In the wake of Notre Dame Basketball Coach Digger Phelps' recent accusations of widespread bribery in college recruiting, a magnifying glass of sorts has been placed over intercollegiate athletics. The two weeks that have elapsed since Phelps' statements, however, are hardly time enough to improve a situation that has been worsening for years. As a result, a distressing shadow hangs over college basketball as the April 14 national letter of intent date

The current recruiting situation is schools." one that Iowa and Iowa-bound athletes are not unaware of. Iowa's Big Ten Freshman of the Year, Michael Payne, who was recruited by "about 150-200 schools" as a prep star at Quincy High School, said: "I was never offered money, but sometimes you get offered other things. One school told me that if I visited, I could go on a fishing trip with some of the team members.'

PAYNE declined the offer. "My mother and father were very wary of that when I was selecting a school, and my (high school) coach (Jerry Leggett), helped screen all the Meager as the fishing incident may seem, Leggett immediately informed the NCAA of the offer. "I don't like to take any chances," Leggett said. "I didn't want anything to happen to Michael Payne.

But Leggett did describe a disturbing incident that occurred when Payne was being recruited. "The worst thing that ever happened was a coach who called Michael's dad and said that I was racially prejudiced and (must have) persuaded Michael to go to Iowa" since Iowa Head Coach Lute Olson is white.

According to Leggett, Payne's dad, a former Hawkeye basketball player.

was angered by the accusation. "Tom about it was when Mark Aguirre was Payne knew this was absurd and told him that he was no longer welcome to call their home."

Michael Payne may be an unusual example in that, although he was one of the most heavily-recruited high school basketball players in the country last year, he said he received few unethical

"ANY SCHOOL that would stoop so low as to bribe a kid is obviously not a good program. But it does go on," Payne said. He recalled a bribery case he had heard of when he was a high school player: "The first time I heard offered $10,000 and a car by some school." Aguirre was the 1980-81 AP Player of the Year for DePaul as a junior and was the first player chosen in the 1981 draft.

Mendel Catholic basketball star Andre Banks, a Chicago prep headed for Iowa next fall, hit the headlines a week ago when he was in Pittsburgh for the Dapper Dan Roundball Classic, a game that pitted a team of U.S. all-stars against the Pennsylvania all-stars.

A Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reporter quoted Banks as saying, "What Digger Phelps said last week about there being a lot of pay-offs offered and made is true. It's been going on for years. The head coaches don't do it, most assistant coaches wouldn't get directly involved in it, but the alumni wind up doing it after an assistant coach tips them off about a particular kid.'

THE REPORTER followed Banks's comments by saying, "Others who said they had been offered bribes were..." He went on to quote four other high school players in town for the game on various items they had been offered such things as cars and money.

The story was picked up by both the Associated Press and United Press In-See Recruiting, page 6

Reagan's pledge receives doubt

By Jennifer Shafer

Local officials called President Reagan's statement made on Saturday that his administraion has not proposed a reduction in college student loans "double talk"

"Basically, he seems to be saying that he's not cutting loan programs, he's just trying to get a hold of the cost of the federal government, and passing that cost on to students" by stiffening loan requirements, according to John Moore, UI director of Student Financial Aid and Admissions.

"TO ME THE approach seems to be misleading because what was emphasized ... is that he is not cutting loans to students, he is cutting the cost of the federal government," Moore said. "But cutting the cost is restricting the ability of students to get the loans. It's a round-the-circle way of address that "a lot of people have sim-ply been misled" into believing they them," Hubbard said. cannot afford to attend college if his proposed financial aid package is passed by Congress.

Reagan said the cost of providing the educational loans, not the loans themselves, is what he wants reduced. The guaranteed student loan program would drop from its current level of $2.7 billion to $2.4 billion on Oct. 1 if Reagan's proposals are approved.

BUT BECAUSE the federal government only guarantees the student loans made by private banks, "not one dime" of the money he wants cut has ever gone directly to students, Reagan

The loans are popular because students can get them at below-market interest rates for a maximum 10-year repayment period. But the president's explanations did not settle with Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for Student Services.

Reagan proposes to eliminate the federal loan program students can afford and substitute a loan program so expensive that few students can use it, Hubbard said.

"IT'S MISLEADING to say (students) won't be affected because in principle (loans) are still available because it will affect them if they can't afford it," Hubbard said.

Richard Summerwill, president of Iowa State Bank and Trust, said Reagan's statements "sound like an indirect way of blaming someone else" for the student aid cuts. Summerwill said Reagan's proposals would force most banks to curtail the loan's 10-year repayment period to around three years - a time span too short for four-year college students who enter the work force at the bottom rung of the pay scale.

UI Student Senate President Patty Maher said the president is "kidding "Banks only make the loans because himself if he thinks it's not going to

MOORE SAID Reagan may have made the statements in an attempt to "mend the fence" with Congress and the educational community. "The news has been so full of the rebellious stand Congress has taken in regard to the cuts in student aid."

Rep. Minnette Doderer (D-Iowa City) said Reagan's statements were surprising because the president 'sounded like he just discovered the federal government didn't loan the money directly."

The eligibility requirements proposed by Reagan would require families with more than a $30,000 annual income to demonstrate financial need to receive a loan. The proposed standards would also eliminate graduate students, who can now receive the 9 percent loan and not pay interest until graduation.

Reagan also proposes to raise the fee charged for granting a loan from 5 percent to 10 percent.

Haig: No letdown in Falklands crisis yet

Secretary of State Alexander Haig said Monday "substantial differences" still separate Britain and Argentina and abruptly postponed his return to Buenos Aires. Argentina prepared its fleet to sail, possibly against the British blockade around the Falkland

In Buenos Aires, the foreign ministry said Argentina welcomed "with a broadly favorable spirit" a Peruvian proposal for a 72-hour truce and would abstain from all action that could lead to an armed conflict" if Britain did

There was no reaction to the Peruvian proposal from Britain, however, and Argentina continued to airlift more troops and supplies to the Falklands to avoid Britain's naval blockade imposed late Sunday night.

Despite the Argentine pledge to abstain from action, there were indications the Argentine fleet was preparing to sail from port and possibly challenge the blockade.

A NAVY COMMUNIQUE said Navy Commander Jorge Anava had visited the major naval base of Port Belgrano to give a farewell message to the fleet of approximately 15 major warships, which are ready to head out "when the command is given."

A news source in the area, 425 miles south of Buenos Aires, said the fleet has not sailed and it was not known exactly when it would. NBC News said the fleet could sail during the night.

In London, Haig said after 11 hours of talks with British officials that he would return to Buenos Aires early Tuesday for further talks. However, later, State Department spokesmen Dean Fischer said "a complication" has arisen in Argentina and it was not known when Haig would go to Buenos Diplomatic sources in the Argentine capital said Haig's return has been delayed because of the tough British stance on the Falkland Islands ques-

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez told Haig by telephone that the new British responses to the Argentine peace proposals were unacceptable, the sources said. "There has not been any progress,"

Professor's military course is no 'bomb'

By Nancy Lonergan Staff Writer

James Murray, UI political science professor and a long-time proponent of nuclear disarmament, once favored the use of atomic bombs.

"My initial reaction to the first use of nuclear weapons was a sigh of relief," he said.

That first use occurred when Murray was an ensign on a U.S. Navy destroyer near the end of World War II. He was trained for the U.S. invasion of Japan which did not occur because the United States dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Many years passed before Murray's positive reaction toward nuclear arms soured. But he became convinced that international tensions could too easily unlease mass destruction long before nuclear disarmament became the popular issue it is today.

