Reagan pleads ignorance of school racism

CHICAGO (UPI) - President Reagan, making a strong appeal to blacks during a two-day visit to his native state, said Monday his decision to return tax-exempt status to racially discriminatory private schools was a 'beaut ... that went wrong."

In remarks to students at the Providence-St. Mel's all-black High School on Chicago's West Side, Reagan said his sole motivation last winter was to keep government agencies from the world that has the feeling inside harassing private institutions on the tax question.

"I didn't know there were any schools in the country that still dis- tors today that make the unemploycriminated on the basis of race," the ment rate less painful. president said. Maybe I should have, but I didn't, he said Reagan's comment was in reply to a student who asked if he had made any decisions that did not turn out the way he wanted them to. "Oh yes," said Reagan, "I got a beaut." He then went on to describe his decision adding, "Yes, that one went wrong." Reagan was warmly received by the students, who applauded him heartily. Earlier, in remarks at a brief question-and-answer session with local reporters, Reagan said he understands "the pain of unemployment" but thinks the spiraling jobless rate lacks the same impact on families it had during the Great Depression.

He acknowledged "near Depressionrate" unemployment in some pockets of the country, but said that does not apply generally.

THE PEAK UNEMPLOYMENT figure during the Depression was 24.9 percent in 1933. The jobless rate was 9.4 percent nationwide last month, but some hard-hit areas have 20 percent or more unemployed.

'I'll challenge that there's no one in them that I have, having gone through the Great Depression," Reagan said. But he said there are mitigating facthere is a major concern and responsibility for university budgeting for program funding and budgeting - and I'm just guessing - that's going to be a major part of the activities.

"Another thing is that there's a reasonably extensive change in administration going on right now at Iowa with the new president and I expect to work very closely with President Freedman," Remington said.

JAMES O. FREEDMAN, UI president, and Remington say they have very similar ideas about the way the UI should be run. Freedman Sunday highly praised Remington saying, 'He's a marvelous man and I'm just very, very taken with him." And Remington agrees with the apparent close alignment of views between the two administrators. "We've already had some exchange of ideas and we find that our values are very similar and our attitudes towards many issues are very similar. "I think that is probably what, in a major way, attracted me to think about Iowa at this time and I assume what, in part anyway, interested the search committee and the president in my candidacy for the position." Remington possesses a vast range of interests stretching from local politics to music.

The nuclear freeze crusade takes root

By Cal Woods ecial to The Daily Iowan

From townspeople in small churches to lawmakers in the statehouse, Iowans are joining the chorus of Americans calling for a freeze. Although their primary concern is the threat of a holocaust, some freeze proponents claim the build-up harms society and the economy.

In a display of archetypal democracy, the movement began with the citizens and is slowly making its way through municipal and state governments, headed for its ultimate targets - President Reagan and the selves as internationally and politically aware are getting involved," said Burns Weston, a UI law professor and member of the Iowa City Peace Network.

On a recent Sunday afternoon at the Ivester Church of the Brethren, 12 miles northwest of Conrad, Ia., the church council voted to join the evergrowing movement.

"ALMOST EVERYONE voted for the resolution," said Pearl Miller, a member of the Ivester Peace See Nuclear, page 6 > larger UI greek system because "very few black students want to go through it, it's a cultural thing," according to Mary Skourup, program assistant for greek organizations.

Joey Thurman, former president of Kappa Alpha Psi, said he joined the black fraternity because "I wanted to stay within my roots and help out the black greek system because the white greek system has always dominated." The UI National Pan-Hellenic Council, Inc., is the governing body of the black greek chapters. Its president, Paul Tomlinson, said the black greek system doesn't discriminate against white students.

He said white students are welcome to join any of the black fraternities or sororities, and some white students do

The purpose of the black greek system, like the UI's larger greek system, is to promote scholarship, leadership and service, Skourup said. 'People have to realize it's a very FEW BLACKS HAVE joined the viable governing body. They are arger UI greek system because "very greeks. They do have a purpose too. They have made a lot of strides."

Jackson, a Sigma Gamma Rho member, added that "by and large all organizations are founded for service and to preserve and foster black womanhood and black manhood."

The black greek system is

"something for people who come to college and have energy," Tomlinson said. "It's something that keeps you sane when going through all the craziness at the UI. There is a close attachment to other people - brothers. You don't have to put on a front. And it's a good feeling to benefit others with service projects. It's all very rewarding.

HE SAID THE black greek system, like the larger greek system, uses secret rituals. "The ritual is basically the thing that sews up the organization. It's special for the organization." The histories of the four black fraternities are: • Alpha Pi Alpha, the first U.S. black fraternity, was founded on Dec. 4, 1906. Some 75,000 men have been initiated into the fraternity in such places as West Germany, Liberia and the Virgin Islands. The Alpha Theta Chapter of the fraternity was founded at the UI.

• Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity was founded at Indiana University on Jan. 5, 1911. More than 80,000 men have been initiated into the fraternity, making it the largest U.S. black greekletter fraternity. The Gamma Chapter of the fraternity was founded on the UI campus on March 7, 1914 - the first black greek-letter organization to be founded at the UI.

• Phi Beta Sigma fraternity was founded at Howard University, Washington D.C., on Jan. 9, 1914. Its membership is over 75,000, from 405 campuses and alumni chapters throughout the United States, Africa, Switzerland and the Bahama Islands. Kappa Psi, an undergraduate chapter of the fraternity, was founded at the UI on May 5, 1979. On Jan. 9, 1980, Eta Epsilon Sigma, the graduate chapter of Phi Beta Sigma, was founded at the UI.

• Omega Psi Phi fraternity was founded Nov 17, 1911, at Howard University. The fraternity was the first men's greek-letter organization to be organized on an all-black campus. Mu See Greeks, page 6

Own weapons strike Viets

BANGKOK, Thailand - Vietnamese troops have fallen victim to the same chemical weapons they use against Cambodian rebels, an American doctor said Monday based on extensive interviews with Vietnamese defectors. Dr. Amos Townsend of the American-based International Rescue Committee said he is convinced the Vietnamese are not only using chemical weapons but are suffering the same symptoms as their intended victims when chemical artillery shells land too close to Vietnamese positions.

Autonomy talks site disputed

JERUSALEM - U.S. special envoy Richard Fairbanks launched a new U.S. initiative Monday on Palestinian autonomy negotiations, presenting "two or three possibilities" to Prime Minister Menachem Begin on the problem of Jerusalem as a site for the talks. But Begin insisted the autonomy talks must be held in Jerusalem, which Israel has proclaimed as its unified capital.

Another cease-fire collapse

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Police said 13 people were killed and 30 wounded Monday in renewed fighting in Tripoli between Syrian peacekeeping troops and local factions after the collapse of the third cease-fire in four days.

The clashes brought the toll to 42 dead and 157 wounded from heavy artillery and rocket exchanges that erupted Friday.

Some students cannot go home

By Jonathan Brandt ff Writer

While many UI students return to family and friends during the summer, foreign students often spend vacation thousands of miles away from home, family and friends.

For most of the UI's 1,200 foreign students, returning home is expensive and immigration paperwork is re-quired to get back into the United States. For some, trips home are also complicated by sudden changes in the political climate of the native country. Nonetheless, a number of foreign students do make the trip home during the summer. Final exams and dieting don't mix

By Dawn Ummel Special to The Daily Iowan

Even though you've found that swimsuit a little tighter this year than last, now is not the time to go on a crash diet, dietician and Currier Food Service Manager Linda Johnson said. The combination of studying for final exams and dieting can be a mental and emotional strain for students, according to Johnson.

She said it's important to "be in the right frame of mind when dieting." Students who are worrying about finals while trying to lose weight often end up achieving little on both counts.

Dr. Wayne Christenson, a resident in child psychiatry at UI Hospitals, said finals are traditionally a time when stress is "most severe" for students. The degree to which a person finds it difficult to function mentally and physically reflects the amount of stress he or she is under, he said. Dieting tends to increase a person's physical stress, and makes concentration more difficult, "which is the last thing you need now," Christenson said. Beverly McCabe, dietary educational coordinator at UI Hospitals, also feels that losing a significant amount of weight right now would be detrimental for most stu-

SHE ADVISES THAT students concentrate on preventing weight gain by keeping their food intake steady. McCabe said many students overeat around the time of finals week because of nervousness. The best way to avoid weight gain at this time is to "control nibbling and get a good amount of exercise.'

