Haig returns with new proposal

Secretary of State Alexander Haig headed back to Washington Monday with proposals developed during his four days of talks with Argentine officials, but warned that time is running out for a peaceful solution to the Falkland Islands crisis.

'I am more convinced than ever that war in the south Atlantic would be the greatest of tragedies and that time indeed is running out," Haig said at a Buenos Aires airport news conference before boarding his plane for the 12-hour flight.

Haig said he would convey the proposals developed during his talks with Argentine officials to President Reagan and the British government, which said it sent an additional 1,000 paratroopers to bolster its task force heading to the Falklands.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called a meeting of her top advisers to study Haig's proposals. A full Cabinet meeting was scheduled British diplomatic sources said. Mrs. Thatcher's government would reject at least one of the proposals if news reports of their contents proved correct.

HAIG SAID when he returned to Argentina last week "I brought with me new ideas ... others have been developed here. In more than three days of talks, there has been a further identification and refinement of the Argentine position. We have now finished this phase of our work."

U.S. mediation efforts, Haig said, were still based on the U.N. Security Council resolution calling for Argentine withdrawal from the islands and negotiations on their sovereignty.

Earlier, Argentine junta member Brig. Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo said the talks with Haig produced a "working document" that could serve as a basis for negotiations with Britain over the South Atlantic island chain. A spokesman for President Leopoldo Galtieri also said Haig was carrying a document that could be used to negotiate a settlement to the dispute. British news reports and diplomatic sources in Buenos Aires said Haig's new proposals included the withdrawal of Argentine troops, a pull-back of the British naval force and the postponement of negotiations on the islands' sovereignty.

British diplomatic sources said Britain could accept those proposals, but could not accept a reported fourth plank which called for joint Anglo-Argentine administration of the islands, even with U.N. or U.S. participa-

An Argentine share in the future administration of the islands, the sources said, would be regarded as a reward for an act of aggression - something the British government and Parliament would find hard to a year, and most of them originally come from Iowa pounds, where stray animals are often taken. Tom Olsen, animal caretaker at UI's Oakdale quarters, said: "We receive them (via) the U.S. Department of Agriculture. They are for the most part pound (animals). The pound usually allows about five days for recovery, then the USDA dealers also hold them for five days before we get them."

The UI animal quarters staff usually keep animals for a couple of days researchers used it. "A guy came look-before giving them to UI researchers, but Olson said if a person does not locate his or her pet "after two weeks it might be too late."

Some animals, especially cats, are bought from individuals by the UI, he said. The UI tries to safeguard against The UI uses about 3,700 dogs and cats profiteers by low animal prices, three weeks delayed payment, and an updated check list of lost animals.

> BUT DONALD BRADFORD, UI Coordinator in Animal Husbandry, said some family pets slip through the UI's net. "You never know for sure - it's hard to believe that all the cats who come through don't belong to someone.

> Just this month, Olson was able to return a dog to its owner before

ing for his dog then a dealer who had got it from a pound brought it in to us and we recognized it as the same

The runaways, castoffs and specially-bred animals keep the UI adequately stocked for research. "We've never had trouble getting hold of animals quickly... Mongrel dogs cost a minimum of 40 bucks from the dealer, plus transport. Cats cost $15. A pedigree dog might be $200," Bradford

State law orders fully governmentsupported pounds to make their animals available for research. "The state legislation is orientated towards having cheap animals for research. We (the pound) are supported by public money, and the Code of Iowa means I am technically required to submit my receding away from their poundseizure laws," said Beverly Horton of the Iowa City Animal Shelter.

INSTEAD OF RUNNING the risk that a family pet may end up on the dissection table, researchers should breed dogs for medical experiments, she

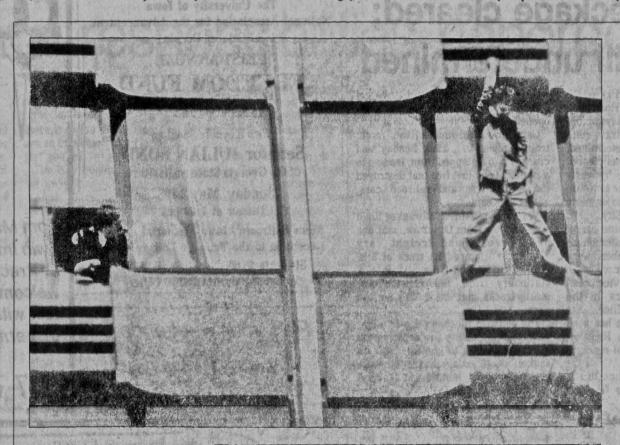

"They've never been in someone's home to lie on the couch and play with the kids," so the dogs would not know any better and a consistent breed would give more consistent results, Horton said. "If they've got to do research, that is the most acceptable

The federal government strongly supports animal research. In the last year, the UI received $16.5 million in animals for research. Other states are federal grants for animal research, according to Brian Harvey, associate director of the UI Division of Sponsored Programs. And the latest figures from September 1981, show that the UI researched on 7,724 warm-blooded animals, excluding the millions of rats, mice and cold-blooded animals.

> PART OF ANY experiment is to examine the animal's tissues, and this invariably involves killing the tested animal plus a normal animal which serves as the experiment's control. 'They're sacrificed - put to sleep - all of them," Bradford said. Animals are used in various ways depending on their similarity with human physiology, according to Paul Cooper, director of UI Animal Care.

Local group's mall dealings now finished

By Cindy Schreuder

A group of local investors has acquired a 50 percent ownership interest in the Old Capitol Center mall through negotiations finalized during the

The new capital supplied by Center Investors will be used to pay off the financially-troubled shopping center's debts, including approximately $750,000 in unsatisfied court judgments and mechanic's liens.

Wilfreda Hieronymus, president of Hieron, Inc. — a corporation that was a cornerstone in the mall's development - said, "We anticipate that between Center Investors and the additional investment by the others that all the bills will be paid, liens and all."

Kenneth Albrecht, a principal in Center Investors, declined to place a dollar amount on the new investment. "We're not using municipal funds. What difference does it make, really?"

The deal was "closed over the weekend and a group of local people bought into it and that's it," Albrecht

Those involved in Center Investors include: Albrecht, the president of Metro Pavers; Wayne Kempf; Iowa City Ready Mix; Boyd and Rummelhart Heating and Plumbing Co.; and Robert G. Barker. The investors are all from the Iowa City area and have been involved in area construc tion and development projects, some of which they have worked on together.

