Love for wolves

BY NANCY LOVERINGS

Wolves, wolves, wolves...our legacy.

In the past we have supported the efforts of others in our efforts to protect the wolf. The wolf should no longer be classified as an "endangered species." It is a species that has been hunted to near extinction and is in danger of extinction again. We must act as a community to protect the wolf, and to ensure its survival.

Endangered Species List

The Endangered Species Act was passed in 1973 to protect species that are in danger of extinction. The act provides for the listing of species as endangered or threatened, and provides for the conservation of those species.

The wolf has been on the Endangered Species List since 1978.

New federal initiatives

BY JEFFREY A. DAVIS

The Endangered Species Act (ESA) is a federal law that protects the habitat of endangered and threatened species. The ESA requires that federal agencies consult with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on any actions that may affect a listed species.

The ESA protects the wolf, and requires that federal agencies consult with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on any actions that may affect the wolf.

The Endangered Species Act has been successful in protecting the wolf and other endangered species. However, it is important to continue to support the ESA and its protections.

Vandalism

BY MARK A. MILLER

Vandalism is a serious problem that affects our community. We must work together to prevent vandalism and to hold those responsible accountable.

Vandalism includes actions such as graffiti, graffiti removal, and destruction of property. We must take a strong stance against vandalism and work to prevent it from occurring.

Threat to civil rights

The Reagan administration has continued its destruction of U.S. civil rights laws. The administration has made few, if any, attempts to improve housing conditions, to correct the discrimination that was exacerbated by the segregationist housing policies of the 1950s and 1960s, or to address the growing number of homeless people in the country. The administration has instead focused on cutting funding for programs that provide housing assistance and on deregulating the housing market, which has led to a sharp increase in the number of homeless people and in the housing costs for those who do have access to housing.

Funding for HACAP

The Johnson County Healthy Areas Community Action Program recently received a $34,000 grant from the Johnson County's Road to Progress program to help it with-needed financial support. Without funding, HACAP will cease providing neighborhood center and daycare services within six months.

The Johnson County branch of HACAP is a good example of an efficiently run, worthwhile human service agency. Its primary function is providing social services to low-income residents who are above the poverty level, yet need some form of aid to remain self-sufficient. HACAP's programs include Head Start, day care, meals, senior community centers, family services, special education services, and health services.

Although it is tough to recommend that local governments spend money when the fiscal situation is right, priorities must be established. Among these is the recommendation of Judge Bette Covey that the county council preclude aid for those destitute HACAP should be funded.

Ronald continues chasing the cockroach

Ronald did not dare to lift a finger, nor even to think of something nice. "He is my enemy," he thought to himself. "I must continue to chase the cockroach." He kept on chasing it, but the cockroach always seemed to be one step ahead of him. "I will catch you," he thought, "I will catch you." He went on and on, but the cockroach never gave up. "I will never give up," thought Ronald, "I will do whatever it takes to catch the cockroach." He was determined to catch the cockroach, no matter what. He was not going to be defeated by this little insect. He was going to keep chasing it, until he finally caught it. He was going to prove to everyone that he was not a failure. He was going to show them that he could do it. He was going to catch the cockroach, and he was going to do it with all the might he could muster.

Michael

Although I agree that a tax credit for a one-time gift is a good idea, I believe it is not the only solution to the problem of giving to charity. We need to encourage people to give on a regular basis, not just once a year. We need to make it easier for people to give to charities, not harder. We need to make sure that charities are accountable and transparent, not secretive and opaque. We need to make sure that charities are using their funds wisely, not wasting them on unnecessary expenses.

UI NAACP organizer Caldwell claims article was inaccurate

In the wake of recent articles in the Daily Iowan and other local publications, UI NAACP organizer Caldwell has come under fire for his remarks about the state's education system. The articles have accused Caldwell of making false statements about the state's schools, and Caldwell has responded by calling for a more open and honest dialogue about the issues at hand.

Caldwell's primary concern is the lack of funding for schools in the state of Iowa, and he believes that this lack of funding is directly responsible for the poor quality of education that is being provided to students. He points to the fact that Iowa is one of the few states in the country that does not have a state education department, and he believes that this lack of oversight is leading to a lack of accountability in the state's schools.

Caldwell's remarks have been met with a mixed reaction from the public, with some supporting his comments and others criticizing them. However, Caldwell remains undeterred, and he continues to speak out about the issues that he believes need to be addressed.
Withholding bill suggested

A bill prepared by the Iowa Senate Education Commis- sioner Madley would allow the state to withhold state revenues from the counties that do not comply with educational mandates.

