WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Education Department announced Sunday tighter eligibility standards for low-Government tighter eligibility standards for low-interest guaranteed student loans for 1982-83 — the first school year to show the full effect of last year's budget

> The standards, published in today's Federal Register, do not include Reagan administration proposals to cut nearly 1 million students off the rolls and save $900 million. A House committee has rejected these proposals, and they probably are dead

Guaranteed student loans at 9 percent interest went to 3.5 million graduate and undergraduate students this school year. The program now costs $2.5 billion; the administration estimates costs will rise to $3.4 billion next year.

David Bayer, head of the department's student loan branch, said the new standards involve "relatively few differences from last year." Congress has 30 days to act if it wants to disap-

England torpedoes Argentine cruiser The Brooklyn-class cruiser, weighing

A British submarine torpedoed the Argentine cruiser General Belgrano in the South Atlantic Sunday and reportedly "severely damaged" it, the British Defense Ministry said. It was the second straight day of open hostilities in the battle for the Falkland

It was the first report of a British submarine firing a torpedo at an Argentine warship in the fighting.

Peru's President Fernando Belaunde Terry said Sunday that Britain and Argentina were about to sign a sevenpoint cease-fire plan to end the Falklands dispute, but negotiations fell through early this morning when the military junta rejected the plan drafted by Secretary of State Alexander Haig with the aid of Peru's president, saying it was similar to an earlier U.S. proposal that was also turned down by Earlier, a Defense Ministry official justified the British attack, saying the Argentine cruiser posed a "significant threat" to the British.

The terse announcement indicated the unidentified British submarine fired more than one torpedo, but it was not clear from the statement how many hit the target.

Britain believes the cruiser, which was equipped with surface-to-air missiles, was "severely damaged," the spokesman said.

He said the British submarine suffered no damage in the engagement and has resumed patrol.

"When their airplanes get shot down and when they find when they're challenged that they lose, that will concentrate their minds very sharply, British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym said earlier in Washington.

"I SUSPECT there are a lot of very worried people running around Buenos

It originally was commissioned for the U.S. Navy in 1939 as the Phoenix and was a survivor of the 1941 Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

New reports from the British fleet spoke of "increased air activity" by Argentine warplanes flying over the Falklands, but they said the planes showed "no willingness to engage in

Although officials declined to identify the submarine, defense sources indicated it had to be one of three nuclear-powered Swiftsure class submarines - Splendid, Sceptre and Spartan - believed in the area.

They are each armed with 25 Mark 24 Tigerfish wireguided torpedoes, each one able to sink a frigate or destroyer in one hit. They can home on the target through sound, magnetism or surface effect from a range of 17 miles.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met her war Cabinet to discuss the damage done to Argentine positions on the Falklands by the Royal Navy's air and sea strikes.

In Buenos Aires, President Leopoldo Galtieri conferred with his Cabinet and declared, "We will never raise the white flag."

U.S. support for Britain in the Falklands crisis threatens the isolation of Washington in much of Latin America.

Rightly or wrongly, many Latin Americans feel Britain would not have gone to war unless it was assured of U.S. backing.

Britain opened hostilities on the Falklands Saturday, a day after Secretary of State Alexander Haig announced U.S. sanctions against Argentina and declared support for the British.

The United States is responsible. They betrayed us," Argentine teacher Elena Catanazariti said in a widely held sentiment in Buenos Aires. "The English attacked when they felt they had the U.S. support to make them

Julian Bond accuses Reagan of dismantling civil rights legislation

By Jonathan Brandt

Delivering a scathing attack on President Reagan's administration Sunday night, civil rights activist Julian Bond said the president is trying to dismantle civil rights legislation and eliminate crucial social programs.

Bond told about 150 people attending the Freedom Fund Banquet of the UI chapter of the NAACP that Reagan plans "to use the power of government to further consolidate wealth in the minority of our population, to redistribute income in the United States from the bottom to the top, to undermine the bill of rights, to reintroduce 'Big Brother' to the American scene.

The Georgia senator condemned Reagan's administration for succumbing to the influence of corporate America. He said, "At home - and abroad - (Reagan has) surrendered the general good to the corporate

But of all the dangers Reagan poses, Bond said the most frightening is the threat to civil rights. 'In civil rights generally, the retreat has been sounded, the government's forces leading the way toward the dismal, distant past.

"IT IS HERE their actions are most frightful, their purposes most sinister, their design a deliberate attempt to return white-skin privilege and white male dominance in American life," Bond said.

But it is not only civil rights that are in jeopardy, Bond said. "This assault on our civil rights is yet but a part of the problem. It is coupled with an allout attack on the yet unfulfilled right of every American to be free of want and economic worry.

Minorities have a tougher time finding jobs during hard financial periods, Bond said, and the Reagan administration isn't making it any easier.

'The last time the market system provided full employment for blacks was over 100 years ago - it was called slavery then. For the Reagan administration, equal opportunity means a better than even chance for minorities and women to be unem-

Radiation allows 'vessel voyages'

By Jennifer Shafer Staff Writer

Much of what scientists have recently learned of the human body was discovered with the aid of one of man's most feared tools - radiation.

Radioactive material is used in dozens of UI scientific laboratories because it is easy to detect and, with the use of modern equipment, can be measured in minute amounts when mixed with blood, body tissues, or chemicals. Because of this property, UI scientists can use radioactive material as a "tracer" or "marker." For example, a chemical compound - such as a drug - can be "tagged" with the easily detectable radioactive material. Scientists can follow the path of the tagged compound as it travels through blood vessels, tissues and organs.

UI researchers began working with radiation about 35 years ago, when the UI College of Medicine's Division of Radiation Research was created. The division researches the uses and biological effects of radiation.

Radioactivity is usually detected and measured in one of two ways.

SCIENTISTS CAN remove a sample of blood or tissue from the body and measure the sample's radioactivity level by placing the bottled sample in a computerized apparatus - called a liquid scintillation device - which through endless pathways in the body.

records the level of radioactivity in the bottle. Several hundred samples can be measured at a time. Scientists can also detect radioac-tivity with a camera-like device, taking pictures of an animal - or human - that indicate the location of radioactive compounds in its body. The camera produces a plastic transparency that shows a peppering of dots wherever radioactivity was detected - whether in an organ, in bones, or throughout the entire body. Although science offers other ways to trace compounds - for example, using a chemical tag - radioactivity is often the most successful tracer because it can be detected in infinitesimal amounts and followed

By using radioactivity as a tracer, scientists have been able to answer questions that might not have been solved otherwise; for example, understanding how the body metabolizes sugars to form energy.

THE MANY ways radioactivity can be used in UI research projects seem limitless. For example, several years ago, scientists in the division of radiation research used radiation to learn how to locate tumors.

J. W. Osborne, director of the division, said the scientists tagged tumor antibodies - agents an animal produces when it has a tumor - with a radioactive compound.

Police receive 44 complaints of loud parties

By Glenn Townes

Warm weather may have contributed to a busy weekend for Iowa City Police, as they responded to 44 complaints of loud parties and music and charged two UI students with maintaining a disorderly house in connection with complaints.

Saturday evening, police received three separate complaints of loud music coming from the residence of David L. Eichen, 22, 929 Iowa Ave. He was charged with keeping "a disorderly house" and "interference with official acts.'

According to police reports, Eichen had been warned after the second complaint that if police were called again charges would be filed. Jolene Rodgers, 26, 929 Iowa Ave., was charged with interference of official acts in the incident.

Michael Sporer, 20, was also charged with maintaining a disorderly house Saturday evening at 606 N. Gilbert St.

Hensley Nicholas, S-146 Currier Residence Hall, and Garrison Montague, S-144 Currier, were observed by a UI Campus Security officer "exploding and setting off bottle rockets near Currier Hall," records state. The two students were taken to Johnson County Jail, booked and released. A court date has not been set.

