Williams resigns to avoid expulsion

WASHINGTON (UPI) - New Jersey Democrat Harrison Williams resigned from the Senate Thursday to avoid expulsion for his conduct in the Abscam scandal - but he predicted that "time, history and almighty God will vin-

Williams' historic announcement spared his 99 colleagues, sitting solemnly in judgment during a six-day Senate trial, from the anguish of a vote to oust him.

At a news conference later, Williams asserted, "I am not a broken man," and said he made his decision to resign at about 11:30 a.m. Thursday - only after being promised that the Senate will look into the government's undercover Abscam bribery investigation.

"When I heard that, my conscience relieved me" of continuing the fight, he said. "I do not feel that I broke any ode of ethics ... "I feel as if a burden has been lifted. The burden I carried has been taken over by others.'

IN AN ORCHESTRATED drama that spelled the end of Williams' 23year Senate career, his self-appointed defender, Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, rose and yielded to "the senior senator from the state of New Jersey, Harrison Arlington Williams Junior.

The once-powerful Democrat spoke from the Senate floor for nearly half an hour, reading parts of the speech — blaming the Justice Department for 'excess zeal" in the Abscam scheme - that he had planned to deliver if his trial had continued

At 2 p.m., William concluded: "I thank the Senate as I announce my ini. I have made decision, and I leave in good spirit and good heart and a strong resolve. "I feel no stain. I feel strengthened. I thank you all," he said, and took his seat in a silent chamber.

INOUYE WENT to Williams' second now center desk, took a manila folder and handed it to a page to deliver to Vice President George Bush, who was

The resignation was effective "at the close of business today."

The drama ended a six-day trial and avoided a seemingly certain vote to make Williams the first senator ousted since the Civil War.

His wife Jeanette, who some associates feel was the driving force behind his ferocious fight for survival long after the odds turned against him, was in her customary seat in the members' gallery.

SENATORS LINED UP to shake the hand of their veteran colleague - who over the years had effectively led many legislative battles on behalf of organized labor, minorities and the Asked at the news conference about he future, Williams replied: "What will I do now? Among other things, en-

Democratic leader Robert Byrd described the painful episode leading Williams' departure as "a tragedy hat has no heroes." Ethics Committee Chairman Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said, "Nothing anyone can say now will increase the Senate's outrage or ecrease its sense of anguish." The senator's final speech was sprinkled with biblical references. "I elieve time, history and almighty God will vindicate me and the principles I have fought for in the Senate and I will be vindicated before the people of our ind," he said.

Area abortion statistics reflect migration to use local facilities

By Scott Kilman

More legal abortions per 1,000 women were performed in Iowa City in 1980 than in any other U.S. standard metropolitian statistical area, according to a February report by a New York City research institute.

The Alan Guttmacher Institute reports that 150 abortions were performed in 1980 for every 1,000 women in Iowa City age 15-44. Chicago reported 33 abortions per 1,000 women, New York City reported 71 abortions for every 1,000 women and Des Moines reported 45 abortions for every 1,000

But UI officials and Jane Murray,

the Guttmacher Institute's communication director, said Thursday the rate reflects the number of abortions performed in Iowa City regardless of the patient's place of residence. Figures from the Iowa City Emma Goldman Clinic for Women and UI Hospitals - the only two Iowa City clinics where legal abortions are performed - indicate that about one-fifth of the total number of abortions at the two facilities are performed for local

Ul justices rule against Right to Life

The UI Student Judicial Court ruled that the UI Student Senate did not act unconstitutionally when it denied a prolife student group funds in April 1981.

Justice Ken Roberts publicly read the court's 3-1 opinion Thursday to representatives of both parties. The decision denies the UI Students' Right to Life Committe the $145 it had originally requested from the senate and $500 in damages.

A preliminary vote was taken earlier this week, but some of the justices declined to comment until Thursday. Roberts said an effort was made to make the decision unanimous up until the vote was announced.

Justice Steve Brown cast the dissenting vote.

The case originated from a complaint filed by Right to Life Oct. 21, 1981. Right to Life members claimed the senate had violated its own constitution, which is based on the state and federal constitution, that they have equal priority for receiving senate funding and that they were denied the equal protection of the law.

Right to Life members also claimed they were denied due process when the senate voted on the matter because of the "madhouse environment" in which the vote was conducted.

THE MAJORITY OPINION stated that the senate acted in its legislative the decision is appealed, "I think it will capacity when it voted against funding the group. "Thus this court is precluded from deciding on the righteousness of a particular vote, since this would be out of the court's jurisdiction. Furthermore, there is no requirement that the senate must adopt the BAC recommendations because they are just that, only recommendations. Brown said he contended that the allocation and distribution of funds is not a legislative function but an administrative function that a legislative body - senate - is performing. The court attempted to reach a final decision Monday, Brown said, but he requested another day to find evidence to justify his dissension and prove the rest of the court wrong. "We debated a decision Tuesday that we were pretty sure was binding," but decided not to disclose any information until both parties could be present, he said. Brown said he continued to search for evidence against the majority opinion through Wednesday night, even while that opinion was being written.

'The problem was that I'm not a lawyer and I don't have the knowledge yet," he said. "There's something inherently wrong which allows a senate a legislature — to use mandatory student fees to fund one philosophy over another.

"THIS IS THE FIRST really intense case we've had since the court has been a commission," Brown said. If See Decision, page 7

UI builds satellite for space shuttle

By Howard Hess

After the equivalent of a hightechnology scavenger hunt, UI scientists were able to build a satellite for the space shuttle's third mission for about 20 percent of what it would cost private industry to build it.

The Plasma Diagnostic Package was designed and built at the UI under the guidance of Stanley Shawhan, a professor of Physics and Astronomy. It is one of six experiments selected from about 300 proposals in 1977 for the third flight of the space shuttle Columbia, scheduled for March 22.

As its name suggests, the PDP will analyze the plasma - ionized, rarified gas - around the shuttle as it orbits 150 miles above the Earth.