Murray was first alarmed when military policy was not being taught in resident Kennedy stepped up U.S. the university," Murray said. President Kennedy stepped up U.S. nuclear arms production through the intercontinental ballistic missiles

Before Kennedy took office, the United States trailed the Soviet Union in nuclear weapons production. But a vear after Kennedy's election, the arms gap was quantitatively in favor of the United States, Murray said.

DURING KENNEDY'S arms build up, Murray joined the Committee on International Action, an Iowa City group which wanted to see nuclear arms limited during the early 1960s.

"I didn't do any more than the average citizen," he said. That is, until a bull session with fellow Committee of International Action member and UI psychology Professor Dee Norton.

'We decided that it was fantastic that an important aspect of public 1970-71 to organize its political science

The two dreamed up a military affairs class in which Norton would cover the technical aspects of nuclear weapons and Murray would discuss U.S. and Soviet political stances. The political science course, Military Affairs, became part of the curriculum and is still taught by Murray and

The grand finale of the class is the examination of the annual U.S. Defense Department Report which lists U.S. military spending. Students learn the United States' underlying military policy by seeing how money was spent for defense.

Care center staff halted on union bid

By Kevin Cook

The creation of a bargaining unit for employees of the Johnson County Care Facility has been stalled while officials try to decide if the union can call itself the Staff Employees Collective Organization.

It's not that the Iowa Public Employment Relations Board has anything against the SECO label; the PER Board is trying to determine whether the union is the same one care facility employees voted to decertify last fall.

According to state law, a bargaining unit cannot represent an employee group for one year after the same unit has been decertified by the employees it represents.

Al Logan, who is trying to organize care facility employees, appeared at a PER Board hearing Monday afternoon and explained his

Until last fall, employees of the facility were represented by the SECO division of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trades, the group Logan formerly represented.

According to Logan, he and the Painters union "parted ways" last year; the two groups contracted to work together in 1978. Employees of the facility voted to decertify from the SECO division of the Painters union last

The question that the Public Hearing Relations Board must decide is whether Logan's SECO and the SECO division are the same.

A PAINTERS UNION official told the PER Board that Logan's group is not affiliated with his union. But the Painters union, represented by organizer Charles Graham of Independence, Mo., wants to prevent Logan from using the SECO name.

Graham said that SECO merged with the Painters union, and said his organization paid SECO's debts to state agencies. The Painters union lays claim to the SECO name, he said. According to Graham, the Painters union has no objection to Logan's formation of a bargaining unit. He said SECO is the name SECO divisions at 12-14 other sites.

"We just want Al to change one letter, one

According to Logan, the merger with the Painters union was merely a "merger of contract and the people under them." He said that SECO was created in 1972 and agreed to work with the Painters union in 1978.

"I think SECO division and SECO are two different entities," Logan said.

There is a SECO unit independent of the Painters union of about 50 clerical and professional workers at the UI, Logan said.

MARY JO SMALL, UI assistant vice president for Finance, confirmed that there are independent SECO members who work for the UI, but said that SECO does not function as a collective bargaining unit for them. She said that SECO originated at the UI, and said Logan was a major factor in its creation.

McClimon, hearing officer for the PER Board, has the role of "conciliator" between the two groups. McClimon called the matter a

We have not been able to resolve this in formally," McClimon said. On March 25, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors voted to leave the decision up to the PER Board. Board Chairwoman Betty Ockenfels cast the only dissenting vote.

OCKENFELS SAID Monday she wants the supervisors to "take a stand that the two entities are one and the same.'

Supervisor Don Sehr disagrees with Ockenfels, saying he "takes issue with county intervention" in the matter. The decision should be left to the PER Board, he said.

The supervisors' labor negotiator, Bob Burns, attended the meeting and suggested the supervisors contact the PER Board after a formal vote on the supervisors' stand on the

lowa Senate gives bills swift approval

DES MOINES (UPI) - The Iowa Senate, in rapid-fire action, Monday approved bills that would lift limits on school cash reserves, require offenders to make restitution and toughen drug penalties.

The bills were among 19 sent to Gov. Robert D. Ray. Majority Leader Calvin Hultman of Red Oak said the action should be a signal to House colleagues that the Senate is serious about adjourning next weekend.

In all the bills, the Senate accepted House changes then cast a final vote.

The school cash reserve bill was shipped to the governor on a 36-12 vote. It would remove the current 7.5 percent limit on cash reserves and allow the School Budget Review Committee to order the state comptroller to reduce property taxes if a district has an unreasonably large reserve.

THE HOUSE included in the definition of a cash reserve the "unspent balance" of a district budget.

On a 47-0 vote, the Senate gave final passage to legislation that would require judges to include a restitution plan when they prepare a sentence. If a poor person cannot afford to pay court and attorney costs, the judge can require some form of community

The drug bill, sent to Ray on a 49-0 vote, would make drug dealers who sell fake drugs face the same penalties as if they sold the real thing. It also would allow triple fines against drug dealers. And, authorities could confiscate property used in drug dealing and use proceeds from the sales.

"Lookalike" drugs also would be more difficult to sell. The bill makes production, sale or possession of lookalike drugs an aggravated misdemeanor. The maximum penalty would be two years in prison and a

THE SO-CALLED "Son of Sam" bill passed on a 49-0 vote and was sent to Ray. It would force criminals to put proceeds from movies, books, magazine articles, stage presentations and broadcasts into an escrow account. Victims, or their representatives, would be given five years to file suit for the money.

Other bills sent to the governor would eliminate the requirement that a couple take syphilis tests before receiving a marriage license and establish an Iowa Youth Corps program under the direction of the Office of Planning and Programming. The bills passed on votes of 47-2 and 48-0, respectively.

Ray had recommended the youth program in his "Condition of the State" message. He asked lawmakers to appropriate $808,220 for fiscal year 1983 to be used as grants for the Youth Corp and $73,220 for administration.

In other action: tight state finances make a tax on interstate telephone calls a necessity, Ray said Monday, and he disagreed with the idea of reviving the "unemployed parents" aid program.

SEVERAL LEGISLATORS have suggested reinstating the unemployed parents program. One-quarter of the families who were aided by it have broken up since it was killed last year, they said.

"I'd like to see how they'd finance it," Ray said, pointing to the $7.5 million cost of the progam. "They haven't even adopted our proposals to meet our budget requests."

Ray said projections of tight state finances showed the necessity of adopting the phone tax, which he proposed this year in addition to taxing windfall oil profits and changing the way nonresidents and part-year residents compute their income taxes.

Gerry Rankin, the legislative fiscal director, last week estimated the state will run a $13.5 million deficit next year. The state would be at the break-even point, he said, if the Legislature adopts all the taxes suggested.

Class helps students choose careers

By John Nelson Special to The Daily Iowan

When Joseph Hines first came to the UI over a year ago, he was lost.
"I had no idea what I wanted to major in,"

said the 19-year-old UI sophomore from

Today, Hines is studying recreational education and knows where he is headed. He credits it all to a class he took last fall—Making a Vocational-Educational Choice (7C:081), offered by the Department of Councils Education

Like many other college students, Hines was pressured to choose a major he was unsure of without exploring his options. "I was ignorant about a lot of different careers. My parents pressured me to major in business,"

After two semesters, he was still not happy with business, and decided to take the career

In the course, Hines learded about different careers and about himself. "It helped me realize my true values and interests. I've always been interested in sports and coaching. This class helped me learn more about it."