CENTER INVESTORS is now one of three partners that control the mall, according to William Meardon, attorney for the group. The three partners in Old Capitol Center Partners are: Old Capitol Business Center Company, Old Capitol Limited Partnership and Center Investors, Meardon said

Meadow Link Inc., an Indiana development firm, will no longer be involved in the mall, Meardon said. Meadow Link was formerly a partner in Old Capitol Center Partners.

Attorney: Ralston complies with code

By Cherann Davidson

After nearly one month of city review and discussion about a possible code violation at the Ralston Creek Village apartment complex, the Iowa City attorney said Monday that owner James A. Clark has not built two buildings too close to Gilbert Street.

Balconies on the buildings on the 400 block of Gilbert Street extend to within about 16 feet of the street's right of way, while the city code requires that buildings be at least 20 feet from the

City Attorney Robert Jansen told the Iowa City Council Monday that Clark does not have to amend or refile plans for the complex or seek a zoning

Under the city's zoning ordinance if there is an existing building built prior to Aug. 9, 1962, that is within 100 feet of the proposed building, the lot line of the original structure is the lot line for the new building, Jansen said.

The Abram's Furniture and Upholstering store, located at 408 S Gilbert St., was constructed prior to Aug. 9, 1962, with a lot line that is within 7.5 feet of the street's right of way, Jansen said.

THE BALCONIES only extend to 16.5 feet of Gilbert Street, he said, so Clark is not violating city code nor does he have to submit revised plans of the complex even though changes were See Council, page 8

Dormitory residents 'kill' to unwind

Two weeks ago, the UI sophomore lured his unsuspecting roommate, J.R. Woolson, out of their dorm room - and nailed him. It was cold-blooded. Burton laughed as his "buddy" doubled over. But J.R.'s death was avenged - Burton was eliminated in a few days. No arrests have been made. The crimes have not even been reported. In fact, everyone has been acting as if it's a big game.

Well, it is. Several residents of Currier and Stanley dormitories have been playing the "assassination game," which involves trying to "kill" other players with toy dart guns.

Several resident assistants organized

Tim Kremer, head resident for Currier and Stanley, said, "It's that time of the year that students need to do more than study. That's one goal of the residence halls — to provide an alternative activity."

dents with an alternative to studying.

THE GAME was originally introduced at the University of Michigan in 1976 by math student Lenny Pape, and has been growing in popularity

Toy dart guns are the only legitimate weapons and the darts must be rubbertipped. Victims may only be shot in the main portion of the body.

Residents from four floors in Currier and Stanley paid $1.50 to participate. in the game, which started after spring break. One dollar paid for the gun and the remaining 50 cents went into a pot to be awarded to the winner. The winthe game to provide their floor resiner is the only one left who has not been assassinated.

After paying the fee, players were given the names of their first victims. Assassinations in the dining rooms, library, during classes, in victims' rooms and in bathrooms are prohibited.

Before making the kill, an assassin must vell out their victim's name and "Sayonara sucker." Players are allowed to have two bodyguards and may use notebooks, arms or legs to block shots.

So far, Currier resident Betsy Campbell is in the lead with five

The game is popular for its uniqueness, but it also helps students relieve tension, according to Carol McAllister, a resident assistant who helped organize the game.

"IT'S A GOOD activity because it's an outlet for stress and it's a good way to vent overactivity other than vandalism. It takes strategy and creativity," she said.

Woolson, who decided to play the game because it "sounded like a wild time," explained:"You don't know who's after you and if you think you know who's after you, they might be out of the game. After a while you think everybody is after you. It can get pretty real."

Dr. Ross Rapaport, psychologist at the UI Counseling Service, said people try to cope with stress in both helpful and harmful ways.

Exercising and talking to friends about problems are positive ways of handling stress, whereas abusing drugs and alcohol, and failing to get enough sleep are negative responses

But increased needs of the poor at a time of federal funding cutbacks to human service agencies leave the Johnson County program scrambling for more money.

The daycare services would be offered to low- to middle-income Johnson County residents on a sliding-fee scale, if approved by HACAP's governing board.

A "strange quirk that will never happen again" has blessed HACAP with about $120,000 more than the amount of federal block grants anticipated by HACAP administrators, the program's executive director said Monday.

Don Maniccia, executive director of Cedar Rapids-based HACAP, said $40,000 of the $120,000 will be used to prevent layoffs of employees scheduled for May, but about $80,000 of the money remains 'unallocated" and "flexible Common Cause doesn't receive the credit it deserves, former U.S. Sen. Dick Clark said during a fundraising reception for the Iowa chapter of Common Cause Monday.

"When I went into the Senate I decided not to join or associate with a particular organization," Clark said. But it became increasingly difficult not to join this one.'

But if Common Cause supports a nuclear freeze, Common Cause may be accused of being "left" instead of a nonpartisan organization, Clark said. Kenny Purcell, acting state chair-

Joan Mondale: Arts vital to U.S. cities

By Nancy Lonergan

The arts are essential to America and should receive government support, Joan Mondale told aproximately 400 participants of the fifth annual Iowa Women's Day.

Mondale, wife of former Vice President Walter Mondale, is the author of Politics in Art, and was the honorary chairwoman of the Federal Council on Arts and Humanities during the Carter administration.

She spoke at an Iowa Women's Day seminar Monday in the Union Main

"Americans once thought of the arts as a frill, an ornament," she said. "People who ask why the government should subsidize the arts might just as well ask why the government subsidizes highways.

The arts are highways for ideas and provide necessary mental stimulation, she said. "Minds, like parachutes, work best when they're open."

Today, the arts attract business to communities and revitalize cities. For example, Mondale said, Dow Chemical Company wasn't able to attract people to the Midland, Mich., plant because the town was culturally dead.

But after an arts center was built there people were willing to relocate to the town. "The arts are a part of the answer, not part of the problem," Mon-

THE ARTS spark cities that are on the decline and "are the difference between colorless cities and vital ones." Yet the Reagan administration proposed an "unnecessary" 50 percent budget cut of the endowment for the arts, she said.

The fund is not large enough to show up in the federal budget "pie," she said. The endowment fund "is about the cost of one B-1 bomber."

