Draft prospect rallies resisters

By Scott Sonner
Staff Writer

President Reagan's pledge to prosecute draft registration resisters will give anti-draft supporters a mark to rally behind, members of the local Student Coalition Against Registration and the Draft said Saturday.

Iowa City's anti-draft movement is down to a "skeletal group," but reports that federal agents are hunting down registration resisters should fuel protests in Iowa City and the nation later this week, SCARD members said.

"People who haven't registered will definitely get more concerned," John Stonebarger, local SCARD member said.

Local protests will follow on the heels of the first word of prosecution, he said.

The state's Selective Service System estimates a 93 percent compliance rate among Iowans who are supposed to have registered, but SCARD challenges those figures.

COALITION MEMBER Joe Iosbaker said government officials inflate the registration compliance rates to persuade more men to register.

"I don't trust their figures. They never release any numbers, just percentages. They can't give you exact numbers because they don't have them," he said.

Iosbaker said he thinks a 1981 Boston Globe poll that showed a compliance rate of 75 percent is "closer to the mark."

"I'm not saying that is accurate, but it is closer than 93 percent. That would put the resisters up around 1.5 million," he said.

SCARD members have tried to gather support by handing out leaflets and talking to draft registration resisters at Iowa City high schools, Iosbaker said.

"We try to develop a rapport with non-registrants as a source of information and support," he said.

But SCARD members admit draft registration has not evoked much local concern in recent months.

"BASICALLY we are down to the point where if we want it in the news, we need to make it an issue," Stonebarger said.

"There are too many other things people are concerned about. If there is a threat you will be laid off your job, then that's your major concern," he said.

Another reason for the limited reaction to registration is that "so many people have trouble believing this is the draft. People say 'this is only registration,'" he said.

"SCARD believes the draft is coming. We are very sure," he said.

Stonebarger said he thinks Reagan waited until this summer to begin prosecution so college

Beirut's residents urged to flee

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli jets showered war-ravaged Beirut with leaflets warning residents to flee for their lives Sunday and offered safe passage to Syria for Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas who surrender to the Lebanese Army.

Israeli invasion troops fortified positions on the mountains east of Beirut as the government in Jerusalem warned it will respond with "full severity" against Palestinians violating a fragile cease-fire that remained unbroken for a third day.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, in a message on state-run television, issued an "urgent" call to Arab leaders to help avert more fighting and to "save Beirut from an imminent catastrophe."

In Tel Aviv, Maj. Gen. Aharon Yariv, Israel's former chief of military intelligence, estimated that 1,000 PLO guerrillas and 500 civilians died during the Israeli invasion that began June 6.

"What has been published by many representatives of the media has been grossly, grossly, and several times malevolently, exaggerated," Yariv said in reference to reports of casualties reaching into the thousands.

THE RED CROSS in Beirut said Friday 14,000 people died and 20,000 were wounded in the Israeli invasion, but did not break the casualty figure down into civilian or military deaths. Israel said it has lost about 300 soldiers.

A powerful bomb planted under a car exploded in the Hamra district of West Beirut Sunday, killing three people and wounding 20 others. The bomb went off only a few blocks from a radio station that PLO chief Yasser Arafat was visiting.

Meanwhile, leaflets fluttered down on the besieged city from Israeli jets.

"Use the cease-fire to save your life," Arabic-language leaflets warned Beirut residents. Signed by the Israeli Defense Forces, the pink, green and yellow leaflets said Israeli forces "are not out to harm innocent civilians and those who are not fighting it."

The leaflets advised people to leave Moslem-controlled West Beirut either through Israeli lines on the eastern Beirut-Damascus highway or over the coast to Tripoli in northern Lebanon.

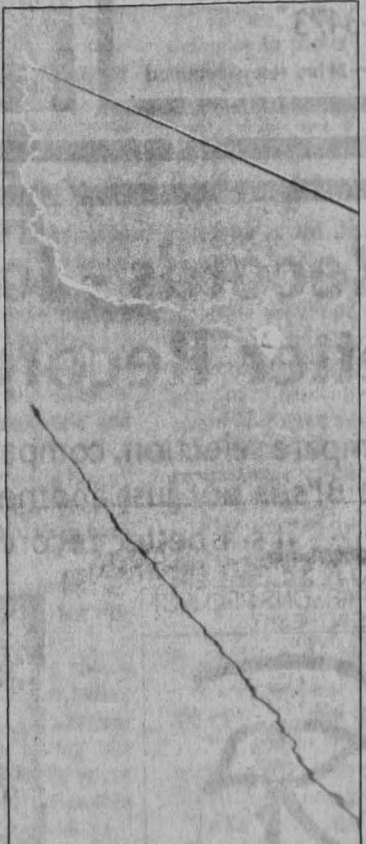

WITHIN HOURS, thousands of civilians were trying to flee the western half of Beirut where an estimated 6,000 PLO rebels are making a

Haig testimony requested at Shultz hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Sunday he wants Secretary of State Alexander Haig to testify at George Shultz's confirmation hearings.

Glenn also said he would explore Shultz's relationship to the Bechtel Group Inc. when the committee opens hearings the week of July 12. Shultz is president of the San Francisco-based international construction and engineering firm that has Saudi Arabia as a top client.

Shultz, 61, labor secretary, budget director and treasury secretary in the Nixon administration, was mum about his new job Sunday. He left his government townhouse across the street from the White House to attend church in the morning and went to the State Department in the afternoon.

President Reagan unexpectedly announced Haig's resignation and his designation of Shultz as the successor Friday. In his letter of resignation, Haig said he quit because Reagan's foreign policy no longer reflected "consistency, clarity and steadiness of purpose."

WHITE HOUSE aides said a crucial factor in Haig's decision to resign was a disagreement over whether the United States should let Israel "finish the job" in Lebanon. Haig also felt his pro-Israeli policy was being undermined, aides said.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said Haig told him he resigned because of "policy differences."

Percy, appearing on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," said the differences included "a range of things." He cited the controversy over the Soviet gas pipeline, the Middle East and the Falkland Islands.

But Percy said Haig's departure was basically the result of "a cumulative series of frustrations" — in particular, the fact that Haig's was not "the voice" enunciating American foreign policy.

Glenn, interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press," said Haig's testimony would be important to determine what policy changes have taken place and how Shultz would fit into any new design.

"I WOULD anticipate he would go through," he said when asked his assessment of Shultz's chances for Senate confirmation. "I know of nothing against him."

Glenn said Haig resigned "for a cause. This is not just a matter of health or personality differences."

UI faculty: No change in policies

By Connie Campana
Staff Writer

A UI faculty member who once worked for George Shultz, the U.S. secretary of state-select, said he is sorry to see Alexander Haig go.

Theodore Jens, UI professor of finance, worked under Shultz at Bechtel Group Inc. from 1978 to 1981. Shultz is the president of Bechtel.

Jens said Sunday that Shultz is a team member who works by consensus and puts other people in the spotlight, and said he expects Shultz to have a "very subdued foreign policy."

Shultz is a steady and level-headed businessman who looks at things "in terms of dollars and cents," he said.

"Personally, I would rather have Haig. When there's a real crisis, he's the type of guy who steps in and gets it done."

DURING THE Watergate crisis, Haig took charge and "straightened out" the White House staff, Jens said.

He said he hopes that Shultz's appointment will not create an immediate change in U.S. foreign policy. It will look bad if "one man changes, and suddenly everything switches around."

Vernon Van Dyke, UI political science professor, said, "Everyone knew that there were problems," but the timing of Haig's resignation surprised him.

Although he too had been wondering for a couple of months when it would happen, Jens said he is surprised that Haig resigned "right in the middle of a crisis" and that President Reagan allowed him to quit.

He had the "slight impression of a guy throwing a temper tantrum," Jens said. "Meanwhile, foreign policy is just kind of hanging there."