Making a Vocational-Educational Choice is a two-semester hour, pass/non-pass course, designed to help students make a decision about an academic major or degree.

RON JOHNSON, a former UI graduate student in counselor education, created the course in 1972 as part of his doctoral dissertation.

"We have students take a look at their abilities, values and interests as well as their life and career goals" before making a career choice, said teaching assistant Tom Price.

Course coordinator Dr. David Jepsen, associate professor of counselor education, said the course also helps students handle changes and make sound decisions.

"Many students are at a point in their lives where major changes are taking place ... They're at an age where they must learn how to make their own decisions.

"We try to teach students good decisionmaking skills so that they can apply them to such major decisions in life as career choice," Jepsen said.

The course consists of one lecture and two small group discussions each week. Jepsen said the course is unique in that students are not required to learn all of the material — only what interests them.

The lectures present information on searching for jobs, writing resumes and preparing for interviews.

IN THE SMALL group discussions, about 15 students and an instructor talk about career difficulties. The students provide one another with moral support. "They can relate to each other's problems," Jepsen said.

other's problems," Jepsen said.

Paul E. Hills, a freshman taking the course, agrees. He is debating whether or not to go into the family business, as is another student in the group. "I can really relate to his problem. We're both not sure what to do."

The course also gives students first-hand knowledge of the careers that interest them. They participate in "environmental exercises," visiting work environments that they want to learn more about.

"They observe the people at work, ask questions about the job and then write up their reactions," Price said.

Students also become familiar with some UI services that aid students in making career decisions.

They complete the System of Interactive Guidance and Information (SIGI) computer program, which provides information about college programs and occupations and takes students through the steps of making a career decision.

They also visit the Career Resource Center and become familiar with the services it provides, he said.

ANOTHER important aspect of the course is reducing students' anxieties over career decisions.

Kathleen Staley, course coordinator from 1974-79 and current senior staff psychologist for the UI Counseling Service, said, "18, 19, and 20 years of age is awfully young for students to make a decision on what they think they'll be doing for the rest of their lives.

"Actually, students should look at it as the first of many choices," because the average person changes jobs seven times in her or his lifetime, she said.

Price echoed Staley's concern:
"Traditionally, students are expected to choose a major by their junior year and stick to it. I'd just as soon get away from that."

He said the average UI undergraduate changes her or his academic major approximately three times. "There are 40,000 different occupations out there. We try to assist students in becoming aware of what's available and where to look," Price said.

Students may fall behind schedule, and may have to make up credit and postpone graduation, but Price said this is preferable to choosing an unsatisfactory major or job.

ANOTHER student in the course, Gary Thompson, was also pressured by his parents to major in business.

"Although this class didn't provide me with a choice on a major, it did tell me that I didn't want to major in business," the 19-year-old sophomore said.

"It motivated me to think about a lot of different areas. I now know where to go and what to look for."

Thompson said he learned to have confidence in his own decisions. "Tom (Price) helped me a lot. He taught me that, no matter what I decided, it was okay for me to be whatever I wanted to be and to do whatever I wanted to do — just so long as I was happy."

Price has taught the class for three semesters and is pursuing a doctorate in counseling and human development.

"I have a lot of empathy for these students," he said. "I can relate to them in that I changed my undergraduate degree four or five times."

Terre Haute cited for Nixon Library

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UPI) — Downtown Terre Haute would be a perfect location for the Richard M. Nixon Library, says local businessman Richard Eldred

While other cities have refused the collection of important Nixon documents, Eldred is spearheading a drive to plant the controversial library in the traditionally Democratic city.

"We read an article about how the people in Independence, Mo., didn't want the library, and I thought, 'Why not Terre Haute?' "said Eldred, 32, president of a local moving and storage firm.

Eldred said the library would help revitalize the city's downtown section, and would be close to the nearby Indiana State University campus. He said Terre Haute also is geographically central to a network of Midwestern colleges which could use the library as an educational tool.

BUT ELDRED mainly wants the library in Terre Haute because it would attract tourists.

"The city would possibly net as much as $15 or $20 million a year from tourists who come to see the library," he said. "Based on figures from the National Archives, about 500,000 visitors would come to see it each year."

He said studies in other towns that are homes for presidential libraries show each visitor spends at least $30 in the community.

Board to vote again on home-study plan

By Elizabeth Flansburg

The Iowa City School Board will vote tonight for the second time on whether to accept John and Cindy Daggett's request to teach their children at home.

Superintendent David Cronin and the board's legal counsel John Cruise have advised the board to approve the proposal at least on a "conditional basis" for the remainder of the 1981-82 school

In February, the board unanimously approved a home-study policy requiring 22-25 hours of certified teaching per week. Under the policy, students at home would be required to spend as much time with certified teachers as students in school and to participate in the program for a minimum of 180 days.

The Daggetts asked in December 1981 for permission to teach their two children at home. But the board voted 4-3 against the home-study plan, and then set out to draft a policy outlining rigid requirements for home-study programs.

The Daggetts, who both have backgrounds in education, previously lived in the Clear Creek Community School district where they taught their children at home for two years.

ALTHOUGH THE Daggetts said in February that they were sure the board would approve their home-study program, they said they were unhappy with the board's policy because it stressed the number of hours spent with a certified teacher rather than stressing equivalency in educa-

In other action tonight, the board will vote on whether to extend an agreement with a local citizens' association which helps high school students build homes.

Cronin said students from the city's two high schools have been building houses in the area for about six years to gain practical experience and get involved with the community's experts.

Cronin said the association, composed of local builders, realtors, bankers and other interested people, organizes and finances the home building project for high school students. After a house is sold, the association receives the profits which go into a scholarship fund for the students.

Lessons of Poland crisis said to have global meaning

By Jonathan Brandt Special to The Daily Iowan

Solidarity may no longer be on the front pages of the world's newspapers, according to University of Oregon Professor Joseph Fiszman, "Yet the lessons of Poland have universal meaning."

Fiszman spoke on the Polish government's crackdown on the Solidarity union Monday on the UI campus, and said the lessons from the Polish crisis are applicable to countries around the globe, particularly in places like Latin America and Eastern Europe

Solidarity, the Polish labor movement for socialist-democracy, came about in response to what Fiszman called the "bankrupt ideology of the state."

Far from being a people's government, the Polish leadership had evolved into a privileged elite similiar to the Soviet Union's top echelon.

Like the Soviet elite, those in power in Poland have succumbed to the corruption that is rife among upper-level governmental employees. Officials and citizens alike have forgotten their "Lenin and Marx," and a class structure has filled the vacuum, he said.

THE UNION movement was fueled by widespread discontent with the communist state. As an indication of the Polish peoples' dissatisfaction, Fiszman gave the results of a poll taken three years ago.

Asked which party they would vote for during an election, those polled responded in the following way: 35 percent said they would vote for the Christian Democrat party, 32 percent said the Democratic Socialist party, 40 percent said the Peasant Party, and only 31/2 percent said they would vote Com-

"Solidarity became merely a channel to vent that accumulated steam," Fiszman said.

In recent years, the Polish government has tried to take its citizens' minds off the government's ideological bankruptcy by resorting to huge displays such as giant factories licensed to build Westernstyle goods for local consumption.

