Aspin: Selective Service goofed

half the 183 young men threatened with prosecution for failing to register for the draft were not first contacted by the Selective Service System telling them they must register, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Sunday.

Aspin, in a statement, said he had asked the Selective Service System for a breakdown of how the names of the 183 nonregistrants, expected to be targeted for prosecution, were

He said when he asked for a breakdown, "I was astounded. We had been led to believe these were all flagrant violators men who had thumbed their noses at the law and publicly declared that they would not

Selective Service has estimated that 927,000 young men have failed to register since draft registration was reinstated by President Jimmy Carter.

Of those, Selective Service has turned over to the Justice Department for possible prosecution a list of 183 names. Prosecutions were expected to begin late last year but were delayed because President Reagan, who campaigned against draft registration, did not decide until early January that he would continue the program. Non-registrants were given a grace period until Feb. 28 to register.

CURRENTLY, non-registrants face felony prosecution and, if found guilty, a maximum $10,000 fine and five years in jail. Aspin is sponsoring legislation to reduce the penalties to a maximum $200 fine.

Aspin said the breakdown of the 183 names showed that:

• 22 were sent certified letters telling them of the requirement to register and wrote to the Selective Service System declaring their refusal to register.

• 72 signed certified letters, but neither registered nor replied.

• 55 letters could not be delivered and were returned to the draft agency.

• 32 letters were not sent because the Selective Service did not have sufficient addresses. • One letter was lost in the

• One letter recipient turned out to be too old and Selective Service has told the the Justice Department to delete his name from the list.

Nicaragua expecting U.S. attack

Washington said Sunday his Central American country expects "at any moment" to come under "a military atited States.' 'Newsmaker Sunday' program, said forces aided by the U.S. are gathering for action against his country, which he said has prepared military plans "to go in combat in any emergency.'

EPA cuts blamed on Reagan's policies

By Scott Sonner

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has cut the number of informational booklets it publishes by 75 percent to meet federal budget cuts, according to EPA officials.

And EPA district offices are disposing of their copies of the canceled booklets - which address such things as the dangers of air, water and noise pollution and were discontinued because they are outdated and redundant, EPA officials said Thursday.

But a National Audubon Society official said Thursday the elimination of most of the publications is based on the Reagan administration's stand on environmental protection.

Some of the discontinued pamphlets were printed as recently as 1980 and there are no plans to replace any of the literature, said Bob Boardman, editor of the society's environmental newsletengine of a young farmer who spins the wheels of his pickup as he goes by. The town had four bars, four grocery stores and two schools when Daniel arrived in Riverside 24 years ago. But the residents now shop in Iowa City. "If I had it to do over again, I'd never retire in a small town like this," Daniel says.

Off-campus housing rates soaring

UI students who will be paying more for tuition, books and other living expenses next fall can expect to pay more for off-campus housing as well.

The average monthly rent for various types of off-campus housing in the Iowa City and Coralville areas has increased an estimated $15 to $30 as compared with rents in August 1981, according to February estimates by the UI Housing Clearinghouse in the U-

Bonnie Nathan, supervisor of the UI Campus Information Center, said the February estimates include "a limited number" of projected fall rental rates. When estimates are compiled again in April or May, they are expected to be higher because they will include more fall rental rates, Nathan said. The estimates are based on an apartment complex directory distributed by the clearinghouse, apartment complex vacancy listings and rental informatimate. The estimates include rental figures from many - but not all apartment complexes in the area.

THE ESTIMATES of the range of current monthly rents and comparable figures from August 1981 are:

State can't cover student aid cuts — Ray

By Rochelle Bozman

DES MOINES — If the proposed cuts in student financial aid are approved there will be "no way" the state can pick up the programs, but it will do its best to help out where it can, Gov. Robert Ray said Thursday during an interview with The Daily Iowan. Ray said that the cuts already approved by Congress will not hurt students, but the most recently proposed plan - to cut student aid in half -'could have a much more deleterious effect so we're really concerned about

The amount of the proposed cuts will be so great that the state will be able to offer little help, Ray said. "We have to do the best we can and set our priorities and adjust to the they talk about cutting their budgets and we can be supportive to a degree so budgets. that tuition doesn't have to go up as high as it is some places, yet we can't stop all of it."

But he said the proposed cuts are just that — proposed — and the programs are not in as much danger as has been suggested. "I can tell you that I doubt seriously that all of those cuts will materialize because I don't think Congress will go that far."

But the state is in financial trouble and even the governor's scaled-down suggestions for the state Board of Regents' supplemental budget requests may not meet the approval of the Iowa Legislature.

"WELL, THE federal government has cut taxes and cut our budgets and still have an enormous deficit. When changes. We can be helpful with loans they're really talking about cutting our universities.

We're the ones that have had to take it on the chin and we've been able to adjust for that, but not easily and not without sacrifice," Ray said. "The problem now, however, is that we cannot pick up all of the lost federal funds. There's no way. Even if we raised taxes we couldn't pick up all of that."
Regents and UI officials said they understood the state's problems, but mildly criticized Ray's proposed budget after his Condition of the State address in January, because it did not include much of the funding requested.

Ray recommended the legislature approve about $3.3 million of the regents' requests, approve additional bonding authority to build the new UI Law Center and allow the regents to keep the additional revenue generated by the tuition hike at the three state

The governor ignored the regents' top request of a $14 million institutional vitality fund. The fund would be used to bring faculty salaries up to competitive levels and has topped the regents' budget askings since Sep-

RAY DEFENDED his recommendations saying that funding to the regents has continued to climb while other state budgets have been cut and that the regents have been allowed to keep the approximately $17 million in tuition increases from last year and this year.

"We have provided an overall increase of 8 percent for last year and for this coming year for salary increases and you might have read recently that legislators were saying we should cut that back because in the private sector some people don't even have jobs,"

Lamb: Healthy agriculture key to jobs

By Cherann Davidson

Iowa needs representation that will guarantee a "healthy" agricultural sector to foster more jobs for all people in the state, said Gary Lamb, Democratic candidate for the 3rd Congressional District.

Lamb, 44, a farmer from Chelsea, Iowa, said the main difference between he and Lynn Cutler, his opponent in the Democratic primary, is that she favors creating more jobs through social programs rather than 'creating an environment that will create jobs in the state.'

Lamb said he favors looking at the economic structure in Iowa and the nation to eliminate inequalities in federal subsidizing of some farm products, such as the dairy industry. The dairy industry has been able to build up surpluses because of federal price guarantees, while corn farmers have to compete in the markets and accept lower prices, Lamb said.

"If we're going to have safety nets for some areas (of farm production), they should be in all areas of agriculture," he said.

The incentive now for corn and soybean producers is to produce more each season in order to make a profit, Lamb said, and this state currently loses more topsoil per year than any other state, he said, which will eventually hinder crop planting.

