ght; Argentines raise white flag at Stanley

British troops routed Argentine defenders on the outskirts of Stanley Monday and white flags over the besieged capital of the Falklands signaled the start of surrender talks to end the 73-day war over the desolate South Atlantic islands.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told cheering members of Parliament in London that surrender talks followed a cease-fire declared at 2 p.m. Iowa time with sudden swiftness after a 2-week siege of the capital.

Looking flushed and radiant, Britain's "Iron Lady" then joined a group of citizens triumphantly singing patriotic songs outside her No. 10 Downing Street official residence.

"Everyone was so together," she told reporters before joining the celebrants. "We knew what we had to do, and we went about it and did it."

IN BUENOS AIRES, an angry crowd of about 100 people gathered outside the presidential palace, calling for the resignation of the military government of President Leopoldo Galtieri.

"The people don't surrender," the crowd chanted, while waving blue and white Argentine flags. "Out with the traitors, the firing squad for them." In the apparent end of air, naval and ground fighting in one of the most remote areas of the world, Britain counted 240-250 dead and Argentina sustained an estimated 700 deaths. Independent Radio News in London said 30-40 British soldiers died during the weekend advance.

Military analysts in London estimated the price tag of the fighting, for both countries, at more than $3

Argentine troops, their backs to the sea, gallantly defended the tiny capital of Stanley for two weeks. British troops Monday overran Tumbledown southwest of the capital, and another ridge to the northwest, turning the assault toward the capital itself. Many of the defenders threw down their arms and fled.

BRITISH DEFENSE Secretary John Nott said there was a "full retreat (by) large numbers" of Argentine troops back into Stanley.

First word of the cease-fire came from an Argentine military official who said it would last for 18 hours, ending at 8 a.m. Iowa time Tuesday, apparently to give the ruling military junta time to consider the surrender

The cease-fire was negotiated between the commanders of the British Britain captured three strategic outposts within 2 miles of Stanley.

The final British thrust came on the third day of a decisive push for the capital — the Argentines' last foothold on the islands, which they invaded

"AFTER SUCCESSFUL attacks last night, Gen. (Jeremy) Moore decided to press forward and the Argentinians retreated," Thatcher told an emergency session of Parliament.

When our forces reached the outskirts of Port Stanley, large numbers of Argentine soldiers threw down their

"There are reported to be flying white flags over Port Stanley ... Talks now in progress between Gen. (Mario) Menendez and our deputy commander, Brig. (Charles) Walters, about the surrender of Argentine forces on East and West Falklands," she said. The House of Commons burst

The prime minister said British troops had been ordered not to fire except in self defense. Small crowds gathered in the chilly night air outside Mountain and Mount William, 2 miles Parliament as the exuberant members and ministers left early to celebrate.

Britain hopes for U.S. defense aid

LONDON - Britain hopes the United States and other nations will help in the future defense of the Falkland Islands, but still expects to carry the main load, government officials said Monday.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her Cabinet are giving increasing thought to the Falklands' future now that a British victory on the islands seems imminent. Despite strong U.S. pressure, of-Falklands. "Argentina has grown up, ficials said Thatcher has ruled out any and Argentine forces shortly after and as such, we have to take a series of role for Argentina in a future administration. But the government reportedly hopes that the United States, and perhaps "sympathetic" Latin American countries such as Brazil, Chile and Uruguay, might be persuaded to help out financially and

The British officials also said the government is concerned about the cost and military burden of indefinitely maintaining a garrison, planes and warships on the Falklands.

THATCHER reportedly discussed the plan to share responsibility for the Falklands with President Reagan during his recent European visit. But officials said he was reluctant to make commitments that might damage reported U.S. plans for an anti-Communist bloc in the South Atlantic.

One plan reportedly favored by the British government would give the estimated 600 islanders who remain there some form of self-government, guaranteed by the continued presence of British and possibly multinational defense forces.