Johnson said many college students gain weight when they come to school because they must adjust to new lifestyles and activities.

She said it is not necessarily true that dormitory food is highly fattening and causes students to put on the pounds. Most students have a say in their diet, whereas "Mom used to set a dish out on the table and you ate or starved.

McCabe said there are two groups of students that commonly fall victim to weight gain: freshmen women living in dormitories, and former high school athletes, particularly men, who decrease their physical activities in college without cutting down their caloric intake.

Health professionals have noted that women are most likely to gain weight during their first years in college or while they are pregnant.

Both Johnson and McCabe advised that no one should lose more than one to two pounds per week on the average. "Any rapid weight loss is usually water and muscle loss more than fat loss," McCabe said. McCabe also pointed out that men generally find it easier than women to lose weight because they have a lower percentage of fat than women do. But she also pointed out that this extra fat tissue makes women physically distinguishable from men.

MEN ALSO REQUIRE more calories than women, to meet basic nutritional requirements, which contributes to the relative ease with which they can lose or maintain weight.

In choosing a diet, people should be wary of those that do not call for a sufficient amount of calories, McCabe said. Any diet that contains less than 1200 calories a day is not wellbalanced, she said.

An example of a dangerous diet is the so-called Cambridge diet, which allows only 330 calories a day. McCabe said that this diet does not provide enough protein or calories and is essentially a 'starvation diet."

Christenson added that people who follow such starvation diets, even if only for a day or two, will experience lowered blood sugar levels and thus, lowered energy levels.

Starvation diets can also disrupt sleep cycles and cause serious metabolic changes, including rewards instead of putting it off until ketoacidosis - a condition in which a toxin builds up in the body as a result of fat being burned for energy. In addition, overly strict diets can disturb a person's ability to concentrate. "They think about food so much that it interferes with studying," Christenson said. McCabe remarked that regardless of the unique features of a diet, there are some basic nutrients that it should provide. Some form of meat, or meat substitute, and milk are good sources of the essential nutrient protein.

In addition, dieters should continue to eat vegetables and fruits while cutting non-essential foods, such as desserts and other caloric foods.

MCCABE ALSO recommended that dieters eat three meals a day at the regular times, rather than once or twice a day - a habit that increases the tendency to eat excessively. Christenson said some dieters find that using incentives helps them stick to a diet, for example, they may buy themselves new clothes after they lose a certain amount of weight.

But he emphasized that incentives must be "individualized," saying that what is an incentive for one person is not for another. "You must set up small steps for more immediate after a month," he said.

Motto for bottle bill enthusiasts: 'a bottle saved is a nickel earned'

By Edye Calderon Special to The Daily Iowan

Three years after the enactment of Iowa's bottle bill, people appear to have replaced the old motto, "A penny saved is a penny earned," with a new one - "A bottle or a can saved is a nickel earned."

Iowa City residents return hundreds of thousands of bottles and cans every year to collect the deposit money and, in some cases, to make a few extra bucks.

Mark Gauger, 831 Third Ave., Coralville, recently returned 1,167 cans and bottles to ADEK Inc., 702 Second Ave., in Coralville, and received $58.35

He said most of the refund will go toward beer and entertainment.

Other residents interviewed have reported using refund money to fund fraternity projects, Christmas and birthday gifts, money to get home, even an operating budget.

Gauger said he began collecting his returnables - mostly beer cans - about a year ago. He carted them to the center just a few weeks ago in a van that was packed to the ceiling.

Sandra, a waitress for the Iowa River and Power Company, also uses refund money from bottles and cans to buy more alcohol and for entertainment.

Sandra did not wish to have her full name and address revealed because she feared someone would steal her returnables.

SHE AND HER roommate collect mostly wine and beer bottles, which they cash in every four or five months at the liquor store and at John's Grocery. The money is put into a "wine piggy bank," earmarked for more wine.

Sandra said she seldom throws bottles and cans away because she doesn't want to litter. Instead, she throws them in her car. Rick White, 713 Carriage Hill Apartments, also uses his car for storing bottles and cans. White said it is natural for him to toss empty bottles or cans into the back seat while he's driving and to forget about it until the car becomes "pitted out."

At his home. White saves mostly coke bottles, which he stores under his sink until he returns them to the Coralville Hy-Vee. White plugs his refund money into Pac-Man

Ten-year-old Kirk Lattner, 3 Arbor Circle, also uses his refunds to support a videoame habit.

HE SAVES bottles and cans for special purchases, such as an Atari video-game cassette. He also uses the money to help buy his family and friends birthday and Christmas presents.

Lattner, who attends Robert Lucas Elementary School, said many of his friends collect bottles and cans on the way home from school because the refunds give them some extra money

"It's a great way for kids to make money that they couldn't earn otherwise," Lattner said

Seventeen-year-old Allen Kauzlarich says the bottle bill has provided a good income opportunity for people his age. Kauzlarich, a West High School student, said students at his school are very aware of the value of bottles and cans. Rather than throw bottles and cans away, West High students usually store them in their lockers and turn them in for cash later, he said.

"MONEY IS hard to get anymore," Kauzlarich commented. "If the economy wasn't the way it is, it might be different, but nickels and dimes count now."

Kauzlarich said that before the bottle bill he just tossed cans away. But now he stores them by the carton in his kitchen closet. He uses his refund money in between paychecks and to buy gas for his car. Bottle and can refunds helped UI student

Phil Rowe get out of a tight spot at the end of the spring semester last year. He was completely broke, wondering how he would get home to Ames.

He collected over 200 bottles and cans from around the Alpha Epsilon Pi frater-nity house, 339 N. Riverside Dr., where he lives. The refunds payed for a full tank of gas for his Volkswagen and bought him lunch on the drive home

UI senior Arlin De Jong, 903 E. Burlington St., said the monetary aspect of the bill has made him more aware of throwing cans away. "You don't take a nickel out of your pocket and throw it on the floor do you?" he asked.

AT HIS HOUSE, De Jong said he and his roommates save every can they use. The money is then used to buy household necessities, such as toilet paper, soap, popcorn, salt and pepper. De Jong said there are also long-term benefits from saving returnables. For example, his former boss saved bottles and cans while he went to graduate school, storing them in a false ceiling at the laboratory where he worked. After a year and a half, he took the bottles and cans down and used the money for a graduation party.

D.J. Beard, 603 Grant St., has put refund money into business. Beard is a founding member of the "underground" Voice of Iowa City radio program and he began acquiring cans when he started doing VOICE broadcasts from his home.

Beer bottle refunds collected from the people who came over to watch the shows developed into a "slush fund." When the group decided to do a television series for the public access cablevision channel, the fund became the operating budget for the new Iowa City Underground Television (ICU-TV).

BEARD SAID approximately $100 was collected in a year's time. The money helped to buy props and video tapes for ICU's science fiction series, "Space Heaters.

At the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity house, 363 N. Riverside Dr, bottles and cans are given to the pledge class to help pay for their class projects, according to fraternity member Bill Jones.

He said approximately 2,000 cans are turned in at the end of each semester, bringing in about $100.

Jones said he thinks the bottle bill has helped decrease litter. "When you buy a bottle or a can, you know the can is worth 5 cents. If you break it or throw it out, it's your responsibility," he said.