LAMB SAID most farmers would prefer that the government not interfere with market prices, adding that if it subsidizes, it should not just subsidize one agricultural

The importance of a "healthy agricultural sector" is crucial to the economy, he said, because local businesses would then benefit when the farmer has more money to spend. 'When all segments of the economy are getting an equal profit, there is equal purchasing power," he said.

Lamb criticized President Reagan's tax breaks because "they only will benefit the upper echelon" of society. The average worker will not see any tax breaks or additional pocket money because of rising costs due to the inflated economy, he said.

Increased bureaucracy and the fact that the government keeps printing money with nothing to back it contribute to inflation. Lamb said. The government must limit the cash flow and eliminate tax loopholes for big businesses that are not paying their fair share

SOCIAL WELFARE PROGRAMS must also be closely examined to eliminate abuses where people who are able to work do not because they can make more money on welfare, Lamb said. And, he added, along with the abuses, most of the money that goes to those programs is paying administrators'

The programs must be "torn apart" so that the people that truly need the assistance can get it, Lamb said.

"I can defend the concept of the programs" because this society should take care of those in need, he said.

The proposed cuts in student loans and other financial aids are unwise because they force students out into the job market, he said. Students are the future leaders of this country and "if we're going to assume that those leaders are only coming from the rich" in our society, then the administration is not being fair to rest of Americans, he said.

Lamb is facing tough opposition in the primary from Cutler, who lost the 1980 fight in the 3rd District to Republican Cooper Evans by the narrow vote margin of 52 percent to 48 percent.

Mercy, council to discuss bonding plan

By Cherann Davidson

The Iowa City Council will meet today with Mercy Hospital officials to discuss the hospital's request for $23 million in industrial revenue bonds.

Last week, hospital officials held a neighborhood meeting to explain the proposed addition and remodeling of the facility, located at 500 Market St.

The plans include a new parking ramp and a landing pad for helicopter ambulances.

Some local residents expressed concern over the proposed heliport, saying it would pose a safety hazard in the heavily residential area surrounding the hospital and that it may bring too much noise.

Hospital officials responded that helicopters would fly over city roads and avoid residential areas as much as possible. Also, the helicopters would only be landing about once a week, so there would be little additional noise, officials said.

Some councilors have previously expressed concern that the city might be nearing its bonding limit if the Mercy request was approved. But city Finance Director Rosemary Vitosh said in a March 12 memo that the city is currently "well below" bonding limits.

"TOTAL COMMERCIAL bond issues equal $8,560,000, an amount well below the limit. Industrial bond issues, total $12,024,000, excluding the Mercy Hospital issue, and total $35,024,000 if it is included. Both amounts are below the limit set by the policy," the memo

The limit for each class of bonding projects is $45,838,882 and is based on the total assessed valuation of Iowa City, the memo

Vitosh also suggested the council consider establishing a separate classification of bonds for non-profit organizations.

"Usually one major consideration in assessing the Projects by non-profit organizations is the effect which the projects have on the City's tax base. Projects by non-profit organizations will not increase the City's tax base and therefore need to be evaluated on the basis of what the overall benefit to the community of such a project would be. For these reasons, the Council may wish to consider adding a new classification of projects to the Industrial Revenue Bond Policy which would allow for the separate consideration of projects by Non-Profit Organizations," the

THE COUNCIL also received an opinion from City Attorney Robert Jansen regarding a possible conflict of interest if Mayor Mary Neuhauser votes on Mercy's IRB request. Neuhauser has served on the advisory board for the hospital.

"The question may be asked whether by virtue of your prior association with the Advisory Board, you still retain continuing ties of loyalty or sympathy to the hospital's goals which would indicate the appearance of a conflict of interest I am unable to find any authority for this proposition or indications that the courts have gone this far. However, the interest in a community organization must be 'vested' before a conflict can arise and in this context 'vested' probably means present or existing membership in the organization," the letter said.

Senate endorsement

This year's UI Student Senate elections present a difficult choice. Although two of the three slates running have relatively well-defined goals and would bring certain positive qualities to the senate, each slate has weaknesses that would inhibit effective senate action during an academic year when student leaders are needed to organize the campus against funding cuts.

Each slate supports the same basic issues, including: better lighting on the East Side of campus, expanded support for the "Whistlestop" program, greater senate input to Iowa City, and state and federal governments, no fare for Cambus, and a more effective senate committee system. The question then becomes, which slate stands the best chance of translating its program into action?

The Wasn't-That-a slate is the least potent of the three. The slate's 11 candidates are all men, all white and they all live on the same floor of Burge Residence Hall. They could neither represent the student body nor form an effective majority in the senate.

The Representative slate's candidates for president and vice president might make good administrators, but among the slate members there seems to be little diversity of background and experience. The slate's leaders say that other opinions will definitely be heard because the slate has candidates for only 19 of the 27 senate seats elected Tuesday. But with no minority students on the slate itself, it is doubtful that such participation would be anything more than a token gesture.

Worst of all, the slate's presidential and vice presidential candidates, Wes Gullett and Pete Roan, are also running for at-large seats. If the slate is elected and Gullett and Roan are named to senate executive posts, expensive special elections for two atlarge representatives will be needed. This is an irresponsible campaign tactic.

The United Progressive slate is relatively experienced and diverse, but has weak leadership to guide it. It is doubtful the executive candidates, Patty Maher for president and Victor Ramirez for vice president, would work effectively as a team. Neither seems forceful or articulate, and that could spell trouble if the party holds only a slim majority, or none at all, in the senate.

However, The Daily Iowan editorial board endorses the United Progressive slate for Tuesday's elections. Five of the party's members are committee chairs and would bring experience in budgeting and lobbying and good intentions, at least, to the senate.

Abortion ruling

The UI Student Judicial Court ruled correctly when it allowed the Student Senate to deny funds to the UI Students' Right to Life Committee. The anti-abortion group's claim for financial assistance was based on illogical reasoning; they felt that since an organization with an opposing viewpoint received senate money they should also.

Right to Life members grounded their case on a faulty interpretation of the UI Student Association Constitution. Like the state and federal constitutions, UI guarantees that all individuals have the right to petition authorities for aid. Everyone should be able to address the government, but this does not mean all of the complaints and suggestions made should be perceived as equally valid.

Indeed, it is the responsibility of the Student Senate to decide questions of this type, including those such as which organizations are worthy of funding and which are not. One may disagree with the decisions the senate makes, but not with the fact that they have a right to make such a choice. And for whatever reason good or bad - the senate felt the Right to Life group was not entitled to financial assistance.

Rather than trying to alter the senate's legal structure, the Right to Life Committee would be wiser trying to influence the elections and ongoing legislation. The UI Judicial Court acted properly by rejecting the Right to Life members' demands and affirming the senate's right to govern.

Leap frog

Politicians are just kids at heart — Congress gets more recesses than kindergarteners. Not wishing to be outdone, the Iowa Legislature, through a loophole in the new reapportionment plan, has created its own game - political leapfrogging.

