Iran, Iraq engaged in huge battle

Advancing in a suicide charge, waves of invading Iranian troops attacked Iraqi positions near the Iraqi oil port of Basra Thursday in a key battle that U.S. analysts described as the biggest of its kind since World War II.

Iraq said it had decisively repelled the 2-day-old Iranian invasion, killing more than 4,700 Iranians in fierce land and air battles since Tuesday.

Iran said its forces had "smashed" the Iraqi counterattack and were still advancing inside Iraq.

But an Iranian military communique broadcast Thursday night dropped all mention of an earlier claim of having forged to within 9 miles of Basra, Iraq's only Persian Gulf port. Analysts said that might mean the Iranians were being pushed back.

Both sides reported fierce fighting with jetfighters, tanks, artillery and helicopter gunships.

Iran said it shot down six Iraqi jetfighters. Iraq reported downing two Iranian jets. Air-raid warnings sounded in Tehran but there were no reports of an attack on the Iranian capital.

IT WAS impossible to confirm the conflicting war claims or verify casualty reports that spoke of hundreds of dead on each side. But reports from the Persian Gulf and information made available in Washington by administration sources indicated the two sides were locked in the largest engagement of the 22month-old war.

U.S. intelligence sources said about 200,000 troops - 100,000 on each side - were involved in what they described as the biggest battle on a narrow, defined front since World War II.

"Very fierce fighting is going on." one source said. "A very serious, large-scale battle is in progress. This is the telling battle," another U.S. source added.

The fiercest fighting raged along a 20-mile front, 6 miles inside Iraq and northeast of Basra, the initial objective of the Iranian advance.

U.S. sources described the Iranian attacks as "suicidal," with waves of fanatic Iranian Revolutionary Guards charging dug-in Iraqi troops. They said the Iranians appeared willing to take "massive casualties" to advance. See Gulf, page 6

Gulf war may tip Mideast balance

LONDON (UPI) - The "forgotten war" between Iran and Iraq has burst into flames like a longsmoldering brush fire, creating a potentially far greater threat to the stability of the Middle East than the fighting in Lebanon. Iran's invasion of Iraq this week, taken in conjunction with the Lebanese crisis and the renewed fighting in the Horn of Africa, places dangerous new tensions on the Persian Gulf nations - notably Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, upon which Western security is so dependent. Fired with the arrogance of victory, the mullahs' regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is unlikely to limit itself to its immediate aim of overthrowing the 14-year rule of the Iraqi Ba'athists led by President Saddam Hussein.

While sales of new cars sputter, market for used cars accelerates

By Jonathan Brandt

More people are hanging on to that old clunker until it has chugged its last mile, and fewer people are trading in their cars these days, leaving local car dealers in interesting situations.

There are not enough used cars to go around in Iowa City while the new car market is stagnant, local car dealers say.

The slump in the new car market coupled with a lean supply of used cars, indicates people "are keeping their cars longer than they have in the last three or four years," Marv Hartwig of Hartwig Motors said. "In many cases people buying new cars are also keeping their old cars.

But the market for used cars is still hot. "Sales of good, clean used cars are good,"

Roy Carver from Autohaus said, "sales (of used cars) are as good as they've ever

ALL THIS INTEREST in used cars comes at a time when the supply of used cars is relatively low. Hartwig said, "Good, clean used cars are hard to come Carver pointed out that since new car sales have been down for the last three years there are four or five million fewer potential used cars in the market. Such a shortfall could also mean a tight supply in the years ahead.

According to Hartwig, the number of trade-ins seems to be down. One reason is that people may be selling their own cars to other people.

A major reason many people are choosing to buy a used car instead of a new one is that "the (price) spread between new and used cars is greater now, which is an incentive to buy used cars and a hindrance to new car sales," Hartwig said.

Carver noted "there is a lot more opportunity for a car dealer in the used car business now." He added that used cars sell Carver said the buying and selling of used cars is the "one place where the market is in force, it seeks its own level. The customer goes out and makes his best deal and there is no confusion with arbitrary pricing by the manufacturer.

Raffle to help fund Crisis Center

By Scott Sonner

Iowa City Crisis Center officials hope a car raffle will provide incentive for the "private sector" to come to the aid of the local human service agency. Center officials and volunteers Thursday began plotting strategies and sharing potential names of residents interested in purchasing one of the 100 chances offered at $100 each on a new $5,288 Chevy Chevette.

The raffle was proposed as a way to raise about $3,700 the center needs to cover additional rent and telephone costs through December at its new Old you hit the right people, the people with the money," he said.

Dennis Langenberg, the Johnson County Board of Supervisor who is helping organize the raffle, predicted the center will make between $3,500 and $4,000 on the project.

The need to hold a fund-raiser became more crucial after the Johnson County Board of Supervisors rejected the center's request for more money

THE BOARD had previously approved $20,000 of the center's $21,600 budget request for fiscal year 1983, but said it could not supply the additional $1,600 sought to offset moving ex-

Last week's move to Old Brick put an end to the center's three-year search for better facilities. In addition to more food storage and office space, the new location is much more accessible to handicapped persons than the old second floor office at 1121/2 E.

The only disadvantage of the move may be the high price tag. The center will pay $800 a month to rent the Old Brick office, compared with $500 at the Washington Street location, said Kay Duncan, center director.

The 100 ticket purchasers have a onein-10 chance of at least breaking even in their bid for a new car. Although just one lucky winner will take home the grand prize, nine other buyers will get their $100 back.

Tom Baldridge, of United Way of Johnson County, said the raffle is a "good chance to participate, help, and still get your money back."

HE SAID IF it is successful, they may want to consider making the raffle an annual fund-raising event. The Crisis Center - like all United Way agencies - is allowed to conduct one fund-raiser each year. Residents interested in assisting but unable to afford a $100 chance on a new car can opt for a $2 raffle ticket. A $2 ticket grants the bearer free entrance to the party and prize drawing scheduled for Aug. 27. One $2 ticket buyer will win a portable color television set and another will win a free $100 entry in the car raffle.

Although the raffle should provide the center with enough money to operate the rest of the year, Duncan is always looking for ways to cut costs.