These factories may have temporarily diverted the public's attention from the more immediate concerns of food shortages and poor housing conditions but ultimately they harmed the Polish economy.

"IT'S A SYSTEM in which they pretend," Fiszman said. "They pretend to be socialist, they pretend to be communist, they pretend to be freedom-loving."

Solidarity rose up because of the communist state's pretensions, Fiszman said. In Polish, the union's name means renewal.

Fiszman said the U.S. government has an ambivalent attitude toward events in Poland. In one respect, the United States hopes for new freedoms, but fears a change in the status quo that might destabilize Eastern Europe, harm trade or even spark a major confrontation with the Soviets.

The Soviets see Solidarity as a dangerous movement. "In Moscow, they're simply afraid of the new" and the Soviets fear the spread of such sentiment to its borders through Eastern Europe.

But the Soviets may not be able to quell the union movement, Fiszman said. "You can keep people down but you cannot keep them happy," adding that another uprising will probably occur within 10 years.

In a suit filed last week in Alameda County Superior Court, Jeffery Mousaieff Masson alleges that he was fired from what he believed to be a lifetime position as project director of the Freud archives because of his reassessment of Freud's theories.

The suit further charges that curators of Freud's estate are now attempting to block Masson's access to Freud's unpublished works.

Anderson: Small business incentives key to jobs

By Rochelle Bozman

The No. 1 issue in the upcoming state elections will be the economy and lack of jobs in Iowa, according to Democratic lieutenant governor candidate Bob Anderson.

Anderson, a state representative from Newton, said Monday the state government should concentrate on helping small businesses to help stimulate jobs.

'There are some directions the state could take that would help the economy," Anderson said. "Recent studies show that 90 percent of the new jobs in the last year have been created

Rep. Steven Rapp, D-Waterloo, is the only other candidate to oppose Anderson in his bid for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. Anderson hopes to have the upper

"I think I stand a very good chance," Anderson said. "I've been to about 20 counties now and the response has been very good. I think my leadership in the House and in the community is my strongest point."

ANDERSON THINKS one of the three Democratic gubernatorial candidates will win this year and said he could work with any of them."I think the Democrats will win in the house this year and I would have been in the position to become leader of the house. I would not have taken the chance of running if I did not think I could win.'

One solution that Anderson would propose to Iowa's economic problems would be to place limits on the amount of federal taxes Iowans are allowed to deduct from their Iowa taxes.

"That is the most regressive tax there is," Anderson said. "It allows a large number of wealthy Iowans to avoid their responsibility to the state." He said Iowa is one of the few states that has no limit on the amount of federal taxes that can be claimed and he was one of the first legislators to support the idea six years ago when he was elected to the house.

"I proposed it six years ago because there were people making over $100,000 a year who weren't paying any state taxes and those are people that can afford to pay," he said.

PROGRAMS THAT have been overlooked and underfunded in the past should be supported by the state, he said. When funding these programs "we should look at not only the cost of the program, but whether or not the spending of these dollars is making someone more independent or whether these dollars can be seen as an invest-at when we are allocating this money - not just how much money we can cut the budget," he said.

Ignoring these funding problems will not make them go away, he said. "That is not the kind of farsighted plan a business would make - it's very shortsighted. The state is going to end up paying more for these programs."

Education is one of the things that must be funded properly, Anderson said, adding that the $14 million institutional fund, which is money requested by the state Board of Regents to increase faculty and staff salaries. should be looked at more closely.

Computer for elementary children bought by school district foundation

Iowa City elementary school children will soon be tapping through such computer programs as how to scare your mother with an elephant or how to maneuver a tricycle to the planet Pluto.

An Apple II Plus microcomputer was bought last week for Iowa City's elementary schools by the new Iowa City School District Foundation, which raised the necessary $1,933 through direct mail solicitation and the individual efforts of the organization's board.

The next plan is to purchase four additional computers by the end of 1982. Because most of the district's 15 elementary schools will initially share one computer, each school will have it for just three weeks. Lucas and Hoover elementary schools purchased their own machines.

Created last fall to help schools combat budget cuts and inflation, the private, taxexempt foundation proposes to raise revenue for similar important projects. They will have 21 members on the board, representing each of the district's elementary and secondary schools.

BOARD MEMBER CLAIRE GERBER, whose two sons attend Ernest Horn Elementary School, said: "We hope to be the umbrella over all the support groups ... and maintain the district's services. There has been a statewide crunch in the budget. Things really came to a halt in terms of spending and we would like to maintain the quality programs we have in the district.

'We plan to work closely with the Iowa City School Board of Education. We are modeled and designed after the University of Iowa Foundation.'

The foundation's 16 members unanimously decided to make their first purchase a computer, Gerber added. "It is a small way of starting, rather than holding our money in the treasury ... There is a growing trend towards computers in Several pictoral manuals accompany the computer, and teachers can be trained to use the machine in 90 minutes. District Media Coordinator Jean Donham is in charge of use of the computer. She said: "We have already established a circulation system. The computer will always touch base with us before it goes to the next

She explained that Apple II plus was selected for its expandability, capability and ability to be connected to printers.

Banking bill moving through legislature

DES MOINES (UPI) - A com- Jesup, described the interest payments promise bill designed to aid savings as being in the interest of people. "This and loan associations breezed through is a people amendment," said Priebe. the Iowa Senate Monday, belying weeks of haggling between legislators, bankers and other financial officials.

The legislation, sent to the House on a 36-11 vote, would limit state regulathe activities of ba savings and loan associations and credit unions. In fact, if approved by the House, it would revolutionize the way financial institutions do business in Iowa.

"This is a good bill," said Sen. Edgar Holden, R-Davenport. "None of this will be a panacea but I think we provided for most of the objections."

Lawmakers spent only about two hours debating the bill, although the Senate a few weeks ago was forced to return the measure to committee when a carefully constructed deal began to

Most of the debate focused on thether savings and loans should be required to pay interest on all new esow accounts. Escrow accounts are set up by lending institutions to hold roperty tax payments of homeowners, o usually make monthly payments in addition to mortgage payments.

Sens. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma, and Lucas DeKoster, R-Hull, wanted to remove from the bill mandatory interest payments on escrow accounts.

The proposal was defeated on a 27-21

The Senate adopted a proposal by Sen. John Murray, R-Ames, to allow savings and loans gradual lending powers. Murray explained the authority of state-chartered thrifts to get into the commercial area would be triggered by federal law or regulation.

If a federal law is not enacted, savings and loans could participate in the commercial area with up to 1 percent of its assets. In 1983, thrifts could use 2 percent of their assets with an additional 1 percent of their assets on each July 1 up to 5 percent.

SAVINGS AND LOANS could use 10 percent of their assets in the commercial area only if the federal government finally enacts a law or regulation.

Key features of the bill would: · Limit bank charges for bad checks to $3.25 or 1 percent of the total check · Allow bank holding companies to BROWN ARGUED many savings own banks that hold no more than 9 percent of the total deposits of banks in the state. They also can own savings and loan associations that hold no more than 9 percent of the total deposits of savings and loans in the state.

City's CDBG funds may pay for dam

By Scott Sonner

More than one third of the city's $671,000 in Community Development Block Grant funds may be used to help meet rising contruction costs of the North Branch dam.

The Iowa City Council informally decided Monday to use as much as $251,415 in CDBG funds for the dam, despite recommendations from the Committee on Community Needs that the funds be used elsewhere.

