Low bids on dam may free CDBGs

By Scott Sonner
Staff Writer

An Iowa City firm's low bid for the construction of the North Branch Dam could free $250,000 in federal Community Development Block Grants for local social programs.

The Iowa City Council will consider a resolution Tuesday night to award a contract to Barker's Inc. of Iowa City. The construction company's $501,853 bid came in $258,147 lower than the city engineer's estimate of dam construction costs.

"It's good news that the bids came in so low," Jim Hencin, the city's CDBG Coordinator, said Sunday. "I guess we're happy to see there will be some money left over to reallocate in 1982 block grants."

The council's approval of a contract with Barker's Inc. would shed a new light on a controversy dating back to the fall of 1981 concerning the use of CDBG funds.

THE CASE appeared to be closed last month when the Committee on Community Needs reluctantly recommended that the council use $252,000 of the city's $671,000 federal block grant funds to help meet rising construction costs of the North Branch storm-water detention project.

The committee's May 5 recommendation was its third revision of the CDBG budget approved by the U.S. Housing and Urban Development December, 1981. Prior to the May recommendation, the committee had contended that the CDBG money — designed to fund programs that especially benefit low- and moderate-income residents — would help few low-income residents and could be better spent on other city programs.

Some committee members said last month they were "forced into" the final recommendation that resulted in the committee reallocating money it had targeted for Congregate Housing, the Independent Living Center and Rental Rehabilitation. Now it appears those programs may get another shot at the federal funds.

MAYOR Mary Neuhauser said Sunday although the council has not discussed the matter, a "substantial amount" of the money saved in dam construction costs will probably go back to the Committee on Community Needs for a fourth reallocation.

When told of the low construction bid Sunday, Committee Chairwoman Margaret Bonney said she was "pleased to know" some of the federal block grants may become available again, and said she hopes the council will be "community-minded" in reallocating the money.

"We'll have to wait to see how the council handles it. If they See Dan, page 7

Israel accused of shelling Beirut

By United Press International

Palestinians accused Israeli troops of shelling wide areas of southern Beirut Sunday, breaking a fragile 3-day cease-fire diplomats hoped would buy them enough time to save the Lebanese capital from devastation.

The Palestinians said Israel broke a renewed cease-fire commitment by bombing wide areas of southern Beirut, including some residential districts.

The Palestinian news agency Wafa said Palestinians fighting "behind enemy lines," south of Israeli-occupied Ain Zailta in the Shouf mountains, ambushed an Israeli foot patrol, killing three soldiers and wounding four others.

Syria earlier said it would accept an international peace-keeping force to supervise an Israeli withdrawal, and Lebanese leaders held the first meeting of an emergency committee to find a solution to the conflict.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin predicted peace between his country and Lebanon "in a very short time" and said Israel did not intend to invade Beirut or capture Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat.

BUT DEFENSE MINISTER Ariel Sharon said, "Beirut, as a military and political center of the terrorist organization, is an objective that cannot be left alone as is."

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak offered the PLO asylum in his country, but the suggestion drew little support from the Palestinians or Israel.

In New York late Saturday, the U.N. Security Council unanimously appealed to all nations fighting in Lebanon to refrain from violence against civilians and take "appropriate measures" to alleviate their suffering.

The 48-hour cease-fire arranged by U.S. presidential envoy Philip Habib expired Sunday morning, but the Israelis said they would extend the truce as long as the PLO held its fire.

Israeli Cabinet spokesman Dan Meridor said in Jerusalem the cease-fire in Lebanon "has not been given a limit of time."

"THERE WERE incidents of infringements by the other side and we reacted. This still is the situation now," Meridor said after a meeting of Israel's Cabinet.

Sharon, interviewed on radio in East Beirut, said, "I don't know where Habib's proposal stands," but warned Israel's operation in Lebanon will not be over until PLO political and military headquarters is no longer stationed in Beirut.

Habib met in Beirut with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and his top government ministers to discuss options to spare Beirut the catastrophe of an all-out Israeli assault.

Sarkis later called the inaugural meeting of a seven-man emergency committee, the National Salvation Authority, appointed last Monday to try to decide the future of the PLO in Lebanon.

Iraqi forces ordered to withdraw

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein announced Sunday he had ordered his nation's armed forces, which have suffered major setbacks in a 19-month war with Iran, to withdraw from all Iranian territory within 10 days, the official Iraqi news agency said.

"The withdrawal will be completed within a maximum of 10 days," Hussein was quoted as saying.

He said Baghdad will continue cooperating with Arab and Islamic mediators to reach "the just and honorable settlement (to the war) for which we have called from the very beginning."

Hussein said the withdrawal decision was prompted by the "delicate circumstances facing the Arab (world) which resulted from the Israeli occupation of Lebanon and the threat of liquidation facing the Palestinian resistance movement."

"THIS MAKES it imperative for us to be vigilant to all possible developments," he said.

The news agency, quoting Hussein in a speech delivered in Baghdad, said Iraqi military units Sunday began to pull back from Iranian cities and lands toward the international border.

Iran reclaimed its strategic port city of Khorromshahr after fierce battles last May. Iraq later announced it was ready to arrange an immediate cease-fire and pull out its troops from Iranian territory in two weeks.

Although the Iraqi proposal coincided with Israel's invasion of Lebanon, the Iranians rebuffed the offer, saying it was "too late."

Hussein said the decision to withdraw his troops was made to test "the real intentions of the (Iranian) regime."

He said the new Iraqi stand was taken at a time of turmoil for the Arab world. Israel's aim, Hussein said, is "to keep Iraq busy with this war in order to let the Zionist enemy (Israel) and other forces carry out their schemes in Lebanon."

"The Khomeini regime has paid the bill to the Zionist enemy by accepting weapons, spare parts, information and experience," Hussein said.

Evans denies shift in philosophy

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

A perceived shift in Rep. Cooper Evans' stance on many issues and the 1980 redistricting may play a role in deciding the race for the 3rd District representative.

Separated by only a few thousand votes in their first meeting, Republican Cooper Evans and Democratic challenger Lynn Cutler will meet in what promises to be another close contest.

Evans has been criticized by some as inconsistent in his voting record and for becoming increasingly liberal. Cutler has been one of those critics. "I'm consistent and people will know what they are getting with me," she said.

However, Evans, 58, denies that there has been a change. "I'm known in the House as being a moderate Republican, and I think I have been very consistent in that regard," he said.

"I DISLIKE labels; I believe one needs to address problems. If it requires a liberal solution, apply it. If it requires a conservative solution, apply that."

Cutler, 45, said she decided to run again because she felt an obligation to the district.

Cooper Evans: "I'm known in the House as being a moderate Republican."

