than $2 million per year was merely a "drop in the bucket.

The plan calls for a $210 million The 215 Job Services of Iowa workers allocation to employment services including Job Service.

IF REAGAN'S plan is approved, Congress will issue: $1.4 billion in loans to the states to help them meet their obligations; $500 million in extended benefits which would increase the period of time the unemployed can collect unemployment benefits; $343 million in grants to help states process unemployment claims and restore employees to help the unemployed find work; $133 million for unemployment insurance; and $210 million for employment services.

"Apparently Iowa was cut more than its share," Shearer said. "But if the $210 million ... is divided up between the states like it was in October, we can call back those we laid-off."

Shearer added that if Reagan had not called for a restoration of the funds, by the end of March the Job Service staff would have been reduced to about 11,000 compared to 30,000 in March,

Under orjnary circumstances, the corporation requires banks to find a foreign nation in default before the U.S. government s forced to cover bad debts.

A Treasury official said avoidance of declaration of default was needed to 'keep pressure' on the Warsaw government to repay remaining debts to the United States.

Trouble looms for students on aid

By Rochelle Bozman

Figures, graphs and predictions purporting to explain the meaning of President Reagan's "New Federalism" have abounded in the week since the State of the Union address. To students at the UI it could mean disaster.

UI administrators and state officials appear to be most concerned over the program's impact on student financial

The federal government's cuts in financial aid, coming at a time when tuition and the cost of living are increasing, are forcing students to drop out of school, or never start.

"Usually if a student can't get one form of financial aid, they can turn to another source, but now no other programs will be there for them," said Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for Student Services Acting UI President D.C. Spriestersbach said, "Phil Hubbard has set up a task force of administrators to stick with that and to watch carefully so when we do get some information we can be up on what is happening."

HUBBARD SAID as many as 1,000 students who are now attending the UI may be forced out because of the financial aid cuts. Others may not be able to start college at all.

Students who had planned to attend private colleges, but cannot afford to, may be forced to attend public instituitions, Hubbard said.

"(UI) Enrollment might not suffer, but this is not the point. We want these particular individuals to be able to attend the University of Iowa," he said. Predictions for cuts to the College-

Work Study program range from total elimination to to a 17 percent reduction of the program. Students at the UI will be hard-hit by this cut, because the program is used by 1,050 UI students and it brings

$1,136,052 in financial aid to the UI. A 17 percent reduction would cut the work study funds of 172 students reducing the number of students in the program to 878.

ANOTHER PREDICTION has the program cut by 36 percent, meaning a

BUT SCHMIDT, a UI medical student, calls Reagan's economic recovery plan "totally impractical ... In adopting his economic policies we are returning to a philosophy that ran rampant in the 1920s. That philosophy led us into a depression.'

But most of the students seemed to have little understanding of Reagan's reorganization of the federal government's economic policies and most had little hope it would cure the U.S. economy's woes, although most students believed the economy would rebound eventually. Much of the student confusion apparently stems from the mechanics behind supply-side economics and New See Economy, page 5

City asks funds to upgrade computer

By Scott Sonner

A proposed computerized crime investigation system is among the projects set aside until Iowa City gets more data storage space for its $217,610 computer system.

The storage demand for daily computing forces the system to shut down for 10 hours per week, according to a memorandum prepared by Finance Director Rosemary Vitosh and City Manager Neal Berlin.

"This down time means that we are not servicing the public during 20 percent of our business hours," the memo states.

Data storage space could be quadrupled by installing larger disc drives for the computer at a cost of $37,500, the memorandum to the Iowa City Council said. The memo asks that the council approve funds for expanding computer storage space.

Vitosh said Monday the addition should be made "to best utilize the initial investment."

"UNTIL THE computer is enlarged, we are at a standstill," she said. Vitosh said there are no disadvantages to enlarging the system. She said it could be done for a "small expense, very small compared to the initial

Last year the computer saved the city both time and money, according to the memorandum. The computer was used for:

parking ticket system that automatically produces 1,200 bills weekly, compared with 500 done manually. This is projected to increase city revenue by as much as $40,000 annually.

· A water/sewer billing system that provides customers with current account status information and evens out employee workloads by producing weekly billings for faster final bill processing.

• Preparation of the city's fiscal 1983 budget, saving time and money for city

High demand for the computer's services prevents additional computer use by other city departments. The increased storage space would enable the creation of a Police Information System to compile data and pinpoint high crime areas, Vitosh said. HARVEY MILLER, Iowa City police chief, said Monday computerization of files would enable the police to compare variables on everything from crimes and automobile accidents to staff assignments.

The city's recent rash of burglaries involved "literally thousands of pages of records. That is very difficult to analyze," he Vitosh said the computer could also tell the Department of Housing Inspections when a residence is due for inspection.

Janell Palmer, secretary for the housing inspection department, said use of the computer system would provide needed information "in front of you all in one shot."

In addition to giving the last date of inspetion, the file could include building permit property owners' names and addresses, num ber of units and cycle of billing.

SHE SAID the department is taking that formation from separate files and conde it onto file cards so they will be ready to fi the information into the computer.

Vitosh said $15,000 budgeted for the A counting Division is available to pay for the storage increase. The $10,000 budgeted la year for software development by outsio consultants was not used; all programmi was done by finance department employee An additional $5,000 was budgeted, but n needed, for computer bureau charges, s

The remainder of the funding can comfrom the increased parking ticket revenu generated as a result of the new compu program, Vitosh said.

Additional phone rate increase takes effect after court okay

DAVENPORT (UPI) - A $6.6 million Northwestern Bell telephone rate increase beyond that approved by the Iowa Commerce Commission went into effect Monday under a ruling by Scott County District Court Judge James Havercamp

'This is the first case we've ever had under the new statute," Dave Conn, assistant commerce commission coun-

IN THE BELL CASE, the commission allowed the company to levy an interim rate increase of $18.9 million effective Jan. 1 and subject to a refund after a final ruling.

