling the emergency.

He also said industry officials were concerned about corrosion problems that appeared to have caused the accident at Ginna. Other so-called pressurized-water nuclear reactors also have reported corrosion problems, he said.

"It was not an unexpected event," said Sue Gagner, an NRC spokeswoman. "It was something we knew could happen. The plant and the staff responded in the expected way."

A residual heat removal process was activated Tuesday to cool down the reactor core faster than a steam generator used earlier. By mid-morning, the temperature in the reactor core had dropped to 329 degrees Fahrenheit.

"WE HOPE TO know by the end of this week what kind of damage we have," Oberlies said.

Oberlies said he hoped the reactor could be back on line in a matter of weeks, but other officials suggested it could be a minimum of three to four months.

The utility may simply decide to combine repairs with a yearly shutdown for refueling, which had been scheduled to take place in two months. Shutdowns for refueling routinely span eight to nine weeks.

While repairs are under way, utility spokesman Richard Peck said, the $225,000 per day cost to purchase replacement electricity would be passed on to RG&E customers — adding roughly $5 to $7 per month to the average electric bill.

The Ginna plant supplies power to 325,000 customers in a six-county metropolitan area of a million people.

Gas leak kills sailors on nuclear cruiser

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The Navy began a formal investigation Tuesday into the deaths of three sailors killed by refrigeration gas leaking from a ruptured pipe in an air conditioning unit of the nuclear-powered guided missile cruiser Bainbridge.

Six shipmates and a corpsman from Balboa Naval Hospital who tried to revive the three with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation were held overnight for treatment and released to duty in good condition Tuesday.

KILLED LATE MONDAY were Petty Officer 1st Class Joseph Durr, 26, San Diego and Garden Grove, Calif.; Engineman-Fireman Steward Fields, 20, San Diego and Bakersfield, Calif.; and Petty Officer 1st Class John Sullivan, 26, Columbus, Ohio.

Navy media chief Jim McDonough said the victims died of cardiac arrest minutes after being rushed by ambulance to the naval hospital from the 32nd Street Naval Station, where the Bainbridge was moored for routine maintenance.

The autopsy report attributed the three deaths to "cardiac arrest due to anoxia as a result of Freon gas inhalation." Anoxia is a total lack of oxygen, causing the heart and brain to cease functioning.

McDonough said Durr and Fields had the ship's sound and security watch. He speculated they had been overcome by the gas while checking one of the two forward air conditioning compartments.

He quoted other crewmen as saying Sullivan — who was assigned to another command but reportedly moonlighting on the Bainbridge for a private contractor — sounded the alarm and returned to the compartment to aid the two stricken sailors when he was overcome himself.

The forward compartment where the accident occurred was well away from the ship's two nuclear reactors, which were not affected.

Navy officials identified the gas as Freon, a Dupont registered trade name. A Dupont spokesman in Wilmington, Del., John Roberts, said there was no certainty that Freon was actually involved. He said the generic term fluorocarbon refrigerant should be used instead.

Other refrigeration industry spokesmen concurred with Roberts that refrigerants are not normally highly toxic, and that a high concentration would be required to prove lethal.

However, Bruce Farley, service manager for University Heating and Air Conditioning in San Diego, said a leaking refrigerant could quickly displace oxygen, and that a person inhaling it could suffocate.

The security lid clamped on the case by the Navy precluded finding out if the vent fans were on in the fatal compartment.

Lt. Cmdr. El Ahlwardt, public affairs officer for the hospital, said symptoms suffered by the seven included light headedness, dizziness, finger numbness, chest tightness, nausea, blurred vision and eye irritations.

The 8,500-ton, 565-foot Bainbridge is 20 years old and was the first of the nation's nuclear-powered cruisers. It carries a crew of 26 officers and 425 enlisted men, and recently returned from a seven-month deployment to the Indian Ocean.

Two passengers in DC-10 crash unaccounted for BOSTON (UPI) — Two people were reported missing and feared killed in the crash-landing of the World Airways DC-10 that hurtled off the end of an icy runway and broke apart in Boston Harbor, officials said Tuesday.

