Branstad delaying repayment of loan

Former Iowa college students struggling to complete payment on government-backed student loans are in good company Lt. Gov. Terry Branstad has yet to repay the balance on a National Direct Student Loan he received while attending the UI as an undergraduate

"If you will look at my disclosures you will see my money is wrapped up in mortgages," the Republican candidate for governor said last week.

"I am paying some pretty high interest rates ... including 18 percent on some farm equipment. I would be pretty stupid to pay back a 3 percent loan when I have some at 18 percent," Branstad said.

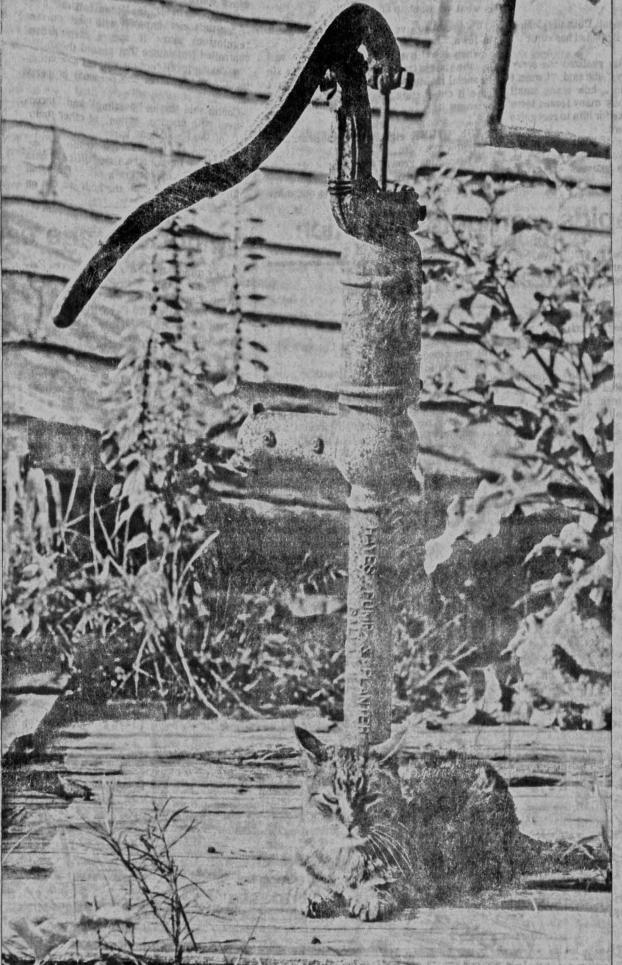

The low interest loans are typically due in full within 10 years of the date they are obtained, but Branstad's decision to delay repayment is legally justified because monthly loan payments are deferred when the recipient returns to school or enters the armed services. Branstad served in the U.S. Army from 1969-71 and returned to Drake University to receive his law

THE UNPAID balance of the loan was $606.78 on April 1, according to Susan Neely, an aid to Branstad. Local Democrats claim Branstad's oan situation is comparable to the controversy surrounding their gubernatorial candidate Roxanne Conlin's losses in rental property that resulted in her paying no state income taxes and only $2,995 in federal income taxes last Republican officials have criticized Conlin for taking advantage of tax shelters while publicly speaking out against them. Now it's the Democrats who, while acknowledging the legality, are questioning the ethics of their opponent's financial dealings.

Tom Slockett, Johnson County Auditor, said Sunday the loan issue is "very similar to the situation with Roxanne Conlin's taxes.'

Jeff Cox, Johnson County Democratic Party chairman, said the two issues are "precisely com-"It sounds to me like he simply is not paying it off because it is See Branstad, page 7

Title IX statute to be enforced despite fund cuts, officials say

By Nancy Lonergan

Despite a $2 million cut since 1981 in the budget of the agency charged with enforcement of Title IX and other antidiscriminatory statutes, federal officials insist enforcement of Title IX will not be curtailed.

Since it became federal law as part of the Educational Amendments of 1972, Title IX has forbidden sex discrimination in programs that receive federal funds.

Funds for the U.S. Office of Civil Rights, which investigates Title IX cases, have decreased for the past two

nian leader Yasser Arafat gave visting U.S. congressmen Sunday a qualified, written pledge to accept U.N. resolutions on the Palestinian issue, including those recognizing Israel's right

McCloskey said Arafat signed a handwritten document that said 'Chairman Arafat agrees to all U.N. resolutions relevant to the Palestinian question.'

McCloskey said he asked Arafat if this included U.N. Security Council resolution 242 - which provides for Israel's right to exist within secure and internationally recognized borders and Arafat said, "Yes."

But McCloskey and Rep. Nick Rahall, D.-W.Va., leader of the sixmember delegation, also said that when pressed Arafat refused to make a statement explicitly recognizing the

"WE ASKED HIM to make it explicit, simple, straightforward, not hedged, not ambiguous, but clearly stated," Rahall said in a telephone interview. But Arafat refused, he said.

McCloskey quoted Arafat as saying: 'We want it (acceptance of Israel) in terms of a U.N. resolution, accepting both the Israeli and the Palestinian right to exist. We want simultaneous

Asked if Arafat's statements were a breakthrough, Rahall said, "No."

The PLO in the past has rejected several U.N. resolutions because they only referred to the Palestinian 'refugee problem" rather than the need for self-determination.

