Security tight as Reagan arrives

Reagan expects budget 'horror stories'

Solar energy is not all glory:
You have to face your friends

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan urged Congress Monday to pass a $672 billion 1983 budget, including $23 million in appropriations for the Iowa Legislature in which he took office the previous January.

The legislation was included in the budget as part of the state’s legislative session as a way to introduce the concept of "wearing blinders," he said.

"We’re doing this," he said, "in the interest of the public because we need to get it done."

The president began his remarks by telling those present, "I believe it would behoove each of us to focus on the task at hand."

The president had also been scheduled to meet with President Jimmy Carter in the Oval Office, but both leaders canceled the meeting because of the high winds expected in the area.

Reagan also announced that he will be traveling to Iowa on Wednesday to campaign for the upcoming state election.

"We’re going to Iowa," he said, "to talk about the importance of having good leaders in government."

Right to Life case to be delayed

By Janice Taylor

The Iowa Senate is expected to act on the Right to Life case this week, but the unusually long deliberation means that the case will be delayed until the following session.

The Right to Life Committee, an anti-abortion organization, has been working on the case for several years. They have been lobbying state senators through a variety of means, including direct mail, phone calls, and personal visits.

The committee is planning to lobby state senators through a variety of means, including direct mail, phone calls, and personal visits.

The Right to Life case has been a controversial issue for many years, with pro-choice advocates and anti-abortion activists on opposite sides.

In the past, the Iowa Senate has been divided on the issue, with some senators supporting the Right to Life case and others opposing it.

This year, the Right to Life case has moved a step closer to becoming law, but the unusually long deliberation means that it will not be implemented this session.

The Right to Life case is expected to return to the Iowa Senate in the next session, where it will be re-introduced and debated.

For more information on the Right to Life case, please visit the Iowa Senate website at https://legis.iowa.gov/.
Readers blast CAC delegates on student-financed lobbying trip

Letters

To the editor:

I recently read an article concerning the All-Iowa Student Concrete Association (CAC) which was lobbying in Washington, D.C. I was very concerned that this association was using student money to finance a lobbying trip. There are many problems with this trip.

First of all, the six students will be in Washington for a mere five days. Why are these students spending only five days in Washington, D.C.? They could have spent this time doing something more productive, such as working on Capitol Hill in the many offices of Iowa's congressional delegation. This junket, which will be financed with very little to no money, will cost the city nothing; as a result, they are widely considered to be a great value.

To the editor:

I read with interest the article in the February 11 issue of The Daily Iowan concerning the trip to Washington, D.C., by six students from the All-Iowa Student Concrete Association (CAC). I am concerned about the cost of this trip and the use of student money to finance it.

First of all, I am concerned about the cost of the trip. This junket, which will be financed with very little to no money, will cost the city nothing; as a result, they are widely considered to be a great value.

Second, I am concerned about the use of student money to finance this trip. There are many problems with the way the CAC distributes funds to its members. For example, this trip is being financed with very little to no money, which is irresponsible.

I urge the CAC to reconsider its decision to finance this trip with very little to no money. I believe that a better use of student money would be to support our student government executives as they work on Capitol Hill in the many offices of Iowa's congressional delegation.

Linda Schreuder

To the editor:

Concerning the article that stated student delegates on the CAC trip are being supported by CAC delegates to attend the trip, it is not accurate. The students are not being financially supported by CAC delegates, but rather by the student government executives.

I urge the CAC to reconsider its decision to finance this trip with very little to no money. I believe that a better use of student money would be to support our student government executives as they work on Capitol Hill in the many offices of Iowa's congressional delegation.

Jet crash in Tokyo leaves 21 dead

TOKYO (UPI) - A Japanese Lines DC-9 passenger plane crashed into the suburbs of Tokyo Friday, killing 21 people and leaving thousands injured, police said.

Police said 117 others, including 50 Americans, were injured in the crash, which occurred at 8:45 a.m. following a takeoff from Haneda airport. It was the worst air-disaster involving a jet in Japan.

A passenger, Tadao Watanabe, director of the Japan Lines, said some in the passengers' group were Americans, but he did not have an exact figure.