Fortunately, she said, Congress rejected "shunning" the arts.

business and to provide culture and beauty to communities, but sometimes it can even ignite controversy.

The Alexander Calder sculpture the 1960s was criticized by residents who did not understand it, she said. People were angry because unemployment was high and the city was by the UI Alumni Association spending about $500,000 on the sculpture, she said.

But the work was eventually accepted by former Grand Rapids resident and U.S. President Gerald Ford, and people accepted it also, she said.

Ford's "suspicion" changed to "reflection." The sculpture became the city's logo and is used on city stationary and "even on the city's trash trucks," she said.

THE ARTS "remain as a part of our heritage and gift to the future," she said. It is "civilization's sign, the thumbprint we leave behind.

Americans live by their beliefs. If they believe art is not important, the quality of art produced will decline, she said.

If this occurs America will "be remembered as a large country but not

For the arts to flourish in America, individuals, businesses and the government must provide support, she said. "The most effective way to support the arts is to be a consumer," she said.

In addition to drumming up support for the arts, Mondale and her husband Art serves not only to generate are raising funds for 1982 Democratic congressional candidates.

Her husband is considering running for president in 1984, but "he has not made up his mind and it is inaperected in Grand Rapids, Mich., during propriate now to say anything" more, she said.

> Americans rallied across the country Monday - reading anti-nuclear poetry in San Francisco, singing folk songs in Louisville, Ky., and holding up pamphlets at the Boston Marathon - as part of Ground Zero demonstrations to educate people about the horrors of nuclear war.

Organizers addressed a lunch-hour crowd cross the street from the White House in Vashington, D.C., and announced plans for a huge rally in New York City they hope will attract a half-million people.

About 350 colleges and universities planned Ground Zero activities this week.

to develop a grass-roots push to prevent nuclear war. Its name is based on a military term for the point of a nuclear detonation.

About 300 people gathered on the sunny plaza in front of San Francisco City Hall to hear a proclamation issued by Mayor Dianne Feinstein. She called on Americans to become better informed on the issues of nuclear confrontation.

PATRICIA ELLSBERG, wife of Pentagon Papers activist Daniel Ellsberg, told the crowd that in her lifetime, the number of nuclear weapons in the world has grown from none to more than 50,000.

"Our country is adding 17,000, and the Soviet Union will add more," Ellsberg said. The crowd listened to readings of antinuclear poetry and statements, ranging from remarks by President Eisenhower to those of children who have written President Reagan asking him to prevent war.

About 200 people showed up for a rally in downtown Louisville. They sang anti-nuclear and folk songs and placed a stone tablet in a small park area as symbolic designation of the center of a potential nuclear blast.

In Washington, a group of protesters gathered across the street from the White House to show opposition to the nuclear arms

Nearby, a Hyde Park-style speaker's corner on the nuclear issue drew little response in LaFayette Square.

SPEAKER GERALD SCHNEIDER, a Libertarian party candidate for the Maryland legislature, addressed a scattered crowd. Across the park, a chess game drew more onlookers than the Ground Zero event.

Organizers said a peace march and rally calling for a freeze on nuclear weapons will try to attract 500,000 demonstrators to New York City's Central Park from religious, labor, women's, civil rights and peace organizations across the county.

THE MEDIAN family income nationwide was $19,908. For Asians and Pacific Islanders it was $22,075 (perhaps, analysts noted, because of more workers in a family and a higher than average education level.) For white families the figure was $20,840, while for families of Spanish origin it was $14,711 and for black families it was $12,618.

The census figures showed 27.5 million Americans living in poverty in 1979 - 12.5 percent of the population compared to 13.7 percent in 1969. In 1979 the poverty line was

WASHINGTON (UPI) - In its first snapshot" of Americans based on the 1980 census, the government reported Monday U.S. families are getting smaller but richer and better educated, with more women working and housing costs skyrocketing.

Favoritism in baseball coverage; some sports fans may go without

By Jeffrey Miller Staff Writer

Baseball is back, and with it, like wienies and beer, comes Joe Garagiola, Tony Kubek and the NBC Game of the Week (various times, Saturday, KWWL-7). Which means another summer of Joe telling his interminable Yogi Berra stories, of Joe complaining about how much today's players make, of Joe praising camera crews for their wonderful shots of NBC banners in the crowd.

If it weren't for Joe, in fact, NBC's baseball coverage would be close to perfect. Their camera crews actually do get wonderful shots, simply because they follow the ball instead of the player. (ABC's Monday night baseball crews always seem much more interested in getting up close and personal with Reggie Jackson than in the game itself.) And Tony Kubek has matured into one of the two best announcers (along with ABC's Al Michaels) on TV today.

In past summers, however, the Game of the Week has frequently turned out to be the Yankee Game of the Week. Because of New York's size and George Steinbrenner's media manipulation, the Yankees control the lion's share of Saturday baseball hours.

ADMITTEDLY, the foibles of Steinbrenner, Dave Winfield, Bucky Dent and the

dear departed Reggie, et al., make something of an interesting soap opera plot. But soap operas need more than one group of characters and one storyline.

NBC and its Game of the Week, to be fair, are hardly the worst practitioners of favoritism in televised sports. The networks' college football and basketball broadcasts seem to rotate around 10 teams throughout the season. And the day that CBS's telecasts of the National Basketball Association fail to feature either Boston, Philadelphia or Los Angeles will be the day Larry Bird receives the Nobel Prize in

Unfortunately, network policies that restrict their coverage of sports to a few favored markets, teams and stars work to the detriment of the sports themselves. The most interesting teams in baseball this year are located in Atlanta, Chicago and Milwaukee. But the chances of seeing the Braves, White Sox or Brewers in a game not involving the Yankees or NBC's other faves (the Phillies, Dodgers and Angels) are all too slim.