Included in the quarter-million dollar shift is $180,210 the needs committee had recommended be spent on local housing programs and repair of the roof of the Spouse Abuse Shelter.

The dam, to be constructed east of Hickory Hill Park, is the final phase of the city's Ralston Creek flood control

The use of more CDBG funds for the construction of the $760,000 North Branch dam came after much debate over the purpose and effects of such funds

Mayor Mary Neuhauser and Councilors Larry Lynch, John Balmer and John McDonald said they favor using more than $251,415 in additional CDBG funds for the dam. But Councilors David Perret, Clemens Erdahl and Kate Dickson said at least half of that should be used to finance other programs for Iowa City's low and moderate income residents.

Erdahl said diverting the CDBG funds would not leave the Committee on Community Needs enough money to work with.

The $251,415 in additional CDBG funds, coupled with $61,000 available through money budgeted to city sewer systems, would leave the city only $13,000 short of the $760,000 construc-

The $251,000 figure is the sum of $71,205 in CDBG funds the Committee on Community Needs left unallocated and $180,210 in CDBG funds that the committee recommended last month be reallocated.

COMMITTEE members said Monday they were not aware the council expected that $181,000 be used to aid in dam construction costs, so the committee recommended in March the following additions to its budget:

Spouse Abuse Shelter, $2,610.

• Rental Rehabilitation, $75,000. • Independent Living Center,

• Congregate Housing, $16,300. The committee also increased its recommended budget for Housing Rehabilitation and Weatherization to $145,300 from $129,000 with some of the funds saved on the Lower Ralston Creek improvements.

Another funding option for the dam's construction discussed by the council was the use of general obligation bonds. But Balmer said that bonding would end up costing taxpayers "considerably more.

"I'd like to see the all the dam construction financed with block grants," Balmer said.

Perhaps students respond because Murray begins and ends each class with a call for questions that lead to class discussion.

Apart from his teaching role, Murray advocates a reduction in conventional Banks read the story and was unhappy with the insinuations. The Chicago Sun-Times quoted Banks as saying, "I couldn't believe so much was made of what I said."

Flaherty, said that Banks has not had contact with any college recruiter since last November when he made his oral commitment to Iowa.

"All Andre did was repeat a lot of things he has heard and read about other athletes who have had offers," Flaherty said. "Everything he talked about was second-hand."

WHEN PHELPS made his publicized allegation in New Orleans shortly before the Final Four, he claimed that bribes of $10,000 were the going rate.

Isiah Thomas, who, as a sophomore led the Indiana Hoosiers to the 1981 NCAA championship and is now a member of the Detroit Pistons, was a prime target for unethical recruiters in his senior year at St. Joseph High School in Westchester, Ill. The Sun-

Times reported that among the offers directed at Thomas, one school called his mother offering to pay off the mortgage on the Thomas home.

NCAA Director of Enforcement S. David Berst said some of the NCAA regulations are difficult to interpret; pecifically, he cited the section on official paid visits to a college campus by the prospective student-athlete, saying, "They're not the strictest rules."

For example, one subsection of the rule states that it is permissible to provide entertainment for a studentathlete and his parents during his paid visit, but those provisions must be made on campus. The second part of the rule states: "Transporting a prospective student-athlete to any other site for any purpose is not per-

BERST SAID that the NCAA would most likely impose a penalty only if 'it's a case where they took him 100 miles away and lodged him for a couple be imposed unless the school is willfully gaining an advantage over the rule," he said.

Berst has a committee of eight fulltime investigators and a handful of part-time investigators who are recruiting violations are not responsible for enforcing the regula-

Leggett, who talks with his players to make them aware of the tactics of an unethical recruiter, proposes that direct penalties be imposed on the recruited athlete and the college coach if violations occur. "If 'Joe Blow' accepts a 'Coach Smith' bribe, then penalize both of them; tell Smith he can't coach for three years, and tell the athlete he can't play for three years."

SAYS THOMPSON: "Most young guys know what's right and what's wrong. When we recruit players, we give them an (NCCA-produced)

You have to realize that necessarily slapping down $10,000 and saying Here it is. A lot of what I pens are in-between things. Schools can get by the rules in a lot of ways.'

Jim Rosborough, an Iowa assistant basketball coach, said, "Every program that you think is perfect has skeletons in the closet."

Without condoning unethical practices, Thompson offered a different perspective: "Basketball is such a big business and there is so much pressure on coaches that some feel they don't have any choice. Either they go out and win or the school will find someone else who can. It's not a job anymore. They're sitting in an arena with 15,000 screaming people and if they lose, they'll be screaming for him to be fired. That's a lot of pressure. He figures he'll be gone sooner if he's fired than if he's caught cheating."

After ownership of the Grandview Court Apartments changed last summer, the new owners canceled existing leases and issued new ones - complete with overnight rent increases of from $80 to $100 per month. Some residents moved out in disgust, but others decided to stay and fight. They formed the Grandview Court Apartment Tenants Association and sued the new owners.

The suit was settled last month, in favor of the tenants. The new owners are required to award monetary damages and rent reductions to those still living in the complex, and must help pay the moving expenses of those who left.

The tenants' success should be seen both as a moral victory and a call to further action. Grandview Court residents received their legal due only after expending substantial time and effort putting together a lawsuit. Not everyone in the same situation would be able to organize as effectively.

The answer lies in a suggestion put forth by Sue Boege, spokeswoman for the Grandview group: the formation of a citywide tenants' association. A permanent tenant advocacy organization could respond quickly and effectively to charges of abuse, and might make landlords more reluctant to take unfair advantage.

The mechanism for such a group exists already in the UI Protective Association for Tenants; persons interested in joining or promoting the group should call the PAT office at 353-3013. Protecting the rights of everyone in Iowa City who rents is the best way to protect your own rights as a tenant.

Gubernatorial issues

Iowa will elect a new governor this fall, and candidates are proposing programs to aid the state's ailing economy. Former Iowa House Majority Leader Jerome Fitzgerald, a Democrat who lost in 1978 to Robert Ray, has announced some proposals that deserve serious consideration.

Fitzgerald suggests that the state invest money to fund the ailing home construction industry, and re-establish a public works program, financed with a gross receipts tax on oil companies, to repair Iowa's roads and bridges.

By spending between $1 million and $2 million of state revenue, the Iowa Housing Finance Authority could sell bonds or borrow up to $50 million to be loaned to Iowans to buy new homes at reduced interest rates. Fitzgerald contends this would raise the number of construction projects (and hence employment) because people otherwise unable to purchase their own homes then could.

His tax proposal would put an estimated $42 million in the state treasury. Iowa's constitution mandates that money raised from motor fuels taxes be spent on transportation. In addition to oving the quality of the state highway system, the program would increase government employment. Oil companies contend the cost will be passed on to motorists. Even so, the biggest burden would be put on those people who buy the most gas and therefore use the roads most.

It is encouraging to see the gubernatorial candidates discussing substantive issues this early. Fitzgerald, former U.S. Attorney Roxanne Conlin and former state Democratic chairman Edward Campbell are all campaigning heavily. This election, unlike many others recently, seems geared more towards presenting real options in state planning and development than towards being a

Truth in sports

Sports supposedly represent the American way: competition, sportsmanship, physical fitness. Yet cheating in sports is epidemic. College basketball has been particularly hard-hit because a single illegally recruited player can turn a whole program around.