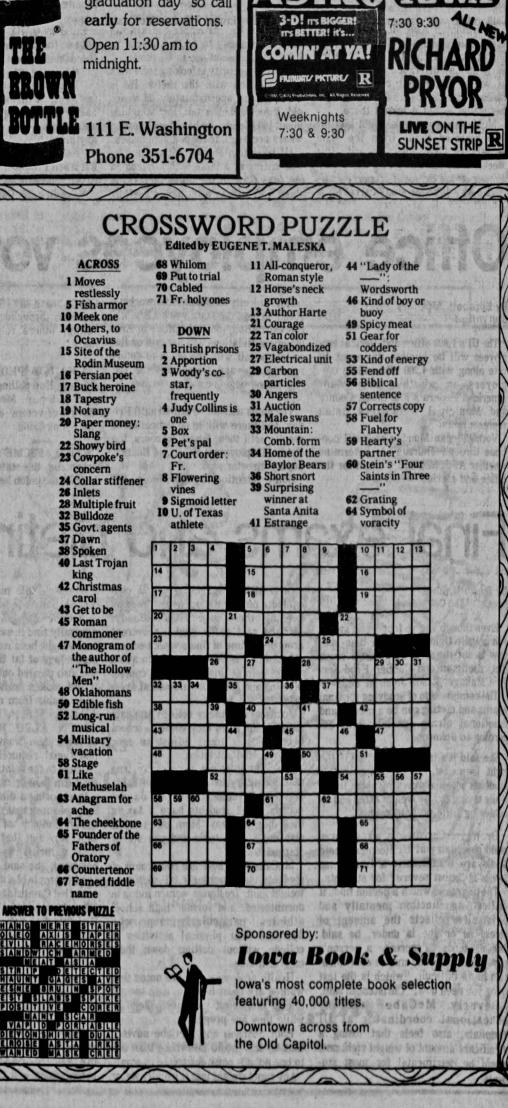

According to reports from local grocers, many Iowa Citians have accepted the responsibility for returning cans and bot-

DAN SHAY, assistant manager for Eagle supermarket, 600 N. Dodge St., said an average of about 48,000 bottles and cans are returned each week. The highest rate of return is during the UI football season. Lyn Blanchard, manager of the Hy-Vee Food Store, 501 Hollywood Blvd., said simply there were "a lot" of returnables brought in to the store.

Blanchard said the weather seems to influence when people bring in their returnables. "Human nature is such that when the weather's cold, people don't want to bring them in. When it is warm, people do house cleaning and bring them in," he explained.

Bill Alberhasky, owner of John's Grocery, 401 E. Market St., said the average 50,000 bottles and cans collected a week at John's greatly increases when UI students are packing up to go home for semester breaks.

The bottle bill hasn't produced any millionaires, but people still seem to know a nickel when they see one.

Dr. John Hopper, the only psychiatrist Binckley saw in the months before his arrest, said he believed the 26-year-old drifter may have been trying to manipulate him by "overdramatizing" his mental state when he was rejected by Foster.

Hopper said that during 12 sessions with Hinckley — the last a month before the March 30, 1981, assassination attempt — he found the young man was intelligent with no outward signs of deep-rooted mental problems. In a tinge of regret, Hopper said, "I didn't

In notes on his interviews with Hinckley and his family, introduced into evidence Monday, Hopper scrawled that Hinckley's mother reported her husband had few friends and was 'not close'' to their children.

She said her husband was "going through hell" and "leaves notes around the house putting (John Jr.) down."

Prosecutor Roger Adelman, drawing out Hopper under cross-examination, pressed the government's view that Hinckley had command of his mental faculties.

'He had no difficulty making decisions ... hiding from you that he had been down on the rifle range on the 26th of January?" Adelman asked the doctor.

"I guess he had the ability to do that," Hopper replied.

UNDER QUESTIONING by Adelman, Hopper said Hinckley's personal writings about his life were far more intense than his comments during their face-to-face discussions. "It seemed to be a dramatization or exaggeration of what I saw when I interviewed him," Hopper said.

When asked if Hinckley might have been manipulating him, Hopper replied, "Perhaps in part. I was aware there might be some difference in the intensity of what the written material conveyed."

The doctor said he found no neurological problems, psychosis or other deep-rooted mental problems - and Hinckley's writings

AS HOPPER recounted his discussions of failure and inadequacy with his patient who later gunned down Reagan and three other men, Hinckley's mother, JoAnn, sitting in the spectators' section of the courtroom, began to CTV.

She quickly wiped her eyes and regained her composure. Hinckley sat with his lawyers, listening intensely.

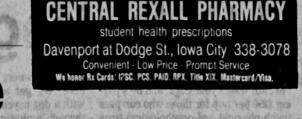

Hopper was called as a witness by Hinckley's defense lawyers, trying to win his acquittal on grounds of insanity. If convicted, Hinckley, 26, faces a maximum sentence of life in prison.

Prosecutors have said the attack on Reagan was a coldly calculated effort by Hinckley designed, in part, to impress Foster. The defense maintains Hinckley's obsession with the actress was one symptom of his loss of contact with reality.

Hinckley began seeing Hopper after returning from Yale University, where he told his parents he had taken writing courses although a prosecutor said Hinckley never enrolled in the classes

The psychiatrist said Hinckley first told him Nov. 4, 1980, about his two biggest obsessions - his writing and Foster, who was a student at Yale.

"I care about nothing else," Hinckley said in an autobiography he wrote for Hopper two or three days later.

Attorney argues Sirhan's release would inspire other societal misfits

SOLEDAD, Calif. (UPI) - Release from prison of Sirhan Sirhan would tell "every misfit, fanatic and political crusader" that assassination costs only a few years behind bars in California, a prosecutor argued Monday.

Sirhan "can never repay his debt," Deputy District Attorney Larry Trapp of los Angeles said in his closing argument before a state parole board considering revocation of a planned 1984 parole of the assassin of Sen. Robert Kennedy. "His debt can only be forgiven and there

s just no reason why that should occur at his point," Trapp said. "If Sirhan's scheduled release is imd in California," Trapp said, protection of 230 million Americans who have some rights, too.

"As long as Sirhan poses any conceivable risk to society as a whole it (his release) should be unthinkable." Trapp said the decision in 1975 to grant parole was "a result of an improper assessment of the danger of political assassination to society.'

"Mr. Kennedy's life was no more holy, no more sacrosanct ... than any other life on this Earth," Trapp said, "but the position which he occupied was not fully appreciated. The focus should not have been on Robert Kennedy at all. The focus should have been on society.'

parole date should be revoked. It will be 14 years next month that Sirhan faced the senator in a Los Angeles hotel kitchen, yelled "Kennedy, you son of a bitch!" and murdered him with a .22caliber revolver that cost $31.95, secondhand.

IT WAS JUST after midnight, June 5, 1968, and Kennedy was celebrating his victory in the California presidential primary. His wife, Ethel, was at his side.

Sirhan, a Jerusalem-born Arab, was shouting "I did it for my country!" He was arrested on the spot and convicted in April, 1969.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - House Budget Committee Chairman James Jones outlined a 1983 budget plan Monday calling for no changes in Social Security benefits or financing, but higher taxes and a smaller deficit than the Senate version.

The Oklahoma Democrat said his plan would include fewer cuts in social programs that "have been hit as hard as they can be hit."

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., meanwhile, said he expects Congress to decide on a combination of new tax revenue and slower benefit growth to achieve the $40 billion in Social Security savings that his committee included in the budget blueprint it approved, with the president's endorsement, last week.

President Reagan maintains the $40 billion is needed to keep Social Security solvent and can be obtained through changes in the retirement system. But Democrats charge Republicans are trying to balance the federal budget by cutting retirement except Social Security, food stamps and Supplemental Security Income. 'There's nothing in the area of limiting cost-of-living adjustments on Social

The Senate Armed Services Committee approved additional cuts in the record 1983 defense budget Monday in order to bring it in line with the budget package recommended last week by the Senate Budget Committee.

The new cuts will result in the earlierthan-planned retirement of 13 Navy destroyers, reduction in Army strength of about one battalion (approximately 800 men), and delays in the purchase of missile-related equipment for one of the Trident submarines now under construction.

THE CHANGES will mean a further eduction of about $3.1 billion in the 1983 defense authorization bill, which had been sent to the full Senate last week with a recommended $180.2 billion total.

Senate GOP leader Howard Baker said he plans to bring the resolution to the full Senate Friday.