BASEBALL FANS who subscribe to cable, of course, can get Braves games fans of Count Floyd and "Monster Chiller Horror Theatre," Chicago's WGN has the really scary "Dr. Tongue's 3-D House of

For those consigned to baseball on the networks, however, it looks like another summer of "All Steinbrenner's Children." I love New York, but the woes of poor, unplayed poster boy Bucky Dent and the whereabouts of Bob Watson's family are already as tedious as a Yogi Berra anec-

James Wolcott writes in the Village Voice that "The David Letterman Show" has been progressing well. I wouldn't know, as I've usually been in the middle of my falling skyscraper nightmare by the time the show comes on here

At last, though, the rest of Letterman's eastern Iowa fans and I have been served. KWWL-7 has moved the show up to 11:30 p.m., the scheduled network time. ("Saturday Night Live," the ratings of which have never measured up to what the station hoped for, has been moved back to 12:30

Letterman's guests this week include eccentric magician Harry Anderson, wonderful weatherman Willard Scott and discodominatrix Grace Jones. If you haven't seen the Letterman show yet, enjoy - it beats falling skyscrapers.

Velikovsky explores earth-shattering idea

Special to The Daily Iowan

Mankind in Amnesia by Immanuel Velikovsky. Doubleday, 1982, 225

It may be that no writer has ever obtained the literary mileage from a single idea that Immanuel Velikovsky has managed to do. The man died in 1979 at 84. Mankind in Amnesia is his seventh book, and the foreword promises several more posthumous volumes, these presumably to serve as a perpetual fountain of revenue for the beneficiaries of his estate.

The ideas that have generated all this verbiage were first enunciated Velikovsky in Worlds in Collision in 1950. The author believed, unlike most of the scientific establishment, that evolution of the earth to its present state took place not by a gradual process of change, but by way of a series of cataclysmic, literally earthshattering events. Some of these, he believed, involved interplanetary collisions and may have occurred as recently as within the last few thousand years of Earth's existence.

The titles of some of the subsequent books explain themselves - Ages in Chaos, Earth in Upheaval. They are all well-written accounts of supportive evidence taken from both ancient and modern sources. In his writing, Velikovsky appears as something of a Renaissance man, equally conversant with Aristotelianism and modern geophysics.

The theme of Mankind in Amnesia is that the human race has, submerged in its collective unconscious, recall of the cataclysmic events. Because they were so disturbing, the memories have been repressed but remain a segment of our racial memory. Not being able to face this part of our past, however, we may be on the verge of creating our own modern cataclysm in the form of a

THE BOOK INCLUDES a lengthy discussion of Freud's and Jung's concepts of the subconscious and repressed memories. In some parts, there are more quotations per page from Freud's work than there is text by Velikovsky. The reason is simple: venkovsky, like Freud and Jung before him, enjoyed the status of a mystic. All three were practitioners of that most obscure medical art, psychoanalysis. The theories presented in the book. though they fascinate, are in no way subject to rigorous scientific proof.

Velikovsky always relished his role as an anti-establishment figure in the scientific community. He was certain that his radical ideas were years ahead of their time and that "since Aristotle in classical times, and Laplace in modern times, the desire to know only so much and not more has dominated scientific endeavor.'

In this book, he compares his own plight with that of Giordano Bruno and Galileo in the 1600s. One can almost imagine Velikovsky at his eloquent best before the Inquisition. But the era of the Inquisition is past. Galileo's work served as the basis for much of modern astronomy. It is doubtful that Velikovsky's theories will prove more than an interesting footnote to modern

This week is Ground Zero Week, and a number of groups around the country and here in Iowa City have planned events to educate the public about the effects of nuclear war. All citizens who care about their own lives and the life of the human race owe it to themselves to participate in at least one of the events scheduled.

The Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament is sponsoring a movie, The Last Epidemic, today at 2:30 p.m. in 100 Philips Hall, and a vigil Thursday at the Pentacrest from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Physicians for Social Responsibility have planned a symposium on the medical effects of a nuclear war. It will be held at the Union Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

This might also be a good time to look at the defense budget game as played in Washington and to consider where $1.5 trillion plus of the public's money is going over the next five years.

Navy Secretary John Lehman toured shipyards in Baltimore and hinted to the Maryland Congressional delegation that a $48 million project depended on it supporting the entire Reagan defense budget. When the cost of the new F-18 planes soared to $32 million each, the Navy considered dropping them, but the delegation from Massachusetts, where the engines are built, fought because it feared damage to the state's economy.

The Pentagon regularly underestimates costs in order to get approval of major weapons systems. Then the builder adds cost over-runs and delays. The B-1 bomber is a prime example. The Pentagon said it would cost $19.7 billion for 100 planes. The Congressional Budget Office recalculated and said the cost would be closer to $40 billion. And critics say that by the time Rockwell International, the chief builder, adds the usual pattern at its end, the true cost could be $100 billion.

Think about these costs and think about what all-out nuclear war means, then take part in one of the scheduled events this week. Linda Schuppener Editorial Page Editor

Federal surtax

As the failure of President Reagan's economic policy becomes increasingly eminent, so too his former campaign pledges seem to be less and less realistic - even to him. Already Reagan has abandoned much of his highly touted "new federalism" package designed to turn over many federal programs to the states. Now with the 1983 federal deficit expected to be well over $100 billion, there are signs that Reagan may go along with a 4 percent surtax on incomes over $35,000 a year - thus negating many of the tax incentives he claimed were so vitally necessary to the success of his "trickle-down" economic plan for increasing jobs and production.

Even if the inherent drawbacks of these policy reversals are ignored, it is easy to discern the folly of such an ad hoc economic policy. This is especially true when the president continues to extoll the virtues of Reagonomics even as he tugs at its foundations. His plea that the American people give his program a chance rings hollow when even he, at least in principle, is considering abandoning ship.

If an economic recovery is to be forthcoming, a consistent and reasonable economic policy is imperative. The states as well as individual citizens should have the opportunity to plan their financial affairs in advance without fear of ever changing federal

So, if the current budget proposals are as unworkable as many believe them to be, then perhaps it would be best to draft an entirely new plan. Certainly this would be superior to watching the administration's frantic attempts at policy patchwork while they maintain the fiction that the current program is sound.

Gene Needles Jr.

Sirhan Sirhan

In 1984 Sirhan Sirhan, convicted killer of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, will be paroled from prison if the movement to keep him imprisoned fails. He should not be released for a number of Every killer strikes not only at the victim and her or his family, but at society as a whole - that is why the state prosecutes criminals. Crime is an attack on the social fabric; it tears the agreement that individuals make with each other when they build a civilization.

