Approval predicted for Ford auto pact

CHICAGO (UPI) - By a nearly unnimous vote, United Auto Workers ocal leaders Wednesday agreed to ake to the rank and file a historic contract agreement with Ford Motor Co. that trades wage and benefit concessions for job security.

The union's Ford Council placed a nearly unanimous stamp of approval on the pact after a three hour meeting with a 132-12 standing vote. The full Council has 225 members.

The contract will now be submitted to a vote by the 170,000 elegible Ford hourly workers. Of that group, about 60,000 are indefinitely or temporarily laid off.

Union leaders predicted rank-andfile members would ratify the pact.

UAW President Douglas Fraser said the ratification process would begin immediately and set a Feb. 28 deadline. If the pact is approved, it would take effect March 1 and run through September 1984.

"I'm very, very pleased," Fraser said. "This pact is in the best interest of Ford workers. They (council members) realized we wouldn't bring to them an agreement that wasn't in their UAW leaders will meet Saturday in Detroit to plot strategy for selling the contract to the rank and file.

FRASER SAID he would not discuss returning to General Motors to resume talks until the ratification vote is completed. But delegates speculated negotiations there could reopen as early as two weeks from now.

UAW Vice President Donald Ephlin, the union's chief Ford negotiator. predicted the margin of approval by hourly workers will mirror the Ford Council's vote.

'Ford workers, I'm confident, will vote in relatively the same manner as their leadership did," Ephlin said.

A tiny band of dissidents denounced the pact at a news conference earlier in the day. Their leader, Local 600 member Al Gardner, vowed to fight the pact during the ratification process.

The Ford contract did not include a deal reached during failed talks at GM that would have passed along as rebates to consumers the amount of concessions granted by the UAW. Fraser later said the contract should result in "more stable pricing" even though no guarantees of price cuts

The company will beef up its depleted Supplemental Unemployment Benefits fund, enabling laid off workers who have run out of benefits to again receive the funds. due to subcontracting. The company, which lost $1 billion last year, also agreed to implement a profit sharing plan when it again

By Nancy Lonergan

To some college students, love means never having to say you're sorry. For others it means fist fights. Research at three U.S. campuses indicates that college student couples have an alarming tendency to physically abuse each other. Despite their advanced schooling, students apparently handle jealousy and insecure gender roles with rage instead of

Union vote nearing for UI workers

State office and clerical workers including 1,700 UI office workers - are only 200 signatures away from voting on whether to join the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

AFSCME has been working since September to obtain the signatures of 2,000 office and clerical workers throughout the state and plans to have these signatures by March, according to Roger Frazer, AFSCME representative coordinating the UI signatureraising effort.

The union must collect signatures from 30 percent of the approximately 6,000 office and clerical workers in Iowa before the employees vote on the issue of whether to join AFSCME and form a single statewide bargaining

Frazer said union organizers have a goal of 2,000 signatures, although fewer are needed, because they want a margin to account for any employee turnover when they go before the Public Employee Relations Board. The 1,700 UI clerical and office employees would no longer be represented by the UI Staff Council - an advisory board to the UI central administration representing all non-organized UI staff members - but would instead be represented by the union. About six 35-member Staff Council

But Frazer said they have more to gain by joining the union.

The union organizers are now working to inform employees about the organized staff who make more money than office and clerical workers.

'We are sending out mailings to clerk typists who don't make as much as kitchen laborers or animal care workers," Frazer said.

Office and clerical workers are continually left behind in the salary race, he said, although the salary increases for UI non-organized merit staff members are generally influenced by the unionized employees' salary increases.

'EVEN IF THEY (office and clerical workers) got everything we negotiated for, they would not have a voice in the decision. They may not want everything.

'The only way they are going to have a voice is to beat the bargaining table,'

Mayer said he has not seen any clear consensus opposing or supporting the STAFF COUNCIL President Howard organizing effort on campus. "I know there are a great number of employees See Union, page 6

Costs, loss of aid take Cambus toll

By Karen Herzog

The UI's Cambus system has literally traveled a 1,930,000 mile red route during the last several years because of an 80 percent drop in federal work-study money and a 100 percent increase in fuel and oil expenses.

The problems have been building for several years, but peaked during the 1981 fiscal year when the bus service was forced to carry a $150,000 operating expense deficit over into the 1982 fiscal year - the largest debt in its 10 year history. Cambus Coordinator David Ricketts said the deficit resulted from a cutback in the amount of work-study funds and increased operating expenses. In addition, the $40,000 budget of the Bionic Bus was combined with the budget of Cambus. Previously, a separate budget for the Bionic Bus had been

BUT IN THE 1981 fiscal year, Cambus' work-study funds were cut $17,500 and fuel and oil prices skyrocketed. Or, as Ricketts, puts it, "All hell broke loose."