As the law stands, encumbant senators now sharing the same district can avoid a mandatory runoff in the fall, provided they have at least two years remaining of the term and provided one is willing to move before April 2 to a seat left vacant by the redistricting. In this way, a legislator can legally establish him or herself as that district's senator for the next two years.

Already two senators, Bass Van Gilst and C.W. Hutchins, have opted to relive their childhood by leapfrogging to adjacent districts. And if the game catches on, Sen. James Briles of Corning might be willing to move clear across the state to Spencer.

Unfortunately, the killjoys in the House, realizing that their two year terms prevent them from cashing in on this electoral bonanza, voted last week to spoil the fun. They moved the date of residency determination back from April 2 to Sept. 16, making it impossible to cross district boundaries and still retain office.

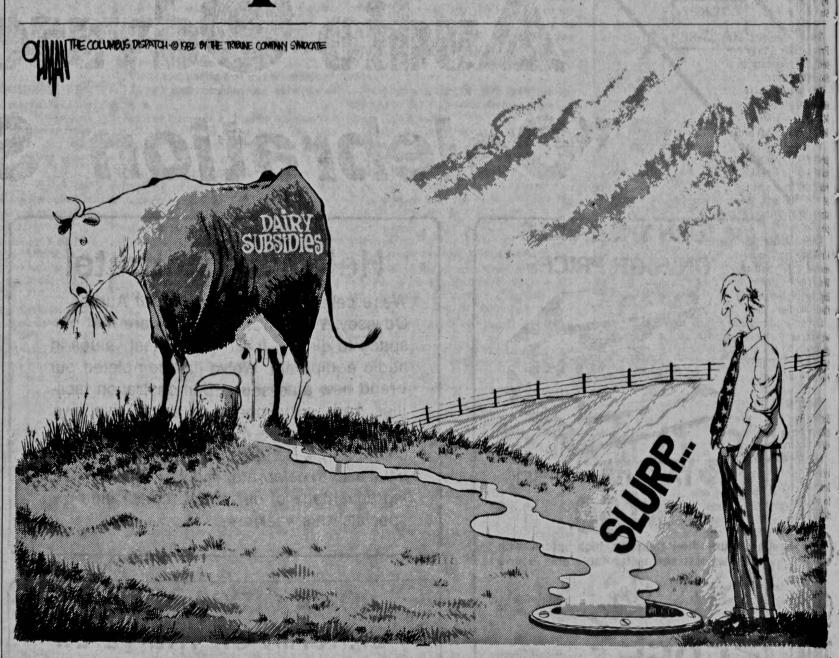

No need to worry — Senate Majority Leader Calvin Hultman promised reporters that the Senate will not consider the bill this session. By the time voters figure out the rules, the game will be over. Last one to their new home is a rotten egg.

Independent candidates speak

Off-campus candidates

To the editor: As your voice in the Student Senate,

we would try to do the following:

 Stop Reagan's proposed cuts on Guaranteed Student Loans, financial aid and Pell Grants;

Association which could effectively

- voice student concerns; • Support increasing student voter
- Support "Whistlestop:
- Support daycare services: And support pro-choice.

We ask for your support March 16 for independent, off-campus seats in the UI Student Senate. Kurt R. Knipper

Michael J. Mitchell

At-large candidate

To the editor:

This will be a year of challenges due to an uncertain economy. The Student Senate will have to rise to the occasion by providing leadership and solutions to the problems that confront us. In seeking office in the at-large constituency, I hope to contribute towards an active and effective student government. I offer several solutions to the major problems at hand.

1. Budget cuts: I believe the only recourse open to UI students is to get organized — I actively encourage the formation of a State Student Association. To have any effect on our legislators there has to be a state-wide reaction, with coordination of the funds, resources and manpower of the three state universities.

2. Fiscal responsibility: I believe it is time we took a closer look at how the Student Activity Fees are utilized. There has to be more stringent auditing procedures and evaluations before funds are allocated to the various student organizations and commissions. This is to prevent Cambus pass system. Cambus provides recurrances of huge deficits like the $20,000 loss by the Hancher Commission, and instances of alleged misappropriation in the University Travel Commission.

Closer working relationships should be encouraged between the various bodies at the UI. Students should have full access to Student Senate proceedings and recommendations. Most students do not now have any idea of the functions of the senate or how their money is spent. The senate should give a full account of its expenditures and funding at regular intervals. Finally, in addition to fulfilling my campaign platform, I shall continue on-going research on any relevant issue, such as a complete solution to the Cambus problem.

Gerard Ng At-large candidate

David Tucker

To the editor:

The major concern of a student senator has to be the needs and concerns of the students he or she represents. As an off-campus candidate, I feel that my constituency should be represented by someone who will give them a strong voice in the workings of the UI.

I feel that it is the job of the senate to be an effective lobbyist for the students. Faced with the proposed cuts in student aid by the Reagan administration, it is in everyone's best interest to oppose these cuts. This end is best served by the petitioning of congressional representatives. I stongly support the letter-writing campaign currently underway.

One issue that has received a lot of attention this year is Cambus funding. I feel that the cost of operating this service should fall on those who use it. There are a variety of ways to do this, including the 10 cent fare or perhaps a a needed service, but it clearly doesn't serve everyone equally. I think offcampus students would be better served with increased long-term parking near campus. As for student group funding, I feel according to their needs and services. Each program should be looked at individually and funding awarded on the merits of each program. I would like to see KRUI receive the $30,000 it needs to convert from AM to FM. I think tht this would fill a needed service to the campus.

As an independent candidate, I feel that I am not tied to the rhetoric and narrow platforms of the organized parties. I am free to serve those who ould elect me, not to those who would David M. Tucker

I am from Mount Pleasant, Iowa, and am a freshman Honors student living in Currier Hall.

I feel the most important issue relevant to students is the recent financial aid cuts. I recognize that the senatesponsored letter-writing campaign is a worthwhile project, but I believe it is necessary to find a more effective way

I thus endorse the establishment of a State Student Association with Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa. I feel this would be more effective in lobbying efforts at the state and federal levels. However, I also believe stronger ties need to be made with our representatives and the local government. I am also concerned about students' rights at the UI and thus I support a number of different programs:

1. I support the Rights Line — a 24hour phone line available for students to voice concerns or complaints about the violation of their rights.

2. I support the Whistlestop program a rape-prevention program also the lighting of dangerously dark areas on campus

3. I support the UI-sponsored daycare services.

Amidst all the clamor about refs, I would like to be devil's advocate for a moment. Let's start with the traveling call on Kevin Boyle late in the Purdue game. It is possible that he did travel, because: 1) We can't see on the tapes whether Boyle had his left foot on the ground when he caught the pass. If he did, the call was correct. 2) On the tapes, two Purdue players indicated that Boyle traveled before referee Jim Bain brought his hand down. If they hadn't seen something, I believe they would have been looking apprehensively at Bain to see why he had blown the whistle, rather than joyously spinning their hands.