Recently ex-Clemson coach Tates Locke has written a book about his cheating ways, several pro-players have admitted that unnamed schools offered illegal enticements, and Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps and New Mexico coach Gary Colson have publicly decried the rash of cheating. Phelps claims $10,000 per year is the going rate for good players; Colson claims that a particular player was offered $200,000.

But while Phelps has reported some violators to the NCAA, he refuses to publicly name schools he knows are paying atheletes, and Colson refuses to report anyone specifically, even to the NCAA - an attitude shared by many coaches.

To condemn cheating without putting yourself on the line to stop it is hypocritical. Coaches who know about cheating should go public with their information, instead of making general accusations that put all athletes and coaches under suspicion. University presidents must become more active in policing athletic departments, while also adopting criteria other than wonlost records for hiring or firing coaches. The NCAA should increase the penalties against universities for cheating, and also prohibit coaches with major rules infractions from ever coaching at other NCAA schools.

Meanwhile, the press and the public ought to ignore the whiners who want sports cleaned up — but don't want to help.

Democrats may win the battle of reapportionment around country

By Clay F. Richards

GOP Woes: Reapportionment was supposed to be a boon for Republicans. The new census shifted 17 House seats from northern industrial urban - and Democratic — areas to the Republican sunbelt. Some party leaders said the GOP would pick up half the 26 seats they need to control the House from reapportionment alone

But Democrats pulled the strings in the statehouses where reapportionment is done and the courts have upheld their work. Republican National Chairman Richard Richards is saying the party will get six seats through remapping; but in private conversations, the RNC computer experts who know how to read the new district lines are saying a gain of no more than four and possibly only two.

That is contingent on no major disasters in the two big states still to reapportion - New York and Florida. New York loses five seats, and Republicans say at least three have to be held by Democrats in New York City. In Florida, it looks like the two parties will split the state's four-seat gain.

IN THE PAST week, Republicans suffered setbacks in Minnesota and Texas — two states where they have otherwise made major gains in recent

In Texas, GOP Gov. Bill Clements backed a plan to create a predominantly black district in Dallas, because it gave Republicans the edge in two surrounding districts now held by Democrats. The courts threw that out, adopted a plan that gives minorities significant strength but not a majority in two districts, and in the process left only one safe Dallas seat behind for

The Republicans' first attempt to challenge that court ruling in the Supreme Court failed, and a second challenge is pending.

The high court also turned down an

Marching to the tune of a different drummer

MARCHED TO THE beat of a different drummer - and not in some artsy metaphorical sense. No, this guy was really different. The rumor was he had three testicles; although I never counted the fruit of his loom, I can tell you that he seldom had trouble getting dates.

At first it upset me that this percussionist triple-threat should have one leg up on the rest us, so to speak. Where was I when they were handing out extra helpings of testicles? Probably off in some line getting double-jointed thumbs - a commodity that lost its appeal to the opposite sex about the second grade. I even considered undergoing an operation to correct my inadequacy, but you would not believe how hard it is to find an organ donor for that sort of thing.

Finally in the midst of my disappointment that my sexual anatomy would never measure up to Ripley's 'Believe It Or Not," I came to a revelation of sorts. I decided that I wasn't really interested in any woman who would pine over some big-biceped mutant super-stud. What I wanted was an old-fashioned girl who still believed in the old morality. And with this in mind, I set out to find the girl of my dreams. I'm still looking.

PERHAPS SUCH a woman really does exist, and I'm just going about things the wrong way. (Why just the other day I met a woman who had been a virgin 53 times.) Although my approach is less lycanthropic than most, it is admittedly a bit overstated. I never seem to just fall in love; it's more like somebody pushes me.

I tend to shower women with flowers and theater tickets. Maybe I should just hand the things to them - I don't know. At any rate, when I came to college, I listed celibacy as one of my hobbies; and lately I've been devoting a lot more time to it.

Still, I can't help hoping that the girl next door has merely moved across town. I peruse the personal columns for evidence that she still lives, but all I see are ads like "Kinky AC-DC couple seeks fling with transexual contortionist. Must have electric blanket and jacuzzi or pet rhinoceros. We'll supply the jello." I look at that stuff, and l can't help wondering what these people do on the second date.

NEEDLESS TO SAY, all of this is a bit overwhelming for a guy who still gets a vicarious thrill out of holding hands. Probably I was meant to be a Pennsylvania Shaker. The Shakers, you'll remember, sat around all day making furniture. You see, their religion forbade any mingling of the sexes. Naturally this made for a dull prom night, but it was also responsible for some fantastic dining room sets. Sure, every once in a while somebody slipped up and produced a little Shaker. but when that happened they either banished the couple from the colony or disguised the kid as an endtable.

And maybe that's just my problem. When my father took me aside to explain the facts of life, all he did was stare at the endtable between us. I grew up thinking that sex had something to do with furniture. To this day, I still can't look at a copy of Architectural Digest without getting excited

In fact, I think the words my mother used to say to me were more helpful. "Gene," she said, "shut up." And you know what? Mom was right. It doesn't do any good to talk about these things. The best you can hope for is to live a good life, and to get the high score on some video games along the way.

Needles is a UI graduate student. His column appears every other Tuesday.

Poetry fest includes Bell tonight

Special to The Daily Iowan

Much of the poetry now being written has a quality of voice one might best describe as anonymous or impersonal. The ambition of such poems is to speak, as it were, beneath the issue of personality, and to perfect an image of the world that corresponds to art.

As more or less privileged readers, we overhear the voices of such poems as one might overhear another's private conversation. And whether our attention fails or follows through in such poems depends on the rendition and performance of image and detail.

MARVIN BELL, who will read from his work at 8 p.m. tonight in Shambaugh Auditorium as part of the weeklong Poetry Festival, offers a contrast in his fifth and most recent book of poems, These Green-Going-to-Yellow. The poetry bridges the gap between the purely personal and the public, bet-ween life and art, and renders its content directly to the reader with a generosity of spirit unequalled among poets of his generation. For instance, note the first several lines of "Late Naps:'

Maybe you as the reader of this poem can tell me ...

THE OSTENSIBLE subjects of the gorgeous poems in this new book. whether it's a hedgeapple tree, a volcanic crater, Rodin's Balzac or the effects of travel, are defined by an amplitude of feeling which is sustained not by proposition but rather by a precision of detail that only a powerful and mature poet can manage. These Green-Going-to-Yellow is an important book because it contends with a rich poetic tradition that goes back through Williams and, at the same time, pushes it forward, renewing it.

In Bell's body of work, it represents, too, a transition from the quieter, more reflective poems gathered in earlier books, to a more expansive vision in which the imagination is intensely engaged with and imbedded in the physical and human qualities of life.

IN THE TITLE poem of the book, Bell writes about a correspondence of types between the natural and the human — part for part — by recalling a gingko tree planted on East 61st Street in New York whose leaves resemble "Chinese hands on the sidewalks."

Bell's first book of poems, A Probable Volume of Dreams, won the Lamont Award from the American Academy of Poets in 1969. He has also been awarded Guggenheim and NEA Fellowships, the Bess Hokin Award from Poetry magazine and the Emily Clark Balch Prize from the Virginia Quarterly Review. In 1977, Stars Which See, Stars Which Do Not See, was a finalist in the National Book Awards.

Bizarre 'Boom Boom' an escape

By Tom Giesen Special to The Daily Iowan

The advertisement for the University Theater production of In the Boom Boom Room pictures a mysterious female silhouette over which is written "The bizarre life of a go-go dancer who mixes love and work ..." - which doesn't say much about the plot. It does, however, say almost everything that needs to be said about the play.

