Revised downtown plan unveiled

The Iowa City Council looked southward across the Dubuque Street pedestrian mall Wednesday night, and saw a 180-room hotel just beyond Governor Lucas Square

The council wasn't hallucinating; it was looking at an architect's drawing of a proposed division of Block 64-1, the planned site of a $16 million hotel/department store complex.

Architect Ted Strader explained that Block 64-1 isn't big enough to allow the Snow makes return visit to Iowa City Three inches of snow fell on Iowa City by 10:30 p.m. Thursday night resulting in numerous minor traffic accidents and forcing the city to close several roads

The State Patrol reported 100 percent ice and snow covered roads with zero visibility in Johnson County at 10:20 p.m. The National Weather Service in Des Moines was predicting that the Iowa City area would receive a total of 4 to 6 inches of snow during the night. A weather service spokesman

County to miss budget deadline

By Kevin Cook

Johnson County's fiscal 1983 budget will probably be certified March 22 about one week earlier than usual, and exactly one week after the March 15 deadline established by the Iowa Code.

Deputy County Auditor Art Stanley's efforts to have the budget prepared by Tuesday for newspaper publication to-day fell short. The county Board of upervisors cannot hold a public hearing for budget certification until the proposed budget has been published in official county newspapers for 10 days.

The delay is caused in part by complicated transfers designed to add revenue to the county's strapped

According to Auditor Tom Slockett, plicated strategies" to get money transferred to the general fund to offset shortages caused by current economic conditions and increased county expenditures - jail costs in

'We're in the midst of a financial crunch." Slockett said Wednesday.

THE NEW JAIL added 13 employees to the Johnson County payroll, and utility costs for the structure are more than the costs for the old structure,

Another factor that led to the delay is that some county departments submitted their budgets late, said Supervisor Harold Donnelly Slockett said meeting the March 15 deadline "was a goal, but was not considered a necessity.'

While Slockett said he did not want to 'downplay the significance of the deadline," he said being late has "absolutely no negative consequences" and no sanctions are imposed for missing the target date. The supervisors aren't worried about missing the deadline. "We've been late before," Donnelly said.

That fact is well-documented by records in the auditor's office.

Since Johnson County switched to a fiscal year format in 1974, records show that the county's budget has been certified by the March 15 deadline only once, on March 14, 1980, for fiscal 1981.

Slockett said Wednesday that the auditors office was double checking the submitted budget figures, and said that the budget summary would be prepared for the board to review at today's formal supervisors meeting.

Surging increase in dorm requests

Approximately 3,384 incoming freshmen have applied for dormitory housing as of Feb. 28, an increase of 700 from last year's February total of 2,684, George Droll, director of UI Residence Services, said Wednesday.

And the UI has received 267 housing applications from transfer students as of Feb. 28, an increase of 68 from last year's Feb. 28 total of 199, he said.

Since the highest demand for housing last year came from incoming freshmen, approximately 4,600 of the 6,029 UI residence hall spaces have been set aside for freshmen, he said.

DROLL SAID he can't speculate yet if the 4,600 spaces set aside for the new freshmen will be enough because there has been "a surge" in housing applications from incoming freshmen in the last 30

School nurses to fight to keep their jobs By Elizabeth Flansburg

There may not be legal recourse for six Iowa City school nurses who will lose their jobs, but the nurses and their backers have not given up their fight. Despite vehement protests from many teachers, nurses and concerned parents, the Iowa City School Board voted 5-2 Feb. 23 to eliminate the school nurse program, saving the district $80,000 for the 1982-83 school year. Of the 30 largest school districts in February crime rate significantly up over January's, figures reveal

By Glenn Townes

The Iowa City Police Department released its February crime statistic report Wednesday and most crimes - particularly thefts, vandalism and assault showed significant increases over the January figures.

Theft, the crime with the largest increase, was up 57 percent over January, while arrests were up by 75 percent. Some local officials blamed the mild February temperatures for the increase, but others attribute it to an increase in student traffic.

Other major crimes that increased include burglary, fraud, assault and forgery, which each increased by at least 20 percent during the last month.

Statistics show that for the month of February there were nine complaints of criminal fraud and one arrest, compared with one complaint and one arrest in January. For assaults, statistics show there were 20 complaints and five arrests for February in comparison with January's seven complaints and two arrests.