Lives saved daily as transplants delicately performed at home

By Jeff Beck
Staff Writer

Every day, Susan Blanchard packs her surgical equipment — fresh soil, fertilizer, pots, pruning shears, chemicals and a trowel — into her car and makes what could be a life-or-death house call.

Her goal is also the name of her business — "Plants Alive!"

Blanchard, a horticulturist, and Chris Cutbirth, a businesswoman, jointly own the plant care business that offers several unique services.

In addition to mobile plant care, the business does home plantscaping, plantsitting and plant rentals.

ABOUT ONE YEAR ago, the partners established their home-based business to fill a "vacuum in the plant service area," Cutbirth said.

But Plants Alive also sprouted out of the partners', especially Blanchard's, interests in horticulture.

Although Blanchard speaks shyly of her love for plants, Cutbirth is well aware of it. "We try to keep (plant care) rates as low as possible. This is Susan's contribution to the posterity of foliage."

"She has a hard time even charging people for it. I had to twist her elbow just to make her realize we were running a business, and even though she would do this free, we had to get some money back on the gas," said Cutbirth.

Blanchard, who formerly worked as a secretary, is now advertised as "Our plant doctor (who) is experienced in saving old friends."

"When I came to Iowa I worked as a secretary and worked in nurseries...but my job now is a lot more fulfilling. I go to different homes and meet more people," Blanchard said.

BUT MOST of the first-year business of Plants Alive has come from contracts with restaurants and other commercial establishments. The partners have arranged and cared for plants at about 20 businesses in Iowa City.

Pravda calls Haig scapegoat

MOSCOW — President Reagan's falling popularity in U.S. opinion surveys caused him to need a scapegoat and former Secretary of State Alexander Haig was chosen, Pravda said Sunday in the first Soviet analysis of Haig's resignation.

Pravda said Haig was inconsistent in his efforts to bridge the gap between the United States and its allies and was equally inconsistent in opposing the "extremist steps" urged by ultra-rightists in and around the Reagan administration.

British rail workers strike

LONDON — More than 180,000 British Rail workers nationwide went on strike at midnight Sunday forcing 1.4 million daily riders to join huge Monday morning traffic jams already caused by a London subway strike.

Some officials feared the walkout caused by a pay dispute could become the worst train stoppage in Britain since 1926.

Columbia payload 'hushed'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The shuttle Columbia, taking off on schedule for the first time, flashed flawlessly into orbit Sunday carrying a hush-hush military payload on its fourth and final space shakedown cruise.

The classified military package is known to include an infrared radiation telescope, an ultraviolet radiation detector to observe Earth's horizon, cosmic ray detectors, and a experimental, automated space navigation instrument.

Kennedy raps Reagan goals

PHILADELPHIA — The Democrats wound up their harmonious mid-term convention Sunday, with Sen. Edward Kennedy delivering a blistering attack on the "hear-nothing, see-nothing, do-nothing government" of Ronald Reagan.

Kennedy said it is time for Democrats to seize control of government to "insist that we shall no longer pay for the gains of the greedy with the pains of the needy."

U.S. START proposal simple

WASHINGTON — The United States has a very simple proposal to put on the table when the strategic arms reduction talks — now known by the acronym of START — resume in Geneva this Tuesday after a four-year lapse.

The chief U.S. negotiator, Edward Rowny, said Soviet negotiators have indicated the U.S. proposal has a fair chance of acceptance even though a similar proposal was rejected by the Soviets in 1977.

Glenn testing political waters

WASHINGTON — Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, broadly hinted Sunday that he wants to be president, and said he would make a "firm decision" by early next year.

On NBC's "Meet the Press" Glenn said it takes 14 to 15 months "to put together a good campaign and I have not made a positive decision to run yet. We're certainly looking into it."

Restaurant requests damage money

By Elizabeth Isham
Staff Writer

It has been almost two weeks since it happened, but the smell is still there.

That's one reason restaurant owner Paul Poulsen claims the city owes him money.

Poulsen, president of Senor Pablo's restaurant, said in a letter to Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhouser that the city's First Avenue sewer line backed raw sewage into his restaurant on the night of June 14.

The Iowa City Council received the letter from Poulsen and the city's reply in the city council packet Friday.

"We have 15 fans running all the time to dry it out and combat the smell," Poulsen's wife Carmen said Sunday.

She said the restaurant was closed June 15 for cleanup. "We had raw sewage and water all over the carpet," she said. She said the entire restaurant, including the kitchen area, was affected.

IN HIS LETTER, Poulsen said the city should "compensate Senor Pablo's for the damage incurred as a result of the city sanitary sewer backing up into the restaurant." He also asked the city to take action to increase the capacity of the First Avenue sewer line.

City Manager Neal Berlin said Sunday he has asked the city public works department to investigate, but that the city has limited liability. "If it's a storm, then it's an act of God, and obviously the city has no responsibility," he said.

The city may be liable only if there was a problem with the sewer itself, Berlin said.

Man files suit against two Coralville businesses

Courts

A negligence suit asking for an undetermined amount of money has been filed against Country Kitchen and the Canterbury Inn because they failed to maintain a hard-surfaced parking lot.

Neal Lampkin, Washington, Iowa, stated in his Johnson County District Court suit that he injured his right foot and lower back when he stepped in a hole in the parking lot of the two Coralville businesses.

Lampkin claims he used the driveway and parking lot of both businesses August 7 while he was a customer at Country Kitchen. He was walking from the restaurant to the office of the Canterbury Inn at 10 p.m. when he stepped in a hole, lost his footing and fell to the ground.

As a result of this fall, the suit states, Lampkin suffered a twisted, sprained and broken right foot and ankle, permanent injury to his lower back, scrapes, cuts and bruises and intense pain and suffering.

City Attorney Robert Jansen said he knows of no precedent, and is waiting for the result of the staff investigation.

Carmen Poulsen said she has no idea how much damage the restaurant incurred. "I would not even estimate a guess," she said. Poulsen was unavailable for comment Sunday night.

THE CITY ALSO received a suggestion from Berlin to appoint a task force to investigate ways of cutting through administrative red tape concerning local development regulations.

"It's up to the committee (to decide what kind of changes in the regulations need to be made) if the council appoints one," Berlin said, "but there are always areas where we can reduce costs and time."

In a memo to the council, Berlin said changing regulations could be useful while the city is developing its new zoning ordinance. The council, he said, will probably discuss the idea very soon. Berlin said the task force could be composed of people from the council, city staff, boards and commissions.

The city has also received funding for 30 additional participants in a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development program. The program helps owners rehabilitate their properties and provides rental assistance to tenants.

Eligible units of property must have a major portion in need of repair, or need at least $1,000 of work to meet HUD minimum standards. Eligible tenants are families, elderly persons or handicapped people with an income of less than 80 percent of the city's median income.

Wafa Amro, 20, 725 Emerald St., continued writing checks after she was notified in January that her account at Bohemian Savings and Loan of Cedar Rapids had been closed.

The account was closed because she was overdrawn and Amro told police she did not make any deposits after that. Since that time, she has written $625 in checks to at least six Iowa City businesses.

One check was written in January and the rest were written in April, May and June. Amro admitted to police that she knew the checks would not be honored by the bank.

Preservation group leaves Iowa City

By Susan Fisher
Staff Writer

When the Iowa Division of Historical Preservation moved out of Iowa City this weekend, it took with it a part of history: about 30,000 pounds worth.

At least 30,000 pounds of office equipment and files containing information of historical interest in Iowa moved out of Iowa City.

The move was made as a part of reorganization plans established by the Iowa Legislature last year. The plans call for the merging of two of the Iowa Historical Department's divisions — archives and preservation — to the historical building in Des Moines.

Although the Iowa State Historical Society will remain in Iowa City, a new central authority will preside over the three groups, according to Bill Cochran, administrative assistant to the society's director.