David Rabe's play opens Wednesday for seven performances at E.C. Mabie Theater.

The setting is a 1960s Philadelphia go-go club called the Boom Boom Room, and the main character, Chrissy, is one of the club's dancers. Rabe, an Iowa native, supposedly got the inspiration for the play from a friend of his who complained there Boom Room examines the role of women connected with a certain portion of society but whether it is a play "for women" is open to question. What Rabe did create was a world caught between fantasy and reality.

Guest director James Milton has worked as an actor and director with such groups as the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco, the Theater for the New City in New York and Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival. He was drawn to Rabe's play, he says, "because the strangeness of the characters and their relationships with each other are very, very funny ... in a morbid sort of way.

THE CHARACTERS who congregate were no plays for women. In the Boom around the Boom Boom Room are from the lower rungs of the social ladder, misfits who are normally pushed aside or used in plays as comic relief. Milton characterizes them as "the sort of people Kojak arrests.

"I find all the characters in the play very interesting, very human. They're certainly destructive of others and of themselves and are caught up in that pattern of behavior." he said.

A resident of New York's Times Square area, Milton says the characters are people he "lives with everyday. They are a low class of people, but they are people. The play is a very, very tough examination of assertive power - the way that it's welded and the way the people it's welded against react."

Besides situations in which the women are "overpowered," many of the characters are vengeful racists, which Milton sees as another powerbased reaction. The characters (whom Milton describes as "monstrous but not really monsters") are in this power battle because "the set of values they've come to accept is so twisted that in order to maintain any sort of self-esteem they end up putting other people down to make themselves feel better. It's a natural human reaction although a misguided one."

THOUGH RABE brings in elements incest, homosexuality, violence, racism and the aura that was the 1960s. In the Boom Boom Room is a comedy. The situations are bizarre but offer an escape. The Boom Boom Room, as Milton puts it, "is a place where people can come to see that the playboy dream can be happening for them. It's a fantasy world, a sort of Disneyland for adults of a certain persuasion."

The black comedy will be presented at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, continuing April 23 and 24, and 3 p.m. Sunday at E.C. Mabie Theater.

Little creativity in rock remakes

Music, of late, is suffering from a seeming dearth of creativity. From the frenetic days of acid rock, rock music has moved through the calculated capitalism of disco into a watereddown revival of its first, and arguably most creative, era.

It has not done so gracefully. Serious musicians are falling into a TV trap: if it worked once, it'll work again. Garland Jeffries, for example, was going strong until his remake of ? and the Mysterions' "96 Tears," which brought nothing new to the music other than improved recording techniques.

I suppose one must be philosophical about all this. After all, there is no clear musical trend for anyone to follow these days, so performers have been forced to come up with things on their own and the musicians chosen by the marketing savants — who live by surveys and sales figures rather than any musical knowledge - to be stars can't handle it. Rock is like politics; that which sells through mass media is not necessarily that which is of the highest quality.

FINE EXAMPLES of this are Nick Lowe and his buddy Dave Edmunds. They survive by lifting riffs from everyone in sight and putting them together like some kind of pathetic life raft to keep their careers afloat. That's all well and good while thinking in terms of raising everyone's awareness of music past, but it puts them pretty much in the same league as all of those rounds of Holiday Inn lounges.

Particularly irritating was their cover version of the Righteous Brothers' "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin'." There ought to be some sort of stylistic copyright law making it illegal for anyone to swipe someone's performance style without giving credit and, in extreme cases like "Stars on 45," massive royalty payments and prison terms.

Not that all remakes are intrinsically awful. Devo's "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction" made big points on the curiosity-of-genre scale and Joan Jett's "Crimson and Clover" is a different view of acid/op, albeit a limited one. But nothing can justify Cheap Trick's day-tripping attempt at sounding like a well-recorded Beatles' live album.

THE WORST of the lot is probably Van Halen's "Pretty Woman." Without wavering, the tasteless children/fans who make Van Halen what they are rich - have swallowed a glorified high school hop band capable of dropping mindless heavy metal only long enough to crib Roy Orbison with all the subtlety of Rich Little doing Richard Nixon. They are not paying tribute to an influence, they're co-opting that influence entirely.

The point of recording as a medium is that the work of the original artists can be saved for posterity. You can listen to "Chattanooga Choo Choo" recorded in the heyday of the big bands without settling for the disco slush of Tuxedo Junction. The flaws in the recording caused by the technology of the time are much more than mere glitches; they are the proof of the material's authenticity that illuminates the character and times of

Looking for a couple of wins to give the squad momentum heading into the Big Ten tournament this weekend, the lowa softball team plays host to Marycrest College of Davenport in a 3:30 p.m. double-header at Mercer Park today.

"That is one big advantage we will have going into this weekend's tournament at Michigan," Parrish said.

"No one in the Midwest has been able to play any games during the past week and we've been able to get some more experience under our belt. That should help us." Parrish added. Iowa opens that tournament with Michigan State, a team that Parrish terms "perennially strong."

BUT THIS afternoon, Parrish is looking for some fundamental softball out of her team. "Offensively, we haven't been playing well," Parrish said. "We did hit the ball well during the two games against UNI. In fact, we out-hit Parrish is still looking for the Hawks to form as a unit on defense, citing too many errors as one of Iowa's major problems during the early part of the season. "We still haven't put things together yet on defense," Parrish said. 'We've got the talent and the skill to have a good defensive ball club, but we've just made too many errors. hits when it doesn't mean anything." Iowa out-hit Milton, 9-6, but left 11 baserunners stranded in the loss. Twice the Hawkeyes left the sacks full - once having the bases loaded with only one out in the inning.

Milton College, a tiny southwestern Wisconsin school, took advantage of Iowa's inability to come up with the clutch hit Monday in taking the second game of a double-header between the schools, 5-4 at the Iowa diamond.

BUT THE HAWKEYES' situation mirrored Milton's problems in its loss. The Wildcats stranded 14 runners in the opener and were unable to come up with the clutch hit.

Banks, now in his 12th year at the helm, took partial blame for the Hawks' poor showing. "I'm disappointed with the way we approached the game," he said. "It might be my fault. gave the team three days off this weekend."

Iowa had a golden opportunity to sweep the double-header in the seventh inning. With the Hawks trailing, 5-4, Milton pitcher Brad Staley walked the first two batters of the inning. laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt to advance the runners. Then disaster struck. The Hawks' second baseman, Brian Charipar, went down swinging and pinch-hitter Mike Emmerick knocked Staley's first pitch deep into left-center field. The ball appeared to be either a home run or an extra base hit, but Milton's center fielder, Randy Lewis, made a diving stab to end the game, which created an Fegen had mixed emotions after the split. "I'm surprised, but disappointed," he said. "I wanted to win two today. We needed a little momentum going into this weekend."

IOWA'S PITCHING, which has been billed all year as its strong point, was erratic. In the two games, Iowa hurlers issued 16 walks, giving Banks reason to Senior Iowa pitcher Jeff Green, 2-2, gave up nine walks, and relievers Doug Wagner and Radosevich added one each in the first game.

The Wildcats, 11-4, play three Big Ten teams this year - Wisconsin, Northwestern and Iowa. Sims said the Wildcats will add Indiana and Notre Dame to its schedule next year.