Because that rending is a deadly act, there is good reason to argue that all pre-meditated murder should be punished by lifeimprisonment, without parole. But murder of political figures is even more serious. Not because politicians are better or more important. Not because of the potential contributions they might make — a good, loving and hard-working man or woman surely contributes more to society than say the late Sen. Joseph

But to punish lightly the murder of political figures sends the message that the United States, like a totalitarian state, condones the making of political decisions by the expedient of killing those with whom one disagrees.

Murder of politicians is more than the ending of a life and all its potential, more than the causing of grief to family and friends, more even than an attack on the agreements needed to construct a civilization. It is an attempt to rule the country by terror; it is an attempt to impose political decisions on the entire nation by the threat of death.

Sirhan Sirhan did not just kill Robert Kennedy, person, and Robert Kennedy, member of society. He attempted to limit, define and control the country. Society can survive some tears in itself, but society can not survive government by murder.

Reader feels minority students need more time for school goals

I am writing in response to the article "Number of Blacks in College Dips," (DI, March 16).

The article says the UI is very concerned about how it can improve the number of blacks enrolled, through a better recruiting program. The UI deserves much credit for this, but should not stop there. The statistics on the number of blacks graduating from the UI is a more important issue. We should be as concerned about getting them out as recruiting them in.

In the article, there are a number of reasons mentioned as to why black enrollment has declined. The real reason is because black former students who transferred out go back home and tell their friends, parents and relatives not to send their sons or daughters here.

They do not cut down the UI academic program. They highly praise it, but they say the academic standards are so high it is very hard for any minority student to keep up because of their backgrounds and high school training. They also claim that getting a tutor is not enough, because instructors move too fast. Minority students need more time.

When I got here that statement made sense to me. We minority students need more time to grasp our individual academic goals. We do not need special favors. We should do the same work, but the UI should realize that we need more time to do the same work. It needs to be more concerned with helping the student already here, rather than with enrollment figures. Steven Clay Cox

Congratulations

To the editor:

My congratulations to you and your staff. Recently you were attacked for writing an article pertaining to the possibility of powers that are not known to science today. (DI, April 8).

You were asked to "not contribute to the promotion of superstition." You were called upon to be a "major aid, perhaps even the major aid to the citizen's never-ending pursuit of knowledge of the world." I congratulate you upon being the major aid to the citizen's never-ending pursuit of knowledge of the world. Your articles on mind power (DI March 5), "Bigfoot" (DI, April 8), and communicating with the dead (DI, April 7), prove that you are doing just

It takes a broad-minded medium to present such material, one that does not close its mind to the possibility of a bigger and better tomorrow by limiting itself to the knowledge of today. Surely if one limited oneself to present knowledge, we would still be living in caves. Your articles show that you are interested in presenting knowledge to your readers, and that you are not held to closed-mindedness. Thank you for

This is happening now on a national level. Respected nonprofit publications such as In These Times and Mother Jones are having their writers intimidated and their tax-exempt status challenged. I applaud Kent Gregg's salvo against the Moonies' campus front group, Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles (DI, April 13). Not only are they deceptive in their failure to identify themselves with the Unification Church, they deceive their contributors about where their money goes. For example, most of the money collected for "Solidarity" T-shirts reportedly goes to support the Moonies your articles, please keep them

The Unification Church is not the first conservative political organization to wear the outward face of Christianity. It is no coincidence that Moon's name was mentioned in connection with the "Koreagate" episode, in which South Korea channeled "contributions" to U.S. congressmen who were friendly to the U.S.-supported dictatorship there. Nor is it a coincidence that Moon sat among the honored guests at the inauguration of one Ronald Reagan.

But Gregg is wrong in suggesting that CARP should not receive recognition as a student group, a status he incorrectly labels "UI sponsorship". The fact that they are political doesn't make them unique or culpable: witness the UI Democrats, the College Republicans and the Socialist Party Iowa City Collective. Nor do "vapid" statements disqualify them, any more than vapidity would disqualify any number of recognized greek organizations that sponsor chugging contests, wet T-shirt contests and other idiotic tripe.

Foolishness has never been any reason to deny recognition to a student group - which is good, because foolishness has never been in short supply. And those who fight for freedom of speech will often find themselves defending the first amendment rights of fools.

If we allow a majority to decide which students' speech is allowed to take place in recognized student groups, then it is only a matter of time before student progressives stop doing the censoring and become censored.

Freedom of speech needs to be taken seriously even when we can't take the

Aid cuts

To the editor:

Student aid cutbacks are unfair. They affect every UI student, either immediately - through aid for attending school - or through the quality of their education.

The cutbacks will drop many students across the nation from three main types of aid; the Pell Grants, the Guaranteed Student Loans and Work-Study. These cutbacks, added to the soaring costs of tuition and housing, are making higher education available to fewer high school graduates.

President Reagan's proposed cutbacks will make deep slashes in the Guaranteed Student Loans. Professional and graduate students will be dropped completely from the program, resulting in the loss of many teaching assistants as well as a decreasing enrollment.

Several important UI programs will be affected by the 25 percent cut in the Work-Study program, including Cambus, daycare and the Student Activities Center. This cut will hurt students who work their way through

The proposed Pell Grant program will mean one million fewer students in the United States will be eligible for this type of aid. The maximum grant has been lowered by $200 - from $1,800

My personal need has made me realize the necessity of the program. Last summer I worked three jobs and the money I made, plus the money I receive from student aid, has gotten me through this year financially next year may be a different story.

Our nation's reputation for having a high percentage of high school graduates going to college is at stake. Insuring the future of my generation and generations to come is the responsibility of our government. Julie Messner

Secretaries deserve better than this

THINK IT WAS the Romans who had a ceremony when, for one day of the year, slaves were allowed to do no work - just laze around and give orders to their masters. And in the British military, there's a custom where the enlisted men sit down to be served Christmas dinner by their officers.

Anthropologists sometimes call these customs "rituals of reversal": they seem to be a kind of safety valve where by turning everything upside down for a day, you actually confirm the status quo even more clearly for the rest of the year.

America seems to like these events a lot - we're right in the middle of one now. Unless you've missed all those gushing radio ads, you should know we're celebrating National Secretaries' Week. For a whole week, if they can keep it up, the nation's executives are supposed to be nice to their secretaries, "appreciate" them and make their hearts flutter with carefully selected gifts of flowers and

I ALWAYS WONDER how the smart executive actually gets all the goodies to his secretary, given that she serves as his major link with the outside world. Does he lift the phone and call the florist himself, or does he favor more business-like methods?