Additional changes are to be completed by July 1, according to Cochran. He said Gov. Robert Ray will select an executive director and a seven-member advisory board. This will replace the present 12-member board.

As these changes are being made, the group will be leaving a part of their work behind. The organization has been located in a building they helped to preserve, Old Brick, located at 26 E. Market St.

"WE'LL BE SORRY to leave this historical site," said Lowell Soike, historical site survey chief, "but we will be moving into another historical place."

Preserving sites, such as Old Brick, is one of the group's major efforts, according to Elizabeth Voss, inventory coordinator.

She said the historical preservation division is concerned with large objects that don't fit into a museum — such as buildings, historical districts, statues and cemeteries. Also, she said, the organization promotes community interest in historical preservation.

The group will continue to do this work in Des Moines, according to Victoria Christian, environmental review coordinator. Christian said the central location will make the organization more accessible to western Iowa.

Although the move has taken several days, it has been planned for about one year, said Soike. The group bought items such as air conditioners and office dividers for the division's new home on the third floor of the State Historical Building.

Along with office equipment, the preservation group packed more than 70,000 photographic negatives of historical sites, hundreds of plastic bags filled with dirt from archeological surveys, and pieces of an old bridge from Newton.

Soike said he was amazed by the large number of boxes needed and by the time it took to move everything.

Missing I.C. woman located in Chicago

By Jennifer Marme-Ruggeberg
Staff Writer

An Iowa City woman who left home to get her hair fixed Oct. 2 turned up in a Chicago suburb last week.

Carlotta Wheeler, 32, is "alive and well" after an eight-month absence from her husband and children. Police have been searching for Wheeler since her husband, Craig Wheeler, 2422 Bartlett Road, reported her missing in October.

Wheeler's three children were the last ones to see her on Oct. 2. She told them she was going to get her hair fixed but never returned.

Craig Wheeler received a letter from a Chicago woman June 21 who told him where his wife is. Until the letter, police had not discovered anything that would indicate where she was.

IOWA CITY POLICE Detective William Kidwell met with Wheeler in Chicago last Wednesday. She told him that when she left, she walked to Godfather's Pizza, about two miles from her home, took a cab to Cedar Rapids and a bus to Chicago.

Wheeler, using her maiden name of Carlotta Shively, has been a secretary at Cadillac Printing Co., Broadview, Ill., since Oct. 17.

Kidwell said the first few weeks after she was reported missing the search was intensive. The department continued its investigation but it was not as intense by the end of October.

Wheeler's reasons for leaving were personal and, as far as the police are concerned, the case is closed. Kidwell did not say whether Wheeler

James M. Schneider, 20, 1212 E. Bloomington St., was injured when a car, driven by Loretta K. Freund, 18, Davenport, caused him to swerve and lose control of his motorcycle.

Freund, headed south on Gilbert Street, was turning left into the bus depot and pulled into Schneider's path. Schneider, who was not wearing a helmet, suffered head injuries and abrasions.

Freund was charged with failure to yield making a left turn.

A van, stolen from the parking lot in the 300 block of Iowa Avenue, was found near West Branch Thursday night.

John A. Streit, 1916 Southridge Drive, Coralville, reported to Iowa City police that his locked van had been taken between 9 and 11 p.m. while he was at the Englert Theater.

The West Branch Fire Dept. received a call at 10:30 p.m. Thursday that there was a van on fire four miles west of West Branch.

The fire department contacted Streit and told him that the van had been towed.

Iowa Socialists working to get 2 percent of vote

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

The Iowa Socialist Party is hoping not for a win this November, but for 2 percent of the vote.

Supporting a decentralized economy and opposing nuclear energy in all forms, the party knows it does not have the support within the state to capture a major office.

Party officials do know, however, that 2 percent of the vote will ensure legal political party status in Iowa. This means the party will be eligible to participate in primaries, and voters will be able to register with the party.

Bill Douglas, state organizer and the party's 4th Congressional District nominee, said the party's other goal during the campaign will be to "educate and organize the people in Iowa so we will have a lot stronger base than we have now."

DOUGLAS DOES NOT believe he can win election against Democrat Neal Smith and Republican Dave Readinger. He hopes to "get enough votes to make the Democrats and Republicans run scared."

The party platform he is running on calls for, among other things, a more decentralized economy.

"We'd like to see major corporations in the state taken over by the state government or the workers and run cooperatively," Douglas said.

The platform also states its opposition to nuclear power by declaring Iowa a "nuclear free zone."

Douglas said the Iowa Socialist Party is in favor of "dismantling" Iowa's one nuclear power plant.

"We think nuclear power is dangerous and a wasteful way to boil water," he said.

THE SOCIALISTS also oppose draft registration, ROTC programs in high schools and colleges and the nuclear arms race. The platform states, "In recognition of the fact that disarmament is the only true defense against nuclear warfare, we will not comply with any federal civil defense or urban evacuation plans."

The platform also states that "if elected governor, the Socialist Party candidate will not cooperate with federal Selective Service regulations or draft requirements."

Socialist Party gubernatorial candidate Jim Bittner said it would be a form of "passive resistance."

Iowa Assistant Attorney General Mark Schantz said the draft registration question is "totally meaningless" because it is a federal matter and not a state one.

"As far as I know, it's just empty rhetoric," he said.

Bittner described the Socialist theory as "putting more power into the hands of the people." He said the present administration is making it easier for people to accept this.

"I think Reagan has done wonders for the Socialist Party. He has shown how policy can be so helpful to the wealthy, and so detrimental to the poor," he said. "We're going to try and change that."

Libertarians seek to teach public about party's policies

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

Educating the public on the party's policies of civil liberties, economic freedom and non-intervention in foreign policy is the Libertarian Party's goal for the coming election.

"Our big goal in November is to get 2 percent of the vote in the governor's race and educate the public on the issues," said Dale Roewe, chairman of the Libertarian Party of Iowa.

With 2 percent of the vote, the Libertarian Party will not need to petition to receive "ballot status" in the next presidential election.

The party's gubernatorial candidate, Marcia Farrington of Ames, said, "I really have no big desire to be governor of Iowa, but I do have a big desire to educate the people and let them know there is an alternative to the Democratic and Republican parties."

SHE SAID if elected she would "scale down" the welfare system. "There are too many people on welfare and no incentive for them to go back to work."

The Libertarian Party platform takes into account not only economic questions, but the military and social ones as well.

Libertarians think the United States should start worrying about its own problems before worrying about the problems in other countries.

"We should slowly start withdrawing our forces from overseas," Roewe said. "We've got to start saying to some of these countries that they've got to learn to take care of themselves."

Libertarians, he said, are also against all offensive nuclear weapons. This category includes the B-1 bomber, submarines and the cruise and MX missiles.

"All we should be concentrating on are defenses to protect us from nuclear warfare," he said.

HE SAID the United States might want to look into development of Anti-Ballistic Missile defenses that are allowed by a treaty with the Soviet Union.

Roewe added that the Libertarians "support any work between the Soviets and ourselves that would reduce nuclear arms."

On the economic front, Libertarians say they would cut inflation by "working to stop the government from printing money." They would also work to stop the deficits by "decreasing the scope of government in every department."

In Iowa, the Libertarians are opposed to laws restricting victimless crimes — areas such as gambling and prostitution.

"One-third of the money spent in law enforcement is spent on stopping prostitutes and people who smoke pot," he said. "We should take this money used for enforcement of these victimless crimes and put it into stopping crimes with victims."

Roewe said one of the main Libertarian principles is allowing people to do what they want.

"We believe a person should be able to do anything he wants in his personal and private life without being forced to do it," he said. "That's what the Libertarian Party is all about."