The government has asked Lord Shackleton, a former Labor government minister, to update his 1976 report on future economic development of the Falklands and their dependent territories - South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands

Government officials said the islands will come under British military administration immediately after they are repossessed from Argentina. They said residents may need from six months to a year to recover from the trauma of the Argentine invasion and the reconquest of the islands by

Staff up for phased retirement

Without spilling a drop of blood, the UI and state Board of Regents staff have settled their differences over a matter that caused a serious rift between the two groups last winter. The board staff recommended in the June docket that the UI phased retirement policy be extended to professional and scientific staff members on an experimental basis for five

The policy was approved only for faculty members in December after a battle between the UI and the regents.

But the board staff, worried about the possible effects on a personnel bill that threatened to swallow the regents' personnel in the state's system, recommended to the board that they exclude the professional and scientific staff.

THE RETIREMENT incentive plan would operate within established budget constraints and on the condition that it can be reviewed in one year in case any problems arise within the Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey said Monday the decision to recommend approval of the proposal was due to several reasons.

"Several things are different now," Richey said. "I've had a series of meetings with other state department heads and there has been a very keen interest in how this will work."

IT IS important to apply the program to a group, such as the professional and scientific staff, that is more closely aligned to other state employees to see how it will work. The plan, if successful, can then serve as a model for other agencies, Richey said.

Cilek's son wins vote for supervisors post

By Elizabeth McGrory

Michael J. Cilek was elected Monday to fill the vacancy left by his mother's death on the Johnson County Board of Supervisors.

County Auditor Tom Slockett,
Clerk of Courts Mary Conklin and Recorder John O'Neill chose Cilek over the 10 other candidates who were vying for the position Lorada Cilek vacated when she died of heart failure on May 28.

Cilek will fill his mother's term until Nov. 2, when the general election will determine who will fill the remainder of her term, which expires Dec. 31, 1984.

"I'm very pleased to have the nomination," Cilek said. "I'm looking forward to doing a good

"SHE AND I have a lot of the same philosophies," Cilek said. It is "unfair" to say he would make a decision based on how he thought his mother might have voted, but he said he would make his decisions in the same manner.

She based her decisions on the facts, she was open and willing to listen to all sides of an issue before she made a decision, which is what he aims to do, Cilek said.

Hundreds arrested at U.N.

NEW YORK — Waves of chanting anti-nuclear protesters Monday burned flags and tried to block the entrances to the U.N. missions of five major world powers, including the United States and the Soviet Union, in a massive display of civil disobedience.

An army of police arrested more than 1,600 demonstrators and reported only a few violent incidents. Protesters ranged from teen-agers to veteran militants and echoed the non-violent Vietnam protests of the mid-1960s.

Soviets denounce Israelis

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union demanded Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon Monday and denounced its "brazen aggression," pledging unspecified help to the "Arab cause" in the

In an official statement, the Kremlin specifically warned Israel not to go too far in its sweep through Lebanon because the territory is so close to the the Soviet Union's southern border.

Bombings mar soccer match

MADRID, Spain - Four bombs damaged Defense Ministry buildings Monday and Basque separatists blew up a railroad power station and shot and killed a civil guard in the north, raising fears of major terrorist attacks during the World Cup soccer championship.

From the outset, security has been a major concern for the organizers of the 14-city, 24team tournament in Spain which kicked off

40 killed in Lebanon blasts

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Bombs exploded in two Lebanese cities Monday in front of the offices of leftist militia organizations - one of them a pro-Palestinian group - killing or wounding at least 40 people, police said.

Police said 22 people were wounded, at least 15 of them critically, when a booby-trapped car exploded in a densely populated residential area of Moslem West Beirut.

Schmidt backs disarmament

UNITED NATIONS - West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt told the U.N. General Assembly Monday the Soviet Union and its allies had deployed hundreds of intermediate-range nuclear weapons, "many of them targeted on my country.

Schmidt said his country is giving unqualified support to the proposal that the United States and the Soviet Union eliminate all intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Watt discusses lands sale

WASHINGTON - Interior Secretary James Watt said Monday the government hopes to raise "billions" by selling up to 5 percent of all federal lands, but he promised national parks and wildlife areas will not be endangered.

At the same time, higher fees will be imposed for public use of parks and other federal lands. Watt told a Senate energy and natural resources subcommittee workshop.