From its inception in 1972 until spring 1976, Cambus operated solely with a staff of work-study employees. "But the bottom started to drop out of the financial aids program, and we were forced to hire other (non-work-study) students," Ricketts said.

Michael Finnegan, UI associate business manager, said that since 1976, the number of work-study jobs at the UI has increased, forcing Cambus to compete for qualified students. "Cambus has had trouble attracting work-study students," Finnegan said. "And this year with potential cutbacks of work-study support, that will have an increasing impact."

Grandparents to get guardianship

Iowa City home last year will live with their natural grandparents rather than be placed for adoption, the Iowa Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The high court decision - which said natural grandparents have a right to intervene in a case over parental rights - reversed an earlier ruling by the Johnson County District Court.

State law allows grandparents to be considered as guardians or custodians of children in cases where parental rights are terminated.

The high court ruling stated that "the grandparents are sufficiently 'interested in the subject matter' of these termination proceedings so as to have a right to intervene.

Funding for HACAP

The Johnson County Hawkeye Area Community Action Program recently announced that President Reagan's budget cuts have left it with inadequate financial support. Without funding, HACAP will close its neighborhood center and discontinue services within six

The Johnson County branch of HACAP is a good example of an efficiently run, worthwhile human service agency. Its primary function is providing assistance to low-income residents who are just above the poverty level, yet need some form of aid to remain self-sufficient. HACAP's programs include Head Start, congregate meals, heating assistance, food banks and housing counseling.

The agency is requesting $20,791 from local governments to stay in operation. The Johnson County Board of Supervisors, Iowa City Council, Coralville City Council and United Way are all being asked to help. According to HACAP Executive Director Don Maniccia, "It will cost the county a lot more than $20,000 if they don't fund us."

Maniccia's assessment is clearly correct. The Johnson County HACAP has done an admirable job with limited resources. If the center closes, many local residents will be left without needed services and eventually may have to receive more government

Although it is tough to recommend that local governments spend money when the fiscal situation is so tight, priorities must be established and human services should be near the top. Iowa City Councilor Kate Dickson doesn't think the council will be able to help.

But recently the council designated $10,000 from the fiscal 1983 budget to be saved for acquiring and upgrading city parks. Parks are desirable but Iowa City has over two dozen parks and the need for parks is, at this time, less than the need of those served by HACAP. It should be funded.

Gray rights

Maybe it's because times are hard, or maybe it's due to the conceit of youth. Whatever the reason, Randi Youells, deputy director of Legal Services Corporation of Iowa, reports a rash of cases in which elderly Iowans are being placed under the guardianship of relatives without just cause.

A study of 123 guardianships and conservatorships in Scott County found at least two loopholes in Iowa law that have been used to deprive a number of elderly people of many of their legal rights. Medical examinations to determine the competency of potential wards are not required, and those who resist the action are not entitled to a free court-appointed attorney.

In addition, the study found that courts are lax in following the law itself. Judges rarely interviewed the proposed wards before making their decisions, and many of the wards never received the notice, required by law, informing them they could protest the action. Most of the wards studied in Scott County did not understand what their legal rights were, and many said they felt pressured by relatives into signing the necessary papers.

Elderly wards in Iowa can lose the right to run their own financial and legal affairs, including the right to buy or sell property and write checks. They may lose the right to consent to or refuse medical treatment, to drive a car, to marry or to decide where to

The law clearly needs to be changed to ensure that the legal rights of Iowans do not diminish as they grow older, and judges need to monitor guardianships more carefully to ensure that the law is followed.

Threat to civil rights

The Reagan administration has begun destroying the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. Past administrations respected the independence of the commission and members were not changed as each new administration came to power. Only Richard Nixon broke that tradition when he replaced the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh.

Reagan has shown no respect. Last November he decided to replace the chairman, Arthur Flemming, who had served as secretary of health, education and welfare in the Eisenhower administration and had been appointed to the commission by Nixon. To succeed Flemming, Reagan chose Clarence Pendleton, a black who opposes affirmative action.

Last week Reagan fired Jill Ruckelshaus, a leading Republican and the wife of a member of the Nixon administration. In her place, Reagan has nominated B. Sam Hart, a black radio evangelist. Hart's claim to fame is that he opposes the Equal Rights Amendment. Both Hart and Pendleton supported candidate

A president has the right to hire his cabinet and White House staff on the basis of loyalty to him. But he does not have the right to appoint to administrative and regulatory commissions people whose only qualification is devotion to the president — a devotion which is greater than their devotion to, in this case, civil rights.

This is not the only example of Reagan's appointment of unqualified people to government commissions. The Federal Communication Commission exists because the government decided that since the airwaves belong to the people and not the broadcaster, regulation was needed. To head that commission, Reagan has chosen a disc jockey who believes that the airwaves belong to whomever is rich enough to buy a radio or television station. Such appointments make a mockery of the idea that government commissions exist to serve the people, not the government. The Senate should refuse to confirm Hart. Linda Schuppener is just no good, which is not so.