Havercamp's order last week to allow an additional $6.6 million to be collected in the interim period will be challenged by the commission staff, Conn said.

The $6.6 million, also subject to refund, represents the difference between what was approved by the commission and what Northwestern Bell claims it should have been allowed.

Low turnout for lowa caucuses

Bill Thompson welcomed a familiar face to a Democratic precinct caucus Monday evening - one of 5,200 caucuses around Iowa - with a friendly, "Hi, Henry." Henry Pontious' appearance boosted attendance at St. Anthony's church school on the south side of Des Moines to four people - a contrast from the 280 who attended the 1980 caucus when presidential candidates traveled the Democratic and Republican leaders had estimated about 20,000 people from each party would attend the neighborhood gatherings. Late Monday night, they said the turnout may have been lower because of poor weather in northwestern Iowa.

About 200,000 people attended the precinct caucuses in 1980, when presidential hopefuls prowled the state and the caucuses attracted national attention as the first test in the nation of voter preference.

THIS YEAR'S CAUCUSES appeared to be small, congenial gatherings with quick handling of the party business of electing officers, choosing delegates, authoring resolutions that may be incorporated into party platforms and signing petitions.

About 35 people attended a Republican caucus in Des Moines. Technical High, Gov. Robert D. Ray's home caucus. They passed a resolution a union hall.

In the Sioux City area, Democrats blamed two inches of new snow and slick conditions for cutting into attendance. There was an average of a dozen people at each of three representative caucuses.

New president elected to alumni board

William A. Hamilton has been elected president of the UI Alumni Association's board of directors. Hamilton, who owns and operates a farm in the Iowa Falls area, has represented the UI College of Liberal Arts on the board since January 1978. In 1951 he received a B.A. degree in political science. He is a Phi Beta

Some court cases could be better handled out of the courts, said some UI law professors and students Monday. Discussion of an out-of-court process called arbitration was prompted by Chief Justice Warren Burger's Jan. 24 'State of the Judiciary' speech to the American Bar Association in Chicago. Burger, chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, suggested that arbitration should not displace the courts, but could effectively supplement them. Arbitration is an informal process in which parties involved in a civil (noncriminal) dispute submit their grievances to an impartial panel or individual arbitrator for final resolution. The panel or arbitrator's qualifications are determined by a state's law, and ically allow for selection of nonwyer experts in the area of the

IN STATES where arbitration is an roved supplement to the courts, the resolution is equivalent to a court cision, but in other states, the resoluon is directed toward the court for ording as law.

Civil disputes that can be resolved by bitration include labor negotiations, alpractice, child custody, divorce, otion, personal injury, landlord and ant disagreements, and the settleent of estates.

Alan Widiss, a professor in the UI ollege of Law, said arbitration is ady law in some states. According Widiss, Pennsylvania courts ansfer all civil claims involving 0,000 or less to arbitration. On rare asions, the arbitrator's resolutions

Auto registration plan

Those who waited until the last minute to renew their automobile registration this year paid in one of two ways: either in time spent waiting in long lines at the courthouse, or in penalty charges for missing the deadline.

It's a long-standing Iowa tradition during this season for public officials to announce that the state's once-a-year auto registration system is about to be replaced by a plan that staggers registration expiration dates throughout the year. In keeping with this custom, Johnson County Treasurer Donald Krall last week said he's hopeful that state lawmakers will approve the change sometime during the current legislative session.

The bill Krall wants to see passed would require vehicle owners to renew their registrations during the month in which their birthday falls. County employees might expect a small rush of business at the end of each month, but nothing like the state-wide crunch that occurs every year at the end of January.

Krall is one of 12 county treasurers from throughout the state who drafted the bill and began pushing for its passage three years ago. Since then, the bill has survived a number of changes and was finally approved by the House last summer. The Senate plans to take up the issue this term, and chances seem good for its passage - as long as legislators overcome the temptation to load it down with controversial amendments.

However, the wheels of government turn slowly, and legislators are not known for passing simple laws that benefit large numbers of people. Krall is to be commended for his patience and persistence. Let's hope his efforts pay off - but next year, I plan to be at the courthouse Jan. 2

Saving lowa's soil

Drive five minutes into the country and the roadside snowbanks begin to change color, some darkening enough to seem part of the permanent landscape. The cause of this metamorphosis is soil erosion — Iowa's principal resource is literally going down the drain. Recent studies indicate that the state's topsoil is being lost at a much greater rate than it can be replenished through natural ele-

Politically, the problem with soil erosion is that it is a gradual process. Iowa's prime topsoil just keeps slip-slidin' away, blowin' in the wind, with little to draw attention to the fact save for a few dirty snowdrifts. Small wonder then that the issue is not hotter politically in the legislature.

In fairness though, the 1980 legislative session saw Iowa enact a comprehensive soil conservation program known as Soil 2000, but any plan of this type requires adequate financing and thus far the money has not been forthcoming.

Despite estimates from conservation officials that it would take $9 million a year adequately to address the problems of soil erosion in Iowa, only $1 million was appropriated for this purpose in the 1981 legislative session. Several amendments were introduced to raise this figure by another $1 million; these were rejected on a republican partyline vote in order to salvage the governor's budget and create the illusion of fiscal responsibility

No doubt these same legislators will have long since retired from public office when the death knell finally sounds for the productivity of Iowa's farmland. It seems clear that it's going to take more than a few soiled snowflakes to raise their public consciences. Only a concerted effort at the ballot box will convince these budget slashers that it would be wiser to pay now than later.

Echo from the past

In what amounted to a farewell address, Adm. Hyman Rickover, father of the U.S. nuclear Navy and a military hard-liner, suprised his critics and startled his admirers with a stinging attack on the military-industrial complex, and the Reagan administration's failure to cut waste and inefficiency in the Pentagon.