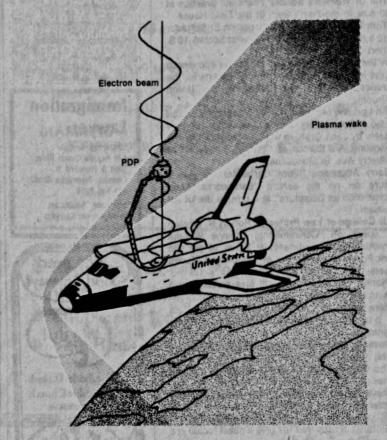

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration got a bargain on the satellite, which would cost about $20 million to produce commercially. The deal looks even better when one considers that, as Shawhan said, "two to two and one-half million dollars" went to cover university overhead and salaries for the people working on the project: 60-70 persons overall, 15 full-time workers now.

THE FIGURE also includes analysis of the data gathered by the PDP, a process that will probably last a year. Even so, $4.3 million seems like a lot. But it wasn't easy to get the PDP built for that amount.

The project "was negotiated at slightly less than $3 million four years ago. We decided with that money, we couldn't do the science we wanted to do. NASA put a lid on us," Shawhan said.

"So the instruments that are in See Shuttle, page 7

The Ul's Plasma Diagnostic Package will be picked up by the shuttle's 50-foot mechanical arm. The computer-controlled arm will move the PDP around the shuttle to make measurements of electronic "noise" produced by the shuttle, the plasma wake caused by the shuttle, and an electron beam emitted by another experiment.

Lethal gas convoy to reach city soon

More than 40 tons of lethal phosgene gas are scheduled to pass through Iowa - and Iowa City - today or Saturday as part of a continuing convoy of shipments over Interstate 80, but state officials said Thursday they are prepared for emergencies.

State Disaster Services Director Jack Crandall said the governor's office, the Iowa Department of Environmental Quality, the Iowa Department of Transportation and disaster services all were notified of the shipments in advance, as were authorities in communities along the route.

Iowa City and Johnson County officials said Thursday they were unaware of the shipments or that they had no comment.

"I wasn't aware of anything taking place until I read it in the newspaper this morning," said Doug Edmonds of the Johnson County Sheriff's Office.

Edmonds said he wasn't aware the sheriff's office had been notified. "We're presuming This story was written from reports by DI Staff Writer Elizabeth Zima and United Press International.

that the state has been contacted and the activity is pretty much in their hands.'

PATRICK J. McCARNEY, coordinator of the Johnson County Civil Defense Office, said he had no comment about the shipment. "I have no remarks about that."

Fifteen trucks hauling 135 tons of the gas already have passed through Iowa. State Patrol Capt. Loren Dykeman said the trucks, in convoys of three, were escorted by an unmarked van carrying military personnel.

He said the trucks were monitored by the State Patrol at several checkpoints along the route, which included urban areas such as Council Bluffs, Des Moines, Iowa City and

Dykeman said the first group of three entered the state last Friday and the latest convey made the trip Wednesday from the Denver Rocky Mountain Arsenal to a Lockport, N.Y., chemical plant where it will be conver-

"There was no cover-up," Hamlin said.

Processor to help county collect debts

By Kevin Cook

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors approved the county's 1982-83 fiscal year budget for publication and heard a report on the county's new policy for collecting delinquent ambulance bills at Thursday's formal

The board approved a $15.78 million county budget for fiscal year 1983. The next step in the budget process is a public hearing on the proposal, scheduled for March 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Sabin School, 509 S. Dubuque St.

John Bulkley, assistant county attorney, briefed the board on the recent implementation of a more strict bill collection policy.

The new policy was instituted in January and February of this year to aid the Johnson County Ambulance Service in collecting an estimated $40,000 in delinquent funds.

The ambulance service appeared before the supervisors last December and requested a change in collection agencies, but later that month J. Patrick White, assistant county attorney, told the board that the attorney's office could implement a stricter policy.

White said the new policy was made possible by the recent acquisition of a new wordprocessing machine.

BECAUSE OF the processor, Johnson County can mail more letters to patients with outstanding debts. It also helps the county to institute proceedings in small claims court. In December, ambulance service secretary unpaid each month. Using that estimate, Bulkley said Thursday that if the county could recover 25 percent of each month's unpaid accounts, it would recover about $7,500 per year. Excluding postage, labor and wear and tear on the county's word processor, Bulkley said that the new policy would cost the county about $4,000 per year, a cost he said the attorney's office believes it can "absorb."

Bulkley said the big advantage in seeking payment without the aid of a collection agency is that the county can keep 100 percent of the payment. Collection agencies take almost half of the payment, he said.

The ambulance service still sends certain cases, such as those involving wrong addresses and patients who have moved, to its collection agency.

So far, Bulkley said the county has completed its first mailing under the new system. Bulkley said that two patients out of 24 notified have squared their accounts thus far.

Eldridge's hearing sentence postponed

By Ed Conlow

The hearing to sentence Mark Eldridge, who pleaded guilty Feb. 12 to being an accessory after the fact in connection with the shooting death of Joylynn Carol Leslie, was postponed Thursday in Johnson County District Court.

According to court records: Eldridge's motion argued that the court cannot accept a guilty plea without determining that the crime had been committed. Eldridge, 24, pleaded guilty Feb. 12.

Records state that Eldridge aided Timothy Grube, 23, and Michele Enlow, 15, in disposing of Leslie's body after the Sept. 19, 1981, shooting in front of Bart's Place, 826 S. Clinton St.

The trial of Grube, charged with involuntary manslaughter, is set to begin Enlow is charged with being an ac-

After they arrived at the hospital, the Hansens were told to return home by a doctor, identified as Dr. Esprey in the suit. Upon returning home, the suit claims that the Hansens spent the night in a "distressed and agitated state ... fearful of delivering their expected child at home" A baby was delivered January 9.

Hunger series uncovers myths

By Jonathan Brandt Special to The Daily Iowan

In order to effectively deal with world poverty and hunger, people must overcome fear of change and cut through the myths surrounding these issues, according to Frances Moore Lappe, author of Diet for a Small Planet.

Lappe spoke on "The Politics of World Hunger" to a crowd of about 300 Wednesday night in Phillips Auditorium. Her talk was the first in a series of lectures on the world food crisis sponsored by the UI Global Studies Program.

Lappe said people are afraid to confront world hunger. "Most people fear that we have no answers because neither Capitalism nor Marxism have solved these problems." She said people also believe that trying to solve these problems will force them to change their lifestyles and sacrifice material comforts.