In answer to Jim Musser's review of

While reviewing The Daily Iowan's final 1981 issue, I came across a disturbing article entitled "Participants view cultural barriers in community's black organizations.' (DI, Dec. 18)

Because I believe that the DI should to some extent represent professional journalism, I did not appreciate the inaccurate remarks attributed to me, as the organizer of the UI NAACP college chapter. The part of the article that I object to reads: "he has approached all student organizations about joining, he has not invited the African organization because he does not 'feel the real need to approach them as another Black organization for music for 20 years and, since 1976,

I'm quite sure it took some imagination to create this report. Some people will do anything for a story. The author who combined the four stories into one should be ashamed to have been so sloppy in the effort. A paraphrase in the original story was made into a quote, and my statements were used out of context.

The purpose of this article was. apparently, not to inform the readers of a problem in the community, but to paint a picture of ignorance, chaos and untogetherness among blacks on campus. Africans and so-called black Americans (if that is what we are called today) share a deeply rooted heritage. Black students on this campus do not set up barriers to discriminate against Africans, our brothers and sisters who represent our mother land

The report is a poor attempt to perpetuate the image of a powerless, hopeless people that are ineffective in managing their own affairs, disunited and ignorant about their position or status in society.

This attempt to discredit blacks and black organizations by the person who compiled the reports was a petty and futile effort. A better way to have examined the question would have been to use questionnaires and research. And I believe the person who pulled the four reports together to make one story has effectively demonstrated the mentality of the southern slave who did not want to leave the plantation or master after the Emancipation Proclamation. Melvin Caldwell

Editor's note: The story was written for a UI journalism class, and was a combination of four separate stories. The story that appeared in the paper was put together by one of the four students. When the reports were compiled, a statement that had been a paraphrase in one of the original four stories was inadvertently turned into a quote in the story that appeared in the paper. Caldwell did not think that the paraphrase was an accurate interpretation

It's the same old theme with the state Board of Regents and the UI's central adminstrators - they remain well-intentioned but ineffectual in persuading the governor, the legislature or the voters of Iowa of the ong-term dangers to our hard-won liberties and way of life associated with the dismantling of our educational institutions. It's unusual business in Washington, D.C., with President Reagan attempting to reduce or remove many forms of federal support for higher education.

Now we can do what we've always done - essentially nothing - or we can act and react collectively and individually to persuade the legislature that our requests and protests should be taken seriously.

As well as a vested interest, we have a special obligation — to our students, our children and society in general to fight for what we know is necessary for us to be effective.

What mechanisms are available to help us in this task? Those that immediately come to mind include the UI Faculty Senate, the Faculty Council, the Senate Faculty Welfare Committee, the Senate's ad hoc Governmental Relations Committee, and the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors. My own personal choice is the Senate's Governmental Relations Committee because it was formed for precisely this purpose. But irrespective of your preference, I urge you to act now before the dismantling process deprives us of all our options. James G. Andrews Associate Professor, AAUP Executive

Ronald continues chasing the cockroach

ONALD COULD clearly see that he had annoyed the Pink Slip most sorely by interrupting her game. "Please excuse me," he said with a sheepish smile,

"I'll just be on my way ..."
"Not so fast, sirrah!" shrilled the Pink Slip. "Your crime cannot be excused with a mere apology! You mus pay the penalty!"

Smiling even more broadly, with an added measure of sheepishness, Ronald said, "Oh, it can't be as bad as all that, can it?

"Guards!" the Pink Slip fairly howled, pointing at Ronald. "Off with his head! Guards ... Oh, bother, I'd forgotten. I've laid them all off."

"I beg your pardon," said the human mallet in the UAW windbreaker, "but could we get on with this? All the blood is rushing to my head." Annoyed, the Pink Slip swung him with tremendous force, fetching the croquet ball a mighty blow. Up and up into the air it flew, coming down with a crash through the windshield of one of the many cars Ronald now noticed lined up in neat rows at the end of the hedge.

"THERE, THAT'S better," said the Pink Slip. "Now, since I can't have your head off, what shall I do? I have it! I'll lay you off! That would be most satisfactory. No more paychecks for you! No more group insurance, no more parking space, no more company picnics!" Ronald was becoming fairly cross with Pink Slip's attitude. "Now see here," he said sternly, "I can't be laid off by you or anyone else."

Much to Ronald's surprise, the Pink Slip looked hurt. "Oh, please, please, can't I please lay you off?" she entreated. "I've come to enjoy it so! My inventory is much too large, my sales are ever so down and interest rates are ever so high. Besides, I thought you'd enjoy it as well. You seem to think it's quite acceptable, using it to bring down inflation and such, when you think about it at all.'