"With their ability to dispense money, officials of large corporations may often exercise greater power to influence society than elected or appointed government officials - but without assuming any of the responsibilities and without being subject to public scrutiny," Rickover said. He went on to say that business executives were abandoning morality in their preoccupation with

He criticized the administration for ignoring a list of proposals he submitted last spring, suggesting ways to cut waste and inefficiency in the Defense Department. He also accused the Justice Department of failing to act on inflated and false claims by military contractors

In this attack, he echoes the warning of another famous military man, Dwight Eisenhower - general and president - who also warned the nation in a farewell speech of the growing power and potential corruption of the military-industrial complex.

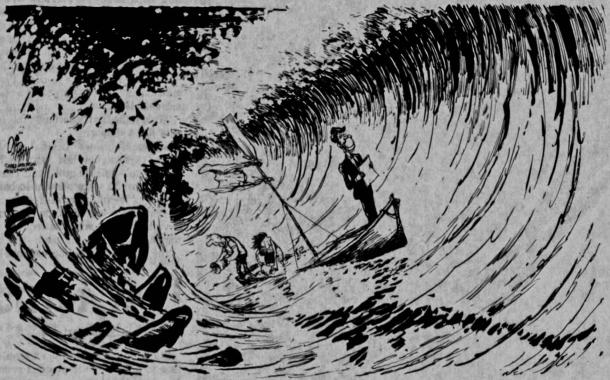

There will be those who will try to dismiss Rickover's warning by alluding to his "age." He is 82. But a good military man knows that bad equipment hurts his men and the defense of the country. And a good military man knows that only so much money can be spent on defense and that if much of it goes to sate the greed of the corporations and not to equipment, then the defense of the country suffers. Eisenhower warned us 22 years ago; Rickover warned us last week. Perhaps this time the public will heed the warning.

THOUGHT IT WAS QUITE A BRILLIANT SPEECH, WELL-PACED AND MOST MASTERFULLY DELIVERED, WITH DELIGHTFUL MINGLING OF PATHOS AND PATRIOTISM. NOW I WISH HE'D SHUT UP AND BALE.

Are Nancy's designer clothes gifts or loans? Stay tuned...

WASHINGTON - Fred Fielding, former assistant to former President Nixon's White House counsel, John Dean, has a problem.

Fielding is Ronald and Nancy Reagan's White House lawyer. Under a requirement of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act, the Reagans will soon have to make a public disclosure of those gifts worth more than $35 which they received in 1981 and those loans and liabilities over $10,000.

It is Fielding's job to prepare the gift list by May 15. Since Sheila Tate. Nancy Reagan's press secretary, revealed the other day that the first lady has been accepting designer clothes as gifts and loans, the press will undoubtedly study Fielding's list with an electron microscope

According to Tate, Nancy Reagan's low-cost wardrobe "has done nothing benefit the industry. She has derived no personal benefit.

THESE LITTLE OUTFITS, one can bet, didn't come off the racks at J.C. Penney or Sears. And if the first lady has received no "personal" benefit from these clothes, presumably designed by Galanos, Adolfo, Bill Blass, Halston and others, who has? We've seen no press releases announcing, "The House of Halston has loaned the first lady three gowns for the next three weeks." Nor has the White House press office declared: "Mrs. Reagan's clothes for her New Year's weekend at the Rancho Mirage home of Walter Annenberg are on loan from Betty Barclay Sportswear, Inc.'

I'm so glad that Doug Fredrick (DI,

According to the Government Ethics Office, whose employees understandably do not care to be identified, "The first lady does not have to publicly disclose clothes worth more than $35 if they are on loan. But she does have to make public any such gifts. If the president accepts a gift of handmade boots worth $1,000, the same requirement pertains to him.'

A FEW DAYS BEFORE Reagan's inauguration, Mexican President Lopez Portillo presented him with an Arabian stallion. Because he had not vet been sworn in the stallion bel to Reagan as a personal gift.

Gifts from foreign nations or dignitaries to the president and the first lady, on the other hand, are dealt with under the Foreign Gifts Act, which holds that such gifts are the property of the U.S. government. Such gifts are only disposable by auction or as the Department of State sees fit.

Does Fielding fear a full disclosure of the Reagans' gifts this spring? He ought to. As the nation learned at a White House press conference last Tuesday, the president has reason to be sensitive about his personal wealth. "I realize the publicity that has attended upon the tax returns of someone in my position," he told reporters.

MOREOVER, MILLIONS of Americans are unemployed. Other thousands have been stricken from the welfare and Social Security disability rolls. The rift between the "haves and the have-nots" in this country seems to grow deeper each day.

If Fielding discloses that Nancy Reagan has been blessed with $100,000 worth of clothing since moving into the White House, the support for her husband's economic package could unravel. And if the clothes she wears are, in fact, not gifts but loans, what are the particulars of the loan agreement? Who gets what for what? OF COURSE, we may never see a

Reagan television appearance followed by the credit line: "The president's suit for tonight's appearance was furnished by Hart. Schaffner and Marx: shoes by Nunn Busch; shirt by Arrow; hairstyling by White House barber Milton Pitts But let's face it: The Reagans are old movie folk, and they know the Hollywood tradition. In Screenland, if you borrow something, the payoff is a credit line. It may require Fielding's report to reveal which manufacturers dressed the first lady for the sake of promotional benefit and which loaned the White House merchandise simply for tax credits.

May 15 may be a day to watch. It could reveal much about the wardrobe of the president and his first lady. And who their friends really are.

