$300,000 awarded in Rely judgment

CEDAR RAPIDS (UPI) - A federal court jury Wednesday found Procter & Gamble liable in the death of a woman who died of toxic shock syndrome four days after using Rely tampons and awarded her family $300,000.

Micheal Kehm had sought more than 30 million from the company in the death of his wife, Patricia, but the jury only awarded compensatory damages and no punitive damages.

"Procter gambled and lost," said Kehm's attorney, Tom Riley, after the verdict was announced. "We made legal history today. We beat one of the largest corporations in the world," said Riley, who will receive one-third of the judgment as his fee.

Riley said the verdict means trouble for P&G in future toxic shock syndrome cases. This was the first case involving the death of a woman who had used the tampons. A Denver jury earlier found P&G negligent in the case of a woman who recovered from TSS. but awarded no damages.

"In my opinion, P&G is in serious trouble," he said.

THE COMPANY, however, said the fact that no punitive damages were awarded vindicated it in an ethical

"I believe we are completely vindicated as far as punitive damages,' said P&G attorney Frank Woodside. "I think the element of sympathy was one compensatory award to the Kehms.

The bottom line is we're disappointed. We're upset the product hasn't

An official statement from the company said, "We have sympathy for Mr. Kehm and his family and we can understand that the jury did, too. However, we cannot be satisfied with anything short of Rely's total vindication and we're reviewing our legal action, including an appeal.

"We're confident that our product did not cause this woman's tragic ilhess and obviously the finding of no punitive damages confirms our position that the company has acted responsibly through the TSS controversy," the statement said.

RILEY SAID the judgment was well below what had been sought because lowa juries traditionally reward relatively small amounts in death cases. He predicted P&G will be hit with judgments of millions of dollars in future TSS cases.

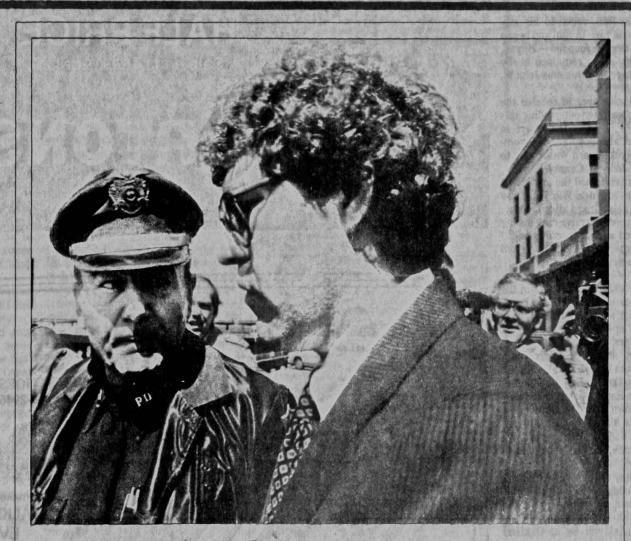

"The only thing that would have been better is if they had been hit harder in he pocketbook as far as punitive lages, but somebody is going to do it and they (P&G) deserve that, too," Riley said

"Mike Kehm did not do this in order to become a rich man. He did this when he found out a couple of weeks later (after his wife's death) that Rely tampons have a causitive relationship with

The company had offered a settlement of about $155,000 before the trial,

Riley said. Kehm said the end of the trial now will let him carry on with his life.

"The last year and half of my life has een up in the air, waiting for my day in court to have the truth come out,'

Fugitive stockbroker Gary Lewellyn surrendered in Cedar Rapids Wednesday. Lewellyn had been sought by the FBI for three weeks on charges of bank fraud and embezzlement. Fugitive Lewellyn surrenders, released on unsecured bond

Attorney said authorities were "hot on the trail" of Gary Lewellyn before the fugitive stockbroker turned himself in Wednesday and was released on $500,000 unsecured

James Reynolds also said the initial charge of misapplication of $16.7 million from the First National Bank in Humboldt is the forerunner of many more charges to be filed against Lewellyn.

Lewellyn, 33, appeared as promised in Reynolds' office at 8:30

CEDAR RAPIDS (UPI) - A U.S. a.m. Wednesday, ending a search that began when the FBI issued an arrest warrant April 6. He was last seen in Chicago March 31 when he transferred $500,000 from a Des Moines bank to a Chicago bank and took off with the cash.

> With his wife Dena at his side, Lewellyn refused to comment to a swarm of reporters as he entered the courtroom.

Gerald Crawford, Lewellyn's attorney, called Reynolds' bond request "excessive" and asked for the unsecured bond, which was granted, meaning the stockbroker was not required to present cash or assets for his release Lewellyn was instructed by Hodges merely to keep the court informed of his whereabouts.

The U.S. Attorney said he had no idea where Lewellyn had been staying since his disappearance. He said federal investigators were "trying to find out what he had been doing rather than where he's been."

Increased budget gets Senate okay

By Rochelle Bozman

The $3.3 million supplemental budget askings recommended for the state Board of Regents by Gov. Robert Ray were approved by the Iowa Senate Wednesday and will face little opposition in the House, state officials said. Sen. Clarence Carney, R-Sioux City, said $1 million to the UI College of Medicine, $1.3 million to the regents to help pay increased fuel prices and $1 million to Iowa State University and University of Northern Iowa for ad-

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said there will be no problem getting Ray's recommendations through the House Appropriations Committee or the full House

'It looks just as good here" as it does in the Senate, Doderer said. "I didn't see any reason to quibble about it. They didn't get much" from Ray.

Regents' Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey said Wednesday, "It looks like the $3.3 million is going to Regents and UI officials were pleased, although slightly dismayed when Ray's budget proposal came out in January saying that the "signs" were encouraging.

THE REGENTS originally requested about $33.4 million from the legislature in supplemental budget funds, but Ray recommended a small portion of the askings, saying there was not enough money in the state's treasury.

When Ray's budget recommendations were announced, Randall Bezanson, UI vice president for Finance. said, "I come away from it with a feeling on one hand, that it is a recommendation that clearly involves some very positive signals, but it will be up to us to continue to press for the vitality

One regent request that seems destined to be overlooked for another year is the $14 million institutional vitality fund, set up to raise faculty and staff wages to a competitive level.

The fund was denied when the joint Education Appropriations Subcommittee voted to not allocate them. UI and regents officials remained undaunted, claiming the funding could appear in the appropriations committee or somewhere down the legislative line. See Funding, page 6

Space experts see critical years ahead

By Jonathan Brandt

Space technology experts disagreed on many issues at the "Technology and the Spirit of Man Symposium" Wednesday, but they agreed that the next few years will be a critical time for the future of the space program.

UI Professor James Van Allen, Rep. Cooper Evans, R-Iowa, NASA astronaut David Gardner and Rockwell International executive Charles Gould were the participants in the eighth annual Technology and the Spirit of Man Symposium presented by the Tau Beta Pi National Engineering Honor

Evans, who worked on NASA's Apollo project in the 1960's, said "1 think we do face a major decision point in the space program in the months and years ahead.

Van Allen said "the year 1982 is proving to be the moment of truth" for the direction of the space program.