Authorities said there was no indication anyone was missing from the jumbo jet that skidded off the runway at Logan International Airport Saturday evening until two relatives showed up at Massachusetts Port Authority offices Tuesday.

"The son and daughter told Massport officials they had been trying for days to reach World Airways officials and they (World Airways) referred them to Dedham police," said Massport spokesman Pat Moscaritolo.

Port Authority officials said they immediately asked World Airways — which had failed to provide them with a passenger list since the crash — to recheck its records.

IT WAS THEN discovered that Walter Metcalf, 70, and his son, Leo, 40, both of Dedham, Mass., who boarded the plane at Newark, N.J., after transferring from a Piedmont flight, were unaccounted for, said Moscaritolo.

"We just don't know where they are," World Airways Vice President Edward Ringo told a Logan news conference. "It's pretty obvious they're out there (in the water)," although he added the two may have left the scene in shock.

Charles Arena, chief of the Massport safety office, said "the divers are looking for any evidence we can find. Divers are in the water right now. They will continue to stay there until we find them."

The Metcalfs were assigned seats in the midsection of the DC-10, well back from where it broke apart during the crash Saturday night.

A piece of luggage containing Walter Metcalf's passport was also discovered in the World Airways luggage room at Logan, spokesmen said.

UI board revises CARP status

By Jackie Baylor
Staff Writer

The status of the UI Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles was changed Tuesday night from permanent non-academic group to religious group because of "influence" from the Unification Church.

The action was taken by the UI Student Activities Board because CARP's constitution states an affiliation with the controversial Unification Church, headed by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

Bart Bycroft, director of the board, said the status change would mean that:

- The group may not receive UI funds.
- The group may not have UI office space.
- The group may restrict membership to individuals of its religious persuasion.

UI STUDENT SENATE President Tim Dickson asked for the review last semester because "if the group is a religious group, it should be recognized as a religious group."

He said at the review session that "it is appropriate to have our organizations correctly classified. CARP is an organization that's very closely aligned with the Unification Church. We do see some direct adherence to a church.

"IT'S NOT MY intention to say they are doing anything wrong," Dickson said. "We just want to get the records straight."

Wilbur Hathaway, CARP president and UI senator, said during the review session that "it's a tricky situation. The Unification Church is very controversial. If we don't focus on the church then everyone thinks we are covering something up."

"We do have ties to the Unification Church," he said. "But the Unification Church movement is involved in all aspects of social activities and cultural things. CARP is on campus to do social activities and educational work. We are trying to get people involved in world affairs."

He said he believes Rev. Moon is a "leader of ideas." Moon wants to "create a better world," he said.

"I have no objections to a religious status because I am religious," Hathaway said. "But it's not correct."

CARP chose Iowa City as part of its expansion in the Midwest. It now has groups on 120 U.S. campuses, including the University of Illinois and University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Council continues talk over funding requests

The Iowa City Council discussed the budget requests for 11 human services agencies — two of which have never previously been funded by the city — in its continuing discussions of the proposed $24.7 million city budget Tuesday evening.

The budget must be submitted to the county auditor for certification by March 15. The new budget will take effect July 1.

The Transient Service, Food Bank and Domestic Violence programs are the major human services agencies requesting funding, said Pamela Ramser, Human Services planner. The Crisis Center is requesting $7,130 for fiscal 1983 for Transient Service and the Food Bank. The Domestic Violence Project is requesting $10,000.

THE TWO AGENCIES which have never before requested funding are the Fairmeadows Neighborhood Center and the MECCA substance abuse program.

Ramser is recommending a total Human Services budget of $145,784 along with a human services agency contingency fund of $2,658 for emergency funding.

The Crisis Center has been providing help for non-residents through the Transient Service program and for residents needing meals through the Food Bank, but that aid has "caused a real drain" on the center staff's time, she said.

The Crisis Center's board of directors said it will be unable to continue the programs without aid, Ramser said.

Ramser said the Domestic Violence Project is seeking more funding because of an increased demand. Approximately 147 women and 121 children used the shelter last year, according to Patricia Meyer, project program coordinator.