Heating problems

To the editor: With an energy shortage, you would think people would try to conserve. Well, they sure are not trying too hard in Rienow Hall. Much heat and energy is wasted when the windows have to be left open just so it is comfortable in the This over-abundance of heat going through these small rooms not only wastes needed resources, but also causes sore throats and runny noses. Having the heat turned way up and the windows open is not at all good for a person's health. This heat not only causes people to become sick; it also affects plants. It is hard enough to grow a plant in these one-windowed rooms, without them smothering to death from the heat. This problem could easily be solved with a touch of the button; I just wish something would happen soon before it becomes a real inferno. Stefanie Fontanini

Federalism. A majority of the students interviewed said they did not understand supply-side economics or how its supporters intend it to reduce unemployment and inflation.

ECONOMISTS AND politicians differ on a simple explanation of supplyside economics. One explanation is that government should give financial incentives to the captains of industry in the hope that it will eventually improve the lot of the labor force by lowering Prices and creating jobs.

Earlier administrations had believed that the economic woes of inflation and ployment could be controlled by affecting the income of U.S. households. The consumer demand generated by government policies would regulate what industry produced. The New Federalism is Reagan's plan for taking more than 40 programs now under the federal government's wing and placing them under the control of the states. The basic theme behind the proposal apparently is that the states are better equipped to tune social programs to meet their citizens' needs while making it easier for the lederal government to balance its Unemployment, which stands at 8.9 percent, was picked by a plurality as the nation's leading economic problem. Inflation, which stood at 8.9 percent during 1981, was another major concern of the students interviewed.

Despite the concern over unemployment, most students said they are confident they will get a job because they are preparing for professional fields.

"The nursing field is pretty broad. No matter where I go there will be hospitals or convalescent homes that need nurses. I've even given some thought about going overseas," said Jorja Bishop, a pre-nursing junior.

"THE JOBS ARE there, and the companies that need engineers will always be there. I think in four or five years the economy will improve and they'll be hiring even more," said Eric McColloch, an engineering freshman.

The confidence students have about getting a job seems to contradict the remark by more than one-half of the students interviewed that the current recession has claimed the jobs or diminished the purchasing power of their family and friends.

"MY FATHER IS a farmer. He ended up having to sell out because he was unable to keep going ... prices were just too low," said Leslie Roth, a computer science major.

"Gas prices went up so we sold our camper. It took too much gas," said Paula Karalus, a sophomore business major.

A common opinion among the students interviewed was that U.S. economic woes are so entrenched that they could not be cured for several One of Reagan's boldest long-term

Family will file suit in Boston jet crash

BOSTON (UPI) - The family of a tell," said Mullin. father and son who were "misplaced" and presumed drowned in a World Airways DC-10 crash will file a lawsuit seeking "millions of dollars" in damages, their lawyer said Monday.

Walter Metcalf, 70, and his son Leo, 40, were pitched out of the jet after it skidded off a runway at Logan International Airport runway Jan. 23 and bellied into Boston Harbor, the suit said. They were not reported missing

As of late Monday, divers searching the waters around the peninsula runway had found no signs of the Boston attorney Anthony Tarricone said the Metcalf heirs planned to file suit within two to five weeks.

We expect the complaint when it is filed will have a claim for damages in the millions of dollars," he said. "We'd be making claims for wrongful death and conscious pain and suffering for each of the estates.

'IN ADDITION we expect to make claims for the next of kin for infliction of emotional distress and outrage as a result of what went on after the

Also Monday, Civil Aeronautics Board regional director Joseph W. Mullin said a CAB investigation showed the Metcalfs boarded the final leg of Flight 30 in Newark, N.J., after having apparently been listed as "no shows" at the gate.

He said that was the reason the Metcalfs went unaccounted for for so long. It was possible, he said, they showed up just before the flight took off and were never removed from the "no

"Where in the system the Metcalfs" names were misplaced is impossible to

Mullin concluded "no other persons were similarly misplaced," based on a recheck of World Airways ticket coupons and the Massachusetts Port Authority's final passenger list that accounted for all 197 passengers and 12 crew members.

TARRICONE SAID potential defendants in the suit include World Airways, the Massachusetts Port Authority, McDonnell-Douglas - the manufacturer of the DC-10 - and the Federal Aviation Administration.

He said it would not be known until the evidence is gathered if one or all of the potential defendants would be named in the suit.

Tarricone said there was no set damage figure in the suit, because in Massachusetts the jury decides on the damage award. But he said the "ad damnum" included in the suit will ask for damages in the "millions of

Snow-laden Midwest digging out from the 'brutal winter of '82'

Road crews Monday labored against huge drifts across the snow-laden Midwest, where thousands of people were stranded in shelters or confined to their homes by the worst snowstorm yet in the brutal winter of '82.

From St. Louis to Pennsylvania, authorities struggled to get things moving after Sunday's storm dumped up to 2 feet of snow in some areas. Heavy rains and ice-clogged rivers caused flooding in West Virginia. Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Ohio and southern

A photograph of Andre Coutoula by Gregor Arax is one of several prints from "Photoflexion," an exhibition of photographs about body building currently at the UI Museum of Art. The collection traces the joint evolution of photography and body building from the early 1880s to present.

Photos show art of body building

By Suzanne Richerson

Middle Eastern cultures have long stressed body building as part of their religious and political life; one of Islam's central doctrines equates a healthy mind with a healthy body. Among the Bedouins, there are still tribes who will not accept a stranger in their midst unless he has proven himself physically.

By contrast, weightlifters and body builders in Western cultures rarely receive any recognition except when someone like the phenomenal Arnold Schwarzenegger wins the title of Mr. Universe and becomes a movie star.

Photographers, however, find body building a made-to-order object for their art. In fact, body building, with its emphasis on slow motion exercises and static poses, is one of the few sports that allow the photographer the leisure to plan and set up his picture.

"PHOTOFLEXION," an exhibition of photographs about body building currently at the UI Museum of Art, traces this joint evolution of photography and body building from the early 1880s to the present. The photos, on loan from the Doan family of Fort Dodge, emphasize the primary concern of body building: huge muscles.