Disappointed with the past direction of the space program, Van Allen said the space shuttle program is not in the best interests of the nation's space ef-

"IN THE FACE of all of the great scientific and utilitarian achievements of our space program, the past several years and 1982, in particular, have been ones of acute frustration and distress to those of us who are engaged in this work," he said.

"In my view, the central problem is the massive national commitment to development and operation of the space shuttle and to the continuation of a national program of manned space flight," Van Allen added.

But Van Allen said the United States is stuck with the shuttle and should make the best of it.

Gould, manager of Space Shuttle Utilization for Rockwell, primary builders of the space shuttle, said the shuttle will be the center of the U.S. space program in the coming years.

'The shuttle is going to be the workhorse for the next decade," he said. "We're going to do whatever we're going to do out of the shuttle.

"The most important thing in our future is the population increase.' Gould said most of that increase will be taking place in the developing countries and the space program can provide technology to assist those

SPACE TECHNOLOGY'S tremendous advances in communication will enable people in underdeveloped countries to be educated by direct broadcasting. Satellites and more mobile, miniaturized video equipment will allow even remote areas to receive what Gould called "show and tell" training for jobs. Income tax not sole state revenue source

By Cathy Kristiansen Staff Writer

Last year, Iowa collected 43.3 percent of its general fund revenue from income tax and the second largest source - at 28.7 percent of the fund was a sales and use tax. The state tax system was originally based primarily on a general property tax, but now includes 14 major taxes and numerous Sales taxes are popular because they provide a relatively painless way to collect a large amount of money, and only five states do not have them. Mississippi receives almost half its income from sales tax.

BUT THERE ARE other taxes you are paying all the time, here as in other states - though to varying degrees. In 1980, Iowa received 1.2 percent of its income from alcoholic beverages taxes, whereas Florida raised 6.2 percent. GNP declines 3.9 percent

WASHINGTON - Strong downward pressure on the economy continued in the opening months of 1982, the government reported Wednesday, and a top official said there are "no clear-cut signals" the recession has run its course.

The Commerce Department reported that the gross national product was shrinking at an annual rate of 3.9 percent in the first three months of this year, and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said there may be no growth through June.

Israeli-Palestinian truce ends

Shattering a nine-month truce, Israeli jets Wednesday bombed Palestinian coastal targets all the way up to suburban Beirut and shot down two Syrian MiGs in a dogfight. The Syrians said they downed one Israeli jet, but Israel denied it.

Palestinian officials said more than 20 people were killed and 80 wounded in the two-hour bombardment of Palestinian bases and camps along the Mediterranean coast from the suburbs near Beirut International Airport to Damour, 13 miles south.

Argentina suspends payments

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina - Argentina, nearing a wartime economy because of its Falklands Islands dispute with Britain, suspended cash payments to some foreign creditors Wednesday and gave priority to military purchases.

Argentine government sources expressed concern over reports that part of the British fleet broke away toward the South Georgia Islands, a Falklands dependency 900 miles east of the main islands. Argentina has less than 500 troops there.

Five men missing in blast

COUNCIL BLUFFS - Searchers dug through 2 million bushels of smoldering corn and soybeans Wednesday for the remains of five men believed killed in a grain elevator explosion and fire.

Twelve of 23 people hurt in the explosion were hospitalized Wednesday, two in serious condition. The injured included eight Union Pacific Railroad workers who were about 80 vards away from the exploding elevator.

Prominent local attorney dies; services Friday

By Elizabeth Flansburg

Will J. Hayek, 85, 900 N. Dubuque St., a prominent Iowa City attorney and a UI graduate died Wednesday morning at Mercy Hospital following an exten-

Hayek, born on July 23, 1896, received his law degree from the UI College of Law in 1926 and began his practice here. The law firm he founded - Hayek, Hayek, Hayek and Holland - has remained in the family and is currently being run by his sons John W. Hayek and C. Peter Hayek.

Hayek was one of 17 Iowans ever to receive the Governor's Golden Scroll award for outstanding service to the community. He received the award in November 1981. Havek was also honored in November when the first Will Hayek Award was issued to the outstanding citizen of Johnson County.

In 1917 the Iowa City native joined the army as a private and served overseas in World War I. He was also active in the Iowa National Guard after the war. Hayek's guard unit was placed on active duty during World War II; Hayek served as an inspector general in the United States. When he retired in 1945, he had attained the rank of Brigadier General.

HAYEK WAS one of the oldest practioners in the Johnson County Bar Association, said William Sueppel, association president. Sueppel said Hayek was 'very good and was looked up to for a long time" by the bar association members.

Hayek served as County Attorney for six years following his graduation from the UI. He also served as president of the Johnson County Bar Association, was a member of the Iowa Bar Association and served for two years on the Iowa Board of Governors.

Survivors include his wife Marjorie; sons Will Jr., Fort Myers, Fla., John W., and C. Peter both of Iowa City; one sister, Elsie Evans, Akron, Ohio; and 10 grandchildren.

Services will be held Friday at 2 p.m. at the Gloria Dei Lutheran Church. Friends may call after 11 a.m. Thursday at Donahue-Lensing Mortuary or at the church after 1:15 p.m. Friday. The casket will be closed at the church. Burial will be at Oakland Cemetery following the church ceremony.

Friends may make contributions to the Mercy Hospital Foundation.

Greek groups fund tree-planting at park

The Iowa City Park is one tree richer thanks to residents who bought "I Love Iowa City" buttons

Some of the money the UI Junior Panhellenic Council and UI Interfraternity Council raised by selling the buttons went to purchase and plant a hardwood maple tree near shelter number three in upper City Park Wednesday

'It's a real nice gesture on their part," said Tom Gelman, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce's environmental concerns committee.

The tree-planting was in conjunction with the UI's 'Greek Week' and the city's "Clean Reflections Week," Gelman said.

Hope Truckenmiller, public relations director for the Junior Panhellenic Council, said the maple tree was purchased as a result of the two Greek organizations' Project Green Gelman said the tree is a nice addition to the park. 'Most trees in the park are oaks. The maple will add variety in foliage and color," he said.

Although she said the budget has only minor differences from last year's, some organizations funded by senate in the past will not receive funding next year. Other groups that received funding in past years did not re-apply for funding.

University Travel, a senate commission set up to help students learn about the travel business and to plan low cost student trips, requested $2,353 from the senate, but BAC recommended no funding for the group. "We kind of expected it," said Mark Simonson, University Travel director. "We're set up so we can make a profit, and we asked for some extra money for other set group members, Simonson said. "Our services won't be limited because of it." The senate will, however, cover University Travel's deficit, he said.

Almost $8,000 of senate's share of next year's mandatory student fees will go to pay off a debt that includes the University Travel's deficit and money owed to the UI Collegiate Associations Council that was to be payed back when the senate had enough money, Maher said.

But, Maher said the budget is only a preliminary estimate of 1982-83 senate appropriations. Next Thursday the senate will give members of the student organizations an opportunity to discuss the budget.

The senate's budget has been tightened over past years, and there appears to be no relief in the near future, Maher said. "I really don't see it getting any better in the future unless we get an increase from the (state Board of Regents)." Senate commission expenses aren't decreasing, but the amount of available money is, she said.

STUDENT GROUPS that receive top funding priority, in accordance with senate by-laws are: senate, senate committees and senate commissions. But senate-funded groups set individual item priorities before audits, so each group had a voice in the request cuts, Maher said.