Campus Security also charged Iowa football player Lloyd (Charlie) Humphreys with "driving on the sidewalk" late Saturday evening. According to reports, a Campus Security officer observed Humphreys driving his car on a sidewalk on Iowa

A man was charged with assault and criminal trespass Saturday following a disturbance at the 620 Club on South Madison Street.

Police responded to a call of "a man causing problems at the club." Michael L. Britton, 28, no Iowa City address, was arrested by police.

Transferring from a community college to the UI is an unsettling prospect for students who are accustomed to the security of a compact campus and small classes.

But many transfer students have said that once they make the adjustment, the transition wasn't as difficult as they expec-

A year ago last fall, Sue McBride transferred to the UI from Muscatine Com-

Between 16,000 and 17,000 students enter Jowa community colleges each year with the intention of later transferring to a four-year institution, according to Duane Anderson, director of the UI Office of Community College Affairs. Nationally, 50 percent of all high school graduates begin their education at a community college.

THE UI'S PHILOSOPHY is not as homey as a community college's, he said. "There is a great deal of independence, but the fact that we're large doesn't mean we're cold."

Anderson said Saturday that his office tries to help transfer students lose their community college identity and develop the image of a "native" UI student.

"For their best interest, we do everything we can to erase the community college label," he said. "But it's a slow process"

Community colleges were once viewed as "second-class" institutions and transfer students carried a negative stereotype because of lenient admission requirements typical of community colleges, Anderson

"There is a big difference in the level of competition in a community college and that at the UI, but if transfer students are aware of this, they can compete effectively." he said

Lower costs, proximity to home and the chance to test their interest in higher education at a community college level before entering a larger institution has always attracted a certain number of students.

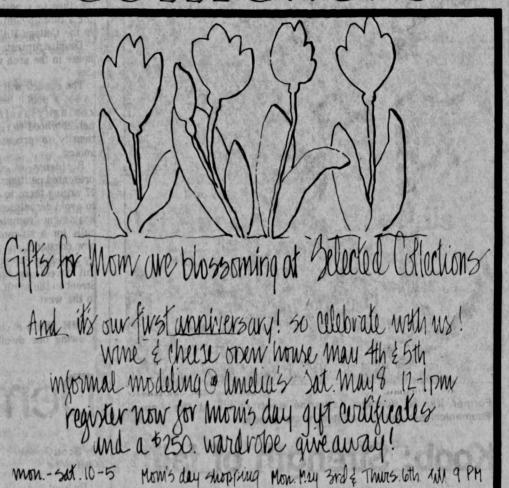

But transfer students were a rarity 15 to 20 years ago, Anderson said. Today, these students make up roughly 20 to 25 percent of all UI students.

Saturday morning, the UI office sponsored an advising workshop for transfer students. Anderson assured the 80 transfer students attending the workshop that they will do as well academically as other UI students.

"But at a community college, the checkpoints are at shorter intervals, and you may be lulled into a false sense of peace when you only have one or two tests in some classes here." he said.

Conference on racism speaker asks awareness

By Elizabeth Zima Special to The Daily Iowan

Participants in the day-long Women Against Racism Conference were asked to become more aware of racism between whites and minorities as well as between minority group members.

The editor of the feminist Persephone Press Inc., Cherrie Moraga, gave the keynote address to about 100 people in the Union Saturday. Moraga is a Chicana, or Mexican-American woman, and coeditor of This Bridge Called My Back: Writings by Radical Women of Color, an anthology of feminist writings

Moraga said that in developing an awareness of racism, whites go through a very different process than minority group members.

Whites are unaware of how they look in terms of the color of their skin, she said. "When white people are forced to do that, they get very upset. And yet the irony of this is that this is the day-to-day reality for most people of color in the world."

But for minorities, "becoming conscious about racism means that you recognize racism in a politial sense. You start to hook up to the fact that there is something outside your individual self that infringes on your life and it's called racism."

MORAGA SAID racism causes division within minority groups. "We need to look at how racism has separated our own groups and also how it has divided as within our own families."

us within our own families."

For example, she said light-skinned minorities sometimes receive more privileges in society than those with darker skin, creating animosity within families and minority groups.

Moraga said minorities often see the feminist movement as a threat because of the already constant fear of racism. "If we didn't feel like we were under attack constantly, racially, we wouldn't be afraid to look at what's wrong within our own groups"

She said many minority group women do not participate in the feminist movement because of racism. She charged the movement with ignoring contributions made by women of color and creating a culture devoid of minority awareness.

"A kind of fascism has developed. The feminist movement hasn't gotten rid of oppression at all. Instead, they have gotten rid of white male oppression but kept the white male phenomenon of racism, classism, etc."

Moraga said people can learn about racism in themselves by confronting it in real-life situations. "Being anti-racist on paper doesn't save lives."

MINORITIES should make sure they do not allow themselves to be used as tokens or "ripped off." She said an anti-military march now being planned in New York is a good example of what minorities should be wary of.

She said white, middle-class peace groups are saying, "'We want this to be a mass movement, so don't bring up things like racism and imperialism or that will turn people off.' The third world groups are saying, 'You can't tell them to ban the bomb when you know that the first place the bombs will hit will be our people.' "

Moraga said many people in the 1960s anti-war movement were also unconcerned with the issue of racism. "Nobody wanted to deal with the fact that the Vietnam war was against dark-skinned people."

People of color should be organized before they try to work with non-minority groups, Moraga said. "Then you know you are on firm ground and you won't have to compromise your identity."

Services provided through the agency's outreach and advocacy programs dropped 87 percent and 37 percent accordingly.

The drastic decrease in the outreach services is "likely to be attributable at least in part to the somewhat seasonal demand for the services, there not being a paid outreach coordinator with the time to counter the winter elements and reach out to people in their homes," the report said.

The Domestic Violence Project served fewer single women in the second quarter - from 20 to 12 - but the number of days all women and children were housed in the shelter increased by 69 percent.

The average length of stay at the shelter rose from five days in the first quarter to 10 days in the second quar-10 percent, "thus indicating an increase in the number of service conter, the report said.

rium Proposed noise law more strict

The latest revised copy of a proposed city noise ordinance would allow violators to be issued tickets for each time the ordinance is violated.

The Iowa City Council received a copy of the new plan Friday. A public hearing on the ordinance will be held

The proposed ordinance would set noise standards for cars and motorcycles and would establish quiet areas around churches, hospitals and nursing homes. Violators would be subject to penalties, but the city will establish a grace period before fining residents who do not comply

Councilor Larry Lynch suggested oughening the penalties section of the ordinance at its April 21 meeting to add a clause that repeated violators be ssued a citation each time they exceed

The new penalties clause reads: regulation policy can be established.

"Each instance of violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall constitute a separate offense."

THE LATEST draft of the ordinance has eliminated a section that would require air conditioner condensers on adacent properties be at least 15 feet from a side lot line. City Manager Neal Berlin told the council last month that the city receives numerous complaints about loud air conditioners.

Councilor John Balmer had suggested deleting that portion of the ordinance because it was "unrealistic" to force people to move window air conditioners and condensers to the back yard of their property.

The new draft ordinance said city staff will continue to investigate the air conditioner noise problem to see if any

The new ordinance would also ex- ductwork, exhaust fans and other elecempt tree maintenance operators from the ordinance because often tree spray-- which does generate noise must be done at odd hours to kill certain types of insects.

The Iowa City Police Department may be able to use its pistol range if money saved on the purchase of new police cars is spent to upgrade the range's ventilation system.

The pistol range is not being used because of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's "concern about lead particulate," according to Berlin. The city will have the needed $9,500 for the work because bids for new police cars were lower than anticipated.

The remodeling will include installation of new exhaust canopies,

Iowa City employees and their families have the opportunity to participate in a stop smoking clinic during

The clinic will be conducted by the Johnson County Health Department and the American Cancer Society. City employees will be given paid time off to attend the clinic.

The introductory seminar is two consecutive 11/2-hour seminars that will include information on the effects of smoking on smokers and non-smokers. After that session, a support group will be formed for employees who want to quit smoking.