"Get Herbert Schultz on the phone right away, Ms. Smith.'

"Hi, Herb, thought we'd better do something about this National happy, y'know?"

"Sure, let's see ... I'll get my girl to call your girl and she can send out for a bouquet for Jim's girl. Jim's girl can call my girl to order for your girl, and your girl can order for my girl - keep the element of surprise.

"Sounds good ... but what if Jim's girl gets roses and mine just gets carnations - don't want any office catfights, do we?"

Good thinking, Herb. Tell you what; I'll get my girl to order for the whole department - they're doing a nice Standard Natsec bouquet at Interflora. She can do the cards for everyone, and I'll get my wife to do one for her keeps the personal touch but doesn't single anyone out."

SO ALL THE secretaries get their flowers, the boss gets his own coffee for a day or two, and for a while there's a warm glow of good feeling all round. The executives feel good; as Tom Lehrer sings in "National Brotherhood Week," it's heart-warming to "Be nice to people who/Are inferior to you/It's only for a week, so never fear.

Everything gets back to normal as soon as possible, but the "girls" are reminded that with such benign bosses it would be rather churlish to start getting restive for a while at least. After all, there aren't many jobs where employees get these little bonuses once a year, and are actually thanked for doing the job they're paid for. You wouldn't send a box of candy to a maintenance man for fixing a fuse box - it might just be considered an insult. But then he gets a good salary for what he does - a damn sight more than that college-trained secretary, anyway.

So now we have National Secretaries' Week - a useful little ritual designed to remind secretaries of their true worth to their grateful bosses. What if, starting this time next year, the bosses had to start paying that worth in cash instead of candy Somehow I think this particular week would swiftly fade into the past where it belongs.

Cats are used for their brain and central nervous system, opossums for their esophagus and stomach, pigs for their skin, ferrets for their teeth, and rabbits for their immunity system, Cooper said.

AFTER RATS, mice and rabbits, dogs are the most-used warm-blooded animal. The UI uses about 10-20 percent of its animals for students in class and the rest for research, Bradford said.

Approximately 2,700 dogs are used each year and they come in two classes: "acute" cases are used in procedural studies or teaching and are usually dead within 72 hours after arrival, and "chronics," which are nursed into good condition for about three weeks and can remain in the lab for more than a decade, he said.

Those who work in the animal research are adamant about the benefits of medical research on

"I operated on the lamb twice before it was born. I created a hole in the diaphragm and all the guts came up into the chest, and that stopped the lung development." The lamb received surgery to repair the hole before it was born and was killed for examination 80 days after birth, Pringle said.

HIS EXPERIMENTS will hopefully lead to a cure. "Diaphragmatic hernias are relatively common in humans one (case) in five thousand live births. Those kids die," he said.

Another experiment Pringle described involves testing how a rat's small bowel operates after an almost fatal amount is cut out. "Short gut is a fairly common problem" among

For the past few years, David Reynolds, a UI professor of surgery, has been researching a new treatment for cardiovascular shock and his experiments involve withdrawing large amounts of blood from dogs and monkeys. His findings should lead to better medical treatment, for instance, for humans who suffer from massive blood loss in a car accident.

DESPITE THE UI's present dependence on household animals, "it's probably going to be phased out in the future - probably more of the farm animals or lower forms of life," Olson

While the UI continues to use research animals, it has to follow USDA regulations. UI Clinical Veterinarian Dan Downing routinely inspects the laboratories, and mentioned some of the regulations the UI must abide by: "the size of the cage, the way the animals are fed, how often you change the water pan, the schedule cleaning and temperature of the water you use." Federal law requires

In 1979 after a USDA inspection, the UI was sited as having several deficiencies in the animal care unit. The USDA inspects the UI facilities twice a year and Olson said: "We've gone from black to white. All of our caging and health care is now up to

Last year's federal grants for animal research were $3 million lower than in 1980, Harvey said. The grants dropped because the National Institutes of Health, which support more than 90 percent of all health research involving animals, had less money to distribute to researchers.

The grants also dropped because the new Oakdale animal quarters lowered the cost of caring for research animals, he said.

Olsen, whose work at the Oakdale quarters involves conditioning the animals before they reach the laboratories, said he is an animal lover: "On the one hand you save the (pound) dog from a certain death on the outside, but as far as research goes there's a lot of good stuff that comes out of it. Animal research is probably a necessary evil."

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) - By last Thanksgiving, it was easy to spot the turkeys in the NBA. And, after a 3-12 start, New Jersey Coach Larry Brown seemed to have his head resting against the carving board.

one of the world's premier distance runners, actually copped two victories at the 86th Boston Marathon.

First was his two-second win Monday over runner-up Dick Beardsley in a gritty performance that set a course record of two hours, eight minutes, 51 seconds. And second was the courage he showed in being able to make it to the awards ceremony three hours after he collapsed, exhausted from the 26-mile, 385-yard race.

The collapse of the 23-year-old resident of Wayland, Mass., and Eugene, Ore., came minutes after his victory. Suffering leg cramps through much of the race, his body temperature plummeted to 88 degrees soon after he sprinted across the finish line in the neck-and-neck race. It took more than an hour for his temperature to return to normal.

MANY DOUBTED Salazar would make it to the 4 p.m. awards banquet. But when Salazar — pale and with patches on his arms where he had been fed intravenously - entered the arena to receive his trophy, he was greeted with shouts of approval and applause.

He hugged his grandmother, Raquel Galbis-Salazar of Hartford, Conn., and smiled to his family, friends and the rest of the admiring crowd.

"I really had to gut it out. Dick Beardsley is one of the toughest men I've ever run against. This was probably the hardest effort I have ever put into a race," said Salazar, who set the world record of 2:08:13 last year at New York.

Beardsley agreed that the contest was no cakewalk and praised the performance of the winner.

"He's one heck of a competitor and one heck of an athlete, that's for sure," said Beardsley, a native of Minnesota who moved to Atlanta in mid-February to train for Boston.

SALAZAR RAN the fourth-fastest marathon in history and Beardsley, at 2:08:53, posted the fifth. Their efforts were astonishing considering the day's temperatures of near 70, fine for spectators but near broiling for

Ruiz can't run from troubles

NEW YORK (UPI) - Rosie Ruiz, who gained a dubious fame two years ago when she was stripped of her women's division victory in the Boston Marathon for allegedly cheating, was arrested Monday on charges of stealing $60,000 from her employer, police said.