The UI Scottish Highlanders is another group that will not receive funds next year if the budget recommendations are approved by senate. The organization requested $5,540, but will not receive funding because Highland Potato Chips Inc. recently announced it will support the group.

Kathy Smith, Black Genesis Troupe business manager said although the troupe's budget was cut extensively, she was not surprised. "We knew we'd be cut because the money available for allocations was tight."

The group's activities may be cramped because of an $851 cut for a black culture Spring Show, she said. "But it's nothing THE RECOMMENDATION does not up- new, it happened last year, too."

Specific skills help employ MBA grads

By Kathy Anthony Special to The Daily Iowan

Graduates of Master of Business Administraton programs face a tightening job market, and those with expertise in certain areas outside of business are better able to compete for jobs.

Many employers are seeking MBA graduates with specific skills in communication, engineering, computer science, mathematics and foreign languages, according to UI MBA program administrators and students.

"Communication skills are a very serious issue," according to Colin Bell, associate dean of the UI College of Business Administration. "A student may know analytical methods, but if he can't speak or write he won't suc-

Employers and educators are currently concerned about an apparent lack of MBA graduates with good communication skills. Bell said employers are "desperate for someone who knows how to communicate."

NANCY HARPER, assistant dean in the UI College of Liberal Arts, said many students are poor communicators because many liberal arts colleges have stopped requiring students to take speaking and writing

But she said UI graduates are at an advantage in this respect because these requirements have not been dropped by the UI.

Harper said people in management positions spend 75-90 percent of their time talking or writing, making communication skills a must.

Ruth Williams, president of the MBA Association, agreed with Harper, saying the ability to communicate is "the essence of being a good manager."

An increasing number of MBA program administrators are attempting to improve the communication skills of their graduates.

Instructors who teach students in the MBA program at Stanford University, in Stanford, Calif., evaluate all papers and oral presentation in an effort to encourage students to improve their com-

At the UI, speech and writing workshops began last fall, but MBA students are not required to take them.

MBA STUDENTS may attend a one-day speech workshop that is conducted every semester by Donovan Ochs, coordinator and speech supervisor in the UI Rhetoric Program. Students make presentations in front of a video camera and later, view the tapes and critique them.

A writing workshop was conducted by Gene Krupa, UI associate professor in the UI Rhetoric Program, a few times early this semester. Krupa said the workshops are "still very much in the experimental stage.

Students in the workshops were given hypothetical problems that might confront them in future jobs. They were asked to write business letters in response to the problems, and letters were judged on content and

Students who attend the workshops can have them listed on their transcripts, but they do not receive credit hours or a grade for the Bell said the turnout for the workshops has been low and that he would like to see greater attendance.

BUT KRUPA SAID low attendance was expected because the workshops are on a voluntary basis and students are busy with other work.

Next week, Krupa, Ochs, and Bell will meet to determine the future structure of the workshops and whether or not they should be offered

The Business College recently hired Juliet Kaufmann, who has a doctorate in English, to help graduate business students learn to write effective memos and papers.

Kaufmann has office hours for a total of four hours per week during which she helps students individually. She also conducts a few informal writing workshops each semester.

MBA graduates with technical undergraduate backgrounds are also currently in demand. Bell said comanies are showing a preference for hiring people with backgrounds in engineering, mathematics and com-

UI MBA students have a wide variety of undergraduate backgrounds, both technical and non-technical. However, approximately 40 percent of the students in the UI MBA program have undergraduate degrees in business, Bell

John Hines, who will graduate with his MBA degree in May, also has a bachelor's degree in business administration.

HE IS NOW interviewing for jobs and said he has been discouraged by interviews with business representatives who said they did not want to hire him because he lacks technical skills.

"If I had been an engineer I would have a much better chance of a second interview," Hines said.

Although the demand for MBA graduates with technical skills is increasing, there appears to be no guarantee that they will earn significantly more than graduates without such skills

The UI Career Services and Placement Center last year surveyed some UI MBA graduates. The average starting salary for those with technical backgrounds was $22,000. Students without technical backgrounds received slightly less - an average of

KNOWLEDGE OF foreign languages can also give MBA graduates an advantage because it often qualifies them for jobs with international firms, Bell said.

Williams, who will graduate from the UI MBA program in December, majored in French and Education as an undergraduate. She said her foreign language background may help her find a job at a company that trades abroad.

Williams said MBA graduates with language backgrounds and those with technical backgrounds seem to be evenly matched when it comes to competing for jobs. "But I may have an edge over someone with an English background," she added.

Staff council begins push to reinstate merit program

By Elizabeth McGrory

Members of the UI Staff Council began a formal push for reinstatement of the merit step program - a payment system for merit employees - but state officials said the program will not be recommended to the Iowa Legislature until next year.

Under the merit steps program, which was eliminated for fiscal year 1981, across-the-board salary increases were awarded to all employees as well as discretionary increases in pay, based on productivity, on the anniversary of employ-

Because all organized state employees receive a straight 8 percent increase, Gov. Robert Ray took the position that non-organized employees should receive the same, said R. Wayne Richey, state Board of Regents executive secretary.

UI merit system employees now receive a straight 8 percent increase in July instead of creating two separate salary increases.

'The best merit system employees become demoralized" with the suspension of the merit steps, said Howard Mayer, UI Staff Council president.

The merit steps provide supervisors with a way to rate efficiency on the job and open an avenue for supervisors and employees to communicate, according to Deb Lenz, Staff Council Merit Committee member.

IT BOOSTS the moral of employees because they can be awarded financially for their performance, Lenz said.

Richey said the return to merit steps will be recommended for July 1983 legislation, but UI employees will receive a flat 8 percent increase

But council members want the pay plan reinstatement now so the regents will realize the unanimous approval of the merit system personnel, Mayer said.

'We feel reinstatement of the merit steps should be uppermost in the recommendations by the board of regents. In this time of financial difficulties in our state, reinstatement of the merit step increase would provide a morale booster that could only be equalled by a substantial overall increase in salaries," Lenz said.

Speech prof hopes to replicate voices

Unlocking the secrets of the voice may reduce talking to a scientific formula, a UI Ida Beam Visiting Professor of speech communications

According to Gunnar Fant, a more detailed understanding of the vocal cords and voice filters - the larnyx, lungs, mouth, nose and lips - will allow the human voice to be replecated more accurately.

"At present we know how to copy human speech," he said But Fant's goal is to collect data that will make it possible to form individual sounds, such as vowel sounds, rather than copy the human voice, he said. "We want to start with a text and ...

have a machine do what a human (voice) does," he said. Such information could be used in small computers that would provide speech impaired individuals with a way to talk, he said. Understanding the role of the vocal reading devices for the blind possible,

SUCH MACHINES would read and vocally reproduce information, he Also, a better understanding of how the vocal cords work can make artificial larynges a reality, he said. Further voice research may make learning a foreign language easier because pronunciation could be taught by machines that would vocally correct an individual's mistakes, Fant said.

Someday, Fant hopes research will make male and female voice reproduction possible, he said.

Fant, on a one-year leave from the Royal Institute of Technology in Sweden, will speak at 11:30 a.m. today on "Source-Filter Modeling of Human Speech," at 301 Van Allen Hall.

