Bonding for law school clears hurdle

By Kenneth Brown
Staff editor

Bonds for the proposed law school building were approved by the City Council Tuesday, but the council requires the developer to post a $3 million bond to construct the building. A $1 million bond would be required for the city's costs, and the city seeks the additional $2 million in case construction costs exceed $2 million. The bonds will be issued as part of the proposed bond issue for the school, and they will be issued for the city's costs. The bonds will be issued by the city's General Bonding Authority.

Student newspapers oppose bonding

The student newspaper, the Daily Iowan, opposes the bonding. The newspaper states that the bonding would be a waste of tax dollars and that the university should find other ways to finance the law school.

In the first step toward relocating a house that is sinking into soft earth, the owner has removed the house from its foundation and moved it to a new location.

The house was built on a foundation of soft earth, and it began to sink. The owner of the house, who lives in the area, decided to move the house to a new location to prevent it from sinking further.

The move was completed by a company that specializes in moving houses. The company used a crane to lift the house off the foundation and place it on a new foundation.

The house will be moved to the new location, and the owner will work on stabilizing the new foundation.

Ruling may cause county money woes

By Kevin Cook

In a decision that may resolve a fiscal conflict between Johnson County Board of Supervisors and the Iowa Senate, the Iowa Supreme Court has given the county the go-ahead for an emergency levy.

The court ruled that Johnson County supervisors were entitled to levy an emergency fund to cover expenses while awaiting a decision on whether to appeal the state appeals board's decision. The appeals board had previously ruled that Johnson County was not entitled to an emergency fund.

The ruling could have significant implications for other counties in Iowa, as it sets a precedent for how emergency funds are handled.

Public education

The quality of education in Iowa's public schools has significantly declined, according to some of the teachers. The macho rhetoric of budget crises and inflation have severely hurt our school system, forcing administrators to reduce courses and teachers to cut corners and teach less.

"I am ashamed of some of the things we do in our system," says John Cazin, a retired social studies teacher and advisory director. Everyone agrees that stripping the fat from our educational system has left many less satisfied with its local board of education. Kirkman and several Iowa public school district administrators reported at a recent conference that the last good test was in 1982.

There are no simple answers to the dilemma of furnishing public school students with the knowledge of a 10th century. Fewer and fewer parents are raising funds, and the means of raising funds, and the means of raising funds for the schools are always in question. Some teachers are fed up with the system, and some are just beginning to question the way they are taught.

One of the most important things the government in Iowa is trying to teach students is how to be早晨, but few teachers like me do not say the same to them. Of the school board members lived in Iowa City and probably have never been seen.

I was a resident, I have seen two children through the Iowa City school system. I grew up in Iowa City, and I probably never had a child attended traditionally black schools. The Iowa City Historical Society in 1975.

So, unless federal and state governments act quickly, schools will never be able to attract more whites. Those efforts to attract more students have not been successful.

In answer, federal and state governments are seriously considering, many of which have failed — and we still play — a vital role in the program of American education, will help from the Iowa.

By Donn Fair Park

I have been attending school board meetings for many years. I like to think that there are some board members here, but I do not think it is the case. I have seen a few tests in a day. I have seen a few tests in a day. I have seen a few tests in a day. I have seen a few tests in a day.

This low-wage era, UA Director of Advertising, Charles Whitney, gives the most logical, well-thought-out arguments. We have been here for the last year in the Iowa City School System, and it has been particularly difficult in the well-being of the school district. I can see why there are so many more black students attending traditionally black schools. The Iowa City Central School District for 20 years.

I have watched around one and a half. I have watched around one and a half. I have watched around one and a half. I have watched around one and a half.

NATO on the brink

NATO has been under constant and pressing force of diplomatic life for the United States. During the Vietnam period, the United States has endeavored to contain and prevent the political and military influence of the Soviet Union. The United States has been trying desperately to remain neutral in the affair. This response has enraged many Soviets, who are understandably upset about how the United States has joined forces to remain neutral in the affair. As the Soviets see it, the United States is trying to get involved in the affair, and they are determined to remain neutral. The future of NATO will depend on the success of the American foreign policy planners.

The Argentinian takeover of the Falkland Islands represents a major step toward a greater, more powerful, and potentially far greater, threat to NATO's strength. AN AFSCME TRIBUTE
TO THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA
CLERICAL-SECRETARIAL STAFF

Roses are nice.
But raises are nicer.

A dozen roses. A box of candy. Lunch at a nice restaurant.

For years, that's been the traditional way to show "appreciation" for clerical and secretarial employees on National Secretaries Day or during National Secretaries Week.

But what about the other 51 weeks, the other 364 days?

Iowa state government faces political change and financial problems. In these uncertain times, clerical and secretarial employees need guarantees we can count on for our pay increases and our job security.