The center will save about $70 on monthly phone bills because of a decision to buy a new phone system from the Iowa City Telephone Company, she Duncan is also trying to round up some living room furniture for the new offices and counseling rooms.

Orientation advisers urge flexibility

By Nancy Lonergan

Although about 20 class sections have been added to the fall line-up of classes, UI freshmen are sweating it out as registration for the semester winds down and classes close.

According to Emil Rinderspacher, UI orientation director, foreign language and math sections have been added to meet the demand of approximately 4,700 freshmen registering during the summer orientation ses-

Although more students are registering this summer for the fall, class availability is proportionally better than last summer, he said.

solutely no sections in computer science ... We still have some left today,"

But some class sections have closed and advisers are urging students to be flexible in their course selection.

ACCORDING TO David Louie, an adviser from the undergraduate academic advising center, students need to be open-minded while planning their schedules. "Everyone tends to think there is a set track and there is

As more classes close, "the strategy is to get them to take as many electives now as possible ... they've got four years to get that other stuff done,'

Juliet Kaufmann, director of the Undergraduate Academic Advising Center, said taking electives during the freshmen year is a good way to experience the variety of subjects the university has to offer.

'I don't think it is a tragedy at all' that closed classes are forcing students to take electives, Kaufmann said.

New general education requirements were unveiled this summer and were not confusing to freshmen or advisers, Rinderspacher said."Faculty advisers and student advisers have adjusted well to the new requirements."

Under the new requirements, students may double-count the three-hour foreign civilization and culture requirement and some other general education requirements.

RINDERSPACHER said the classes that count double have not filled up faster than they did before the change. Although students know about doubleclasses just to fulfill two requirements.

Louie said he does not think the students he advised knew about the double-counting classes. "I don't mention it to them unless they happen to choose one. Then I tell them they hit a

Debbie Payne, a student adviser, said "I generally don't tell them because then it would tend to bog down those courses ... there are other courses around that are just as good."

Payne said of the engineering students she advises, "more than half figure it out on their own" by noticing that a class is listed in the catalogue as fulfilling two requirements.

Freshman Brian Powers said he was told about double-counting "but I didn't take any classes like that.'

College administrators have made predictions explaining that a drastic drop in the number of eduction graduates at Iowa universities will result in a shortage.

A 10-year nationwide study conducted by Trevor Howe, Iowa State University Education Placement director, indicates that the current crop of education graduates from 27 public and private universities in Iowa is only about half as large as it was in 1972. Although many college graduates with teaching certificates are unemployed or working in other fields, Iowa now having a difficult time finding qualified candidates for teaching jobs,

Al Azinger, Iowa City assistant superintendent, said teacher shortages that will affect other parts of the state may not be serious for the Iowa City School District.

AZINGER SAID the school system has not had too much trouble attracting and keeping teachers because the UI adds to the attraction of Iowa City.

Howard Vernon, City High School principal, said the Iowa City atmosphere may have been a major reason for City High's low turnover rate. "We have a fortunate location with the advantages of a metropolitan such as cultural and atheletic events." When openings come up, the science, difficult positions to fill, said Vernon.

But he doesn't have much trouble finding qualified teachers, Vernon said. The school district often attracts experienced teachers because of its policy that incorporates years of experience obtained in other school districts in years of employment for Iowa

This policy attracts veteran teachers because teaching salaries are based on the years of experience.

DECLINING enrollment in the district is another reason that a teacher shortage may not be felt in the area, said Richard Hughes, Herbert Hoover Elementary School principal. He has few teaching positions open and the open positions have been filled by teachers transferring within the

Drug study is monkey business

A University of Florida psychology professor has requested a $150,000 grant to study the effects of cocaine on squirrel monkeys.

But a local group concerned about the humanity of the experiment has collected the names of more than 200 people willing to stand in for the monkeys in the experiment.

"You can't justify experimentation on non-consenting beings when there are alternatives available," said Holly Jensen, a member of the group.

Marc Branch, the professor in charge of the experiment, claims the use of the monkeys is humane. No surgery would be performed on the animals. The subjects would be injected with cocaine equivalent to onefiftieth of a lethal dosage.

Effects would last for about an hour and no permanent damage should

UI coal contract

A recent UI decision to buy coal from out of state has provoked a wave of criticism from several quarters. The UI accepted the lowest bid to supply coal - a bid tendered by ConAgra Commodities of Minnesota, which uses Indiana coal - which meant that Iowa Coal Sales Corporation lost out.

Up to now, 20 percent of Iowa's coal output has gone to the UI according to Bob Thompson, an Energy Policy Council statistical research analyst, the decision could result in the closure of one of the state's six mines and could cost 40 miners their jobs. Four state legislators have called for an investigation of the contract, which went into effect July 1, and the State Ombudsman is looking into the matter.

UI officials are reportedly puzzled about the reaction, and with justification. According to the law, they must award contracts to the lowest bidder, a condition that not only keeps costs down, it also guards against favoritism, bribes and other abuses. As UI business manager Ray Mossman said Thursday, "we believe we made a proper judgment, and we stand by it." The Iowa coal company was seventh in the list of bidders, so several more contenders were ready to supply cheaper coal.

Yet it is also easy to understand some of the critical reaction. Gov. Robert Ray and Iowa legislators have tried to encourage the Iowa coal industry, and this decision will deal that industry a severe blow, coming as it does at a time of recession in all areas of the economy. Some Iowans resent the UI and the money it receives, seeing its contributions to the state as somewhat intangible. It looks bad when a state school appears to be insensitive to the needs of the rest of the state.

But if there are to be any changes in the contract, it is up to the state legislature, not the UI, to initiate them. By all accounts, and unless an investigation proves otherwise, the UI acted legally and properly when it awarded the contract - officials had no wish deliberately to hurt the state's economy.

One possible solution would be a change in the law so that instate companies receive special treatment — but such protective legislation would pave the way to consistently more expensive contracts. Then, no doubt, the UI would find itself facing criticism for spending too much tax-payers' money.

An investigation would be useful, if for no other reason than to curtail some of the hostility this decision has aroused. The UI, by buying from ConAgra, saved over $500,000. If, as has been suggested, there is legally some way in which the Iowa company can still supply coal at a cost lower than its initial bid, this should be encouraged. Meanwhile, the UI should not be made a scapegoat for the decline of the Iowa coal industry.