Gov. Robert D. Ray has suggested three minor tax bills as the way to halance the budget.

One House GOP leader, after a closed party meeting at the end of the day, was optimistic the problem would be settled soon. Lawmakers hope to adjourn by the end of the week.

Democrats, who have made restoration of the "unemployed parent" program a prerequisite for support of tax bills, also were optimistic. "We've got all the pieces for a good

UP (unemployed parent) program," House Minority Leader Don Avenson, D-Oelwein, said at the close of the day. EARLY IN THE day, Avenson asked Democrats not to vote for tax bills less the full program was offered. The "unemployed parent" program allowed state aid to families with two employed parents. It was scrapped last year with critics saying it was too expensive. A quarter of the 4,000 nilies on the program have broken some legislators say their motive as to get welfare aid. Democrats say the program is eded this year because of the recesobless benefits but work is not state solvent.

A bipartisan group of senators proposed a somewhat limited, $5.2 million unemployed parent program as an amendment to a $40 million appropriations bill. It sparked a meeting between House and Senate leaders but did not receive action before the Senate recessed.

Meanwhile, House Republicans with some Democratic support worked on a $6 million program that melds workfare with the unemployed parent program, but would not allow all the services of the old program. It would require recipients to perform public service work, if requested, to

THE FULL program cost $7.5 million last year. Some legislators said there are enough votes among Republicans and Democrats to pass it in the House now.

Republicans are involved in drafting workfare and unemployed parent programs in hopes of getting a plan that satisifies their desires while winning enough votes to pass the tax bills.

Rep. Lyle Krewson, R-Urbandale, active in forming the workfare-UP plan, indicated there also was sufficient support to pass that idea. It appeared some of the votes would come from Democrats. All the plans hinge on what GOP conservatives are willing to do, legislators said. If they cannot be persuaded to work for passage of the tax bills, it would allow Democrats to bargain for more on the welfare program.

Two of Ray's tax proposals were given a good chance of passage. One would effectively mean higher income taxes for people who live in other states but work in Iowa. The other would tax windfall oil profits. Together, they would net $14 million, on. Many people are running out of which should be enough to keep the

It pays to upgrade your insulation to today's new, higher standards.

use it

Even if your home was built recently, it may not meet today's new, higher needs for insulation. The more energy costs rise, the more it pays to insulate. Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company now recommends R-36 insulation in attics. That's the equivalent of 12 inches of blanket fiberglass insulation. The new standards call for full insulation in your sidewalls.

You probably have questions

· Does my home need insula-

• How much insulation should I add?

is precious, · What is an R-value? · What kind of insulation is best?

· Should I try to do it myself? We have answers to these kinds of questions and we can make suggestions which will help you choose an insulation

You'll also find that many lending firms will offer loans for energy-saving home improvements.

To learn more about these new energy and money-saving insulation standards and how to meet them, call your nearest Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company office, or return this coupon with your

ABOUT 500-600 residents in Iowa City do not pay property taxes on time. Don Krall, county treasurer, explained what actions the county takes: "In the middle of May we'll have a publication with names and legal descriptions of people who haven't paid. You have the chance to pay back the taxes and the interest. It takes four years to take your property over, but in Johnson County, we've never taken over a

"I think it's a matter of scaring people into paying their taxes. They don't want their name in the papers."

However, Krall said he does not think that everyone who pays their taxes late is financially unable: "Our interest is fairly low - 12 percent a year - and most banks are 18 percent"

The state also has some trouble collecting on some of about 4,000 active sales permits in the county. Revenue Agent David Herzog said: "I will verify that there are a lot of problems with permit holders - businesses unable to pay their sales tax on time. There has been a slight increase in the last few months."

However, he explained that since interest.

Each year, some people fail to pay their income taxes on time - about 150-200 people in Iowa City, Herzog said. "If there's some really unusual circumstances, we'll waive the fine ... otherwise, it's quite costly," he said, adding that the penalty is five percent of the amount due per month plus

No noise is good noise

Despite all the noise about noise in Iowa City in recent months, members of the Iowa City Council have been strangely quiet about the issue. Their silent vigil apparently was broken Tuesday night, when they agreed to consider enacting a city noise ordinance.

The proposed ordinance, which received the council's informal approval, defines excessive noise, designates quiet zones and establishes a system for assessing penalties. A public hearing on the proposal is set for May, and enforcement could begin this summer.

Noise control was a central issue in last fall's city council elections; the need for a noise ordinance was the central plank in candidate Larry Baker's campaign platform. Baker lost, but his campaign focused public attention on the city's noise problem, and helped mobilize support for an ordinance.

As council members work to put the proposal into final form, they need to bear in mind the importance of establishing precise and objectively verifiable standards. This can best be accomplished by defining excessive noise in terms of decibel levels, measurable through the use of electronic devices.

Decibel levels are an important part of many existing noise ordinances for two reasons. First, they guard against "selective enforcement" — a euphemism for harrassment — by police. And second, since they provide evidence that can be presented in court, they help both to protect the innocent and convict the guilty.

The council deserves our thanks for finally taking action on an issue of demonstrated concern to so many in the community. As the council moves toward eventual adoption of the new ordinance, however, it should remember the importance of drafting a fair, effective and enforceable law.

Shallow reasoning

Johnson County will have $370,000 less in its budget if a decision by the state appeals board stands. The board ruled that the county cannot assess an emergency levy to augment its fiscal 1983 revenues because no emergency exists here. That reasoning is shallow, and the county Board of Supervisors rightly appears ready to appeal.

In the past, the emergency levy was assessed routinely and funds transferred to other accounts in the county budget as needed. The option to do that is especially needed now, when federal and state aid to counties and municipalities has been cut; a deficit of $140,000 could result if the emergency levy is discontinued, forcing reductions in an already strained county budget.

Furthermore, to say that the levy is unjustified because there is no "emergency" in Johnson County is a particularly weak argument. What is the board of supervisors to do — say "we need this money because we're planning to have a budget crisis this year?" Emergency money is something that is held aside for an emergency, not something to be requested only after a bad situation becomes critical.

Some of the supervisors smell a political rat in the appeals board's decision, citing the fact that the appeals board is all Republican while the board of supervisors is all Democratic. This is also an election year, supervisor Dennis Langenberg noted.

That may or may not have been a factor in the appeals board's vote. But something it apparently failed to consider is that the county property tax rate is lower this year than last, even with the emergency levy, county auditor Tom Slockett noted.

The game these days is for various levels of government to try to shift their resposibilities to one another, but this is no time for the state to deny Johnson County the financial options it needs to maintain adequate services.

A smokescreen

In the face of a growing grassroots movement to end the proliferation of nuclear arms, the U.S. Senate has introduced a compromise proposal ostensibly to accomplish the same end, but which in reality accentuates the crisis. Sponsored by Sens. Henry Jackson, D-Wash. and John Warner, R-Va., the resolution calls for a moratorium on nuclear buildup only after the level of the U.S. arsenal reaches that of the Soviets.

The problem with this plan is that no two people have ever agreed on what constitutes nuclear equality. The task is made even more difficult by the fact that the United States clearly has the edge in some areas of strategic armament while the Soviets have the upper hand in others. How it all balances out is a matter of widely divergent opinion.