And in a bizarre twist, Ruiz, 28, was arrested 30 minutes before 11 a.m. start of the 1982 Boston Marathon.

Capt. James Power of the 20th Precinct Detective Squad said Ruiz had been sought since April 5, when her employer, Richard Stephens Inc., a real estate firm in Manhattan, reported she had stolen $15,000 in cash and $45,000

Power said Ruiz became a suspect because she had not reported to her job as a bookkeeper since mid-March.

Detectives John Kelly and Mike Rooney, acting on information they obtained during their investigation, arrested Ruiz in midtown Manhattan at 10:30 a.m., the captain said.

HE SAID RUIZ was charged with grand larceny and forgery. Ruiz gained national headlines in April 1980 when her victory in the Boston Marathon turned into a scandal after other runners and checkpoint spotters said they did not see her in the race until the Ruiz, an unknown at the time, crossed the finish line in 2:31:56 - then a women's record for the Boston race.

Two Harvard students later told race officials they saw Ruiz jump into the race about a mile and a half before the finish of the 26-mile, 385-yard marathon.

On April 29, 1980, eight days after she was crowned with the winner's laurel, race officials stripped Ruiz of her title.

Ruiz denied she had cheated and fought a desperate, public battle to keep her title.

But her claims were thrown into further doubt when charges surfaced that she had ridden a subway to the finish of the New York Marathon in October 1979.

Tradition cited for marathon's popularity

By Steve Riley

Local marathoners who have run the Boston Marathon agree that the prestigious race is exciting, but a few think it is overrated. Dr. Rhys Jones of Iowa City ran in both the 1979 and 1981 marathons. His best time came in the 1979 race three-hours, two-minutes. Jones said the reason for the race's popularity is its tradition.

'I guess it has more tradition behind it than any other marathon," he said. "It's a little more prestigious because of the large crowds it draws.'

Morrison Reid, a graduate assistant coach on the Iowa men's track team, said the crowds are amazing. "There are a lot of people along the course. Literally millions," he said. Reid ran the 1977 marathon.

Lenny Burkhart of Iowa City, who ran 2:40 at last year's race, said the crowd helped him forget about the pain he experienced from the race.

"THERE ARE SO many people around you never had to think about the race," he said. "I remember at one place there was one guy handing out Burkhart said when he ran by Wellesley College, an all female school in Wellesley, Mass., he felt like he was at a homecoming basketball game. "They were like a bunch of cheerleaders. You felt like a hero coming home or something," he said.

He said the students were so thick in the streets that the runners were forced to run in single file. "At Wellesley, the coeds cram out onto the course and paw at you," Holstein said. "It's truly an uplifting experience."

JONES SAID: "The one thing I was really impressed with was the knowledge of the people about running in general. When you're in town the whole talk is about the marathon. The people are very aware of running; it's a lot like Iowa City. You see a lot of people running in Boston."

Most of the runners agreed that the Boston Marathon's tradition helps draw a lot of competitors.

'Everyone's attracted there," Holstein said. It's sort of the Mount Sinai of marathons." But he added, "Really it's a bunch of people running Holstein said Boston is a poorly organized marathon. "It's an abysmal marathon," he said. "There are more unhappy runners at Boston than any other marathon. It's just about enough to make you quit running marathons.' Burkhart said the famed "Heartbreak Hill," which a runner hits at about 18 miles, is overrated.

"Really it's just a long grade," he said. "The Drake Relays Marathon has much tougher hills."

One Coralville runner who competed this year, Dallas Robertson, finished 96th in the race.

Move from court to diamond simple for Hawkeyes' Hippen

By Betsy Anderson

The two-sport athlete is a rare breed college athletics today - especially in UI women's athletics.

Currently the only two-sport athlete is senior Melinda Hippen, who finished her four years of basketball eligibility this winter. Hippen, who expects to complete her degree in recreation at the end of the 1983 academic year, will be able to use her final two years of oftball eligibility.

Hippen began her collegiate athletic areer at Iowa Central Community College in Fort Dodge, Iowa, as a orward in basketball and pitcher/third eman in softball. "I wasn't ready for the big times," Hippen explained, so I thought I would try playing at a unior college first." The Applington, Iowa, native knew she wanted to stay in-state after her junior college career. "I anticipated on staying in Iowa," Hippen said, "but I didn't want to go to a small private four-year school. I thought I could make it at a Big Ten or Big Eight school in either sport."

UNABLE TO DETERMINE which sport to concentrate on, Hippen tried out for both softball and basketball at Iowa on the same day. This forced the Iowa coaching staffs to make some quick decisions.

Jane Hagedorn, Iowa's head softball coach at the time, told Hippen she wanted to see her in a game situation before awarding a scholarship. Judy McMullen, Iowa head basketball coach, closed the matter, offering Hippen a scholarship two weeks after the

"The basketball coaches knew I always had softball in the back of my mind," Hippen said. "Vickie Wilson (Iowa's assistant basketball coach) kept telling me to keep my grades up, 'you can always play softball.' " Said Wilson: "We knew what motivated Hippen and it was important for her to be able to play softball to keep her going to class. It was an incentive that worked for her. "Her No. 1 commitment was to basketball, but after that she was free to do what she wanted," Wilson added. "You get four years of eligibility in each sport and I had two left in softball. I knew I would be here a fifth year, so I decided to give softball a try." Hippen said.

Iowa challenges St. Ambrose, looks for vast improvements

By Betsy Anderson

Iowa's softball team will attempt to regain some of its winning ways after a fifth-place finish in the Big Ten conference tournament when the Hawkeyes challenge St. Ambrose today in a double-header at Mercer Park starting at 2 p.m.

"I hope to see vast improvements over our last games we played," Head Coach Ginny Parrish said of Iowa's losses to Michigan, 5-1, and Indiana, 5-0, in Ann Arbor, Mich. 'They (the team) need to get some mental toughness. They are not aggressive enough."

Parrish has no idea what to expect from St. Ambrose, 5-5, a team Iowa barely beat last spring, 2-1.

MORELAND FINK, head coach of the St. Ambrose Bees, said he expects today's contests to be "fairly even ball games.