Birkhead

American collection are frequently in their original Spanish and Portuguese. In addition to her native Portuguese, she studied French for eight years and English for about 10.

The last 20 years have produced "outstanding" Latin American authors, Birkhead said. "People like Venezuelan Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Argentine Manuel Puig and Brazilian Gilberto Amado are totally fantastic. They are doing things that nobody else is doing."

She said Latin American authors write about the world around them. "They tend to be very political, but the problems they discuss are very universal to all people. That's the sign of great literature."

In choosing history books she looks for accounts from primary sources, such as travel books or diaries. The account of a journey through the southwest United States and Mexico during the Spanish American War, or the diary of someone imprisoned during the 1976 coup in Chile, are examples of the type of history book she would choose. "You want to choose an account of someone who was there. Those are the type of documents people base history on."

IN THE PAST, the library has had difficulty locating and buying books from South America, she said. "One thing I think I have contributed is locating reliable dealers in every country in South and Central America."

For the last two years Ceres' primary responsibility has been handling faculty and student requests for books and materials to be used mainly in research.

She evaluates, verifies and sets priorities for the requests, and must also find out where the material can be ordered.

Birkhead likes her job because she enjoys an academic environment and is exposed to a wide variety of books. "You cater to all ideals because people are interested in the truth and they need all sorts of materials to get there."

"My job gives me a sense of what kind of research is being done at the university," she added.

Some of the more difficult and time-consuming acquisitions she has made include out-of-print books or rare items, such as microfilms of manuscripts from Italy dating to 1400, a manuscript that existed in Germany during the 1800's and out-of-print books from Asia, Indonesia, Pakistan and India.

SHE SAID sometimes she must advertise to track down out-of-print books. She places ads in antiquarian magazines, such as "AB Bookman." "Dealers in out of print books read the magazine and tell us which of these books they can offer us. We may get lucky and get an offer in a week, if we're not so lucky we may never get an answer."

She said some requests are difficult to locate because very little information is known about them. A request was once made for a part of the Egerton manuscript, which is housed in the British Museum.

"This part was an account of expenses, during the Elizabethan period, kept by a carpenter. The account was presented to the king for expenses he incurred when building theatre props. I was given the section of the manuscript where this information was recorded."

She said the Egerton manuscripts contain an "enormous" amount of material. First, she had to find the name of the carpenter and his office. After three hours of looking through bibliographies and other sources, she found the information she was looking for and was able to determine the number of the manuscript that contained the carpenter's account.

She then sent an order to the British Museum where it would take two months for the request to be processed and sent back to the UI library.

Birkhead still retains her childhood passion for reading. "I read almost anything that catches my interest. The late 18th and early 19th century in English history and the Napoleonic period are areas I read about."

But Birkhead said she has no favorite authors. "If you read very broadly, you can't have favorite authors."

make him one of the finalists.

Board member Patricia Hayek made the motion to appoint Cruise, and member Tom Cilek, a local attorney, seconded the motion. Cruise's position will officially begin July 1, and will be up for review July 1, 1983.

After four revisions of a policy for the selection for instruction and fine arts presentations, the board voted 4-3 to adopt a version written by board Vice President Lynne Cannon.

CANNON'S VERSION, which varies slightly from the Department of Public Instruction's policy on "educationally appropriate materials" for instruction and fine arts presentations, was approved because it was the most concise.

Discussion on such a policy began after several parents complained about some religious music performed at an October junior high school choral concert. One junior high principal said he would not let his students participate in concerts where religious music was performed.

In other action Tuesday night, the board unanimously approved a contract between Iowa City teachers and the school district after more than three months of negotiations. The teachers had already overwhelmingly ratified the contract earlier Tuesday, said Joan Buxton, spokeswoman for the teachers.

Teachers will receive a 6.26 percent average salary increase and a 6.9 percent increase in their total benefit package. Other provisions include dental insurance for employees and extended grievance rights.

The board voted unanimously to replace with local funds $40,000 in federal funds lost to Reagan administration budget cuts.