It is unrealistic, therefore, to assume that the Soviet Union will be in accord with any U.S. view on the balance of power, unless that viewpoint is hammered out and agreed upon through negotiations instead of dictated by a handful of senators. What may seem like military equality to us will undoubtedly appear to be a distinct U.S. advantage to the Soviets. A continued buildup of strategic arms on our part, even though it be prefaced by promises to stop once we "catch up," can only be expected to prompt additional arms production by the Soviets.

Thus the current senate bill is little more than a smokescreen for the same arms race we've been indulging in for years. Yet it is more dangerous in that it tends to pacify by holding out the promise that something concrete is being done to prevent nuclear destruction, when in reality it is merely bringing us one step closer.

'Egyptian fallacy'

result of plain "good business."

To the editor

The purpose of this letter is to call into question the choice and direction of Fernando Arrabel's And They Put Handcuffs on the Flowers for the University Theater.

The stated purpose of the performance was to motivate the theater-goer into action against political imprisonment by fascist states. A work comparable in scope is The Diary of Anne Frank, which I believe accomplishes this purpose by empathy and pity. The former work almost forces empathy by treating the audience as if their rights were being violated. For example, the audience was not allowed to leave the theater until after the performance. However, the following aspects of the event distract the audience from the stated purpose and actually make the work unacceptable for a university

The use of nudity on stage was at times inappropriate and seemed to distort the work's purpose by becoming mere exhibitionism. Certainly prisoners may have sexual fantasies which may, by depiction, enhance our awareness of their suffering. However, whole speeches, having little to do with or enhanced by nudity, were delivered by persons in various stages of undress. Such excesses without purpose cheapen the human body and divert attention from the important goal of this work.

While the director's program note draws attention to the fact that injustice is perpetuated in the name of all religions, this production rightly should be critical of the Christian church of Spain, the setting of the work. What I believe was unacceptable for an educational institution is not criticism of the church, Christian practices, or even statements or actions of Jesus himself as they pertain to injustice.

However, out of some apparently wildly misdirected anger and frustration, this production only tried to defame the character of Jesus, who is portrayed using people as sexual objects for his own pleasure. Besides being blatant slander this is a form of religious intolerance. While all mankind might theoretically be held accountable for injustice in the modern world, this production implies that any people who believe in Jesus Christ are somehow to blame for this injustice in Spain. A university ought to exemplify religious tolerance; intolerance actually leads to the very injustice to which this play seeks to draw our attention.

As a Christian concerned about unjust imprisonment, I left this production wondering if the writer and/or director had more than one purpose in mind for And They Put Handcuffs on the Flowers. Exploitation of the human body and religious intolerance are unacceptable for a university theater and should not be accepted merely because a play has some other socially redeeming value. James B. Martins with their enchantments." (Exodus 7:10-11).

Two letters recently published in The Daily Iowan are fine examples of what may be called the "Egyptian fallacy," the assumption that the more familiar cause of an effect must, for that reason alone, be the cause of it. (DI, April 5, April 8). Just because conventional means may be used to pull of the same feats that psychics perform does not mean that psychics use conventional means. It is irrelevant to explain how the "trick" might have been do e. What needs to be shown is that it was done in one way or the other.

It must be admitted that the DI's presentation of the story warranted the use of yellow paper to fit the journalistic style. But it must also be pointed out that the views that have been expressed about the psychic's abilities are long on ad hominem, short on evidence.

Intramural sports

To the editor:

I am amazed at the continually biased coverage that The Daily Iowan gives intramural sports. I do have to say, though, that the DI has been consistent in its coverage of men's and coed volleyball this spring. That is, not a single article or match score has been printed.

It seems the DI staff has no idea what is happening in intramural sports unless it concerns IM football or basketball. It's a shame that a sport that has 66 coed teams and 45 men's teams and is worth 50-150 points towards the IM all-university title receives no publicity at all.

It is true that the race for the all-university intramural crowns is drawing to a close, but how could Steve Riley, in his article about the all-university standings, make such an ignorant statement as "with four events remaining — tennis, canoe racing, slow pitch softball and tug-of-war — on the intramural schedule ..."

If he had been in touch with the IM office he would have found out that there are five events remaining. Volleyball playoffs are just about to begin and 150 points will be awarded to the champions. These points may also have a bearing on the crowning of an all-U champ.

I'm not asking for a full page article but I don't think a paragraph or two about volleyball is asking too much.

Despite the ads, no future in soldiering

EOPLE SEND ME the strangest things in the mail. Lately, I've been the proud recipient of various laundry product samples. Biz, Shout, Boom, Attack, Pummel, Bruise, Kapow, Mutilate, Hemorrhage and Arrgh have all recently made their brightly packaged way into my mail box, assuring me that either my t-shirts will come spotlessly clean or nothing in the laundromat will be left alive. It's good to know that in the war against grime, Proctor and Gamble has left its options open, first-strike-wise.

Along those same lines, I have lately received letters from the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines telling me what a promising future I have as an officer in their various organizations. They haven't made any similar promises concerning my laundry, but given time, they'll come up with something. I'm sure they mean well, and I'm quite complimented by their offers of a commission, but consider: I have rogressive myopia, astigmatism, flat feet, bad ankles and a speech impediment. When I was still draft age, the only classification lower than mine (4-F) was enemy alien.

IF I'M AN OFFICER and a war comes up with anybody tougher than Fiji, believe me, we'll lose. I'll see to it personally. This is not to say, of course, that one need be a perfect physical specimen, or even psychologically sturdy, to perform well on the battlefield.

For instance, Caesar was epileptic, Admiral Nelson had only one arm, Frederick the Great was crazy as a bedbug, Napoleon never took a bath and Ulysses S. Grant was alcoholic, stupid and smoked too much. As human wreckage goes, I'm in good

But I must say, I'm beginning to wonder if there's much future in being a soldier boy. The pattern of modern battlefield tactics is to kill all those tacky soldiers as quickly as possible so the gizmos can get down to the serious business of war.

Soldiers are fragile things after all. Spray the merest atomized bit of nerve gas on a soldier, and he'll start convulsing and vomiting blood and then stop breathing before you can say "window of vulnerability." Pour a quart of nerve gas on a tank and you'll get a flame thrower in your ear.

IF I WAS A general, I'd prefer to have a burly tank around rather than some sissy of a soldier who'll keel over and suffer massive cellular degeneration at his first whiff of intense gamma radiation.

I'm not alone in that wish either

I'm not alone in that wish, either. I'm starting to reach the conclusion Ronald Reagan feels the same way. For somebody who avows every couple of days that he'd rather starve to death than step up the arms race, he likes nuclear weapons like a salamander likes mud.

He pledges his "body, mind and soul" to the cause of diffusing the arms race, but his body keeps saying that we need more nuclear weapons and hismind keeps devising ways to justify their use. As far as his soul goes, one imagines it just tries to hide from his mind and body.

Luckily, there are only a few countries that have the capacity to kill everybody in the ghastly way nuclear war would. That situation isn't going to last long, though. The number of countries, some of them quite radical, with the potential to construct nuclear weapons is growing so rapidly that we'll soon be able to peruse the nuclear club and play "Spot The Looney" with the certainty of a high score, maybe even a free game. Or are they all loonies already?