U.S. offers Mideast solution

WASHINGTON - The United States proposed Monday that an Israeli pullout from Lebanon be coupled with a Syrian withdrawal and "subservience" to the Lebanese government by Palestinian groups still there.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig said the United States hopes to use the fighting in Lebanon as a "catalyst" to the Middle East peace process, including Palestinian autonomy talks.

Budget talks may be delayed

WASHINGTON - Disputes over the accuracy of 1983 deficit estimates and the failure to provide certain documents threatened Monday to delay congressional work on a final 1983 budget resolution.

Court appoints guardian in Gilroy suit

By Jennifer Marme-Ruggeberg

The widow of Vincent R. Lalla filed papers in Johnson County District Court Monday that will provide an avenue in pursuing her $1 million suit against Michael Otto Gilrov.

Gilroy was convicted of homocide in the death of Lalla. Mary P. Lalla, the administrator of her husband's estate, filed suit on Nov. 16, 1981, asking for $1 million in actual and punitive damages for the loss of her

But that suit was blocked because Gilroy did not respond to the suit. Lalla asked the court to appoint a guardian for Gilroy so the court proceedings on the suit can move on.

The application filed Monday states "that in order for Plaintiff to move this case towards trial it is necessary that a Guardian ad Litem be appointed for Defendant since he is currently confined as an inmate at the Iowa State Penitentiary in Fort Madison, Iowa."

THE COURT found "that it is in the best in-point a guardian, C. Joseph Holland, to represent Gilroy's interests in connection with the

The suit asks $1 million for "the lost financial support which Vincent R. Lalla would have contributed to his estate throughout his natural life" and for "the society, companionship, affection, services and support of Vincent R. Lalla lost by Mary P. Gilroy shot and killed Lalla March 12, 1979, at the Loyal Order of the Moose, 2910 murder. Lalla states in her suit "the action of Defendant in shooting and killng Vincent R. Lalla was malicious, wanton and reckless."

Charles W. Greeley, 2215 Burge Hall, was charged with indecent exposure Monday.

Greeley was arrested Sunday after a man on Davenport Street complained to police that a man "standing in front of the house would not leave, was yelling remarks and pulled his pants down " in front of the resident and his girlfriend. Bail is set at $1,000 and the preliminary hearing is June 21.

Case against Poulson

The American spirit of rugged individualism still thrives in Iowa City, epitomized by Paul Poulson — a local businessman who has cited George Washington and the American Revolution in response to a suit filed by the city. According to Poulson, the Johnson County District Court does not have the legal jurisdiction to enforce zoning regulations, because its judges are not elected and hence "in direct violation of the accused's right to a republican form of government."

This language was used in rebuttal to the city's request that Poulson reconstruct an earthen berm used to hide junked vehicles from public view. Poulson, the current owner of Ace Auto Recyclers, is responsible for removing the pile of dirt. The former owners had made an agreement with the city to provide a reasonable screening device in order to prevent the junkyard from becoming a neighborhood eyesore. The city contends that Poulson is still bound by the provisions of the agreement.

Although this case is still in the courts it does not take the wisdom of Solomon to make the right decision. Poulson is wrong on both counts. The Iowa City Code of Ordinances specifically states that auto wreckers, junk yards and salvage storage must be screened from the public view. Poulson is in direct violation of the

As to his contention that the court has no jurisdiction because its officials are not elected - the absurdity is all too obvious. If Poulson is correct, every decision reached by authorities as important as the Supreme Court of the United States to the lowliest fine imposed by traffic magistrates are invalid, because they were all made by appointed officials. The Johnson County District Court will surely reach a similar finding and compel Poulson to replace the berm.

New Amtrak route?

Officials of Amtrak, the national passenger rail service, last week inspected a possible new route across central Iowa for its San Francisco Zephyr. The east-west route through Clinton, Cedar Rapids and Ames would replace one that now crosses more sparsely-populated southern Iowa.

Route changes are rare, and the decision won't be made by Amtrak officials for several months. But the change would be a good one for Amtrak, for rail passengers and for the state of Iowa.