Pianists to spotlight Chopin works during Poland benefit performance

By Cal Woods Special to The Daily Iowan

Five concert pianists - doctoral candidates in the UI School of Music - will give a performance to benefit the people of Poland at 8 p.m. tonight in Clapp Recital Hall. The concert will feature the works of pianist and composer Frederic Chopin, who was a native of Poland.

The money raised by the concert will be sent to the Polish Red Cross. It will be used to buy food, blankets and other staples for the more than 60,000 children and elderly aided by Poland's Red Cross, according to Larry Belman, executive director of the Johnson County Red Cross

MARTIAL LAW was declared in Poland Dec. 13, 1981, in response to 16 months of worker strikes and growing resistance to Communist Party authority by the nowsuspended Solidarity Union

Gregory Pepetone, who helped organize the concert, said the performance of Chopin works will be especially relevant because "his music expresses the temperament and nationalistic aspirations of the (Polish) people."

Although Chopin spent many of his later years in England and France, much of his music was inspired by the hardships of his comrades at home during the Russian occupation of Poland in the early 19th century. "Many of the pieces he wrote relate to events in the political struggles of the people," Pepetone said.

TONIGHT'S PERFORMANCE will include Ballade No. 2 in F, Waltz in A minor, Waltz in A flat Major, Scherzo in B flat minor, Scherzo in E Major, Sonata in B flat minor-movements No. 1 and No. 3, and four impromptus. Performing with Pepetone will be James March, Mayola Martin,

Charles Michaelson and Theodore Reuter. Pepetone, a native of Las Vegas, Nev., attended the Oberlin Conservatory of Music in Oberlin, Ohio, and performed as a professional concert pianist in England for two years. He will play four impromptus in tonight's performance

March, a native of Dyersville, Iowa, also performed on the professional concert circuit in Europe. He will perform the Ballade

Mayola Martin, who will perform the first and third movements from the B flat minor Sonata, received a master's degree in music from the Julliard School of Music in New York City. She is studying through a grant from the Hancher Circle of Perform-

Michaelson will perform the waltzes and the Scherzo in B flat minor and Reuter will play the Scherzo in E Major.

Park a good idea

The Iowa City Council has been given the chance to create a new park that will provide soccer fields, recreational facilities and picnic sites on the city's East Side. The council should strongly consider approving the plan.

Many of the standard objections to the conversion of vacant land to park use don't apply in this instance. The park would not be expensive for the city either to create or to maintain. Since the city already owns the 46 acres which have been designated as the proposed site, there would be no land acquisition costs.

The planned park design, drawn up by UI graduate student Bruce Hayllar, calls for little change to the existing landscape. This means that development and maintenance costs would be minimal

In addition, there is no other compelling use for the land, at least at the present time. The proposed site is located near Ralston Creek at the city's eastern edge, making it less attractive to commercial developers than if it were closer to town. There is also a chance that the land would be subject to occasional flooding. This would be no great problem for a park - witness the frequent flooding of lower City Park - but could be disastrous if a commercial facility were located there.

All of these factors have made council members receptive to the idea of establishing a park, but they should act on the proposal soon. One reason that the council seems inclined to approve the creation of a park is that no one else has come up with a better idea for the land.

However, the council has shown itself to be highly open to suggestions involving commercial development, and has been known to approve commercial construction on supposedly unsuitable sites. Let's hope the current park proposal is approved before someone offers to build a hotel on the spot.

Willow Creek Center

Another Iowa City human service organization is running short of money. The Mark IV-Willow Creek Neighborhood Center has asked the Iowa City Council for an additional $6,000. Last month the council informally approved its request for $6,900, expecting that to be sufficient.

The extra money is needed to fund a half-time assistant director position. Considering the importance of the position and the job responsibilities involved, the salary request is low. According to Pamela Ramser, the city's Human Services Planner, the $6,000 is necessary to run the organization properly. She recommends the additional funding because the center is operating with a

The center's board of directors had expected to have enough money to cover their expenses. Obviously funding from private social welfare charities was not as substantial as expected. This is not suprising considering the present state of the economy.

Mark IV is low income housing - specifically federally subsidized housing. The Willow Creek Center is located at the apartment complex. It is praised for the help it gives the residents. The services provided include recreational and educational programs for children, support groups for women and English language classes for its large foreign population.

In many cities, low-income housing is in the worst area of the community and is all but ignored by social service agencies. Poverty often breeds crime, vandalism and domestic violence. This is true in major metropolitan areas and in small towns.