Lab helps students' reading, study skills

By Dawn Ummel Special to The Daily Iowan

Rattana Chakrabaht works in a lab, but in place of chemicals she analyzes difficult reading assignments.

Chakrabaht is one of approximately 90 UI students who frequent the Reading Lab in Room 12 English Philosophy Building.

Students who visit the lab receive help understanding course reading material, learning to decipher written tests, improving note-taking skills, increasing vocabulary, and mastering the basics of speed reading.

The lab is staffed by director Lois Muehl, and several teaching assistants and graduate students.

UI undergraduate and graduate students may enroll in a lab rhetoric course for credit or in a non-credit lab

Lab instructor Mary Baumhover said many UI students incorrectly assume the lab provides only remedial reading assistance. She said the lab is actually for "anyone who wants to improve their reading."

LAB INSTRUCTOR Jan Youga said two types of students use the reading lab. Those in the credit course, College-Level Reading in the English Language (10:008), are usually referred by an instructor who feels the student is not ready for freshman rhetoric.

Students who go the non-credit route — "volunteers" — are usually also enrolled in freshman rhetoric classes, or are graduate students who need help with speed reading, Youga explained.
Sixty-five of the 90 students using the lab this semester are volunteers.

Baumhover said there is usually a noticeable difference in the attitudes of volunteers and those of students sent to the lab by rhetoric instructors.

"If they're sent by their rhetoric teacher, particularly if they didn't feel they had a problem, they might be a little wary," she said. Volunteers, on the other hand, come to the lab because they recognize their problems and feel the need to improve.

Youga said many foreign students use the lab. This semester, around 40 of the approximately 90 lab students are foreign.

Hamid Vossoughi's rhetoric instructor referred him to the lab for help with the mechanics of the English language, which Vossoughi said many foreign students find difficult to grasp.

Youga said most students who come to the lab have problems with readings that are required for specific courses.

Classes that require a lot of reading — such as sociology, psychology, philosophy, and literature — prompt many students to seek help, she said.

Lab instructor Mary Baumhover said many students do not practice "active reading," which involves critically analyzing material and taking notes. "In the lab we try to encourage active questioning of the reading to make sure they understand it," she said.

BAUMHOVER SAID the name "Reading Lab" does not accurately express what is offered in the program, which actually provides instruction in sharpening study skills.

The lab has helped Chakrabaht increase her understanding of text books as well as the speed at which she reads the books. "I was advised to quickly read a short article in a magazine and then tell what it was about," she said. The first time she tried this, she sacrificed understanding for speed.

But now, after six months of practice, she can read faster and understand the material as well.

Youga said Chakrabaht and other foreign students, because they are unfamiliar with the English language, usually progress more slowly than students familiar with the language.

Students who speak English as their native language have sometimes increased their reading speed by 200-300 words per minute after only a week of training, she said.

STEVE BLUM VISITS the lab twice a week on a voluntary basis in order to improve his speed reading skills.

He uses machines that force him to read faster, such as the "Creative Curriculum Reader." The reader displays a line of print on a video-display screen for a short time, requiring students to read the line before it disappears.

Dennis Moore, assistant professor in the UI Rhetoric Program, said people's slow reading habits are caused, in part, by traditional reading instruction.

"One reason people read slowly is that in school we are taught to read letter by letter, word by word. Then we weren't told what to do after that," he said.

The lab staff encourages students to use material other than text books for speed reading. Magazines, novels or newspapers are good places to start, Moore said.

Blum, for example, said his newly acquired speed-reading skills allow him to "whip through" the newspaper.

Winter and anxiety can go hand-in-hand

By Elizabeth McGrory Staff Writer

The horrible winter of 1981-82 added insult to injury when it invaded Iowa's spring several times this month. Although there is no theory that people are depressed by these last-gasp winter blasts, that seems to be the rule.

Ursula Delworth, director of the UI Counseling Service, said Tuesday she can only hypothesize that cold, rainy or snowy weather increases some people's anxiety.

MANY PEOPLE keep their wits together during winter by reminding themselves that it will not last forever. But when they get a glimpse of spring, they believe winter is over and set themselves up for disappointment when snow, cold and gloom ignores the calender, she said.

"For some it (the return of winter weather) is a minor frustration. For those who are generally depressed, it pushes them deeper into the depression." Delworth said.

People who are irritated by prolonged winter weather "get lifted by being active and outside" during warm spells but feel even worse when poor weather settles back across the state, she said.

John Singer, staff psychiatrist at the UI Student Health, said more students seek counseling for tension-related ailments during a spell of bad weather or after "murky, rainy weather."

"PEOPLE WHO have many mood swings are affected by a lot of factors, including weather," he said

Sandie Packer, assistant director of the Iowa City Crisis Center, said she used to think "the weather was a good barometer" of how busy the center will be, but that generalization is difficult to gauge when from the center's sporadic activity.

"People have expressed the winter was long," but they never say, "'I feel happier on sunny days,'" she said.

Several variables contribute to stress, such as financial problems and the weather, according to Richard Lowenberg, a psychologist at the Iowa City Mental Health Clinic. But "there's no scientific conclusion that weather does contribute to stress."

But his maestro pitching performance fell apart. Iowa State rallied for five runs in the sixth, roughing up Hobaugh, Erin Janss and Paul Rieks.

Nick Zumsande, Iowa State's fourth itcher of the day, began mastering lowa hitters as the game went into exings. After scoreless seventh and eighth innings, Iowa State scored in the ninth to grab a 6-5 lead.

gust, Iowa State Head Coach Larry Corrigan paused before answering the first question surrounding Iowa's 7-6 extra-effort victory over the Cyclones Wednesday.

"That was terrible," he finally said. "I haven't been out on the field all year."

Corrigan was upset over umpiring during the game, more so than losing. Or was he? The Cyclones had beaten Iowa six straight times going into Wednesday, but the string was now broken.

ON THE OTHER side of the diamond, was busy taking a different approach. "You'll never hear me criticize Iowa State," he said. 'There's no bad blood between these teams. Heck, these kids play with each other during the summer.' What is important in this series is the "bragging rights." In the bars and barber shops in Iowa's elevator communities, folks from each side will chew the fat about the split. And in a less-than-college-baseballcrazy Iowa, about the only spring games of importance are Iowa versus Iowa State.

Beyond that, who cares? "It probably doesn't mean as much to me

Iowa's Duane Banks, who coaches the Hawks, as the kids from Iowa," Cyclone Assistant Coach Bob Randall confessed. "I mean, who in Iowa cares if Kansas State beats Kansas?

"For sure this game means more to the alumni, fans and students. It's just like football or basketball. Right now, we are pointing towards our conference games this weekend against Missouri. But we play Iowa next Wednesday and that's what we will point to next."

CORRIGAN CONTINUED between spits. "This is important in-state. We went with our horses last year against Iowa. That was their gripe last year. This year, who went with their horses?"

Banks countered by saying, "Check the scorebook to see who threw for them last year. I'm not going to get into that."

Said Randall, a former Minnesota Twins' infielder: "We got 'em at home next week and our fans will want to win. You know we will want to win."