The U.S. decision to support Britain, said Argentina's Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez, "will impair Washington's Latin America policy for many years."

The Buenos Aires Herald said the decision had "undone much of the tedious diplomatic work that the United States had been carrying out in recent times in order to establish closer links with its Latin American neighbors.'

A degree of personal antipathy appears to have been involved in negotiations between U.S. and Argentine leaders. Haig and senior aides were reported to have come away from Buenos Aires with the impression the junta was "a bunch of thugs."

ARGENTINA HAS SAID it will seek closer ties with the rest of Latin America and the Third World, and turn to potential allies in Europe such as Italy, Spain and West Germany

More ominously, it hints it will seek support from the Soviet Union if necessary, for all Argentina's anti-Communist ideology. West German Foreign Minister Hans-

Argentina's aggressive chauvinism has sometimes made it unpopular in the rest of Latin America, but it has received widespread support for its sovereignty claim from everyone except Chile and

IF THE WAR drags on, that moral backing could turn to material support in a widening campaign against the British and their "Yangui" allies.

THE STANDARDS apply to new loans made between July 1, 1982, and June 30, 1983. The maximum loans are $2,500 for undergraduates and $5,000 for graduate students. The administration wants to eliminate graduate students.

The standards show how much the student or his family is expected to contribute. Need is established by family contribution and other aid to the student, subtracted from the cost of education at his school.

Congress last year made several cuts, including requiring applicants whose families earn more than $30,000 to prove need, but most loans for this year were made before Oct. 1, when that rule took ef-

THERE ARE three main changes, he

· A student will not be considered independent - paying for his own education unless he gets less than $750 a year from his parents and meets other conditions. The previous standard was $1,000 and other conditions. Bayer said "We have reason to believe (Congress) will go along with this."

· Families with adjusted gross income of $75,000 or more - down from last year's $100,000 - must use a stricter needs analysis that takes assets as well as income into account for campus-based aid programs, such as work-study and National

Under the standards, a family with a wage-earner parent and two children, one in college, with an adjusted gross income of $45,125, would be expected to contribute $5,870, the Education Department said.

If the student got a $1,000 scholarship and enrolled in a school that cost $9,500, the student would need $2,630, making him eligible for the maximum loan. If the school cost $8,000, the student would be eligibile for a $1,130 loan.

Radiation

When the tagged antibodies were injected into a rat with a large tumor, they traveled to the tumor's location and were absorbed, Osborne said. A camera "scan" of the rat's body clearly showed the tagged antibodies clustered around the tumor on the rat's left

However, when the same mixture was injected into a rat with a small tumor, the antibodies did not travel to the tumor site, indicating that this method would not detect tumors in the earliest stages.

Scientists in the UI Department of Zoology also use radiation in research. George Cain, department chair, said scientists there have used radioactive materials to study how different molecules are transported into cells and at what rate they are transported.

CAIN SAID scientists can "tag" glucose with a radioactive compound and study how different drugs affect the rate the sugar is transported into cells. Some diseases are treated by slowing the rate that glucose is absorbed, he said.

Cain also said some scientists in his department are using radioactivity to read the genetic code of the DNA molecule - the molecule which contains the body's blueprint.

Four bases make up the DNA molecule, and by breaking the DNA strands into different lengths and labeling the base on the end of the strand with a radioactive compound, scientists hope to determine the sequence of the bases in the DNA of different organisms.

This research may eventually lead scientists to understand and possibly control hereditary diseases such as Down's syn-

Radiation is also used in various types of research in the UI Departments of Physics, Pharmacology, Biochemistry, Anatomy, Microbiology and Cardiovascular Research.

Although radiation has been tremendously useful to researchers, it is described as a "two-edged sword" because it is as potentially destructive as it is helpful. Too arge a dose of radiation can cause sickness, infertility, and, eventually, death.

BECAUSE OF the potential danger of radioactive compounds, their use is regulated by the UI Radiation Protection Office. UI scientists who want to use radioactivity in their research must receive permission to use the compounds from the protection office; all radioactive materials used on the UI campus are also distributed by the office. Scientists who use the compounds carelessly may risk losing the privilege of having them.

Bill Twaler, director of the protection office, said the danger posed by radioactivity used in UI research is small because most of the material are "low-level compounds." The radioactivity of these compounds will diminish by one-half within 90

Twaler said a spill of a radioactive compound in a UI laboratory would threaten researchers only in a rare instance because "99 percent" of the compounds used in UI research are not strong enough to cause a health hazard.

Radioactive research waste - liquids, paper waste and dead animals - are picked up at UI laboratories and taken to the UI Waste Storage and Handling Facility on the Oakdale Campus. There, the materials will be packaged in metal barrels and stored there or shipped to a burial site.

College Hill crisis

It now seems virtually certain that a temporary moratorium on new apartment construction in the College Hill area will go into effect tomorrow. The Iowa City Council has scheduled a public hearing on the issue for tonight; by law, this will automatically enact the moratorium, and no new construction may begin for 60

The moratorium will give the council time to analyze the problem, but it will be a meaningless gesture unless it leads to permanent changes in the city zoning ordinance. Unless the council makes a commitment to preserving the neighborhood's residential and historical character, developers could start building new apartments by early July.

The problem in College Hill stems from the fact that current zoning laws conflict with the long-range goals set forth in the city's 1977 comprehensive plan. Current zoning allows the apartments; the master plan does not.

The problem could have been avoided with the passage of a new zoning ordinance, but this would mean that some developers owning property in the area would not be able to carry out their construction plans. Reluctant to raise the ire of these speculators, for five years council members have preferred to pass along the zoning dilemma to their successors.

Developers have profited the most from this timidity; already this spring, one home in College Hill has been razed and four others are slated for demolition. The moratorium can't reverse these unfortunate actions, but the council can act now to preserve the character of neighborhoods like College Hill by zoning these areas in accordance with the city's master plan.

The council has dodged the issue long enough. It's time to revise existing zoning standards in favor of those who have made a longterm commitment to their neighborhoods, not those who want only to make a quick buck.

Dan Jones

Need for parkland

The controversy surrounding the use of Community Development Block Grant funds to build the Ralston Creek North Branch flood control dam has obscured another issue that needs to be addressed. That is the disposition of land acquired for the dam project.

The city is buying about 95 acres of land adjacent to Hickory Hill Park in northeast Iowa City for the dam and for the water that will accumulate behind it after heavy rains. But when construction is complete, the dam, spillway and maximum flood pool will cover only about 65 acres, leaving about 30 acres that aren't, strictly speaking, needed for flood control.

The future status of that land has been the subject of varying interpretations. Iowa City Councilor Clemens Erdahl has spoken from the assumption that all the acquired land will be added to Hickory Hill Park, while Councilor John Balmer has stated his belief that some of the land will be sold to private developers at some future date. The truth is that neither assumption is correct until the Iowa City Council makes a formal decision one way or the

Some council members will be almost irresistably tempted by revenue that the sale of the "extra" land would bring, as well as the taxes that would be generated if it were returned to private ownership, especially in small residential parcels. But eastward growth of the city is bringing, and will bring, greater use of Hickory Hill Park and inreased demand for the open space the park represents.

The land in question is undeveloped wood and pasture land that would make an excellent addition to the park. The council would be irresponsible if it does not act soon to ensure that all the land acquired for the flood control project stays in public ownership.

Prison overcrowding

Iowa's prisons are currently experiencing another "overcrowding emergency." As a result, state law mandates that the prison population must be reduced, or else all inmates convicted of property theft will have three months taken off their sentences. Prisoners who received sentences of three months or less would be released immediately.

There is something radically wrong with the present state of affairs when situations like this occur repeatedly. Polls in The Des Moines Register have revealed that most Iowans believe it is the state Parole Board which is responsible for the current criminal justice mess. Although the board is far from perfect, it is really the Iowa Legislature which is to blame for the overcrowding of

It was only a few weeks ago that the legislature voted to end its 1982 session without acting on proposals concerning sentencing procedures. This was despite the fact that prison officials had warned them, and the general public, about what would happen if no action was taken.