Hawkeye Greg Stokes, you will see some hard contact initiated by Stokes. I think this may be the contact Bain felt was a foul. Stokes quickly backed out of the area and Boyle came across and ended up between Stokes and Palombizio. With so many huge players close together, it is possible Bain lost track of Stokes in the traffic and emerged to see Boyle where Stokes had been. If you watch Stokes as he backs out of the area, it appears as if

Slates running for Senate Daily lowan claim student representation

By Jackie Baylor

The Representative Party and the United Progressive Party both claimed their slates repreent UI students in a debate sponsored by KRUI

The Wasn't-that-a Party declined to participate in de debate because its presidential candidate, Mark ferkel, was out of town. All three slates are running the March 16 Student Senate election.

Wes Gullett, an at-large candidate and the presidential candidate for the Representative slate, said in his opening statements: "We offer a true representation of the student body. We are the voice of the students. We mandate a diverse slate." The slate is running candidates for 19 of the 30 senate

Patty Maher, the presidential candidate for the United Progressive slate, said in her opening statenents: "We will take an active, not a passive role. We created diversity within the slate. We are running more minorities ... you can't really represent hem without them

Gullett said running only 19 candidates might be a weakness in his slate, but he said it "mandates fiversity." He also said his slate might be weak ecause none of the candidates represent the far right or far left.

VICTOR RAMIREZ, the vice presidential candidate for the United Progressive slate, said "We can't see a weak point. I guess I'm a weak point since I haven't been on senate, but I can adjust." In response to a question about their slate's definition of liberalism, Maher said, "We have a concern for the access of education for all. We are not going to go off on a conservative mandate. Our people have Gullett said liberalism means "representing all people. Everyone has a voice in government. Everyone should have equal opportunity.

Both slates said they will allocate funds to a group on the basis of its program, not on its conservatism

Gullett said his slate will fund groups if they have a "sound program" and if the programs will have a 'positive impact" on the student body.' Maher said, "We believe everyone has a right" to participate in the senate's budgetary process. She said her slate will allocate funds based on a group's program and if the group fills out the forms correc-

SENATE'S MOST important task in dealing with the UI administration will be getting students on search committees as voting members, Ramirez said. "The (UI) administration is changing now and it's important that students give their views."

Peter Roan, the vice presidential candidate for the Representative slate, said he agreed with Ramirez that the most important task will be getting students on search committees. "If they don't have students' impact then they're missing one of the links."

Gullett added: "Student senate does things ideally to promote UI. It's very important to have a close working relationship with the administration."

If the senate had $1,000 to allocate and three groups (Cambus, soccer club and Black Genesis Troupe) each asked for $500, Gullett said the Black Genesis Troupe would receive top priority because its program would affect more students and because Cambus gets money from mandatory student fees and optional student fees. He said the senate would look for alternative funding for soccer club.

However, Maher said Cambus would receive top priority because it is a human service. She added that the funds would be proportioned out and that

Independents pledge to be representative

By Jackie Baylor

Eight UI students are running as independent candidates in the March 16 UI Student Senate election.

Bill Dorothy and Gerard NG are running as at-large candidates. Kurt Knipper, Michael J. Mitchell and David M. Tucker are running as off-campus candidates. Mark Wasson and Chuck J. Williams are running as residence halls candidates.

Steve Rachman was unavailable for comment Sunday.

Representing students in their respective constituencies is one of the major concerns of the independent candidates.

Dorothy said: "You never hear anything about senate representing students. I think that is wrong. We need to pass more information to students and get their opinions. There needs to be more mass communication."

NG said, "I feel it's time for students to take an active interest in senate."

Tucker said: "I feel that off-campus students are not too represented in senate. I would like to see that they get

One of the top priorities is lobbying for financial aid," Wasson said. "We need to get more student involvement." He said he supports the formation of a state student association with Iowa State University students and University of Northern Iowa students as an important lobbying approach to the state Board of Regents and the Iowa Legislature.

The independent candidates clashed on their views concerning Cambus

Tucker said the proposed 10-cent fare solution is an "equitable" idea. He said all students who use Cambus should have to pay a 10-cent fare.

However, Wasson said the proposed 10-cent fare solution should not be used because Cambus already collects from mandatory student fees. "We should make more aggressive use of the optional student fee cards.'

Knipper said, "I strongly disagree" with the proposed 10-cent fare. "It would be more of a hassle than

NG said a possible solution to the Cambus funding problem would be to charge students $5 to $10 on their university bill at the beginning of each year. "Optional student fees will not cover it," he said. "Several people take Cambus a lot of times a day" so a 10-cent fare would not be a good idea.

WILLIAMS SAID students who wish to ride Cambus should buy a year-long pass for $2 to help solve its financial problems. "Optional student fees are not really doing the job. A ticket system would make it much easier instead of a coin system.'

Most of the independent candidates said the senate's current system for allocating funds to student groups is

"The regents have been an exception and they get their tuition increase money that amounts to $7 (million for 1982) and $10 million (for 1981), respec-"Now that's a considerable amount of money they get and I don't think all on the campus appreciate that fact or perhaps realize that fact," Ray said. While UI faculty members have agreed that the economic times are bad and they do not expect to receive the vitality funding, they have said they will be back when times improve.

RAY SAID THE TIME may never be right for legislative approval of the vitality fund. "You are seeing an 8 percent average - and some people get much more than that - increase each of these two years plus, as I pointed out, they get $17 million more money from tuition and I would just like to have people realize that that's pretty

"They get more than half of all of the salary increase money that we have for state employees and they have far fewer than half of the total number,' Ray said.

These figures place Iowa third highest in the nation in expenditures for higher education per student, according to Ray, and this is because state officials are concerned about

'I don't want you to think that I'm not sympathetic with the need to support financially the faculty and support personnel at our universities," Ray said. "I think it needs to be kept in perspective that here we are in tough, troubled times and we're still putting an awful lot of our financial support in our universities.

This funding to higher education has caused some elementary and secondary educators to complain that they are falling behind in funding because of higher education, but Ray said the same complaints have been heard from college educators about funding at the elementary and secondary level.

"I GUESS YOU can find statistics that will bear out much of what you want, but what I guess I would like to have you understand is that we are trying very hard because we believe in higher education, we believe in education in general and we believe in the universities

'We are very supportive of them, but we have limitations, and that is we have lots and lots of responsibilities with the taxpayers' money," he said.

Ray also commented on the controversial personnel bill, a bill he has supported in one form or another for the last three years.