The Willow Creek Center has done a good job in helping Mark IV residents help themselves. It has improved civic pride and provided services at minimum cost. It deserves the additional funding.

Dumping toxic waste

The Environmental Protection Agency has proposed rules that would reverse regulations governing the disposal of toxic wastes. Interestingly enough, some of the companies EPA wants to get the government off the backs of are protesting the action, along with environmentalists.

Standards that went into effect last October under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act ban the burial of hazardous wastes in metal drums at special landfill sites. EPA wants to reverse those rules to allow such sites to be filled to 25 percent of capacity with barrels of toxic liquids. Pending final action on the proposal, EPA lifted the rules that are in effect.

But a trade group called the Hazardous Waste Treatment Council plans to file a petition in Federal District Court to block lifting of the rules. The group is made up of companies that have already invested in equipment and methods of safely disposing of toxic wastes. A draft of the group's petition said EPA's action would endanger public health and the environment and have adverse economic effects on the companies that are members of the group.

Khristine Hall, an attorney for the Environmental Defense Fund, said the EPA's proposal would be "a giant step backward." and that her group would join in the court action against it.

It is odd that just when private industry is beginning to respond to serious environmental concerns with new technology, the Reagan administration, which avows that the free market is the proper forum for social change, wants to short-circuit such progressive action. The court should block EPA's proposal and reaffirm the public commitment to a safe environment.

CARP article tries to obscure the issues by semantic debate

By Paul Dougan

Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles members Wilbur Hathaway and Henry Schauffler's response to my articles on Poland spent much time discussing definitions, such as "Marxism" and democratic socialism," and then used this semantic debate to obscure events in Poland (DI, Feb. 17).

I had stated; "Whatever label one uses (I call it "democratic socialism") the Poles favor a nationalized property base (excluding small business) presided over by workers' democracy." They stated; 'Britain and the Scandanavian countries are attempts at democratic socialism ..." and then;"The Polish workers want democratic socialism They took my term, gave it their own meaning, and then "agreed" with me that it represents the Poles' desire. Neither Britain nor the Scandanavian countries fit my stated definition of "democratic socialism." The property base in these countries is only partially nationalized. They actually have "mixed economies"; private industry and nationalized industry coexist. Volvo is a good example of Scandanavian private ownership.

SECONDLY, while these nations are politically democratic, they don't have 'workers' democracy.'' Workers' democracy is more than political democracy; it's also democratic control of the workplace by the workers. The nationalized industries in the above countries are run by state officials. What Hathaway and Schauffler call "democratic socialism" I call liberal welfare capitalism - capitalist societies that workers have forced to make some socialistic reforms.

Since Hathaway and Schauffler are unable to deny that the Polish workers are socialist, they try to "clean them up" by using their own diluted definition of the word. I quoted Lech Walesa as saying: "We don't want to go back to capitalism or copy Western models

... Socialism isn't a bad system. Let it remain - as long as it's controlled." Walesa's meaning of "socialism" flatly contradicts Hathaway and Schauffler.

Aren't Britain and the Scandanavian countries generally considered 'Western''? And, why does Walesa say "remain"? Clearly, his idea of 'socialism' includes something already in Poland - the complete nationalization of large industry. The implication that a Solidarity victory would simply produce a new England or Sweden is preposterous.

THE TWO ACCUSE me of sinister sleight-of-hand to confuse Marxism and socialism. Yet, the kind of "socialism" that the Polish workers and I speak of is Marxist, if one believes Marx favored workers' democracy. Many "socialists" also consider themselves Marxist (Michael Harrington, for example), although not all. I never claimed they did.

The entire CARP presentation was short on fact. They didn't refute my documentation, they produced little of their own, and the only documentation they did produce - the "Communist rules for revolution" was silly. This tired old thing has been floating around extreme right-wing circles for so long it's like watching a rerun of "Dragnet." Is every editorial cartoonist a "dupe of the Kremlin," or, rather, don't they represent one of the healthier aspects of American society?