The state has planned to add 130 new beds within the next six months and 500 more by 1984 in existing structures. Yet this is only a band-aid rather than a real solution. Prison overcrowding is only one symptom of the failures of Iowa's criminal justice system adequately to deal with the problem of crime.

Social Service Commissioner Michael Reagan is correct to say that "preventive" measures are needed. As Reagan noted, "We've really got to pull our act together ..." Hopefully the Iowa Legislature will heed his advice and work together next session to help alleviate the prison problem.

New arms too complex, costly effects of the U.S. military budget on national security and the economy

By Pete Damiano

The United States is currently in the midst of the largest peace-time military buildup in its history. The increases are primarily in the production of new, high-technology weapons systems, which are complex, often ineffective and exceedingly expensive. The Pentagon needs to reevaluate the importance of these systems to our defense and their justification for being built.

President Reagan has called for "rearming" America by proposing to spend $1.5 trillion for the military by 1986. The increases are largely for weapons such as the controversial MX missile, the B-1 bomber and the Bradley personnel carrier. Sixty percent of the 1982 defense increases over 1981, and 75 percent of the $25.8 billion that Reagan added to former President Carter's 1982 military budget, are allocated for the procurement of these weapons systems.

The complexity of the systems has been found to decrease reliability and substantially increase cost. An internal Pentagon report, disclosed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., suggested that buying complex weapons may actually erode the combat readiness of U.S. forces. Weapons are purchased without consideration of how difficult it will be to keep them operational; this reduces effectiveness and raises maintenance

AS OF JUNE 1981, the Pentagon's Selected Aquisitions Report indicated that the current cost estimates for 47 major weapons systems had more than doubled over their original projections. Costs for the Trident nuclear submarine were up 195 percent and for the Navy F-18 fighter, costs had jumped 254 percent.

One example of these high technology weapons is the M-1 tank. built by Chrysler. The M-1 is being praised by the military for its high speed and the accuracy of its guns while the tank is moving. However, continual problems, such as the fact that maintenance would need to be done on the M-1 during a battle, and its inability to handle very rough terrain, have tempered its appeal.

Originally expected to cost $500,000, they are now projected at $2.68 million each, once full-scale production of the 7,034 tanks is underway, for a total price tag of $19 billion. The need for a high speed bulldozer to accompany each tank on rough terrain, and also a fuel truck for each tank during battle, has added more cost to the system.

THE CRY FOR new weapons is being fueled by what Tom Wicker of The Guest opinion

New York Times calls a renewed case of "military gaposis," the exaggerated fear that we must bridge a strategic gap that has developed, giving the Soviet Union a distinct advantage over the United States.

In the early 1950s, the Pentagon proclaimed that a "bomber gap" existed. During the late 1950s and early 1960s, a "missile gap" was the fear. Today, Reagan is proclaiming that a 'window of vulnerability" must be closed to prevent a first-strike attack by the Soviets. As was found in retrospect for the earlier gaps, this 'window' does not stand up to scrutiny.

One of the most compelling arguments used for the buildup has been a CIA reassessment of Soviet military spending, which says that such spending had jumped from 6-8 percent of their gross national product to 11-13 percent. Hardliners have been using this to say that the Soviets have doubled their military spending, and that we must respond.

But what the CIA report actually says about the apparent increases is, 'This does not mean that the impact of defense programs on the Soviet economy has increased - only that our appreciation of this impact has changed. It also implies that Soviet defense industries are far less efficient than formerly believed.'

THIS INDICATES that the change in percentage of GNP spent for defense does not represent a new buildup but rather a change in the CIA's system for measuring Soviet defense spending. (The Soviets do not publish their defense spending figures.)

According to the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, NATO actually outspent the Warsaw Pact by at least $207 billion during the 1970s. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said on the floor of the Senate, "It's time that the American people understand that these quotes about being outspent by the Soviet Union are just plain inaccurate. They are nonsense, balderdash, phony, fake and I might add, untrue.

As for our overall strength, the Department of Defense annual report for fiscal year 1982 proclaims,"... while the era of U.S. superiority is long past, parity - not U.S. inferiority has replaced it, and the United States and the Soviet Union are roughly equal in strategic nuclear power." Countering claims that NATO is inferior to Europe, the DOD report states, "NATO still retains its overall qualitative edge" in Central Europe.

Another basic element behind the push for new weapons systems is a very strong triad of interests involved in the weapons' research and development. Gordon Adams, director of government relations for the Council on Economic Priorities, reports in his Damiano is a UI undergraduate student.

study "The Iron Triangle," that present contracting procedures do not always allow for an unbiased assassment of a weapon's contribution to national security.

WEAPONS PROCUREMENT is controlled by a self-reinforcing network of military industrial contractors, DOD procurement officers and members of Congress from defense-dependent districts, allowing for little outside examination and debate of a weapon before it is put into production.

Between 1970 and 1979, 1942 people moved back and forth between jobs with the eight largest defense contractors and the government or military, posing potential conflict of interests and further closing the militaryindustrial complex to outside scrutiny.

The CEP stated in a report about the Reagan military buildup, "Without a coherent national defense policy that defines clear missions for the weapons we develop, political pressures will assure that costly new systems will continue to be produced, whether they increase our national security or not.'

Therefore, present contracting procedures need to be reevaluated in an effort to open them to more unbiased assessment. The value and effectiveness of each of the new, hightechnology weapons systems should also be reviewed. Exaggerated fear and political pressures do not justify building such expensive and too often ineffective systems.

Comic offensive to minorities

Who was laughing at Ken Mottet's opening line during the Wheel Room Comedy Night: "One of the first things I've learned here in Iowa City is that I hate homosexuals"?

His theme April 22 was "Offending The Audience," and offend he did, to a standing ovation, and to everyone's disgrace: his own, his audience's, and that of the whole UI community that allowed him to perform uncriticized.

His first song excused his New Wave dress and earring - "I'm Not Gay." He said he hates gay men for the way women treat them, rubbing up intimately against them in safety. For similar behavior, he said, he would throw a woman down and yell "eat it bitch." At least, at that point, anyone respecting women could take offense

Who is still sleeping, too frightened, or just too ignorant to lament and protest this facade of humor? There was no wit involved. Mottet made no indication that he was mocking or satirizing his social malevolence. He created no character whose limitations canceled his vehemence; Archie Bunker himself is not funny as a public speaker - we laugh at Caroll O'Connor's fine satirizations, and then only in a dramatic context.

It is a shame that so smooth and competent a performer as Mottet should be so ignorant or careless of a performer's social responsibility. And the apathy our community has shown is a flimsy disguise for a truly dangerous social pathology. Today, at last, a performer cannot say for a laugh, 'Iowa City has taught me that I hate black people," or "I've learned that I hate Jews." But still we were roused to laughter and ovation with "I hate homosexuals.

The only irony here may be in the timing - a recent showing of the film Pink Triangles documented the genocide of gay people as well as Jewish people by Nazi bureaucracy and German social apathy

Mottet said he was glad to escape to Iowa City from his farmyard background. Perhaps it is because of such immigrations that Iowa City continues to be stuck in the Midwest. Gary Glickman

Reality therapy

To the editor:

Hoyt Olsen's editorial on "reality therapy" cannot go unchallenged (DI, April 26). I do not know the persons involved in the case, or the case itself. I am responding to the substance of the editorial. Olsen maintains that this "therapy" helps students "learn responsibility and self disclipine," and that the students are the "responsible decision makers.'

When one's only decision is whether to capitulate or not, there is no basis for speaking of responsible individual decision making. That was the decision facing a fourth grade student.

Reality therapy sounds less like a therapy than the imposition of orthodoxy through the use of authoritarian methods of muted violence. The reality seems to be that there is a boss and there is a servile sycophant who had better keep the power relations straight or suffer a term in solitary.