U.S. looking for tough doggies

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) - Un- dividual owners and test them right cle Sam wants your dogs, and he's paying $250 per pup for those who can pass tough physical and psychological tests to join the 2,400-member Department of Defense dog squad. Graduates of the Department of Defense Dog Center at Lackland Air Force Base sniff out bombs and drugs and patrol bases for the Air Force, Army, Navy and Marines as well as government agencies such as the Federal Aviation Administration and the U.S. Border Patrol.

The elaborate training center, which is the only facility in the world that turns out canine specialists for the U.S. military, buys and trains about 500 German shepherds, Doberman pinschers, German shorthairs, beagles and Labrador retrievers each year.

"We look for certain characteristics within the dog itself to show his reliability for training," said Master Sgt. Ed Hawkinson, who is in charge of recruiting the dogs.

"We get them mostly from in-

"We are still advising considerable caution in evaluating the U.N. talks," one British official said, warning that if talks drag on a major military of-here. We get a psychological profile with a dog psychologist, then run them through a physical test."

ONLY DOBERMANS and German shepherds are used for patrol and attack dogs, but the other three breeds have proved adept at sniffing out drugs and explosives. Many of the beagles and Labradors are employed by the FAA to ferret out bombs at airports. But of the thousands of animals whose owners offer them to the program, less than one in five can meet the rigorous physical and psychological requirements.

'Most Doberman pinschers and German shepherds are living on a reputation falsely given them," Hawkinson said. "Everybody thinks all Doberman pinschers and German shepherds will eat you up, but that's not true. Most will turn around and run the other way. "Out of the thousands we look at, we only take 17 percent, and that's not

'The first thing we look for in a male dog is urination pattern," Hawkinson said. "When a dog reaches 1 year old, if he is given the opportunity to urinate on a pole or a fence and still squats, it shows immaturity and is therefore untrainable.

A dog's bark, or lack of it, also is an indicator of maturity. Hawkinson said dogs that make a yelp-type sound are turned away while those that growl or bark are deemed properly mature. An animal that retreats from aggression also flunks the entrance exam, as does one that gets spooked by gunfire. 'We wouldn't want a dog to run faster than you if you were out with it

'We have narcotics and explosive detection dogs which are patrol dogs who also sniff out drugs or explosives. And then we have our contraband dogs, which are only used to find narcotics. A staff of 43 military workers and 12 civilians takes care of the animals seeing them through training, and then shipping them all over the world to their new jobs.

Thirty instructors train about 500 dogs each year, and five full-time veterinarians handle the canines' medical needs.

Fellowship. "A few people didn't vote, but no one voted against it."

The resolution calls for a halt to the production, testing and deployment of nuclear weapons and related delivery systems. A copy of the resolution was printed in two local newspapers, the Conrad Record and the Eldora Herald Ledger.

The sentiments that prompted the Ivester Church to take a stand are similar to those compelling people from Putney, Vt., to Berkeley, Calif., to display a political fervor unheard of for almost a decade. Along with their resolution calling for a nuclear freeze, the people of the Ivester Church bought a film about the medical consequences of a nuclear war.

"The Last Epidemic" describes what would happen to a city the size of San Francisco in a nuclear attack. Pearl Miller's husband, Phil, a guidance counselor at the Beaman-Conrad-Liscomb high school, brought the film to the attention of the Ivester Peace Fellowship, a local group concerned with international relations. Phil Miller is a member of the Iowa City Peace Network.

"THE FILM has been shown to church groups and high school social science classes in Conrad, Eldora, Grundy Center and Iowa Falls," Pearl Miller said. "There've been requests from all over the state and the Midwest for the film. We've had to turn people down.

Carol Leland, also a member of the Ivester Peace Fellowship, plays down the notion that it is unusual for a church in rural Iowa to involve itself with international issues. "Historically, the Church of the Brethren, along with the Mennonites and the Quakers have been recognized as peace activists," Leland said.

Weston, one of Iowa City's most outspoken freeze proponents, blends establishment credentials with fire-inthe-gut activism. He recently attended an organizational freeze meeting in Washington, Ia.

Nearly 100 people, mostly Mennonite and Amish, were there - people Weston described as "honest, sincere and hard-working. These people are amazed and frightened about what's going on.

"NONE OF THESE folks have illusions about how nice the Soviet Union is or that a freeze would solve the world's problems. But they do perceive the nothingness of annihilation," he the economy. "The nuclear arms race has also produced a technological 'brain drain' on society and has been tremendously detrimental to the economy. There is no economic mul-tiplier for tanks," because weapons, unlike many consumer goods, are not re-sold.

Jim Larew, a member of the Iowa City Peace Network and 1980 congressional candidate, who runs a local plumbing business, said the nuclear arms race has added to inflation and budget deficits.

"With Reagan's defense budget, the federal government will be borrowing more than half of all the money available for investments. Small businesses, like ours, are incredibly sensitive to the interest rates. It's the consumers who have to borrow and they're competing against the government. (for the money) which drives up interest rates.'

BEFORE THE COUNCIL resolution was passed, the UI student body voted by a nine to one margin in favor of a nuclear arms freeze at the regular student senate elections on March 16. The results of the referendum were delivered to the Iowa City Council and according to the new senate president, Patty Maher, helped convince councilors to vote for the council freeze resolution.

Although there has been opposition to local freeze resolutions, it has been based mainly on questions regarding the propriety of student and municipal governments making official statements on national issues, rather than on the merits of an arms freeze.

John Balmer, the lone dissenter in the city council vote on the resolution, said he opposed the resolution because he does not think the nuclear arms build-up is an issue for the city council to deal with. In addition, he said he does not agree with Larew and others who feel the nuclear arms race harms the economy.

HOWEVER, in an interview before the vote, Councilor John McDonald said that although the council has an "unwritten policy" of not taking a stand on national issues, "this is one national issue that certainly affects Iowa Citians.

Some members of the student senate opposed holding the referendum, saying the senate should not comment on national issues and that referendum ballots would increase the cost of the election. But they were not necessarily opposed to the freeze itself.

In a recent interview, Kenny Purcell,

Remington As a city councilor in Ann Arbor, has played the tuba for several are and needs are."

Remington was able to become involved in the intricate overlap between the university and city community and during the late 1960s, that was not a popular overlap with city leaders.

'Ann Arbor has about 100,000 people and it was an educational experience for me. Those were the times of unrest on the campus and a period in which the city and the university were rather strained, so it was a good opportunity to learn how those kinds of relationships work." Remington said.

On the other end of the spectrum, Remington is an avid music lover and professional and community bands.

"I have filled in in a number of bands in the Detroit area and Ann Arbor area and have played a bit in Canada, but lately I just haven't been able to do that. And I do miss it," Remington said

Remington has not yet set any specific goals because he hasn't had time to assess the UI, but he said the major problems facing the UI are the same as those facing all educational institutions.

'Higher education in the United BUT THERE WON'T be much time States now is not exactly at the crossroads, but it's facing a difficult time in which everybody in this country is trying to sort out what its priorities are in terms of defense spending vs. social programs and selves and our families and our nation looking at the way in which we choose to allocate our resources," Remington said.

Perhaps the most difficult aspect of coming to the UI for Remington will be cheering for the Iowa football team when it plays the Michigan Wolverines. "That's going to be a challenge. I've been at Michigan for about 21 years. I expect to be loyal to Iowa - certainly on the outside and I can't control the inside. sororities are:

• Delta Sigma Theta sorority was founded at Howard University on Jan. 13, 1913. Today there are more than 90,000 members in the sorority and over 580 chapters throughout the United States, in the Republic of Haiti and Liberia. The sorority's fourth chapter - Delta Chapter - was founded at the UI on April 4, 1919.

• Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority was founded as a national greek-letter organization on Jan. 16, 1908. It was the first black sorority established in the United States. It has more than 80,000 members in undergraduate and alumnae chapters located in colleges and universities throughout the United States, West Africa and the Bahamas. The sorority's Epsilon Theta Chapter was founded at the UI on May 10, 1969. It is a colony chapter because it is composed of members from the UI, Coe College in Cedar Rapids and Iowa Wesleyan College in Mt. Pleasant • Zeta Phi Beta was founded at Howard University on Jan. 16, 1920. It was the first greek-letter sorority to establish chapters in Africa. A chapter of Zeta Phi Beta was founded at the UI.

