U.S.-El Salvador policy slammed

WASHINGTON - - See Mark Badger and Ted Connolly to both the administration's Central American policy experts. They are the ones who, in the eyes of some, had the most influence on the decision to arm the Contras.

Badger, a political scientist who has written extensively on the war in Nicaragua, was the principal author of a memo ordering the State Department to investigate the是否应支持 Contras. Connolly, the political officer at the State Department, was the key person who helped the State Department to understand the Contras' military strategy.

The decision to arm the Contras, made by the State Department and the National Security Council, was announced by President Reagan on Monday. The Contras are a group of rebels fighting against the government ofNicaragua. They are supported by the United States, which has been funding them with military and financial aid.

The decision has been criticized by many, including members of Congress, who say it is a violation of international law.

The board also held a public hearing on the proposed budget, which included a $100,000 increase in the central administration's budget to $300,000.

The board approved the budget and the closing of two schools, which is expected to save $150,000 in the next school year.

The district also approved a $100,000 increase in the central administration's budget to $300,000.

Nicaraguan buildup reported
WASHINGTON - The deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, James J. Thompson, reported Saturday afternoon that a large military buildup was underway in the country, indicating that the Sandinista government was preparing for war. Thompson, areadonly to Secretary of State George Shultz, said the buildup appeared to be aimed at solidifying the government's control over the Sandinista insurgents in the north of the country and at establishing a more secure infrastructure for the regime's internal security operations.

Legislature spokesman for Bush, who heads President Ronald Reagan's Task Force to combat crime and drug abuse, said the increase in drug use was a major factor in the rising crime rate. The task force is tasked with developing strategies to reduce the demand for illegal drugs and to improve the effectiveness of law enforcement agencies.

United Progressive Party wants strong state relations

By Jessica Baylor

The United Progressive Party plans to place an initiative on the November ballot in order to gain state representation. The proposal would require that one-third of the amendments to the state constitution be approved by a majority of the public. The initiative would affect the budget process by allowing the executive branch to propose a budget before the legislature votes on it. The legislature would then have to approve the budget within 30 days, while Drake’s gasohol, the period when they are used, would be allowed.

The United Progressive Party slate is working to ensure that their recommendations are taken into account.

Student elections

"We are an minority student running on the slate," said BAKER, a residence halls candidate, who is running with three other students for the United Progressive slate.

Not all candidates are as keen on the initiative as BAKER. "If elected the United Progressive slate intends to work cohesively to build a strong relationship with the new UI administration," said BAKER.

The United Progressive Party slate is working to build a strong relationship with the new UI administration. "It’s a relationship that has always needed a lot of give and take," said Baker. "You just stand up for what you believe."
Child abuse

The Johnson County Department of Social Services has begun the last stage of ratification to cope with county, state and federal funding cuts that have cropped up. Its staff has been reduced by over 25 percent as a result of layoffs, reassessments and a general decrease in cooperation from the state's bureaucracy. A determination in the quality of services human in the area will probably soon follow.

Unfortunately, the individuals most likely to suffer first are also the ones who are local able to assist themselves. They are the victims of child abuse. Last year the county hired four child abuse investigators and one supervisor. Starting March 16, the staff will consist of only two investigators—one of them a reassigned employee who has not worked in the field for 13 years.

During 1981 the county reported that the number of child abuse referrals had increased dramatically from the year before. Area social workers were having a hard time dealing with the large number of cases they were expected to handle. In 1981 there will be fewer people than before to trust a growing horror. It is appalling that the county does not feel the position ofBeryl for funding.

A county, a state, a country is only as rich as its poorest citizens. They are the ones who are least able to assist themselves. They are the ones who've grown accustomed to his face approve of his methods.

We are writing regarding the inappropriate treatment of Iowa City community school children and adolescents with drug paraphernalia. This type of ordinance smacks of the "drug war" and is an archaic approach to the demand for drugs and their use.

Planets

A "dissolutely small number of an immeasurably vast number of worlds", the planets have been a part of the human imagination since ancient times. Zeus and his fellow Olympians, the Roman equivalent of Jupiter and his fellow deities, have been central figures in the pantheon since antiquity. The understanding of the planets and their movements has been a constant source of wonder and fascination throughout history. From the ancient Greeks to the modern day, the study of the planets has been a fundamental aspect of astronomy and astrology.

Thomas

He is still alive. He is still writing. And he is still causing a stir. The writer who has been described as "the last of the Beat generation" is still pushing boundaries and challenging conventions. His new novel, "The White Hotel," is a departure from his previous works, but it is no less impactful.

Daycare

The daycare centers in the city are struggling to meet the demands of their clients. The need for daycare services has increased significantly in recent years, and the centers are facing a number of challenges. The centers are under financial stress, and they are struggling to attract and retain qualified staff. The centers are also facing regulatory and legal issues, and they are trying to comply with the complex codes and rules pertaining to daycare centers.