Is this education for democracy? Should education not encourage the exploration of reality, thinking about reality and possible realities rather than the inculcation of passive acceptance of authority by prisoncamp methods?

If this is the sort of education young students receive, how can UI faculty complain of passivity, lack of creative thought and unimaginativeness among students? A person harnessed to the reality of this "therapy" could never dare to be wrong, venture the rebellion of a challenge to a teacher, risk the insurrection that any reasoned critique

Such a person lacks the independence of intellect to develop the political analyses essential to participation in any democratic system, and should be consigned to some category other than citizen. Slave might be more appropriate. If this is the reality, we do not require a therapy for accommodation of children to it, but education to enable them to enter the democratic struggle against it.

Such "therapy" cannot educate people in responsibility and self discipline - we should not applaud any such authoritarian system. Perhaps we should applaud a fourth grade student for having the fortitude to withstand the assaults of authority on his personal integrity and his willingness to withstand 10 days in the hole rather than to capitulate.

Democrats elect committee members

United Press International

Despite their reputation for divisive infighting, Iowa Democrats managed to elect 24 central committee members at six district conventions Saturday with a minimum of controversy.

In between the business, delegates heard from gubernatorial candidates Roxanne Conlin and Jerry Fitzgerald, who visited all six gatherings around the state. The third hopeful for the governor's chair, Ed Campbell, spoke at four conventions and sent his campaign manager Harold Hughes to the others.

Former vice president Walter Mondale also visited all the meetings. He reminded Democrats that intraparty fighting "leads to mistakes, namely Nixon and Reagan.

The candidates for governor spent most of their time criticizing Republicans and left each other alone. The one exception was Fitzgerald, the Democratic nominee for the governor's office in 1978, who told the delegates he should be their choice again because of his experience which includes several years in the Iowa

FITZGERALD saved his sharpest comments for Lt. Gov. Terry Branstad, the probable GOP nominee.

"The Republican candidate for governor is a person who has a record he will not be able to run away from unless the Democrats let him," Fitzgerald told 6th District delegates

Fitzgerald touted his role as former House majority leader when he helped establish the Housing Finance Authority bill and collective bargaining for public employees.

In her remarks around the state, Conlin ignored both her party opponents and Branstad to concentrate on President Reagan.

Conlin told the Democrats that she has talked with more than 1,000 unemployed workers and said she has seen

"the fear in their eyes."

Both Fitzgerald and Campbell campaign workers say Conlin has a lock on the hearts of the district and state convention delegates. A UPI scientific sampling of the district delegates showed 52 percent supported the former U.S. attorney compared to around 10 percent for Fitzgerald and

Fitzgerald and Campbell supporters claim those results come from a heavy organizing effort in the precinct caucuses in January. Conlin said it showed widespread support, as opposed to organizing, because she didn't announce her candidacy until after the caucuses

NONE OF THE candidates mounted an effort to pack the Democratic central committee with supporters and party officials termed the makeup of the group "a mixed bag."

"There were too many unattached voters for groups to get their acts together," one party official said. "It's standard state central committee race - you really can't characterize

Party officials said the nice weather kept a lot of party members at home for field work. Redistricting last year also threw a lot of new people into the same district and reworked traditional coalitions, 6th District delegate Jack Clark said.

Four people - two men and two were elected from each women district.

In the 1st District at Burlington, committee members elected were Brigid Vance, Mount Pleasant; Mary Ellen Chamberlin, Davenport; Harry Baxter, Burlington; and Charles Krogmeier, West Point.

In the 2nd District at Monticello those selected were Andy Frommelt, Dubuque: Jean Pardee, Clinton; Bruce Mitchell, Cedar Rapids; and Barbara Bowman, Maquoketa.

FOR THE 3RD District in Waterloo, committee members elected were Dan Breyfogle, Waterloo; Riley Grimes, Iowa City; Delores Mulvehill, Marshalltown; and Joyce Fitzsimmons, Iowa City.

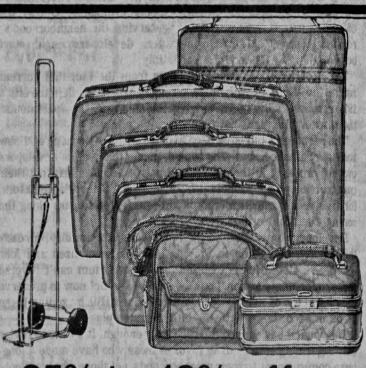

In the 4th District in Des Moines, it was Carol Brannan, Story County; Glenn Buhr, Des Moines; Sam Garst, Coon Rapids; and Mary Maloney, Des Moines. A spokesman in the 4th District said the defeat of two labor candidates showed they don't have a lock on the conventions as they once did.

In the 5th District at Atlantic, committee members elected were Doug Dorzman, Fort Dodge; Robert Bierkamp, Creston; Barbara Grabner, Council Bluffs; and Sally Pentico, Indianola

In the 6th District at Humboldt those elected were Mary Jo Lorge, Mason City; Pat Ewing, Storm Lake; Bob Davies, Hampton; and Al Sturgeon,

Troubled Hawks drop three to Badgers

By Melissa Isaacson

There is something definitely wrong with the Iowa baseball team.
When the 11-22 Wisconsin Badgers

When the 11-22 Wisconsin Badgers arrived in Iowa City for two scheduled weekend double-headers against the Hawkeyes, everyone — fans, Iowa players, even the Wisconsin people — had to believe that the Hawks could do no worse than split. And even that would be a disappointment.

Baseball, like most sports, is unpredictable. The old adage, "On any given day, any team can beat any other," rings true. But by the same token, in any game, in any sport, there is always "the favorite."

This weekend, Iowa was "the favorite," but the Hawkeyes managed only to dig themselves a little deeper into the Big Ten basement, dropping three of four games to the Badgers.

Iowa Head Coach Duane Banks went from furious, to confused, to just plain fed up with it all. After the Badger's Sunday sweep, 1-0 and 8-7, Banks tried to come to grips with the situation.

"IT'S THE SAME story just a different day," he said. "We have no leadership from our seniors. All they want to do is get out of here. There's two weeks left in the season and we're not going anywhere."

If those thoughts seem hopeless, perhaps it is because hope, along with clutch play, is one thing the Hawkeyes are short on these days.

The weekend looked like it was

The weekend looked like it was headed in the Hawks' direction Saturday as an Iowa crowd of some 2,000, the biggest of the year, showed up to cheer on the Hawkeyes.

lowa responded with a convincing 6-2 victory behind the combined four-hit pitching of Jeff Green and Paul Rieks.
Centerfielder Tim Gassmann was the main Hawkeye contributor in the opener, doubling home two runs in the second inning and giving Iowa an early 3-0 lead. That was all the Hawks needed, adding two insurance runs on Badger errors in the fourth, and another in the fifth to seal the victory.

The crowd swelled to standing room only in Saturday's nightcap, as the spring football fans spilled into the baseball stadium, only to see Iowa begin its downhill run, losing, 9-8.

THE HAWKS APPEARED to be hungry for the sweep at the outset, as they jumped out to a quick first inning 2-0 lead, thanks to a Nick Fegen double

Wisconsin chipped away for one run in the second and took the lead with two more runs in the fourth, but the Hawkeyes exploded for five runs in the bottom half of the inning to regain the lead. 7-3.

The main blow was Turelli's bases loaded two-run single, which drove in Brian Charipar and Mike Kaliban.

Iowa took a 7-4 lead into the final inning but the Badana and the single them.

Iowa took a 7-4 lead into the final inning, but the Badgers went through their batting order and then some en route to five unearned runs and an eventual victory.

Banks was furious over what he believed was an interference call on Badger runner Eugene Randolph who collided with Iowa third baseman Jeff Ott. No call was made on the play as an enraged Banks charged onto the field only to be ejected from the game.

Criterium fills day with thrills and spills

If being outside, soaking up rays, and watching people with muscular thighs and long legs whiz by on expensive bicycles is your idea of a good time, Sunday's fifth annual Old Capitol

Criterium was paradise.