Lynn Cutler: "I'm consistent and people will know what they are getting with me."

"It's very clear to me that I still have an obligation to do my best to change things," she said.

Evans said Cutler's campaign may have been helped by the redistricting plans that brought Johnson County — a longtime Democratic stronghold — into the 3rd District.

But Cutler said a factor in the campaign will be the poor condition of the nation's economy controlled by the Republicans.

Cutler ripped the Republicans in the House for their "radical priorities" and for passing a budget that "made terrible cuts in life-sustaining programs."

EVANS SAID the country could not keep spending and spending money, but had to "learn to live within the resources developed within the economy."

The first-term congressman said under Republican leadership, the turning point in solving the country's economic problems has been reached.

"It (the economy) is vastly improved and we can now begin some long-term real growth," he said.

Although he said high interest rates are still a "serious problem," he said they will, in time, begin to fall.

Cutler, who has advocated a nuclear arms freeze, said the country must veer away from nuclear weapons while cutting military spending.

"We have to deal with our conventional defense systems," she said. "We don't have parts for the things we do have."

Evans said he is also a supporter of a nuclear freeze and that he recently co-sponsored a resolution in the House to freeze the deployment and production of nuclear weapons.

Tenure grievance examined

By Elizabeth McGrory
Staff Writer

It was a morning marked by differences of opinion as Terence Williams, chairman of the UI anatomy department and Asa Black, assistant professor in the department, fielded questions concerning Black's tenure grievance at Friday's hearing.

Black's hearing is in response to a protest he filed against Williams and the anatomy department because he was denied tenure and promotion to associate professor in 1980.

Friday was the second and final day of the hearing, which was held in front of a three-person panel comprised of members of the UI Faculty Senate's standing Judicial Committee.

Black's protest is the third grievance filed in the anatomy department in the last four years.

The department followed no standard promotion procedures, Black said and added that he never received any formal feedback, but credits himself with performing up to the standards that should have allowed him to receive tenure.

WILLIAMS SAID the department has standard promotion procedures and that Black, based on his performance, did not deserve tenure. Williams said he "could not predict Black's continued vitality."

The procedure used in making the decision against Black was the same procedure that Williams used in making all tenure decisions, he said.

When a faculty member is up for promotion, the tenured and full professors are given an

Falkland hostilities continue

Argentines on the barren, ice-bound Falkland Islands dependency of Thule surrendered peacefully Sunday to British troops, but a junta member said Argentina would press ahead "on all fronts" with the war for the islands.

The Argentine military command claimed two British helicopter gunships fired at an Argentine navy research center on the tiny island, occupied by 10 unarmed scientists, and surrounded it with troops late Saturday.

British commandos captured

LONDON (UPI) — Seven British SAS commandos were captured on a reconnaissance and sabotage mission near the Argentine military base at Rio Gallegos over a month ago, The Sunday Times said.

The Times quoted senior U.S. intelligence officials in Washington who said the men were part of a much larger SAS contingent, sent for reconnaissance and sabotage, and there was "some evidence" they had destroyed aircraft and fuel dumps.

Junta slow to name president

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Mired in the worst leadership crisis of the six-year military government, the ruling junta remained locked in disagreement Sunday over whom to name as the nation's president.

At least a dozen names are under consideration, political sources said. But the importance of each candidate is eclipsed by an internal power struggle within the junta, they said.

EEC lifts Argentine embargo

LUXEMBOURG — European Economic Community foreign ministers Sunday decided to lift their embargo on Argentine imports because fighting has stopped in the Falkland Islands and Argentine troops have been withdrawn.

The embargo was imposed by the Common Market nations April 17 and was extended indefinitely May 24 as a means of pressuring Argentina to end the fighting and negotiate as demanded by the United Nations.

Rebels say minister captured

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The rebel Radio Venceremos claimed Saturday that guerrillas captured the country's deputy defense minister, earlier reported killed in a helicopter crash in northeastern El Salvador.

The radio station said late Saturday it had changed Col. Francisco Adolfo Castillo's identification papers with another officer's whose body rebels claim they found at the crash site.

U.S. arms use investigated

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is investigating whether Israel violated U.S. law by using American-supplied arms in its invasion of Lebanon, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Sunday.

"I don't think we can ever be in a position, as a government, of condoning, or supporting or blinking at, the idea that you can or should change the status quo by unilateral resort to military force," the Pentagon boss said.

Racial issues spark outbreak

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. — San Quentin Prison was put on emergency status Sunday following a weekend outburst of racial violence that left 22 inmates and four correctional officers injured.

Prison spokesman Anthony Newland said the melee, which involved hundreds of inmates, appeared to be "a planned racial confrontation between a group of inmates."

N.C. man charged in local bank scam

By Jennifer Marme-Ruggeberg
Staff Writer

A man who escaped from a North Carolina prison farm was charged Friday in Johnson County District Court with three counts of false use of a financial instrument.

Terry Robert Taylor, 22, opened savings accounts at Iowa State Bank and Trust Co., the First National Bank of Iowa City and Hawkeye State Bank June 14.

The next day Taylor deposited a $2,150 check, made payable to Terry Adkins and signed by William R. Crosby, into each account. The check was drawn on an account at the Southern Bank and Trust Co., Greenville, S.C.

Roy Tumlin, officer of Southern Bank and Trust, confirmed it is not the signature or the name of the person to whom the account belongs.

The investigation by the detective bureau of the Iowa City Police Department began Tuesday when a teller at First National became suspicious of a transaction involving the Taylor savings account.

A teller at Iowa State notified police at 1 p.m. Thursday, and Taylor was arrested.

Courts

Taylor admitted to police he is a probation violator from Georgia, an escapee from a North Carolina prison farm, and that he has successfully pulled similar bank scams in South Carolina and Michigan.

Taylor is being held in the Johnson County Jail until his bond is set.

An Iowa City attorney is asking Johnson County District Court to appoint a guardian for the man convicted of killing the attorney's son.

Daniel Treiber was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the fatal stabbing of Randy Seydel in 1979.

S.J. Seydel filed a $1.5 million lawsuit against Treiber last October asking for $750,000 in lost income and $750,000 in punitive damages. Treiber has not responded to the suit.

Seydel's attorney, John Hayek, requested a hearing on default judgment after Treiber failed to respond by the January deadline. That hearing is scheduled for this afternoon.

Hudson wins assessor post despite procedural issues

By Rochelle Bozman
University Editor

Dan Hudson has been promoted to city assessor from first deputy assessor by a 2-1 vote of the Iowa City Conference Board, despite questions about the process that put him into office.

The conference board is made up of three units — the Iowa City Council, Iowa City School Board and Johnson County Board of Supervisors — each unit possessing one vote.