The board also gave a first reading to a proposed set of criteria for home-study programs. The compulsory education policy would require that certified teachers conduct classes in "required curriculum areas," and that instruction "shall be on a daily basis during the school year of 180 days."

Fire

"They wouldn't go," Yoder said. "They kept saying they wouldn't leave without their children."

The scene overwhelmed many of the volunteer firemen fighting the blaze.

"When they started bringing the kids out I just couldn't stand it and got in my truck and left," one fireman said.

Twenty-three firefighters from the Kalona and an additional 20 from Wellman battled the blaze until 6 a.m. Tuesday, and returned an hour later when smoldering embers ignited.

Johnson County Medical Examiner Dr. T.T. Bozek pronounced the four children dead at the scene. An autopsy performed Tuesday determined the cause of death as asphyxiation and smoke inhalation.

Kalona Savings Bank and United Central Bank have set up fund drives for the family.

James Strabla, senior vice president of the Kalona Savings Bank, said the response has been excellent.

"We expect the public to continue to show support for the family in their time of need," Strabla said. Donations will be accepted all week by either bank.

The Rev. John L. Hershberger of the Fairview Conservative Mennonite Church and first cousin to Firman Hershberger, praised the public's response.

"IT IS ENCOURAGING to see that people are reacting positively to the needs of others and that they are concerned about the welfare of others," Hershberger said. According to Hershberger, the family was handling the tragedy as well as can be expected.

The Pathway Christian School, which had been attended by three of the Hershberger children closed its doors Tuesday in honor of the children.

Funeral services for the children will be held Thursday at 9:30 a.m. at the Fairview Conservative Mennonite Church with the Rev. Hershberger performing the ceremony.

Bills

potential control over the regents' educational leave policies.

This is a synopsis of a few other bills opposed by the regents:

• H.F. 72: Zero-based budgets — this bill would require state agencies to use zero-based budgeting in proposed budgets. The regents oppose the bill on the basis that they would have to justify basic programs annually. The bill is now in the House State Government Subcommittee, supported by Rep. Robert Anderson, D-Newton.

• H.F. 173/S.F. 311: Scope of Negotiations — These bills would open collective bargaining to items previously excluded. These bills are opposed by the regents because "there would be a major expansion in the present scope of collective bargaining." These bills are in the House and Senate Labor and Industrial Relations Subcommittees.

Nagel said he does not expect these bills to receive legislative approval.

• H.F. 182/ S.F. 338: Tuition reciprocity — These bills authorize the board to enter into tuition reciprocity agreements with other states. It is opposed because of potential loss of income in non-resident tuition and because the board is now free to enter into these agreements. The bills are now in the House and Senate Education Subcommittees.

This bill would allow students from neighboring states to attend regents universities at in-state student rates and Iowa students to attend neighboring states' schools at resident rates there.

"This is supported by western Iowa because they do not have a state university close... this way they could keep their students close to home without paying high out-of-state tuition," Nagel said.

• H.F. 270/S.F. 110: Agronomy Building funds — These bills would appropriate $1 million to the board for use on an addition to the Agronomy Building at Iowa State University, but the money would be appropriated only if ISU could raise at least $500,000 in private gifts or federal funds. This is opposed because the building is not on the regents biennium capital improvement list.

• H.F. 374: Legal Assistance Clinic — This bill would eliminate the Legal Assistance Clinic at the UI Law School. The board opposes the bill as unwarranted legislative involvement in regents responsibilities. It is now in the House Education Committee.

• H.F. 433: Ban on lobbying — This bill prohibits the use of state funds for lobbying efforts. It is supported by Rep. Phillip Tyrrell, R-North English, and is assigned to the House State Government Subcommittee.

• H.F. 481: Small business set-aside — This bill would require regents to allocate a certain amount of purchasing to small businesses. The regents believe this would eliminate competitive bidding and would create more red tape. The bill is sponsored by Rep. Brandt, D-Cedar Falls, and is now in the House State Government Subcommittee.