Israel, whose jets bombed PLO targets in West Beirut for the fourth day in a row, called Arafat's comments a "shoddy propaganda ploy" aimed at wresting a political victory from a military defeat.

THE ISRAELI Foreign Ministry said the PLO's move "joins a long line of announcements" in which "nothing clear was ever said that the terror organization essentially changes its aim, which was and remains the destruction of the State of Israel." A State Department official said the United States "would recommend extreme caution in assessing the meaning of this development until it is clear precisely what is involved."

U.N. resolution 242, passed in 1967, acknowledges the "sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of every state in the area (Mideast) and their right to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries free from threats or acts of force."

A ranking PLO official noted resolution 242 contained "de facto" recognition of the Jewish state, but others See Mideast, page 7

Boxleitner to bring the heroic trend to TV

By Roxanne T. Mueller Special to The Daily Iowan

The naive among us might like to think that trends evolve out of thin air. If the truth be known, however, behind every success like Star Wars and every character like Archie Bunker, there are calculating little show business minds eagerly testing the winds of public sentiment, hoping to cash in.

If things are going well in the nation, mindless sitcoms like "Three's Company" proliferate and even survive into the not-so-good times. When the economy is on the skids, as it is now, fantasy gets the go-ahead. The 1930s may have spawned tough, realistic gangster movies but they also offered the serials of Flash Gordon and classic horror films - escapism of the highest

Obviously, things are not so good again, and the movie companies behind the fantasy-oriented E.T., Poltergeist and Star Trek II are cleaning up this summer, with last year's fantasy summer blockbuster Raiders of the Lost Ark re-invading movie theaters as

THAT WILL BE welcome news to the people behind the new CBS actionadventure series, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," set to run Tuesday nights beginning this fall. Aspects of the series bear a rather heavyhanded resemblance to Raiders: The action is set in exotic locations like Singapore and Malaya and will focus on the adventures of a heroic type named Frank Buck who becomes involved in all kinds of intrigue just before the outbreak of World War II.

The differences? Our hero is not a professor like Indiana Jones but a big game trapper, and his aim isn't to find lost archeological treasure but to capture exotic animals and send them to American zoos. Then again, our hero is surrounded by a beautiful but gutsy woman friend and a shady character who speaks with an accent. "Daktari"

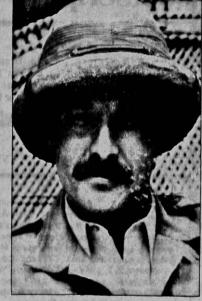

The man heading this foray into adventurous exotica is Bruce Boxleitner, who's currently playing the title role in Walt Disney's dazzlingly designed film Tron. It's no accident that Boxleitner is cast in the heroic mold in both Tron and "Bring 'Em Back Alive." The operative word here is package and Boxleitner holds the strings.

MEETING THE press in Chicago, Boxleitner tended to sit back in his impeccably styled three-piece suit and stroke his mustache while his manager, Jay Bernstein, a goldknobbed walking stick at his feet, explained the grand plan.

'What has been happening in my opinion," said Bernstein, "is that in the 1970s, we were in this period of the 'everyman' phase where people wanted to see real life the way it was and we had the Dustin Hoffmans and Richard Dreyfusses. Everybody looked like everybody else and everybody had the same problems. Now we don't

Branstad unveils lowa economic plan

By Mark Leonard

CEDAR RAPIDS - Creating 180,000 new jobs in Iowa over the next five years is the goal of Republican gubernatorial hopeful Terry Branstad's economic development

Unveiling his program Friday in a Cedar Rapids press conference, Branstad said, "It is an ambitious goal, but one that I think is at-

His Democratic opponent, Roxanne Conlin, said Sunday she is glad Branstad has come up with a plan.

"Apparently he finally realized the sorry state of Iowa's economy," she said. "I wasn't sure how many jobs lost, how many small businesses closed and how many forced farm sales it was going to take for him to recognize the scope of the problem.

Part of Branstad's nine-point plan is the development of an "Iowa Fund." The fund, he said, will be "run like a business" by private

"ALTHOUGH its Board of Directors would be recommended by the governor, the fund would run as a business, not a bureaucracy, and would not require state revenues."

The goal of the fund is $15 million worth of stock created by a private investment. The money will be used strictly for ventures within the state

When asked how he will enforce the use of the fund, he said, "If the governor taps on the shoulder of the key individual and says, 'This is what we want to do,' they'll do it.

'We want to give Iowans a chance to invest in Iowa," he said.

When asked if special interest groups will say the state is trying to compete with private financial institutions, Branstad said, "I don't care if out-of-state groups want our money, we want it.

THE OTHER eight points to Branstad's economic plan are:

• Attracting growth industries - developing an "aggressive strategy" for recruiting high technology, service industries and other

· Expanding Iowa's recreation and travel industries - increasing the emphasis placed on tourist spending which in Iowa has been under $340,000 and ranks 49th among the states in this area. • Encouraging construction industry — ensuring the safety and investment of Iowa pension funds.

BRANSTAD SAID these programs will create 180,000 jobs at a "very minimal" cost to the state.

He said it will take "all Iowans working together" since the "governor can't do it by himself."

He also stressed that economic recovery will not happen overnight.