While the council and the board of supervisors went along with Hudson's appointment, the school board voted against the measure.

It was an open-and-shut case for Hudson, with little discussion taking place at the actual meeting. But Betty Okenfels, chairwoman of the supervisors, said the candidates were thoroughly interviewed and discussed earlier.

HUDSON WAS nominated by Councilor Kate Dickson, and the motion was seconded by Okenfels. School board member Dorsey Phelps then nominated Ernest Lund, but this died for lack of a second.

Supervisor Dennis Langenberg nominated William Greazel, but this motion also failed because no one seconded it.

On an Okenfels motion and Councilor Clemens Erdahl second, the nominations were closed and "upon a show of hands, the mayor (Mary Neuhauser) declared the city and county had endorsed Dan Hudson and announced his appointment," the minutes state.

But at least one member of the conference board was dismayed with the process that brought Hudson into the job.

"I attempted to get all the names out on the table and there was not much concern for that," Phelps said. There would have been a better and more open discussion of the candidates, had the members been able to nominate the candidates of their choice, she said.

ALTHOUGH PHELPS said Sunday, "It's neither here nor there at this point," she said she was not completely satisfied with the meeting.

"In retrospect I think there were some things which I personally could have said...to ensure an open discussion of the qualifications of the candidates," she said.

Petition protests moratorium

By Rochelle Bozman
University Editor

A petition representing 20 percent of the landowners in the College Hill Park Area protesting the proposed six-month moratorium on construction of apartments means a 6-1 vote will be required before the moratorium will be approved.

The Iowa City Council will consider the moratorium at its Tuesday meeting. The proposed moratorium passed its first test when the council approved it at the June 14 meeting by a 5-1 vote.

A three-fourth's vote will be required before it can be enacted.

If the moratorium receives six votes, it will have to survive one more reading before it can be enacted. If approved, it will limit construction in the area for up to six months. That will give city planners time to determine whether the proposal should become permanent.

THE PETITION, signed by the objecting landowners, states that the signatories "strongly oppose any change in the zoning in this area."

The area to be considered is bounded roughly on the west by Van Buren Street, on the north by Jefferson Street, on the east by Summit and Lucas streets, and on the south by Bowery Street.

There is some question as to whether the moratorium and zoning decisions can withstand a 6-1 council vote requirement without a compromise. Councilor Larry Lynch voted against the proposal at the last reading, and Councilor John Balmer voted for it but said he will vote against it if South Johnson Street is not excluded from the area before it reaches its third reading.

"WE'LL LOOK at his goals and what he's done to accomplish them. We are going to give him an evaluation."

Phelps said she would like to have seen a more open discussion on the candidates during the meeting and that the public as well as the three candidates would have been better served had that taken place.

She said, however, that it is as much her own fault as anyone's that those discussions did not take place. "I'm willing to accept equal responsibility for that," Phelps said.

"I'm apologetic about that, because I think it did a disfavor to all three of the candidates," she said.

HUDSON'S appointment has been on rather shaky grounds since February, when questions of a conflict of interest were raised about a letter supporting Hudson for the position. That letter was submitted by the board that makes adjustments in individual assessments of property as made by the city assessor.

In a Feb. 11 letter, four of five members of the Iowa City Board of Review recommended Hudson for the job. The letter was addressed to the Assessor's Examining Board, which was required to recommend a new city assessor to the conference board.

This action was perceived as a possible conflict of interest, because the board of review should keep a certain amount of distance between the board and the city assessor to prevent bias in hearing appeals from landowners who object to the city's assessment, Councilor David Perret said in February.

Okenfels said the conflict of interest was "discussed at great length in executive session," but the supervisors decided it was not an issue.

Iowa City apartment construction booming in College Hill Park Area

By Jonathan Brandt
Staff Writer

The country may be in a recession and the building industry may be facing hard times but apartment construction is booming in Iowa City, especially in the city's controversial College Hill Park Area.

Because of an increase in construction, some residents in this area have called for a moratorium on apartment construction until the area can be "down-zoned" to limit apartment construction permanently.

A number of lots in the area that formerly had houses on them are now construction sites for apartment developers.

City records show that four demolition permits were issued for the College Hill Park Area during the last 10 days of April. One permit had been issued in March.

FEAR OF a moratorium may have caused developers to begin demolition of existing houses and construction of new apartment buildings before they had intended, Karin Franklin of the city's program and planning development department, said.

"A number of apartments seemed to be going up very quickly with the beginning of the construction season. People in the neighborhood perceived that a lot was going on and rumors got started about a moratorium, which may have speeded up issuance of building permits," she said.

A temporary suspension of demolition and building permits went into effect May 2 when the Iowa City Council set a hearing date for a proposed six-month moratorium.

THE TEMPORARY MORATORIUM will be in effect until July 2, by which time the council is to have acted on the six-month proposal.

Because demolition and construction permits were issued before the temporary suspension, developers were able to proceed with demolition of existing houses and construction of the new apartment units.

Several petitions have been submitted by residents and developers both for and against the proposed six-month moratorium.

Some property owners in the area oppose a moratorium because it could mean a decrease in their property value. Without the option to sell their property to developers for apartment construction it could be worth substantially less.

Other property owners, as well as present residents, support the moratorium proposal because it will help to preserve the traditional atmosphere of the neighborhood.

To some the construction of additional apartment buildings in the neighborhood would make it noisier, overcrowded, and aesthetically displeasing.

ANOTHER GROUP of property owners supports the moratorium proposal because, they say, in the long run their property value would be preserved by limiting apartment construction in the neighborhood.

"Owners of some houses want to preserve their property values (by limiting apartment construction). Others want to make immediate money by selling their property to apartment builders," said Don Schmeiser, director of the city programming and planning office.

Margaret Nowysz, a local real estate investor and proponent of the moratorium said apartment units can be made available in the sought-after neighborhood without tearing down existing houses. She specializes in converting older homes into apartment units.

Nowysz said converting older homes to apartments saves energy and money while preserving the house and the neighborhood.

"One can invest in a neighborhood without detracting from its ambience; it's a nice feeling," Nowysz said. With large, dense apartment buildings the neighborhood will have problems associated with density but also with aesthetics, she said.

NOWYSZ SAID the group she represents is "merely trying to comply with the May 1978 comprehensive plan." The comprehensive plan is the long range strategy for Iowa City's development. Zoning regulations are the short term interpretation of that plan.

According to Nowysz, some areas of the city are already built to higher density than was urged by the comprehensive plan.

Whatever the conclusion of the moratorium dispute one thing is clear, Franklin said. "It's an area in transition."

