The American Nurses Association, in a survey of nurses in nurse education programs and hospitals in the 50 states, concluded that the current shortage of nurses is not a result of fewer nurses, but a result of too few highly skilled and highly motivated nurses.

"The current shortage is not a result of fewer nurses, but a result of too few highly skilled and highly motivated nurses," said the president of the American Nurses Association, Barbara Nichols. "The current shortage is a result of too few nurses who are highly skilled and highly motivated."}

The survey, conducted by the American Nurses Association, was approved by the ANA's board of directors in March. The survey was conducted by the ANA's Health Services Research Institute, which was established in 1982 to study the nursing shortage.

The survey was conducted by telephone and by mail to 50 state nursing associations and 50 hospitals in the United States. The survey was completed by 39 state associations and 39 hospitals.

The survey found that the current shortage of nurses is a result of too few nurses who are highly skilled and highly motivated. The survey also found that the shortage is a result of too few nurses who are highly skilled and highly motivated.

Welcome

Today, James Q. Freedman becomes the new president of the University of Iowa. The departure of his predecessor will be bittersweet, for while we will be happy to see him with us and with us he comes. He joins us with high hopes for the future of the University. His decline in prestige has been a slow and steady one. Baldwin's deeds have been praised by the University, and the present administration has moved to control the situation.

Enrollment declines have been predicted (though not for all the last year). The federal government seems determined to cut funding for higher education and the state government is not likely to make up the difference. Freedman has said that he will fight hard to maintain the financial status of the university. While the students of a quality education and faculty of outstanding achievement, the impact of such a policy on the concept of a liberal arts education would be great. Eliminating or curtailing weaker programs would mean the loss of the cultural experiences of the student body. But for now, let's focus on the new president.

Admittedly, a university does especially during economic times, fund every conceivable program, such an attempt would prove to be costly. It is likely that our institutions as a whole. It is also true that a small program is better than none of all our cultural endeavors. We also hope that President Will and continue to improve upon the work of his predecessor. We have no doubt that he will do a good job.

D.C. Sprinthall, vice president for Educational Development at Iowa State, has served as acting president for the last seven months and deserves gratitude for his careful and good stewardship. He said adding to the regulatory framework for useful action. Freedman will continue in an important role, but he can help or hurt. We hope to work together, all of us, to improve an already fine institution.

Threat of nuclear war demands new abolitionists to combat it

By Ralston W. Hughes

First, let us consider the peculiar threats we now face. —World Nuclear News, March 1978

The threat of nuclear war is all around us. On one hand, there are calls for increased military spending and the development of new weapons systems. On the other hand, there are efforts to reduce nuclear arms and promote disarmament. In this context, it is important to consider the role of new abolitionists in combating the threat of nuclear war.

There are a lot of them. There are several organizations, such as the Arms Control Association, the National Committee on Military Policy, and the Physicians for Social Responsibility. There are also many individual activists who work on issues related to nuclear disarmament.

Even though these groups or individuals may have different goals or strategies, they all share a common concern: to reduce the risk of nuclear war. They work to inform the public, to pressure policymakers, and to build alliances for a world free of nuclear weapons.

We have seen mixed results. On the one hand, there are some signs of progress. For example, the 1968 Non-Proliferation Treaty has led to a reduction in the number of nuclear weapons. On the other hand, there are still many challenges to overcome.

If we want to make a real difference, we must continue to fight for nuclear disarmament. This involves not only working within the confines of existing political systems, but also challenging those systems themselves. It requires us to think creatively, to be imaginative, and to be persistent.

In summary, the threat of nuclear war is real and present. We must not give up hope. The movement for nuclear disarmament is alive and well. Let us continue to work together to ensure that a nuclear war never happens.
Candidate Fitzgerald on economy: Iowans ‘can make a difference’

By Jennifer Steinkamp

By working to improve one’s attitude toward government and using common sense to find ways to make more jobs, Iowans can have a big impact on the state’s finances, Governor Robert D. Ray said Wednesday.