Promises turn sour

Iowa City cable television is not so wonderful as might have been hoped back in 1979, when the Iowa City Council awarded Hawkeye Cablevision a 15-year franchise to provide city residents with cable service. Service that has not quite lived up to promises, complaints about the way Hawkeye handles complaints, recent rate hikes and the possibility of further increases may leave customers wondering whether their commitment to cable TV was such a good idea.

Prior to a special election in 1978, when 81.1 percent of those voting approved Hawkeye, it sounded as if cable TV could be all things to all people. Talking books for the blind, government data, foreign language programming, a medical channel, local production studios to provide public access - how young was the world and how bright its future. There is public access and government programming, and there have been a few foreign language programs, but many of the promises made by Hawkeye to gain its franchise have been forgotten.

One, a much hoped-for link with the UI's television studios, never came about because of a breakdown in negotiations. The blame for that certainly can't be laid at the feet of Hawkeye Cablevision, but nevertheless illustrates the kinds of problems involved in translating visions into reality.

More recently a customer's discomfiture over the processing of her complaint revealed that Hawkeye's normal complaint proceedure was not being followed by its staff, and that many complaints may simply never have been acted upon. Hawkeye's general manager, Bill Blough, has promised to rectify that

Finally, the city's Broadband Telecommunications Commission was not notified of July 1 fee increases for Home Box Office and Cinemax, the movie channels, until after they had gone into effect. Blough said the franchise agreement does not require that the commission be notified, but promised to give six weeks notice of future increases anyway. He also said Hawkeye's parent company, American Telecommunications Corporation, is pressing him to increase the basic service fee of $7.95 a month.

Anyone who believed that cable service would be all that was promised, or that rates would stay low forever, was naive. For when the public interest collides with business interests, it is usually the business interests that prevail. The surprise, especially in this monopoly situation, is that service is as good as it is, and that rates are as low as they are. Customers should hope it stays that way for the next 12 years.

So who are the real hypocrites?

ERE ARE SOME rumors I've heard lately: 1. Olivia Newton-John is a computer simulation. 2. Fernando Valenzuela is Babe Ruth's grandson

3. Ronald Reagan paid no state income tax while governor of California in 1970, and got rebates on his federal income tax in 1968 and and 1969. 4. Roxanne Conlin not only paid not one brass farthing in state, local, federal or galactic income tax last year, she also got a huge refund and gets food stamps which she spends on new hairdos and apartment buildings.

Of those rumors, only the third one is true. The fourth one does hold a grain of truth in that Roxanne Conlin, the Democratic candidate for governor of Iowa, didn't pay any state income tax last year. Her opponents have implied that means she is taking a "free ride" of sorts, wishing to lead state government but not willing to support it with her taxes. The Des Moines Register, which one must begin to count among her opponents, has given the matter her husband paid no state income tax front page attention for quite some time now, adding that the Conlins' total worth is about $2.2 million.

SOMEHOW, 2.2 million dollars doesn't seem like that much money to me. It is also beside the point, since state and federal income taxes are not based on total worth, they are based on income. That's where the phrase "income tax" comes from. And since they are based on income, and since Conlin and her husband lost money last year rather than making it, it is odd to criticize her for not paying tax on income that she didn't have.

If Conlin is to be criticized at all, it is for her handling of the issue. Dropping the matter all at once in the public's lap was like pinning a "Kick Me" sign to her coattail. Disclosing that she and while not pointing out at the same time that they paid $139,935 in taxes to other taxing bodies was a mistake. Her testy, defensive replies to questions about the matter have been ... well, testy, defensive replies. And her criticism of the press for dwelling on the matter, when she has dwelt on it at least as much as they have, approaches hypocricy.

But as long as we're on the subject of hypocrites, the two Republicans running for governor this year, official candidate Terry Branstad and candidate emeritus Robert Ray, need take no lessons from Conlin in that quality. They have been quite hard on Conlin for taking now legendary deductions. They have not said anything about the deductions themselves, whether they are inherently just or unjust.

NOW, IF THEY are unjust, why have they not used their considerable influence over the past years to try to have them repealed? And if they are just, why are they criticizing Conlin for taking them? The implication they draw is that Conlin should have paid more taxes than she was legally obliged to pay. Do Ray and Branstad pay any more taxes than they have to? Does anybody?

The whole thing is pretty silly. If Roxanne Conlin didn't owe any state income tax last year then she didn't owe any state income tax last year and it has nothing to do with her qualifications for governor or her honesty or integrity or anything else. To me, the primary villain of this piece is not Conlin or Ray or Branstad or the guy who wrote the tax code - it is The Des Moines Register.

They are clearly out to get her, or at least demean her. The Register's attitude toward Conlin has been manifest ever since they ran an array of pictures of how her hairstyle has changed over the years. Running a string of pictures of the shoes Terry Branstad has owned over the same period would have been just as meaningful, and just as insipid. Roxanne's taxes and hair and Terry's shoes just aren't issues. Why the gentlemen of the press in Des Moines think otherwise is beyond me.

OPEC meeting was dismal failure

PEC'S EXTRAORDINARY exercise in futility.

Representatives of the 13 member countries hoped to devise a formula to tighten the oil market. Instead, the meeting ended in disarray and served only to demonstrate the cartel's inability to maintain internal discipline in a weakened market.

OPEC must now rely on a market upswing to solve its problems. Member nations will watch each other like hawks, ready to swiftly change course should other members begin straying from the fold.

Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti said, "We now have to see what the others will do." Even before the meeting began, Calderon said Venezuela would boost production if other members increased output without OPEC consent

Rhetoric vs. reality

To the editor:

In her address to the Democratic State Convention, Roxanne Conlin charges that the Republican Party is the party of the privileged. Of course, a charge that the Democratic Party is the party of the mindless masses would raise sanctimonious howls warning of Republican classism. Conlin fails to mention that the average Republican, like the average Democrat, enjoys an average, middle-class income.