Pedestrian campus proposal of '72 now all but forgotten

By Jeff Beck

Ten years ago the concept of a pedestrian campus was called "terribly important to the academic community" by UI President Willard Boyd.

Now, it has been all but forgotten.

UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard said the renewal of the downtown area has reduced traffic, and the proposals to close streets, once considered important, are no longer being con-

"We have not discussed it lately at all. It's hard to say what the administration's feelings are," Hub-

UI President James O. Freedman said there has been no discussion of pedestrian conditions in his first three months in office, but he hopes green space on the campus can be extended.

"I am a lover of green space. ... In the years down the road I hope we are able to extend the green area on campus," Freedman said.

There are plans to extend the green space on the east side of campus, and Freedman hopes that a grassy park and recreation area can one day replace the Pentacrest parking lot.

FREEDMAN SAID closing additional streets has not been considered and it might not be feasible now.

In 1972 a movement to close streets and expand the traffic-free areas on campus was begun with the support of UI student government and the Boyd administration. At that time, the groups planned for eight square blocks of traffic-free campus, in addi-

Plans called for closing segments of College, Capitol, Dubuque and Madison streets to make a 12block traffic-free campus area downtown.

But the Iowa City Council effectively shelved the plan in the mid-1970s when it decided against many of the street closings, Richard Gibson, UI director of Facilities Planning, said.

Gibson said segments of College Street were closed, and a section of Washington Street north of the engineering building has been narrowed. Traffic has been restricted to buses and trucks on one side of

ALTHOUGH THE Pentacrest is still the only campus area without traffic, both Gibson and Hubbard agree the pedestrian conditions have improved since the early 1970s

"We've gotten part of what we hoped for. It has been a big improvement," Hubbard said.

He said there have been noticeable decreases in traffic and exhaust fumes - the two greatest concerns in the proposal for a pedestrian campus. Hubbard said the establishment of Cambus in January 1972 was one of the most noteworthy products of the pedestrian campus movement, making all UI facilities more accessible.

Moving parking to the edge of campus has also been partially accomplished, Gibson said. There are plans to add more parking on the fringes of campus by the new sports arena and remove a parking lot by the Field House. He said there are plans for rearranging parking at the UI library, but they are "in very conceptual stages."

Council to discuss ordinance to establish city rental codes

By Mark Leonard

An ordinance to establish minimum code requirements for rental dwelling units in Iowa City will be taken up by the Iowa City Council.

The ordinance proposal provides minimum standards for kitchens, bathrooms, lighting, exits, ventilation, fire safety and communal living units.

Each unit must also meet a heating requirement. Dwelling units would be required to have heating facilities capable of safely heating all habitable rooms to a temperature of at least 68 degrees.

Along with the other requirements, the ordinance states that maximum occupancy for dwelling units

The ordinance's stated objective is to "protect the health, safety and general welfare of the citizens of Iowa City, Iowa.

THE CITY'S policy in owner-occupied residences has been to threaten a water shut-off in cases of delinquent bills. In rental units, however, a memo from City Manager Neal Berlin and Finance Director Rosemary Vitosh said "tenants frequently move out without paying outstanding water bills ... When this occurs, the city issues a lien against the owner, which the owner must pay when he pays his property taxes. If the unit is sold, the lien must be paid off before the sale can go through. City Attorney Robert Jansen advised the city to continue its lien policy on unpaid water bills until a court decides otherwise

In most other cities around the area, collection services are paid to collect the unpaid bills. Cedar Rapids, Waterloo and Des Moines are some of the cities operating on this procedure.

PROPERTY OWNERS in town also object to the city charging when a tenant moves out and the city is not notified of a new tenant.

The meter is not removed because of the additional wear and tear on meters, the additional staff time required and the problems associated with getting inside the apartment/house to do the removal," the memo said.

The memo added that "Iowa City appears to be the only city that requires payment of an outstanding Also appearing on the next council agenda will be bill, once shut-off procedures have been started, an amendment to the water utility ordinance which prior to allowing a new tenant to move in and have will clarify property owners' responsibility for out- water service.'

It concluded that the city could change its policy, but "this would delay receipt of revenues until liens could be filed and collected (up to an 18 month time

Also included in the packet prepared by the council last Friday is an ordinance that will, if approved by the council, allow Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. the "right and franchise to acquire, construct, erect, maintain and operate in the city of Iowa City...for a period of 25 years.

Housing assistance program aids low-income and elderly

By Jonathan Brandt

Federal housing assistance programs may help to ease some of the stresses of rent payments for Iowa City residents who are eligible for the program and who can find a landlord willing to participate.

According to Lyle Seydel of the Iowa City Assisted Housing Division, a number of possibilities exist for housing assistance for low-income families, handicapped individuals or senior citizens.

One of the most commonly-used types of assistance comes from the Section 8 Housing Assistance Payments Program. The program assists qualified families and individuals by paying the difference between 30 percent of their income and the fair market rent for their apartment.

Seydel said not all landlords are willing to take part in the program because the federal government pays only 70 percent of the fair market rent, which is determined on a county-by-county basis.

Because Iowa City rents are typically higher than the fair market rent levels set for the county, there is little incentive for landlords to participate, Seydel

ELIGIBILITY requirements specify that: • Only legally defined families - including single indicapped persons and persons 62 years of age or older - may apply.