Four myths tend to perpetuate these fears, according to Lappe, the founder of the Institute for Food and Development Policy in San Francisco.

The first is that progress is being made in ending poverty and hunger problems. "Rather than progress, there's increasing misery," said the 38year-old mother of two. Programs within the United States and abroad aimed at reducing hunger and poverty are failing, she said.

LAPPE SAID ANOTHER myth is that hunger and poverty are inevitable. Most people believe these problems stem from natural scarcity, but she said they actually arise because of inequitable distribution of food and

The belief that U.S. aid to developing countries will solve these problems is the third myth, she said. Aid to foreign countries is intended to reach the "powerless through the powerful," decreasing the likelihood that the people who really need it will receive it. Lappe said foreign aid often harms the poor because much of it consists of military aid given for strategic purposes to repressive regimes, such as El

The final myth is that there are only two models of development -Capitalism and Marxism. She said there is a need to see beyond these stereotypes to find approaches that have worked, regardless of their doctrinal background.

Lappe criticized this country's market economy because it fails to provide important information about the human and natural-resource costs of production. For example, Lappe said that although the United States profits from grain exports, it simultaneously suffers an alarming loss of topsoil - a fact that is not reflected in the price of the grain.

LAPPE ALSO CRITICIZED Americans for their aversion to planning, which she said is frequently equated with Communism. "The queston is not whether we should plan but who should do the planning." She the planning that directly affects lives. but without much input.

Lappe spoke about her recent 10-day trip to Nicaragua in a Thursday morning lecture at the International Center in the Jefferson Building. She said the American press emphasizes Cuba's influence in Nicaragua, and focuses on charges that the Nicaraguans are supplying Salvadoran guerrillas with

But the press has failed to report advances made in that country since the overthrow of the Somoza government, she said. Nicaraguans are almost totally self-sufficient in food production, and some peasants now own land of their own, Lappe said. The government's literacy program has also been relatively successful.

Lappe said she uses the "followyour-nose approach" to research, and urged people to educate themselves on many topics. "As long as we don't understand the world, we will be its "I have 17 reasons why H&R Block should prepare vour taxes.

What a waste

It would be monotonous if it wasn't so tragic. The list of names prominent in popular culture whose primary appeal was to the young and who died from drug overdoses continues to grow and grow. Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix, Jim Morrison, and now John

And it's all so senseless. These events have taken on an air of inevitability and have become inextricably linked in some minds with certain forms of entertainment and entertainers - this just gives those who have arrogated to themselves the roles of cultural censors and moral guardians greater validity. Dangerous, potentially lethal drugs have developed a glamor, even an allure, that bespeaks the good life. Indeed, speaking against drug use often draws the same angry, self-interested response from certain factions of the left that speaking for handgun control draws from certain factions of the right.

Something has gone terribly wrong. Such people as Hendrix and Belushi, who some look to to give their lives greater meaning, can themselves give meaning to their lives only by thoroughly numbing and poisoning themselves. It is a profound tragedy that those whose gifts are so great ultimately destroy themselves when those gifts are recognized and rewarded. They deserve better ... as do

Covert operations

This week the media reported that the Reagan administration has authorized covert CIA operations to destabilize the government in Nicaragua. The administration refuses to comment on the reports, but it attempts to justify action against Nicaragua by accusing it of an unnecessary military build-up, the presence of Cuban advisers and aiding the rebels in El Salvador. The administration's arguments are far from persuasive.

First, Nicaragua has reason to be fearful of the potential for U.S. intervention. The United States has a long and dishonorable history of both covert and overt meddling in Latin America. Former President Lyndon Johnson sent U.S. troops to the Dominican Republic and former President Richard Nixon's CIA was involved in covert operations that led to the military overthrow of a democratically elected government in Chile and its replacement with a group of friendly right-wing generals.

Second, any government has the right to ask for aid from any government it wishes. The request may be stupid and the request may be rejected, but a government has the right to ask. Nicaragua is foolish to ask the Cubans and the Russians for aid, but it is within its rights as a sovereign country to do so. El Salvador has the right to ask the United States for military aid, although we are

Third, although there is far from solid proof that Nicaragua is giving much aid to the rebels in El Salvador, such actions would be no different from the actions of the United States in supporting dictators who control a government that lacks popular support. For the United States to complain about foreign involvement in any Latin American country is, with its history, hypocritical.

The Reagan administration thinks that the United States has some right to decide which Latin American governments are acceptable, and therefore may be permitted to stay in power, and which are unacceptable, and may therefore be overthrown with impunity. Each country has an inalienable right to work out for itself, by peaceful or non-peaceful means, the government that it will have.

E.P.A. bookburning

The head of the Environmental Protection Agency, Anne Gorsuch, has ordered her agency and its branch offices to do some early spring cleaning. It started last fall, and among the items to be discarded are tons of EPA publications.

Top officials contend the review of EPA publications is intended to weed out obsolete information, but one EPA worker said, "these things are being tossed out because they do not reflect the Reagan administration's thinking." Many of the banned pamphlets were published as recently as 1980 or after.

The verboten literature deals with subjects such as pesticides, toxic substances, air and water quality and acid rain. Much of it contains quotes from former Carter administration officials, and many of the booklets identify industries as polluters.

Some of the information will be sent to state agencies that request it, but much of it will simply be destroyed. Retired EPA official Thomas Williams said that "at one point last fall, they sent 81 tons of publications to the dump."

The environmental book burning, as the action has been called, is one of several steps to shut off the flow of information from EPA. Williams said the agency's Office of Public Awareness was cut from a staff of 70 to a staff of 17. "The most serious thing they're doing is closing the windows to the public," he said.

The Reagan administration's antipathy towards environmental laws and regulations is well known, and Gorsuch's anti-regulation actions have landed her in front of more than one angry Congressional committee. The purging of EPA literature is an outrage, but one that only compounds the outrage of putting antigovernment, anti-regulation ideologues in charge of vital regulatory agencies.

The Daily Iowan invited each of the UI Student Senate campaign slates to submit a brief article explaining the issues that they feel will be most important for the senate to address in the coming year, how their goals can be implemented and to explain why they think they deserve to be elected. The articles appear below

Ul Student Senate slates for 1982 race

The Representative Party

Focus on the state legislature

vance student interests. However, the senate does little to advance these interests by embroiling itself in national party politics. The Representative Party will focus its efforts on advancing student interests and will fund political action groups to voice student concerns regarding national issues.