The bill would create an office that would be in charge of the personnel matters for all state employees, including regents and university staff staff members. "The personnel bill is an attempt to have some consistent policies in state government. There are groups that work in universites who are in bargaining units, the same as groups outside the universities, and we bargain with all of them the same." Ray said.

members. The bill would exclude faculty and "academically related"

THE REGENTS would be free to decide which members of the staff are "academically related," and Ray said this will maintain the flexibility of the regents and the universities.

But the regents and UI officials disagree with Ray, claiming it will cause problems for the universities. Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, once called it "a screwball idea.'

UI officials are concerned that the bill will put a barrier between the faculty and professional and scientific staff. They also say the system would be cumbersome and would add unnecessary red tape to the process.

"I think there are some misunderstandings and anytime there is an offer to do things a different or a better way there are those who assume the worst and think that someone is trying to encroach upon their autonomy,'

Some state administrators and legislators feel the regents are not working with the legislature to combat the problems in the state government,

"One thing we believe is that there are many of us who want to be totally supportive of the universities.

But there has to be some mutual trust so that we do work together, because let me tell you that there are lots of people from the universities that expect us to carry the water for them,'h

"THEY'RE THE ones that ask for more money and more support from the legislature and when the legislature is asked to give more they need to know that the universities are really cooperating," he said. Ray said any other complications can be worked out. "Those are details that I think can be resolved because no one is trying to hamper flexibility it's much easier when you don't have to bicker and barter."

The poor economic condition of the state cannot be blamed on Ray's administration, he said. "We don't control the national economy, we have to adjust to it and we think, with some pride, we have managed quite well," Ray said. "We didn't create the high interest rates or the high inflation rate or the high unemployment or the grain embargo.

Comedian 'makes fun of standing up'

By Elizabeth McGrory

"Henry Holden and Franklin Delano Roosevelt have one thing in common: they both married ugly women. But Franklin Delano Roosevelt became president and Henry Holden became funny," said comic and actor Henry Holden in an interview

Holden, who had polio at age four and walks with the aid of two crutches, tours the country doing a comedy routine when he is between acting jobs. "I'm a comic that makes fun of standing up," he said. He presented his routine last week in the Union as part of Handicapped Awareness Week.

"People will laugh at anything except the handicapped," Holden said. But people laugh at Holden's humor. "I'm good; it's done tastefully."

The media focuses negative attention on the disabled - either treating them as if they were invisible or focusing pity on them, he said. "When I watch the telethon, I want to cry too," Holden said.

But all the money in the world is not going to make people walk again. "Being handicapped is a fact of life. There's nothing wrong with it," he said. "Let's go on from here. People adapt."

HOLDEN'S GOAL is to use the media to create positive attitudes toward the handicapped. Showing the disabled leading active, enjoyable lives will change more attitudes than 1000 hours of telethons, he said.

But producers discriminate against the handicapped in movies and television by refusing to put them in roles other than those specifically about the handicapped, Holden said. And furthermore, roles about the handicapped are often filled by people without disabililties, he said.

As an example of discrimination, Holden told of the elimination of a disabled person's role on the children's show "Sesame Street" when expenses had to be cut. The use of handicapped (actors) should not depend on extra money, he said.

Holden said he has yet to appear in a commercial, although he studied acting with Lee Strasberg and at the finest commercial school in the country.

The advertising industry tells him the use of handicapped actors "would be an intrusion that could not be explained," or people would "accuse us of seeking sympathy.

"THAT'S DISGUSTING," he said. "If other minorities were treated that way there

"I have nice teeth, let me sell toothpaste. I'm part of the Pepsi generation ... I haven't done that yet, but they won't let me. (Advertisers think) If you see Henry Holden brushing his teeth, you may get crutches," he

Holden works for the rights of the disabled as a member of the Actors Guild and chairman of the subcommittee for the disabled. The handicapped are now classed with other minorities, and "it's on paper (that we can't be discriminated against)," he said, " but | we'll see what happens.'

Holden has appeared in An Unmarried Woman and in a few small parts for television, but he has always portrayed characters on crutches, he said.

"I want to be considered for a role, not because of my handicap," he said. His goal is to appear in a movie or drama as a doctor, lawyer or journalist or as a person who coincidently happens to be on crutches, he said. 'Life's a fight (but) I am a fighter. I enjoy

' Holden said. "In the pursuit of happiness, I have the right to pursue it as an artist ... I am going to make it."

Right to Life Committee files complaint went to the committee, it would be clear-

By Karen Herzog

The UI Students' Right to Life Committee filed a complaint with a human rights body Friday after the UI Student Judicial Court ruled the UI Student Senate acted constitutionally when it denied RTL funding.

Jeffrey Renander, a third-year law student representing RTL, said Sunday the complaint maintains, "(Student Senate President) Tim Dickson and the Student Senate discriminated against Right to Life members on the basis of their personal beliefs and on the basis of the content of their protected free speech."

RTL's complaint asks the UI's Committee on Human Rights to recommend to UI court's decision be overruled, Renander said.

If the committee makes the recommendation, this would be the first case appealed to a UI president since the National Federation of the Blind's appeal for student organization filed over 200 pages of legal documents and arguments prepared by both sides during the judicial court proceedings, Renander said. The Human Rights Committee has not yet met to consider the appeal or discuss procedures, said Robert Clinton, committee member and UI law professor.

In the past, when there was a significant dispute, a hearing officer or sub-committee investigated the facts and made recommendations to the committee. The committee then decided whether to make a recommendation to the president on the basis of the substantiality of the appeal, Clinton said.

League to assemble for annual meeting

The Johnson County chapter of the may begin. League of Women Voters will have its annual meeting tonight, with local attorney Daniel Bray speaking on juvenile justice law in Iowa.

The league was formed to teach women about politics soon after women were allowed to vote in 1920. Today the group performs various services, including lobbying and educational efforts.

The local group, composed of about 100 members, has various age, racial and ethnic groups represented, including males, said Ann Bovbjerg, vice president of the group. Bovbjerg said the group is concerned with county, state and national issues and concentrates on several issues each year. Although the group does not endorse any political candidates, it may take a stand on certain political issues, said Jonni Ellsworth, secretary for the Johnson County league.

If the non-partisan group reaches a consensus on an issue, lobbying efforts

ELLSWORTH SAID the league also tries to inform and educate the public by presenting the findings of the most recent and thorough studies on local, state and national issues.

The league also performs many voter services, including registering voters as well as sponsoring presidential debates, local meetings of candidates, workshops and discussions, Bovbjerg said. "Besides having a good time," the group will decide tonight what issues to concentrate on for the year, elect new officers, make some word changes in its constitution and certify its 1983 fiscal year budget, Bovbjerg said.

Although the group was orginally formed on a temporary basis, it "did not seem to outlive its usefulness," she said. Bovbjerg added the group gains several new members per year.

The meeting will be held at the Iowa River and Power Company. A cash bar opens at 6:30 tonight with dinner served at 7 p.m.