Banks: "The kids enjoy playing against each other, Iowa State? That's next week." Although there are two different schools of thought, and even if the masses in the state don't know Iowa and Iowa State play again next week, they will realize what happened the following day. It's for "bragging rights"

Netters defeat Cyclones in rain

By Mike Condon

It was a crazy day for the Iowa tennis team Wednesday, but when the rains came to the Southwest Tennis Complex in Ames, the Hawks had a 5-2 victory over Iowa State to keep a hex on the Cyclones that is now 13 years old.

The match started like any other, but problems soon arose when the weather furned against the players and the match had to be moved to an indoor facility in Ames. The facility, which only had two playable courts, was only available until 4:30 p.m., so when the time came to leave, the weather had cleared up and it was back to the Iowa State campus for the completion of the Completion never came, however, as the rains came again just as the Iowa duo of Dan Rustin and Jim Carney were finishing off a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Iowa State's Mike Kopp and Bruce Lipka. The win was important because it gave Iowa the five wins necessary to have the match count as a victory.

A RELIEVED Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said he was pleased with the play of all his players under the unusual conditions. "I was really worried that we were not going to get that last match in," Houghton said. "All the kids played extremely well today and they adjusted to the moving (to different sites) very well."

No. 1 singles player Dan Rustin continued to be plagued with injuries. A stiffness in his shoulder kept him from serving at full speed, but Houghton believes he will not miss any action because of the injury.

Another Iowa player who has been out with injury problems is junior John Willard. He returned to action in the No. 3 doubles slot but mother nature allowed him only one set of action which he and partner Seth Jacobson lost to the Cyclone tandum of Doug Wenzel and Dave Eberhardt, 7-6.

Ninth inning single saves Braves, 4-3

ATLANTA (UPI) - Claudell Washington's two-run single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning Wednesday night lifted the Atlanta Braves to their 13th straight victory, a 4-3 decision over the Cincinnati Reds.

Matt Sinatro led off the ninth with a walk and Rafael Ramirez followed with an infield single to start the Atlanta ninth off loser Bob Shirley, 0-1. One out later, Brett Butler's grounder to short hit Sinatro for the second out of the inning.

A wild pitch by reliever Jim Kern and an intentional walk to pinch hitter Biff Pocoroba loaded the bases, and reliever Jim Price surrendered a sharp single to center to Washington to keep intact Atlanta's perfect record.

Larry Biittner, starting only his second game of the season, belted a three-run homer in the third inning to give the Reds a 3-0 lead.

Biittner's first homer in two seasons came off Rick Mahler after Ron Oester had singled and moved to second on Dave Concepcion's walk. The 370-foot blast Atlanta 4 Cincinnati 3

THE BRAVES cut the gap to 3-1 on Chris Chambliss' 365-foot homer to lead off the fifth. It was the second homer in two nights for Chambliss, who has a 10-game hitting streak.

The Braves scored again in the seventh after Dale Murphy led off with a double and moved to third on Chambliss' long fly. After Bruce Benedict walked, Tom Hume came on in relief of starter Mario Soto. Rafael Ramirez's sacrifice fly scored Murphy, but Hume got pinch hitter Ken Smith to fly out and end the inning.

The Philadelphia 76ers have disappinted their followers with their play in the playoffs the last few years. Wednesday night they took a small step to rectify the situation.

Kathy Gillespie and Janet Adams finished third and fifth respectively in the heptathlon at the Drake Relays Wednesday in Des Moines.

Renee Nickles of Oklahoma won the event with 5,344 points. Marian Goedhart of Nebraska was second with 5,227 points followed by Gillespie in third with 5,202, Deb DeCosta in fourth with 5,172 and Adams with 4,919 points.
The top three finishers all broke the Drake Relays point record of 5,119 points. With her total, Adams qualified for the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national outdoor meet in College Station, Texas, May 20-22. The qualifying standard is 4,900 points even.

GILLESPIE WON the last event Wednesday, the 800-meter run, to move into third place ahead of DeCosta, a Florida high school standout running for the Sunshine Striders track club. Adams won the javelin the last day to jump from ninth to sixth place.

Iowa Head Coach Jerry Hassard was pleased with the performances of Gillespie and Adams for two reasons. "They improved in the standings con-siderably for where they stood last night," Hassard said. Gillespie was fourth and Adams was ninth after the

"Also, they are not at full strength," he said. "At this point in their training, both Gillespie and Adams are performing very well. It's like the beginning of the season for these two.'

Both Adams and Gillespie are happy with their performances, but agree that there is room for improvement. "I'm really pleased," Adams said. "I wouldn't say satisfied, because I know I can do better. I surprised myself. I went in there hoping to qualify."

Gillespie said: "I'm really happy about the finish, considering the quality of the field. I know I can improve a lot."

Hassard said the next three weeks of training and competition will put Gillespie and Adams in good position to compete well at the Big Ten meet. 'You'll see even better results at the Big Ten meet," he said.

Fifteen members of the Hawkeye Tae-Kwon-Do Club won 11 trophies in the free-sparring and form competition at the Central U.S. Open Tae-Kwon-Do Championships at Lincoln, Neb., last Saturday and Sunday.

Hossain Tabatabai led the Hawkeye club in free-sparring, winning the heavyweight division in the blue belt competition. Finishing second in their respective categories were Doug Denne, lightweight-yellow; Pete Bergquist, lightweight-green and Todd Papke, heavyweight-blue.

Third-place finishers were Ali Kia, lightweight-blue; Jim Kistard, heavyweight-brown; Shervin Kia heavyweight-black and Bob Logan, lightweight-black.

Black-belt Linda Logan and green-belt Bergquist won their form divisions and Tak Sakurai finished third in green-belt form competition.

The Hawkeye club workouts are Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the Martial Arts Room, Field House. For more information, contact Bob Logan, 351-5256.

THE UI RUGBY club, which finished third in the Big Ten tournament, won its first two games before losing to eventual champions, Illinois.

The Iowa ruggers dominated their first game against Purdue, winning the match, 10-6. Scoring quickly in the first half on two goal kicks for Iowa was Hiram Melendez. Mike Regan scored on a try. Purdue was held scoreless until the end of the game when they converted two goal kicks.

The second game against Minnesota was a nail-biter with the UI club winning in overtime, 11-7. The Iowa team trailed Minnesota, 4-3, until the final minute when Dave Schlieter scored a try to put Iowa ahead, 7-4. Minnesota tied the game with a goal kick as time ran out, forcing the game into a 15-minute overtime period. Iowa took control of the extra period as Regan and Melendez again combined to score a try and a goal kick to clinch the victory.

In the semifinal game against Illinois, Iowa played a hard fought contest only to lose by one point, 11-10. The UI's scoring came on two goal kicks by Melendez and a try by Dave Diemer.

This weekend the Iowa City team, now 3-3, takes on Luther at 1 p.m. Sunday at the Hawkeye Apartment Field.

THE IOWA CITY Women's Rugby Club lost 4-0 in overtime to last year's Midwest champions, Chicago, last Saturday.

During regulation play, the Iowa City team dominated the first half coming close on a number of occasions, but unable to push the ball across the goal line. The closest the river city ruggers got in the second half was a run by Robin Walenta down to the 20-yard line before Chicago was able to tackle

The teams will be vying for the team title won by Nebraska last year. Some of the teams joining the Hawkeyes in the battle to dethrone the Cornhuskers are Kansas, Kansas State, Iowa State, Drake, Missouri and Northern Iowa.