The Representative Party believes that no matter what the political persuasion of Iowa's congressional delegation, the adversarial relationship that presently exists does little to advance student interests. A relationship founded in mutual respect would be a better approach. To gain this respect, the Representative Party will communicate constantly with Iowa's congressmen rather than relying upon sporadic single criticism.

While federal financial aid cuts restrict the availability of education, we must not lose sight of the devastating effect that state cuts have on the quality of education. State cuts have resulted in the flight of professors, overcrowded classrooms, and inadequate facilities.

HOWEVER, the co-chairman of the State Educational Committee has been quoted as saying that if there was a serious threat to the university, students would be writing. The Representative Party thinks it is time to redirect the pen toward the Iowa Legislature. With the UI student body representing each and every state legislative district, we can affect every legislator through a grass roots letterwriting campaign

The importance of the minority voice in senate should not be overlooked. The to senate the diversity necessary to ad-

Representative Party provides for diversity of thought by representing a variety of political ideologies. While the United Progressive Party has minority candidates represented on its slate, the party fails to provide diversity of opinion. United Progressive has mentioned in its platform a "superior record" of supporting liberal candidates. However, this superior record of solely liberal support fails to represent the large diversity of political thought that exists on this campus. The Representative slate embodies this

OUR PARTY further enables representation of the minority by not running a full slate. With a total of 30 senate seats a party like Representative, with only 19 candidates, cannot possibly polarize the senate. Students must not lose sight of the fact that two of the 30 senate seats are reserved exclusively for minority students.

The Representative Party will bring Representative supports the develop ment of KRUI into a viable studen radio station that is able to reach the entire student body. To increase safety on campus, we advocate making "Whistlestop" a perpetual community program and seeking funds for improved street lighting. Maintaining a Cambus that does not charge a fare and a viable Daycare Service are of paramount importance to the vance the student interest.

Representative Party

Senate should serve as a liaison between students and the new UI administration. The Representative Party will strengthen senate's relationship with other student government organizations such as Associated Residence Halls, Collegiate Associations Council, Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils and the National Panhellenic Council.

Rather than preserving the status quo, vote Representative on March 16 to initiate a positive change.

The United Progressive Party

Experience to protect your needs

Upcoming choices in Washington and Des Moines will have a big impact on the UI. Conservative special-interest group pressure in decisions about financial aid, faculty salaries and tuition hikes cannot be ignored — it must be countered by pressure from the UI Student Senate to prevent your interests from being further undermined. That requires a senate whose dedication to progressive goals and whose experience in working toward them is unquestionable.

motivate students to take a more active role in the political process; increase the size and productivity of the senate State Relations Committee to one-third of the senate and thus increase the capacity of the senate to respond to state and federal issues: work more closely with the Faculty Senate Governmental Relations Subcommittee; continue efforts of United Progressive Senators to develop a State Student Association; coordinate and expand campus voter registration for the fall elections in order to organize and improve efforts to exert political influence.

better lighting near the Main Library, Pentacrest, and for the creation of 'light corridors' as well-lighted, wellpoliced and well-publicized routes for safer pedestrian travel at night.

The make-up of the UI central administration is changing. These changes affect the future of the UI. For key positions opening in the near future, the search committees must include student representatives with full voting participation. To fill the gap between existing channels for the protection of student rights and awareness of those channels, the Rights Line is an essential part of what the senate should do to serve you and we will work to revive this service to full effectiveness

The administration and the student government of the UI have been forerunners in the advancement of the rights of women and minorities through a commitment to affirmative action beyond the legal obligation and now is no time to retreat.

ONE GREAT accomplishment of recent senates was the creation of the ters essential to the education of student parents. But it was a stop-gap measure to ensure a safe future for daycares. The senate must work toward increased administration awareness of the need for official recognition of the daycares as UI ser-

The UI student body is made up of individuals from diverse backgrounds pursuing a diverse interests and activities. Such a student body can only be truly represented by an equally broad and experienced senate, a senate in which diversity and representation of minority students is more than a campaign promise. Our membership proves we are the only truly representative slate.

Vote United Progressive on March 16 for complete and committed representation for a critical year.

The Wasn't-That-a Party

Senate's record not good

At the present time, there are 10 senators seeking re-election to the UI Student Senate, five of them on the Representative Party slate and five on United Progressive Party slate. They claim that their past experience sets them apart from the Wasn't-That-a Party. They talk about their past experience at obtaining federal and state funds for the UI, their experience at providing security to reduce sexual assaults around campus, their experience at obtaining increased lighting on the campus' East Side, and finally their experience at maintaining Cambus service with additional

I ask you to think back to last year when the present senate ran another election with the promises of increased funding for the UI, increased measures to prevent sexual assaults on campus. increased East Side lighting and more funds for Cambus. Wow, look at all the experience these people have gotten. Why they are almost as effective as the Reagan administration when it comes to keeping promises. I am glad that they have pointed out their capabilities, or the lack of them.

TURNING TO THE platforms, we once again are faced with the same old problems. Every slate has touched on the issue of increasing state and federal funds, but how are they going to do this? Wasn't-That-a has decided to take two different approaches. First, we plan to revise the State Relations Committee and have it serve as a solicitation group for the UI. This will take considerable time for its members so maybe 10 senators should not be on this committee, as some groups elsewhere. Second, we feel that the value of a professional lobbyist should be looked into — if profitable the UI should hire one.

Every slate wants increased lighting, but how is this to be done. Wasn't-That-a will pressure Iowa City to supply it. The city is responsible for protecting its people. It is the people of the UI that make this town what it is. The issue of Group funding can not be properly addressed by any slate since we have no figures to work with. However we will give every group that does not receive funds a clear written explanation of the reason and each will have the chance to appeal this decision.