"I don't know how you'd rate your interest," huffed Ronald, "but I rate mine as wandering. I going to vote with my feet right out of here." And Ronald

NO SOONER WAS he out than the cockroach reappeared! Ronald once again gave chase, and saw the cockroach dissappear into yet another building. Following it, he came into a large room containing a table and three jars, but no cockroach. With a frustrated sigh, Ronald went to the table to examine the jars, to see what No-Wonderland had in store for him now. Imagine his delight to see that the jars contained jelly beans!

Laughing happily, Ronald plunged a hand into the first jar and retrieved a jelly bean. And a most curious jelly bean it was; written on it were the words "Eat me and reduce the federal deficit." Well, Ronald could think of nothing he wanted more. Munching the jelly bean, Ronald was quite taken aback when he grew and grew, not stopping until he had quite filled the room. "Happens every time," said a voice from a corner.

Looking down, Ronald saw what appeared to be a walrus smoking cigarette in a long holder and smilin broadly. "Who are you?" Ronald asked "Why, I'm, the Walroosevelt!" came the reply.

'Where's the carpenter," asked Ronald. "What carpenter?" asked the Walroosevelt.

Jesse Bromsen, 28, said this is the first accident he has had in the seven years he has raised wolves. And he said that he has since been back to his rural Washington County residence to see the 11 wolves he raises.

"I've petted every one with the exception of the female (that bit) and an animal I don't handle." He said the incident has not made him fear his wolves.

Bromsen was bitten by a 100-pound purebred female in heat when he entered the cage she shares with a 140-pound purebred male. He said the altercation lasted about five minutes, and was aggravated when the male became excited by the female's actions and attempted to defend her. He was put on antibiotics and hospitalized three days; a doctor told him he had teeth marks on one of the bones in his arm.

He said he brought a half-sized hoe with him into the cage, and the animal might have been startled by it. But he said the main reason for BROMSEN SAID HE lost some blood during the struggle, but the more trying aspect of the battle was the physical exhaustion of keeping the male at bay.

"There's nothing uniquely different because it was a wolf, and dogs exhibit the same kind of behavior when they're in heat," Bromsen said.

'There's nothing uniquely hideous about it." The female wolf that attacked Bromsen was about four years old. Bromsen said he got the animal when she was full grown, but had successfully handled her in the past.

Bromsen said he has stitches in his left arm. "The main thing is the female was in heat and she is willing to fight anything in sight, including other wolves." Before the attack, the wolf had been acting dominant and growling at the other female wolves Bromsen keeps.

During fall 1981, $60,000 worth of bus service was cut from the system. "Because of work-study problems, we were forced to forego full service," he said. "Now we're getting down to bone

Despite service reductions, the demand for Cambus is greater than ever. Since the start of the 1982 spring semester the 14 buses have been carrying an average of 20,000 riders daily; during the last two months, records have been set on the number of people using Cambus.

WHILE SOME metropolitan bus systems are losing ridership because of increasing fares, "we're bucking the trend," Ricketts said. "The demand for our services is increasing, and we're raising our fares by increasing mandatory student fees.'

Dickson said Cambus will receive a projected $373,000 in mandatory student fees this year. The fee was increased by $2.75 per student per semester, from $4.54 last year to $7.29

"We've supported Cambus in the past, and for good reason," Dickson said. "It provides safety, traveling efficiency for all students and protection for women at night."

Dickson said keeping Cambus "as is" is student government's top priority. "We've made some inroads, but we have to keep looking for outside sources.

"A fare would be an unsavory alter-UI Student Senate President Tim native. However, it remains an alternative," he said.

The changing role that women play in intimate relationships can have two effects on couples.

Democrats issue stinging response to Reagan's 1983 budget figures

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House Budget Committee began its hearings on President Reagan's 1983 budget Wednesday with a stinging Democratic attack on the credibility of its figures and of David Stockman, who devised them.

Stockman, director of the White House Office of Management and Budget, challenged Congress to come up with a workable alternative instead of

The opening hearing started Reagan's $757.6 billion budget on a rough road this

Both Democrats and Republicans want to lower the projected $91.5 deficit for the year that begins next Oct. 1, and many members would prefer to reduce the increase in military spending instead of imposing new cuts in social programs.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., criticized Stockman for presenting Congress last year with budget figures whose reliability Stockman later questioned in an Atlantic magazine interview.

"THERE IS NOTHING funny about what happens to the country when people who run the government don't level with the country and don't level with Congress," Obey said.

"I have no questions for you because, very frankly, I would not believe the answers you would give me," Obey said, provoking audible gasps in the packed hearing room. Stockman glared, but did not reply.

House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas said the administration is proposing "more of the same" economic medicine that he said has caused record high interest rates, deficits and business failures.