Even though Milton is respectable, they pale in comparison to the Hawkeyes' Big Ten opening foe,

"The difference between Milton and Illinois is night and day," Banks said. "I'm scared to death going to Illinois."

Iowa travels to Decorah, Iowa, today for a doubleheader with Luther. The Hawks will return home for a twinbill with William Penn Wednesday starting at 1 p.m. on the Iowa diamond. On Thursday, the Hawkeyes play host to St. Ambrose in a nine-inning game.

CINCINNATI (UPI) - Bob Horner and Chris Chambliss hit home runs Monday night to help the unbeaten Atlanta Braves to a 6-1 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds for their sixthstraight victory.

Bob Walk, 2-0, struck out five,

Bruce Berenyi, 1-1, dueled Walk through six innings, with Horner's solo homer in the second accounting for the game's only run. However, the Braves knocked out Berenyi in a four-run seventh when the right-hander was unble to retire a batter.

Chambliss led off the seventh with is first homer and Bruce Benedict then walked and scored on Rafael Ramirez' triple. Walk, acquired from Philadelphia last year in a trade, singled Ramirez home and later scored

Ringers, Milky Way near crowns in race for all-university honors

By Steve Riley

With four events remaining, Phi Kappa Psi, Ringers and Milky Way lead the races for the men's, women's and coed intramural all-university titles. The titles are awarded to the teams compiling the most points from all intramural activities during

Phi Kappa Psi is followed closely by Sigma Chi in the greek-dominated men's division, 1,127-1,078. Two other teams top the 1,000-point mark. Delta Upsilon has 1,024 and Pi Kappa Alpha has 1,019. Fifth place is held down by Delta Tau Delta with 936 points. Rounding out the top 10 men's teams are: Tau Kappa Epsilon, Delta Sigma Delta, Delta Chi, Lambda Chi Alpha, and the only non-fraternity team, Blue

RINGERS, the defending all-university champion, holds a commanding lead in the women's division with 776 points. They lead Delta Gamma, Chi Omega, Alpha Phi and Flash — the basketball champion.

Milky Way, which won the coed basketball championship, is that division's leader over South Quad, Phi Rho Sigma, Alpha Phi and Road Runners.

Milky Way team member Rick Lockridge said after the team won the basketball title that Milky Way's success is due to its participation in all events.

Tennis, canoe racing, slow pitch softball and tug-of-war remain on the intramural

The Iowa Collegiate Tug-offs will be held at the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls, May 2. Miller Beer superstar Ben Davidson will be on hand.

Pirates ambushed by Cardinals

Pittsburgh used to be known as the "Lumber Company," but it was George Hendrick who put the wood to the ball Monday against the Pirates.

Hendrick slammed two solo homers and Keith Hernandez drove in two runs with a pair of singles to lift the Cardinals to a 5-4 victory over the Pirates at St. Louis.

Hernandez put the Cardinals ahead 1-0 in the first inning with a one-out single to center after Lonnie Smith walked and stole second to open the inning against Tom Griffin, making his first start for Pittsburgh after being acquired from San Francisco over the winter.

Bill Robinson led off the second for Pittsburgh with a homer over the left field wall to tie the game, but the Cardinals regained the lead in the third on a two-out double by Tom Herr and Hernandez' second straight hit.

The Pirates took a 3-2 lead in the fourth against St. Louis starter John singled. After Dale Berra grounded into a double play, Johnny Ray's RBI single

At Chicago, Keith Moreland drove in two runs with a single and his third homer of the season Monday, powering the Cubs over the Mets. Moreland, who hit only 10 home runs in 138 games with Philadelphia before coming to the Cubs along with Dickie Noles and Dan Larson last December, had a run-scoring single in the fourth inning as the Cubs scored four runs off Craig Swan.

In night games, Atlanta was at Cincin-

The Chicago White Sox have started the season with some new faces, a new uniform and a three-game winning Tom Paciorek snapped a scoreless tie with an RBI single in the sixth inning and scored on Carlton Fisk's double, leading the White Sox to their third straight win, a 3-2 victory over Boston Monday in the Red Sox' home opener at Fenway Park.

Steve Kemp led off the sixth with a double to left-center off loser Mike Torrez. Kemp moved to third on a fly by Greg Luzinski and scored when Paciorek poked a 2-2 delivery up the middle past a drawn in infield. After Harold Baines struck out, Fisk, who hit .433 against his former Boston teammates last year, doubled up the alley in left-center to give the White Sox a 2-0 lead.

Chicago added its other run in the seventh while chasing Torrez. Ron LeFlore was safe on a fielder's choice and stole second as catcher Rich Gedman dropped a pitchout. Tony Bernazard doubled to left center and LeFlore scored easily.

Mark Clear struck out Kemp and Luzinski to end the inning and also got Paciorek and Baines to open the next inning. He finished with five strikeouts.

At Toronto, Damaso Garcia drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Garth lorg banged a double and a triple to drive in two more runs, powering the Blue Jays. Garcia and Iorg slammed a two-run single and an RBI double backto-back to highlight a five-run Blue Jay fourth and stake Luis Leal to his first win of the season.

Wet grounds cancel golf tourney

Due to damp conditions on the Ul Finkbine golf course, the Iowa Invitational men's golf tournament scheduled for today is canceled. "It's pretty wet," said Iowa Head Coach Chuck Zwiener. "It will take three or four days to dry off."

Zwiener said the layoff has hurt Iowa's team because members haven't been able to get out on the course and practice their chipping, putting and other shots.

The team will see its first action since spring break when members travel to Columbus, Ohio, for the Kepler Invitational

Zwiener said Finkbine should open up to the public near the end of the week.

STUDENT FOOTBALL TICKET POLICY - 1982

1. A student may purchase one season ticket at the student price. An additional ticket may be purchased at the public price. The guest ticket, at the public price, will not be available after May 14, the deadline for student priority.

2. Students will receive a priority based on the number of consecutive years they have purchased or applied for football tickets at the University of lowa with no loss in priority for student exchange programs off campus or bona fide illness. An individual who misses two or more consecutive seasons for reasons other than the above will lose all priority.

3. Students, to receive their priority for football, must order

3. Students, to receive their priority for football, must order sometime during the period from April 15 to May 14, 1982. These orders will be filled according to priority and will be available for pickup at fall registration. The student ID card and current registration must be presented at the time of pickup.

4. A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than 8, provided he or she has the additional student credentials with him or her. Each student must pay for his or her own tickets and all students must pick up their own tickets and sign for them. All students must be currently registered and "in good standing" (University bill paid) by August 27. All students cancelled on that date will forfeit their tickets and will receive

5. The lowest priority within a group will determine the loca-tion of the entire block of tickets for that group. That is, all students within a group will carry the lowest priority of any mem-

6. Student season tickets will continue on sale on a non-priority basis after May 14, and will remain on sale through Friday, August 27, 1982, if available.
7. A student ticket, to be valid, must be accompanied by ID card and current registration certificate. A student ticket may be used by the original purchaser or any other University of lowa student, but the original purchaser will be held liable for any violations of the student ticket policy.

8. Ticket Ordering Schedule: People with 4 or more years priority purchase Thursday, April 15 from 9:00 am to noon. 3 years priority purchase April 15 noon to 4:00 pm. 2 Years priority purchase April 16 from 9:00 am to 4:00 pm and 1 year priority purchase April 19 from 9:00 am to 4:00 pm. This shedule indicates earliest ordering time for each priority. Tickets may be ordered any time through May 14 without losing any priority in casting.