Authorities investigating local teen's disappearance

By Glenn Townes

The Johnson County Sheriff's Department and the Coralville Police Department are investigating the disappearance of Coralville teenager believed to be a runaway. Jennifer Brazinsky, 7 Longview Knoll River, left home Friday afternoon and has not been seen since. She is described as 5-feet 7-inches tall weighing 120 pounds, with blonde hair and hazel eyes. When last seen she was wearing blue jeans and a maroon jacket. According to reports, a girl fitting that description was seen hitchiking on Interstate 80 Saturday. The subject was seen getting into a white semitrailer truck heading eastbound on I-80. Anyone having any information on the girl's whereabouts is asked to contact Coralville

Police or the sheriff's department. UI Campus Security is investigating the alleged assault of a UI student in her dormitory room late Friday evening. Pam Rakowsky, 202 Stanley Residence Hall, told Campus Security that after she entered her dorm room she was grabbed and physically assaulted by a male. Rakowsky was not injured in the attack.

THE IOWA CITY Police Department is continuing an investigation into the theft of over $1,600 worth of merchandise from Discount Den over the weekend. According to police reports, someone pried open a window and stole a number of albums, cassette tapes and personal items belonging to the store.

'Missing' reveals horrors of South, Central America

South and Central America seem such a long way off when you're watching the TV news in your living room. Missing, based on a true story, should change all that. The unreal statistics of the murdered and the tortured don't seem so unreal when filmmaker Constantin Costa-Gavras thrusts you into Santiago, Chile, during the 1973 military coup.

Here, the streets are are scattered with bloodied bodies and lined with tanks, and soldiers shoot in the air at random. It may not sound shocking because you've read about it a hundred times, but it looks

"They can't hurt us, we're Americans," says leftleaning journalist Charles Horman (John Shea). His words echoed the sentiments of most Americans in Chile at the time. But Horman is shot and killed, and by the end of the film, Americans as high up as Henry Kissinger are implicated. Missing is strong political fodder, but the personal touch gives it an un-

The film follows the search for Charles by his wife Jovce and his father Ed. Joyce (Sissy Spacek) and Ed (Jack Lemmon) are studies in contrasts — she is young, naively liberal and scared; he is older, a jaded conservative, but also scared. They are given the runaround by the American embassy, and are finally forced to look through piles of bodies for Charles by themselves.

SPACEK AND Lemmon are the best acting duo in a long time. Their tenuous relationship and contrasting beliefs are both shattered by a common bond that leaves them hopeless and afraid. A tearyeyed Ed is finally told by the ambassador that, even if his son was killed, it is a small price to pay to protect U.S. business interests in Chile. It's not a small price at all for Ed and Joyce. Costa-Gavras, the political filmmaker of Z, fashions Missing as an absurdist nightmare. In one scene Joyce misses her bus and is forced to walk home in the dusk. A few bodies are strewn about in the streets and the only other pedestrians are as scared as rabbits, scuttling from hiding place to hiding place. Joyce falls asleep in a hidden doorway and dreams of a white horse being chased by soldiers

FINALLY THE embassy informs Ed and Joyce that Charles's body was found, but it will be another seven months before the body is delivered to them in America. Ed, ever the God-fearing American, tells the ambassador and his cohorts, "I only thank God that I live in a country where they put men like you behind bars." As a footnote, we are told that Horman finally brought his case against the U.S. government, but he was unable to gain access to some classified documents which might have proven his case. He

The U.S. government has taken notice of Costa-Gavras' film. Issuing a three-page statement, the State Department says "nothing was discovered to support any such charges, rumors or inferences as contained in (Horman's) complaint against U.S. government officials." The real-life Ed Horman disagrees strongly, claiming that, "If the real story ever comes out, its implications would be as serious

With the United States's recent involvement in Latin America, from El Salvador to Nicaragua, Horman could be making the understatement of the Preservation Hall Jazz Band blows 'hot-off-the-river Dixie'

There is almost no way in the world to criticize the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, which played a concert Sunday at Hancher Auditorium. Through all of the years - the retirements, deaths and odd personnel changes - they have maintained themselves as the Indeed, they've been around long enough for meone to safely say they original its modern form. The key members of the band are all well into their 70s or 80s.

To list the members by name would be almost ridiculous; they are a unit playing the structured method of Dixie together as an individual entity. They've been doing it for years and they did it again Sunday afternoon.

MORE THAN anything they're reminiscent of a Sun City jazz club; old men sitting back and looking bored in stiff-backed chairs when their instrumental talents are not needed, spitting into paper cups and blowing their noses. But when they play, instead of straining at a jazzed-up, off-key version of "Green-sleeves" or "Feelings," they blow hot-off-the-river

They are, however, old men, and old men take a while to heat up to things like that. They started out a bit slowly, holding back after a showbiz entrance It wasn't until their third song, "Basin Street Blues," that they really got going

It was as if they were building the crowd to the final, ecstatic foot stomper. It would have taken about three songs to do that - to break everyone down to raving flappers, New Orleans style - but for the ballads. That's when the crooning came in.

THE FIRST vocal was "Hold That Tiger," sung in the Louis Armstrong style by Percy Humphrey. Toward the end of the song Willie Humphrey put down his clarinet and started running away from

There was an awareness of "show;" of being visually entertaining. Anytime a band performs with six out of seven members seated, things are not going to be exactly charismatic, but there were fine moments of visual wit. Frank Demond, a relative newcomer, had a tendency to wobble his knees on the high notes. Allan Jaffe, the only member of the band who stood throughout the show, marched his sousaphone around the stage as if he were playing a

In short, it was a wonderful concert though it held few surprises. Dixieland is basically an archaic form that is changing little, but the Preservation Hall Jazz Band plays it with such joy and precision that it is impossible not to like it

Staff Writer

Iowa Head Tennis Coach Steve Houghton had a hard time figuring out the play of his squad this weekend. But the reason was different than one might think

The Hawks, playing without their top singles player Dan Rustin, rallied together to post two victories in three duals. Iowa defeated Iowa State, 5-4, Friday, and was defeated by a strong Nebraska team Saturday, 8-1. On Sunday Iowa pulled a mild upset when it defeated Gustavus Adolphus, a team rated in the top five of NCAA Division III, 5-4.

"THE GUYS PLAYED extremely well," Houghton said. "To win two out of three without Rustin is absolutely amazing.

Houghton cited the play of senior Jim Carney as a key factor in the Hawks' performances this weekend. Carney moved up to the No. 2 singles spot with Rustin sidelined and posted three victories in

In the match against Gustavus, the team of Rob Moellering and Mike Inman had to be considered the heroes. With the meet tied at 4-4 they came from behind to win a tough 7-5 decision in the deciding set. That win, combined with the inspired play of Seth Jacobson and Doug Parkey, who upset the team of Per Ekstam and Bill Sternard, gave Iowa the win.

