A year of record-high short-term interest rates had a pronounced impact on the economy. The gross national product (GNP) declined 3.9 percent in 1981, the United States Commerce Department reported Wednesday, and a top official said that trend may continue in the current year.

"The Commerce Department reported that the gross national product was declining at an annual rate of 3.9 percent in the first three months of the year," former Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said there may be no growth through the fourth quarter.

Unemployed parent plans up for debate

JESS MARTH, City -- The unemployed parent program, proposed recently by the city, is a source of controversy among social workers, parents, and politicians.

The idea is to provide a package of benefits to unemployed parents, including financial assistance, job training, and access to social services. The program aims to help struggling families by providing a safety net during times of economic hardship.

On the other hand, some opponents argue that the program could create a dependency on government assistance and undermine the work ethic of the unemployed.

Courtroom coincidence was potentially explosive

A recent court ruling could have far-reaching implications for the city's public records law. The court found that the city's freedom of information act (FOIA) laws are unconstitutional, which could lead to a significant change in the way the city handles public records.

The ruling could also affect the city's ability to keep secrets and protect confidential information, which could lead to a flurry of lawsuits and public scrutiny. The city is currently preparing to appeal the decision and is exploring options for how to enforce the new law.

No noise is good noise

Despite all the noise about Iowa City in recent months, Rwanda's City Council has been relatively quiet about the noise. Their latest agenda item was brought by Joe May, who is about to leave his position as city council president.

The proposal, which was received by the council's executive committee, would allow for the establishment of a noise ordinance. This new ordinance would be aimed at reducing noise levels in the city, thereby improving the quality of life for its residents.

Johnson County will host four different bands in its budget. If the budget is approved, the bands will be relocated to other venues.

The council deserves our thanks for finally taking action on an issue that has been neglected for too long. The band relocation is a step in the right direction, and we should all be grateful that our council has taken this step.

I am not sure why the council decided to close the band, but I am sure that the decision was made after careful consideration.

I believe that the council made the right decision, and I am glad that the band was closed. I think that the band was a bad influence, and I am glad that it is no longer a part of our community.

Ul Dance Program to perform concert

By Cheryl Pearl Laughlin

The Spring Student Dance Days of the UI Dance Program promise to be a treasure trove of events that will include both a democratic and experimental choreography. The Spring Student Dance Days begin this Friday afternoon and will continue through Saturday, May 22. The performances will take place at 7:30 p.m. today through Saturday at the UI Recital Hall.

The program is the culmination of an effort to channel the energy of the modern dance movement into a form that is both meaningful and functional. The performances presented at the UI Recital Hall, the dances in the series were originally shown in part at the University of Iowa on March 11, 1971.

The Spring Student Dance Days are being planned by a committee of both the Music and Dance Departments.

The concert will be followed up the next day with the first annual Spring Student Dance Festival. The festival will feature performances by students in all departments of music and dance, as well as those in both departments. The festival will be held in the Auditorium of the University of Iowa, 8-30 p.m. today through Saturday at the UI Recital Hall.

The concert is designed to give the audience an opportunity to experience a range of styles and techniques, from the traditional to the experimental.