Likewise, she fails to mention that, generally, the most liberal Republicans, like many of the most liberal Democrats, are very wealthy. In fact, two of our wealthiest senators, Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, are two liberal Democrats.

Despite these petty details, it always seems fitting to regard Republicans with Falwellian fervor as the moneyed, seeking tax shelters and stealing from babies to give to generals. Forget that Democrats have been building shelters for more than two decades while they controlled the House, and that recently they built one of the biggest for themselves. Ignore the insistance of Rep. Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, D-Mass., that the Navy purchase a costlier and less effective fighter plane because it is to be built in Massachusetts.

But above all, do not mention that, since its inception in the 1930s, Democratic employment policy has depended on inflating the economy and fooling labor into working for a lower real wage. Upon comparing Democratic reality with Democratic rhetoric, although it may not be the party of the mindless masses, it certainly is appealing to that particular voting bloc. Paul Ginkel

Shultz wins final Senate approval, receives mandate to 'hasten peace' voted unanimously Thursday to confirm George Shultz as the nation's 60th secretary of state, and gave him a mandate to "hasten peace" in the turbulent Middle

Acting on a 97-0 vote with three members absent, the Senate gave final approval to President Reagan's nomination of the corporate executive and Nixon administration Cabinet officer to succeed Alexander Haig, who ended a stormy 17 months in the job with an abrupt resignation June 25.

The new secretary of state is expected to be sworn in quickly, possibly in a White House ceremony Friday.

"America is blessed with a man of exceptional character and qualifications for this vital position." Reagan said in a statement issued by the White House 20 minutes after the vote.

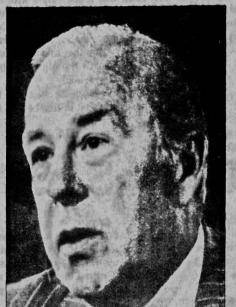

The full Senate acted little more than 24 hours after the Foreign Relations Committee endorsed Shultz, 17-0.

During debate before the vote, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, expressed "deep anguish" over Shultz's nomination because of his extensive business dealings with the Arab world as head of the California-based Bechtel Group.

REFERRING to a "pervasive Bechtel-Arab-Shultz connection," Metzenbaum said he was "profoundly troubled" that three former Bechtel executives now hold high government positions. In addition to Shultz, they are Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Deputy Energy Secretary W.

But Metzenbaum said he decided to vote for Shultz because he hoped his longstanding Arab ties would help him "to hasten peace in the Middle East."

Shultz sought to reassure senators who expressed fear that Bechtel's extensive ness dealings with Arab countries might tilt his policy-making against Israel and most of the half dozen senators on the floor during the debate praised Shultz unreservedly

Senate Foreign Relations chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., called on the administration to seize on indications the Palestine Liberation Organization has offered to recognize the existence of Israel. Such a recognition, Percy said, "would be a gigantic step in the right direction."

The renewed fighting between Iran and Iraq in the Persian Gulf, which threatens U.S. oil supplies, and continued stalemate in efforts to resolve the Israeli siege of West Beirut lent urgency to Shultz's confir-

ONLY THREE senators were absent and

Weicker, R-Conn., and Frank Murkowski,

Since July 5, when Haig moved out of the secretary of state's office, Deputy Secretary of State Walter Stoessel, a career foreign service officer, has run the department.

Shultz, an economist who served as Richard Nixon's secretary of labor, secretary of the treasury and budget director, and more recently headed Bechtel, emerged from two days of committee hearings with the endorsement of Democrats and Republicans alike.

During 12 hours of hearings, Shultz generally endorsed the Reagan administration's policy, saying in diplomatic affairs 'the president is the boss.'

Although his tough line on U.S.-Soviet relations was similar to Haig's, his manner also was more low-key.

The nominee coasted easily through questions on issues ranging from nuclear proliferation to the guerrilla war in El Salvador, but the Middle East dominated the questioning.

WHILE HE put a stronger emphasis than Haig on a future Palestinian role in the Middle East peace process, he reaffirmed Israel's position as America's "closest friend" in the region.

But Shultz avoided saying what specific steps the United States can take to defuse the war between Iran and Iraq. This country, he noted, has very little leverage given its lack of influence in either nation.

His long record of service in Democratic as well as Republican administrations helped to lift Shultz's nomination above the arena of partisan politics.

In addition to his Cabinet posts under Nixon, he was a senior staff economist in the Eisenhower administration and a labor consultant in the Kennedy administration.

Nation's industrial production decline raises doubts about recession's end

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The nation's industrial production fell 0.7 percent in June for the fourth month in a row, the Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday, raising new doubts about when the recession will

Some economists in and out of government said the report probably indicates that the overall economy continued to decline during the April-June quarter, despite earlier signs it might have shown a slight upturn then.

In addition to announcing the June decline in the physical output of the nation's factories, the board revised earlier figures to show declines of 1.1 percent in April and 0.6 percent in May - both considerably steeper than previously reported. The reserve board's industrial production index stood at 138.4 in June, 10.1 percent below its most recent peak in July 1981 - just before the current recession began. That drop approaches the average fall in industrial production of 10.4 percent during seven post World War II recessions. It is not as large as the 14.7 percent production drop during the severe recession of 1973-75.

THE ADMINISTRATION and many others still expect recovery in the July-September quarter, but some fear it will be

One administration economist, who declined to be identified, said, "Obviously it's not good news. It clearly shows that the recession for the industrial sector has not vet ended.

The one bright spot was that production of consumer durable goods — large items including automobiles and household appliances - continued their increase, rising 1.7 percent in June. Production of consumer non-durable items was down 0.5 per-

The worst showing was for production of equipment used by business, which fell 2.7 percent in June and is down 15.4 percent from the July 1981 business peak - more than its 14.3 percent decline in 1974-75.

The Commerce Department last month reported a "flash" estimate, based on partial figures, that the inflation-adjusted gross national product would grow 0.6 percent during the April-June quarter, after two quarters of decline.

ROBERT ORTNER, chief Commerce Department economist, said the reserve board's latest report indicates that when all the figures are in, they "may now show a decline instead" in the GNP for the second quarter. The next set of GNP figures, due Wednesday, are subject to later revision.