Republican delegates favor pro-choice, death penalty

DES MOINES (UPI) — Republican Party unity emerged relatively unscathed from the weekend's state convention, although debate on a controversial pro-choice stance on abortion ruffled the feathers of more than a few delegates.

The determined efforts of pro-life backers were shot down Saturday as the convention adopted the pro-choice plank. Delegates also overwhelmingly approved reinstatement of the death penalty in Iowa.

Abortion language contained in the platform proved the most controversial issue considered by delegates to the convention. Opponents of the pro-choice stance objected primarily because the party's gubernatorial candidate, Terry Branstad, has a strong anti-abortion record.

More than one delegate described the plank as "an albatross" the party was placing around Branstad's neck. The issue was decided on a roll-call vote following several minutes of heated debate.

THE ABORTION ISSUE came to the fore three different times. The first time, pro-life backers attempted to delete a voluntary family planning plank. The plank stated the GOP's belief "in the right of all persons to responsibly determine when and if they wish to be parents and to experience parenthood under the best possible conditions."

Supporters of the rule, which withstood the deletion: challenge, claimed the plank was a vote for voluntary family planning and not an abortion matter.

The second challenge to the pro-choice stance occurred when pro-life proponents attempted to amend and then delete a plank advocating that people "may adopt the position (on abortion) most consistent with their individual conscience and beliefs."

Donna LePorte, of Des Moines, proposed an amendment changing the plank to a pro-life position. "President Reagan is against abortion, Roger Jepsen is against abortion, Chuck Grassley is against abortion and Terry Branstad is against abortion," she said. "These gentlemen are all pro-life and should not be embarrassed (by a pro-choice plank)."

FORMER NATIONAL GOP Committee Chairwoman Mary Louise Smith spoke in favor of the plank, saying there is "room for diversity" in the party.

"I don't want anyone to impose their views on me and I don't want to impose my views on anyone else," Smith said.

The final challenge to the plank arose when the convention voted on the entire human rights and services section of the platform. Opponents to the pro-choice stance made a last-ditch effort to delete the entire section from the platform, but lost on a roll-call vote of 2,107 to 1,358.

The capital punishment plank came as an amendment to the party's already tough law and justice platform. The plank, which easily won approval, demands that the Iowa Legislature reinstate capital punishment.

The convention also approved an amendment to the platform urging stronger laws on pornography but defeated a call for 100 percent restitution for victims of property crimes.

UI student's trial in Illinois continues

EVANSTON, Ill. — The trial of a UI student charged in the harassment campaign of the owner of an auto service shop continues in circuit court here today.

Daniel Kissinger, 19, of the Chicago suburb Wilmette, is the first of three UI students to be tried on misdemeanor charges in connection with 94 Mailgrams and five overseas phone calls made in November 1981 and billed to Victor Weiss, 63.

Also charged are Thomas Hartel, 18, of suburban Kenilworth, and Adam Schellenberg, 18, of suburban Glenview. Hartel testified Thursday; Schellenberg may testify today.

Hartel testified that Schellenberg phoned in Mailgrams in the name of Weiss's firm at least three times. But Hartel also said he never saw Kissinger phone in a Mailgram.

HARTEL STATED he felt Schellenberg was conducting the campaign in exchange for a favor done by Kissinger. Hartel testified Kissinger wrote a letter for Schellenberg because Schellenberg's handwriting might have connected him to harassment at the high school all three had attended.

But Hartel testified he never heard the two come to an agreement on a trade.

Weiss testified Thursday that in summer 1981 his firm repaired the brakes on Kissinger's 1974 pickup truck. Kissinger stated several times last fall that he felt Weiss had "ripped him off badly," Hartel testified.

The harassment campaign included Mailgrams sent under the name of Weiss's firm claiming the recipients were Semitic and owed the firm money; they were signed with the name of Josef Mengele, a doctor who experimented on those held in Nazi concentration camps.

'Midsummer Night's Dream' vibrant, enchanting

By Hoyt Olsen
Staff Writer

As the audience left the opening performance of A Midsummer Night's Dream, the serene night air seemed to prolong possibilities of enchantment. Such nights will be regrettably rare during the sultry Iowa summer, but the play that made a fitting overture to this evening fortunately will be repeated.

The beginning of this first production in the UI Summer Rep '82 series somewhat belies the promise of what is to come. What should be a dramatic scene (court lovers Theseus and Hippolyta encounter Egeus, who is indignant that the match he desires between his daughter Hermia and suitor Demetrius is endangered by her true love, Lysander) generates little emotion — the performers seem stiff, the movement static.

But when the court cast gives way to the band of menials who plans to produce Pyramus and Thisbe for Theseus' nuptial celebration, the play achieves the vibrancy and wit that prevail the rest of the night.

DIRECTOR Robert Hedley has spoken of the organic nature of a play in production, the way each member of the cast contributes to the growth of her or his own role and to the play in its developing stages. Judging by the end product of this crew, rehearsals must have been riotous. None of the workers is reduced to the comfortably funny stereotypes of many productions; each maintains a sense of dignity unbounded by stupidity and creates a memorable individual portrait.

Kevin Villers' Bottom is full of the good-natured pomposity of every notable who thinks he can be a star. His face is so expressive that it is a pity it must be covered during the moments he literally becomes a jackass through enchantment. When he returns to human form, his series of double takes and half-assessments of his previous state masterfully re-creates the uncomfortable futility of trying to remember the missing moments of the night before.

IN THE PLAY'S fairy world, all but King Oberon and Queen Titania are played by youngsters. Using children in a live production has its dangers, but these children played their roles with convincing relish, adding a feeling of other-worldliness that older actors might not match.

Eleven-year-old Ellen Morris, in the vital role of Puck, has an adult's stage presence. Though some of her lines in the first performance were lost due to her still-thin voice, she remains consistently in character and moves about the stage with fairy-like liteness even during her longer speeches.

The adult actors playing Titania and Oberon don't allow the children to upstage them. Cynthia Goodale's Titania is a fleshy, playful voluptuary, who provides fine contrast to the human females. Scott Smith's muscularly graceful, charmingly sinister Oberon is the crowning achievement in an ensemble of fine performances. Smith's voice is riveting, with a sonorous delivery equal to the demands of Shakespearean poetry.

OF THE COURT cast, Amy McDonald is fine as a feisty, refreshing Hermia; as her lovers, Neil Bradley and P. J. Wiegiers cavort with suitable resemblance to rival fraternity brothers. But Mijanou Boddicker as Helena whines so incessantly that she mutes the humor of her best lines, only shining during her rare displays of anger, and Patrick Coleman's Theseus lacks the sense of authority first to threaten Hermia and then to overrule her father.

In addition, the Edwardian costuming worn by the court cast is only distracting, since characterizations, setting and props do nothing to lend an even remotely Edwardian feel to the production.

But the spectacularly inept and unforgettable production of Pyramus and Thisbe will make the most sober spectators' stomachs shake and their eyes fill with tears — and there are many gems before that climactic scene. Shakespeare was the pre-eminent showman of the English language. He would doubtless have appreciated the considerable showmanship of this production.

Performances of A Midsummer Night's Dream will be repeated July 1, 6, 9, 14, 17 and 20. Showtime is 8 p.m. at E.C. Mabie Theatre.

Acting uniformly excellent in well-written 'Gemini'

By Harry Vinters
Special to The Daily Iowan

I have often suspected that a well-written, well-acted, thoughtfully staged play can convey twice the energy, immediacy, power and sheer fun of one of Hollywood's megabuck celluloid wonders. After spending Friday evening at the Summer Rep '82 production of Albert Innaurato's Gemini, my suspicion is a good deal closer to being confirmed.

The action takes place over a period of 48 hours in the adjoining backyards of two South Philadelphia row houses. Francis Gemini is a Harvard undergrad home on the eve of his 21st birthday. The only son of a macho, working-class Italian father, he is bright, handsome, confused and preoccupied.