DIVERSITY of slates is always an issue and one that Wasn't-That-a has handled well. We feel that a slate composed of 27 people all focusing in on the same ideas, the same interest, and the same beliefs are not what most people would call diverse. If elected Wasn't-That-a would be a minority in the in the March 16 senate elections.

senate, we are openly accepting numerous positions on the senate to be filled by people who have other ideas and views. We have not forgotten the minority students but instead have made ourselves a minority to better service the entire needs of the UI not

Some have also complained about the number of freshmen on our dorm seats. Well since there are primarily freshmen and sophomores living in the dorms, only freshmen and sophomores should serve as representatives - not juniors or seniors. How can a junior who has not lived in Burge for the last two years relate to the 24 hour lock-up policy? We feel that such a policy should not be forced on the students. Both slates have refused to address this policy and the present senate failed to act on the issue

Look at the issues, past performance, and accomplishments of the slates and then look at how they plan to solve the problems at the UI and vote

Acclaimed cartoonist to speak at Ul

By Nancy Lonergan

Paul Conrad, 1950 UI graduate and Pulitzer Prize-winning editorial cartoonist, prods politically apathetic Americans.

"I try to influence them," Conrad said. "If they disagree with me, at least that way they will have to take another look."

Conrad's cartooning career began during his freshman year at Iowa State University. But the lure of the UI Art Department prompted the art major to transfer, and he began cartooning in earnest at The Daily lowan during his junior year. "Charles Carroll, the editor, was a friend of mine from Des Moines ... and he asked me to work for the DI," Conrad said.

While drawing had been a "natural" constant in his life, Conrad was unsure of his artistic future until he began working regularly

"I had no idea what I was going to do," he said. "I started doing them (cartoons) and stayed with it.'

Drawing for the DI "was a hell of a lot of work," along with classes and playing in a five piece combo, the Cedar Rapids native

BUT THAT WORK paid off when Conrad landed his first cartooning job with The Den-

By working for the DI, "I had something to send out. It was a chance to show what I could

The Denver Post liked what they saw, and hired Conrad after his graduation. He remained in Denver for 13 years. He then moved on to The Los Angeles Times and garnered Pulitzer Prizes in 1964 and 1971. Conrad was also included on the list of Nixon's enemies in 1973, which "elated (me) at first.

Then I was angry at the mentality behind it." That "was a very sick time," he said.

But the present political climate also troubles Conrad.

You know something is wrong with the political system "when your choice is between Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter," he said. "Good candidates just don't come Ineffective regulation of campaign contributions that allow large companies to financially influence the electoral process may be part of the problem, he said.

The American voters are also to blame. 'People don't read," he said. "Maybe they get what they deserve."

Given the nature of politics, Conrad predicts he won't run out of politicians or issues to criticize for a long time.

HE ALSO SAID that he will continue to criticize regardless of the political affiliations of his targets. "I criticize wherever it is called for.'

And the public listens.

"Any readership poll points out that (editorial) cartoons are 10-20 times as effective" as written editorials, he said.

But possessing that much influence does not make Conrad uneasy.

"I just do what has to be done, whether anyone agrees or not," he said. "I think I've been able to speak for the common man who has no voice and I think I do it effectively.'

Coming up with criticisms that are both biting and funny isn't always easy. I just have to "keep reading and ... hammering away," he said. In the future, Conrad will hammer out more than just ideas. "I'm not going to be doing this forever. When I quit (cartooning) I'm sure I'll be sculpting," he said.

Conrad has exhibited numerous bronze sculptures in the Los Angeles County Museum

Conrad will speak at the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication's Fourth Estate Banquet at 8 tonight.

Mecca jubilee a week of 'mad insanity'

By Karen Herzog

The Mecca jubilee - a celebration that traditionally pits College of Engineering students against College of Law students and termed "mad insanity" by one participant may endure this year's celebration without the law students.

They have decided to stay on their own side of the Iowa River, according to junior law student Kirk Hartung

The law students' diminished interest might lead some to believe that they have admitted defeat in the rivalry between the two

"Apparently the law students have conceded the fact that St. Patrick is the patron saint of the engineers and not of the law profession," said Karol Sole, a UI senior engineering student.

Such is not the case, Hartung said. "The law students haven't conceded anything. When you're a graduate student, you don't have as much free time to do crazy things," he explained.

of interest, Hartung said. "I don't think 95 percent of the law students even know who St.

MECCA, sponsored by Associated Students of Engineering, is a week-long friendly competition with a history of mischievous plots against the law college. The name is an acronym for divisions within the College of Engineering - mechanical, electrical, chemical, civil and agricultural.

Cynthia Kraushaar, a UI senior engineering student, said she doesn't expect the students to veil the gold dome of Old Capitol with dyed green sheets again, as they did in the 1950s. But no one knows for sure what master plot may be added to the legend of Mecca week. "There's been talk, but we'll have to wait and see because a lot of this tends to be spontaneous," she said. Mecca Week officially began Wednesday night at a downtown bar, the Copper Dollar, but the main events are yet to come. Becky Lance, co-chair of the Mecca ball and banquet, said the St. Patrick and Mecca queen tiThursday night.

Today at high noon, a tradition that began in 1910 with a stone called the engineer's Blarney Stone will continue. When the graduate students of the College of Engineering present the undergraduate students with a list of clues to the location of the Blarney Stone, a hunt that has been termed "absolutely insane" by more than one of its participants, will begin.

THE SEARCH will be for a replica, since the original stone was washed away in 1947 when an enterprising graduating class buried it too near the Iowa River.

A bar marathon that involves running a route through five bars and drinking a beer at each stop will begin at 6:30 Monday night, according to Laurie Lambrecht, a UI senior engineering student.

Hartung said the College of Law will send a team for the bar marathon, and a few students will also attend the next event.

This event, the climax of Mecca Week, begins when the doors of Maxwell's open at 7

plete with green beer. The Blarney Stone will be returned, and live entertainment will feature sarcastic skits, bizarre contests and bar marathon awards. "Favorite" professors will be given "purple shaft awards," - on the order of booby prizes - some wired for sound

IN ADDITION to the traditional beardgrowing and legs contests that will be judged Monday, a Kiss-a-Pig contest has been added

The contestant whose sponsor collects the most money for the Mecca fund will have the coveted honor of kissing a 30 pound pig, "on the snout, I assume," Kaushaar said.

Professors are told to avoid giving exams during the week, "or anything that could prevent a student from maximizing fun and fluids," said Julie Nelson, a senior engineer-

Michelle Hoyt wore a sign saying she was disabled and her friends laughed at her and made jokes about the handicapped.