Ortner said high interest rates are delaying economic recovery by making it harder for businesses to invest in new equipment. "I think this underlines the importance of getting those rates down," Ortner said. "For continuing drops in interest rates, we need to bring budget deficits down as much as possible and hold down inflation and convince the public inflation will stay down."

"I still believe the economy is about to turn," Ortner said, "and I still believe the consumer is going to be the one to lead the economy out of the recession. But if consumers are the only ones turning up, it will be a very weak recovery indeed.

El Salvador aid likely to continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Citing political progress and denying the demise of the land reform, the State Department clearly indicated Thursday that President Reagan will certify El Salvador for continued U.S. aid later this month.

"El Salvador's new Government of National Unity is making clear its commitment to carry forward the democratic process and the economic and land reforms now underway, and to curb abuses of official authority," Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Thomas Enders told the Senate foreign operations subcommittee

In an appeal to Congress not to cut funds from the $226.2 million in military and economic aid requested for El Salvador, Enders charged that the U.S.-backed government there needs aid to withstand the stepped-up "campaign of violence and terrorism" of leftist guerrillas.

He laid the blame for this on the leftist Sandinista regime in neighboring Nicaragua, where he said Salvadoran guerrilla leaders met after the elections to reassess their strategy.

UNDER THE foreign aid law, Reagan must certify by July 28 that El Salvador is making efforts to comply with a number of political, economic and human rights conditions attached by Congress to the aid program for that country.

Enders told the panel Reagan will make that certification only if, among other things, "there is strong evidence of progress in the land reform. Reports that the new government that land reform program prompted the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to cut $100 million out of the $166.3 million military aid program for El Salvador.

That action was proposed by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who also testified to the subcommittee but whose testimony was in sharp contrast to that of "The situation in El Salvador has improved little," Dodd said. "In fact, the country appears to be on the edge of a dangerous precipice and we find ourselves threatened by the military trap we failed to said it had little influence with either side and no power to restrain the Iranians, whose declared aim was to overthrow the Iraqi regime of President Saddam Hussein in revenge for Iraq's earlier invasion.

Other conservative Arab states fear that if Iran succeeds, it will be the first step in Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's drive to spread his fiery Islamic fundamentalism through the oil-producing Persian Gulf to topple pro-Western regimes.

Denied access to the battlefront, Western reporters were left to cover the war of the communiques as carried by the state-run news agencies and radios of both sides, monitored from far-away listening posts.

Iraqi communiques said Iraqi jet-fighters shot down two U.S.-made Iranian Phantom jets in a dogfight over Basra. They said ground forces killed more than 1,000 Iranians, captured hundreds more and destroyed 33 tanks to break the back of "Operation

BY EARLY Thursday, the communiques said, "Iraqi forces managed to purge Iraq's soil of the Iranian invading forces ... the enemy was defeated and fled the battlefield."

Thousands of Iraqis danced in the streets of their capital, Baghdad, when

But Iran said its "Islamic combatants severely smashed the enemy counter-attack." The Iranian news and forced to flee."

Tehran Radio said Iranian forces destroyed 21 tanks and captured more than 600 Iraqis, among them a general.

Analysis

The Iranians brushed aside an appeal by the U.N. Security Council to halt their offensive against Iraq and pushed across the southern border at the top of

This places them on the doorstep of Kuwait and uncomfortably close to Saudi Arabia itself.

The Gulf states have poured at least $20 billion into Iraq to help it resist the Iranian offensive. But the Iraqi army has crumbled under the assaults of tough Iranian regulars backed by suicide squads of revolutionary guards.

Like the Iranians, many Iraqis are Shiite Moslems who could form the basis of a new government allied with Tehran if the Iranians succeeded in toppling Hussein.

Such a development would vastly alter the strategic balance in the Middle East, facilitating the emergence of a Syrian-Iraqi-Iranian alliance and opening the way for an extension of Soviet influence.

ECONOMICALLY, the results of an Iranian victory are difficult to predict. Iraq is still managing to export some 600,000 barrels of oil a day through a pipeline across Turkey. The loss of this supply would have little impact on the glutted world market.

The Iranians, now exporting about 2 million barrels a day, may attempt to step up supplies in order to earn the money needed to replace war losses, and in so doing, challenge Saudi Arabia's leadership of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

But as long as the fighting continues, there is a strong risk that both Iraq's and Iran's oil production could be temporarily knocked out by enemy attacks on oil installations.

The Iranian assertiveness was amply apparent during last week's OPEC meeting in Vienna that deadlocked over enforcing production curbs partially because of antagonism between Iran and Saudi Arabia.

But the extraordinary threat to the stability of the Gulf region throws a deep shadow over the strategic and economic security of the United States and its Western partners, while perhaps placing new opportunities in the lap of Iran's neighbor-in-waiting, the Soviet Union.

Mideast

"resolved quickly and we certainly call on the nations in the region to help us in providing a solution."

DEPUTY WHITE HOUSE press secretary Larry Speakes declined to confirm a report in The New York Times that Reagan appealed to King Fahd of Saudi Arabia for help in pressuring Syria and other Arab states to accept the PLO.

But Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said in Cairo that a PLO exit from Beirut will only add to Middle East instability and called for an Arab summit, with Egyptian participation, to forge a unified policy on the PLO. In Jerusalem, Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir indicated Israel will not wait the 30 days Secretary of State George Shultz suggested may be needed to negotiate a peaceful PLO withdrawal from Continued from page 1

"I think 30 days is a very long time," Shamir told ABC News. But an Israeli official, who asked not to be identified, was more blunt. "It's much too long,

Shamir said Israel would give U.S. envoy Philip Habib more time to mediate a peaceful solution before using military means to oust the 6,000 Palestinian guerrillas surrounded by Israel's forces.

"We are still waiting but we cannot wait without any limit of time," Shamir said. Shultz made the statement earlier this week during confirmation hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Speakes said the United States had "set no timetable" for the talks. He said the administration views "this situation as critical and dangerous because there is always the possibility of future violence there.

Dead fans are tolerant if they are anything and the guy was mostly dealt with in a semi-silent language of disap-proving glares and mumbled "bummers" and "mellow-outs." But he got a can of Pabst from someone, and a slice of hot pizza from someone else.