The Criterium, a series of bicycle races showcasing some of the Midwest's finest cyclists, enjoyed total cooperation from the weather, and could be a trademark of Iowa City's spring, according to Director Bruce Reynolds.

"We attracted a lot more good riders this year because we offered money prizes," Reynolds said. "It went real good. There's no real problems that

The feature event of the day, the United States Cycling Federation Senior Men's I and II, was won by Steve Tilford of Topeka, Kan., with Skunk River Cyclists teammate Paul Biskup finishing a close second.

TILFORD, WHO has been cycling competitively for seven years, didn't seem at all fatigued minutes after the race, although the race consisted of 30 laps around the hilly course, which circled the Pentacrest and a small section of downtown Iowa City.

"It's only a 21-mile race. I'm not too tired," Tilford said, with Biskup nodding in agreement. "I knew we could go hard the whole way. We were taking it smooth. We weren't going as hard as we could go."

With riders moving at speeds near 30 mph around steep corners, it seemed that bloody accidents would be the rule rather than the exception, but according to race medical director Ken Holmes, only three accidents occurred during the criterium, which began at 9 a.m. and concluded at 6:30 p.m. "The only injuries suffered were abrasions," said Holmes, who was in charge of 30

Long to start fall as top quarterback

By Jay Christensen Sports Editor

It was rather uneventful and the score wasn't close, but if nothing else, Chuck Long proved he is the No. 1 quarterback walking the streets of Iowa City until fall.

"I guess I'm No. 1," Long cautiously said after leading the Black squad to a 38-10 victory over the White in Iowa's annual spring football game. "I feel I ueserve to be No. 1."

"I think Chuck is No. 1," Tom Grogan, currently No. 2 said. "Check his stats. He's completed 75 to 80 percent of his passes, and if you add the ones that were dropped, it's about 90." A check of statistics reveal that Long, for the spring, hit 73-of-97

A check of statistics reveal that Long, for the spring, hit 73-of-97 passes, good for 75 percent. Saturday he connected on 10-of-16 for 97 yards, one touchdown and one interception.
Will that percentage continue this fall?
"It was hard on the defense."

"It was hard on the defense," Grogan said. "They were in their base defense, base-30-sky. When they're in that, you can throw underneath them all day."

FRY WASN'T ready to hand the quarterback reins over to Long permanently, but until fall, the sophomore-to-be has control.

"He's definitely No. 1 going into fall," said Fry, who completed his fourth spring practice.

The biggest surprise of the game may have been the play of running back Paul McCarty. He was the "other" player in the package deal that brought fellow junior college recruit Cornelius Robertson to Iowa. Although his statistics were anything from awesome, his versatility on the playing field was evident.

McCarty ran back kickoffs, caught a pass and carried the football four times for 19 yards. "Paul McCarty is going to play someplace," Fry said. "He's a very gifted athlete. He'll find a spot somewhere on our No. 1 or No. 2

Pitching hurts Hawks at Ames

By Betsy Anderson

Pitching continues to be a problem for the Iowa softball team as they lost three and won one in the Iowa State Invitational in Ames over the weekend.

The Hawks lost twice to regional opponent Minnesota, 7-0, 10-2, and split with Iowa State, winning 8-3 and losing

At the beginning of the season, Iowa's pitching woes were less noticeable as the defense committed numerous errors. Now that the defense has cleaned up its game, the lack of consistent pitching is blatant.

In their first game Saturday against the Gophers, starting pitcher Tina Keppy gave up five earned runs in one and one-third innings before Julie Kratoska came in to relieve her. Kratoska shut out Minnesota until the

their final two runs.

Mary Lee Hanson pitched a twohitter for Minnesota as Linette Wieland and Terry Pactwa got the lone Hawkeye hits.

GOPHER FIRST baseman Pam Potaczek went two-for-three at the plate scoring three RBIs while Julie Zieminski also went two-for-three with

In the Hawks' loss to Iowa State, starting pitcher Terri Lawson shut out the Cyclones for five innings of the game. But Iowa State scored three runs in the first inning, the only runs they needed for the victory.

With one out, the Cyclones' Diane Ricevuto singled and was sacrificed to second by Patti McDonald. Peg Geary helped her own pitching effort with a single. Geary reached second on the hit sixth inning when the Gophers scored when the Hawks' defense attempted to throw Ricevuto out at third.

Former Hawkeye Mary Morrison, the designated hitter for the Cyclones then blasted a triple, scoring both runners. Linda Mosch singled to score Morrison before Casey Smith grounded out to end the inning

Iowa, which scattered five hits throughout the game scored its one run in the sixth when Polly Ven Horst doubled to start the inning and moved to third on a wild pitch by Geary. Wieland walked, and in a double steal attempt advanced to second as Ven Horst got caught too far off third base.

Linda Barnes plated the Hawks' only run as she singled to score Wieland from second. Barnes stole second to get another Iowa runner in scoring position but Kris Rogers flew out to left field and Liz Ryan popped up to third to end the inning.

Derby winner Gato del Sol looks to Saturday's Belmont

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) - Don't bother figuring out Gato del Sol's Triple Crown chances - the next stop for the surprising winner of Saturday's Kentucky Derby is Belmont Park.

Owners Arthur Hancock and Leone Peters, along with trainer Edwin Gregson, unselfishly decided before the Derby that two-thirds of the Triple Crown would be quite sufficient. After their gray colt passed 15 horses in the final half-mile to take the roses, their plans remained intact.

"With this kind of a horse we don't have to win the Triple Crown because he can win any race he wants to," Peters said. "The Preakness is only a mile-andthree-sixteenths, this is a mile-and-a-quarter. Our trainer prepared this horse for this race.' Gregson apparently did his job well.

A HALF MILE into the race, Gato del Sol, who returned $44.40, $19.00 and $9.40, was dead last in the 19-horse field. After leaving the gate from the extreme outside — a few feet to the right and the colt would have had a great grandstand seat - jockey Eddie Delahoussaye, who used the whip 11 times coming down the stretch, had no choice but to settle his 21-to-1 longshot into the rear.

"I figured I'd be better off losing a little ground to stay in the clear," said Delahoussaye, who apparently learned his lesson well after finishing second aboard boxed-in Woodchopper in last year's Derby. "After five-and-a-half furlongs we started moving up and he was doing it nice and easy. We were in perfect position coming off the turn and that's when I thought we would win it."

In a year that has been anything but kind to the favorites, an upset in the 108th running of the Derby should have been expected. Timely Writer would have been the class of this field until abdominal surgery ended his season and possibly his career.

Quebec looks to fight back

Quebec Coach Michel Bergeron, sorely disappointed by the Nordiques' 5-4 overtime loss to the New York Islanders Saturday night, promises a valiant effort despite his club's 3-0 deficit in the

Stanley Cup semifinals. 'I'm proud of my players," Bergeron said. "I have nothing to say against any of them. We will regroup, take a little rest, practice on Monday and then we'll

In game three, the Islanders beat back Quebec's most stubborn challenge yet with 10-year-veteran Wayne Merrick pushing in a soft shot during a goalmouth scramble at 16 minutes, 52 seconds of sudden death. Game four is scheduled for Tuesday

In the other semifinal, the white towels have become the focus of the Vancouver-Chicago match-

The Canucks, holding a 2-1 edge in the best-ofseven series, will entertain the Black Hawks Tuesday night

VANCOUVER, NEVER a darling in the hearts of the rest of the league and seldom a cause for excitement among its fans, will seek a ninth straight victory at home against Chicago before a crowd that, in the words of the team's rugged Captain Stan Smyl,

'sends shivers up your spine.''
Thursday night in Chicago, Coach Roger Neilson showed his displeasure with officiating by hoisting a white towel of surrender from the bench. Several Canucks also took up the gesture.

NHL President John Ziegler was not amused. Saturday he levied a $10,000 fine against the team and a $1,000 fine against the Canuck coach. The Canucks say they will appeal both rulings.