Czech teachers bring vitality of Europe to dance

By Marcia Butzel
Staff Writer

They were officially "displaced persons" and had lost everything they owned, but when Frank and Irina Pal left Czechoslovakia for the United States after World War II, they came bearing treasure: the technique and the sensibility of the great European dance theater.

The Pals were trained at state-supported academies and engaged by the opera ballet companies of Prague and Dresden. They arrived from postwar Europe to an America wanting in ballet culture (American ballet had only begun to flourish in wartime, with the first seasons of American Ballet Theater, the founding of The Ballet Society by Balanchine and Kirstein, and regular domestic appearances of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo.). In true pioneer spirit, the Pals organized a school in Wichita Falls, Texas, and have been teaching ever since. Currently they are sharing their vision of a tradition with students in the UI summer dance workshop, as well as with the Joffrey II residents in Iowa City.

FRANK PAL teaches with great energy. If you walk past his studio in North Hall, you might see him, silver-haired, with a lion's head and piercing eyes, leaping along with the boys in a great volley of Russian kicks and kneebends. Then you will see Irina Pal stepping in to describe with quiet elegance how women might move at a village fete a century ago. Their task as teachers is to convey temperaments and attitudes, to coach students in the complexities of style, rather than just the steps.

Together, Frank and Irina Pal are teaching a dance form known as "character dance." Ballet-goers will know this from the bodice-and-boots sections of the classics, and may also recognize character roots in contemporary work like Balanchine's "Tara-tella" or revivals such as the Joffrey's televised "Petrushka."

Character dance is based on national and regional dance, but it is always a stylized representation of these origins, in contrast to pure "folk" and "ethnic" dance. Nor does character designate the so-called "democratic" roles called for by classic ballet plots — those sorcerer-sage parts usually assigned to the "mature" artists (The Nutcracker Suite's Rothbard). Instead, it is often the corps de ballet of a company that performs the polonaises or the jotas within a given ballet or opera, so character styles need to be in every dancer's personal repertoire.

ESSENTIALLY, character brings national styles of movement into the international grammar of ballet, and its verism creates an intriguing tension within ballet fantasy scenarios. Mastering character therefore means understanding how different nationalities, or different trades and professions, actually move, and then going beyond realism to stylization.

Instruction in this branch of ballet is a part of every dancer's training in Scandinavia and the Soviet bloc countries. Dance education in the United States is different, and the older teachers of character — many of whom emigrated from Eastern Europe at wartime — are a rare species indeed.

A noted member of the National Regional Ballet Association, Frank Pal has taught both students and teachers throughout the United States. Classical dancers in America do not have centuries of dance history as a resource to lean on. Their training tends to align with a formalist, rather than expressionist, dance aesthetic. They are primarily concert artists rather than performers within other spectacles like opera. How do they take to character?

"THEY HESITATE at first," said Irina Pal, "then get involved. After all, Americans have a dance temperament of their own. America's character dance is jazz, which is a stylized version of American social dance." But the Pals feel that students need training in style, and that character is a means of "cultivating background."

Pal chronicles his life dramatically. Ask him about his background, and his past and present surge forth, uniquely shaped by a wonderful accent and a passion for demonstrating what he speaks. His interest in character developed gradually:

"When I was young and first dancing at Prague opera, I would think only 'Let me be ballet dancer, let me be swan prince.' Well, when the time came, I did swan prince. But then, I was doing swan prince in everything else, in Aida, in Carmen, in Bartered Bride. Later I see I should have been Egyptian slave, passionate Spaniard, Czech peasant...not always swan prince."

THE PALS' lives parallel character dance's accumulation of national styles. After Czechoslovakia fell under Adolf Hitler, Frank Pal was sent to Dresden to replace German dancers who had abandoned the stage for the front. As that city was destroyed, Pal was shuttled back to Leipzig, where, again, bombing had razed the theaters. Pal joined up with American Special Services entertainment and toured, dancing out of the back of a truck while he and Irina waited for American visas. Now staunchly proud of their American citizenship, neither has ever returned to their homeland.

"We came first to Boston," said Frank Pal, "but what was there for us to do there, in this Boston without opera house?" The Pals went to Wichita Falls, Texas, where they founded their school and built a company. From Prague to Texas is no small transition, and this country-within-a-country took some getting used to.

Frank and Irina Pal, originally from Czechoslovakia, are teaching character dance to UI summer dance workshops and to the Joffrey II dancers in residence at the UI.

The Daily Iowan/Bill Paxson

"AMERICAN informality was a shock to us at first," Irina Pal smiled. "Certain ways of moving and speaking we noticed here would have been impossible in the society we had left behind." But when she said this, Frank Pal grinned, pulled imaginary pistols from his pockets, and boxed with them.

"I was interested in Texas!" he claimed. "I had seen Westerns and other American films." And how did Wichita Falls respond? "In Texas, maybe I could have come from moon. But now we have school, we have company and we are happy."

"My dream once was just 'be classic, be prince,'" said Pal. But then came character work for ballets like Firebird and Scheherazade. "I had to have feeling of different nations. When I did, I was richer."

Bet your bottom dollar that 'Annie' movie lacks heart

By Roxanne T. Mueller
Acting Arts/Entertainment Editor

Movie musicals have led a precarious existence for the last 25 years. The paths blazed in the genre by the likes of Gene Kelly and Vincente Minnelli have been mostly untrod since those artists' heydays, with notable and relatively recent innovative exceptions like Hair, All That Jazz and Pennies from Heaven. Significantly, all of these, with the exception of All That Jazz, have failed at the box office.

When movie musicals do break through to the big-time and garner huge receipts, they are generally out of the light, frothy Sound of Music mold — the milieu which comes to most people's minds when they think of musicals. Expensive to make, and lifted from Broadway, these musicals appeal to the public more by virtue of star power (Julie Andrews, Barbra Streisand) than cinematic worth.

But just when producers think the musical is a sure thing again, bombs like Hello Dolly and Dr. Doolittle threaten to break studio bank accounts and the genre goes into quiet, but thankfully temporary, decline.

THE RULE of thumb for producers most of the time is playing it as safe as possible when thoughts of gambling on another musical arise, and one way to do that is to take a "surefire" Broadway hit and adapt it for the cameras. (This is why we'll probably never see Sweeney Todd or Follies on the screen — critical praise isn't good enough to overcome limited audience appeal. These two may be Stephen Sondheim musicals, but since he's consciously gone for art over commercial success in the last few years, Sondheim hasn't seen one of his musicals made into a successful movie version since the days of Gypsy and West Side Story.)