Other UI students and faculty who participated in the Handicap Awareness Day also experienced attitudinal barriers the disabled

The day "was an attempt to give the public a better understanding of the handicapped," said Sharon Van Meter, coordinator for the Office of Services for the Handicapped.

The 50 participants wore signs on their acks naming a disability; the flip side of the sign described it. People were supposed to read the sign and be curious enough to flip it over, she said.

ALL THE PARTICIPANTS said they learned about attitudinal barriers toward the handicapped, and all said at least one person responded to their sign.

Denise Bargman said, "People are afraid to ask you what's wrong." She said she overheard two men talking and telling each other to ask her why she was wearing a sign.

Hoyt found attitudinal barriers in her friends, where she least expected them. They kept making lokes. They couldn't understand why I'd be doing this," she said.

"When I left this morning I wanted to take the sign off," another participant, Becky Fortune, said. "But then I remembered a handicap couldn't hide," she said.

Ray Manning, a vocational rehabilitation counselor for the UI, wore a "deaf" sign. In a bookstore, he convinced the saleswoman he was deaf and she became flustered and talked to him in a loud and distinct voice, he said.

Some people were offended by the signs. A man said "'My grandmother has arthritis, but she doesn't advertise it.' I was really embarassed, said Neva Rettig

Luis Vasquez wore his sign for only five minutes before a woman told him she was offended by it. She had a granddaughter with epilepsy, he said.

Van Meter said she was pleased with the day. "People learned things. I just hope it wasn't negative learning.'

'Mummy' identified as ancestral Indian

By Mary Schuver

After preliminary studies, A.K. Fisher, physical anthropologist with the Office of the State Archaeologist, has determined that a "mummy found last month in Cedar Rapids was probably a male, about five feet tall, 35 years of age at time of death, and possibly belonging to an Indian group living in the southwestern United States about 1,000 years ago.

The details were acquired on the basis of measurements of the cranium, said Duane Anderson. Iowa's state archaeologist. The mummified remains appear to be similar to those of the basketmakers, the early ancestors of the Pueblo Indians, according to a news release from the archaeologist's office.

The remains were discovered in a Cedar Rapids garage belonging to former carnival owners Feb. 27, and brought to the Office of the State Archaeologist in Iowa City March 5 for

The mummified remains, which are not wrapped in cloth as rumors reported, are composed of preserved bones and soft tissue and is arranged in a fetal position. The remains were believed to have been from the southwestern part of the country, because dryer climates preserve bones

THE REMAINS are about 80 percent intact. Stretched out, the remains could be more than four feet long, officials said earlier this week.

Indian groups from around the state have voiced their concern that the remains be given a proper Indian burial. Anderson traveled Thursday to western Iowa to attend a meeting of the Indian Advisory Committee, which is an advisory branch to the state archaeologist's office, on the issue of the remains, according to the office's associate director Joseph Tiffany.

Anderson said earlier this week he felt the local media have not realized the sensitivity of dealing with the human remains

Anderson said that if the body's place of origin can be determined, the remains will be turned over to the jurisdiction of that state. The Cedar Rapids Police Department said it has closed the case, and future responsibility belongs to the state archaeologist's office until accurate jursidiction can be determined. The state archaeologist's office is still investigating the remains' place of origin, Tiffany said.

Pasquale escaped from the house and decided not to pledge. The other pledge involved did join the fraternity.

Kappa Sigma will have to make a formal apology to Pasquale, will be ineligible to receive awards at a campus festival, and any interaction between the chapter and other fraternities or sororites will be discouraged, according to Steven Pearson, judicial adminstrator for the Interfraternity

Some of those pre-owned instruments came from overseas, others were put together from leftovers from previous projects

'We, for instance, have one instrument in here that was built for the German spacecraft called Helios. The way we got it was to send somebody into the Deutsches Museum in Munich and take it out of the back-up spacecraft,"

Abortions

Hospitals was 13 abortions for every 1,000 Johnson County women, according to Charles deProsse, an associate professor in UI Hospitals' Obstetrics and Gynecology Depart-

UI Hospitals performed 331 abortions for Johnson County women during fiscal year 1980-81. Figures for the number in Iowa City alone were not available.

Arbogast said 66 percent of the women who received abortions at the Goldman clinic in calendar year 1981 were from out of town.

The Goldman clinic reported 970 abortions in calendar year 1980 and 994 abortions in 1981. UI Hospitals reported 2,397 abortions in calendar year 1980 and 2,144 abortions in 1981.

Together, the two clinics performed approximately 3,367 abortions during 0, just over one-third of the 9,280 abortions performed in the state during that calendar year.

Despite local concerns that the institute's abortion figures create a false impression, Murray defended the institute's rates saying that they were meant only to indicate the "occurrence" of abortions in the community, and that an abortion "residence" rate showing the number of area women who had an abortion in 1980 is impossible for the institute to compute on an annual basis

What the institute's figures do show is that abortion services are maldistributed throughout the state and women are forced to travel to Iowa City because they cannot receive an abortion in their own communities,

A 1978 SURVEY by the Guttmacher Institute shows that 57 percent of Iowa women aged 15-44 live in counties where abortion services are not

Arbogast and deProsse said the two Iowa City clinics serve women from the eastern Iowa area whose hometown hospitals and doctors either refuse to or are unable to perform

A 1980 Guttmacher Institute report shows that 772 abortions were reported as needed by women in Dubuque in 1981, but none were reported performed. Davenport women reported needing 3,014 abortions but only 10 were reported performed. Waterloo women reported needing 1,310 abortions but only 341 were reported performed while Cedar Rapids women reported needing 1,412 abortions but only 250 were performed. The Guttmacher report did not include an abortion needs analysis for Iowa City.

Nationwide, 1.55 million abortions were performed in 1980, which means that approximately one-fourth of all 1980 pregnancies were aborted

Decision

Senate President Tim Dickson indicated Wednesday that he knew the court's decision before it had been officially released.