Two lowa runners to nationals

By Thomas W. Jargo The Iowa women's track team Hawks. qualified two more individuals for the national meet, and two others won titles during action in the Big Four outdoor meet at the Iowa State Track Complex in Ames Sunday Iowa's Big Four universities - Iowa State, Iowa, Drake and Northern Iowa - competed in the meet. There was no team scoring. Iowa's Jenny Hayden and Jodi Hershberger each qualified for the Athletics for Women national outdoor which she finished second to Liz meet, May 27-29. Kay Stormo and Gail Smith were individual winners for the Hayden finished second in the 1,500meter run with a personal best time of four minutes, 27.3 seconds. Wren Schafer of Iowa State won the event with a time of 4:25.9. Jenny Spangler was fourth for Iowa with a time of 4:31.3, which is a personal best for her by almost 20 seconds.

Sports

HERSHBERGER'S QUALIFYING Association for Intercollegiate time came in the 3,000-meter run, Hjalnarsson of Drake. Her time of 9:36.2 was 11 seconds under the national qualifying standard. It is also a new Iowa school record by eight Stormo won the 800-meter run with a time of 2:10.2. She defeated Marie Sinonsson of Drake, who beat her at the Kansas Relays a couple of weeks ago. Smith's toss of 46-feet-71/2 earned her a victory in the shot put.

Iowa Head Coach Jerry Hassard was pleased with the team's performance, but stressed that the team has to become healthy for the Big Ten meet in Another bight spot for Iowa was Nan Doak, running in her first meet in two months. She finished third in the 5,000meter run.

'We didn't win as many events as I hoped, but I thought we ran respectably," Hassard said. "We need to get everybody sound, healthwise, as soon as possible for the conference

"By holding some out of action and holding some back, it should get us back to where we need to be, healthwise, for the Big Ten meet."

Buckeyes win as Hawk golfers finish 11th

By Thomas W. Jargo

The Iowa men's golf team got off to a less than auspicious start and never recovered as they finished in a tie for 11th in the Northern Intercollegiate golf tournament this weekend at

The Ohio State Buckeyes were the class of the tournament as they led from start to finish, winning their second consectutive Northern title. The Buckeyes fired a 54-hole total of 1,072 to easily out-distance secondplace Indiana.

Ball State finished third, followed by Northern Illinois in fourth with Michigan State fifth.

Ohio State's Chris Perry took medalist honors with an 11-under par 205 for the tournament. Tim Koressel of Indiana and Bryan Tennyson of Ball State tied for second, four shots behind Perry. Gary Claypool was the low man for Iowa with a three-round total of 222.

CLAYPOOL, WHO SHOT Iowa's low round Friday, a 74, said he couldn't have shot any worse that day, even if he tried. He attributed his relatively high score to the way he putted.

'The greens are okay," he said. "I was just scared. How can you be scared to hit a six footer when the greens are this slow? I was hitting the ball pure. I might as well have used a telephone pole on the green," he said, shaking his head.

Iowa's Mike Hasley, who shot a three-round total of 233, attributed his high score to a number of things. "I missed some putts," he said. "I hit some drives behind trees. It just wasn't good golf."

Hasley said he had more on his mind then just golf. "I tried to write a paper last night (Saturday night)," he said. "I just couldn't think."

Zwiener said his team is much better then they showed and shot nothing like they are capable of shooting. "We know what we have to work on," he said, refering to the way the team

Zwiener said that Dennis Tiziani. Wisconsin's head coach, walked the last round with Iowa's Greg Tebbutt. Tiziani told Zwiener that Tebbutt could have been four under on the day if he had made his putts. Tebbutt shot a oneover par 73.

Sportsbriefs

Three-point goal mulled

Big Ten basketball coaches voted to ntroduce the three-point field goal in conference games next season during a recent meeting in Chicago, but the move still must be approved by the conference athletic directors.

The distance would be shorter than the current 23-foot distance used in the NBA. The general understanding is that any basket made beyond the 20foot mark will be good for three points, instead of two.

The conference recently signed a 312.5 million television contract with he Entertainment and Sports Programming Network and Metro Sports for cable telecasts of 80 games over the next three seasons, possibly spurring the move for more offense.

The coaches were unable to agree on the use of a shot clock during games, although they did vote in favor of it, 6-3. The problem surrounded the number of seconds to be used.

Iowa downs Augustana

Augustana's tennis team is one of the top Division III schools in Illinois but the difference between Division I and and III was evident Friday as Iowa easily defeated the ViQueens, 9-0, in an exhibition match on the Stadium

The Iowa doubles team of Karen Kettenacker and Laura Lagen were the only Hawks who were really tested. They lost the first set to the ViQueens tandom of Gail Wronski and Linda Traff, 7-5, after leading 5-0. But the pair of Hawkeye seniors regained their composure to easily win sets two and three by identical 6-1 scores.

One special award was presented at last Wednesday's women's athletic banquet. Peggy Kubitz was voted the Gillespie Award. This award was voted on by team members and it is for overall accomplishments both on and off the court. The junior from Canmanche, Iowa, has played in the No. 6 position for the Hawks this

Tennis squad loses pair

It was not a good weekend for Head Coach Steve Houghton and his Iowa tennis squad as they lost a pair of dual meets in Michigan.

Michigan defeated the Hawks on Friday and Michigan State defeated Iowa 7-2, Saturday for the Spartans first conference win of the season.

Cyclones destroy Big Four field

AMES - The overwhelmingly deep track squad from Iowa State proved once again it is the Big One of the Big Four of Iowa track Sunday before a sun-drenched crowd at the Iowa State

The Cyclones beat teams from Iowa, Northern Iowa and Drake decisively by scoring 84 points. The Hawks and Panthers tied for second at 44 and the Bulldogs finished last with 24.

Iowa State's victory came without defending NCAA discus champion

Scott Crowell and All-American cross country runner Yobes Ondieki. Iowa was led by Terrence Duckett, a sophomore from Gary, Ind., who finished first in the 200 meters with a time of 21.4 seconds, second in the 100 meters with a time of 10.5 and anchored the Big Four record-setting 4 x 400 meter relay team.

In that relay, Duckett came from behind with a 47.4 split. "We were really waiting for this weather." Duckett said. "The track seemed to be real fast today. You could really take

THE KEY TO the Cyclones victory was in the distance events - the 800, 3,000 steeplechase, the 1,500 and 5,000 meter races. Iowa State outscored Iowa in these races, 25-4.

Perhaps the most impressive feat came from Bob Verbeek, a Cyclone distance runner from Belgium. He ran an outstanding 3:42.1 for the 1,500 meter title, running the last 400 in 55.4. Iowa's only other victory was in the 110-meter hurdles, where Ronnie McCoy ran a wind-aided 13.67. Also a bright spot for Iowa was a 55-foot toss of the shot by Pat O'Connor - a per-

"I didn't try to throw toofar," he said. "I just told myself to relax."

The Hawkeyes received an unexpec ted surprise with a fourth-place finish by Owen Gill in the triple jump. Gill jumped 47-101/2.

Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler made a mock introduction of Gill, who had played football most of the spring, to the team. "This is Owen Gill," Wheeler said. "Yesterday he played on the black squad, but today he will be a vital part of the track squad.

Lakers burn Suns in four straight

Right now, the Los Angeles Lakers appear to pose the most serious challenge to the Boston Celtics' NBA

Jamaal Wilkes and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 24 points each to lead the red-hot Lakers to a 112-107 victory over the Suns at Phoenix, Ariz., Sunday, completing a four-game sweep for Los Angeles in the Western Conference semifinals. The Lakers advanced to the conference finals against the winner of the Seattle-San Antonio series, which the Spurs now lead 3-1.

figures in the closest game of the series. Norm Nixon had 17 points, Magic Johnson 15, Bob McAdoo 14 and Michael Cooper 11. Phoenix guard

Dennis Johnson led all scorers with 31. AT SAN ANTONIO, Texas, center Dave Corzine sank four free throws in the final 30 seconds to lift the Spurs to a 115-113 victory over the SuperSonics. San Antonio can clinch the series Wednesday night in Seattle. The 6-foot-11 Corzine grabbed an offensive rebound and was fouled by Gus Williams. He sank two free throws to overcome a 110-109 deficit.