This may seem a roundabout way to get to the subject of Annie but it helps to understand what's going on here. Annie is a proven Broadway and road-show hit, and though it lacks any big stars, it's the most talked-about musical to appear in years. More ink has been generated about how expensive Annie was to make (upwards of $40 million) and the mass marketing of everything from Annie records to dog dishes accompanying its release, than the movie itself has been cast somewhat to the side. Whether this might be conscious on Columbia Pictures' part because of the rather empty movie Annie in fact is, isn't the question. When a movie is pre-tested, pre-fabricated and pre-packaged to be sold to a mass audience, something gets left behind, and in this instance, it's heart.

HOLLYWOOD should have learned long ago that fat budgets can't cover up a hollow center. I went to Annie hoping to be as thoroughly charmed by the movie as I was by the stage version. But this is an example of a movie so carefully put together that all the life has been bled from it. A movie about a mop-topped, freckle-faced kid should have a marshmallow center, but director John Huston (directing his first musical) seems so intent on removing any shred of sentimentality that you're not allowed to indulge in shedding a few tears even if you're geared for it.

Aileen Quinn as the little orphan who finds her destiny linked up with a bald billionaire can be bright, bubbly and bouncy, but she lacks what the Shirley Temple-code-of-ethics demands — she's not endearing. You don't particularly feel like hugging her to your breast nor do you like the way she forgets about all her friends at the orphanage the second she steps into Daddy Warbucks' gilded mansion.

THE TIMES Huston does try to gain your sympathy, he goes overboard. When a scene ends with a close-up on a child's mirthful smile, the camera lingers for a fraction too long, waiting for us to sigh "ain't that cute?" as though we've never seen a kid smile before. Another point comes when Annie and Warbucks line up with FDR and Eleanor in a rendition of the show's anthem, "Tomorrow." There in the background is a portrait of George Washington with mastermind Huston behind it all daring us to resist the significance of this all-American portrait of money, leadership and innocence. If there's supposed to be a sporadic snicker emanating from somewhere, it isn't evident.

The spots that will give viewers cause for joy are few but wonderful. Ann Reinking's lively dance through the mansion singing "We Got Annie" is great, but all too brief. Carol Burnett, looking otherworldly as the eternally-soused Miss Hannigan misses chairs and runs into door frames in her best movie performance to date. Albert Finney as Warbucks seems too smart to be taken in by the moonbeam-faced Quinn, but he makes you believe barking orders is his favorite pastime.

WITH ALL the money poured into Annie, the sloppiness evident is inexcusable. Annie is set in the early days of FDR's first administration: elected in 1932, he entered the White House in early 1933. When Warbucks buys out Radio City Music Hall and sits down to enjoy Garbo in Camille, therefore, he must be in a time machine, since Camille wasn't released until 1936. And near the end, there's an incredibly bad job of editing. An obvious double for Quinn is seen high atop a bridge with her mouth firmly shut. Meanwhile, on the soundtrack, you hear Annie yelling for dear life.

If the immediate future of musicals depends on the success of this movie, then I hope Annie becomes a hit. There's still an awful lot of ground to explore in the musical genre and I'd hate to think the failure of one over-produced movie would hold things up.

Joffrey II to discuss profession with public

The dancers of the Joffrey II company will meet with the public in an informal discussion at 7 p.m. today on the Union Sun Porch. The dancers, who range in age from 16 to 23, will answer questions and give insight into their experiences as young professionals in the dance world. Associate artistic director Maria Grandy will be on hand to discuss the nature and purpose of the Joffrey apprentice company.

State news

Democrats swiftly approve platform

DES MOINES (UPI) — The Iowa Democratic Party, with the exception of brief skirmishes over planks dealing with abortion and gay rights, has given swift approval to a 1982 platform closely linked to the views of the party's gubernatorial candidate.

The 30-plank document — described as "fairly progressive" by party leaders — received delegate approval with few changes by the nearly 1,800 delegates attending the State Democratic Convention Saturday.

Delegates voted to strike a provision calling for a state constitutional amendment to limit governors to two four-year terms and an amendment offered Saturday affirming the right to social, political and economic freedom regardless of a person's "sexual orientation."

AFTER THE convention dropped the call to limit Iowa governors to eight years in office, Victoria Herring, the chairwoman of the platform committee, said, "We moved to delete that because we want Roxanne to get 15 years."

One of the brightest accomplishments of the 1982 convention was the swiftness with which the delegates completed business, adjourning before 5 p.m. Democratic conventions in the past have featured marathon fights that have lasted until the early morning hours.

The delegates voted to block a proposal defending "the right of all persons to determine responsibly when and if they wish to become parents." A proposed anti-abortion minority report to the platform was defeated in committee.

The convention did make some platform additions, including provisions to oppose the death penalty and to protect the right of private and public workers to strike.

OTHER PLANKS approved include a comprehensive national health service that would be locally controlled and cost-effective. Delegates also supported the Humphrey-Hawkins concept for full employment.

The platform also called for state- and federally-funded child care, and for the federal government to handle economic, medical and nutritional needs of children, the poor and the elderly.

"We oppose President Reagan's 'New Federalism' proposals which affect the most vulnerable members of our society — women, children, the poor, the elderly, the handicapped, the emotionally and mentally disabled and the unemployed," the plank said.

The platform is the briefest and most general to be presented by Iowa Democrats in 16 years and marks the fourth year that they have tried to make the document a statement of general principle.

THE PLATFORM committee adopted planks that generally reflect Democratic gubernatorial nominee Roxanne Conlin's views on the issues and her proposed solutions.

Party members also voted to defeat a proposal to the party's constitution that would have allowed county and state chairpersons to nominate 20 percent of the convention delegates at the county and state levels, subject to the approval of convention delegates.

Iowa Democrats 'smell victory' in '82

DES MOINES (UPI) — Iowa Democrats are more unified in 1982 than in recent years because "victory appears so close" for Democratic candidates in the November election, State Democratic Chairman Dave Nagle said Saturday.

"They smell victory so well that they're willing to put their differences aside for the sake of party unity," Nagle said, following the state party convention.

Party officials said Democrats emerged "united and strong," unlike recent conventions, such as 1980's, when the convention ended with the party split between supporters of former President Jimmy Carter and backers of Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy.

The only cracks in the coating of unity appeared during platform skirmishes over planks dealing with abortion and the rights of gay people.

"We're focusing on things that unite us and not the things that divide us and that's refreshing," Nagle said. "It's the Republicans who will be divided this year."

NAGLE SAID Republicans face division between the party's conservative and moderate factions which could surface at Saturday's Republican State Convention.

"There is a danger when you split your base" of support, he said. "They're trying to repair that base, but I'm not sure if Terry (Branstad) is the person who can do that."

Branstad, the lieutenant governor, is seeking the state's top executive post against Democratic candidate Roxanne Conlin, a former U.S. attorney.