• Gross income of the family cannot exceed set levels which are based on the number of people in the

• All applicants must demonstrate their ability to live independently in a manner not detrimental to themselves or their neighborhood.

Applicants must have their eligibility determined by the Assisted Housing Division. Next they must find an apartment and a willing landlord.

The type of apartment rented with Section 8 assistance is not specified but it must meet Housing Quality and Performance Standards set by the Housing and Urban Development Department.

THE UI RENTS a limited number of married student housing under the Section 8 program.

The city is in the process of developing another 20 units to add to 32 existing units of city-owned housing in what Seydel calls "turnkey housing." The 20 units include four duplexes and three triplexes that will be completed by mid-summer 1983.

In addition to rental-assistance programs, there are a variety of loan programs available to landlords for apartment rehabilitation and to families for the purchase of a house.

But Seydel said housing assistance opportunities are becoming more limited. "The Reagan administration is doing everything it can to reduce the budget and housing is taking its cuts like every other department," he said.

Johnson County 4-H and Future Farmers of America Fair, which begins today and runs through Thursday, offers inexpensive entertainment and a chance for young people to display their projects, said Dales Shires, fair board secretary.

This is the 31st year for the annual event held at the fairgrounds at Highway 218 South near the Iowa City Airport.

Shires said the Johnson County Fair is one of the only county fairs in the area that doesn't charge for admission, parking or entertainment. Fair officials expect to draw crowds of 35,000 people. The big event of the week will be the tractor In this event the tractors are divided into three divisions - out-of-field farm tractors, antique tractors and four-wheel drive pickup trucks.

Shires said a feature of the fair is the 4-H and F.F.A. displays. About 600 members will present projects in agricultural, home economics and science, mechanics and arts divisions.

The 4-H competition for the displays is divided into junior, intermediate and senior levels. The projects, ranging from building home furnishings to raising rabbits, will be critiqued by judges in their respective divisions and levels, and ribbons will be awarded. Award-winning senior entries may go on to state competition.

It's the variety of the displays that makes the county fair an interesting place to visit, said Charles Duffy, fair board member. Duffy said he's been a judge at other county fairs and that the Johnson County Fair is "hard to beat."

Duffy added, "The fair's for all people, not just the rural people.

Networks cashed in on '70s rock

By Jeffrey Miller Arts/Entertainment Editor

Television has always depended upon the kindness of demographic profiles. Advertisers need to know who watches what when so they can target their pitches effectively and so the networks can create shows to help them toward

To no one's surprise, those profiles at the end of the 1960s indicated that the most substantial TV audience - the audience most willing to spend the most bucks on sponsors' products was the audience under 34 years of age.

That audience was also the audience for rock'n'roll music, as the Smothers Brothers had shown. But with increasing political paranoia, fed by the Nixon administration, and the more rebellious members of the rock'n'roll community moving to FM radio, leaving the AM band to polite singersongwriters like Carole King and bubblegum hacks like the Osmonds, the networks weeded rock'n'roll out of prime time like so much crabgrass.

IT DIDN'T take long, though, for those responsible for programming at ABC, CBS and NBC to realize that many of their viewers - the babies born at the end of the '50s boom entering high school during the early 1970s, Television

This is the third in a four-part series examining the history and future of rock 'n' roll on television.

the Smothers Brothers fans who were entering college at the same time still wanted to see rock'n'roll on the tube and could provide an attractive audience for sponsors.

The network programming departments also realized that teens and college students tended to stay up later at night than other viewers, especially on the weekends. Voila! late-night rock'n'roll programs: a format with a ready-made audience that was willing to spend money and was free of parents bothering them.

And so it came to pass that NBC, the network known for such "innovations," introduced its "Midnight Special" in the summer of 1972. The show began to run regularly in February 1973, followed quickly by ABC's "In Concert" and the syndicated "Don Kirshner's Rock Concert."

Unfortunately, while these shows did serve their audience, they also eviscerated both rock'n'roll and television of the power which made them so attractive to begin with.

IF ROCK'N'ROLL was about anything in its early years, it was about risk. Performers and listeners alike faced the wrath and indignation of adults who found their music artistically worthless, politically dangerous and/or downright obscene and sinful.

The alliance forged by rock'n'roll and TV during the 1960s heightened those feelings: you not only had to listen to the noise, you had to see the hoodlums committing it. It also heightened the risk - more than one battle was fought in my living room over the filthy drug-perverted scum the networks were allowing on their

But all that was laid to rest with shows like "Midnight Special." They had an audience defined by demographics, free and clear of interference. There was no risk in producing those shows; there was no risk in watching them.

That may in part explain why they were technically so awful, with "action" camera angles and inexplicably quick cutting that made anyone not on a three-day amphetamine binge dizzy.

IT MAY also explain why the acts that appeared on those shows were the least rock'n'roll had to offer: for every appearance Mick or Van or Donna made, there were at least a dozen by the Guess Who or Loggins and Messina

And though "Saturday Night Live," with its upscale audience, was able to be a bit more selective and adventurous in the acts it presented (from the Band and the B-52's to Talking Heads and Frank Zappa), and though the show's "liveness" should have enhanced the risk, the end result was the same: the expected greatest hits without any unexpected fear or worry.

To be sure, there were a few moments in the past decade in which rock'n'roll and TV meshed as they once had: David Bowie's 1974 "1980 Floor Show," Malcolm Leo and David Solt's 1979 "Heroes of Rock and Roll," the rock'n'roll segments on Tom Snyder's ill-fated "Tomorrow.