As the play opens, Francis is paid an unwelcome surprise visit by his Radcliffe girlfriend and her younger brother, the offspring of a prosperous New England family. The two visitors pitch a tent in the Gemini back yard and start to absorb the local color, which is plentiful: Francis' father, his ambitious girlfriend Lucille Pompei, and next-door neighbors Bunny Weinberger and her asthmatic son Herschel, a high school genius who is into transit systems.

THE FOCUS of the first act is on Francis and the source of his secret preoccupation — his own ambivalent sexuality. Francis thinks he is gay and finds himself attracted not to his loyal girlfriend Judith but to her brother Randy.

This love triangle evolves through the rest of the play, set against the rich background provided by the other characters, who keep stomping in on Francis and/or Judith and/or Randy as they try to work through their respective emotional crises.

Gemini is a play without peripheral characters. Francis' father and Lucille have worried about Francis all along — there were never enough girlfriends around the house for their liking. They try to understand him, and do, but only to a point: they can't quite condemn him, but they can never quite accept the truth.

And though they are from another planet sociologically, the rich kids from Boston shed their upper-crust shells and blend into the neighborhood and its minor triumphs and tragedies. Even Bunny and Herschel Weinberger, who provide more comic relief than the others, are integrally involved in the action.

GEMINI is flawed only in its pacing. The play is filled with frantic shouting matches and brilliant one-liners. Because of the speed with which the lines are delivered, some of the funniest dialogue is buried in the laughter of the audience. While the enthusiasm of the actors compensates for this difficulty, director Cosmo Catalano would do no harm in taking a few more minutes to allow for a better use of timing.

The performances are uniformly excellent. P.J. Wiegiers is able to communicate, without uttering a word, the sullen, brooding, explosive nature the role of Francis demands. From his earliest scenes with Randy (played by Neil Bradley), before the word is out, there is obviously more between them than meets the eye.

Cinda Stewart as alcoholic neighbor Bunny Weinberger, with "hair like hepatitis," does a first-class imitation of Shelley Winters at her obnoxious, noisy best. It's a performance that would bring tears to Winters' own eyes.

Amy McDonald is superb as Judith, perhaps the most difficult part. Having in turn to be sweet, bitter, vulnerable, vindictive and, as brother Randy says, "something of a bitch," McDonald portrays each emotion with complete believability.

Later this summer, when you find yourself wondering why Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan is still playing in town, do yourself a favor and go to see this delightful gem of a play.

Performances of Gemini will be repeated June 30 and July 2, 8, 10, 15 and 21. Showtime is 8 p.m. at E.C. Mabie Theater.

TV dramatizes Falklands, Watergate

By Jeffrey Miller
Arts/Entertainment Editor

America frequently seems to forget that it won its independence from Britain 200 years ago. The Oscars heaped upon Chariots of Fire, the critical kudos tossed to TV's "Brideshead Revisited," the ooohs and aahs over the Royal Birth all indicate that we may be more loyal subjects to the Queen than many Britons.

Television news is unfortunately no less susceptible to this Anglophilia than other sectors of American culture, as the recent conflict in the Falkland Islands has proved.

Instead of dismissing the war as a colonial battle being fought between two right-wing quasi-powers to distract attention from their domestic problems, the networks assaulted us with every World War II cliché imaginable about the brave, doughy British sailing thousands of miles for the honour of the Union Jack.

EVEN MORE STUPID than the clichés was the fact that the networks weren't even able to use their own medium — we saw no on-the-scene pictures of the war. Instead, we got more of the world according to Roone Arledge: upclose and personal portraits of a few of the kelpers on the islands, some of the families left behind in Sheffield, a couple of angry Argentines.

This misplaced jingoism is lamentable not only because of its glorification of a nation that hardly deserves it but because as it filled our screens night after night, it crowded out news about a far more dangerous situation in the Mideast and about domestic concerns that in the long run will have a far greater impact on our lives.

The Falklands crusade was the finest hour for no one, least of all Britain, and no amount of air time devoted to closeups of haggard shepherds or grieving widows is going to change that. It's ironic that the news chiefs of ABC, CBS and NBC seem to be the only people in the world yet to realize that the sun long ago set on the British Empire.

As their coverage of the Falklands situation has revealed everything at fault with TV news, the networks at the same time have reached into their vaults to bring back moments that remind us of television news at its best: the Watergate hearings and the fall of Richard Nixon.

Each decade of television's existence has offered an event that the medium has been uniquely equipped to cover. The Army-McCarthy hearings of the 1950s legitimized TV as a source of news; the Kennedy assassination in 1963 gave TV news the opportunity to show off its speed and accuracy.

And the 1970s presented television with Watergate, the grandest soap opera the medium could hope to present. Day after day, as the storylines inched inexorably toward their climax, the TV camera gave us its relentless closeups of the manipulators and the manipulated: the lost innocence of Gordon Strachan, the weaselly charm of John Dean, the cold efficiency of Bob Haldeman, the ever-darkening visage of Richard Nixon.

WATERGATE'S EFFECT on television has been incalculable. "60 Minutes" was a little-watched CBS news show before the scandal; with its presentation of the affair's heroes and villains, it grew into the top-rated show it is today. The entire personal, magazine-style news show, ranging from "Wide World of Sports" to "Entertainment Tonight" to "Donahue," in turn owes something to Watergate.

Fictional narrative has been just as affected. Sitcoms have become more "relevant"; soap operas and prime time dramas have added political intrigue to their storylines. One could even make a case for the serial TV coverage of Watergate as the spark behind the development of both the mini-series form and prime time soaps.

THERE ARE THOSE who will say, as we pass through the 10th anniversary rites these next two years, that Watergate should be left behind us. But for both television and history, in the words of the drama's principal player, that would be wrong.

In watching a rerun of David Frost's Watergate interview with Nixon (directed, ironically enough, by former "All My Children" producer-director Jörn Wintner), one could not help but be impressed with how pathetic both the situation and the man were and are, by how the rawest emotions we have — betrayal, anger, hatred, sorrow — were evident in the face of Richard Nixon.

Sometimes life follows art; sometimes art follows life. Television's coverage of Watergate was an instance of the two occurring as one, a drama the likes of which we will probably never see again. As thankful as we were that Richard Nixon didn't erase his audiotapes, so we should be thankful that the videotapes of the events and people of Watergate still exist for our examination. We should never forget.

Incompetent 'MegaForce' a turkey

By Craig Wyrick
Staff Writer

Hal Needham has reached the point where it's become downright enjoyable to watch him display his cinematic incompetence. With MegaForce, he seems threateningly close to taking the Golden Turkey Award as Worst Director of All Time from Edward Wood.

Unfortunately, it looks like Needham will never have the opportunity to win — the odds are stacked against him. While Wood had a few thousand dollars to work with, Needham has to work with mere millions. While Wood worked with the likes of Tor Johnson and a drunken, dying Bela Lugosi, Needham has to work with unknowns like Burt Reynolds, Sally Field and "all-star casts." Some guys get all the bad breaks.

MegaForce displays Needham at the top of his style — no big name stars to clutter up the all-important screen space. It's now obvious that Smokey and the Bandit II — so he dabbles in the explosion genre this time. Riding motorcycles armed with missiles and machine guns, the MegaForce is a group gathered from all over the world to fight evil and preserve good. In a Mideast desert (which looks strangely like Southern California), Ace Hunter (Barry Bostwick) leads his renegades on an attack on a semi-evil group of guerrillas in tanks. It's all fun, and filled with lots of explosions and far-out stunts. Nobody gets hurt, but that's just part of the misunderstood genius with which Needham spices all his films.

with MegaForce, Hal is allowed to surround himself with people who understand his vision, though how he could find so many people without grammar school diplomas is anybody's guess.