Citing cuts in job placement programs, Wright said, "Those of you in the administration must recognize we are dangerously crippling the human element. which always has been the great strength of this country.

Republicans were gentler, but they, too, warned Stockman that defense spending

Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said, "Some of our members have raised their eyebrows about military spending, and we are going to be looking at that."

Final defense witnesses presented in Atlanta trial of Wayne Williams

The black, 23-year-old suspect is standing trial for the slaying of Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, and 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater - two of 28 young blacks slain during a 22-month period in Atlanta. Testimony has also inked Williams to 10 other slayings.

Prosecutors' suggestion that Williams was homosexual and testimony that he allegedly disliked poor young blacks are the only motives the state has suggested for the

Williams once told her that a young singer named James Thompson, who testified for the prosecution, was "weird."

"He had suspicions that if he (Thompson) was gay, he didn't want to mess with him,"

The trial was recessed almost two hours early Wednesday when defense attorney Al Binder said that other witnesses subpoenaed for the day would add nothing to the testimony of Cann and other character

He told Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper that he would like the remainder of the afternoon to "work with" other defense witnesses. Those witnesses apparently include the suspect's father and mother, Homer and Faye Williams, a fiber expert, and Williams himself.

While testimony was being heard Wednesday, a new defense fiber expert was go-ing over evidence at the Georgia Crime

Randall R. Bresee, of Kansas State University, was brought in to examine fibers 12 young blacks. A fiber expert from California, Charles Morton, has been working with the defense team; however, there were reports that Bresee may take his place on the witness stand.

CORINNE BROWN, a jovial black woman, testifed that Williams volunteered his services for a talent show she was putting together when he heard the project was in trouble

She said he "did a tremendous job for

WILLIAMS' LIFE-LONG friend and nextdoor neighbor, Keith Knox, insisted Williams was not a homosexual and was never seen with any of the victims - but on cross-examination, he admitted that as far as he knew Williams had never dated a woman or even discussed it, and that less than a week after he became a suspect he was busily cleaning out his utility room.

The state hinted the cleaning job was to get rid of evidence.

Reagan to reject Jordan arms aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) - At least one-fifth of the U.S. Senate - Democrats and Republicans - urged President Reagan Wednesday to reject action on any arms sale to Jordan until Congress and U.S. allies have been consulted. Selling F-16 warplanes and mobile Hawk missiles to Jordan "could dramatically change the balance of power in the Middle East, undermine the security of our ally Israel and increase the overall instability of the region," the senators said in a letter to Reagan. The letter was prompted by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's statement at Amman's Airport last week that he discussed with Jordanian officials the possibility of selling them F-16s and mobile Hawk anti-aircraft missiles. "The defense secretary's airport arms bazaar is clearly no substitute for a cohesive and general foreign policy in the Middle East," said Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., one of the co-signers of the letter to

Hart said that so far 18 of the Senate's 100 members have co-signed the letter and he expects more to do so by the time the note is delivered to the White House later in the day.

"WE ARE CONCERNED that Secretary Weinberger's proposal to sell sophisticated arms to Jordan sets the stage for an unnecessary and divisive confrontation with Congress that could undermine American foreign policy around the world," the let-

"We urge you to act quickly to avoid such a con-frontation by rejecting this proposal, at least until Congress and our allies have been thoroughly con-

"World security cannot afford an escalation of the arms race in the Middle East," warned the 14 Democrats and four Republicans who so far have signed the letter to Reagan.

On Tuesday, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., announced he will introduce a resolution to disapprove selling F-16s and mobile missile launchers to Jordan ould such a request be made by the administra-

"I DO NOT believe that selling F-16s and mobile missile launchers to Jordan would do anything to improve the chances for success of the president's Middle East peace initiative," said Pressler, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Over the past six month, Congress has failed to veto three large arms sale valued at more than $10.2 billion — including the $8.5 billion AWACS sale to Saudi Arabia and the $1.1 billion sale of 40 F-16s to

Last week, Congress did not veto the administration's proposal to sell Venezuela a total of 24 F-16s aircraft valued at $615 million.

Composer Monk dies

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. (UPI) — Jazz musician and composer Thelonious Monk, a giant in the postwar progressive jazz movement, died Wednesday of a stroke. He was 64.

Monk suffered the stroke two weeks ago and never regained consciousness. He died at Englewood Hospital's Coronary Intensive Care Unit, where he had been undergoing treatment for a brain hemorrhage since Feb. 5, officials said.

Monk was a self-taught and unpredictable musician who became widely celebrated in the mid-1950s.

Undergrad's play a work of 'impulse'

By Roxanne T. Mueller Arts/Entertainment Editor

William Johnson is like a lot of playwrights - he doesn't particularly like to talk about his work. But once the initial reticence wears off, he displays the low-key humor and appreciation for the bizarre that show up in his plays. His In Search of Western Christianity opens tonight at MacLean 301 Theater.