As the 1970s came to an end, however, taking with them late-night rock shows, the possibilites portrayed for rock'n'roll and TV in Shake, Rattle and R-O-C-K seemed ever distant, ever fainter, with only cable TV remaining as a hope.

Whatever you think of Kenny Rogers' performing gifts, you've got to admit he knows how to make money by the truckfull. I've interviewed the hoary-headed singer four times in the last five years, and each time he's had a new scheme up his sleeve guaranteed to line his pockets.

First he was all excited about getting together with Dottie West, and the next couple of times he was just about to go on the tube as the star of The Gambler and then Coward of the County - both of which turned out to be ratings blockbusters. The last time was a few weeks ago in New York when he was pushing his big-screen debut, Six Pack.

One of his remarks is worth relating. He said he goes through life on the edge between possibility and probability: "I know my run in music will be over with someday - I'm not kidding myself. But as long as I have options, I can keep going. When the music is over, I'll be sad, but I'll have movies. Business Films is my strength. I put the most time where I make the most money.

A RATHER bone-chilling statement, but what's really scary is his confidence in his future in movies. Rogers is the first to admit he's no actor, and Six Pack bears this out rather painfully. Daniel Petrie, who was more or less hornswoggled into directing Six it for the pleasure of racing but for -

Pack by 20th Century-Fox head Sherry Lansing after making more substantial movies (Resurrection; Fort Apache, The Bronx), politely terms Rogers "a natural," meaning Rogers really has no method in moving through a film other than being himself.

The story of Six Pack seems to have been put together by unemployed fairy tale writers. Rogers plays an itinerant stock car racer who travels the race circuit all by his lonesome until he meets up with six orphaned children, all of whom can strip a car in 60 seconds and put it back together in another 30. People who love to cry at movies should go through at least two handkerchiefs and a box of Kleenex.

NATURALLY there are ass meanies, one of them a pot-bellied southern sheriff (how novel) who is in on a stolen car parts operation with the kids, and another is a cruel, terrible man who used to work for Rogers but thought he'd try to race cars himself. Only trouble is, as Rogers' character Brewster Baker points out, he's not in

The female complication (this movie covers all the bases) lies in Brewster's on-again, off-again romance with his faithful friend Lilah (Erin Gray), who for some reason has put up with Brewster's wanderings for years upon Brewster's six kids are an amalgam of mixed accents and no noticeable resemblance to one another. With one exception, they're out of the Bad News Bears collection of dirty mouths and disgustingly irresistible sweetness.

Only Diane Lane, who was so good in A Little Romance (and who's starring in two Francis Ford Coppola movies now being filmed), escapes the movie's the six kids. Lane has more acting talent in her little toe than Kenny Rogers will possess in a lifetime.

Judging from initial box office response, Rogers seems to have broken through with another success. His fans it seems, will follow him anywhere even into borderline entertainment. Ah, to inspire such loyalty.

As musical film entertainment, 'Whorehouse' turns the trick

Prostitution has been around for ages - it's often claimed to be the oldest profession. In Victorian England, when morality allegedly reigned supreme, men visited whorehouses on an average of over three times a week. THE ONLY SURPRISE that director Colin Higgins (9 to 5) allows is the performance of Charles Durning as the media-concious Texas governor. Singing a witty song ("Sidestep") about how he "loves to lead the people on," Durning's is the only character with any depth. His short appearance is about the right length to give us a taste of what this movie might have been.

Director Higgins follows standard formulas, even ending the film in the cheap style so popular these days highlights of the entire film. The possibilities for the credit for dolly grip (the person who moves the camera dolly) might have caught the eye of someone else, but Higgins is just a standard Hollywood director - he won't do anything unnecessary, nor will he rise above the material. Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, his invasion army routed by Iraq, threatened Sunday to attack the oil-rich states of the Persian Gulf if they continue aiding Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Brown blasts Watt's letter, joins in call for resignation

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. told U.S. Interior Secretary James Watt in a telegram Saturday, "You should be ashamed of yourself," referring to a letter Watt wrote to the Israeli ambassador to the United States

In the June 17 letter to Ambassador Moshe Arens, Watt said U.S. support for Israel might weaken if liberal American Jews did not back the Reagan administration's energy policies.

News of the letter drew demands for Watt's resignation and for an explanation from the White House, which said the letter did not reflect President Reagan's views or administration policy.

Brown has been at odds with Watt over conservation policy affecting California, particularly that which concerns offshore drilling. Brown joined the call for Watt's resignation.

"Your intemperate remarks threatening the Jewish community and implying a weakening of American support for Israel are outrageous," Brown

Miami workers seeking sponsors for Haitians in refugee camps

MIAMI (UPI) - Resettlement workers, planning to release up to 25 more Haitians from a federal detention camp today, searched through Miami's Little Haiti during the weekend for relatives to sponsor refugees still imprisoned.

"Immediate relatives are our first choice." the Rev. Tom Wenski of the Miami Catholic archdiocese said. But, he added, if they cannot be found there are numerous volunteers offering to house the Haitians.