IT'S HARD for Hal to top his artistic triumph — the auto-strewn carnage at the end of Smokey and the Bandit II — so he dabbles in the explosion genre this time. Riding motorcycles armed with missiles and machine guns, the MegaForce is a group gathered from all over the world to fight evil and preserve good. In a Mideast desert (which looks strangely like Southern California), Ace Hunter (Barry Bostwick) leads his renegades on an attack on a semi-evil group of guerrillas in tanks. Bostwick (Brad Majors in The Rocky Horror Picture Show) and Michael Beck (The Warriors) rarely keep straight faces, even during the serious scenes. Persis Khambatta (who was bald in the original Star Trek movie) is on hand to add the acting talents she has culled from years of experience as a beauty queen.

It's not that Needham shows a lack of character development — he just exhibits a lack of characters. There are more stuntmen involved in MegaForce than actors, but the crowning moment for Hal's fans comes when the Master himself makes a speaking cameo appearance that makes Khambatta look like Meryl Streep.

Needham must appeal to someone; otherwise he wouldn't continually be given financial backing. In fact, two junior high kids sitting behind me thought the machinery was "Tits!" and enjoyed the film. But then again, they were saying the same thing in Aladdin's Castle while they played video games for a quarter.

Man plays piano for 50-plus days

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Despite a broken hand, David Scott finished 50 days of piano playing Sunday in his attempt to enter the Guinness Book of World Records.

If Guinness certifies the feat, Scott, who played for the equivalent of 50 days and 18 hours, will have bettered the record of 48 days, 20 hours and 27 minutes set by Roger Lavern in London in 1978.

Scott, from the town of Wagga Wagga, 300 miles south of Sydney, began playing at 8 a.m. May 7, and played 22 hours daily to register a total of 1,218 hours at the keyboard. He napped in his spare time.

Scott performed in the piano bar of the Wagga Leagues Football Club, where he works as an entertainer.

"You could say I was keyed-up for a place in the Guinness Book of Records," Scott told the Sydney Daily Telegraph. "Nothing was going to stop me."

During the marathon, a well-wisher administered a handshake so strong — to a hand so weak from all that playing — that it broke a small bone in his right hand.

Saudi king linked with Haig exit

LONDON (UPI) — The failure of Saudi Arabian King Fahd to establish a peace plan in south Lebanon played a large part in the surprise resignation of Secretary of State Alexander Haig, the Sunday Times reported.

The king last week applied personal pressure and put his country's enormous economic strength behind a plan in a complex negotiation involving Fahd, PLO chief Yasser Arafat and U.S. national security adviser William Clark, the Sunday Times said.

The paper said the plan was to have taken effect last Tuesday and failed because of badly crossed signals in Washington.

The peace plan hinged on an Israeli withdrawal to a cease-fire line. "Thanks to an astonishing breakdown in communications, this was never properly formalized," the front-page article said.

AS A RESULT, the paper said, Clark was assuring Fahd Wednesday — and through him, Arafat — that the deal was in place. Haig, however, was instructing U.S. presidential envoy Philip Habib that the peace moves had to be stalled.

Fahd, who recently succeeded his late half-brother King Khaled on the Saudi throne, was dismayed at the disarray in the Reagan administration and decided to bring the might of his immense economic resources to bear to bring Israel into line, the Times said.

The Sunday Times said Fahd threatened to:

- Withdraw substantial amounts of Saudi money — estimated at $1 billion — from the U.S. banking system.
- Embargo oil sales to the United States.
- Allow a full Soviet Embassy to open in Jeddah.

By Friday, the Sunday Times said, friction was growing between Haig and the rest of Reagan's team as Israel was said to be making preparations for a thrust into Beirut.

It was then that Reagan made the dramatic announcement of Haig's resignation, the newspaper said. Within the hour, a cease-fire had been declared by both sides.

The Sunday Times quoted a senior member of the National Security Council as saying: "It is certainly not a coincidence that subsequent to Haig's letter, there was a truce in Beirut."

Shultz

The situation in Israel is critical, he said, because Israel has started a war without any imminent attack from the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"We are in a mess. Something has to be done one way or another." He predicted that Israel "will clean out the PLO in a matter of days. Israel knows that time is running out."

HAIG RESIGNED because he didn't fit in with the rest of the administration, Jens said.

Haig likes the limelight and "comes across a bit arrogant sometimes. If he doesn't have his way, he tends to grate on people," he said.

Van Dyke said he did not expect Haig's resignation to cause any major changes.

Reagan and the people close to Reagan have controlled the power, he said. Van Dyke expects Shultz to go along with Reagan more closely than Haig did.

Samuel Patterson, UI political science professor, said he sees no reason to think Shultz will conduct a different foreign policy than Haig. However, he said "negotiating activities with the Middle East or Argentina may be suspended."

HAIG'S RESIGNATION did not stem from "petty little policy issues," Patterson said.

The division of power between the secretary of state and his staff and the president and his own national security and foreign advisers contributed to the resignation, Patterson said.

He said this arrangement has potential conflict "that makes life difficult for any secretary of state."

The way Haig in the State Department wanted to conduct foreign policy differed from how Clark in the White House wanted to conduct it, Patterson said.

Shultz could face a similar problem, he said, unless he is willing to be "kind of the leg man for someone in the White House."

Alexander Haig:

White House aides said a crucial factor in his decision to resign was a disagreement over whether the United States should let Israel "finish the job" in Lebanon.

United Press International

Resignation

"This is a time when we've had a turnover, obviously, in foreign policy for a reason. The secretary said he resigned because there is a change of policy that he didn't sign on to prosecute. We want to find out what those differences are," Glenn said.

He described the administration's foreign policy as "pretty much of a flip-flop foreign policy — we've said one thing; we've done another."

"All of this is an on-again, off-again type thing and apparently the secretary of state just got fed up," Glenn said.

Percy said he forecasts a "total reassessment" of the administration's attitude toward Israel as part of a general foreign policy re-evaluation. He declined to speculate on the outcome.

GLENN SAID he is "concerned" that, if Shultz is confirmed, the administration will have three ex-Bechtel executives in its upper ranks. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Deputy Energy Secretary Kenneth Davis are the other ex-Bechtel employees.

"All of these people came from Bechtel," Glenn said. "Now, maybe that's good experience for them, but it's something we ought to look into in the confirmation hearings."

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill also said Bechtel's dealings should be "one of the things to be brought up."

Appearing on CBS's "Face the Nation," O'Neill called Haig "a good man and a good American" who resigned because of "a power struggle between him and Weinberger." He said Shultz is "kind of a team player. We need a voice that is strong and will write policy instead of the defense secretary writing policy."

Plants

For each business, Blanchard decides which kinds of plants are suited to the lighting, ventilation and decor of the building. After arranging the plants, she coordinates a maintenance schedule for them.

"Many people don't realize that there is a lot more to the maintenance than just watering the plants," Blanchard said.

She said she dusts, prunes, fertilizes, mists, repots and often rotates plants, as well as watering them.

The mobile plant care has been the most popular service offered by Plants Alive, Cutbirth said. Blanchard makes between six and 10 calls each week to the homes of worried plant owners at a charge of $7 per visit.

CUTBIRTH SAID she conceived the idea of mobile plant care services when one of her own plants was sick and she could not take it to a greenhouse because it would not fit into her car.

"We have since discovered there is a great demand for it because people are very sentimental about their plants. Some people have had their plants since college and since their first job and since they were married, and after maybe nine years it's starting to not look right. And they decide that if they did anything that could damage the plant they would hate to have that happen," Cutbirth said.

Though plantscaping and sitting have not caught on as quickly as care services, Cutbirth said she hopes they will continue to grow in popularity.

HOME PLANTSCAPING is a variation of the commercial services offered by the business. Blanchard considers the atmosphere, lighting, ventilation, and other conditions in a home before recommending appropriate house plants.