"I'm pleased with the decision, I'm pleased with the professional attitude of the court, and I've always felt that the court should have dismissed the case in the first place because it's nonjusticiable," he said Wednesday. "The court has sustained the senate's decision not to fund Right to Life. The court found the senate's actions were justified, and the procedures were fair and responsible to all student organiza-

But Jeff Renander, a third year law student representing RTL also said Thursday night, "At 6 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) evening, Right to Life members were told by Tim Dickson that the Student Judicial Court had decided in favor of the student senate by a vote of three to one."

Judy Reed, Right to Life president, said Wednesday after talking with Dickson: "We're surprised that the Roberts said Thursday night that court came to the decision it did. I think I can safely say we will appeal it,

'Echoi' employs a quartet of The afternoon concert by the UI Cenclarinet, cello, piano and percussion and taxes it to the limit of its sonic capabilities. The evening concert of the UI Symphony in Hancher, conducted by Foss, continued in the same vein, but with greatly enhanced coloristic values. The Salomon Rossi suite was easily digestible but made no particular impact save for the lovely timpani-harp duet.

The musical realization of Kafka's marginal madness was perfect, with schizophrenic orchestral groupings and alternately sung and spoken soprano lines.

'One Man' Johnson, Akasha; local favorites back in town

A lot of homecomings in the bars this weekend. Perhaps the most interesting musician in town is Robert Johnson, who plays tonight and tomorrow at The Sanctuary. His performances are certainly not rare in these parts - for a while he was a one-nighta-week staple - but they deserve a look.

Johnson is a bit of an enigma: a folkie bopper of serious intent masquerading a bit as a freak show. Robert "One Man" Johnson sits himself down amid his foot piano and trap symbol and the other uniden-tifiable esoterica of his trade.

All of the equipment and one-man-band theme may serve as an initial draw to many - it is intersting to see someone do so much at the same time - but Johnson's music and personality are what keep the people coming back. Johnson is a real musician with records, fans and publication contracts. He is very much cut of the cloth of the Midwestern folksinger: an unpretentiously friendly type who'll wander from table to table to say hello and knows the bartenders as well as they know him. Personality is required of folksingers because folksingers play in little tiny places like the Sanctuary where the stage is more like a continuation of the table tops than anything to protect and isolate the performer.

Anyway, Robert "One-Man" Johnson makes his move to the big-time tonight. He's out of the Thursday night slot and in on a weekend. It doesn't cost anything to get in and he'll be a lot of fun.

Judging from the crowds, Maxwell's has been having all week, it comes as no news to anyone that Akasha is back in town. While everyone else was out relaxing over the Christmas holiday, Akasha was going through some sort of mystical transformation. They're still the same band playing the same kind of music, but now they aren't meandering from bar date to bar date, they're "touring." This is being

@ the TAVERN OPEN Noon - 2 am Mon. thru Sat.

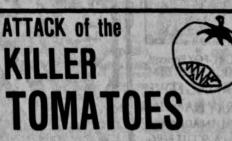

Night life

Remember when they were here every other week? They were just a bar-band then.

Also reappearing are The Ones. From Muscatine to the Crow's Nest, The One's have proven themselves a powerfully tight outfit. Their three-manband format wears a bit thin sometimes but they make up for it in raw energy. Rob Gal may be about the best rock guitarist to pass through this area

The Ones suffer a bit from lack of identity; to some they seem like a punk band, to serious punkers just another bunch of hard rockers with fashionable haircuts. The truth lies somewhere in between, but it's not their fault people have to classify everything.

lowa cagers lose to Cyclones

The Iowa women's basketball team, plagued by 25 percent shooting in the second half, fell to Iowa State, 64 - 52, last night at Warrensburg, Mo. The loss eliminated the Hawkeyes from the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Region VI tourna-

Iowa led, 33 -28, at halftime, but its poor shooting combined with a 52 percent second half for Iowa State spelled doom for the Hawkeyes. "Things tur-ned around at the beginning of the second half," said Iowa Head Coach Judy McMullen. "(Julie) Leseman played unbelievable basketball (for Iowa State) going 10-for-13 from the field and pulling down nine rebounds."

Iowa State goes on to play Big Ten champion Minnesota. The Cyclones beat the Gophers earlier in the season. Iowa ended the season at 8-17. Iowa State improved to its record to 10 - 19.

Squash tourney at Field House

The Iowa Field House will be the site of a squash tournament this weekend, with action beginning at 4:30 today.

Mallard Owen, a graduate student in exercise physiology, is probably one of the top regional entries in the threeday affair. As an undergraduate at Trinity College, Owen finished 10th in the NCAA championship. Last year he won the Iowa state tournament. Another player who has a shot at winning the event is Mohamed Nagib, the 1980 Iowa champ.

The UI's only squash court is No. 11, and competition will run there Friday until 10:30 p.m. and all day and night Saturday. The finals are set for Sunday

Hawkeyes at NCAA indoor meet

By Thomas W. Jargo

All three major universities in Iowa will be represented at this year's NCAA national indoor track meet Friday and Saturday at the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich.

Iowa will have four in the national meet. Iowa State will be sending nine and Drake will enter a pair.

For the Hawkeyes, freshman Paul Chepkwony will be entered in the 600-yard run. He qualified for the event at the Illini Classic in Champaign, Ill., on Feb. 27. His qualifying time was one minute, 10.44 se-

CHEPKWONY WILL combine his talents with sophomores Terrence Duckett, Victor Greer and freshman Treye Jackson in the mile relay. This team qualified for the national meet last weekend at the Big Ten indoor championships with a time of 3:14.05. This is the first national meet for

The Cyclones are also sending their mile relay team of Todd Holm, Justin Nemec, Sunday Uti and Kevin Kuchel to the national meet. Their qualifying time of 3:14.01 is just four-one-hundreths of a second faster than the Hawkeyes'.

Individually, Uti will be entered in the 440-yard dash. Other individual qualifiers for the Cyclones are Bob Verbeeck, Yobes Ondieki, Richard Kaitany, Joseph Kipsang and James Moi.

Ondieki has qualified in both the one and three-mile runs. Verbeeck joins Ondieki in the mile, and Kaitany and Kipsang will join him in the three-mile event. Moi will be entered in the triple jump. Kaitany is the only

Cyclone to ever participate at the indoor meet before.

IOWA STATE HEAD Coach Bill Bergan says this could be the best showing at the national meet by the Cyclones in the school's history. "We've never qualified The Daily lowan recommends the you investigate every phase of investment opportunities. "The most we've ever taken to the NCAA indoor meet in the past was five, so you can see the improvement."