Seventeen Haitians - some who had been detained for almost a year → were freed from the Krome Avenue detention center Friday under a court order and were met outside the camp's barbedwire gates by relatives in a reunion marked by joy and tears.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman ordered June 29 that nearly 2,000 Haitians in detention camps across the country and in Puerto Rico be released by the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Spellman held the federal government had broken regulations in detaining them.

During the weekend, resettlement workers walked the streets of Little Haiti to verify names and addresses of relatives who had been listed by Krome

GERRY WYNNE, head of the U.S. Catholic Conference, said he expects up to 25 more Haitians to be released from Krome Monday. "We're shooting for Monday to renew our release efforts.' Furthermore, some resettlement workers say as many as 25 processed refugees could be released daily.

The five resettlement agencies trying to relocate the refugees insist they can find homes quickly for all Haitians in federal camps - one of the requirements Spellman ordered in his release program. However, paperwork and tight budgets could mean delays.

'The hitch is that funding has not been established for nonsectarian agencies," Jan Moreno, of the Miami office of the American Council of Nationality Services, said.

'The church-affiliated voluntary agencies have constituents, parishes to fall back on in the face of government delays, but we don't," Moreno said. Despite the trouble, it is likely that most detained Haitians will walk out of the federal camps and head for new homes in Texas, Florida, Illinois, New

Resettlement workers are trying to relocate the refugees in areas where there is already a Haitian community, according to Joseph Battaglia, western regional director for the U.S. Catholic

THE AGENCIES are dividing the workload according to how many Haitians each thinks it can place: Church World Services will handle 700 cases; World Relief officials, at least 200; the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service, 300; Episcopal Presiding Bishop's Fund, 288-328; the Catholic Conference, approximately 800.

But their work is hampered by such unanswered questions as who will pay for the temporary resettlement of the Haitians, who will monitor weekly reporting by the Haitians as required in Spellman's release order, and whether the Haitians should report to the immigration service weekly if sent to dis-

"I have not taken advantage of anything ... I am paying my loan back

Slockett and Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said Sunday Branstad is taking advantage of the loan's 3 percent interest rate at the expense of college students who are scrambling for financial aid.

Doderer said Branstad should have paid back the loan as soon as possible. She questioned his inability to repay the loan more than 10 years later, pointing to Branstad's annual income in excess of $57,000 last year.

Branstad said last week he will authorize the UI to release records documenting his monthly payments on the loan. I can't believe anybody would try to make an issue out of this," he said. "I am trying to run a clean campaign. All I can say is they must be really desperate."

BRANSTAD SAID Conlin's tax controversy started when "she got up and pointed the finger at me."

On the eve of her victory in the June 8 primary, Conlin told her supporters 'the other side has the money, but we have the people." She called the Republican Party a "party of privilege" that "promotes and supports policies that favor the wealthy."

But her comments came back to haunt her when she released reports showing she and her husband, a real estate broker, are worth about $2.2

Gov. Robert Ray joined other Republicans in calling Conlin a hypocrite for criticizing rich members of their party. But Branstad said he has stayed clear of the controversy.

"I never said she (Conlin) ought to pay taxes on principle. I never even "I, like a lot of students, couldn't commented on her taxes. I'm getting have afforded to go to school without tired of people trying to throw mud around," he said in a telephone interview from Davenport.

"YOU MAY NOT believe this coming from a politician, but I would not say anything to hurt other people. It hurts me when people start vicious rumors," he said.

"I just don't think you've got a story here," Branstad added

Jill Wiley, Conlin's publicity coordinator, agreed with Branstad that publicity of the loan issue would be 'premature."

"There is certainly no evidence of wrong-doing," she said. Wiley said she didn't think "at this point we would make that assertion" that Branstad's failure to pay back the loan was similar to Conlin's tax issue.

Polly Rock, chairwoman of the UI Democrats, said Sunday she thinks the loan repayment is comparable to Conlin's taxes because neither are "real issues" of the campaign.

"The issues of this campaign should be jobs and unemployment," she said. "It shouldn't be if Terry Branstad has paid back his student loan or if Roxanne Conlin paid taxes."

"The character that's emerging in the '80s now is the strong male hero figure, a la what happened in the '40s and '50s with the Clark Gables, the John Waynes, who gave way to the Tom Sellecks and Clint Eastwoods. People are looking again now for the strong, male figure to be a positive

Bernstein and his partner, Frank Cardea, went in search of the TV equivalent of this heroic image and found the 31-year-old Boxleitner, an Illinois native who has thus far appeared in a handful of television movies and was a regular in the series "How the West was Won" five years ago. The team liked what they found in the handsome facade of Boxleitner and set up what Bernstein calls a "threepronged program."

"HE'S STARRING in Tron as a heroic character," said Bernstein, 'and in 'Bring 'Em Back Alive,' Frank Buck is a very heroic character. Then in October on CBS, there'll be a fourhour mini-series called 'Bare Essence' where he again is the strong hero. It's like a Contac tablet — it'll go off every three months. This is all part of a plan - we were looking for the right script,

The plan also includes merchandising. Not only does Boxleitner own a major part of "Bring 'Em Back Alive"

- something normal for powerful film stars but almost unheard of for television actors - but Frank Buck toys, pajamas, underwear and towels are set to invade the bedrooms of America's children with Boxleitner guaranteed to pocket a nice chunk of the profits.

It may take hold eventually, but for now there is little that is outwardly heroic in Boxleitner's manner. With his perfect looks and slightly arrogant air, comes off as more distant "star" than hard-living Hemingway hero. When asked who his own heroes are, he names movie stars.