Early photos rarely show more detail than the sheer bulk of the body in stereotypical poses, but with the development of better equipment and new techniques, photographers capture the straining muscles, the delineation of sinews and the contours of blood vessels on the torso.

The early muscle builders were most often regarded as circus performers, and though there is still a performance atmosphere about the display of muscles, it wasn't until well into the 20th century that the sport began to gain a semblance of respectability.

THE GROTESQUE aspects of enlarged muscles - rippling backs, overdeveloped biceps and swollen chests - are all features of many of the exhibit's photos. Not all of them, however, emphasize grotes-query. In a dual photo called "Tom Platz's Thighs," by Mike Neveux, contours of flesh are highlighted against gradations of shadows in a subtle play of black and white.

Craig Deitz's juxtaposition of calla lilies and brawny torso dramatizes the paradox between muscular strength and the delicacy of

While some of the photographs glorify the body — "Frank Affranti" by Lon Hanagan shows a nude figure in soft focus seated on a Greek pedestal — others point out the ironies of the sport. "Statue" by Deitz pictures a giant muscular plaster statue straddling the entrance to a body building equip-ment shop like a modern Colossus of Rhodes. Jane O'Neal catches a group of marchers in Scottish kilts as seen through the enormous legs of elephants carrying body

IN ONE PARTICULARLY sensitive photo called "Weightlifters: Ramsey Prison, Texas," Danny Lyon draws the viewer into the bleak existence of the prison. An underdeveloped weightlifter raises a weight made of concrete-filled tin cans over his head while a companion in the foreground holds a letter. Surrounding the figures, in sharply etched detail, are the brick walls of the prison room.

According to Deitz, former photography editor of Muscle Magazine, who lectured at the museum in conjunction with the show, winners of body building competitions can earn up to $5,000. But he cites and deplores the almost universal reliance on steroids to create the large mus-

Deitz points out that female body builders are relatively new to the field (although some remarkable early photos show that women also practiced this sport), and the photos show that emphasis on muscle building can create the same grotesque results in their bodies as in the bodies of males.

Douglas Kent Hall sums up the limited possibilities of body building in a fine documentary photo showing a group of photographers taking a picture of a figure as he poses motionless on a stage with lights shining on him, his muscled back to the bank of

The exhibit continues through Feb. 28.

Brown album not quite reggae

By Jim Musser

While the Tony Brown Band provides an admirable and useful service by bringing an electrifying reggae show to the Midwest's bar scene, the band has been unable on its debut LP (Prisoners in Paradise, Mountain Railroad Records) to pull off this delicate, hypnotic form on vinyl.

The problems begin with the form itself. Reggae music is perhaps the most rhythmically defined genre in pop music history - characteristically employing sinewy, gutbucket bass guitar, rimshot-laden drumming on the upbeat and clicking rhythm guitar to form the bedding for gospel/R&B-tinged vocals.

Lyrically, reggae has traditionally served as a soapbox for the voice of the politically/economically oppressed and for blissed-out, gospel-oriented inspirational themes. The goal of the reggae performer is to transcend, by vocal quality and lyrical content, the seemingly constricting format that is his or her musical backdrop - a symbolic triumph of soul, human spirit and will over regimentation, apparent confinement and the mundane.

AT ITS BEST, then, reggae music is a blissful, hypnotic, trance-like celebration of humanity (and its suffering) featuring a lazy, loping groove. At its worst — that is, when the form is not transcended but instead surrendered to - reggae music can be as boring, predictable and seemingly endless as a bus ride to Montana.

The Tony Brown Band's Prisoners in

Records

Paradise (a.k.a. Charter Greyhound To Billings) leaves the terminal with the title track. In one fell swoop, the title song showcases nearly all of the shortcomings embodied in the record. Beginning with a guitar figure that's straight from John McLaughlin's Fusion Guitar Licks For Beginners, Book 1, the band immediately introduces you to its self-proclaimed (hope it stops right here) "reggae-jazz fusion."

That such a concept is a contradiction in terms should be obvious - fusing the necessarily repetitive rhythmic lockstep that is reggae's instrumental essence to the free form rhythmic fluctuations of jazz is as hopeless as trying to weld plywood to steel. It simply cannot, has not and will not be done.

TO BE FAIR, the word "fusion" is misused here - all it really amounts to is that the band plays some reggae songs with "jazzy" sounds injected (particularly guitar) as well as some jazz-pop tunes.

Other shortcomings underlined by "Prisoners In Paradise" include lyrical vacancy and Brown's insistence on singing beyond his range. His voice is fluid and effective in its upper register, yet he punctuates each chorus and verse on "Prisoner" with a low, flatted, wobbly note that he uncannily hits and holds repeatedly throughout the song and the record.

And while I am in no way questioning Brown's integrity nor the depth and desirability of his beliefs, what comes out is a sophomoric melange of twice-baked cliches ("love is what you want, love is what you need, search for truth and inner peace"), curious diatribes ("they say go to work, you better get a job, then they rob you at the corner store") and invocations of "brethren" and "Jah" in a manner that has more in common with late-night TV's Nat E. Dread than Toots Hibbert.

"HAPPY MUSIC" ("make you feel so good, happy music make we feel so good") is about as happy as a rent increase, and "Shifting In Babylon" features a creepy, stumbling guitar line that just won't quit. On "Clean Living," Brown warns, "Don't put no sugar on my table, no poison in my food" like he really means it.

"Iration Song" is easily the highlight of the LP. It is Brown's bestconstructed and most ambitious effort an appealing, well-produced tune that showcases a lovely melody with a shimmering vocal mix.