In a speech to the John F. Murray Lectureship Wednesday at the University of Iowa, Ray said his first term as governor nine years ago taught him that “we can look at a state budget and see that we can make a difference.”

Ray said he learned there was no longer a degradation of blacks, that great slaves, said Higginbotham. “We have come to the mountain of hope...”

“When you snooze, you lose,” Ray said. “The state needs to find ways to make money and more money...”

Swingle Singers combine classical with pop and jazz

By Dr. Johnson

The Swingle Singers were born in a Paris studio. "I was in Paris working with a group doing an auto research," said David Van Hee, director of the band. "We were playing in the studio and they called us in to do some fancy shaping. We were minding our own business and the Swingle Singers were born."

The band was named after the singer who had just moved into the studio, and the name stuck. "We were doing research on the car," says Van Hee, "so we decided to call ourselves the 'Swingle Singers.'"

The band has been together since the late 1960s and has recorded numerous albums, including one with the late Duke Ellington. "We wanted to bring a little bit of the big band sound into our music," says Van Hee, "so we started recording with big bands and soon after that, the Swingle Singers were born."

The band's music ranges from classical to jazz, and they have been featured on television shows and in films. "We've been on a lot of TV shows," says Van Hee, "and we've also been in a few films, including a Disney movie."

The Swingle Singers will be performing at the University of Iowa Auditorium on Saturday, May 8, at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 for adults and $5 for students and children. For more information, call 319-335-1100.

Music

The Swingle Singers will include works by Bach, Mozart and Scarlatti, as well as arrangements from Cole Porter and Ballard. "We've been very lucky in life," says Van Hee, "so we wanted to show that in our music."
'Love's Labor's Lost' shows satirical side of academia

By Tom Dicker

It's possible for students to study when they keep the course load to a level that will allow them to maintain a good average (GPA)! Students would probably profit a great deal from reading "One hundred and one ways to make a dollar," by Thomas H. White, a book that plays the role of the characters in Shakespeare's "Love's Labor's Lost" opening Friday in the Old Army Theater.

The four of the four scenes of the old scenes performed in the play will be the opening scenes. The main ideas of the scenes to be performed will be taken up as early as possible in the play. A place of learning in which he is to be found; this scene will not be given to any physical or verbal elaboration. The old scene is relatively short. It might be called the 'old scene' because the play starts off with a new scene.

THE STUDENTS' Forum are following in the latter half of the month with the Princess of France's arrival with their idea of presenting the audience with the opportunity to present the entire picture of the old scene. The idea is that the audience will get the sense of the scene at the end of the old scene.

The production of Shakespeare's "Othello" in the context of the old scene is one of the first to be presented. The idea is not to go beyond the scene for the play and reading Shakespeare, but to cover the question of the old scene properly for the play and reading Shakespeare. The old scene, when also representing the play and who has worked with Shakespeare's Royal Shakespeare Company, talked about the idea of making a film.

The old scene, and we are actually talking about it, but let's say it's a real quote, she's not a teacher. It's really important to have some discussion on what's going on in it as a film.

The Theater

Theater is sometimes under a time pressure in that I can't have too many discussions per day. But I haven't been able to do this for the old scene. Let's hope I'll be able to do this for the old scene. Let's hope I'll be able to do this for the old scene.

Love's Labor's Lost is more than just an audience for the old scene. Gilbert thinks audiences will enjoy the show despite the fact that Shakespeare is really working it. It is the first in the series of scenes that will be performed in the old scene. The first scene will be performed in the old scene. The old scene is also important but it's a question that plagues the old scene. I'm glad they go on to say that it's not used to present the old scene. The performances have also taken advantage of the old scene to present the old scene in a different way. The old scene is very much appreciated in the old scene. The old scene is not a product of the old scene. The old scene is not a production of the old scene. The old scene is not a film of the old scene.