"THEY ARE gentlemen who have passed on," he says. "Wayne, Cooper, Errol Flynn, Gable - those are the type of guys I really liked. Today - oh, I admire Clint Eastwood and the way he's taking his career. That's probably about it.'

In describing how he intends to play Frank Buck, Boxleitner said he will bring a lot of my past roles into this role. I want to make him a threedimensional human being. As an actor, I'll provide the background life for

As became increasingly evident in the interview, the person who seemed to know what Boxleitner intended to do better than Boxleitner did was Jav

Bernstein, a 25-year veteran of Hollywood who has managed, besides Boxleitner and others, Farrah Fawcett, Suzanne Sommers and William

'We're trying to do the best we can to make Frank Buck a hero similar to Jack Armstrong; to somebody that the kids can look up to and say, 'Look, this is an American hero, this is someone who stands for good. It's the classic battle between good and evil.

"I THINK this heroic trend will continue for at least the next three years," Bernstein continued, "because there doesn't seem to be a let-up - people don't want to think about their own problems; they want something that takes them away. People love to live through heroes. What they do gives us something to talk about. Heroes are people that people love."

What Boxleitner seems to fear is Frank Buck turning into someone too good to be true.

"I don't think Frank Buck is going to be someone that's not human. He's not superhuman. I think that people want heroes that they can see a little bit of themselves in and wish they could be like. Frank will be an '80s version of the '30s macho man."

"Frank will be 'sensitive' macho. He'll be interested in the ladies but he lowa field hockey standout Sax determined to return after injury

By Mike Condon

Although the Iowa Field Hockey team sent three players to the National Sports Festival, another UI standout, sophomore forward Vickie Sax has spent most of the summer rehabilitating a serious knee injury suffered at tryouts for the Empire State Games

The Vestal, N.Y., native suffered a partial tear of a ligament along with an injury to her kneecap while attempting a shot during the tryout session in early June. When contacted at her New York home, Sax said the tryout shouldn't have even been held.

"The field was in just terrible condition," Sax said. "It was just pouring and we had no business being out there. I was cutting toward the goal and I got off a flick when my knee just locked."

SHE UNDERWENT ORTHOSCOPIC surgery for the injury and has been working on strengthening her knee through swimming and exercises. "I've been out in the yard working on my stick work and other drills but it's not like playing," Sax said.

The mention of a redshirt year does not sit well with Sax. "The doctor said it might be tough for me to play this year but I try not to think about it (a redshirt season)." Iowa Head Coach Judith Davidson felt the injury deprived Sax of a good chance to participate in the Sports Festival. "I think Vickie would have stood an excellent chance of playing in the Festival," she

But the Iowa coach is very hopeful that Sax will be able to return to her outside forward position for the start of next season. "I was not very happy when I heard about the injury," Davidson said. "But I expect to have Vickie ready for next

IF SAX WOULD BE unable to play, Davidson would be losing a big part of her offense. "Last season our two inside forwards, Ann Marie Thomas and Ellen Egan, accounted for about 50 percent of our scoring and our outside forwards Sue Bury and Vickie accounted for 45 percent,

Although not pleased at the prospect of being without Sax next year, Davidson says that athletes can't be protected from potential injury. "You can't shield an athlete from everything. Once in a while you have to take chances. The Empire State Games would have been a great opportunity for her but now she has to think about strengthen-

Rushek said of Payne. "He's a nice young man who really works hard. You've got to give him a lot of credit, he's a helper on a beer truck and the work isn't the easiest."

THE BEER BUSINESS has been "very good this summer" according to Rushek, and he said he would not have any problems hiring athletes in the future. "In fact, I'm kind of hoping we can get Michael back next year," he said.

According to Wyatt, you can forget the stories about athletes being paid $10 an hour to watch automatic sprinklers turn on, too. "Our guys probably average around $5 an hour and that is normal for the types of jobs they are doing," he said. "They can go out and contract a house to paint and they'll get the same whether they finish it in a week or in a month. Naturally, if they want to make a lot of money, they'll try to get it done as soon as possible.

Wyatt is looking for an improvement in the economy so the job situation for athletes, as well as other students, can improve. "Everyone wants a good paying job, but there just isn't a lot of jobs around,' Wyatt said. "We've got some guys who are digging ditches this summer. They go through the same process as any other employee, including an interview, and if they don't work, they don't have a job any

A run away

Rodgers, last year's winner, finished second at this year's race Saturday. Frank Shorter was third, Phil Coppess, of Clinton, finished fourth.

Ellen Hart was the first woman finisher in 32:42.0. There was some controversy whether the first three runners made a wrong turn on the course, but race authorities said they will allow the recordsetting time to stand.

A triumphant return

DETROIT (UPI) - Thomas Hearns, the former World Boxing Association welterweight champion now fighting as a middleweight, triumphantly returned to his hometown Sunday.

Hearns stopped previously unbeaten Jeff McCracken at 1 minute, 29 seconds of the eighth round at Cobo Arena but had nothing but praise for

"He's a very strong fighter," said Hearns, who weighed 1491/4 and clearly dominated the fight. "I wasn't expecting an easy fight, whatsoever. He was just as I figured he would be.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) Janet Alex won her first LPGA tournament Sunday by shooting a four-underpar 68 to capture the 30th annual U.S. Women's Open golf championship by Alex, who has spent four years on the tour, tied for second in two tournaments last year and finished 16th on the money list. She shot the best round of the tournament Sunday, finishing with a five-under-par 283 on the 6,342-yard course at Del Paso Country Club.