CARP'S ARTICLES often had nothing to do with Poland. They were rife with red-menace scare tactics about the American left, about as sophisticated as the characterization of Boris and Natasha in "Rocky and Bullwinkle." In keeping with this stereotype I was accused of craftiness and dishonesty. They seemed to think that screaming "Marxist" loud and long enough would avoid substantive discussion of Poland. In this sense, I think the CARP articles were unfair one could think I had spoken out against the Polish workers instead of Finally, I found another quotation supporting my contention that the U.S. establishment is two-faced regarding Poland. The New York Times reported Feb. 3 1982: "Some (U.S.) bankers have conceded privately that they welcomed the military crackdown as the best way of getting the Poles back to work so their nation's debts could be

Reader attacks revisionist

Letters

I am tired of hearing the revisionist A memorandum Lincoln wrote to view belittling Lincoln's efforts as a champion of black rights. Admittedly, himself in 1853 indicates that he was his primary purpose in issuing the not a supremacist:

'If A can prove, however conclusively, that he may, of right, enslave B, why may not B snatch the same argument, and prove equally, that he may enslave A? - You say A is white and B is black. It is color, then; the lighter, having the right to enslave the darker? Take care. By this rule you are to be slave to the first man you meet, with a fairer skin than your own. You do not mean color exactly? - You mean whites are intellectually the superiors of the blacks, and, therefore have the right to enslave them? Take childhood, and censorship does history a great disservice by making it seem intellect superior to your own.'

as if they were. To appreciate Lincoln's true greatness you must take him as he was, warts and all. R.K. Gage

Editorial error To the editor:

In her editorial, "No to censorship," Liz Bird writes "America already has enough rosy myths that do not accord with the facts." (DI, Feb. 22). She is absolutely right and that is why she should not quote Abraham Lincoln as speaking in 1868 when we all know the man was assassinated in 1865.

Editor's note: The date 1868 was a typographical error; this should have read 1858.

Equipment moved last weekend from the old clinic and laboratory locations was used for the first time Monday in its new location on the fourth floor of the Carver Pavilion, according to Randall Jordison, an administrator with the Department of Internal Medicine. The clinic and laboratories are part of the department's Division of Cardiovascular Diseases, Jordison said Wednesday.

The eleven juries, made up of 55 writers, editors and publishers from across the United States, submitted nominations in 12 categories to the Pulitzer Prize Board.

The board, which has the power to override the nominations, will consider the juries' reports next month. The 66th annual Pulitzer Prize winners will

The veto power of the board has received increasing criticism, especially since the scandal last year when the board ignored the juries' recommendations in the 1981 feature writing category and selected Washington Post reporter Janet Cooke for the award.

Cooke's entry, "Jimmy's World," turned out to be a fabrication and she forfeited the Pulitzer Prize and resigned from her job.

'Cuckoo's Nest' a compelling film but unequal to novel in brilliance

By Hoyt Olsen

Ken Kesey's 1962 novel, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, is a compelling exposure of the nation's mental institutions. Its authentic feeling is partly attributable to Kesey's experiences working in a Veteran's Hospital.

Kirk Douglas, then a top draw due to successes such as Spartacus, recognized its screen potential and bought the rights; he sagaciously planned to play the novel's central character himself. Randall P. McMurphy is an actor's dream: a swaggering, two-fisted, anti-authoritarian Irishman with a heart of gold, a figure of such simple smart-ass dimensions that any competent actor could play the part and look good. Heaven help us, even Bill Murray would appear to be a legitimate actor in the role.

But Douglas never quite put a movie package together, and eventually passed the rights on to his son, Michael. By then the book was a blockbuster bestseller. Milos Forman was hired to direct; Kesey himself was hired to write the screenplay.

FILMS, AND THE NOVELS they are based on, have a curious relationship. Filmmakers regularly make enormous departures from the original story if they feel a more successful movie will result. Often they are justified and a film will attain artistic success completely beyond the limited bounds of a novel with little redeeming value other than its premise. But an uncuttable umbilical cord must eternally connect any topnotch literary work with its resulting film versions. Critics must regard all film versions of The Great Gatsby as weak partly because they are so inferior to the novel itself.

And so the film of Cuckoo's Nest, despite its array of awards, must be remembered as a movie that did not equal the brilliance of its source. Kesey understood the strengths and weaknesses of his own novel. McMurphy and his chief antagonist, the tyrannical Big Nurse, are essentially onedimensional characters, as are most of the inmates. This is not a glaring weakness in the novel largely because Kesey filtered his plot through the viewpoint of his most complex character, Chief Bromden, the disturbed Indian whom the others wrongly presume to be a deaf-mute.

Kesey wrote his screenplay to repeat Bromden's perspective, but Douglas and elements and hired another screenwriter. The result is that Jack Nicholson's portrayal of McMurphy becomes the movie.