The UI's four black fraternities and three black sororities don't have houses because the UI chapters do not have enough members. "After members graduate they go because Iowa is not conducive to blacks, so there's no alumni support," Tomlinson said.

come from large cities... Iowa City is not conducive to lifestyles of big cities. THE HISTORIES OF the three black By and large there are not alumni chapters.'

Tomlinson said that some of the UI black chapters "are looking into it (buying a house)." But, he said, it's unlikely the chapters will buy a house in the near future because of the poor economy

Approximately 54 UI students belong to the black greek system. The low membership is a result of "so few of us on campus," Jackson added.

Elizabeth Stroud, UI coordinator for institutional data, said approximately 567 black students enrolled at the UI last fall - 293 women and 274 men. The current low membership can also be attributed to black students' negative perception of fraternities and sororities, Jackson said.

"Attitudes in general are negative again," she said. During the late 1960s and early 1970s, membership declined. But fraternities saw membership surge in the late 1970s.

But "now attitudes are beginning to become a little negative because of the economic factors. Fraternities and sororities cost money. They are a luxury," Jackson said.

The biggest difference between the black greek system and the larger greek system is their rush programs, Skourup said. Traditionally the larger greek system holds a formal fall rush, but the UI black greek system doesn't allow first semester freshmen into rush because it wants potential mem-

Black fraternities call their rush, 'smokers," Tomlinson said. The term 'smokers" originated when black fraternities gave out free packs of from the local chapters. The council cigarettes to anyone who visited their fraternity.

Otherwise the larger greek system's rush and the black greek system's rush is "basically the same," Tomlinson said.

A member of a black fraternity or sorority must first complete at least one semester with a 2.0 grade average or better, he said. The grade point average must be maintained.

If fraternities and sororities (either from the black system or the larger system) don't maintain quality educational programs, the UI will step in and help, Skourup said.

For example, the black fraternity Kappa Alpha Psi, "does have some deficiencies in their educational environment and programs," Skourup said. She gave the group some "structure and guidance to help them improve their programs."

Thurman said the purpose of Kappa Alpha Psi is to "achieve in every field of human endeavor. We try to direct young people in the direction of educational achievement."

THE FRATERNITY KEEPS a file of old tests to help new members study. In addition, the fraternity holds study sessions at the UI Main Library to help its members develop good study habits

It costs about $100 to join a black fraternity or sorority. Members continue to pay between $25-$75 yearly,

The National Pan-Hellenic Council. Inc., was founded at the UI in 1975. The council consists of representatives sets standards and policies for its member organizations.

Skourup said: "We are working on a real consciousness to make people aware of the three (greek) governing bodies - (Interfraternity Council), (Women's) Panhellenic (Association) and NPC. They are treated the same. They are real conscientious of each other. There really never was a time when they didn't work together. There are no friction points.'

Jackson agrees with Skourup. "We are making great strides in getting the three organizations to work together. NPC was actively involved with Greek Week this year and the Greek Hawkeye," she said.

'We are more involved (with the larger greek system) than ever before," Tomlinson said. "We could be more involved. We have to take it one step at a time.

Some of the black greek system's traditions include "greek scene," unofficial exchanges and philanthropy projects, he said.

Greek scene is a program similar to the larger greek system's annual follies. Each black fraternity and sorority works on a show, such as a "stepshow" which is like tap dancing without the tap shoes.

Toward the end of the spring semester, the black chapters get together to judge each other's show, Tomlinson said.

Weston and several other members of the Iowa City Peace Network convinced the Iowa City Council to pass a resolution March 30 calling for a nuclear arms freeze. A copy of the council's resolution was sent to President Reagan, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, Secretary of State Alexander Haig and each of Iowa's congressional delegates.

What we're talking about here is not death or war in the traditional sense, but the annihilation of a significant part of the human race, perhaps the elimination of the human species, Weston said. "There is nothing in the past behavior of the federal government that indicates they won't do such a thing. The implication is that they might get trigger happy."

IN ADDITION, Weston said, the arms build-up threatens society and

'I wouldn't propose that people accept all of the president's logic on the New Federalism, but that aspect of it certainly relates to what we're doing here," Purcell said. The Iowa Legislature also recently passed a resolution calling for a nuclear arms freeze. The resolution passed 41-6 in the senate. In the House, "it was unanimous and passed without debate," Representative Minnette Doderer said. "Even some of the most conservative representatives were asking to have their names added as supporters of the resolution."

Don't drink the water

Guess what: Iowa City water is awful.

That's no surprise to anyone who has lived here in the spring, when runoff water from the winter snow-melt flows into the city's water supply, carrying with it a variety of decaying organic matter.

Large amounts of chlorine must then be added to kill the bugs that come with this mess. This means that for a month or so, a clothespin must be attached to the nose while drinking a glass of water, and precautions have to be taken to keep tastebuds from peeling off the tongue.

Recent studies have shown that excess chlorine in the water may be dangerous as well as simply unpleasant. High chlorine concentrations have been statistically associated with higher than average rates of certain types of cancer.

The risk of cancer is no doubt less than the risk of typhoid fever, which is what the chlorine is supposed to prevent. Still, the city would do well to investigate other ways of purifying the water, even though a cheaper alternative will be hard to find.

Nitrates, an ingredient of agricultural fertilizers, are also found in city water. They are probably less dangerous than chlorine, but still represent a health threat and cannot be removed by the city's water treatment plant. Last year, parents living in UI married student housing were warned to buy bottled water for their children when the nitrate level reached a danger point.

City officials are doing the best they can with the equipment they have to keep the water clean, but the only way to be sure you're drinking safe water is to buy it in bottles. This has long been a necessity in underdeveloped countries, where water treatment facilities are frequently substandard. There is no small irony in the fact that our technological sophistication has placed us in a similar situation.

Love thy neighbor

The spirit of voluntarism is what Reaganomics is all about help your neighbor and everyone comes out prosperous and bathed in a rosy glow of goodwill.

At least that's how it's supposed to work. Unfortunately, it seems that time has passed that notion by; now you don't do anything for nothing, and if you do your motives are suspect, you're soft in the head, or both.

Edith Vinchattle tried it, and found herself threatened with a fine and a possible court action. Vinchattle lives in Callendar, Iowa, a town of 500 people that sounds as if it should be the quintessence of small-town neighborliness. Vinchattle fixes hair for four elderly, housebound Callendar ladies, because they can not get to the town's beauty salons.

Now the Iowa Department of Health's Cosmetology Examiners' Board has filed a complaint with the Webster County Attorney's Office, saying Vinchattle is "in the business of fixing hair without a license." If found guilty, she faces a $100 fine. Vuanita Rentz, the cosmetology inspector who filed the complaint, shows a truly modern response to Vinchattle's reprehensible actions; "I still say nobody works for nothing," she said, adding "there must be compensation of some sort, even if I can't put my finger on it. I really feel she's guilty." Vinchattle has brazenly admitted her "guilt" and the "compensation" she receives - she "simply loves helping people." Among the other trade-busting practices she engages in, she helps out a 75-year-old crippled woman -- "at times she's even washed my feet," the woman said. That sounds kind of familiar it's lucky that early "do-gooder" operated in Palestine some time ago, or maybe the ever-vigilant Iowa Department of Health might have "had to do its job" on him too.

Time to face the final curtain

NCE AGAIN finals week is in our midst and we have welcomed it with open arms as it heaps its blessings upon us. As usual, it is a time for rejoicing, a time to exhibit the culmination of a semester's diligence, a time to reap the rewards for a job well done.

The crocuses are in bloom and the fragrant breeze that gently rustles the curtains at my window sill brings with it the promise of a new beginning. If I let my imagination wander, I can almost ... I can almost believe what I've written so far. You'll have to excuse me, dear readers; I'm not myself these days. For a second there I thought I was in the midst of another final - forced to shovel B.S. as fast as I could.

The truth is that the only thing the breeze has carried through my window lately was the rain from last week's storm. It wasn't all that bad though, because my term paper kept the water from getting on anything important like the floor.