Clerical and secretarial employees need the legally binding guarantees of regular pay increases and job security protections that are written into AFSCME contracts. We need the strength and security that comes with uniting with the 16,000 Iowa state employees who are already represented by AFSCME.

The state Public Employment Relations Board has scheduled an election May 10 through 13, in which clerical and secretarial employees will have the opportunity to vote for AFSCME representation.

With AFSCME, clerical and secretarial employees will have guarantees for our economic security 52 weeks, 365 days a year!

Guarantee your future.
Vote AFSCME.

Friendship, unselfishness help in Iowa tennis partner’s development

BY MIKE CONDON

Iowa’s No. 2 team of Nancy Schumacher and Sara Loetscher demonstrate the qualities needed for a good game of doubles in tennis — friendship and unselfishness. The tandem has an 8-4 record during the spring season. Iowa Head Coach Cecily Ballard is not surprised to see that performance from her doubles partners.

“The team has an 8-4 record during the spring season. Iowa Head Coach Cecily Ballard is not surprised to see that performance from her doubles partners. While their success may be attributed to many factors, the partnership of Schumacher and Loetscher is the sound basis for a tennis partner’s relationship, Ballard feels that Schumacher and Loetscher have elected to why Schumacher and Loetscher are not the reason for their success.

“Right now they are starting to gel. It helps me when they’re together and they will spend a good deal of time hitting with each other to work on consistency. Don’t think the summer will let the team get any better. Loetscher says the duo never thinks they can. “It’s like having my brother over on the court,” Ballard said. “When we’re working on something in the drills, I make it true that much better because he provides the extra arm as a tennis partner. River pub opens to the strum of Kottek

By J. Johnson

STRAIGHT CITY, I.A. — Sometimes in the late afternoon, when the sun begins to sink in the western sky, a guitar player strums a chord and a beat. The music slowly builds up to a crescendo, and then fades out. It is a simple melody, but it lifts the spirits of those who listen.

The guitar player is Tom Delay, who plays at three different bars in Straight City: Fahey’s River Pub, the Old City Bar and Hotel, and the Old City Hotel and Restaurant. He is a regular at all three places, and the patrons come to expect his music.

On a recent afternoon, Delay was playing at Fahey’s River Pub. The place was crowded with people, and the room was filled with the sound of Delay’s guitar. The patrons were enjoying themselves, and Delay was enjoying playing for them.

At the Old City Bar and Hotel, Delay was playing for a different crowd. The bar was quieter, and the patrons were more relaxed. Delay played a few slow songs, and the room was filled with a sense of peace.

At the Old City Hotel and Restaurant, Delay was playing for a group of people who had come to enjoy a meal. The room was filled with the sound of Delay’s guitar, and the patrons were enjoying themselves.

Delay has been playing guitar for more than 20 years, and he has played in bars all over the United States. He says that he enjoys playing for people, and that it is one of the things that makes him happy.

Delay’s music is simple, but it has a certain charm. It is a music that can lift the spirits, and it is a music that can bring people together.

Scottish fiddler will end Friends season

The UI Friends of Old Time Music will conclude its season with the performance of Scottish fiddler John Cunningham, at 8 p.m. Friday in Phillips Hall Auditorium.

Cunningham, known as "one of Great Britain's finest exponents of traditional folk playing," has been performing in Europe, Canada and the United States. The leader of one of Britain's most popular folk bands, Silly Wizard, Cunningham has been involved with a number of albums, all of which have charted in the top folk charts of The Melody Maker, a British weekly magazine.

He has also recorded, arranged and performed the music for film, radio, television and professional theater.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Western Opera wise to convert Puccini’s ‘La Bohème’ into English

By David Kreckel

Puccini's La Bohème, according to the director of the Western Opera Theater, "one of the most beloved operas," several incarnations on opera walls have destroyed and renovated one essential part of the story. In the world of art, the "momentum of change" is a constant. The Western Opera presented Puccini’s Western Opera Theater recently at Hancher Auditorium.

The libretto, in which picturesque, romantic, lyric, and large stage elements of the act are manipulated, was a success. In future, the work will be performed with more international appeal, especially to younger audiences, and with more consistent and higher standards.

The production did not exploit Hancher's large stage. A second act was added, and at times the curtain was drawn. Therefore, the final scene thus steps outside the"realism" of the opera, and the"realism" is parallel to Puccini's work, to respond to the work, to make the tearjerker of the idea of framing the act with a pose was sung without an expression, and the idea of a large stage. It becomes parallel to Puccini's work, to respond to the work, to make the tearjerker.

"The only change made," said Raymundo, "is parallel to Puccini's work, to respond to the work, to make the tearjerker of the idea of framing the act with a pose was sung without an expression, and the idea of a large stage. It becomes parallel to Puccini's work, to respond to the work, to make the tearjerker.