The tournament is a two-day, 54-hole affair with each team playing 27 holes on each golf course. Both courses are par 72.

The Echo Valley course is in good shape, according to club pro Kurt Talbott. "The playing conditions are good," Talbott said — "the best we've ing the pins where the players can shoot to them. "We're not going to trick up the course any," he said. 'We're going to open it up to them. We want to see them score well."

Anderson said the Cyclones had a good fall, but like many other teams in the north, Iowa State has been unable to practice or play because of the weather. Late Wednesday afternoon, Anderson still hadn't decided on which five players he'll take to Des Moines.

Walk-on No. 1 lowa wingback

Iowa Football Coach Hayden Fry announced after practice Wednesday that Bill Broghamer, a walk-on from Decorah, Iowa, has become the team's No. 1 wingback. Broghamer replaces senior Jeff Brown and J.C. Love-Jordan at that position.

The team was scheduled to scrimmage Wednesday, but since it didn't practice Tuesday, the scrimmage has been moved back until today, starting at 3:15 p.m. in Kinnick Stadium. Fry said the Hawkeye coaching staff has been pleased with the team's improvement this spring. "Our guys are making steady improvement, but since we're such a young team, there's a lot of room for improvement," he said.

Fry said the team has incurred quite a few injuries, but few new ones" this spring. "Surprisingly we have had more on defense than offense. Usually it's the other way around," he

Fry said he has not evaluated Nebraska, Iowa's first opponent, yet, but he said that a member of the coaching staff will scout the Cornhuskers at their spring game this Saturday. Nebraska will scout Iowa's spring game May 1.

UI Dance Program to perform concert

By Cheryl Pearl Sucher

The Spring Student Concert Dance of the UI Dance Program promises to be a festival of movement that will reflect both a democracy and expansiveness of choreographic styles, techniques and conceptions. The concert will be at 6 p.m. today through Saturday at the Space Place in North Hall.

The program is the culmination of an outreach effort conceived by the resident dancers to encourage student choreography and to provide a forum for the presentation of new works. All the dances in the recital were originally shown at a series of informal Friday afternoon showings at the Space Place.

Works were subsequently videotaped and reviewed by a student adjudication committee consisting of five graduate dancers elected by their peers. In the eves of the committee, the program highlights a semester's worth of experimental and creative efforts.

THE CONCERT promises to sparkle with vitality, innovation and freshness. No element of contemporary dance has been ignored; included is a smorgasbord of Eastern and Western delicacies, narrative and abstract designs. No longer are schools and techniques rigidly and singularly employed; most of the dances reflect a bold fusion, a synchronization of elements that encompasses ballet, jazz, modern, tap, samba, mamba, cha-cha, belly, bop and step.

What characterizes many of the dances in the weekend's program is a fearlessness to outstep prescribed boundaries in order to create dances of dramatic impact. There is also a movement back toward narrative dance. In the eyes of Laurie Sanda, whose work "Ceremonies" was performed at this spring's American College Dance Festival in Madison, Wis., for too long 'most dances shied away from a sense of the dramatic, afraid they would look too much like Martha Graham."

Though Sanda believes strongly in the need to express her own dramatic urges through narrative, she has choreographed two dances for the concert that do not employ traditional narrative structures but are movements woven about narrative ideas. "Quintet for Two Hands, One Head and Two Feet" was a solo she originally choreographed five years ago and adapted for the physical and energetic temperament of Ann Schuchmann, a daring dancer who herself has a dance on the program. To paraphrase Sanda, "Quintet" is about the gestural and emotional relationship between hands

SANDA'S SECOND work on the program, "Improvisation," involves the live interaction of six dancers on stage and is a work that evolved from an exercise format.

Narrative dance is given further expression in Doug Wood's "The Artist," a solo excerpted from his larger workin-progress, "Monad." Composed like a fugue, the piece is about solipsisms. Danced to the first movement of Bartok's "Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta," the work deals with the tension between the formal and informal aspects of performing.

Complexities are attacked in T.J. Meyers' duet "Canzona." Danced to the expansive symphonic band music of Peter Mennin, the choreographer has said that the grandness of the music was initially perceived as a problematic complement to his duet. However, he chose to reconcile that difficulty by creating a dance whose expansiveness of style complemented the orchestral nature of the music. subliminal and primitive to relationships through energetic synchronized movements. "Canzona" expresses a physicality

THE DESIRE to explore the nature of contemporary relationships through dance is further explored in Ann Schuchmann's work, "Intermezzo." Danced to Johannes Brahms' Intermezzo in C-sharp Minor, Opus 117, No. 3, it focuses on the problem of two female dancers who do not have a distinct relationship to each other within the dance, but who are instead simultaneously dancing the individual urge to dance within themselves.

Also on the program are Don Miller's "Kicks a Boom," a work that is wound around a fraternity theme and danced by nine men; Eliana Rodriguez Silva's 'Iemanja, Iemanja,' based on a tale from Afro-Brazilian folklore; Linda Earley's ballet solo "Portrait No. 4"; Dorian Williams-Bird's "I Got Shoes," done to traditional gospel music; and Terry Lehmkuhl's "Silent Pictures," based on characteristic and stylized gestures common to silent film.

Publisher Laughlin to lecture

By Andrew Hudgins Special to The Daily Iowan

In the 1930s, Ezra Pound told James Laughlin, "Jas, let's face it, you're never going to be a writer. Why don't you go back home and do something

Laughlin, then an undergraduate at Harvard, had spent six months in Italy studying with Pound — study that Pound called his "Ezuversity." What useful thing could Laughlin do? Pound considered, and mindful of the sound literary tastes of his student, pronounced, "Go back and be a publisher."

Laughlin will lecture on "A Portrait of William Carlos Williams" at 8 tonight in 301 Lindquist Center.

Pound's advice was welcome news to Laughlin because he could work with the books he loved and because, as he said in a recent interview, he could escape a career in "the family steel mill, which I hated. Terrifying place."

LEAVING ITALY, Laughlin returned to the United States and was soon receiving manuscripts from Williams, Kay Boyle and Cocteau, who sent them at the urging of Pound. Laughlin became a publisher while still an undergraduate.

He learned as he went along, picking up much about the publishing business from printers. To help him over the rough spots, Laughlin was subsidized by his father. He recalls, "If I asked him for money, he'd say, 'Are you go-

Of the writers he has published, William Carlos Williams is one who is especially dear to his heart. He and Williams grew to be close friends and often Laughlin would visit him in Rutherford, N.J., where Williams was a medical doctor. Williams, according to Laughlin, loved his "doctoring" because it allowed him to meet people

Williams was interested in the speech of the poor people and attempted to incorporate it into his says they "encourage students who writing. By using the "American idiom" in his writing, he hoped to free who have really no talent to try to be American writing from the high literary style of the British, which he thought was inappropriate to writing in his experimental poetry. A series of strokes made it difficult for him to find the words he wanted, and he had to retrain himself to type with two fingers. Between the searching for words and the laborious typing, the poet's writing lagged behind his ideas. He was horribly frustrated, being very much cut off from expression.

Laughlin feels that most creative writing courses are a "menace." He have an emotional desire to write but