Conlin took the opportunity of the convention setting to charge Branstad and other Republicans with attempting to foster the American dream exclusively for themselves.

"To Terry Branstad and his party of privileged, let me say as clearly as I can: The dream was not intended to be yours alone. Your bankroll can't buy it. Your tax shelters can't shelter it. Your locked-and-bolted doors cannot shut out the consequences of what you have done."

Conlin, who was introduced to the convention by former Iowa Sen. and Gov. Harold Hughes, stood with her vanquished primary election opponents — former House Majority Leader Jerry Fitzgerald and former state chairman Ed Campbell — during a rousing ovation that one party official termed "sheer electricity" following her keynote address.

Clark considers 1984 bid

Dick Clark

DES MOINES (UPI) — Former Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, who lost a re-election bid to Republican Sen. Roger Jepsen in 1978, said Saturday that he is giving serious consideration to challenging Jepsen in 1984.

Clark, attending the state Democratic Convention, said, "I'm at an initial stage of consideration. It's two and a half years away, but I do think Senator Jepsen has a number of vulnerabilities."

Clark said he would probably decide by late 1983 whether he will seek the Democratic Party's 1984 senatorial nomination. Iowa 5th District Rep. Tom Harkin has also expressed interest in challenging Jepsen in 1984.

"I think things have changed a little since 1978," Clark said. "I think people view the Jepsen-Reagan approach a little differently now than they did then."

JEPSEN ATTACKED Clark as a liberal "big-spender" and tied him with the economic woes of President Carter's administration to edge the incumbent by a margin of 51 percent to 48 percent in the 1978 senate race.

However, Clark said the "shoe would be on the other foot" in 1984, since Jepsen would be the incumbent and Clark the challenger.

"There are advantages to being an incumbent," Clark said, "but one of the disadvantages is you have a record. I'm sure we would have a direct clash over his voting record, especially on the economy."

Ray declares 15 disaster areas

DES MOINES (UPI) — Gov. Robert D. Ray declared 15 Iowa counties, including Johnson County, disaster areas on Saturday, making them eligible for state assistance.

The counties declared disaster areas are Adair, Benton, Decatur, Fremont, Ringgold, Harrison, Iowa, Johnson, Montgomery, Muscatine, Page, Pottawattamie, Tama, Taylor and Webster. Ray gave Mills County that designation earlier in the week.

The governor also asked the Small Business Administration to declare Mills and Fremont counties disaster areas in order to make residents eligible for federal assistance.

The disaster declarations and the request for SBA assistance stem from a survey of flood damage caused by the torrential rains that hit the 16 counties Tuesday and Wednesday.

Severe flooding was reported in the Cedar Rapids and Iowa City areas and damage to roads and bridges in Iowa and Benton counties was estimated at $2.5 million.

The downpour also dropped 6 inches of rain in a half hour on parts of Mills County, and portions of the towns of Malvern, Glenwood and Emerson had to be evacuated because of flooded streets and rivers.

Hardest hit was Emerson, where the water rose as high as 5 feet, destroying merchandise and equipment in all of the town's businesses.

Thinking big

Fishing has been known to test one's patience, and this outing was no exception for fishermen Sam Jones, Al Kadalano and Andy Nowak. They had little luck on the Park Road bridge over the Iowa River. The men blamed high water for their bad luck.

Mideast

and 35 minutes and adjourned without making an official statement, but agreed to meet again within the next 48 hours.

"What is important is that today we have met," said Prime Minister Chet Wazzan, one of the committee members. All seven committee members attended the session. Details were not revealed, but Lebanese political sources have said repeatedly that one solution under consideration called for the Lebanese Army to take over security duties in the capital and negotiate an arms reduction by the guerrillas.

Syrian Minister of Information Ahmed Iskander Ahmed said in Damascus his government — whose 25,000 peace-keeping troops are still in Lebanon — would accept an international peace-keeping force to supervise the Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

ASKED SPECIFICALLY if Syria would

Menachem Begin: Predicts peace between his country and Lebanon "in a very short time."

accept a joint U.S.-Soviet force, Iskander Ahmed said, "We would ask everyone who is able to contribute to the expulsion of the invaders from Lebanon and from all occupied territories."

But he said Syria would not consider withdrawing its forces from Lebanon unless asked to do so by the Arab League — once Lebanon's sovereignty had been assured and after all Israeli troops had left the country.

The minister said Syria would return to its fight with Israel if it did not end its occupation of Lebanon "within a short period."

Despite sporadic exchanges of gunfire outside Beirut, the Israeli troops did not appear to be making any special preparations to resume hostilities as the official ceasefire arranged through Habib expired at 9 a.m. Iowa time.

spending, he said he believes the nation's military spending should be cut.

"First, we don't know what direction we want to go in terms of defense and secondly, we can't intelligently spend the money we are getting this fast," he said.

Cutler, a strong supporter of financial aid to students, said nuclear weapons are not this nation's only defense.

"An educated people and a healthy people — that's all part of our national defense," she said. "We must realize that the things we are doing now will affect not only our children, but our grandchildren as well."

She then criticized the Republicans for cutting financial aid. Evans, however, denied that there have been any severe cuts.

"I've always been consistently in support of education and I think you'll find that this year we'll spend as much (for education) as in past years," he said.

Evans said the cuts made were directed at students who have been receiving aid "regardless of their financial assets."

"It's going to be a hard-fought race," Evans said.

Cutler said she has "a lot of hard work" before she comes up with the 51 percent of the vote she wants this time.

decide to use less money (for the dam construction) from block grants, that would be very nice, to say the least," Bonney said.

She said if extra money does become available, the committee will want to know which programs the council would approve allocations to, and which programs it would not.

A MAJOR PART of the 9-month controversy involved the council's understanding that it had instructed the committee in February to budget for the North Branch Dam about $181,000 that was saved on other block grant projects. But committee members said they did not understand strings were attached to the surplus money, and reallocated it to programs they thought would more directly benefit low- and moderate-income residents.

Bonney said the situation has forced the committee to "think about things to ask about ahead of time."

"We want to hear their specific plans beforehand so we don't waste time allocating, then reallocating, money," she said. "After the last meeting, I think they've got that message."

Councilor David Perret, said Sunday the council will probably ask the Committee on Community Needs "to study the projects they wanted to support and see which one or ones they want for new funding."

"WE WOULD get a recommendation from CCN before we would reallocate," Perret said. Some of the extra money could be held for a small contingency fund to help cover unforeseen construction costs, "but the remainder, the bulk, will probably be reallocated," he said.

Councilor John McDonald said Sunday he had heard the bid was "about $200,000 less than the estimate" and that he thought reallocating the money to other programs "would certainly be something we could look at."