NICHOLSON AT HIS BEST is the best. He deserved, but did not receive, Oscars for his work in Five Easy Pieces and Chinatown. At his worst, he can become a ham deserving of the B roles he once lived on. Cuckoo's Nest displays both Nicholsons. Often he is deeply affecting, but at times he reduces his role to caricature through his posturing repertoire of facial contortions, featuring the stunned grimace and the knowing leer. Nicholson won his Oscar for this role; Al Pacino was the deserving candidate for his overwhelming performance in Dog Day Afternoon.

Cuckoo's Nest is well worth seeing. Oscar winner Louise Fletcher stylishly underplays the tyrannical nurse in brilliant counterpoint to Nicholson's occasionally overblown emoting. The supporting cast of largely unknown character actors is

Funny business and magic to start first of UI 'Comedie Shop' shows

By Roxanne T. Mueller Arts/Entertainment Editor

It's time to yock it up in the Wheel Room beginning tonight as professional comedy comes to the UI in the Comedie Shop.

David Willis, a man who mixes funny business and magic, will kick off the first of a series of stand-up comics who have survived the slings and silences of hard-toplease audiences. The free show begins immediately after the Iowa-Illinois basketball

The Comedie Shop will be a mostly regular Thursday night feature for the Wheel Room and will spotlight performers who pretty much make a living out of traveling from campus to campus sharpening and perfecting comedy routines. Some have broken into a semblance of the big time, with television appearances and their own theaters, and most all the performers have opened shows across the country for rock groups and singing stars.

Upcoming performers include Henry Holden, a handicapped comedian who pokes fun at his own dependence on crutches. His appearance will coincide with Handicapped Awareness Day March 11.

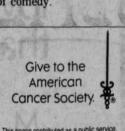

AFTER SPRING BREAK, the off-thewall comedy of Steve Moore will bring April Fool's Day to an appropriate end. Nicknamed "Supermanic," Moore is known for his ability to jump into far-out impressions and work an audience according to its mood. Backing him up will be the Houston-based Comix Annex, a troupe of comics in the vein of Chicago's Second

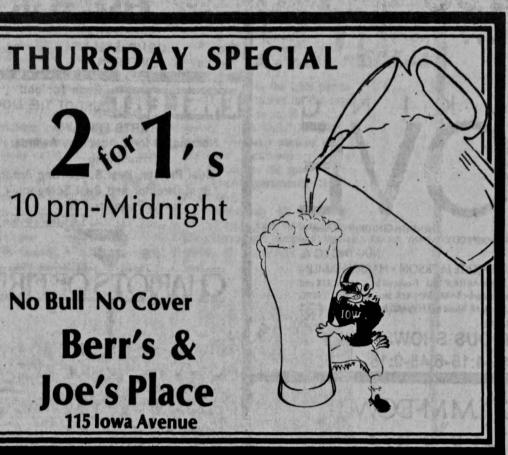

At this point, April 8 is an open date but the next Thursday, April 15, the comedy of Edmonds and Curley will be in full flight. Besides appearing on Carson, Cavett, Douglas, Griffin and the rest of the talk show circuit, the Wisconsin natives have appeared in their own specials on PBS.

April 22 is another open date, but the Comedie Shop's finale will be a performance by Exit Laughing, a Chicago-based comedy troupe that specializes in improvisation.

According to Tom Fesenmeyer, who's in charge of booking for the Wheel Room, the Comedie Shop won't neglect local would-be comedians who have occasionally performed in special comedy nights in the past. He says the best of the locals will most likely be spotlighted as opening acts for a particular night of comedy.

No feuding between lowa's real McCoy's

By Thomas W. Jargo

All Iowa Head Track Coach Ted Wheeler would have to do to start a real live feud in the River City is recruit the Hatfield brothers. He's already got the real McCoys.

The freshman twins, Ricky and Ronnie McCoy, are quickly becoming familiar names in the Iowa track ogram. Ronnie is a long jumper and high hurdler, and Ricky is a distance runner, primarily in the 880-yard run. Both are members of the Hawkeyes' second mile relay team.

The twins, from Fresno, Calif., atended Edison High School where earned All-American status. They came to the UI as a package deal, "because mother wanted us to stay together,' onnie said.

UPON GRADUATION from high school, Ronnie wanted to attend the University of Arizona, and Ricky wanted to go to Lincoln University in Jefferson City, Mo. But Wheeler came to Fresno to recruit, "and convinced mother that Iowa was the right place, Ronnie said. "Mother liked Wheeler."