• H.F. 535: Ban on new roads — This places a ten-year moratorium on construction of new roads, including institutional roads. The bill is sponsored by Rep. Doug Ritsema, R-Orange City, and is assigned to the House Transportation Subcommittee.

• H.F. 623: Collective bargaining changes — This bill limits time for negotiating bargaining agreements. This is opposed because the board feels the time limits are too severe. It is now in the House Labor and Industrial Relations Subcommittee and is sponsored by Ken Miller, D-Independence.

• H.F. 637: Political leaves — This would require employers to grant leave of absence without loss of position, status or benefits to candidates for the legislature. The regents already have a policy to consider such requests on a case-by-case basis. It is in the House State Government Committee.

• H.F. 656: Prohibition of mandatory retirement — This prohibits mandatory retirement based on age. The board is against the bill because they have "had a long-standing policy against such broad retirement prohibitions." It is sponsored by Rep. Greg Cusack, D-Davenport, and assigned to the House Labor and Industrial Relations Committee.

• S.F. 7: Employment of Consultants — This prohibits an executive department or agencies of the state from contracting for private consultant services without authorization by law or approval of the appropriations subcommittees. It is sponsored by Sen. Berl Priebe, D-Algonia, and assigned to the Senate State Government Subcommittee.

• S.F. 443: Regents powers and duties — This bill would establish the board as the state authority and an independent establishment of the executive branch. The bill would also transfer jurisdiction of the Iowa Braille and Sight Saving School at Vinson, The School for the Deaf at Council Bluffs, and the UI Hospital School to the Department of Public Instruction.

New theater company aims to add diversity to Iowa City stagecraft

For a theater buff, too much theater is never enough. The person who admires Ibsen probably wouldn't pass up Annie. Experimental theater is just so much icing on the cake while traditional fare tends to soothe the soul.

Theater in Iowa City offers a diversity, but Ron Clark and Jody Hovland are intent on further broadening that theatrical horizon. Together, they have established the Riverside Theater Company whose maiden offering is Lewis John Carlino's The Exercise, opening tonight for a four-night run at the Old Armory Theater.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN the Riverside Theater and other would-be efforts to establish a similar company in years past is pinned to Clark and Hovland's close Iowa ties. Both hold M.F.A. degrees in acting from the UI and have acted in and around Iowa City. They also hold full-time jobs: Hovland teaches rhetoric and acting at the UI and Clark is head waiter at the Mill besides the director of the Eulenspiegel Puppet Theater.

"We've been talking about this for a long time," Clark said. "We take inspiration from friends who have started similar theaters in other cities — some successful, some not. Plus we have a lot of faith in our own personal perseverance."

Any new venture tends to spawn inevitable problems. Theirs are money and a home. While the premiere production will run in the Old Armory thanks to the intercession of University Theaters, Clark points out that after The Exercise, "we're adrift." They plan to pay back seed money given them out of box office profits and apply for various grants.

RATHER THAN SAPPING the strength of other Iowa City theater efforts, Clark and Hovland believe the Riverside Theater will enhance them. "The thing about theater is that the more of it the better," Clark said.

"We would like to set ourselves apart from an amateur theater venture," said Hovland. "We can offer continually stimulating performances and exciting plays. We'd like to show that we're risk-takers — not necessarily an experimental theater but one that takes on a broad range of plays that are challenging. The less-performed plays demand more from an audience and I don't think that's a problem in Iowa City."

"We're very fortunate that Iowa City is an enlightened community," said Clark. "There's a different milieu here, a different sense of openness. We believe Iowa City is ready for this."

They plan to offer fare that ranges from the classical to the traditional, as well as develop new scripts and perform children's theater. Down the line are workshops in everything from improvisation to movement classes.

THE COMPANY'S initial effort, Carlino's The Exercise, was carefully chosen. "We wanted to do something that hadn't been done to death," said Clark, "a play that had a certain amount of obscurity."

The Exercise is a two-character play that examines what happens to two actors who meet for a rehearsal. According to Hovland, it's an actor's tour de force that offers a wide range of characterization and emotional depth.

"The play works well as a metaphor for real life with all the attendant tenuous personal relationships," added Clark. "It's certainly different from the theater that's been done here."