Tied for second at 289 were thirdround leader Beth Daniel, who bogeyed four of the last nine holes and shot 76; JoAnne Carner, who was attempting to become a 10th member of the LPGA Hall of Fame, shot 75; Donna Horton White, who returned to the tour this year and birdied the 18th for a par-72, and Sandra Haynie, who birdied the 17th for a one-under 71.

"I'VE NEVER FELT more confident," Alex said. "I just hit the ball so well. After I got the birdie on 13, I just told myself 'Janet, you have a chance to win this thing.' I just wish my family could have been here to see this."

Susie McAllister, who shot a oneunder 71 Sunday, finished in third place

Kathy Baker, a member of the 1982 Curtis Cup team and NCAA champion from Tulsa University, finished as low amateur after shooting 79 Sunday for an eight-over 296 total.

ALEX BEGAN the round, which was played for the first day of the tournament in less than 90-degree temepratures, with birdies on the second and third holes. She mixed bogeys, pars and birdies during the middle holes but said she felt confident after birdies on 13 and 15. Alex, who won $66,000 on the tour last year, earned $27,315 for her Open victory to push her earnings this year to $68,642

Greg Tebbutt, a junior-to-be on the Iowa golf team, breezed to the Iowa Amateur championship Sunday, tying the tournament record with a 13-under Tebbutt, a Bettendorf native, won by five strokes over runner-up Greg Ladehoff of Clinton. He had a chance for sole possession of the tourney record, which he now shares with 1967 winner John Liechty, but bogied the 18th hole to finish with a 69.

"I played solid golf. This is the best tournament I've ever putted," said Tebbutt, who won in his first try in the Iowa Amateur. "It feels really good being the Amateur champ.'

WITH A five to six-stroke lead throughout the last nine holes, the major question was not whether Tebbutt would win, but whether he could break Liechty's record. He birdied the 17th hole, leaving him at 14 under, but he had to settle for a share of the record when he missed a short putt for par on

"After nine holes, I was just aiming for the middle of the green," he said, adding that he "wasn't really thinking about the record."

The tournament field was pared to the top 50 Sunday after Saturday's 36hole cut. Sunday's play was a grueling 36-hole affair, with temperatures around 90. According to Iowa Golf Coach Chuck Zwiener, age played a role in determining the winner. "Thirty-six holes on Sunday had a heckuva bearing on the outcome. It's a young man's game when it gets that hot." Zwiener said.

RON PETERSON, who finished i tie for third, agreed. "The heat gave the younger guys an advantage," said Peterson, a 20-year-old senior-to-be at Central College in Pella. "I felt just as good after 36 as I did after 18.

Another factor that possibly aided Tebbutt was that he was playing on Finkbine, the Hawkeyes' home course. Tebbutt said it helped that the Iowa Amateur was played at Finkbine, a course he has played since high school. "If you drive it well it's not that hard," he said.

Ladehoff, a second team All-American and first team All-Big Ten selection at Ohio State, was pleased with his performance. "Tebbutt played really well. When he has it going he's hard to catch," said the Clinton native. "I'm pleased with how I played. When someone plays better, you can't get too

DAVENPORT NATIVE Kevin Denike had Sunday's best round, firing a seven-under 65 to finish in a tie for third with Peterson. Brad Schuchat, a former pro from Des Moines, finished with a five-under 283 for fourth place. He was followed by Ames' Dana Kain with a 284, UI golfer Mike Hasley, who had a 285, Boone native Jim Curell and last years' Iowa Amateur of the Year, Ivan Miller of Eldora, who both finished at 286

Iowa City's Kevin Villhauer finished with a 287, good for an eighth-place tie with Chris Danielson of West Des Moines. This year's tourney was the first Iowa Amateur held at Finkbine since 1971 and the winners shared merchandise valued at more than

Tebbutt said he isn't really aiming for the Amateur of the Year award, but added that he wouldn't mind winning it. "I'm just going to go out, have fun and play golf."

ZWIENER SAID this wasn't the first time one of his players has won the Iowa Amateur. Jim Carney won the tourney in 1968 as a UI sophomore. "I was pulling for any of my boys this weekend," he said, adding that besides Tebbutt and Hasley, Hawkeyes' Gary Claypool and Gene Elliott played well. "This is good for our golf team."

Although Tebbutt was one of the younger winners of the Iowa Amateur. he isn't the youngest. Monticello's Bill Hall, who won it in 1938 at 18, holds that distinction.

Curell, although he's never won it, was one of the favorites going into the tournament, placed the Iowa Amateur above all other amateur tournaments in the state. "If there's one tournament you want to win, it would be this one. I know I'd like to.

But because of Tebbutt, Curell will

Poor economy hurts athletes seeking jobs

We had to scratch a little bit to find jobs this year, but we've been able to place any athlete who wanted a job into a working situation. We had a guy help set Craig Anderson up to work at some camps around and (former Iowa cager) Vince Brookins has been making guest appearances around at some camps this year. It has been a little tougher, without a question.