A lot of kids there were so young they could not recall anything about the Dead's early years. In a way, they were the most serious of the Deadheads sitting in the rain.

THE YOUNGSTERS were up toward the front of the line, decked out in full regalia. One had what looked like a hubcap hanging around his neck — some strangely bland vision of the sort of pendant worn by Jimi Hendrix and fringed leather moccasin boots.

The source of this rumor can only be speculated upon - some twisted misanthrope in the throws of a terrible flashback - but the effect was a mild sort of paranoia. There were a lot of people holding money for friends, and no tickets for six out of 10 of those friends would make for a lot of bad energy that no one cared to think

Health funds 'may soon run dry'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Federal health care budget cuts will endanger preventive medicine programs and may mean "more and more patients will come in feet first," city public health officials said Thursday.

John Waller, president of the U.S. Conference of City Health Officers, told a news conference challenging federal budget priorities that the government is "opting out in the guise of New Federalism.'

'Local governments, the providers of the last resort, cannot ignore human needs, but the well may soon run dry," said Waller, public health director of

Waller and the top health officials of Philadelphia, San Francisco, Baltimore and Chicago acknowledged that figures on the results of the cuts are scarce and the effects have not yet been felt fully. But they recited a litany of reduc-

C.R. exhibit traces birth, growth of artists' creative self-awareness

By Suzanne Richerson

Staff Writer

For all the political independence declared in 1776, it took America more than a century to free itself from European domination in matters of cultural inspiration and style. Writers like Emerson, Whitman and Poe broke the trail in literature, but it wasn't until the 20th century that painters and visual artists developed their

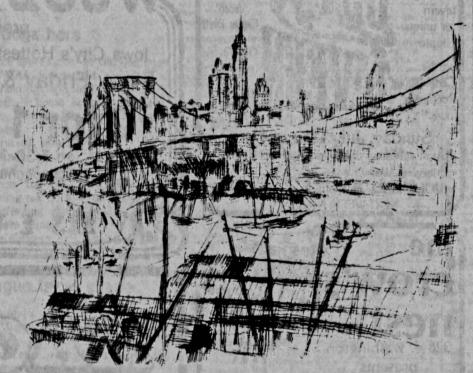

'Twentieth Century American Masters 1911-1957," the current exhibit of works by American painters and printmakers now on display at the Cedar Rapids Museum of Art, traces the birth and growth of those artists' creative self-awareness.

The earliest works in the show from such artists as Charles Sheeler and Max Weber date from 1911. Both Sheeler and Weber eventually grew to express their own native artistic characteristics, but the paintings on display in the gallery reflect their debt to European artists - Cezanne particularly, in Sheeler's "Landscape Abstraction" (1915) and Weber's "The Lake"

Some of the artists displayed here painted landscapes and rural scenes — Georgia O'Keeffe's "Lake George Blue" (1926) is an arrangement of sensuous shapes in strong greens and blues, while Man Ray's "Ramapo Hills" (1914) dramatizes the mystery of nature in a massive black monolith - but many others found their subject matter in the designs apparent in growing urban America.

THE BROOKLYN BRIDGE, the first k connecting Brooklyn to Manhattan, seemed especially attractive as a symbolic urban structure. John Marin's etching 'Brooklyn Bridge' (1911) and Samuel Halpert's similarly titled painting (1913), although stylistically different, both depict the powerful span of the bridge as well as e architectural outlines of the city skyscrapers and the busy river traffic. Factories as well as bridges interested inters as structural subjects. In Preston Dickinson's "Factory" (1920), the interplay of vertical and diagonal lines seems to echo Duchamp's famous "Nude

John Marin's etching "Brooklyn Bridge" is currently at the Cedar Rapids Museum of Art as part of the "Twentieth Century American Masters 1911-1957" exhibit.

Descending a Staircase." Dickinson and Charles Demuth, whose "Roof and Steeple" (1921) also appears in the show, went on to create their own idiom in cool and geometric precisionism, one of the first truly American art styles

Although the structural qualities of the growing cities interested many artists, there were also those who concerned themselves with the people in that urban enironment. John Sloan's "Model in Dressing Room" (1933) portrays the mundane and unglamorous aspects of the fashion model's world. The rigid vertical lines of the wooden wall, a washbasin and a single chair form the setting for the nude model who dominates the canvas. The colors are partly Renoir oranges and pinks but with an ironic addition of olive tones and sharp outlining that nullifies the romantic possibilities of the scene.

ONLY A FEW works from the 1950s appear in the show with little intimation of the outpouring of creativity that would appear in more recent decades. Milton Avery's "Figure on a Jetty" (1957) greets the viewer at the entry to the exhibit; that painting and Adolph Gottlieb's stark abstraction "The Frozen Sounds, Number 1" (1951) only hint at the ferment going on at the time in American art.

Perhaps the more contemporary art movements will be subjects of future exhibitions - this effort to place the American artist within the context of a growing industrial country sets the stage well for the artistic developments of the past twenty years.

"Twentieth Century American Masters 1911-1957" will continue at the Cedar Rapids Museum of Art until Sept. 19.

Soccer a kick in lowa City but not a big hit state-wide

By Matt Gallo

With the recent world-wide interest in soccer at a high level because of the World Cup in Spain, many question whether the United States will ever field a team that is competitive with the world.

Everyone agrees that the Americans only chance of improving its soccer quality lies in the develop-ment of youth soccer and high school programs. Soccer programs have sprung up in many of the big cities and are beginning to filter down to the smaller communities

Iowa City has been one of the pioneers in Iowa youth soccer. Currently the youth soccer program here, the Iowa City Kickers, has over 1300 participants from first grade through high school.

STILL, IOWA HIGH SCHOOL Athletic Association Director Bernie Saggau said only four Iowa high schools, the Davenport schools, Central, West and Assumption, and Bettendorf, offer varsity

"Even though it's inexpensive, starting a new sport would take a lot of support," Saggau said, adding that before Iowa could have a state soccer tournament, 15 percent of Iowa's 493 high schools would have to adopt it as a varsity sport. He said if soccer were to develop in Iowa it would probably be

"I question it because it takes a long time for the kids to learn soccer as youngsters," he said. "But any sport that gets kids excited would catch on."