Bruce Wheaton, whom Clark said he and Hovland lured out of retirement, is directing.

A future project is a collaboration with the Iowa City/Johnson County Arts Center on an improvisational project dubbed "Stars in the Bars" in early April.

The Exercise will be at 8 p.m. today through Saturday at the Old Armory Theater.

Juilliard Quartet captures audiences with spontaneity

By David Breckbill
Staff Writer

Whatever its specific musical virtues and vices may be, the Juilliard String Quartet so obviously interacts anew with the music it plays at each performance that it is scarcely possible to avoid respecting the results.

Although the group relies on neither bold conception nor dazzling point-making for its effectiveness, no musicians have more consistently cultivated profound spontaneity as a legitimate means of communication. Immediately observable (often feigned) involvement is temptingly infectious for most audiences. An evening with the Juilliard String Quartet, however, reaffirms the legitimacy of sincere spontaneity.

THE JUILLIARD'S Hancher Auditorium concert Monday evening was quite satisfying, not least for the presentation of two relatively little-played works. Paul Hindemith's Quartet no. 3, opus 22 (1921), in five movements, is symmetrical in overall form: the third movement, central in both character and position, wistful, atmospheric and vibrant, is flanked by two more aggressive movements that make the third, because of its length but despite its character, serve as a slow movement. The outer movements, at once intense and sensitive, set a modest, unpretentious tone for the work.

The Juilliard, with a unique blend of dynamic contrast, forward motion and tonal nuance, played the piece very convincingly but not perfectly: themes that appear in first one instrument and then another were not consistent in character (for example, in the opening "Fugato," first violinist Robert Mann's tone was often disembodied while violist Samuel Rhodes was more earthy). But occasional slight imperfections did not at all affect the compelling quality of the performance.

ALSO EXCELLENT WAS the performance of Haydn's Quartet in E-flat major, opus 76, no. 6. The tempos for the first two movements were wonderfully natural and beautifully maintained, and when tempos are right everything else seems inevitable. The last movement, whose quirky theme's hilariously strenuous development is often an invitation to disorderliness, here emerged with a good deal of dignity, thus accenting the piece's humor.

Mendelssohn's Quartet in F minor, opus 80 (1847), the composer's last completed work, is an infrequently heard masterpiece. Despite a slightly diffuse slow movement, this is one of Mendelssohn's most economically constructed compositions. The Juilliard responded with a cool, taut, somewhat distant performance of the outer movements, a superbly weighty, grim account of the second movement, and an unfortunately plastic approach to the slow movement. The work seemed not to kindle the players' interest as much as the Haydn and Hindemith did.

Throughout the evening there were enough small musical and technical lapses by each player to suggest that the quartet has played better. But most of the concert was a musical exploration by a marvelously mature and secure ensemble in which those in attendance were most privileged to participate.

NCAA ticket sales rolling

By Jay Christensen
Sports Editor

Ticket sales for the NCAA wrestling tournament, March 11-13 in Ames, are moving quickly, according to Iowa State Ticket Manager Dick Mathias.

"The last time we had the tournament (1979), we sold about 9,000 all-session tickets," Mathias said. "We hope to surpass that this year. Right now, we have sold about 6,000 tickets. We have another 4,500 out on assignment."

"Out on assignment" means certain blocks of tickets have been sent to schools who traditionally bring large numbers of fans to the tournament.

LAST WEEK, 2,500 all-session tickets went on sale at the Iowa ticket office. About 900 have been sold thus far, and any remaining tickets will be returned to Iowa State after Feb. 5 — the end of the sale at Iowa.

Any all-session tickets not sold will then be offered as individual session tickets. Iowa State will start taking orders for individual session tickets, if any remain, on Feb. 15.

Hilton Coliseum in Ames, site of the tournament, normally holds 13,992 spectators. But with an event as large as the national tournament, bleachers are removed to make space for wrestling mats. Hilton will hold 12,500, for the tournament, and Mathias expects a sellout.

