Travel group leaders face expulsion

By Rachelle Bussman

Three top administrators of University Travel, a Student Services division, face impeachment for what the Executive Committee of the Student Senate calls "negligent behavior" leading to the loss of at least $10,000 after Monday's tense vote. Kermy Atkinson, assistant vice president for student affairs, will also be investigated and may face disciplinary action.

"The Executive Committee reviewed the situation and determined it was necessary to proceed with impeachment," said Robert Wisehart, executive director of the Student Senate.

Atkinson, who is also a member of the Student Senate, was suspended pending the outcome of the impeachment proceedings. The Student Senate will meet Tuesday night to discuss the matter further.

The impeachment charges against Atkinson and two other administrators were based on allegations that the group lost at least $10,000 in airfare and hotel expenses after failing to reserve a flight and hotel room for a group of students traveling to a conference in New York City.

The Student Senate learned of the loss Monday morning, and the group met to discuss the matter. After hearing from the administrators, the Student Senate voted 11-1 to proceed with impeachment.

"We have a duty to protect the interests of the students," said Wisehart. "We cannot allow this to happen again."

The impeachment proceedings will be handled by a special committee of the Student Senate, which will be appointed by Wisehart. The committee will investigate the charges and recommend a course of action to the Student Senate.

If the Student Senate votes to impeach Atkinson, she will be removed from her position and may face disciplinary action. The other administrators will also be investigated.

The Student Senate has charged the group with negligence, mismanagement, and failure to follow proper procedures.

"We need to ensure that these mistakes do not happen again," said Wisehart. "We will make changes to our procedures to prevent this from happening again."

The Student Senate will meet Tuesday night to discuss the matter further and to appoint a special committee to handle the impeachment proceedings.

Board inadvertently blocks assessments

Oklahoma said the cuts will remain in place until the legislature makes a decision on the matter.

"We are trying to get them to lift the moratorium," said Oklahoma. "We need to make a decision on the matter."

The cuts were imposed last year by the federal government as part of the budget deal, but Oklahoma said the cuts will remain in place until the legislature makes a decision on the matter.

"We need to make a decision on the matter," said Oklahoma. "We need to decide whether or not to impose the cuts."
Proposed Riverside median could restrict accessibility

By Chance DeWitt

A plan to increase traffic safety on Riverside Drive is being submitted to the city council at an issue to be审议 a proposed median in the area.

The plan, which includes adding a two-way median to Riverside Drive near the intersection of West Main Street, will be discussed in detail during a public hearing on March 13. The city council is scheduled to vote on the plan at its regular meeting on March 20.

Cable services to be debated at informational hearing today

By Scott Brown

Iowa City residents can use a public hearing set for 4 p.m. today to share their concerns about cable television services available through Hawkeye Cablevision and Cablevision of Iowa City.

The meeting, which is open to the public, will be held at the Iowa City Public Library, 212 E. Market St.

The public hearing is being held as part of a broader effort to improve cable service in the city, with the Iowa City Council deciding to hold a mediation session to discuss the issue.

The council also approved an amendment to the city's cable TV ordinance, which includes provisions for the city to regulate cable companies and provide for the protection of local businesses.

The Public Utilities Commission will be responsible for enforcing the new regulations, and the city council is expected to vote on the amendment at its next meeting on April 3.

Iowa City's broadband internet service is offered by the Iowa City Public Library, 212 E. Market St.

The service is available to public libraries, schools, and public agencies.

The library is also offering internet access at a reduced rate for low-income households.

The council is expected to vote on the amendment at its next meeting on April 3.

"It's not a sure thing, but people are glad to be on TV," said Brown. "They want to know more about the amendment."
Party vows to represent UI students

By Jacinda Reuning

The Representative Party will represent the Student Government Association as one of their key goals in an effort to gather student opinions, said Party chairwoman Uly Skourup.

The party will run in the Oct. 31 run-off election for the six seats in the group's redistricted greeks-at-large seat. The candidates hope to gain more student representation in the group's agenda and to be a more visible voice.

"I have a real passion for running the campaigns," Party chairwoman Uly Skourup said.

According to the group's platform, if elected, the candidates will be responsible for finding out more about student needs and for promoting the party's agenda.

"It is really a big job to be a representative," Skourup said. "I think it is important to have people who will work."

The campaign's strategies will be to discuss issues with the students and to get more publicity by calling on more people into the campaign.

The group has decided to focus their agendas on the topic of student representation and the need for more representation in the government.

"They are not polarized," Skourup said. "I think they are working on the same thing."
Day care

Right now there is a wonderful opportunity for local industries to show their citizens the community and its opportunities. The issue is day care and the opportunity comes because a local industry has made a financial gift to the United Way to help fund the costs of day care. The City of Iowa has approved the use of the gift for the purpose of providing day care for the children of Johnson County employers.

The Iowa City Chamber of Commerce is asking all business to consider giving to the United Way so that the children of local employers may receive the benefits of day care. The Chamber is also encouraging all local employers to consider the financial advantages of having day care.

For more information about the United Way, please contact the Chamber of Commerce.

Regulatory agencies

The regulatory reform act now pending in Congress, would give the president wide power to control the new regulatory agencies. It would also give the president the ability to change the way in which the new agencies would work.

That means that all those agencies would have to be supervised by the president. The president would also have the power to change the way in which the new agencies would work.

That means that the president would have the power to change the way in which the new agencies would work.

Regulatory agencies were designed to be independent so that their conclusions would be public good and the wishes of the president. However, current rules require an independent branch of the president's agencies to work within the wishes of the president.

CAC approves mailing allocation

By Dean Herring

A closed mail campaign seeking ap- proval for increasing student fees in order to help fund the money lost due to the closure of the staff and student newspaper was approved by the Student Government last week.

Speaker Paul Drobny said the move would cost students an additional $1 per semester and would help balance the budget deficit caused by the shutdown.

"The newspaper will continue to be published, but it will not be the same," Drobny said. "We have to find a way to make ends meet, and this is one of the steps we are taking to do so."
Most people paint on canvas. But artist Rayna McClellan at the Old Capital Center arts and crafts show Saturday that the canvas was too small for her works. Depicted on mirrors, Bryce's paintings are more suitable than the tiny space's 6 1/2 inches to accommodate.

Anderson contacted Barnes last week after initial news reports and affidavits of storage and care for the remains until information about the remains and place of origin could be found.

Anderson said that while he is aware of the Cedar Rapids police, it will be done to determine the age, sex, and sex of the deceased woman. The remains will not be recovered during the excavation, but the bones and ashes will not be taken apart, she said.

If the place of origin can be determined by the police, Anderson said, another state may claim jurisdiction, in which case the remains will be turned over to another state. Iowa law requires the state anthropologist office to handle cases in which the remains are 20 years or older, and in this case, Anderson said, he could not say whether the Cedar Rapids remains are older than that.

Because those remains are buried, he said, the Cedar Rapids remains are the same time period as the remains in the Cedar Rapids. But the remains were not originally buried. The remains were deposited in the Cedar Rapids as a mummy's place of origin can be found.

Anderson said that if there is any question of the remains, he will not return them to the Cedar Rapids. Anderson's last name was taken by the police, according to Anderson. It is not clear whether the Cedar Rapids remains are the same as the remains in the Cedar Rapids. But the remains were not originally buried. The remains were deposited in the Cedar Rapids as a mummy's place of origin can be found.