Today’s music must be an antenna for truths, composer Foss says

By Jon Horstman

Lucas Foss: "Music today must act as a humanizing influence."

Lucas Foss, whose creations this fall, should be of the light weight genre, lack personality and vivacity. The composer, however, remains in top form with his latest work, "The Downpour." The piece is written for five instruments, including violin, viola, cello, and piano, and is performed by the American Conductors Association.

"The Downpour" is a work that asks the question, "How will the new works be heard?" Foss says. "I am not satisfied with what we have heard. There are two chances to hear Foss's work this season. The first is at the University of Iowa, where Foss is teaching. The second is at the Iowa City Music Festival, located in the Memorial Union.

Tuckwell performance lacking in fulfillment

By David Plotnick

The only piece written by Barry Tuckwell during his three-month residency of the New York Festival of Holiday Music and Dance was "Turkish March" for brass quintet, which he conducted and for which he also played the alto horn. Tuckwell's program included the premiere of his "World Festival" and "Lilac" for mixed chamber groups and a brief recital of his "Turkish March".

The Turkish March was aADCed and poorly performed by the ensemble of horn players. Tuckwell's performance was excellent, but the overall execution of the piece was unconvincing. Tuckwell's interpretation was more traditional than the modern interpretation that is more common in the United States.

While the performance was not a complete failure, it did not live up to the expectations set by Tuckwell's opening recital. The ensemble of horn players was not as polished as the orchestra that performed "World Festival" and "Lilac" for mixed chamber groups. Tuckwell's performance of "Lilac" was more convincing than "World Festival" for mixed chamber groups.

Musicians gamble, come up winners

By Jim Watson

"A lot of jazz musicians won't play a gig because they don't want to share their reputation. It's a gambit and a nerve-wracking situation. Getting a handful of people up and doing it in a more intimate, more delicate situation, is better," said saxophonist Ron Carter of the Savannah jazz scene.

Carter is just one of the many jazz musicians who are catching the wave of the music's resurgence in Savannah. The city's jazz scene has been on the rise for several years, and it shows no signs of slowing down.

Music

by Barry Tuckwell

The newly formed Tuckwell player (Leroy Lake and James Thomas) was featured in a performance during the New York Festival of Holiday Music and Dance. Tuckwell played a solo with the orchestra, and the performance was well received.

Defunkt has released one LP, "Defunkt," a jazz-funk band based in Savannah. Defunkt's music is as difficult to describe as it is to dance to. A group like this has never existed in the city before, with such variety and broad range.

Louisville wins ticket battle

By Steve Batterlon

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (WDRB) — Western Kentucky University didn’t win any tickets for the NCAA tournament and the invi­ tation came about an hour before game time. Western State College will have to travel all the way to Kentucky to play in the opening round of the tournament. Western State College made the NCAA tournament after winning the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament.

Louisville, which is the host school, was able to purchase all the tickets it needed for its regional, including the tickets for the fans from Western State College.

In the early days of the Indiana Pacers, the team was known for its high-flying, up-tempo style of play. However, as the team evolved, so did the game of basketball. Today, the Pacers are known for their gritty defense and ability to limit opponents to low-scoring games.

West has been selected to cover the Pacers’ games this season. He has been a part of the organization’s coverage since the early 1990s, and has covered every game of the team’s history.

Iowa gymnasts continue improving

By Steve Batterlon

IOWA CITY — The Hawkeyes were just one of the many teams that were unable to purchase tickets for the NCAA tournament. However, the team continued to work hard and improve throughout the season.

The Hawkeyes ended the year at the Big Ten Conference gymnastics championships, where they finished in sixth place. This was a significant improvement from last year, where they finished in 15th place.

Iowa’s two champions, Tim Magee and Dan Koeppel, helped to lead the team to its best finish in the conference championships since 2010. Magee won the all-around and high bar, while Koeppel won the floor exercise.

The Hawkeyes will be looking for more success in the upcoming season, as they aim to build on their recent improvements.

NCAAs, not past, concern Hawkeyes

By M. Parnell, Des Moines Register

It's NCAA tournament time and that's all Iowa Basketball Coach Lute Olson wants his Hawkeyes to think about.

"They're going to be competitive," Olson said. "They'll be competitive and they'll probably win a game or two."

Olson refused to discuss differing evaluations surrounding Iowa's 8-6 record in 1982, a team he considers the best in the Big Ten.

"The best thing is to allow our fans to project that," Olson said.

THE BANS, making their fourth consecutive appearance in the Nigeria tournament, were one of the few small college teams that has never earned a national title. The first team was Iowa's 1978-79 team.

Olson said. "My other choice would be the Maryland team of all teams, and we're in the same group, the 1979-80 Terps."

In a competitive situation..."

Iowa, No. 3, is in the East regional with No. 1 Virginia, No. 14 Kentucky, with No. 3 Virginia, No. 14 Kentucky and No. 5 West Virginia. In the Midwest, No. 15 Virginia, No. 1 Virginia and No. 2 Indiana.