Brown seems handcuffed by his aping of the familiar pidgin Jamaican/English in much the same way as a white blues singer who copies black stylists - the yielding to style over substance. I am not suggesting (as some, sadly, have) that Tony Brown "has no right to play reggae music" because his relatively healthy, well-provided Midwest upbringing has left him too isolated to identify with the horrors and suffering of the Third World. That's as pure a line of hogwash men sing the blues?"

OF COURSE they can - and have and Tony Brown has every "right" to sing the reggae music. The world's music forms are among its greatest treasures and should be considered the domain of anyone so moved to present them. But mimicry and affectation can only render artistic attempts as mere entertainments.

Brown is an intelligent, capable musician with a lot of good things to say. Perhaps he could be more eloquent and connect better with his (largely Midwestern) audience were he to revert to the vernacular of his Iowa upbringing. As it is, Brown is to reggae what Sha Na Na is to vintage rock 'n' roll - sounds kinda like it, but

If you are new to reggae music and want some for your collection, start elsewhere. Recommended are the soundtracks to Rockers and The Harder They Come, Bob Marley & the Wailers' Catch A Fire, Burnin', Rastaman Vibration and Live!. Toots & the Maytals' Funky Kingston, Burning Spear's Marcus Garvey and Harder Than The Best, the Mighty Diamonds' Right Time, Black Uhuru's Red and either of British black-and-white group UB40's import LPs.

Reggae music is a fiery, volatile form that depends on integrity, honesty, humanity and lack of pretense. Tony Brown is capable of all these things - and don't bet against him next time out - they just don't materialize on Prisoners In Paradise.

That honor goes to Sigma Chi, which according to IM representative Rick Lockridge, has a tough 3-2 zone defense and patient team offense. Several of the members of Sigma Chi played for pre-holiday champion Carl, and Lockridge obviously believes that winning attitude will prevail.

NAIL IT IS fastened to the second spot, with Tuna Fish, a spin-off of last year's exceptional Cowbell Backwash Psychosis Enema Squad, holding down the third position. Perennial contender Pi Kappa Alpha has looked impressive enough in the early going to merit the No. 4 ranking.

Another social fraternity, Lambda Chi Alpha, is ranked fifth, although they played poorly Sunday night and, according to Lockridge, could be beaten soon unless they develop a coherent offensive strategy. 515, a group of experienced intramural players with a new name, are ranked sixth. They are led by 1981 IM One-on-One champ Greg Thorgaard. Brother Oink is next at No. 7, followed by Talking Socks and Ursa Majors, led by former Graceland College standout

IN THE WOMEN'S division, the seemingly invincible Flash, led by former Iowa State star Colleen Peterson and former Iowa guard Joni Rensvold, was upset in sudden death overtime by Fastbreak, which claimed the top spot. Fastbreak overcame a 10-point halftime deficit and its opponent's stall game to subdue Flash, which is currently ranked second.

The Ringers, last year's All-University women's point champions are ranked third, followed by Delta Gamma, with the female Squadders completing the top five.

The coed division is led by undefeated Milky Way, which owns a 14game winning streak. Milky Way barely escaped defeat to second ranked Art Majors when Andy Piro sunk a 20foot shot at the buzzer. The No. 3 spot is held by Guys and Dolls, followed by Dogs Hair and fifth-ranked Phi Zappa Krappa. Everyone in the top five is undefeated with the exception of Art Ma-

THE SIGMA CHI'S figure to move up in the race with some help from their basketball team, which should contend for the title. The team is made up of players from Carl, which took the preholiday tournament.

The other two divisions are still up for grabs, with Delta Gamma leading the women's division and Milky Way setting the pace in the coed division.

The DG's lead the women's overall division with 398 points, followed by Chi Omega with 373.5 points and the defending all-university champion Ringers with 365 points. Alpha Phi is a distant fourth with 276.5 points, while The race for second place is much Delta Delta Delta rounds out the top five with 192 points.

In the coed division, Milky Way, with 324 points, holds a slim lead over South Quad which has 308 points. The Road Runners, champs in football are next with 253 points, followed by Alpha Phi with 250. Phi Rho Sigma rounds out the top five with 233 points.

Jim Napier, newly named manager of Iowa's triple-A baseball team, displays the club's new shirt as Chicago Cubs' Manager Dallas Green looks on.

Iowa Oaks change name, ownership

DES MOINES (UPI) - The Iowa Association team - the top farm club Oaks of the American Association baseball league got a new name and new uniforms Monday to go along with their new ownership.

Ken Grandquist, president of the squad's Board of Directors, said the team will be known as the Iowa Cubs and will wear uniforms identical to those of its parent club, the Chicago

Grandquist, who led the drive to buy the Oaks from owner Ray Johnston, said at a news conference that the board and steering committee resisted the temptation to change the Iowa link to Des Moines.

"WE WONDERED how the people in places like Indianola, Newton and Adel would feel about the Iowa name changed to Des Moines," Grandquist said. "We've been connected with the Iowa name for 13 years and decided, because of the central lowa identification, not to change it."

Grandquist and a 21-member steering committee met with Johnston in November to decide if it would match an offer made by three Springfield, Ill.,

GRANDQUIST, WHO directed the effort to raise $600,000 Johnston was asking for the team, said $475,000 has either been raised or committed to new ownership. Johnston has reportedly paid all but $125,000 and has given the buyers until Jan. 4, 1983 to come up with the balance.

Also at the news conference was Chicago General Manager Dallas Green, who was scheduled to tour the Sec Taylor Stadium facilities.

'With the new name, the Iowa Cubs will build a new tradition," Green said. 'We've already made changes on the field through trades and free agent acquisitions that can't help but bolster the organization."

Last season was the Des Moines team's first as a member of the Cubs' farm system. Johnston purchased the triple-A team for a reported $100,000 and brought the team to Des Moines in

NFL contracts expire for 149 free agents

NEW YORK (UPI) - Several of the NFL's top quarterbacks, including Bert Jones of Baltimore, Craig Morton of Denver and Joe Theismann of Washington, were among the 149 players who became free agents Monday in accordance with the collective bargaining agreement between the NFL Management Council and the NFL Players Association.