"We lost only one starting senior from last years' ball club," Fink said. "Because of the weather, we haven't had the chance to play a lot and are just starting to play good

"We have two senior pitchers, Kathy Sebolt, who is a four-year starter for us and was selected to the Iowa High School Hall of Fame and Mary Brus. Sebolt, 3-3, has only given up six earned runs in her three losses and Brus is having her best year. Though she's 2-2, Mary has only given up five earned runs."

The Bees' hitters are led this year by second baseman Cindy Clark and left fielder Eileen Lemburg, who are hitting .385 and .370 respectively. St. Ambrose is batting .243 as

FINK SAID the Bees record would be better if not for a porus defense, which has averaged threeand-a-half errors per game. Partly to blame is the lack of practice

Despite the fact Iowa is Division I and the Bees are Division II, Fink is happy to be playing the Hawks. "Few Divison I schools like to play us because of what a loss to a smaller school would look like," he said. "But Ginny doesn't care how big your program is. If you have a good program that could help hers, she will play you."

Melinda Hippen: "The basketball coaches knew I always had softball

Parrish is pleased with Hippen's performance

"It would have helped solidify the team if she had been here earlier," Parrish said. "It's not the physical mistakes but the mental ones that come with working together as a team. Considering she came in at such a late point, she's come along rather quickly.

"She helped us first on offensive," said Parrish, who is starting her third season at Iowa. 'She has hit a ball farther that any person on the team I've ever seen. Right now she's one of our top three hitters."

"I didn't think it was fair to throw her in to a defensive position right away. It takes some time to learn our defensive system. She has an advantage at shortstop in that she has a cannon arm. She can bobble the ball, take ner out."

college athletics to Division I competition has not been difficult. During her years at Iowa Central, the basketball and softball teams missed competing in the national junior college championships by one game. Iowa Central lost to Waldorf in basketball and Kirkwood in softball in the finals of the regional tournaments.

"I only had one or two days off after basketball this year before going to Oklahoma with the softball team over spring break, Hippen said. "I went so I could get to know the girls. I was the designated hitter and didn't get to field much. But Ginny gave me a chance to beat out the starting

Hippen, who started four of the last six games, said she was fortunate to be voted onto the squad and that now she is "pretty comfortable in all aspects of the game Except reading signals from

It's back to batting cages for lowa's baseball team

Significance-wise, the Iowa-Western Illinois baseball match-up, scheduled for 1 p.m. today at the Iowa diamond, hardly ranks up there with the Major League World Series, but for the Hawkeyes, this afternoon's game may be as important as any they will

Iowa, 16-14 overall, is 0-4 in Big Ten play, dropping two double-headers to Illinois in Champaign over the

The Hawks must play eight games in the next five days in a stretch that may very well be crucial to the remainder of the conference schedule

The Hawks were shut out in three of the four weekend games as the Illini held Iowa to just 15 hits combined. Iowa's league batting average is now a paltry .158

"I GUESS WE'LL have to go back to square one on hitting," said Iowa Head Coach Duane Banks. "I think the whole team and coaching staff is embarrassed by what happened at Illinois. We'll have to shake it off and see what we're made of."

The Hawkeyes spent much of their Monday practice in the batting cages in an attempt to remedy the present hitting slump. The last time an Iowa team lost four straight games was back in 1970, when that team dropped five in a row.

Prior to this season, Iowa baseball teams had been shutout only six times in seven years. Already, the 1982 squad has been blanked four times. The Hawkeyes are looking to shake off the doldrums today against Western Illinois. The weather has been less than kind to the Leathernecks, 6-9, as they have played 15 games less than the Hawkeyes this season. The highlight of Western's season thus far came last week against Bradley, as the Leathernecks took three of four from the rival Braves.

THE LEATHERNECKS, an independent Division I baseball team, have won six of their last seven games, but have had their share of pitching trouble this year, allowing 6.8 runs per game. And when producing totals like that, the hitting has to domore than compensate.

Western has scored 5.3 runs per game, enough for most teams, but apparently not quite enough for this

The Leathernecks are led by four .300 or more hitters. Van Sowards, centerfielder, at .396, leads the club. Jim Melliand, a left fielder hitting .392, Jim Gallina, a third baseman at .383, and first baseman Keith Maragi, hitting.300, round out the team's Melliand also shares the pitching chores, owning a 2-2 record with a 5.95 earned run average. Les Lokrzycki, the only other pitcher with two wins at 2-

Short game takes priority with 10th-place Kepler finish

By Thomas W. Jargo

The mighty drive off the golf tee can be of no advantage if your short game is not up to par. Some of golf's greatest players will stress to a young golfer the importance of being good around the green more than long off the tee. The lack of playing time has kept the Iowa men's golf team from practicing their chipping and putting, and Head Coach Chuck Zwiener attributes that to the team's 10th-place showing at the Kepler Inter-collegiate in Columbus, Ohio, this weekend.

"We got to work on our short game and concentration," Zwiener said. "They haven't played in a long time and they tend to lose their concentration. Zwiener says triple and double bogeys start to appear on the scorecard when a player starts to lose his concentration.

EUGENE ELLIOTT had the lowest three-round the advantage over the Hawks because they score for the Hawkeyes in the Kepler tournament. He shot a 54-hole total of 237, 21 strokes over par. He finished 16 strokes behind the champion, Chris Perry Greg Tebbutt and Gregg Winkel tied for second in team honors with 242 scores each. Right behind them with 244 totals were Gary Claypool and Craig Rank. Mike Hasley was the sixth and final Hawkeye in the tournament. He shot a three-round score of 249.

Iowa played well the first two rounds of the tournament, but faltered in the final round Sunday. Winkel was the only Hawkeye golfer to break 80 during the final round. Iowa was fifth in the tournament going into Sunday, but their relatively high scores dropped them five spots on the day.

'We just didn't play well," Zwiener said, "We went from a good tournament to a mediocre tournament in one round."

ELLIOTT SAID it was the short game that hurt him the most. "I hit the ball really well," he said. "I was hitting my driver and long irons well, but my chipping and putting wasn't real good."

Elliott agrees with Zwiener about the lack of playing time hurting the team. He says Ohio State had more southern tournaments. "They've played three tournaments and we haven't played since spring break," Elliott said. "It (Scarlet golf course) was also their home course