An Iowa Department of Transportation spokesman predicted the new route would double the number of passengers boarding Amtrak trains annually in the state, from 20,000 to 40,000. That is because 950,000 of Iowa's 3 million people live within a half-hour drive of the proposed route, as opposed to 250,000 for the current

One problem with the proposed route change is that the North Western Railway line between Clinton and Council Bluffs, over which the Zephyr would travel, is not up to Amtrak standards. The tracks would have to be upgraded at a possible cost of $75 million.

But benefits from the route change would be worth the cost. First, $75 million spent on rail work could only help the state's ailing economy, particularly if it meant the creation of new jobs. Second, Iowa's rail lines will need to be improved sooner or later anyway, and investment in the new route would make a good start on that inevitable necessity. Third, the new route would improve the profit potential of passenger rail service in Iowa, perhaps spurring state, federal and private investment in railroads.

Rail travel is cost-efficient, safe, comfortable and fast compared to automobile and bus travel. Improved service is in the long-term interests of both the state and nation, and it is to be hoped that federal officials will see the wisdom of the proposed route change before making their decision.

Budget cruelty

The Republican-sponsored budget plan passed last week by the U.S. House of Representatives is dangerous and cruel. The plan would cut increases in military spending ($1.5 trillion over five years) by $28.5 billion over three years, but it would cut social programs by almost $100 billion.

In its drive to cut social spending, the Reagan administration has forgotten a crucial history lesson. The welfare state that President Reagan attacks is a capitalist invention. They recognized that a large, poverty-stricken, hopeless mass of people would be more receptive to the seduction of communism and more

Welfare programs were designed by liberal humanitarians and conservative realists to reduce such threats. But the Reagan budget ignores both kindness and pragmatism. With black teenage unemployment at an all-time high, almost 50 percent, the Reagan budget cut summer youth employment funds. Despite pious sermons on the work ethic, the Reagan budget cuts social programs for the working poor so severely that many now support their families better by quitting their jobs and going totally on

Such cuts in social programs, especially during a recession, are not only cruel but stupid. Sophisticated military hardware will not mend lives blighted by poverty, hunger and a lack of education, and it can not be used to fight riots in city streets. This country fought a civil war because it could not endure half slave and half free; it also can not endure with the divisions between rich and poor and black and white growing deeper and wider.

The House budget must now be reconciled with the Senate budget. And although the Senate plan is also cruel, it is less so than the House plan, and it should prevail.

Election year budget hassles

STUDY OF ALL the hassles on the federal budget that have come from Washington in the past few months proves that the entire exercise is a golden example of our government at

In recent years, the "battle" on the budget hasn't been too bad. But it has grown steadily worse each year, and this might be attributed to the mere design of the process itself.

At any one time, three different budgets are being worked on by the federal government. At present, those in Washington are planning the budget for fiscal year 1983, which begins a few months from now; are operating under the budget for fiscal year 1982; and are still reviewing and auditing what they operated under for fiscal year 1981. And this is the normal procedure.

As far as the normal schedule for the formation of a federal government goes, according to what I was taught in an American Politics course on this very campus, "normal" is a questionable term.

THE FIRST planning by the Office of Management and Budget begins on the average up to 16 months before it is finally implemented. The individual agencies submit plans to OMB around September, with OMB's first estimates trickling to Congress around November. And as a rule, the President usually submits his first proposed budget plan to our representatives in January, several months before the fiscal year begins

You might be thinking, "Gee, with a system like that, no wonder they're having such a tough time figuring out a

But those have been the rules for years. Why all of a sudden, or so it seems, have we found ourselves with temporary funding measures, designed to keep the government running for a few more days? Why have government

Some thoughts on visiting Dachau

By Minda Zetlin

Germany was odd. I felt more out of place there than I've ever felt anywhere else. I was traveling with my Canadian friend Kim, and between us we spoke French, some Spanish and a smattering of Italian. We'd been able to communicate everywhere else on our travels, but we hit the language barrier head-on as soon as we got on the train to Germany.