But even if some gentle breeze were to waft my way, it most certainly would not be rustling my curtains. I've been using them for a bath towel. I haven't done laundry in so long that I've even had to start cutting leg holes in my pillow cases so I can use them as underwear.

SO WHILE IT may be true that finals week does indeed heap blessings on that mythical creature, the wellprepared student, what it has heaped on me is quite another, more fecal matter. I keep telling myself that things are not as bad as I look. That just because I'm looking at the world through rose-colored eyes, my hair needs an oil change, and there is a three-day growth on my face I should not throw in the curtain. But the threeday growth is not hair and it's starting to worry me. Of course, I have only myself to blame for my wretched state. I waited so long to start studying that I am now forced to look for summaries of the Cliff Notes. If a little knowledge is truly a dangerous thing, then I am a walking deathtrap. When my physics professor told our class that the exam would be open book, I was the only one who had to ask which book. I don't even know who won the war in War and Peace. Money talks

Apparently the game of college basketball does not pack enough action these days for that much exalted character the paying spectator. At least that's what the majority of Big Ten coaches seems to think, having spent the better part of the off-season conjuring up ways to make the game more exciting for those moneyed fans who make it possible for collegiate athletics to remain the big business it is.

Naturally such proposed changes as a shot clock and the threepoint play are supposedly being considered with the athletes themselves (you remember them; the guys who play the game) in mind, but it's hard to imagine how any major rules change designed drastically to alter offensive strategy might benefit players who have already become proficient with the game in its present form.

Even if a faster-paced game would benefit a majority of the players, that is not the reason it is being considered. The bottom line is that most coaches feel an increased emphasis on offense can only add to the already burgeoning gate receipts of college basketball.

Not that this should come as a surprise to anyone who has followed the trend of college athletics toward professionalism in the past few years. Still, it was nice to have coaches who at least maintained the illusion that their respective sports were played for the enjoyment of the athletes and not net profits.

And it was not all that long ago when college coaches were concerned more with schooling their players in the discipline of a sport than with transforming that sport to suit the whims of anyone who could afford the price of a ticket. But assuredly money talks louder than ideals these days.

pass me in the street and yell "Devo" - the people at whom my song "I'm Not Gay" is aimed.

That song is a criticism of persons who judge others on appearance alone. It is not opposed to homosexuals, it is opposed to persons who think that anyone who doesn't drink beer or pick fights in bars is a homosexual.

As to my statements about hating homosexuals, you misquoted me. In the "dramatic context" of the monologue, I said I did not hate homosexuals, but I hated the way women treat homosexuals. I was not deriding the homosexual, but lampooning women who treat them in a playfully sexual manner when no sexual contact is to be expected.

You also misquoted the phrase "eat it, bitch." The words I used were "you better mean it, bitch," implying that if I am approached in an openly sexual manner I will respond in a similar fashion.

You speak of my social responsibility. Is it my responsibility to sanitize my material so that no one can possibly be offended? I find it upsetting, then, to be confronted by such work in the paper (DI, April 27). T. Johnson's articles have always been written in a style that manages to assault the language even more than it does the intelligence of his readers. But Johnson's inexcusable lack of research for his review of "MASH" exceeded his usual lack of stylistic standards.

Apparently, Johnson doesn't realize that "MASH" had been on for three vears before the characters of B.J. and Colonel Potter were introduced. Even for a show that has been on for 10 years, the fourth and fifth seasons hardly qualify as "the early years." For anyone familiar with the real early episodes of the show, which were far meaner and cruder than anything that has followed, Johnson's premise (that "MASH" has become "crueler" over the years) is as ridiculous as the writing used to convey it.

Had Johnson bothered to read a source as convenient as TV Guide, he would also know that the parties involved in producing "MASH" have agreed that next season will be the show's last. Journalistic caution is all well and good, but turning an objective fact into a "rumor" in order to make snide comments about a show (and, on the side, about women) goes beyond and beneath everything I've understood criticism to be. If Johnson's article had been a rhetoric paper, I would have asked for a rewrite. Perhaps The Daily Iowan should consider doing the same. Terri Snyder

Weather vanes

To the editor:

Steven Horowitz's commendation of Congressmen James Leach, Cooper Evans and Tom Tauke is a little shortsighted (DI, April 28). It may be nice that they are able to afford not using the tax break they recently voted themselves, but that may be because they voted themselves an even larger one last summer. Don't forget they all supported and voted for President Reagan's massive tax breaks for those ndividuals with high incomes, which Leach and Evans certainly fit.

These Republican congressmen are nothing more than political weather vanes, always changing their direction whenever the political winds change. Last year, when Reagan blew into Washington with his ultra-conservative programs, the Iowa republicans voted for the tripod of Reaganism, budget cuts, tax cuts and military extravagance, because they were perceived to be popular at the time. Now that the winds are shifting against Reagonomics, our weather vane representatives are shifting too, back towards the center by denouncing their previous votes and trying to separate themselves from the president. If Leach, Evans and Tauke are sincere in their denouncement of Reagonomics, why don't they refuse to take the massive supply-side tax cut they voted for last summer?

The winds are truly shifting against Reagonomics and they are picking up speed. Let's hope they will be strong enough to sweep out these weather vane congressmen and replace them with representatives who will stand tall and true and not get dizzy spinning in the wind.

Matthew R. Wissing

OF COURSE like everyone else, I know that when this is all over I'll be able to look back and laugh hysterically, uncontrollably until my bed straps break. Yet somehow the knowledge that all these headaches will be behind me in a week offers me little consolation when I consider that my future will be standing right there beside them.

I've begun to wonder whether or not I was really cut out to be a nuclear brain surgeon. In fact, I am considering changing my major to Notary Public. I feel that this might be a profession where I might more fully utilize my talents, and I understand they have a very good program here at Iowa.

So though I sit alone in my room surrounded by unused textbooks, swilling coffee and frantically skimming The Scarlet Letter to find out who wrote the letter, do not feel sorry for me. For mine is the consolation, the inner peace, of knowing that a situation is truly hopeless - that no matter what I do, my fate is no longer in my hands. Just the same, if anyone reading this knows who won the war in War and Peace, please call me.

Another grappler plans try at 190

Sports

Lou Banach, that heavyweight of a wrestler on Iowa's national championship team, said he plans to compete at 190 pounds this winter, thus creating a predicament for Coach Dan

Last week, Banach's brother, Ed, a three-time All-American at 177 and two-time national champ, said he will compete at 190 next season. Problem is, Pete Bush, the defending 190-pound national champ, is returning at the weight for the Hawks.

Lou Banach won the heavyweight crown two years ago and placed third in that weight division last season. "I'll be down to 190," Lou said. "I'm tired of pumping my body with food to keep my weight up. I just have to think I'm better than they are (Ed and Bush)."

"That's a long ways around the corner," Gable said. "Nothing surprises me anymore. It will totally depend on next fall. Whoever looks like they can whip the other guy will just about be able to do what they want to do. But I will reserve consultation."

BANACH WAS BOTHERED by injuries last season at heavyweight and said his most physical match last season came in the NCAA tournament against Oklahoma's Steve "Dr. Death" Williams. "That was in the semifinals. I was kind of dejected at the time." Banach lost to Williams, 7-4, before wrestling back for his third-place finish

Banach, who said he currently weighs 205, did not discount the possibility of making a further weight cut to 177. He last wrestled at that weight as a senior in high school.

"I don't have to carry the extra weight around. I have a different philosophy on cutting weight. It's a state of mind."

Islanders still afloat following game one

Arts/Entertainment

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Coach Al Arbour of the New York Islanders plans on making some adjustments when his team, leading one game to none, hosts the Vancouver Canucks tonight in the second game of the Stanley Cup finals.

"We're going to try for better results," said Arbour, still unhappy over his team's play, despite a 6-5 overtime victory in game one, which left the Isles three wins shy of their thirdstraight Cup.

"Everybody has injuries at this time of the season, and this thing may become a survival of the fittest. I'm not a boxing matchmaker like Don King. We play hockey and we should stick to playing hockey."