Attacked Kalona breeder still loves those wolves

A 41-year-old Kalona breeder who was attacked by his purebred male wolf on Feb. 14 is still determined to keep his wolves despite the attack.

Bromsen, 28, said this is the first attack he has had in the seven years he has raised wolves. And the attack happened right at the moment when he was handling the male.

"It was out of the blue," he said. "I was feeding him yesterday. He's a very docile animal.

The attack came at the moment when Bromsen was handling the male. The breeder said he was feeding the wolf when it attacked him.

"He really just pounced on me," Bromsen said. "I felt like I was going to die."

Bromsen said he was able to get away from the wolf and get medical treatment. But he still wonders if he will ever be able to care for wolves again.

"I don't know if I can," he said. "I just don't know if I can trust them anymore."

Bromsen said he plans to take the wolf to a wildlife rehabilitation center but he doesn't know if he will be able to return to raising wolves.

"I don't know," he said. "I just don't know if I can do it.

The attack was a big blow to Bromsen's wolf-rearing business. He said he plans to seek compensation for the cost of the wolf and lost wages.

"I want to be compensated," he said. "I want to be compensated for my lost wages and the cost of the wolf."

Bromsen said he plans to seek legal advice on how to proceed.

Alcohol ads add to teen drinking

WASHINGTON (UPI) - About one in four high school seniors said they were exposed to alcohol advertising in the past year, while 43 percent of students who drink had seen an ad for alcohol, researchers said Wednesday.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest and the American Academy of Pediatrics, along with several public health and social science groups, launched a two-page ad today urging the Federal Trade Commission to regulate alcohol advertising.

"We are concerned that the current regulations are not working," said Frank O'Malley, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association. "We need a stronger law that would ban alcohol advertising on television and in print media." The FTC has called for public comments on its proposed rule, which would ban all alcohol advertising in places where children could be exposed. The FTC is considering whether to ban alcohol ads on radio and in print media.

The report finds that in 1977, 57 percent of the nation's high school seniors were exposed to alcohol advertising by age 17, compared to 35 percent in 1980. The FTC's rule would ban alcohol advertising on television and in print media, while the AAP's proposed rule would ban all alcohol advertising in places where children could be exposed.

Undergrad's play a work of 'impulse'

By Francisco T. Muler
Associated Press Writer

William Johnson is like a lot of playwrights - he has a particular life to tell about but that's not the usual reference, nor is it the primary reason for his play. "The play," he says, "is about the idea of a town and the idea of a town going through the same sort of thing." Johnson, a 21-year-old student at the University of Iowa, is a deliberate unstructured writer, he says, and finds it lacking.

Johnson, a faculty member of the university's Department of Theater and Dance, says he is inspired by his own experiences and by the ideas he has heard from other playwrights. He believes that the idea of a play is the most important element of a playwright's work, and that the idea of a town going through the same sort of thing is a central theme in his work. Johnson's play, "Us," is about the idea of a town going through the same sort of thing, and he says it is about the idea of a town going through the same sort of thing and the idea of a town going through the same sort of thing. Sloan fired;
Thorn takes over Bulls

EAST BUTTERSCOTCH, Ill. (UPI) - General Manager Rod Thorn said Wednesday night that he would take over as the head coach of the Chicago Bulls through the end of the season, replacing the fired Jerry Sloan.

Sloan, who has guided the Bulls to seven conference championships, was dismissed earlier in the day after the team's consecutive road losses.

"I've talked to a lot of coaches, and they're doing as good as we are," the Bulls' new coach said. "I think we've got a good team."

PHIL JONES, Chicago's top assist­ant, was scheduled to take over as the interim coach with New Jersey Wednesday night with the team's 13-17 record for the season. But Thorn said the team was not planning to name an acting head coach.

Thorn said the decision was made to try to salvage what has been a disap­pointing season for the Bulls.

For whatever reasons we have, we have a losing record," Thorn said. "It was the decision to go with Phil Jones and try to salvage the season."

In a 91-86 loss to Phoenix Tuesday night, Jones guided the Bulls to a 91-86 victory over the Phoenix Suns. The Bulls have been 5-7, East Central Division leaders, in the past two months.

"It's not going to be easy," Thorn said. "I know we have a lot of games left and we're definitely going to win some games. It's going to be a challenge."

Thorn was scheduled to make the announcement Thursday night after the team's executive council met after the win.

We're going to try to salvage the season and get the job done," Thorn said. "We don't want to go home until April 11."
