been nearly three-and-a-half years since the body of former Iowa football star Jim Marshall was found in a pickup truck in Sunnyvale, Calif. Detective Jim Brice of the Sunnyvale Police Department said virtually no ground has been gained during that time.

Brice is still working on it and it is an active case," Brice said. "We are interviewing people and checking clues, but basically I'm still baffled about the whole thing."

Marshall, who was the first Hawkeye to win a Big Ten title since 1956, took the 50-yard freestyle in 1980, was found stabbed in the front end of his pickup truck in the parking lot of Marie Callender's, a Sunnyvale restaurant, on the morning of April 14 by a gardener cleaning the lot.

homicide is the only one so far in the Santa Clara County area, located approximately 100,000, located approximately southeast of San Francisco.

don't have a high crime city," Brice said. "Usually when we have a homicide, it's the smoking gun variety. The person is still standing there when we get there."

Marshall had been employed by a construction firm and was missing nearly two days when he was found. The Santa Clara County Coroner's office determined Marshall had been stabbed in the back several times and that he had been dead for at least eight hours when his body was found. He died of wounds to the chest.

Brice is continuing our investigation. We hope to solve this case, but we really don't have a lead to go on."

More pressure on regents as budget tightens

By Connie Campana
Staff Writer

Legislative pressures applied to members of the state Board of Regents may vary from "subtle to blatant," but they are an ever-present factor in the decisions of the board, some regent members and UI officials said Tuesday.

The board acts as a buffer zone or shield between the five regents institutions, and the Iowa Legislature, the executive branch and private citizens.

As a political body "we have an awareness of what is going on in the legislature," Regent

Ann Jorgensen said.

"Some of the legislators have ideas about what the board should do," Regent Art Neu said, "and they feel free to tell us. Since they also appropriate the money, they feel they have the right."

"Whether it's good or bad is almost irrelevant... realistically it couldn't be any other way."

IT'S THE REGENTS' responsibility "to determine if the direction they are trying to push us in is the way we want to go."

For example, legislators told the regents "pretty clearly" to consider tuition hikes annually rather than biennially, resulting in a controversial tuition increase, Neu said.

"Nobody treated us fairly on that one," he said, referring to some legislators insisting the board raise student tuition as students angrily complained that the regents were changing a long-standing policy of considering tuition increases biennially.

"We took it from both sides. Everybody can dump on us. That's part of our role."

"I expect we will go through the whole thing again," he said, because the state treasury is short of funds.

Legislative pressure on all agencies, including the regents, "always increases when you're short of money, like night follows day."

SUGGESTIONS FROM the legislature come in the form of letters or comments from individual legislators or groups of legislators, Neu said. "It doesn't come as a consensus necessarily. There isn't such a thing as legislative intent."

The regents, however, act on the best interests of the institutions in most cases, regardless of the pressure, Neu said. The regents try to "deflect those things that would be harmful to the university."

In addition to last year's tuition increase, an example of the pressure that was applied to the regents came in the form of a personnel bill that would have centralized all hiring and firing matters in the state, thus taking away the regents' authority over personnel matters.

The bill had been proposed by Gov. Robert Ray, and regent members were concerned that it was gaining support in the legislature.

The personnel bill may have influenced a regents decision on a UI plan for phased retirement of faculty and professional and scientific staff members. The regents approved the plan for faculty members, but ex-

Debate brews over drinking age

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

Although Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller would like to see the legal drinking age raised by 74 years, a federal agency would be content to see the Iowa Legislature raise the age by two years.

"Personally, emotionally and as a father, I'd like to see the drinking age raised to 93," Miller said Tuesday.

But the National Transportation Safety Board on Friday urged Iowa, along with 34 other states, to raise its drinking age to 21. Figures showed a third of the people killed in alcohol-related auto accidents are 16-24 years old.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said she did not know of any plans to introduce such a bill in the legislature.

"I'm certainly not going to bring it up, because no one has told me that it would be a solution to the problem," she said. "I've got a lot of questions, but no answers."

IN IOWA the legal drinking age is 19. If another change in the drinking age occurs, it would be the fourth switch in the past decade.

In 1972, the state rolled back the minimum age from 21 to 19. One year later that figure dropped to allow 18-year-olds to drink, and in 1978 it was raised back to 19, according to Assistant Iowa Attorney General Lynn M. Walding.

Dan Berry, owner of the downtown bar Joe's Place for the last 18 years, said raising the drinking age would have an effect on a lot of bars.

"It will have some effect on our business, probably 10 to 20 percent, but I think the places with dancing and other things will be hurt worse," he said.