The play - his fifth to be produced on the UI campus — is a deliberately unstructured piece that consists of snippets of middle-class life. A husband slowly goes insane over a series of blackouts while his wife sticks to a steadfast cheerfulness. It's a play that Johnson wrote during finals week last

"As a general rule, I'm content with any interpretation anyone may have for it," Johnson said earlier this week. "I can't read it anymore. I find it difficult to read my work after I'm done with it. I go on impulse rather than specific ideas. I suppose if I have to say something it's that the play is a journey of sorts and I've put in little landmarks, little details and things you can pick up on as the play goes on.'

THE 21-YEAR-OLD native of Des Moines is an undergraduate in the Playwrights Workshop and will finish his studies next December. He started out as an actor and technical worker but found the experiences

"It was the frustration of not having enough power to interpret a script that led me to playwriting," he said. "I spent the first two years here going through the mechanics, writing to a formula. Then I decided to cast structure to the four winds and work from im-

Johnson carries around a healthy mix of skepticism and hope. On the one hand he has a couple of his scripts circulating in Chicago and on the other he sees the future - when he gets beyond "working on next week" - as a possible compromise

"I'm going through this middle-class thing where I think about why I'm here, and realize there's this chance of going to pick up this piece of paper when I'm done with school and then going out and picking out the office furniture. For the last four or five months, I've gone through this thing where I sat down and couldn't remember why I was here. This play is a '10-day play' that came out of the strain of going through finals.'

HIS INVOLVEMENT in the Playwrights Workshop is unusual for an undergraduate. He appreciates the opportunities the Workshop offers but can't help getting in a little dig. "In the workshop, everybody likes to sit around and drink coffee and then take pot shots at each other.'

Mike Alger, who Johnson met in a bookstore one day, is directing Christianity. 'We discovered we shared a lot of common ideals," Johnson said. "There was a chemistry there. He was one of the first to read the play. I trusted him with it. For the first two weeks of working it out, we sat down and drank a lot and talked and talked, and after awhile, we wouldn't be talking about the Johnson purposely avoids too close an involvement with the actual staging. "Actors come up to me and ask about motivation but I send them away - it's not my job. For my purposes, the play is a ritualistic piece. What happens on the stage is a little like commedia dell'arte. By the end of the play, the actors and hopefully the audience - should get caught up in the hysterical delirium. The pacing is strange; very slow, tedious, but other times it can be very powerful and cap-

Hawkeye cagers sportsclubs drop road game to Grand View

By Betsy Anderson

If the Iowa women's basketball team, with a 7-14 record, was to break even this year it had to win the remainder of its four regular season games and at least three games in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women regional tournament. The Hawks began its final push last night against Grand View, but came up short losing, 76-54.

Grand View, now 17-8 for the year, is ranked 13th in the National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics polls and is looking forward to the NAIA championship tournament. Grand View proved to be as tough an opponent as the Iowa coaches expected.

LEADING GRAND VIEW'S scoring surge were guards Dawnelle Tindrell, Diane Miller and Lisa Lissimore with 20, 14 and 12 points, respectively. Also in doubles figures was forward Mary Tjebkes with 14 points.

Leading scorers for Iowa were Lisa Anderson with 16 points and Kim Howard and Melinda Hippen, each with 10 points.

In discussing strategy before the game, Vickie Wilson, Iowa assistant coach, said Iowa would try to control the boards to slow down Grand View's running offense. Iowa did so, pulling down 32 rebounds to the Vikings' 24. Freshman Holly Anderson came off the bench for Iowa to pull down 10 rebounds and score six points. Hippen also grabbed 10 boards for the Hawks.

"We've been inconsistent from minute-to-minute, half-to-half," Wilson said prior to the game. "We've been playing hard physically, but not mentally. After watching the games at Big Tens last weekend, we realized we weren't playing with the intensity of our opponents."

The difference in the game proved to be shooting percentages as Iowa could only hit 26-68 shots for a 33.8 percent rate while Grand View went 33-71 for an average of 46.4 percent.

The UI men's volleyball club is scheduled to play an exhibition match with Rockwell Collins of Cedar Rapids Friday at 7 p.m. on the main court of the Field House. The contest, which is a best of five match, is free and open to the public.

In its tournament two weeks ago, the UI club was beaten in semifinal action by Rockwell Collins, 16-14, 17-15. Collins eventually won the championship game by defeating the Quad

UI Fencing Club

In the seven-team Iowa State fencing tournament last weekend Brandt Williamson of Pella, Iowa, held off Iowa's Doug Dobbs in a fence-off for first place in open saber event. After the preliminary bout Williamson and Dobbs were tied for first with 4-1 records. Marlys Brunsting, Iowa City, was awarded third place by points given for hits served and hits received.