"That was one we absolutely should have won," Banks said. "I don't blame it on the umpires. We beat ourselves. SUNDAY'S OPENER was a sleeper as the Hawkeyes lost, 1-0, on a onehitter by Wisconsin's Scot Sabo.

Turelli's infield hit in the first inning was the only Iowa batter to reach base. Fegen provided most of the firepower in the nightcap, going threefor-four and driving in four runs. His three-run single in the sixth gave the Hawks a 7-4 lead. But it was deja vu in rehearse a scene of their play, "Deathtrap" in Ira Levin's Deathtrap, an amusing who'll do it film.

'Deathtrap' plot has enough twists to satisfy most avid thriller fans

By Roxanne T. Mueller Arts/Entertainment Editor

The well-made play doesn't necessarily make for the well-made movie, but Deathtrap, which has been running in New York for what seems like eons, holds up fairly well in its cinematic transformation.

Michael Caine plays a playwright named Sidney Bruhl who is the Neil Simon of whodunits, or at any rate, used to be. The well has run dry for Sidney in recent years, and he'd kill for another hit. Taking himself a bit too seriously, he schemes to do just that. It doesn't take long to cast about for potential victims. Christopher Reeve plays an aspiring playwright named Clifford Anderson who has just the play to raise Sidney's fortunes. Or does he?

Deathtrap is a parasitic kind of work that builds on itself and all the conventions of mystery thrillers, first exploiting them and then hoodwinking viewers in the process. Part of the fun is hearing the playwrights discuss what goes into the artfully crafted thriller and then seeing everything they talk about show up on the screen. You know, for example, that once Sidney's house is enveloped in darkness and his wife (Dyan Cannon) creeps downstairs and gets jumpy, something is going to scare the be-

'Separate Ways' is certainly no gem

By Roxanne T. Mueller

When you walk into a movie you've never heard of, you take two chances: first, you might be tripping onto an undiscovered gem; second, there's the chance that the film is so bad, you can readily see why it was never promoted. Separate Ways leans to the latter.

For one thing, it's three years old. The 1979 copyright is more than a little jolting to the system, but it does answer the question as to what Karen Black has been doing lately - nothing, besides appearing in a bad Broadway play with Cher.

One clue to the film's age comes when characters talk about the gas shortage, but the real clue comes in the subject matter: a woman's reach for independence - something still topical, it is true, but here presented so feebly and with such a dearth of originality that you roll your eyes in Separate Ways has the look and feel of a TV soap blown up to 35mm proportions with dialogue to match. The mediocre script, even when you place it in its 1979 context, is so riddled with topics long gnawed to the bone, you wonder if star Karen Black had ever heard of Ms. magazine before she looked at the script.

BLACK PLAYS a dependent wife and mother (she squeezes oranges to get fresh juice) whose husband Ken is a race car driver now running his deceased father's fancy car dealership. When she discovers Ken has been unfaithful, she does things like smash a chocolate cake on her kitchen cupboard and smear the crumbs on the off and has a one-afternoon stand (she doesn't even do it at night) with David Naughton (before his American Werewolf in London experience). When that still doesn't jolt Ken to his everlovin' senses, she stomps out of the house and becomes a cocktail waitress at a place called the Foxy Lady where she wears fox ears and has a red tail pinned to her ass. We're talking real liberation here.

Arlene Golonka plays Black's understanding friend who just got a Ph.D. at Berkeley ("that ... radical place") who serves as Black's sounding board. I liked her better in "Mayberry

A big deal is made over Black's devotion to her son Jason (another awful kid actor who throws his voice, a la The Shining, to a stuffed dog named Macaroni), but if one could find the situation believable in the first place, perhaps a little empathy could be

The director tends to show off Black's body every chance he can, which could be construed as helping to establish the healthy sexual relationship she has with her husband, but by the sixth time we see her breasts, the ludicrousness of the situation is beyond hope.

Separate Ways should be avoided for another reason. At the theater, the main feature is preceded by a 12minute ode to, would you believe, St. Louis. After the first three minutes, the rest of the film is filled with repetitions of the scenes you've just witnessed - endless shots of the arch, the Cardinals (both the baseball and football varieties) and stupid-looking people munching on cheese and crackers. I vow never again to go to St. Louis.

Opera performance refreshing

By John Voland Special to The Daily Iowan

Jacques Offenbach was known in his lifetime as a great composer of light opera, but towards the end of his life. he yearned to immortalize himself with a grand opera. The Tales of Hoffmann will stand to posterity as his gesture towards this form. But in fact, the opera, though it incorporates tragedy, traditional ballet and a full orchestra, retains most of Offenbach's love for a good tune and his incomparable eye for crowd-pleasers.

Happily, the performance seen Friday night at Hancher Auditorium emphasized the aspects of the masque that make the work such a refreshing experience compared to the usual dramaturgy encountered on the operatic stage. As shown in this UI Center for the Arts production, the composer loved a good tune (the kind you can hum on the way home) and an exciting show as much as anyone, and he took pains, in this new expanded form, to provide everyone in the house with something to enjoy: low comedy, bantering wit, choruses, ballet, fullblown arias and just about everything tion sought to give shape to all the various comings and goings of the multitudes that traverse the stage; the notable successes occurred when there were only principals onstage, adding a necessary dramatic thrust to the story. But Glass's concept broke down when the stage was full: sight lines were blocked, the movement unmotivated and the bits of business distracting.

BEAUMONT GLASS'S stage direc-

In many ways, Hoffmann rises or falls on the shoulders of its protagonist. Michael Ketcherside, who sang the part of Hoffmann Friday night, brought an intelligent and musical presence to the role. But the voice itself was a problem: at no time did it give the impression of ardor or spontaneity, but rather of a middle-aged gent reconsidering adolescence. Admittedly, it is possible to emphasize the maturity of Hoffmann throughout, but this gives him the air of a narrator rather than catalyst and robs the work of a great deal of immediacy.

THE UBIQUITOUS villain, whose name changes for each act but whose function as antagonist remains constant, was very well acted by Gregg Lauterbach, who recalled the late Norman Treigle in his catlike embodiment of evil spread over four faces. The singing again, however, was a detraction: his high G in Dapertutto's aria was visibly lunged for, and elsewhere his reedy baritone, however intelligently used, did not provide the weight for which Offenbach called.

Although Joan Sutherland and Beverly Sills both have essayed the three love interests all in one evening, Glass wisely opted for three different sopranos; the roles are quite different vocally and almost no one singer can effectively do justice to all.

THE THREE SINGERS Friday were a mixed bag. As Olympia, LuGene Mueller was wonderful: all the notes were dead accurate, the vocal line was clean and the projection of an automaton was marvelous. Mueller single-handedly made the first act really work. Kelly Widmer, as the tragic Antonia, was very accurate and evinced some sympathy with the role dramatically, but the voice itself was cold and steely in a part that desperately needs warmth and humanity. And as the seductive Giulietta, Beth Ann Gruen looked the part perfectly: all voluptuousness one voice, too, was seductive and generally effective, but sounded a bit too mature for Giulietta's forced youth and slid around the notes too freely.

Sarah Meredith-Koenig injected the thankless "trouser" role of Nicklau with great involvement, somethin that was conspicuously lacking from Donald Milholin's Crespel. The other minor roles were as a rule well. handled, with Christopher Goeke's athletically farcical comic relief bits standing out in the memory.

THE ORCHESTRAL contribution was very fine, and conductor James Dixon, whom I had not heard conduct opera, evinced a great sympathy for his singers, accompanying them superbly. The sets and costumes, the latter borrowed from Toronto and the former designed by Margaret Wenk were fine and showed a remarkable economy: pieces used in the first act returned in the third representing something completely different.