But, according to John Phipps, president of the Iowa City Kickers, eventually soccer will probably be added to the Iowa City public schools' program. "Someone from this office has approached the Iowa City school district about soccer and they gave us no commitment," he said. "But the general feeling is that it's inevitable.

THE ATHLETIC DIRECTOR of the Iowa City Public Schools, Bob White, said soccer is a possibility in the schools here, but added that presently there are two problems with it: a lack of money to start the program, and a lack of certified coaches.

"You don't add new programs when you're trying to hang on to the ones you already have. But soccer is the sport of the future and someday I'd imagine it will be in our program." White, who declined to say when soccer might be implemented here, said.

Phipps said soccer has mushroomed in Iowa City from about 30 kids who played on the first Kickers team in 1975 to the 1300 who participate now. Presently the Kickers are divided by age into six groups from first grade through high school.

"Our goal is to provide a community-wide program to promote soccer," he said. "It's a simple game to learn, but mastering the skills takes a lot more time."

HE ADDED THAT from the information he has gathered from international soccer players who have played in Iowa City, the U.S. probably won't field a World Cup level soccer team for at least ten years.

The biggest advantages of soccer are its safety and inexpensiveness. Since its inception in Iowa City, only one serious injury has ben reported among the youth league. And the costs of soccer are minuscule compared to football. The major expense in soccer are the goals. A soccer uniform consists of a shirt. shorts, socks and shoes.

Additionally, Phipps said because it is a game where specialty coaches aren't necessary, a couple of coaches can handle a team.

If anyone thinks soccer is simply a passing fad, Phipps begs to differ. "Soccer is definitely here to

Chicago signs McMahon

CHICAGO (UPI) - Brigham Young quarterback Jim McMahon, the Chicago Bears' No. 1 draft pick, reluctantly signed a three-year contract with the NFL club late Thursday night.

"I'm not happy at all," said McMahon, up against a 11 p.m. deadline for signing imposed by the NFL Players Association. "It's the only option I've got. If I want to be in camp, I've got to

McMahon and his agent, Jerry Argovitz, had been unhappy with the Bears' offer which was

But the union informed unsigned rookies that if they did not sign before the expiration of the union contract at midnight Thursday, they could no longer negotiate with NFL clubs and could not report to training camps when they open later this month.

"WE'RE HERE FOR one reason - the distress and duress that's on my client," Argovitz told reporters when McMahon arrived at the Bears' downtown offices to sign his contract. "He has no rights. His rights have been taken away from him."

Argovitz complained that player association director Ed Garvey had effectively forced McMahon into signing even though McMahon is not yet a member of the union.

McMahon is considered a possibility to unseat Vince Evans as the Bears' starting quarterback almost immediately.

"I think he'll do a good job," said Owner George Halas after the signing. "He's sharp, smart,

"Bob Maynard is a man I was very impressed with," LoCasale said. "But he tried to solve a problem and he came up short. I don't know if he was hurt by that or what, but he never should have said those things."

The Raiders agreed with Los Angeles officials last Wednesday to move the team following a three-year legal battle with the NFL. The team is preparing to open its exhibition season on Aug. 14 against their long-time neighbors, the San Francisco 49ers, with the first game at the Coliseum scheduled for Aug. 29 against the Green Bay Packers.

Havnie sails to lead

Sandra Haynie fired a four-under-par 32 on the back nine Thursday for an 18hole total of 68, tying Kathy Hite and Chris Johnson for the first-round lead of the $200,000 Mayflower Classic.

Haynie, who is second on the moneywinning list behind JoAnne Carner and will pass the absent Carner if she earns just $427, said that she lost her concentration early on the front nine after shooting an eagle on the first hole.

Graham tops field at Open with 65

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (UPI) - Tour rookie Tim Graham stunned the veterans by firing a five-under-par 65 Thursday for a one-stroke lead in the opening round of the $200,000 Quad

Bob Murphy, Payne Stewart and Dan Halldorson were tied for second at four-under in the race for the $36,000 first-place money. Defending champion Dave Barr was five strokes behind the leader at even-par 70.

Graham, who has played in only six other tournaments this year, finishing no better than 19th, collected seven birdies and two bogeys to take the lead on a sultry summer day at the Oakwood

The Baton Rouge, La., resident said the difference between his previous finishes and Thursday's round was in

"I've been playing better golf tee-togreen all year and putting worse," Graham said. "I've been working on putting and it's coming around.

GRAHAM, WHO TURNED 25 Tuesday, said he's not ready to predict that he'll still be on top when the tournament ends Sunday

"I'm not driving well and there's a lot of room out there," he said. "But I'm not going to change my game plan. If I can drive well on the course I can really score well.

Graham, the only golfer among the leaders who teed off in the afternoon, said the afternoon players were at a disadvantage because the winds had kicked up and the greens became faster as they dried out from an early morning shower. The rainfall made for excellent morning conditions on the greens at the par-70, 6,514-yard course.

Stewart, who has drawn stares from spectators because of his 1920s style knickers, birdied five holes on the front nine but lost the lead when he bogeyed the 16th hole.

Eight golfers, including tournament favorites Calvin Peete, who won the Greater Milwaukee Open last Sunday, Miller Barber, who won the U.S. Senior Open Championship, and Bob Byman, who won the Scandinavian Open, were bunched at three-under-par 67 for fifth

American Bobby Clampett drives out of rough on the 18th round of the British Open. Clampett fired a five-under 67 and has a two-shot lead in the tourney. hole of the Royal Troon Golf Club during Thursday's first

British lead to Clampett at five under

TROON, Scotland (UPI) - Adapting to the wind and bone-chilling conditions with the ease of a native Scotsman, Bobby Clampett made his first attempt at the British Open a memorable one Thursday when he shot an incredible five-under-par 67 for a two-shot opening round lead

'To be quite honest, the round I played today is definitely in the top five rounds I've ever played," said Clampett, nattily dressed in white knickers. 'It was a very difficult day, and for me it was kind of a phenomenal day."