The conductor seemed friendly enough, but he didn't speak any of our languages, so he kept talking to, or rather at us in German. We would have to laugh: he might as well have been speaking Swahili. But it was like that the whole time we were in Germany. They would all speak German to us, with a sort of maniacal conviction that if they just kept at it long enough, we'd eventually understand

The people were mostly no-nonsense and not particularly friendly. Of course there were exceptions, like the two 17year-olds who talked to us over their breakfast of french fries and beer. (They drink beer at all hours of the day in Munich; I think more beer is drunk per person there than in Iowa City, unbelievable as it sounds).

THERE WAS a lady who politely interrupted our conversation about stops to tell us we were heading in the wrong direction. But there were also two schoolkids on another bus who made loud and mocking imitations of us trying to pronounce German places, and the youth hostel where things got stolen and they made us leave at 8:30 a.m., despite the snow. Munich itself is a collection of 1950s-style buildings, a chilling reminder that Germany was half blown to bits by 1945. We decided

For our last afternoon in town, we visited Dachau, the old cencentration camp tucked neatly into the Munich suburbs. The center barracks have been transformed into a museum, with an astounding collection of information, documents and photos. Their pamphlet reads: "It would be presumptuous to state that the exhibit is complete in any respect, but an honest attempt has been made to show objectively what happened in Dachau and other concentration camps.

Though Auschwitz was the biggest camp, Dachau was the first, and was perhaps especially notorious for that reason. A British reporter wrote an article at the time: "Four Weeks in the Hands of Hitler's Hell-Hounds: the Nazi Torture Camp of Dachau.'

NOW IT'S FULL of old anti-Semitic posters, letters from high-ranking Nazis to each other, and letters also from inmates to members of their families who were inmates of other camps. They were allowed to write once a month at one point, and the letters are startlingly ordinary: "Are you well? I tried to send some shirts to you

Records of high-altitude and lowtemperature experiments - "the subjects tend to scream while freezing." Hundreds of photographs — a man with a shaved head after he'd hung himself from a ladder, another had thrown himself on the live wire fencing around the camp. These two were captioned simply "Suicide." Pictures of people with their skin hanging loose, and the rations list: two bowls of soup and a bit of vegetable a day. The work schedule, which started at 6 a.m. and ended at 7

But after all this, I somehow felt distant from the event, as if this were another safe little museum; it was so easy to forget that we were there, that this was where it had happened

Moratorium wins first vote

In a special meeting Monday night, the Iowa City Council approved the first consideration of a moratorium that could limit multi-family dwelling construction in a central city neighborhood.

About 30 residents from the area attended the meeting and most indicated support of the proposal.

The council wants to limit construction in an area that's bounded roughly on the west by Van Buren Street, on the north by Jefferson Street, on the east by Summit and Lucas streets and on the south by Bowery Street.

The council approved the first consideration of the proposal on a vote of 5 to 1. Councilor Larry Lynch voted against it, and Mayor Mary Neuhauser was

THE PROPOSAL must survive two more considerations before it can be enacted. If approved, the moratorium will limit construction in the area for up to six months. That will give city planners time to determine whether the proposal should become per-

'We have a convenient and good neighborhood for family living," said Helen Gay. "Most of those houses are lived in by the owners. It's a stable neighborhood. We find that folks who own their homes live here longer. We get to know each other, we get to be friends and we like it that way.'

"It's easy to turn a fine residential area into a slum," said David Arbogast, "but it's difficult to turn a slum back into a fine residential area." BUT ONE RESIDENT spoke in opposition, saying a permanent move to rezone the area will lower property value. "I would prefer it if you left it the way it is," said E.H. Borchardt. "The traffic doesn't bother me. The people next door don't bother me.

"It's when you interfere with a person's property

Councilor John Balmer said he hopes South Johnson Street will be excluded from the area before the proposal reaches its third reading. "We must see some compromises," he said. "Unless South Johnson is excluded from that area, I'll vote against

'Joseph' a corny, clever musical

By Roxanne T. Mueller Acting Arts/Entertainment Editor

GARRISON, Ia. - Before Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber got into writing about cats and Argentinian dictators, the successful songwriting team drew inspiration from more spiritual sources. Jesus Christ, Superstar caused a sensation a decade or so ago, and the earlier, lesser-known Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat is their version of the story of the Biblical Joseph, interpreter of dreams and favorite of Egyptian

While the team's Evita is still running strong on Broadway and Cats is being readied for the New York boards, a new version of Joseph, greatly expanded from its 15-minute 1968 origins, is one of the surprise hits of the season ber and Rice's better shows. Inex-

there. While the similarly-themed Godspell ran for years in New York, it never made it to a Broadway house. Now, however, the Bible is apparently chic enough for sophisticated audiences, and Webber and Rice are once again cashing in.