Plantsitting is a service designed for people who are unable to take care of their plants for a period of time, usually when they are on vacation.

All these services are based on the customers' personal attachment to their plants, making the business the only one of its kind in the area, Cutbirth said.

As the business approaches its first anniversary, it is progressing faster than either partner anticipated. Cutbirth said, "We had hoped to be self-supporting by the end of two years, but we're almost there now."

Registration

campuses would be emptier providing less of a base for protests.

"Reagan and his administration have done a very good job of setting it up," Stonebarger said.

Rusty Martin, University of Northern Iowa's student body president, has publicly stated his non-registrant status and said the announcement of prosecution proceedings is the "first step to see how many people will, in their terms, submit. The only thing they've got going for them is fear."

But he said he does not know why the Reagan administration decided to move forward with prosecution at this time.

"THIS IS an election year. It is going to cost them dearly. Maybe they want to take people's minds off the economy or something but I think they've missed the boat. I think people's feelings have changed," Martin said.

Prosecution of registration resisters is a "political crime," he said.

"It will be won or lost in public opinion. The reason there has been no prosecution up to now is because of public opinion," he said.

Jackie Majerus, another local SCARD member, said demonstrations represent one way for the public to express its opinions.

"When you demonstrate you show you are aware of what is going on and you care about what's going on. You're not just going to stand there idly by and let, in this case the Reagan administration, do whatever they like.

"It takes a certain amount of time and effort and the weather isn't always the greatest. You have to believe in what you are doing. You're not just doing it for the fun of doing it."

In addition to serving as a protest organizing body, SCARD works to educate people about the status of draft registration procedures, she said.

"It's important that the public knows there are draft boards being set up and trained. That means they are getting ready," she said.

Majerus said she thinks the Reagan administration would like to keep that information secret from the public.

"If they (the public) don't know what's going on, then they won't protest," she said.

desperate stand against Israeli forces.

But the rightist Lebanese Forces Phalange militia controlling the eastern half of the city tightened an existing policy of security checks, preventing an undetermined number of evacuees from using the two escape routes.

"It surely must have been for very valid security reasons," a representative for the rightist forces said. "In principle we are not turning people away."

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Cabinet issued a six-point communique demanding PLO forces in Beirut hand over their weapons and surrender to the Lebanese Army in return for safe conduct to Syria under International Red Cross escort.

"Israel," the Cabinet said, "will maintain the cease-fire in Lebanon. If the enemy violates the cease-fire, the IDF (Israel Defense Forces) will respond with full severity."

ISRAEL "RECOMMENDED" the Lebanese Army enter West Beirut and that the PLO "hand over their weapons to the Lebanese Army." After that, all PLO forces "without exception will leave Beirut and Lebanon."

"The departing column of terrorists, under the protection of the International Red Cross, will move across the international Lebanese-Syrian border along the Beirut-Damascus road," the communique said.

Only after Palestinian forces leave Lebanon will talks begin "between all the parties concerned ... with a view to reaching an agreement which will guarantee the territorial integrity of Lebanon, the departure of all foreign forces from the country," it said.

But Arafat, holed up in war-ravaged Beirut, scoffed at the Israeli offers to surrender and charged they were a prelude to an Israeli blitz to be launched this week.

"They know I have already rejected this. Totally," Arafat said in an interview with UPI. "They don't know the Palestinian mentality. I will die in my headquarters. We will fight in every street, every place."

ARAFAT SAID he sought a political solution to the savage war with Israel, but did not elaborate. Former Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam told reporters in Beirut that Arafat was seeking an

Gilder wins by five, but misses record

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — For three days, Bob Gilder didn't even think about a record. When he finally did, he blew his chances at one.

Gilder fell short of the PGA record in a tournament, but fired a one-under-par 69 Sunday to win the $400,000 Westchester Classic by five strokes over Peter Jacobsen and Tom Kite with a 19-under total of 261.

Gilder was chasing the record total of 257 set by Mike Souchak at the 1955 Texas Open. He needed a five-under 65 Sunday to tie the mark, and still had a chance after sinking birdies at Nos. 5, 6, 7 to go 21-under.

"I started thinking about the record a little after the seventh hole," said Gilder, who said earlier he didn't care about records and just wanted to win the $72,000 first prize. "I felt I could freewheel it from there. But the back nine holes here are very tough and I was just playing to survive after a while."

BUT HE PARRED the next seven holes and lost his chance at the record on the 470-yard, par-4 15th, which he bogeyed after missing a 20-foot putt.

That was the same hole on which he suffered his only bogey of his second round. He had five bogeys during the tournament.

"This is a fun way to win, being in front all four rounds," Gilder said. "I feel fortunate and happy to play this well. I just got hot. The putts went in, and I hit it just as good as I could hit it."

Haynie sets mark with Rochester win

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (UPI) — Sandra Haynie not only won the LPGA's Rochester International Sunday, but her record-breaking play also won the support of a gallery that had come to back three-time champion Nancy Lopez.

"I knew the crowd would be for Nancy and I told myself it would be a factor — that I should put it out of my mind," Haynie said after firing a five-under-par 67 to beat Lopez and Hollis Stacy by six strokes. "But the fans are very supportive and they appreciate good golf — that won out."

The 39-year-old Texan's four-round total of 276 was a tournament-record 12-under-par for the Locust Hill Country Club course in the Rochester suburb of Pittsford. She remained in control of the $200,000 event despite a late charge by Lopez.

NBA Draft

crowned. But it is nonetheless solid — thanks to some young blood and a slew of big guards capable of cracking the starting line-up.

"It's the best in the last five years," says Marty Blake, the NBA's director of scouting. "It's the year of the big guard. A team can get as good a player in the second round as it can in the first."

BLAKE, WHO ESTIMATES he watched 150 to 180 college games last year, said there are 35 players who stand a chance to be drafted in the first round. Last year he estimated 28 first-round possibilities.

"It's a good draft from the standpoint of depth," he says. "Everybody can get a couple of good players."

And some will assuredly come from the 12 undergraduates who passed up their eligibility for a shot at the NBA dollars. As many as nine may go in the first round.

"Because of the underclassmen it's an excellent draft," says Carl Scheer, the president and general manager of the Denver Nuggets. "It's one of the better drafts in recent years."

Lenny Wilkens, the coach of the Seattle SuperSonics, is not quite so enthusiastic. But Wilkens has good reason for downplaying the talent available. His club recently traded a first-round choice to acquire David Thompson from Denver and does not select until the 65th pick.

"I think the first five picks will be undergraduates," he says. "I don't think it's a great draft once you get by that. I think the first five, six, seven players are outstanding and I think the first three have the potential to be great players."

Sportsbriefs

Top seeds resume play

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, seeded second behind John McEnroe and looking to be in excellent form, is scheduled for his third-round match Monday against Drew Gitlin in the Wimbledon tennis championships.

McEnroe is scheduled to play a third-round match against Lloyd Bourne on Center Court Monday. Other second-round matches of note include No. 11 Brian Teacher vs. Rod Fawley and No. 14 Roscoe Tanner vs. Fritz Buehning.

Among the women, who are farther advanced than the men, defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd is paired against Kate Latham and No. 4 Andrea Jaeger against Ros Fairbank, both in third-round matches.

Claypool tops Elliott

STORM LAKE, Iowa (UPI) — Gary Claypool overcame a 10-stroke lead by Eugene Elliott Sunday to win the Lake Creek Amateur golf tournament with a 278 total, one shot better than Elliott.

Claypool fired a final round 69 in the 72-hole tournament. Elliott shot a final round 75 for a 279 total.

Finishing third was Greg Tebbutt, of Bettendorf, who shot a 69 Sunday for a 286 total. Claypool, Elliott and Tebbutt are all members of Iowa's golf team.