"All the eight players really contributed this weekend," Houghton said. "We will take eight players on our spring trip and hope we will have a successful trip." Iowa travels to North Carolina for its spring trip starting next Friday.

An apparent eligibility problem concerning Iowa freshman Paul Chepkwony caused the Hawkeyes to withdraw from the NCAA national indoor championships this weekend in Pontiac, Mich.

According to Head Coach Ted Wheeler, the problem surrounds the interpretation of NCAA rules governing the eligibility for foreign athletes. Chepkwony competes for the Hawkeyes in the 600yard run and the mile relay team. He is from Iten, Kenva, Africa

CHEPKWONY WAS unavailable for comment as was UI Athletic Director Bump Elliott, who was attending the Iowa-Idaho basketball game in Pullman, Wash. UI Athletic Counselor Fred Mims was also unavaiable for comment, and two of Chepkwony's teammates on the mile relay team, Terrance Duckett and Victor Greer, would not comment on

According to Wheeler, the question over

Mickey's

UI officials from an unnamed third party last Wed-

Wheeler said there was a new book of guidelines concerning the eligibility of foreign athletes printed in September of 1981 and issued in October of 1981. Chepkwony went through the UI admissions process before the new rules were proposed.

"I read the book of new guidelines and, to me, everything is fine with Paul," Wheeler said. "There must be other material involved that we haven't seen, or we don't know about yet. There must be rules that weren't in the book.

A decision concerning Chepkwony's eligibility has not been reached, but Wheeler will meet with NCAA officials today to come to a decision. Chepkwony will not compete for the Hawkeyes until this problem is cleared up. Also Iowa may have to forfeit any indoor meet Chepkwony may have competed in.

Wheeler is waiting for a document from Chepkwony's high school in Iten that would hopefully clarify the Kenyan's eligibility.

Olson had to go to his bench earlier than he would have liked, but the reserves certainly couldn't be blamed for the loss. Both Craig Anderson, who had five points and two rebounds, and Jerry Dennard, with six points and two rebounds, played with the confidence and poise of starters.

"Not that everybody played as well as they're capable of playing, but it wasn't a case of not playing well," Olson said. "Everyone, from our first guy to our ninth guy, gave us a strong effort.

THIS GAME WAS the Hawks' third overtime in the last five games. But unlike any of the previous overtimes, it was a relatively high scoring five minutes of play with the Hawks sinking 10 points and Idaho

The Vandals had the ball at the end of regulation with 27 seconds left and after two timeouts and a Ken Owens miss, Kelvin Smith hit a baseline jumper - after the buzzer had sounded. There was considerable debate from the Idaho bench as to whether the shot should have counted.

whirled and hit a turnaround jumper from just inside the key.

Just 17 seconds later, Boyle knocked down an errant Indian pass, and shoved it to Carfino who pushed it ahead to Hansen. Hansen made the lay-up and a free throw for the three-point play. That put the Hawks up by five, giving them a lead they never relinquished.

After a shaky first half, which saw Iowa shoot 33.3 percent from the field and have considerable trouble penetrating the Indian's two-three zone, Boyle said the Hawks had to regroup at halftime.

'Everyone started hearing things that we were the kind of team that couldn't win down the stretch and it kind of bothered us," Boyle said. "I think that's why we were tight in the first half, but Coach Olson came in at

"In my own mind, I don't know if the shot at the end of regualtion should have counted," said Idaho Coach Don Monson. "I guess it wasn't, but as a coach I had to question it. It was the right call."

The Hawks, playing without Mark Gannon who re-sprained his ankle in Friday night's game, were plagued by foul trouble almost from the onset. Steve Carfino, who finished with eight points, Michael Payne who had nine, Greg Stokes, who finished with eight, and Kevin Boyle, who pumped in 10, all fouled out for the Hawks.

By Steve Riley Staff Writer

A 20-point performance by Doug Van Hofwegen led 515 to a 51-35 victory over the Cue Bees — and to the intramural men's basketball championship - Sunday night in the Field

Van Hofwegen poured in 16 first-half points as 515 quickly jumped out to a 27-15 halftime lead over the Cue Bees - a team consisting mostly of Hawkeye football players.

The turning point in the game came late in the first half when 515 went on a 15-6 spree, mostly using medium-range jump shots, to put the game out of reach.

VAN HOFWEGEN WAS understandably pleased after the game.

"I just joined the team this year," he said. The rest of the guys have been together for a

"We thought it would be a real good game. We saw them in their last game, and we knew they were all real good athletes.

Mike Thorpe added 15 points for 515. Dennis Klapperich, a reserve Iowa quarterback, led Cue Bees with 12. Scott Halverson added nine for the losers.

FG%: 45.6% FT%: 82%

515 was ranked No.4 in the final men's poll. Cue Bees were unranked. In the first game of the championship doubleheader, Milky Way proved worthy of its No. 1 coed ranking by downing the No. 2 team, Art Majors, 47-29. The key to the game turned out to be the scoring of the Milky Way men. They outscored the Art Majors' men. 29-13. Jim Mason led the way with 13 points. Joe Fahl chipped in nine, while Andy Piro added eight. Milky Way got a good start as it jumped out to a 15-7 first-quarter lead. But the Art Majors' women whittled that away in the second quarter to make it a 20-17 Milky way lead. But a 27-12 second half doomed Art Majors. "This is our second full season playing gether. We've won every game we've ever played," said Milky Way's Rick Lockridge. "Our success is totally due to our girls. The most fun we have is doing all kinds of things together.'

Joni Rensvold, a former Iowa player, was the leading woman scorer with eight points. The Art Majors' women featured Iowa athletes Kay Stormo and Polly Van Horst.

HELD WESTER INSTRUCTION

Hawks continue mat domination

By Jay Christensen

AMES — It was only fitting for Iowa 118-pounder Barry Davis to be presented six long-john doughnuts, M&Ms and a candy bar by his parents after aiding Iowa's record-breaking fifth-straight NCAA wrestling title Saturday night.

It was two weeks ago that Davis was caught red-handed by Iowa Head Coach Dan Gable in an Iowa City Hy-Vee store purchasing such goodies. Davis had skipped the team's flight for the Big Ten tournament in Ann Arbor, Mich., - the qualitying tournament for the nationals.

But during the three-day tournament in Ames, Davis, along with his teammates, earned any sweets they could find. The Hawkeyes' 13134 point total broke Iowa's 1293/4 mark set last year in winning the title in Princeton, N.J. Host Iowa State finished second with 1111/2 points and Oklahoma third with 109. Oklahoma State was fourth with

DAVIS CLINCHED the title for the Hawks by topping the Cyclones' Kevin Darkus, 7-5 for the national crown at 118. Iowa's other individual champions were Jim Zalesky at 158 and Pete Bush

"I was nervous at first," Davis said, "But once I got things going it wasn't

Bush surprised everyone at the tournament by pinning No. 1 seed Colin Kilrain of Lehigh in the semifinals in 44 seconds. Bush, the No. 4 seed going into the tournament, then beat No. 2 seed Mike Mann of Iowa State, 3-3, 2-2, Iowa fans displayed buttons saying, move on my part."