The contract states that players not signed by Feb. 1 become free agents and can accept offers from any of the other clubs in the 28-team league.

WASHINGTON, DENVER, Chicago and Houston had the highest number of free agents. The Redskins had 15, including Theismann, defensive tackle Dave Butz, cornerback Joe Lavender, defensive lineman Karl Lorch and running back Terry Metcalf. Denver had 13, including Morton, defensive tackle Rubin Carter, defensive end Barney Chavous, linebackers Tom Jackson and Bob Swenson, safety Bill Thompson and cornerback Louis Wright.

Chicago listed 12 free agents, including quarterbacks Vince Evans and Mike Phipps, and Houston had 11, including tight end Dave Casper and tackle Leon Gray.

The New York Jets were the only team without a free agent.

The crowd will be nothing new to Bush, who captained two Missouri State High School runner-up teams at Kansas City Central High School, the same prep team as current Hawkeye Waymond King. He later played at Central Missouri State University before transferring to Iowa.

When asked if he would be nervous before the championship game, he quoted the late Bob Marley: "I don't need to tell you any more things. Look for yourself. Meditate. Take heed. And deal with this positive vibration." In other words. Bush is confident.

Bush even thinks his height (5-11, compared to Hiller's 6-5) will assist him. "My height is an advantage because people underestimate me," he said. "Basketball is a mind game. A player has to think out there on the court. You can't play if you can't SCHENKELBERG, WHO played on the intramural pre-holiday tournament champion Carl, is no stranger to the bright lights, either, having played in the Iowa State High School basketball tournament for Carroll Kuemper High School and in the Iowa All Star game. In addition, he was named all-state as a forward twice.

Schroeder is a former Iowa football player whose career was cut short by an injury. "I played in front of large crowds in the Illinois State High School tournament," he said, "but I haven't played in front of a bunch of college people before. It might affect me. I don't know. I'm pretty nervous, but I'll give it my best shot. The winner of the Bush-Hiller game. besides the $200 scholarship, will receive a large trophy, with the other three players getting smaller trophies for their respective places.

Stewart's talent sweet to lowa

By Mike Condon

Kerry Stewart has a big weakness according to Iowa Head Women's Swimming Coach Peter Kennedy. "Kerry's only real weakness is her sweet tooth.'

During the season, swimming and sweets are not a good mixture and the junior breaststroker knows it. "My teammates kid me about it but I really have to fight myself," Stewart said.

IF STEWART'S performance is any indication, she is winning the fight. She has already qualified for the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national meet in the 50-yard breaststroke and would still like to qualify in the 100 and 200. "I would really like to qualify in all three do well at the Big Ten meet because I didn't do well last year.'

With less than a month to go before Big Tens, Stewart says her times could be better. "My times are okay for this time of the year but they're not real fast," she said. "Part of the reason could be that I'm tired because of all the meets we've had, but that should be no excuse. I'll start tapering pretty soon and the times should begin to come down.

Stewart is from Tacoma, Wash., which is very close to the University of Washington, Iowa's opponent in the Rose Bowl. Stewart said she was wearing her black and gold when she returned home over Christmas. "I was home wearing my Hawkeye colors before the game," Stewart said. "But I had to be back here (Iowa City) for I'll get razzed when I get back home."

WITH ONLY TWO seniors on the squad (Liz MacBride and Ann Bowers) Stewart is looked upon as a steadying influence by her coach. "Kerry has a good sense of humor and keeps the team loose," Kennedy said. "Practices can be come monontonous at times and Kerry does a good job of breaking up the same old routine. Kerry and Adrienne (Steger) are the ones the younger girls really look to for sup-

Stewart believes there is a better team attitude this season and gives Kennedy the credit. "This team has an attitude five-thousand percent better than last year's team," she said. "I really feel that is part of the reason we did so poorly at Big Tens last year.

Iowa is just more than a place to swim for Stewart. She chose Iowa over Texas A&M partly because of academics. "Iowa is very academically orientated and that was important in my choosing Iowa," Stewart said. "I really didn't know what I wanted to major in when I arrived here but last year I decided to enter the nursing college. I'm in my first semester in the nursing college and it is proving to be quite a challenge.

KCJJ to carry Leonard-Finch bout

By Mike Condon

Iowa City radio station KCJJ is planning to carry the broadcast of the Sugar Ray Leonard-Bruce Finch fight for the World Welterweight Boxing Championship on Feb. 15 according to Station Manager Barb Mullin.

"We are an ABC affiliate and the fight is being offered by the network so we decided to pick it up," Mullin said. 'The fight is taking place on a Monday night and it didn't conflict with any Hawkeye or high school events.

LEONARD, WHOSE last fight was his memorable 14th round TKO of Thomas Hearns, will be making his first defense of the unified welterweight title. "Another reason we decided to carry the fight is the fact that Sugar Ray is very popular in this area and there is no telecast of the fight on free television," Mullin said. Home Box Office (HBO) has exclusive television rights to the fight which is being held in Reno, Nev. The any more fights but Mullin did not rule fight is scheduled to start at 9 p.m. Iowa time. The announcers for ABC radio will be Don Chevrier, who will handle the blow-by-blow, and Lou Boda will provide the expert commentary.

LEONARD'S OPPONENT is not very well known to fans but Finch is the No. 3 contender according to the World Boxing Council and is considered a worthy opponent for the title. KCJJ has no future plans to carry out the possibility of broadcasts in the future. With the big heavyweight fight between Gerry Cooney and Larry Holmes coming up in March, many would surely be interested in that bout.