Westhead gets a job

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former Los Angeles Laker Coach Paul Westhead will be named the new head coach of the Chicago Bulls at a Monday morning news conference, team officials confirmed Sunday.

Westhead will sign a contract Monday to replace General Manager Rod Thorn, who served as interim coach last season after Jerry Sloan was fired on Feb. 17. Thorn, who insisted he did not want to serve in a dual capacity, will stay on as general manager.

"All that remains is to settle some minor legal matters," said a Bulls' spokesman. "There are no hangups expected. Paul Westhead will be at the news conference and will be introduced as the new coach."

Wilson denies charges

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Dave Wilson, New Orleans Saints backup quarterback and a former University of Illinois starter, denies having a drug problem and says he will have to "live down" reports about drug abuse by Saints players.

"I have no problem with drugs," Wilson, in town to assist at a youth football camp, told the Champaign-Urbana News Gazette in an interview published Sunday.

"If I'd been a lineman, my name probably wouldn't have come out," he said. "But it's happened and I'll just have to live with the embarrassment. I'll just have to live it down."

Wilson, the center of an eligibility controversy that resulted in Big Ten sanctions against Illinois when he played for the Illini, was one of 12 Saints players The New York Times reported had purchased cocaine from either a convicted drug dealer or a man indicted on cocaine charges Friday.

In the sports of baseball and softball, arguing with the umpire is somewhat of an American tradition, but the arguing at the Amana VIP softball game Sunday afternoon was all in fun. NBC-TV sportscaster and former baseball player

Joe Garagiola is shown jesting home plate umpire Don Sehr during second inning action at the Iowa baseball diamond. Garagiola's Amana Celebrities defeated the Iowa Athletic All-Stars, 8-6, in the seven inning contest.

Watson bids to win first Amana title

By Mike Condon
Staff Writer

U.S. Open champion Tom Watson will head a field of 40 professionals and 23 celebrities for today's 16th annual Amana VIP golf tournament at the UI's Finkbine golf course.

Although he failed to make the cut at this week's Westchester Classic, Watson would have to be considered one of the favorites to capture the $3,000 first prize when play begins at 8 a.m.

Watson, who's chip shot from just off the green on the 17th hole at Pebble Beach and his long birdie putt on 18 enabled him to claim his first Open crown, will be looking for his first VIP title.

His chief competition is likely to come from Craig Stadler, Tom Kite and Jerry Pate, first, fourth and sixth respectively on the PGA money list. Other top names to look for will be Johnny Miller, Jim Simons and Jay Haas.

1980 — Larry Ziegler, Mark Hayes
1981 — George Archer, Bill Kratzert, Ed Sneed, Fuzzy Zoeller

fino, Jerry Dennard, Mark Gannon, Bryan Boyle, Brad Lohaus and Bobby Hansen will be among the caddies for the pros and celebrities.

The VIP is traditionally played the Monday after the U.S. Open, but was pushed back a week because of travel and time difficulties for the players coming in from Pebble Beach, Calif.

The price for tickets at the door will be $9 and all proceeds go to the Iowa athletic department.

Free parking available

Free parking for about 2,500 cars will be available in unsurfaced lots off both sides of Mormon Trek Road for people attending Monday's Amana VIP golf tournament.

Free parking will also be available at the West High School parking lot and at the UI Recreation Building. Free shuttle bus service will be available from both West High School and Recreation Building with buses running continuously, starting at 7 a.m.

First aid and concession tents will be located near the clubhouse for fans attending the tournament. Restroom facilities have been installed throughout the course.

A VIP day of laughs and softball

By Steve Batterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The laughs outnumbered the hits during the Amana VIP softball game Sunday afternoon.

Over 6,000 people watched as the UI Athletic All-Stars lost to the Amana Celebrities, 8-6, at the Iowa baseball diamond.

The fun and the scoring started early, with George "Goobar" Lindsey, the coach of the celebrities and decked out in a suit of armor, trodding onto the field atop a horse.

"Mr. Cub," Ernie Banks, scored the first run of the day on a second inning home run off of famed softball pitcher Eddie Feigner.

THE PITCHER, obviously shaken by the homer, threw two straight balls to the next batter, sportscaster Joe Garagiola. The NBC announcer yelled to the crowd, "we've got a Cub rally going - two balls."

The UI all-stars, coached by Harry Ostrander of the UI Rec Services Department, scored twice during the third inning, one on a double by Academic Advisor Fred Mims. Iowa football player Trey Jackson then hit a single, scoring Mims.

The celebrities added a run in the fourth and four in the fifth. The all-stars scored four times in the bottom of the sixth, but it was to no avail as a one, two, three inning took care of the all-stars in the seventh and the trophy presented to the winner belonged to the celebrities for the fourth-straight year.

Following the game, which benefited the UI college scholarship fund, Ostrander was still trying to figure out just what went wrong. "I thought we'd get them this year," he said. "Next year, we'll have to recruit a few more athletes."

THOSE SENTIMENTS WERE echoed by Iowa Football Coach Hayden Fry, who doubled as a third base coach throughout the game. "We would have probably scored more, but somebody's got to get them to first before they get over here," he said.

"Where else could you get a crowd like this for a softball game," he said. "I've really got to hand it to the Oak Ridge Boys and Roy Clark for coming out here and playing. Could you imagine what would happen if one of those guys would have broken one of their pickin' fingers?"

One of the all-stars who made it to third was Women's Swimming Coach Peter Kennedy, playing in his first Amana game. "This was fun, I wouldn't miss it," he said. "Hayden told me when I made it to third, 'son, the bases are loaded and if the balls on the ground, run, boy, run.'"

HE DID AND he scored one of the all-stars six runs. Several Iowa athletes, including Andre Tippett and Mel Cole from the football team and Steve Carfino of the Hawkeye basketball team, competed for the all-stars and were surrounded by autograph seekers following the contest.

Softball, in some form of the game, was only a sideshow to the entertainment and the memories the fans took home with them. Nobody will remember the five errors the celebrities made, but they will remember the sight of Lindsey challenging Iowa Wrestling Coach Dan Gable to a match in full gear during the second inning.

"That's what it's all about," Ostrander said. "I think the crowd really enjoyed the afternoon and that's what we hoped for."

Rich to get richer; Lakers to pick first Tuesday

NEW YORK (UPI) — In a sport where guards are 6-foot-8 and the season extends into the summer heat of June, the National Basketball Association this week offers perhaps its most glaring incongruity of all — The champion Los Angeles Lakers have the No. 1 pick in the college draft.

Nothing short of sensational in beating the Philadelphia 76ers for the title earlier this month, the Lakers stated their case elegantly and emphatically: a magnificent blend of personnel, a perfect combination of showmanship and discipline and a fastbreak offense that may be the best the NBA has ever seen.

So in the grand tradition of the rich getting richer, the Lakers will add to their booty Tuesday with the opening of the 10-round draft at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

"I GUESS YOU could say this is a Laker year," says Jerry West, general manager of the club. "Winning the championship and getting the number one pick in the draft."

Ordinarily, the clubs with the worst records in each conference flip for the rights to the top selection. But the Lakers acquired Cleveland's first-round choice through a 1980 trade and Cavaliers obliged Los Angeles by finishing last in the Eastern Conference this season.

That left the San Diego Clippers, last-place finishers in the West, as the remaining obstacle and the Lakers cleared that hurdle with a call of "heads" in the coin toss at the commissioner's office.

All that remains for Los Angeles is to select the finest cut of beef at the annual meat market sale. James Worthy of North Carolina, Dominique Wilkins of Georgia or Terry Cummings of DePaul.

THE LAKERS WILL be followed in the first round by San Diego and Utah, and NBA executives, like horse traders desperate for a deal, have come up short thus far in attempting to strike a trade with the Clippers or the Jazz.

With Ralph Sampson settled in for another season at Virginia, the draft lacks the aura of a player on which franchises are built and champions are