"The situation is quite serious. We are still treating the injured in two hospitals," he said.

Among the injured were 10 Americans, including three from the United States.

TOM POST, a Senate aide from Chicago, was among the injured. The plane was carrying 93 passengers and a crew of 12.

Doctor in Atlanta murder case charged with contempt of court

ATLANTA (UPI) — A defense physician who testified there was no medical evidence to prove rape was a defensible motive for murder was cited again Tuesday for contempt of court.

A defense witness who testified there was no medical evidence to prove rape was a defensible motive for murder was cited again Tuesday for contempt of court.

Dr. Robert Williams, 23, is accused of killing 19-year-old Cater Payne, who was cited for contempt of court for the third time.

He had informed the pathologist he had granted an interview to an Atlanta newspaper last December, more than three months after the pathologist was cited for contempt of court.

"I've testified linking him to 10 more bodies of Cater and Payne," he said. "We have no secrets in our files for the Defense Nuclear Agency, the Atomic Energy Commission in Washington. The former is going to the Defense Nuclear Agency.

Boys will be boys, even if they happen to be in the Vienna Choir

By Janee Goche

Launched in the 19th century, the Vienna Choir Boys are known as the world’s most beloved choir. However, these young gentlemen are innocent and charming. They are unchanged in character but it is difficult to resist anything brought to the Metropolitan Opera.

There was a isolated collection of luscious barbershop harmony was in the London concert in Manhattan, including some delightful -brass-hair, German ornamentation. In Vienna, it was enough to overcome the delivery of challenging material with the same high quality as performed by the Vienna Choir Boys, and the unique style of the choir is so pure, so refined, so bold, it is hard to resist.

The choir, conducted by the noted Austrian musicologist and composer, Richard W. Klotz, is included in the “nulla est uter saxum” of the Jesuit order. The image of the choir has remained unchanged by the passing of time, and the choir’s image is so pure, so refined, so bold, that it is impossible to resist.

Music

Not only can the boys sing, but they also perform remarkable acrobatics and are known for their comic timing and precise delivery. The music of the choir is so pure, so refined, so bold, it is hard to resist.

After the Klotz choir, a piece by Franz Schubert, a well-known composer of the Vienna School, is performed. The choir, conducted by the noted Austrian musicologist and composer, Richard W. Klotz, is included in the “nulla est uter saxum” of the Jesuit order. The image of the choir has remained unchanged by the passing of time, and the choir’s image is so pure, so refined, so bold, that it is impossible to resist.

'Making Love' examines humans, not stereotypes

By Fannie F. Miller

Tuesday's Times

The last major release of the week is the TV-movie version of the old daytime serial, "Making Love." It stars Harry Hamlin and Elizabeth MacRae, and is directed by Arthur Hiller.

"Making Love" is based on a novel by Helen Marlowe, who also wrote the screen adaptation. The novel was published in 1977 and has been turned into a film several times, most recently in 1979 as "The Other Woman." The TV-movie version is the latest in a series of adaptations, and it is hoped that it will be more faithful to the original story than previous versions.

The plot follows a married couple who have been living together for many years but are no longer able to satisfy each other sexually. The husband is frustrated and depressed, while the wife is bored and unfulfilled. They both begin to have affairs, and their relationship becomes strained.

"Making Love" is not a typical romantic comedy, and it is not intended to be. Instead, it is a drama that explores the complexities of human relationships. The characters are flawed, and their actions are not always understandable or justifiable. But they are real, and they are relatable.

"Making Love" is a film about love, but it is not a film about romance. It is a film about the reality of love, and the challenges that come with it. It is a film about the human condition, and the struggles that we all face as we try to make sense of our lives.

"Making Love" is not an easy film to watch, but it is an important one. It is a film that reminds us that love is not simply a matter of finding the right person. It is a film that reminds us that love is a journey, and that we must be willing to work hard if we want it to be successful.

"Making Love" is a film that is worth watching, and it is a film that is worth talking about. It is a film that will make you think, and it is a film that will make you feel.