The Old Creamery Theater here is offering Joseph in a show that's so well mounted and infectious it's just this side of irresistible. The songs are a conglomeration of country, rumba, French cafe and old-time rock 'n' roll, with a little bit of vaudeville thrown in among the ballads, so it fails to offer the thematic cohesion evident in Web-

'farmer' slip by, and lyrics like "The greatest man since Noah/Just goes to howa" make you cringe.

NEVERTHELESS, religion goes down easy when it's packaged in fluff. Director Thomas Peter Johnson has stuffed the show with sight gags, inside jokes and just enough sincerity to make it work. Joseph's 11 brothers come out wearing seed corn caps and overalls, while the Ishmaelites who agree to buy Joseph as a slave (with MasterCard) wear Groucho Marx

The mix of corn and cleverness is backed by a young cast brimming over with energy and enthusiasm. I love the way Marquetta Senters as the Narrator puts over a song, and Gregg Ward's Joseph is sweet of face and white engineer boots with red fringe, gets to let loose with an Elvis imitation in one of the show's more successful parodies.

The limit to the seriousness of Joseph is evident in the last song of the first act. Joseph is imprisoned as a stranger in Egypt, despairing of life and faith. His cry of anguish, however, is counterpointed by a group of cheerleaders with pom pons who come out and urge him to "Go Go Go Joseph." Joseph doesn't engage your mind so much as it soft-pedals simple moral lessons - do good things and you, too, can sing and dance your way into heaven.

Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat continues on the Old Creamery Theater's main stage through July 25.

Major league shake-up a possibility baseball club owners unanimously endorsed a program Monday to restructure the commissioner's office and create a unanimity of all 26 clubs.

The series of proposals — ranging from the elimination of the unanimous rule to creating a complete corporate structure - were called "the most important constructive changes proposed," during commisioner Bowie Kuhn's 13 years in baseball.

The decision came at the conclusion of the first day of a two-day special meeting called for the restructuring of the commissioner's office and to seek means of finding additional sources of revenue to compete with the entertain-

CHICAGO (UPI) — The thought of establishing a club record for most consecutive defeats never entered into the mind of Chicago Cubs manager Lee Elia Monday

The first year Cubs skipper insisted he wasn't concerned his club would lose its 14th straight game even though they had committed six errors yielded 11 runs and faced having the go-ahead run up to bat in the top of the ninth inning

The Cubs, banging out a season-high 19 hits, scored a 12-11 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies at wind-swept Wrigley Field to post their first victory since they defeated Los Angeles on

"Setting a record never entered my mind, records are just records." Elia said. "There's never been an attitude problem here, when you lose 11 of 13 with a differential of one run, you're snake-bitten.'

week. Wills had a three-run homer in the fifth. "It just takes one game to snap out of it and get your confidence back," said Wills, whose homer was his first at Wrigley Field. Durham's two-run homer in the eighth inning proved to be the difference in the game When we got our lead up to five runs, I didn't think we'd need it," Durham said. "I hope this gets us started.'

Ferguson Jenkins, 4-8, earned the victory and improved his record against the Phillies to 26-7, the best of any active league pitcher.

PHILADELPHIA MANAGER Pat Corrales said

his team's inability to score on Jenkins early hurt The Cubs scored six runs off starter Carlton.

Bill Campbell came on in the ninth inning to end the game after two leadoff singles. Jody Davis hit a solo homer for the Cubs in the sixth while Pete Rose and Mike Schmidt hit solo shots for the Phillies. Buckner's RBI single in the fourth gave the Cubs a 6-0 lead, but the Phillies scored three unearned runs in the fifth.

Wills' three-run homer off reliever Sid Monge increased Chicago's lead to 9-3.

Philadelphia, trailing 12-7 going into the ninth, rallied for four runs.