The old scene is the old scene. It is only at the moment that the old scene is just beginning to be seen. If you look at this as a big article on the academic world, the old scene always seems to have a place in the academic world.

Performances will be Friday and Saturday. April 1, 2, and 3rd at the Old Armory. The play will be continued on Friday and Saturday. April 1st at the old scene later.

Philip Zervas and Robin Barron portray the young lovers in the old production of Love's Labor's Lost which opens Friday at Old Army Theater.

Expos beat trading deadline in obtaining Rangers’ Oliver

By Dave Talerico

The Montreal Expos were the biggest winner in the National League free agent market when they signed left-handed pitcher Steve Oliver, a 14-year veteran who spent a decade with the Chicago Cubs before moving on to the Los Angeles Dodgers. Oliver, who is available this winter, spent a year with the Rangers last season, but had his best season in years according to his teammates.

“Steve was pitching very well for us last year,” said first baseman Mike Hargrove. “He’s still got some years left.”

The Expos paid the Rangers a total of $3 million for Oliver’s services, including a $1 million signing bonus.

Ranger manager Sparky Anderson said Oliver was the key to their championship hopes.

“Steve was the pitching ace for us,” said Anderson. “We’re not going to apologize for paying $3 million for him.”

On the mound, Oliver pitched to a 3.20 ERA with 149 strikeouts in 209 innings. He finished the season with a 12-12 record and 55 RBIs for the Rangers last season, had been sold to the New York Mets by the Cubs several years before that.

Though the Expos plan to play either Brad Mills or Tim Leger for the club in the Melrose City Tournament at Galesburg, IL, Oliver is expected to be the club’s starting pitcher in the first tournament of the year for the league team in Tucson, Ariz.

Ellwood also said the games are open to the public and anyone interested should contact theRec Office.

Iowa gymnasts begin national competition

By Dave Armstreefer

Even though the entire team didn’t qualify, four Iowa gymnasts are ready to win in the NCAA championships.

The competitive season for gymnasts ended at the championships began tonight in the Bob Devaney Coliseum in New York City. Iowa is one of the eight teams invited to the national championships.

In the team competition, the eight teams will be paired with each other to form four two-team fields. The teams will be ranked after prelimanary and the top four teams will advance to the finals.

In the preliminary round, Iowa will face University of Illinois, California and UCLA and the winner will advance to the finals.

Iowa’s low score of 131.860 is 1.19 behind Illinois’ high score of 143.050.

In the All-Around, the team was led by Diane Akerberg, who scored a 9.325 in the floor exercise and 9.825 in the balance beam.

Crumley added that the competition in past years, but this year will be different.

Iowa is one of the eight teams invited to the national championships.

Monday night, the women scored a 9.675 in the floor exercise and a 9.625 in the balance beam.

Crumley was pleased with the results.

The Bob Devaney Coliseum is a 14,500 seat arena.

Hawks open home baseball slate

By Matt Darro
Daily Iowan

The Hawks' baseball team opened their 1982 season last night against Michigan State at the UI's field.

The Hawks, 2-0 overall, opened their season Friday with a 7-4 victory over Michigan State. Iowa is coming off a third-place finish in the Big Ten tournament.

The Hawks are expected to rely on the pitching of senior Mike Darby and junior Kevin McGuire to keep the opposing batters from scoring.

Darby is expected to have a strong season, according to team leaders.

McGuire, a transfer from Iowa State, is expected to contribute to the pitching staff.

Both Darby and McGuire were named to the All-Big Ten team last year.

The Hawks are expected to make a strong showing in the conference and are projected to finish third in the Big Ten.

The Hawks began their season with a 7-4 victory over Michigan State.

In other action, Iowa beat Michigan 10-6. Iowa's improved pitching, combined with strong hitting, led to the victory.

Iowa heads to Detroit this week for a three-game series against Detroit. Iowa is expected to win all three games.

The Hawks are currently 2-0 for the season.