In the team foil competition, where squads of A, B and C level fencers are selected at random, Williamson led his team to first place. Fencing with Williamson were Mark Glasnapp and Paul Washington, both of Ames.

Finishing second was the team of Dobbs, Jon Jeamby, Ames, and Melanie Eason, Iowa City. Third place went to the team of Larry Segriff, Iowa City, Walt Lubinec, Ames and Gary Hayenga, Ames.

On March 7, the UI Club is holding a threeevent tournament beginning at 9:30 a.m. in the Field House. Bouts will be held in novice foil, open foil and saber.

The club will then begin tuning up for divisional tournaments April 3-4 with a foil and epee tournament March 21 in Des Moines, followed by the Chicagoland Open, March 27-

Hawks meet Cyclones in final swim dual

By H. Forrest Woolard Assistant Sports Editor

The intrastate rivalry between Iowa and Iowa State will be of secondary importance Friday night when the Hawkeyes travel to Ames for their final dual swimming meet of the season.

Last season Iowa embarrassed Iowa State, 85-28, and according to both squad's season best times, it doesn't look like things will be any closer this year.

"That's the first rivalry for Iowa in any sport," Iowa Coach Glenn Patton said of Iowa State. "Our guys will be excited, but we won't need personal best times to away from the meet."

GOOD THING FOR the Hawks there are many other incentives for their final swims of the season prior to the Big Ten championships, March 4-6 at the Field House Pool.

"Everyone is looking to have his best swim of the season," Patton said. "This is the last chance for the guys to get seed times for Big Tens." The Iowa coach added that good times "will build up confidence" for the conference meet.

The Hawks are concluding the second week of a four-week taper period and will win the meet. That does take something enter Friday night's meet less tired than they've been all season.

"Since we're getting into our taper I want to swim my best times of the season," said Iowa tri-captain Tom Roemer. "I'll be focusing on how I feel. When you feel good in the water you're halfway there. The times will hopefully come at Big Tens.'

Friday night Roemer won't be the only Iowa swimmer hoping to land a spot on one of the Hawks' three Big Ten relays. Last season Iowa's 400-yard medley and 400 freestyle relays won conference titles, while the Hawks earned All-American honors in those two events as BREASTSTROKE IS the only area where Iowa State swimmers have faster times than the Hawks. But Patton certainly isn't conceding any points in the 200-yard race against the Cyclones.

The Hawks will suit up Ted Rychlik, who finished second in both the 100 and 200 at Big Tens last year. Patton refers to Rychlik as a very good shaved swimmer, but the junior has yet to turn in a time close to his Iowa record (2:03.53) this year. Rychlik's quickest time of the season is 2:12.86, while the Cyclones have two swimmers who go a 2:10. Also in that event for the Hawks will be freshman Chris Coveney, the 1981 Indiana high school champion in the 100 breaststroke.

Iowa tri-captain Charlie Roberts has also been off to a slow start this season. The former Big Ten champ in the 200 butterfly doesn't even own the Hawks' fastest time on the team in the 200. That honor goes to Tony Yap. According to Patton, "Tony has had an excellent

Patton said he didn't want to run up the score in Friday night's meet. But the Hawkeye coach did say "We wants to leave the Ames people in awe of us."

- General Manager Rod Thorn confirmed Wednesday night that he would take over as head coach of the Chicago Bulls through the end of the season. replacing the fired Jerry Sloan.

Sloan, in his third year with the Bulls, was dismissed earlier in the day after the team's executive council met following Chicago's 91-86 loss to Phoenix Tuesday night. It was Chicago's ninth loss in its last 10

PHIL JOHNSON, Sloan's top assistant, coached the Bulls in their game with New Jersey Wednesday night with Thorn to take over on Sunday. A news conference to announce this formally has been called for 12:15 p.m. in Chicago Thursday.

Thorn said the change was made to try to salvage what has been a disappointing season for the Bulls.

"For whatever reason we haven't played really well," Thorn said. "This season was going down the drain and we felt there should be a change. Hopefully, this will get the team fired up and get going.'

Prior to the game against the Nets, Thorn said: "I made the decision. It was contemplated for a long time but I kept thinking we'd get better. He was a victim of circumstances with late signings, contractual problems and retirements. It's very hard. I start on Sunday and we'll see what happens.'

As for selecting a new coach, Thorn said, "We're going to compile a list of people we might be interested in and I'm going to sort through it. But I will definitely be the coach for the rest of

After a 30-52 rookie season, Sloan guided Chicago to a 45-37 mark last year and a first round playoff win over New York. The Bulls were eliminated by the eventual NBA champion Boston Celtics in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Chicago was expected to contend for the playoffs this year but got off to a slow start. Reports of team dissension and a rift between Sloan and center Artis Gilmore concerning the center's playing time reportedly added to Sloan's shaky status.