Representing the Drake Bulldogs this year are Chris Mares and Mike Jorgensen. Mares will be entered in the 1,000-yard run He finished seventh in that event last year, earning him All-American honors. Jorgensen is making his first trip to the national meet and will run in the 440-yard run. He won the Missouri Valley Conference title this year in that event.

The status of Iowa's No. 1 singles player, Dan Rustin, for this weekend's quadrangular meet was the most pressing thing on the mind of Iowa Tennis Coach Steve Houghton as he evaluated his line-up.

"Dan injured his shoulder last weekend and he is going to see the doctor today (Thursday)," Houghton said. "Right now I'd say it is doubtful that Dan would play. If that is the case, Mike Inman would play No.

Hawkeyes troubled by floor in NCAAs

By Melissa Isaacson

PULLMAN, Wash. - As the Iowa Hawkeyes and the Northeast Louisiana Indians revved up for their first-round game tonight in the NCAA western regional, the subject on the floor was just that - the floor.

The Friel Court, on which the game will be played, is a tartan surface, not known for its positive effects on ankles

The Iowa Field House used to have a tartan court before a hardwood floor was put in two years ago. Perhaps the Hawkeye who felt the difference most was Mark Gannon. The 6-foot-7 junior forward lasted half the practice Thursday before a sore ankle forced him to Iowa Head Coach Lute Olson said: "The ankle stiffened up on him (Gannon) so we'll go with (Greg) Stokes, (Kevin) Boyle, and (Michael) Payne in the front court and Kenny Arnold and Bobby Hansen at the guards. (Steve) Carfino will come off the bench as much if not more than the other starters.

THE COURT DID NOT seem to bother the Indians. Head Coach Mike Vining said he was just happy to reach the NCAA tournament. "If Iowa takes us extra lightly, it will be a plus for us. We have a tartan floor at Northeast so they (the Indians) don't know any better. We like it."

Olson cited the shooting of Indian forwards Donald Wilson, Gerald Morris and Terry Martin as Northeast's biggest strength. "They also go to the offensive glass very well," Olson said.

Asked by a reporter if Iowa has lost momentum due to five losses in its last seven games. Olson said that due to "extenuating circumstances" he didn't count the Purque game as a loss.

Vining's concerns for tonight's game are many. "I'm concerned they will come out and put so much pressure on us that we'll get behind early. I've readabout them and their great defense. They come at you for 40 minutes," he said. "We don't think they have great outside shooting. They're very patient and they work for the shot they want. I doubt if we'll pressure them into making many mistakes.'

When both coaches were asked how well exposed they were to the other teams in the country, they had very different responses

"With cable television the way it is," Olson said, "we know what our opponents are doing better than what we're Vining, however, admitted that he had only seen "portions of one Iowa game. We were laving around the hotel after one of our games and there was nothing else to watch so we saw Iowa's preliminary round was marked by controversy. The Hawkeyes Dave Fitzgerald at 167pounds was awarded a questionable 7-6 and scorer ruled Fitzgerald had indeed win over Air Forces' Dale Walters.

lowa's baseball opener at Kansas State

By Matt Gallo

While snow and basketball are on the minds of most Iowa City residents, the Hawkeye baseball team is preparing for its season opener Friday in the warm environs of Manhattan, Kan.

The Hawks open their 1982 campaign with six games this weekend at Kansas State University. It marks the beginning of a two-month, 68-game season that Head Coach Duane Banks and his team hope will be a banner year.

third-place, 8-6 Big Ten record and 44-21 overall mark. Many of the nonconference wins came against much smaller schools, but Banks defended their schedule. "We don't have any choice about playing the small schools. There just aren't many big schools around and we can't be taking the kids out of classes for long road trips. Besides, some of the small schools are Iowa State Baseball Coach Larry Corrigan agrees. "I can't criticize their (Iowa's) schedule. I think you have to have a schedule conducive to

DI chart by Howard Hess/Source: NCAA

WHEN ASKED to compare Big Eight and Big Ten baseball, Corrigan opted for his own conference, pointing out Oklahoma State's second-place national finish last year. "The Big Eight is better than the Big Ten, Corrigan said. "There's no doubt. We've played 11 of last year's top 20 in the past three years, so obviously we've played a tougher schedule."

An experienced pitching corps should be the strong point of this year's Hawk team, Banks said, but noted that he really doesn't see any uncorrectable

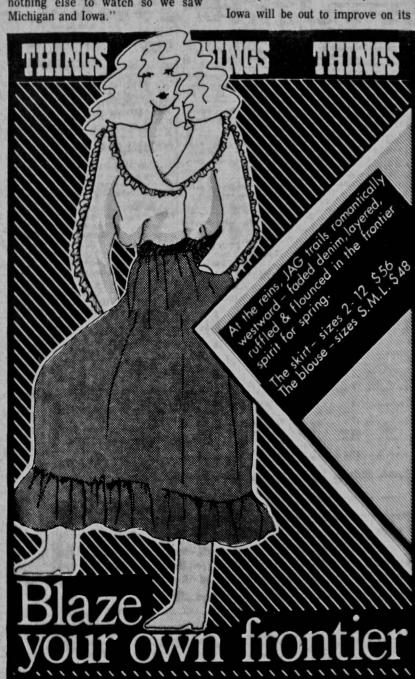

"I think we'll be a very good, veteran team. Pitching is our strength," Banks said. "Defense will be our only problem early, because we haven't practiced outside yet this year. But it can be corrected.'

The pitching staff will be led by five seniors, with Bill Drambel, 8-2 last year, heading the list. The other senior pitchers and their records last year include: Mark Radosevich, 6-3; Jeff Green, 6-3; Randy Norton, 4-1; and

Erin Janss, 7-3. "The leadership on this team should catcher Dick Turelli," Banks said. "It's nice to have seniors, which is something we haven't had for a while."

CORRIGAN, whose Cyclones beat Iowa four times last year, is skeptical over how the Hawks last season's top two players - Ed Garton and Tony Burley - who were drafted by professional baseball teams.

"They (Iowa) seem to think pitching is their strength and they have to feel pretty confident," he said. "Dick See Hawks, page 10