Both Ricky and Ronnie put emphasis on school and getting a degree as their main goal at Iowa. "Right now I'm thinking about a degree in criminology, four or five years from now," Ricky said. Ronnie hopes to get a degree in business management.

Ronnie, however, is not timid to point out he has high goals for himself on the track and in the field. "I hope to be an All-American and possibly go to the Olympics," he said. "If I don't go to the Olympics, I'll be satisfied with

RONNIE IS ALSO very confident he will break Charlie Jones' long jump record. "Yes, it's (the record) going to fall, either this year or next year," he

Ricky's track goals are much more refined than his brother's. He simply hopes to improve his times in the 880yard run and hopefully earn a spot on

Iowa's No. 1 mile relay team. Right now Ronnie owns the team's best mark in the long jump this year, best 880 time with Jim Leckband at one minute, 56.7 seconds.

Ronnie prefers the high hurdles over the long jump. "It's a faster race and I can still use my leaping ability," he said. He and fellow-hurdler Chris Williams have their own head-to-head battle during every race. "He's one ahead of me," Ronnie said, "but I'll catch him either now or during out-

WITH THE INDOOR season nearly over, both are looking forward to the outdoor season. Ronnie likes the outdoor season because the hurdle distance is longer and there are more hurdles. "I'm a stronger hurdler than starter," Ronnie said. "I start about twotenths behind everyone, but can make it up on the hurdles.

Ricky is anxiously awaiting the outdoor season because, "indoor is harder on the legs. Outdoor you have four turns, and indoor you have eight turns.

"I was also having trouble adjusting where to start my kick," he said. "I had never run indoor track before.'

COMING FROM THE sunny setting of Fresno, the McCoys had to adjust to the Iowa winters. "We came back from California (after Christmas break) and there was snow all over the place," Ronnie said. "I just got back from the library and it's cold! People told us, 'If you can handle this winter, you can handle anything.'

'We got used to it," Ricky adds. "Nineteen degrees was the coldest we had ever seen. Thirty degrees is cold back home. We went home to the wet air in California and got sick.'

Ricky thinks he and his brother made a good choice to attend Iowa. "We can go home and brag about the Rose Bowl and the basketball team," he said.

Can they go home and brag about the track team? "We feel we're much stronger then last year," Ricky said. Ricky and Ronnie McCoy, along with their teammates, can prove how much stronger the team is this year, as they travel to Bloomington, Ind., for the Big Ten indoor championships this

Leo aims to defend Big Ten title

By Steve Batterson Staff Writer

When the Iowa men's gymnastics team goes to the Big Ten championships in Madison, Wis., this weekend, the Hawkeyes will have something they haven't had since 1974.

That something is a defending Big Ten champion. Iowa sophomore Joe Leo became the Big Ten pommel horse co-champion last year when he tied Minnesota's Joe Ray with a 9.4.

Illinois' Kevin Oltendorf, an old high school teammate of Leo's at York High School in Elmhurst, Ill., and Ray, should be Leo's main competition. "Kevin is the only guy that has soundly beaten me this year and I'd like to repay the favor." Leo said.

LEO SAID WINNING the first championship was something that he really didn't expect. "Going into the meet last year, I was hoping to come out somewhere in the top five," Leo said. "Winning it all was just something that was in the back of my mind. As far as this year goes, I guess I've never really thought of myself as the man to beat.

A business major, Leo said the addition of two more pommel horse specialists to the Iowa roster this season has taken the pressure off. "Bob (Leverence) and Billy

I'll just do my best and hope to retain (Bengtson) are in the same area." Leo said. "We take the responsibility of being the rocks, someone that everyone can count on.

'We had a pretty good pommel horse team last year, but this year's has been better," Leo said. "Consistency is what you need on horse and for the past few meets that's why we've been doing so well.

THE HAWKS, including Leo, had their problems on pommel horse earlier in the season, but he has come back to average over a 9.6. "We hadn't had a meet in quite a while and a long time good friend of mine, Dan Urben, had just transferred," Leo said of his mid-season slump.

"I was kind of losing sight of what I wanted to do and what the team wanted to do. Everyone, my friends, coaches and parents really came to my aid and got me back on track," Leo said. "I think it was a turning point for me and since the Minnesota meet, both myself and the team have been doing very well."

THE HAWKS HAVE moved into eighth in the national ratings and it's the team concept that Leo credits the success with. "Everyone realizes what they have to do to hit the scores." Leo said. "It's really a simple concept. We just have to hit the routines. Everyone is behind you when you're up there competing.