"Pete, the Mann handler, Bush" before the finals. Bush had never defeated Mann in seven previous bouts, losing one-point decisions twice this season. It took the referees three minutes to decide who was the winner on criteria, an upsetting fact to Iowa State Head Coach Harold Nichols.

"I can't understand why the referees took so long," Nichols said. "It was so dog-gone obvious who was the winner GABLE SAID: "Nichols couldn't understand why it took so long to make a decision. But they wanted to make sure. You can't make a mistake in that Zalesky simply drilled Perry Shea of California-Bakersfield in the finals, 10-3. In a December dual meet, Shea beat Zalesky, 8-2. "It was mostly the same as it was in December when he beat me, only I didn't let him get a fivepoint move like last time." Zalesky said. "I also finished my leg takedowns a lot better tonight than in the earlier match.

Two Iowa wrestlers lost in the finals - Lennie Zalesky at 142 and two-time national champ Ed Banach at 177. Zalesky was beat by Oklahoma's Andre Metzger, 9-6, while Banach fell to another Sooner, Mark Schultz, 16-8. Schlutz was named the outstanding wrestler in the tourney.

Schultz beat Banach, 10-9, in a Feburary dual in Norman, Okla. "I think it hurt Eddie that he underestimated Schultz until a month ago," Gable said.

'He just took it to me," Banach said. "I don't have any excuses. I just wrestled sloppy, sloppy, sloppy. He put me on my back because of a sloppy of the NCAA championship. Schultz won the 177-pound title, 16-8. The

Oklahoma's Mark Schultz, voted the tournament's most outstanding wrestler, comes close to pinning lowa's Ed Banach, the defending champ, in the finals

OKLAHOMA HEAD COACH Stan Abel was extremely pleased with Schultz's win. "I think Mark Schultz is the greatest athlete in the United States," he said. "I had the honor of watching him workout in the wrestling room. I compare most people to Ed Banach and he beat him.'

Ed's brother, Lou, finished third at heavyweight after losing to Oklahoma's Steve "Dr. Death"

Williams hit Banach with a four-point move with 11 seconds left in the first period. After that the Sooner spent much of the time backing off from Banach's attempts for a body-lock. Many fans in the Iowa section expressed displeasure over William's non-aggressive style.

'They can boo, hiss and cuss me," Williams said. "I love it. As you can see, I'm not in the best of shape of the Williams, 7-4, in the semifinals. heavyweights. But when I first put him Hawks, however, won the team championship for the fith straight year. to his back in the first period, I knew I had him. He's a tough cookie."

Lou was nursing several injuries throughout the tournament but made no excuses. "I'm not taking anything away from him (Williams)," Banach said. "But this will give me more motivation to win the title next year."

The Hawks' 134-pounder, Jeff Kerber, finished sixth after being pinned by Jim Edwards of LSU in the consolation round in 1:50. Dave Fitzgerald, Iowa's 167-pounder, finished seventh by edging Jan Michaels of North Carolina, 11-9, in the consolations.

Next year looks bright for the Iowa wrestling team. The Hawkeyes return five national champions - Davis, Jim Zalesky, Bush and 1981 champions Ed and Lou Banach.

Davis will likely move up to 126 pounds after his problems making weight at 118.

DePaul unable to break NCAA jinx

The DePaul Blue Demons

couldn't exorcise their NCAA Tournament jinx Sunday.

A spectacular second-half display of ball hawking and shooting by guards Michael Adams and John Bagley brought Boston College a shocking 82-75 Midwest Regional victory over No. 2 DePaul, handing the Blue Demons an opening-game loss for the third straight year in the NCAA tournament.

The surprising Eagles moved into the Midwest semifinals, where they will meet the Kansas State Wildcats Friday night in St. Louis.

IN THE OPENING game of Sunday's double-header, Kansas State opened a 10-point lead on the shooting and ball-handling of Tyrone Adams but had to survive a would-be winning shot by Arkansas' Scott Hastings in the final seconds to whip the Razorbacks, 65-64.

In the East Regional, Alabama beat St. John's 69-68 and Villanova edged Northeastern 76-72 in triple

At Uniondale, N.Y., Eddie Phillips scored 16 points and Alabama withstood a gritty comeback by St. John's to earn a berth in the semifinals. The Crimson Tide will meet No. 1 North Carolina in the tournament's third round Friday night in Raleigh, N.C.

In the Mideast, Minnesota stopped Tennessee-Chattanooga 62-61 and Virginia got by Tennessee 54-

At Indianapolis, Randy Breuer scored 17 points and ignited a second-half comeback to lead sixthranked Minnesota. The Big Ten champion advanced to the next round of the regional to face Louisville.

IN THE OPENER, Virginia guard Ricky Stokes' two free throws with 15 seconds left - his only points of the game - rallied the Cavaliers to the victory.

In the West, Oregon State beat Pepperdine 70-51 and Idaho stopped

At Pullman, Wash., Danny Evans, Lester Conner and Charlie Sitton combined for 48 points to lead fourth-ranked Oregon State to a convincing triumph over outmanned Pepperdine. The victory enabled the Beavers to snap a firstgame jinx that has plagued them in recent post-season action. Oregon State, which won its third straight Pac-10 title this year, lost its first game in the NCAA tourney in each of the past two season. OSU will play No. 8 Idaho in the West Regional in Provo, Utah, Thursday. It will be the second meeting for the two teams this season. Last December, Idaho trounced Oregon State en route to winning the Far West Classic.

The ecstatic mass of Idaho black and gold didn't care. Brian Kellerman, the Vandal who made the shot, didn't know. And Iowa Head Coach Lute Olson said he wasn't counting.

All that mattered was the end result: Idaho 69, Iowa 67.

PULLMAN, Wash. - First-round jitters were present and accounted for Friday night, as the Iowa Hawkeyes shakily disposed of a stubborn Northeast Louisiana Indian team, 70-

"It wasn't pretty but it counts, is all I can say," said a relieved Iowa Head Coach Lute Olson.

When it was all over, the Hawks realized that what kept them alive was a typical Iowa second half. Balanced scoring and four men in double figures

Steve Carfino dished out five assists and was 4-for-5 from the field for 12 points, earning a plus 24 on the TPC as well as a starting position in Sunday's game against Idaho. Kenny Arnold contributed his usual steady performance with 14 points and a plus 15 on the TPC.

Despite the victory, Olson continued his critcism of Washington State's Friel Court, a tartan surface. "I really think, from the standpoint of the tournament people, that they should require that the game be played on a wood surface," Olson said.

"As time goes on, it will be proven to be extremely hard on the ankles and knees of the players and I don't think championship events should be played on this type of surface."