McDonald said he is "curious why the engineer thought the costs would be that high," referring to the city engineer's construction cost estimate of $760,000 compared to Barker's Inc.'s $501,853 estimate.

"There is obviously quite a discrepancy there," he said.

Tenure

evaluation check list to complete to give to Williams, then he calls in certain faculty members, makes further considerations and makes a recommendation to the dean of the UI College of Medicine.

But Black said Thursday he was unaware of the procedures. "There are no written standards, or standards at all."

Williams said although his department did not have a written statement of expectations, it had expectations that had "evolved" from the faculty handbook.

WHEN BLACK'S attorney, Clara Oleson asked Williams how evolving expectations can be a guide for tenure when standards can change in a matter of years, Williams said very little changed and that the "essence" stayed the same throughout the process.

Oleson argued that Black had no written statements of expectations since Black entered the six-year tenure track in 1975, and the earliest version of expectations was not made until 1978.

"True except for the existence and availability of the faculty handbook," Williams said.

Because there is an absence of written standards within the department, it is necessary to judge Black by "comparable promotions," in the areas of teaching and publishing, Oleson said.

Williams said comparing people is an "odious thing," because people are different. He began doubting Black's ability as early as 1977-78, and voiced his concerns to Black, he said.

"HE RECEIVED more feedback than anybody ever had in the department," Williams said. He received feedback if any problem was detected and after each yearly evaluation, he said.

When an anatomy faculty complained about Black's lack of visibility, Williams said he told Black, "You better mend your ways in order to establish visibility or credibility."

Black said students gave him high ratings and never complained about his availability in class evaluations.

Black had twice as many publications as associate anatomy professor Jean Jew, the professor who was promoted to a tenured position prior to Black's rejection, Oleson said.

"Numbers do not mean a thing...numbers is a small part of research and public record," Williams said. The qualitative and independent research is what matters, he said.

BLACK'S INPUT into the research and publication was "radically mediocre," Williams said. He was dependent on others and never tried to develop his own research projects, Williams said.

But Black said creating an independent research project was never encouraged. "I came into the department working as a team," with Williams and others and did not realize it was undesirable, Black said.

A memo from Williams stated the following differences between Jew and Black. Black "is dependant on others in research while Dr. Jew prefers to work in a group."

While Williams admitted Black made valuable contributions in some research projects, he qualified his accomplishments. "He had to be prodded a great deal for a long time," Williams said.

AND WILLIAMS said some of the published works bearing Black's name among others would "still have been published" without Black's contributions.

But Black said, the pieces needed his contributions and area of expertise in order for them to be published.

Black said the department is heavily politicized and disagreement is not tolerated. At a meeting where Black voiced a difference of opinion from Williams, he said, "Anyone who didn't agree with him would strongly be advised to relocate," Black said.

Williams said Black's voiced contrary opinion made "no bearing on the decision...none what so ever."

"I believe in freedom of speech for faculty members and for myself," Williams said.

THE PANEL asked Black to submit the names of three people who could give an opinion on his three most salient publications. And they will ask the same of Jew, said Mark Stinski, associate professor of microbiology and a member of the panel. Lawyers for Black and Williams will each submit a summary to the panel which will decide whether to recommend overturning the 1980 decision that denied Black tenure.

The panel will then make a recommendation to President James O. Freedman who will approve or reject it.

Wimbledon

since winning the U.S. Open for the third time last September, he has been something less than spectacular, winning only three tournaments — indoors in Sydney, Australia, last October and at Philadelphia in January, then on grass at Manchester, England, two weeks ago.

The 23-year-old left-hander has been bothered severely by an injury to his left ankle suffered while practicing in Belgium early in March, although he claims to be fit again.

ALL OF THIS WOULD seem to clear the way for Jimmy Connors to make a dramatic run at the title he last claimed eight years ago. Connors, seeded second, has reached seven Grand Prix finals this year, winning four, and he beat McEnroe in the finals of a tournament last week.

Since winning Wimbledon in 1974, Connors has been runner-up three times and a semifinalist on three other occasions. Four of his losses came to Borg, twice in the final.

"I enjoy playing McEnroe because he's a great player," said Connors, who holds a 10-8 career edge over him. "As far as Wimbledon is concerned, every year for the past five I have felt I could take the title. In fact, I played well enough to win at least three times."

Connors, listed at 4-1 by the legal bookmakers, and third seed Vitas Gerulaitis, who is 14-1, both open Monday against little known South Africans. Connors plays the first match on Court One against M. Myburg, and Gerulaitis faces O. Pirow on Court 13.

THE WOMEN AREN'T scheduled to begin until Tuesday, with two-time champion Martina Navratilova seeded No. 1 and Chris Evert Lloyd, who has reached the Wimbledon final seven times, winning three, at No. 2.

Navratilova, who can guarantee herself at least a half million dollar bonus by winning here, has reached the final of the last 18 tournaments she has played, winning 13 of them.

"I've never been in better form," Navratilova said after her 6-4, 6-3 victory over Hana Mandlikova at Eastbourne on Saturday. "The past few months have been incredible for me and I just hope I can keep my form going over the next two weeks."

Watson's 'best shot in life' wins Open

Gallant bid by Nicklaus just misses

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Much as he tried, Jack Nicklaus couldn't hide his disappointment Sunday in not winning the 82nd U.S. Open Golf Championship.

Everyone knows how hard Nicklaus concentrates on winning golf's four major tournaments, and he had come to Pebble Beach, his favorite course, in what he called "the right frame of mind" to play his best.

Nicklaus, who has won a record 19 majors, played his best, charging into the lead early in the final round Sunday and then hanging on. When he had putted out on the final hole, he thought he had a chance to win the tournament for a record fifth time.

Nicklaus shot 69 in the windup and that put him in a tie for the lead with Tom Watson, who had two more holes to play.

THE 17TH AND 18th holes at Pebble Beach are among the toughest finishing holes in golf. Watson, who also rates Pebble Beach as his favorite course, knew how treacherous those two holes can be. But he pitched in from 16 feet on 17 for a birdie and rolled in a 12-footer on 18 for another to win his first Open and his sixth major title.

Nicklaus couldn't believe Watson's shot on 17. The one on 18 was academic.

"I saw where Tom's tee shot landed on 17," said Nicklaus, "and I thought there was no way in the world he was going to get it up and down. Anyway, he holed it out and the golf tournament was history."

It was a similar shot in the 1972 British Open at Muirfield by Lee Trevino that denied Nicklaus victory.

"Just as today," said Nicklaus, "when I putted out on the final hole I thought I had won the tournament. But Lee hit it off a bank, down a hill at 90 miles an hour and the ball went into the cup."