U.S. Open champion Tom Watson, another man who thrives in blustery conditions, overcame a shaky start to share second place at 69 with South African Nick Price, but Jack Nicklaus, never able to put himself in a positive frame of mind, fell to 77.

FOLLOWING A HEAVY morning rain, the wind chill factor crashed to about 40 degrees, causing scores to soar over the gray and barren 7,067yard Royal Troon links course.

So difficult were the conditions that of the field of 150, only five men -Clampett, Price, Craig Stadler, West man German Bernhard Langer and Paul Way of Britain - all with 35, were able to better par of 36 on the back nine, which was played into the head of the swirling wind.

Defending champion Bill Rogers, very happy with his 73, said he lost some feeling in his hands because of the cold, and referring to the sub-par scorers he added, "I don't know what course some of the other guys played."

ARNOLD PALMER, at 52 making a return to the course where he won the Open 20 years ago, had an eagle-three on the fourth hole and came in with a five, seven, 16, seven and 10 feet on the fine 71 despite picking up three bogeys

"At one point the fingers on my left hand got a little numb from being cold," said Palmer, who wore a bright tartan hat which he referred to as be-

Tied for fourth place at 70 were Britons Ken Brown and Des Smyth and

British Open leaders

Tom Watson, U.S. Ken Brown, Britain Bernhard Langer, W.Germany Johnny Miller, U.S. Craig Stadler, U.S. Danny Edwards, U.S. Seve Ballesteros, Spain Masahiro Kuramoto, Japan Jose-Maria Canizarea, Spain

Langer, and along with Palmer at 71 were Masters champion Stadler, the current leader on the U.S. earnings list with $319,976; Seve Ballesteros and Jose-Maria Canizares of Spain; Johnny Miller; Danny Edwards and Masahiro Kuramoto of Japan.

Curtis Strange was at even par 72 along with Britons Mark Thomas and Dave Russell, and among those at 73 with Rogers were Tom Kite, Fuzzy Zoeller, David Graham and Greg Nor-

SOME OF THE other big names were having their problems, though Lee Trevino, a two-time British Open champion, was at 78, including a quadruple bogey eight on the 10th hole; Tom Weiskopf, the 1973 winner when the Open last was held at Troon, had a 79: Bruce Lietzke, three-under at the turn, soared to 77; and Jerry Pate had

Following his round, Pate withdrew from the tournament.

Clampett, yet to win as a pro although he tied for third in last month's U.S. Open, had birdie putts of second, third seventh, eighth and 11th holes, and saved par with a 15-foot putt on the ninth

Contract expired, woes mount in NFL player, owner meetings

NEW YORK (UPI) - The NFL Management Council unilaterally rejected the Players Association's proposal on counseling and the use of drugs Thursday as talks ended without progress.

The basic agreement between the players and owners expired at 11 p.m. Thursday and talks are not scheduled to resume until next week, probably in Washington. Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFLPA, said negotiations remain fruitless after the union's drug counseling proposal was submitted in the morning ses-"They have proven over the past three days that they are not ready to start bargaining," Garvey said. "We got nowhere. I don't personally think that their committee has any authority.

WASHINGTON PLAYER representative Mark Murphy sounded even more pessimistic. 'Anything that they can get us to do to make us look foolish is to their advantage and they have no intention of reaching an agreement on any issue," Murphy said. When the contract expires tonight, the no-strike, nolockout article is deleted so that anything we can do to let them know the players are united we must do." The Management Council still has on the table Tuesday's 48-page proposal for a new contract, which the un-"We are going nowhere and not so rapidly," said Jack Donlan, head of the league's bargaining arm. "Tuesday we gave the union a total money package and they said: 'rejected.' Today for the first time we got a specific proposal from the union.

"THEY HAVE A penchant for wanting to have joint committees and under certain circumstances, that's called for. Not in this case. It's not that we won't deal with the drug problem and other problems. Garvey said the economics of the league simplifies matters considerably. "The NFL is talking about taking in something like $600 million next year," Garvey said. "The average salary is a disgrace. Their figure is $90,000, our figure is $83,000, so let's take theirs. Baseball is $265,000, basketball is $215,000 - it's almost ridiculous.'

Past ACC announcer Thacker chosen to do Big Ten telecasts

By Steve Batterson Assistant Sports Editor

North Carolina sportscaster Jim Thacker has been named play-by-play announcer for Metro Sports' Big Ten basketball telecasts during the next three years.

Metro President Leonard L. Klompus announced Thursday the signing of Thacker to a three-year contract to broadcast the Big Ten basketball package the Rockville, Md., organization has put together.

Marsha Turner, general manager of Metro, descibes the acquisition of Thacker as "quite a big coup." Thacker's experience includes coverage of the U.S. Open for ESPN, the Masters Golf Championships and the NFL for CBS-TV and a package of Atlantic Coast Conference basketball games for Metro last season.

BIG TEN Commisioner Wayne Duke

of Thacker. "Thacker will bring a national flavor to the role of sportscaster on our Metro Sports' Big Ten games and we are pleased with his appointment," Duke said. "His knowledge and experience in college basketball will certainly add to the viewer enjoyment of the game."

Metro recently signed a three-year pact with the Big Ten for coverage of 80 basketball games during the next three seasons. The contract calls for 20 games to be telecast this season, 10 each on Wednesday nights beginning at 7 p.m. and on Saturday evenings starting at 8 p.m.

"We will be featuring each team no less than two times on each night, Turner said. "Metro is thrilled with our new contract with the Big Ten, though we have been involved with them by coordinating their cable coverage for the past three years."

THE BIG TEN package of games has been sold in nearly all major markets in the Midwest, including to WGN in Chicago. ESPN has purchased the entire package of games, and according to Turner, the Big Ten cage action will be broadcast in homes in Los Angeles as well as other major markets in the East. Some of the games are also slated to be televised internationally.

In Eastern Iowa, the Iowa Television Network has purchased the rights to the Metro games and Bill Bolster of KWWL-TV in Waterloo, the flagship station of the network, said the network has not decided whether it will televise the entire package. The ITN also owns exclusive rights to Iowa basketball coverage. 'We haven't reached a decision on whether to televise the entire package yet," Bolster said. "We purchased the games because they will have Iowa