Arbour was referring to Saturday night's fight-marred opening match. He was further irritated by Vancouver forward Dave "Tiger" Williams' remarks about Islander players charging Canucks goaltender Richard Brodeur. Bob Nystrom slammed Brodeur to the ice once and Duane Sutter skated right over him another time.

"WE DON'T RUN at anyone and we don't have our guys hold people half the length of the rink when they're carrying the puck," Arbour said.

The Islanders' unhappiness with the clutching Canucks tactics showed when Bob Bourne, the New York left winger, observed, "I feel (Vancouver interim coach) Roger Neilson has them feeling and playing in the style they think they can win. It's up to us to go out there and take it away from them."

Islanders center Bryan Trottier, who set a Stanley Cup record for assists with his 20th in the opening contest. said Arbour "made some adjustments which we make every game. I think We like pressure and I feel we'll react to the Vancouver pressure.' Neilson, who was an assistant before taking over as head coach in mid-March when Harry Neale was suspended, observed, "We are simply going to the rink and playing the same way all three of our coaches have been instructing the guys all year. "I had expected Harry Neale to return to the bench but he said, 'Stay there, I don't want to screw things up. Ron Smith, the other assistant coach, and myself aren't going to change anything. I'm not even concerned about their power play unless they get two or three in the next game."

In the fall semester, Banach will be a resident assistant in his dormitory. "If Idon't use the job to my advantage and finish up with good grades, it's all been done in vain. Wrestling doesn't mean as much to me as it used to. It's a pretty demanding sport and I'm not as motivated as I was before. "Gabes lets me do what I want. He knows he's gotten a lot of mileage out of me. But I will never put wrestling out of my mind."

BANACH SAID FOLLOWING completion of his degree in General Studies with a minor in computor studies, he plans to join the army.

"I hope Dan accepts me as a member of the team even if I make this cut," Banach said. "Looking back on wrestling at heavyweight, I'm not mad I did, but not overly happy. It helped me become a better person." The three national champions at 190 may not be Gable's lone trouble as the same situation is developing at 126. Defending 118-pound national champ Barry Davis will likely move up to 126, where redshirted Tim Riley, an All-American two years ago, returns. Last year's regular 126-pounder, Mark Triztino, is also back.

If Ed Banach becomes the regular 190-pounder, a replacement at 177 will have to be found. That may be left up to recently-signed recruit David Martin. Steve Wilbur, a reserve heavyweight, would likely be Lou Banach's replacement.

Welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard was reported in "good spirits" at Johns Hopkins Hospital Monday with get-well cards arriving from around the world and speculation mounting over whether he would — or should — return to the ring.

BALTIMORE

Doctors pronounced as "successful" the two hours of surgery Leonard underwent at the hospital's renowned Wilmer Eye Institute Sunday to repair a partially detached retina in his left eye. The doctors sidestepped questions about whether the champion would return to the ring where he has won almost $40 million during a spectacularly successful career.

But Truman Tuttle, who guided Leonard during his early days in Golden Gloves and AAU competition, said Leonard should end his boxing career.

"What is the price of an eye?" Tuttle asked. "Is it a million dollars, $10 million dollars.

"WHAT WITH HIS financial situation, I say the heck with it. The kid is financially set for life, and that is all you go into boxing for. So why give up an eye? Sooner or later he will lose the eye, if he keeps fighting." Charles Brotman, a spokesman for

Leonard, said the fighter was in "good spirits" after regaining consciousness

Sugar Ray Leonard:

Expressed appreciation to the president for his call and concern.

Sunday night. He was visited by his family, including wife, Juanita, and son, Ray Jr., and members of his fighting entourage.

"It's a matter of healing," Brotman said. "We will not be exposing Ray to anyone but the family, and he will be in the hospital for the next five to seven days. As he improves, he will go home (Mitchellville, Md.) and just recuperate."

Ronald Reagan: Conveyed his hope that Leonard's career will continue

Meanwhile, get-well cards poured in from across the globe, a hospital spokesman said, including one from Argentina and one from Sweden. Among the calls Leonard received was one from President Reagan in Chicago. The White House press office said Reagan telephoned "to convey his good wishes as Mr. Leonard recovers from surgery.

"THE PRESIDENT conveyed his hope that Mr. Leonard's career will continue and Mr. Leonard expressed his appreciation to the president for his call and concern."

Dr. Ronald Michels, the ophthalmologist who operated on Leonard, said he was "cautiously optimistic" the 25-year-old fighter would make a full recovery.

Leonard's associates said it would be four to six months before Leonard decides whether to return to boxing. He had been scheduled to fight Roger Stafford in a Friday night title bout in Buffalo, N.Y., but that fight was canceled because of the surgery.

"The only thing I can say is that it's a very personal decision that Leonard himself will have to make," Brotman said. "No one tells Ray what to do." "Between Janks Morton (Leonard's trainer and confidant) and Angelo Dundee (the fighter's manager), they will discuss all the ramifications, and then Ray will make up his own mind as to what he would like to to."

For some time, members of Leonard's family, particularly his wife, have been trying to persuade him to retire.

Brotman said Leonard has wisely invested his millions of dollars in fight earnings and is not financially obliged to return to the ring.

ISLANDERS LEFT winger John Tonelli agreed with Neilson that Vancouver would not change its tactics.

"Any team will do anything to win the Stanley Cup and I expect Vancouver to come out better then they were Saturday, which means we have to play better also," he said.

Brodeur, who was dealt away by Islanders General Manager Bill Torrey for a fifth-round draft choice two years ago, said, "Everybody has tried to run at me in the playoffs, even before this series. There is no sense to worry about it. My guys will protect me. Retaliation is not my game. Nystrom hit me accidentally, but I really don't think Duane Sutter did.

"The next I remember is our trainer waking me up with smelling salts."

Avoiding letdown aim of Spurs in game two of Western finals

United Press International

The San Antonio Spurs hope a lot of hings change tonight when they take on the Los Angeles Lakers in the second game of the NBA Western Conference finals.

First, they'd like to shoot free throws with a little more accuracy than a high school team. They didn't in Sunday's first game, missing 13-of-39 attempts.

They would also like to contain reserve forward Bob McAdoo, whom they overlooked in their scouting report. McAdoo scored 21 points in 28 minutes, hurting the Spurs repeatedly with clutch baskets.

AND THEY WOULD prefer to avoid a letdown like they had in the second period Sunday, when they made only eight of 27 field-goal attempts (29.6 percent) and five of 12 free throws. Oh yes. It would also be nice to have hot water in their showers after the game. Sunday they had ice water. But the Lakers, who turned a close game into an easy one in the final minutes and posted a 128-117 victory in game one, don't plan to let the Spurs back into the best-of-seven series. "We're not going to take a step backward for anybody," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley.

"If we're going to do anything in the playoffs," said San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck, "we have to find an answer to Bob McAdoo."

McAdoo thought he saw through Albeck's statements.

"I think he's saying that is a psyche job," he said. "I'm not going for it."

IN BOSTON, the post-mortems have all been said and one common theme exists: No one expects a repeat of game one when the Celtics and Philadelphia 76ers resume their playoff series Wednesday night.

The Celtics, of course, would like nothing better than another 40-point rout to take a 2-0 in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals. They'd even settle for a one-point victory. The 76ers are hoping that whoever showed up Sunday for the impersonation act of the men in red uniforms will not be back — forever.

"We really have to keep ourselves level-headed about this whole thing," said Celtics center Rick Robey, who helped lead the Celtics on their way to their astonishing 121-81 decision. "We're going to have to come out working even harder because you can be sure Philadelphia will play better."

"I figured the game would be close, but it's only one game and we'll be back Wednesday," Philadelphia center Darryl Dawkins said. "We just have to play a little harder and play the type of basketball we're capable of."

"We'll have to play much better at every phase of the game," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "We'll have to come right back at them."

Track's 'intrinsic' values equally as important to Iowa's Stormo

By Thomas W. Jargo Staff Writer

To Iowa's senior Kay Stormo, personal achievements, school records, awards and individual honors are all secondary to the "intrinsics" of her sport.