'We have to first honor our committments to our other sports," Mullin said. "If ABC receives the rights to that fight (Holmes-Cooney) and there is no conflict we would definitely have to consider the possibility of broadcasting it over KCJJ."

Zalesky win helps power West, 24-9

Iowa's Lenny Zalesky helped rally the West to a 24-9 defeat of the East during the 16th annual All-Star Wrestling Classic Monday night in Bethlehem, Pa.

Zalesky defeated Minnesota's Jim Martinez, 7-5, in the 142-pound bout to bring the West back to a 6-6 tie. The East, behind the strength of Michigan's Joe McFarland and Lehigh's Tom Husted, jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the

McFarland defeated Oklahoma State's Randy Willingham, 8-4, at 118 pounds. Husted followed with his 10-9 decision of Oklahoma's Clint Burke at

BUT IOWA STATE'S Jim Gibbons, the defending national champion at 134 pounds, edged North Carolina's C.D. Mock, 4-3, to place the West on the scoreboard.

Zalesky then rallied to defeat the Gopher's Martinez, previously undefeated at 142 pounds. Martinez scored the first takedown of the match with 2 minutes, 36 seconds left in the

The Hawkeye then followed with a reverse with 2:11 remaining. Martinez escaped nine seconds later and the period ended with the Gopher ahead, 3-

Zalesky started the second period in the top position, but Martinez escaped three seconds later. With 40 seconds left in the period, Zalesky was warned for stalling. At the end of the period, Zalesky nearly scored a takedown, but time expired and Martinez led the

THE IOWA SENIOR escaped to start the third period and four seconds later, scored the go-ahead takedown. With 1:36 left in the bout, Martinez escaped to tie the score at 5-5. After being warned for stalling, Martinez gave up a takedown to Zalesky with 28 seconds remaining.

In addition to the win by Gibbons, Iowa State had three other wrestlers who were victorious - defending national champion Nate Carr at 150 pounds, Perry Hummel at 177 and Mike

Gannon sprains ankle at practice

By Melissa Isaacson Staff Writer

Iowa forward Mark Gannon injured his right ankle during the Hawkeye's Monday workout and is questionable for Thursday's Big Ten clash against Indiana in Iowa City.

The 6-foot-7 junior apparently came down on teammate Waymond King's foot during a three-on-three fast break

Mark Gannon

Gannon's right ankle, initially feared to be injured more seriously, was immediately immobilized in an inflatable-type cast. He was then taken to UI Hospitals where the ankle was X- By Matt Gallo rayed and determined to be a sprain.

THE ANKLE WAS placed in a partial cast for the purpose of immobilization and restriction of swelling. It is not yet known when Gannon will begin treatment

Arriving back from the hospital on crutches, Gannon appeared to be in good spirits. Asked how the ankle was doing, he replied, "It's felt better."

Leaving the managers' office. Gannon turned back with a smile and said, "knowing me, I'll be back tomorrow." Gannon, who scored a game high 19 points in the Hawks' 76-66 victory against Ohio State last Saturday, is averaging 9.5 points a game.

In other news, freshman center Michael Payne suited up for practice for the first time since injuring his foot during the Michigan game nine days ago. Payne, Iowa's leading rebounder, stretched the tendons between the toes on his right foot. Limping slightly, Payne took light shooting practice, testing his foot and finally dunking the ball for good measure

During the Iowa-Ohio State postgame press conference, Iowa Head Coach Lute Olson said that the earliest Payne would most likely be back in action would be the Northwestern game Feb. 11 in Iowa City.

looking at two top defenders By Jay Christensen

With the national tender signing date just over one week away, several of the nation's top high school football players will be making a decision on their gridiron futures shortly.

Possibly the top two football players Iowa coaches have been touting are Tony Furjanic of Chicago and Larry

Recruiting

Station of Omaha. Both are quick, strong linebackers, thought to be among the top preps in their respective states. Both may wait until the Feb. 10 signing date before making a decision.

FURJANIC IS A 6-foot-2, 220pounder from Mt. Carmel High School in Chicago. His list of honors include Chicago Sun-Times Player of the Year, Chicago Tribune Defensive Player of the Chicago Catholic League.

Furjanic has outstanding speed for his size, 4.7 seconds in the 40-yard dash, and bench-presses 400 pounds. He made his recruiting visit to Iowa City last weekend and is the cousin of Iowa's Hufford brothers. Mike and

As of Monday night, Furjanic has reportedly narrowed his choices to Notre Dame, Penn State, Iowa and Michigan. Notre Dame has already scored several of Chicago's top preps and Joe Paterno, head coach of Penn State, is very interested in landing Fur-

Station is a 6-1, 215-pounder from Omaha Central High School. His list of honors include Lincoln Star Player of the Year and Honorary Defensive Captain of the Omaha World-Herald All-State Team.

He also possesses outstanding speed, 4.6 in the 40. He bench-presses 360 pounds, squats 500 pounds and can dead lift over 700 pounds.

STATION AND TEAMMATE Pernell Gatson, Central's quarterback, paid an informal visit to Iowa City last fall for the Iowa-Michigan State game. While Gatson has knocked Iowa from his list of prospective colleges. narrowing his choices to Houston and Nebraska, Station hasn't.

According to his Head Coach, William Reed, Station will chose either Nebraska or Iowa. "He returned from his visit to Iowa extremely pleased.' Reed said. "Nebraska is not in as tight on him as a local school would be. But he is receiving a lot of pressure from Big Red supporters in the area."

Steve Pivovar, who covers the preps for the Omaha World-Herald, speaks highly of Station's abilities. "Nobody around here in the Omaha area hits anywhere near as hard as Station does. He has a natural football instinct."

The space age has hit the world of body building as evidenced by this contraption in the UI Recreation Building. Tyrone Kanzaky is stregthening his ticular apparatus, an individual is working against hydraulic pressure.