Gales defends title in slam dunk contest

By Matt Gallo

As expected, former Iowa quarterback Pete Gales successfully defended his intramural slam dunk championship Tuesday night at the Field House in front of about 400 fans.

Randy Hodson took second, while Mark Pankus finished third. Hodson thought the judging, done by Iowa basketball players Bob Hansen, Waymond King, Jon Darsee and Mark Gannon, could have been better.

Gales missed one of his optional slams, an alley-oop pass from Hansen, but the judges gave him second and third tries on the dunk, claiming that Hansen's pass was at fault in the miss. "I was disappointed that they didn't disallow Gale's dunk shot. Hansen's pass was good," Hodson said. "I'm happy to get second, though. I got third last year, so it's an improvement."

THE SLAM DUNKS were judged on a scale ranging from one to 10. Variations of up to 2.5 points were not uncommon in the judges' scores. Observer Barry Rubin questioned the credibility of the judges. "The judging looked pretty inconsistent to me," Rubin said. "It looked like they swayed toward the athletes.'

"The consistency depended on the individual judge's opinion," King, a judge, said. "There just weren't that many who could do the more difficult

Hansen was disappointed with the quality of the participants, not the judges. "I thought there would be some better dunkers on this campus," he said. "I thought the judging was consistent and fair."

Event organizer John "Shake" Budzinski tried to get higher quality participation but, " football study hall was going on and the coaches wouldn't let them out," he said. "Vince Campbell, John Alt and Jon Hayes couldn't come. One of the competitors who seemed to have the tools to challenge Gales, Gregory Pearson, missed his mandatory reverse slam and was later called for hanging on the rim, shattering his chances of beating Gales. "I thought Pearson's last freestyle dunk was the best in the competition," King

Things have changed

"NOW THAT we've knocked them (Indiana) off, the meet has opened up," Patton said. "There will be four or five teams coming in here thinking they can win. When you're swimming to win you perform better. It definitely adds to your mental preparation."

According to Patton, the surprise team could be Michigan, which has shown new life since the return of Coach Gus Stager after a year layoff. Also rejoining the Wolverines this season is six-time Big Ten champ Fernando Canales, a middle-distance freestyle swimmer.

Ohio State and Wisconsin are two other teams Patton said have a long shot at winning the meet. The would easily claim conference honors. Buckeyes have possibly the strongest diving team with two finalists from this summer's United States Open.

Lou Kammerer, defending conference champ in the 50-yard free, will be leading the Badgers along with Kevin Fober, the 1981 200 butterfly

Iowa will suit up more defending Big Ten champions than any other squad. Last season Tom Roemer, a junior from Bettendorf, won the 200 IM, 200 backstroke and tied with teammate Steve Harrison, also returning, for honors in the 100 back.

Graeme Brewer, competing in his final collegiate meet, is Iowa's defending champ in the 500 free. The Hawkeyes also won the 400 free and medley relays at the 1891 conference

Diving title, team lead to Hoosiers

By H. Forrest Woolard sistant Sports Editor

Behind a very strong diving contingency, including a first-place finish by Robbie Bollinger on the one-meter board, Indiana leads the 72nd Big Ten Swimming and Diving championships at the Field House pool.

In the meet's first event, Bollinger totaled 532.98 to not only dethrone Iowa's defending champ, Randy Ableman, but also break the Hawkeyes' Big Ten record. Ableman finished fifth in the meet with 515.64.

The Hoosiers also placed ninth, 10th and 11th in Thursday's meet opener to score 45 points. Michigan, predicted as the darkhorse of the meet, is sitting in second place with 38 points after a second from Ron Merriott (524.25). The Wolverines were also sparked by Kent Ferguson, a graduate of Cedar Rapids Washington, who finished sixth

OHIO STATE was two points back in the team standings in third, following a third and fourth from Mark Bradshaw and Doug Shaffer, respectively. Wisconsin, with 26 points, is in fourth. while the Hawkeyes are back in fifth

Entering into the one-meter diving finals, which consisted of the three of 11 dives. Bollinger led the field by more than 11 points. Merriott went into the finals in fifth, but came back to take second. Indiana's Michael Taylor, who was fourth after the preliminaries, dropped to 11 after missing his last

According to Iowa Diving Coach Bob Rydze, Ableman had trouble with his last dive in the prelims, an inward 21/2 tuck. "He had the best finals of everybody," Rydze added. "I believe he'll win the three-meter.