"When you get this close to winning," he said, "and you think you have won it, you're pretty disappointed you lost. I played about as well as I've played day in and day out in any championship."

U.S. Open champion Tom Watson waves to the audience in exultation after completing the 18th hole at Pebble Beach, Calif., Sunday. Watson finished the tournament with a six-under-par, 282 total for the four days.

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — With the flick of his wrists, Tom Watson hit one of those shots that became instant history Sunday and, at the same time, drove a stake right into the heart of golf's greatest player.

Standing only a matter of feet from the pounding surf of the Pacific Ocean and with all the pressure his sport can bring pounding down on his shoulders, Watson won the U.S. Open championship with a shot the man he beat said had only one chance in 1,000 to go in.

"It was," said Watson quite simply, "the best shot of my life. It meant more than any shot I've ever hit."

"This augments all of my other accomplishments. This takes my career to another plateau."

BUT FOR JACK Nicklaus, the historical shot meant only heartbreak. For a fleeting moment he thought he would reach the one major goal left in a career that has eclipsed the achievements of all those who have played before — a record fifth Open championship.

"It has happened to me before," said Nicklaus. "I was thinking that it would not happen again. But it did."

Golf's two top superstars had battled their way to the top of a field crowded with hopefuls Sunday and now, with no one else having any hope, Watson and Nicklaus were tied.

Nicklaus was through with his fourth and final tour of the tortuous Pebble Beach Golf Links, sitting in the scoring tent alongside the 18th green having shot a 69 Sunday for a four-day total of 284.

WATSON WAS STILL out there on the tiny outcropping of land on which rests the 17th green. He had hooked his tee shot on the demonic, par-3 and was in high grass, six feet off the green. He had almost no room to work with, the pin sitting just 10 feet from the edge of the green.

To stay in a tie, Watson had to get down in two.

"I knew," said Nicklaus, who watched the drama on a television set in the scoring tent, "that there was no way he could do it."

Watson had other thoughts. "My caddy told me to get it close," Watson said. "I told him I wasn't getting it close. I am going to make it."

Watson's sand wedge scooped under the ball, lofting it just onto the green. The ball headed right for the hole.

"AS SOON AS it hit the green I knew it was in," said Watson, who before the ball reached the pin was raising his arms in celebration and racing across the back of the green.

"I almost jumped into the Pacific Ocean," he said.

Then, in what will turn out to be a footnote to one of the greatest Opens ever played, Watson birdied the 18th hole as well for a total of 70 and a 282 — exactly the score he said it would take to win the tournament.

"I'm going to beat you, you little SOB," Nicklaus told Watson as the new champ walked off the 18th green. "I'm happy for you. I'm proud of you."

It was Watson's sixth major championship. He has won three British Opens, including his thrilling decision over Nicklaus at Turnberry five years ago, and he has captured two Masters, both of them in stretch battles with Nicklaus.

AND SUNDAY'S WIN eliminates whatever bitter memories Watson might have left over from 1974 and 1975 — years in which he seemed on his way to winning the Open only to fade in the pressure.

The fourth round at Pebble Beach saw four different players hold or share the lead during the day, but down the final, dangerous holes at the gorgeous oceanside course it was left to Watson and Nicklaus, who birdied five holes in a row beginning at the third hole to set up the thrilling scrap with his friendly adversary.

Finishing four shots back of the winner came Bill Rogers, who began the day tied for the lead, Bobby Clampett and Dan Pohl. Rogers slipped to a closing 74 while Clampett and Pohl had 70's.

Birdie string lifts Stephenson to Lady Keystone Open crown

HERSHEY, Pa. (UPI) — Running off a string of five consecutive birdies in the middle of her final round, Jan Stephenson charged back from five strokes off the pace Sunday to capture the $200,000 Lady Keystone Open.

Stephenson gained the victory when second-round leader Barbara Moxness lipped out a putt from five feet away on the 18th hole to take a bogey and fall a stroke behind her. Stephenson had walked off 18 with a par just moments before to finish at 211.

The victory marked the first time Stephenson, the winner of last week's LPGA championship, had won by coming from behind. She had entered Sunday's final round at two-under 142 after back-to-back rounds of 71. Her 69, three-under, on Sunday gave her a 211 for the tournament.

STEPHENSON'S RISE TO the top was almost totally unanticipated, especially in light of her start when she bogeyed the first two holes to fall seven strokes back.

She began her comeback on the seventh hole when she knocked in a 30-foot birdie putt. On the next hole, she missed a 20-footer for eagle but still came away with a birdie, then ran off birdies on each of the next three holes while Moxness was struggling.

At 12, she used too strong of a club and hit a six iron over the green. But the ball hit a spectator and dropped right at the fringe. She chipped up and knocked in the putt to save par. Stephenson picked up her sixth birdie of the round on 15 but bogeyed 17, leaving her at five-under going into the last hole.

McEnroe ready to defend title, but top talent skips Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Although many of his cohorts are among the missing, big, bad John, the baddest dude around, is back in town.

And lest he wonder, the town hasn't forgotten. John McEnroe, after single-handedly trying to shout the archly conservative, tradition-haunted All-England Club to its knees last year, will play the honorary opening match Monday when Wimbledon begins its two-week run.

On the same center court where he ended Bjorn Borg's majestic string of five consecutive Wimbledon championships, McEnroe will take on fellow American Van Winitsky starting at 8 a.m.

The reunion of man and memory will not be without great emotion. McEnroe ran amok last year, starting with his very first match against Tom Gullikson when he was assessed three point penalties and verbally abused both the umpire and referee.

BY THE END of the tumultuous fortnight, Wimbledon officials recommended fines totaling $10,000 against McEnroe — which he successfully fought — and they refused to award the volatile New Yorker the customary honorary membership.

In a contrite mood last week, McEnroe admitted, "I wouldn't want to go through what I did last year to win it again."

But at least give McEnroe credit for showing up. Five other players among the world's elite gave various reasons for passing up what supposedly is tennis' showcase event, the single-most important title to be had.

Borg isn't here because he would have had to qualify; Ivan Lendl, already the winner of more than $1 million this year, doesn't like the grass surface; Argentines Guillermo Vilas and Jose-Luis Clerc are absent because of their country's conflict with Britain; and Eliot Teltscher, like many other players, simply doesn't care for Wimbledon and its pretensions.

WIMBLEDON, THOUGH, ALWAYS has been bigger than the players, drawing sellout crowds even in 1973 when more than 80 men observed a boycott called by the Association of Tennis Professionals. And as long as McEnroe is back, and the local papers can once again play up such endearing sobriquets as Superbrat, the Merchant of Menace and Prince of Petulance, there will be undue interest.

In the absence of Borg and Lendl, McEnroe is favored to make a successful defense of his crown. However,