"I may have made some mistakes," Sloan conceded, "but all coaches, if they are honest, will admit they make some mistakes.

Sloan also said an injury to former Iowa star Ronnie Lester and the holdout by rookie Orlando Woolridge hurt the club this year. Sloan had blasted some team members following a loss to Milwaukee earlier this month for "giving up." "I may have overreacted after that loss," Sloan added. "I saw some improvement in the players in the last couple of games. Sloan said he was still confident he

Blue chip stars for lowa runners

By Thomas W. Jargo

You read about the blue-chip recruits Lute Olson and Hayden Fry succeed in luring to the UI campus, but Iowa women's track coach Jerry Hassard's blue-chipper has received little or no fanfare.

As a Hawkeye freshman, she has already qualified in the pentathlon for the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national indoor track meet to be held March, 12-13, in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

THE PENTATHLON events are the many smaller schools. She was being shot put, high jump, long jump, 800meter run and the 60-meter hurdles. She became a pentathlete her freshman year in high school in Lamoni, Iowa.

"I always liked doing all the different kinds of events," Gillespie said. "You don't get bored doing just one event." She says the high jump is her favorite event. "That's (high jump) my main event," she said. "I originally started out as a high jumper. It's an enjoyable event. It's the one where I get the most points.

When the team moves outdoors, Gillespie will add two more events to her repertoire - the javalin and the 200-meter run so she can compete in the heptathlon. Gillespie chose the UI over Wisconsin, Colorado, Iowa State, Kansas and recruited for basketball as well as I could do it," she said. track. "I enjoy playing basketball, but track is more enjoyable to yourself," she said. "It's more personal. You get out of it what you put into it."

athlete role very well, with an emphasis on student. She had a 3.79 grade point after her first semester here. "I just hope I can keep it up," she said. Gillespie enjoys track as a way to 'get away from school. I couldn't see myself not running. I'd find myself missing it too much.

It came as no suprise to Gillespie that she qualified for nationals her freshman year after she discovered the standard for qualifying. As a senior in high school, she had exceeded the standard for last year's nationals. "I knew

Charging Spartans aim to upset Big Ten leaders

By Melissa Isaacson

There's no Jenison Jinx to contend with this time - only the Michigan State Spartans, and they are more than

The Iowa Hawkeyes, 10-2, meet the Spartans, 5-7, tonight at 7:35 in the Iowa Field House. Michigan State will be trying to avenge the Hawkeyes' 57-56 victory in East Lansing, Mich., on Jan.

Iowa's victory broke the so-called Jenison Field House jinx, as the Hawks won for the first time in 10 years.

THE HAWKEYES were without the services of Michael Payne, out for the foot injury. Fellow freshman Greg Stokes filled in for Payne, scoring 10 points, but only managed four rebounds, a disappointment to Iowa Head Coach Lute Olson.

The real hero of that game was Iowa guard Steve Carfino. The 6-foot-2 sophomore tied for the team high in scoring with Kenny Arnold, racking up 12 points and playing the last seven minutes of the game with a sore knee.

The Hawkeyes employed a tight zone defense in the first half, holding the Spartans to 21 points. Ahead by six at halftime, the Hawks extended the lead to nine points before the Spartans tied the score at 39 with 12 minutes, 15 seconds remaining.

the ball for the final three minutes. Bob Hansen was fouled and sunk two crucial free throws with 14 seconds left to put the Hawks ahead by three. Michigan State's Kevin Smith, who finished with 14 points, scored to cut the lead to one point. Iowa had the chance to seal the win at that point, but Kevin Boyle missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw. The Hawks hung on in the last two seconds for the one-point victory.

SPARTAN FRESHMAN Sam Vincent led all scorers with 17 points yet his teammates managed only 40 per-cent shooting from the field. Iowa finished with 60.6 percent from the

The Spartans bounced back to win their next game against Northwestern, but dropped their next three out of four games. Michigan State's latest defeat came at the hands of Ohio State, 51-46, in East Lansing last Saturday.

"I guess it's salvage time," said Michigan State Head Coach Jud Heathcote. "We've been so close and yet so far away in seven Big Ten losses. With two minutes to go in every game, we were either two points ahead, two points behind, or tied and yet we couldn't pull off the key play or get the key break that gives us the vic-

Heathcote continued, "It's been a disappointing, frustrating season and going to play them one at a time. We're going up hoping to defeat the Hawkeyes. If we do, we're not going to call it an upset, though I'm sure everybody else would. We figure we're every bit as good as Iowa.

IOWA IS COMING off a disappointing 73-58 loss to Indiana in Bloomington last Saturday. "I expect basically the same type of ball game as we've had through the years with Michigan State," Olson said. "They (the Spartans) have used a two-onetwo match-up zone defense in the past, but this year they've been using a three-two."