The Iowa swimmers have been waiting all season so they could defend their Big Ten title and, beginning today, the Hawkeyes will get their chance.

Last season Iowa upset 20-time defending champion Indiana for the Big Ten crown, and from all indications, it appears the Hawks and the Hoosiers will be at it again.

"I think we can win the meet," said Iowa Coach Glenn Patton. "I think our top swimmers are better than Indiana's, and if our bottom guys come through we'll win. Depth will be a very important factor.

IN A DUAL meet earlier this season. Indiana handed the Hawks a 59-54 loss. The Hawks also lost to Wisconsin, 62-51, in their season opener. Iowa is carrying a 5-5 dual meet record into the meet, and there has been skepticism surrounding the Hawks' chances to repeat as conference champs

Indiana, which has not lost a dual pleted his eligibility.

"I think we've got a chance," said Indiana Coach Doc Councilman. "We will swim good so they'll (Iowa) have to swim better to beat us." Councilman added that while Indiana didn't have any superstars like Iowa's Tom Roemer and Graeme Brewer, the Hoosiers did have strong divers and is the backcourt Olson was referring to. Harper leads the Big Ten in assists with 5.3 per game, and is second in steals with 1.9 a game.

"IF THEY GET a lead, they'll go spread court very, very early," Olson But don't count on the Illini rolling said. "It's not spread court to stall, it's spread court to score. With Tucker in particular, and Harper also, they have 4-3 in the concrete mushroom they call two excellent ball-handlers and penetrators.'

And when quick guards are a factor, so is the possibility of a run-and-gun ball game. "They run the fast break very well and that concerns me, Olson said. "Especially if we have (Bob) Hansen at the off-guard, because his aggressiveness to the offensive boards becomes a problem to us against a good running team."

Another concern of Olson is the presence of 6-foot-10 senior center James Griffin, averaging 13.5 points and 7.1 rebounds (third in the league) per game.

Cofield may be fired

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) - University of Wisconsin Athletic Director Elroy Hirsch will go before the school's athletic board Friday to make a recommendation on the future of Basketball Coach Bill Cofield.

Hirsch met with Cofield just before noon Wednesday, shortly after The Milwaukee Journal reported a decision to fire him as the coach had been

Turnovers key factor in Hawkeye loss

By Betsy Anderson

"It's the first time late in the game that the kids have fallen apart. Three times in the last three minutes we threw the ball away on the in-bounds pass. Instead of being down by two, we ended up down by 14," Iowa Assistant Coach Vickie Wilson said following the Hawkeyes' 78-64 loss to Wisconsin.

Wilson's comments typified the outcome of the game as the Hawks trailed the Badgers by two points with 2 minutes, 47 seconds left in the game.

From that point, it was all Wisconsin, as the Badgers stepped to the free throw line six times in the last two minutes hitting on eight of 11 attempts.

"USUALLY THAT LATE in the game if we were behind we kept our poise," Wilson said.

"Wisconsin is a good team," she said. "We played better tonight than we did against them at Big Tens." Iowa lost to the Badgers in East Lansing at the conference championships by an identical score.

Wilson said senior Kim Howard, who played her last home game as a lot better. They were able to keep the Hawkeye, did a good job keeping the ball alive on the offensive boards in the

"It's not that we were outsized that much," Wilson said, "Wisconsin has good leapers and are real quick. They scored 10 points on their fast break in the first half, but we made some changes and held them to only four points on the break the second half." Kathy Walton, Wisconsin's assistant coach agreed. "I thought Iowa played a good game tonight. They handled the pressure and controlled the boards a game close into the second half.'

IOWA PLAYED Wisconsin basketfor-basket through the first half as the score was tied eight times. The Hawks looked like they might pull away, but let a six-point lead slip through their

With five seconds left in the first period, Howard came up short on a final shot. Her attempt hit the front of the rim and bounced into the hands of Wisconsin's Janet Huff who passed the ball downcourt to teammate Vivian Rorer for an easy layup and a 35-3 lead with one second remaining.

Iowa was never able to recapture the lead in the second half though the Hawks managed to stay close until the last three minutes.

Leading scorers for the Hawks wer Howard with 17 points and Lisa Ander son and Donna Freitag with 16 and 12

Wisconsin's Theresa Huff took game scoring honors with 27 points. Also it double figures for the Badgers were Rorer with 17 and Huff's sister, Janet who put in 12.