THE NCAA TOURNAMENT consists of six sessions over three days. Two sessions are held each day, with the finals slated for 7:30 p.m. March 13. Cost of all session tickets is $37 from Iowa State University, $36 from Iowa. The reason for the $1 extra charge of tickets from Iowa State is for postage and handling.

Iowa's allotment of tickets are mainly in the balcony section of Hilton, running from the mid-court section to the end of the basket area.

Hawkeye gymnasts No. 15 in nation

By Steve Batterson
Staff Writer

The Iowa men's gymnastics team is ranked 15th in the nation this week by the National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches.

Coach Tom Dunn's Hawkeyes are one of five Big Ten teams in the current rankings. Ohio State is ranked third, Illinois is sixth, Michigan is in the 11th position and Minnesota, Iowa's opponent this Saturday in Minneapolis, is 16th.

NEBRASKA, AS EXPECTED, is ranked in the first position. The Cornhuskers, defending NCAA Champions, are followed in the top 10 by UCLA, Ohio State, Iowa State, California, Illinois, Houston Baptist, Louisiana State, Oklahoma and Northern Illinois.

It has been said strong competition makes a team tougher, and the Hawks will get their chances at meeting some of the nation's best. Iowa, in addition to meeting No. 16 Minnesota on Saturday, travels to Ohio State Feb. 12, hosts Michigan Feb. 19 and challenges fourth-rated Iowa State in the dual season finale, Feb. 26 at the Iowa Field House.

Iowa senior Kelly Crumley is tied for sixth in the nation on the horizontal bar with Mike Sims of Oklahoma with a 9.65 mark.

IN ADDITION TO faring well in the national statistics, the Hawks have several gymnasts who appear in the top 10 of the Midwest regional standings, also compiled by the National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches. The rankings are based on season best performance since the first of the year, but they do not include competition last weekend.

Crumley is tied for fourth in the regional horizontal bar standings, with a 9.65, and is rated seventh in the all-around with a high of 54.1.

Another Iowa senior, Paul Goedecke, is tied for fourth in the floor exercise with a 9.4 score he earned at the Big Ten Invitational. Pommer horse specialist Joe Leo is tied for eighth in the region with a 9.2 mark, and sophomore Kyle Shanton is in a ninth-place tie in the horizontal bar ratings with a 9.45.

Iowa cagers at UNI

The Iowa women's basketball team will try to rebound from a 81-53 thrashing at the hands of Central Missouri State Saturday when it travels to Cedar Falls tonight.

The Hawkeyes, 6-8 on the season, will take on the University of Northern Iowa at 7:30 p.m. in the UNI-Dome. The Panthers are traditionally a weak team, according to Kim Howard, a co-captain for the Hawks. A victory would move Iowa one game closer to the .500 mark, which has definitely become a team goal.

ACCORDING TO Randall Bezanson, vice-president for Finance, the cost includes $400,000 for replacement in the south end, $900,000 for the additional seats in the north, $250,000 for the concessions and restroom facilities and an additional $400,000 for miscellaneous items.

About $500,000 for this project will come from private donations to the UI Foundation. The balance will be paid by the athletic department over the next four years.

Bezanson said there would be a ticket price increase of $1 for both football and basketball tickets for students, faculty and staff and the public beginning next year. Final determination on ticket price increases will be made at the board's next meeting, Feb. 8.

Iowa House lauds Hawks

DES MOINES (UPI) — The Iowa House, in its own version of "How 'bout them Hawks," passed a resolution Tuesday declaring that the state and all Iowa football fans are proud of the Hawkeye football team.

The University of Iowa team posted its first winning record in two decades last season and went to the Rose Bowl as co-champions of the Big Ten. Iowa was beaten by Washington, 28-0, in the New Year's Day game.

The exploits of the team, the Hawkeye marching band and Iowa fans were recalled in the six-paragraph resolution.

"Be it resolved ... that the state of Iowa and its loyal fans are proud of the 1981 Hawkeye Football Team and by the adoption of this Resolution recognize that even though we may occasionally be outscored, we never lose; and express confidence in the fact that the Hawks will return to the Rose Bowl again ..." the resolution said.