Stormo recently won the Gillespie award as she was voted the outstanding track and cross country athlete for this season by her teammates. She also won the first-ever Robert F. Ray award for showing academic excellence and team leadership during her four years at the UI.

Robert F. Ray is the dean of the Division of Continuing Education at the UI, and his award includes a year's tuition for graduate school. Stormo carries a 3.53 cumulative grade point average into her final semester here, and hopes to graduate at the end of the summer with a degree in computer science. She is also a three-time Big Ten champion, two-time All American and holder of four individual school records as well as being on three school record-breaking relay teams.

SHE IS ONE of the top-ranked middle distance runners in the country and has been in every national track competition in her four years at Iowa, according to Head Coach Jerry Hassard. She is the International Track and Field Association champion in the 880-yard run this season.

Hassard says Stormo has contributed significantly to his track squad in her four years here, both on and off the track. "She captained our 10th-place AIAW cross country team in 1980," he said. "She gave us strong team leadership." Stormo accepts all these honors in stormo accepts all these honors in a low-key way and puts more emphasis on the "things you learn besides exact running. I really enjoyed the intrinsic things like getting along with the coach, getting along with my teammates, getting to know other people and traveling."

She is a modest recipient of all her honors and is a true team performer. She respects her teammates "who don't get their names in the newspaper. They may never win a race or set a school record, but they work just as hard, or even harder, and enjoy it as much as I do."

STORMO WON conference championships in the 600-meter run in 1979, the 800-meter run in 1980 and the 880-meter run this season. She won All American honors as an individual this season with her second-place finish in the 880 at the See Stormo, page 2B

UI-bound preps receive honors

Two high school preps who have signed national letters of intent to attend the UI this fall have been named to high school All-American teams by Inside magazine.

Larry Station, a linebacker from Omaha, Neb., has been named to the "Coaches Super Blues" first-team defensive unit by the national recruiting magazine.

Brad Lohaus, a 7-foot center from Phoenix Ariz. has been named to the fifth-team All-American basketball squad.

Station, from Omaha Central High School, recently threw the discus 202-feet-1 at a Nebraska state track meet. The distance set a new state record and also padded Station's nation-leading distance in the event.

Basketball tourney deadline set

The deadline for players and teams to enter in the Hiawatha Invitational AAU Junior Olympic basketball tournament in Rochester, Minn., is June 1st

The entry fee is $150 plus a $50 deposit, and the tournament is open to anyone meeting the age requirements.

The junior men's division is for those players 19 years of age and younger, and the tournament is June 9-11. The girl's senior division is for those 18 and under and takes place June 17-19.

For further information, contact the Minnesota Junior Olympic basketball committee at (507) 281-3966 or (507) 288-5383.

national meet. She ran the open leg of the fourthplace All American distance medley team at the same meet.

She holds individual school records in the 600, 800, 1,000 and 1,500-meter events. She ran in the distance medley, mile and 2-mile relay teams, all school records.

Hassard says the most unusual characteristic that Stormo possesses is her ability to "continue to improve in relationship to her competition after four years of collegiate competition. She continues to improve while women's athletics continues to improve.

As her collegiate career comes to a close with the conference meet this weekend and nationals two weeks after that, Stormo is beginning to put more emphasis on graduation and future employment and not running.

"I hope to come back for my masters in a few years," she said. "I'm not going to put a lot of pressure on myself to keep competing, because I'm not sure where I'll be or if I'll have a job. I'll keep jogging.

"I came here to work hard." she added. "I had no long-term goals and never looked that far ahead. I'll probably continue on with that attitude.'

The Joffrey at its best on Saturday and Sunday

By Marcia Butzel Staff Writer

The Saturday and Sunday perfor-mances of the Joffrey Ballet showed the company at its best; the touring group by then accustomed to Hancher.

The leads of "Postcards" reappeared in the dramatic roles of "The Green Table" (Philip Jerry was Death) and Denise Jackson was also seen in the similarly demanding, melodramatic "Transfigured Night" of Jiri Kylian.

Along with the wonderful switch made by Ann Marie De Angelo from drawing room lady ("La Vivandiere") to beach girl lout ("Deuce Coupe II"), such casting revealed the performers' artistic range. Yet, as the whole weekend confirmed, it is more the total concept of the dance work one remembers with the Joffrey than the individual performer or ensemble.

It is obvious the company is trying to relieve the marked stratification of previous years' presentations, which were slick, entertaining pop material or researched revivals of underperformed 19th-and 20th-century classics. Czech choreographer Kylian's works, for instance, fit neither category, nor do Laura Dean's, and Twyla Tharp's "Deuce Coupe II" is actually about the two types as different aesthetics in modern culture.

THE SIGNATURE revival of the Joffrey, Kurt Jooss's "The Green Table" (1932), was one of several dark works performed, along with two Kylian performance of Schoenberg's ballets (one in memory of John Cranko) and Dean's "Night." It was in- tained painful and revealing studies of triguing to have both "The Green couplehood, but it was too long and this Table" and "Night" on the same program.

Unusually, evitable, natural destroyer. Mythic, the Joffrey knows how to dance into dance image that we gradually come to see the work as given in the natural order of things; "The Green Table's" irony is that we lose sight of the human cause. Hence, while the return of the silly diplomats is dramatically deflating after Death's last calvary across the stage, it is of major narrative importance in recalling the human part of fate.

"Night," however, has no such closure. It offers no contextual motive for its menace (other than martial arts costume). All the more disturbing for this, it is relentless and stunning. Not originally planned for Iowa City, the local premiere was our first postmodernist import. Dean's dervish turns, non-dance movements and blank expressions are symptomatic of this 'school," but her post-modernism functioned also as spectacle. The Joffrey performs the work on pointe; with silk pajamas and diamond earrings, it has a look of cold black elegance - not the sneakers and haphazardness of earlier post-modernism.

SUNDAY'S MATINEE opened and closed with two cult works for full company, Gerald Arpino's "Light Rain" and "Deuce Coupe II." "La Vivandiere" appeared again (with a better Julian Montaner), and Kylian's "Transfigured Night" was done to fine 'Verklaerte Nacht." This piece conexcess distracted the audience. It starts out in Baghdad, you see, way back in 1823 when things were pretty rustic, and Arabs did nasty things like sell women as slaves. Early on there's a shot of Christopher Atkins - no, wait: Anyway, he sure looks like that dreamy, blonde, curly-headed star of The Blue Lagoon, certainly my fave flick of 1980. Chris looks a lot like Willie Aames, the real star of Paradise, or maybe I should say Willie looks a lot like Chris. You don't suppose this was on purpose?

Down bazaar way, the camera picks up a young, brown-eyed, dark-haired beauty. Could it be ... nah, it couldn't be Brooke Shields. She's still pushing her Calvin Kleins. This pretender to the throne is named Phoebe Cates. You don't suppose this was on purpose, too?

Capitol Planning Commission Monday confirmed plans to construct an underground historical museum on the capitol complex grounds.

Commission Chairman Glenn Brockett of Marshalltown said despite reports by the news media, a group of East Des Moines businessmen has not asked members to locate the museum in the downtown area near the river. He said questions of jurisdiction might arise if the building is not located on the capitol grounds.

Brockett asked for and received a commission vote "strongly in favor of the site already selected.

DES MOINES (UPI) - The Iowa decided to erect a monument near the Lucas State Office building in memory of the law enforcement officers who have lost their lives in the line of duty. Members toured four possible sites before voting on the grassy area across from the Lucas Building.

> CONSTRUCTION of a new historical building was decided when the state received a bequest of about $5 million from the late Glenn G. Herrick, president and owner of G.G. Herrick Paving Co. He willed the money with the requirement it be used for "one or more public improvements of relative permanence.

Earlier, the commission voted to construct the building on the capitol grounds, south of the Court Avenue viaduct. The three-story structure will be underground. The historical library and archives will remain in the old building. The archives currently is located in a separate building.

Commission members said the new building, plus work on the viaduct, is estimated to cost $15 million.

General Services Director Stanley McCausland said the "code is silent as to who is to site the building." He added Herrick did not place restrictions on where the building must be built but conceded there would be a "lot of dissension if the building is moved off the capitol complex."