He said his business caters more to older graduate students who "like a place to sit down and bat the breeze around."

Jim Wolf, manager of Maxwell's, a bar where people can dance, said, "Obviously it would hurt business, but how much it would hurt is anybody's guess," he said. "The bulk of people that come to bars are under 21, and a big chunk of our clientele are 20 and 21 years old."

Paul Poulsen, calling the Iowa City Council a "dictatorship," said he feels there is a "conspiracy" being formed against him by the city.

Iowa City has taken legal action in the controversy over an earthen berm, torn down on property which he used to own, Poulsen declared Tuesday. "They are accusing me of something I haven't done. It's totally unreal."

The city took Poulsen to court because it claimed he was removing an earthen berm he agreed to build to hide a salvage yard.

Poulsen, however, claims he "never agreed to build a berm" and did not violate any agreement. "I was never even contacted by the city that there was a problem down there," he said.

I think they're doing this just to create work for the city attorney (Robert Jansen) to justify his position."

He said the city would be "much better off" if the city's legal staff were eliminated.

AS FAR AS Poulsen is concerned, there has never been a lawsuit filed against him because the suit is an "unlawful act by the city manager (Neal Berlin) and city attorney." Poulsen said the two men had no authority to initiate the lawsuit because they were not elected by the public.

Jansen said, "I'm not even going to answer these charges. Anything the city has to say, it will say in court."

"Neal Berlin serves the council's wishes and as far as I'm concerned, the city manager does not exist," Poulsen said.

"The matter is in court and that is the system of justice we have in this country to decide things. Because of this, I cannot comment on the matter," Berlin said.

Poulsen said the council had better start protecting the life, liberty and property of the people in the community.

"If they can't do that," he said, "it would be my suggestion that they step down from the council."

Poulsen ran for the office himself in 1981 but could not garner the support of Iowa City voters. He said he will probably not run for the council again.

"I GUESS I'm not a quitter, but it's obvious to me that the people must be satisfied with this form of government," he said.

He added, however, that he will fight the current lawsuit until the bitter end. "If you are not willing to go all the way in a fight, you might as well get down on your knees and say, 'What do you want me to do, master?'"

Poulsen said he will not go into the Iowa court system, which he called a "nullity" because judges are not elected.

"The only way I'll go in there is if they bodily carry me in there," he said. He also questioned the authority of

Israel bombs Beirut center killing 120

United Press International

Israeli gunboats and war jets bombed the residential heart of Beirut for the first time Tuesday, burying hundreds of people under debris from falling buildings and killing at least 120, state-run Beirut radio said.

The official radio earlier announced that 480 people had been killed but later revised the figure to 120 without explanation. Police sources said 232 people were wounded in the deadliest air strike on Beirut since Israel invaded Lebanon June 6.

Palestine Liberation Organization officials claimed 247 people were killed and another 295 were seriously wounded.

The raids apparently were aimed at destroying anti-aircraft guns the Palestinians reportedly had installed along the once-fashionable neighborhoods by the Mediterranean shore.

In diplomatic efforts, Egypt and France jointly submitted a draft resolution to the U.N. Security Council that would "affirm the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people." Previous resolutions on the Palestinian issue merely called for a solution to the Palestinian "refugee" problem.

THE DRAFT also urged Israel and the PLO to mutually recognize the other's right to exist and called for the reaffirmation of resolution 242 recognizing Israel's right to exist.

Israel had no comment, but it previously had rejected any call for Palestinian self-determination and the creation of a Palestinian homeland.

Sudan raised some hope for a breakthrough in the Lebanon peace talks Monday by offering refuge to the PLO guerrillas in West Beirut.

But the PLO reportedly rejected the offer. Observers said the guerrilla leadership could not accept exile in a country so far removed from the Arab-Israeli struggle.

Hitting closer to the center of the besieged capital than ever before, the Israeli jets, in twin air strikes, bombed more than 20 buildings along "Embassy Row" and adjacent streets in the Rouche section of uptown West Beirut along the coast.

The two bombing runs occurred at 2:42 p.m. and 3:38 p.m. — the numbers of the two United Nations resolutions that acknowledge the right of Israel to exist. Diplomats said they believed the timing was more than a coincidence.

AMONG THE buildings hit was a high-rise where the Canadian, Swiss, Greek and Yugoslav ambassadors live. None of the diplomats was injured, according to initial reports.

Israeli gunboats and artillery shelled guerrilla positions in the western half of the capital, where water and electricity were cut off by the Israelis Monday.

In retaliation for the air strikes, PLO guerrillas fired six Soviet-made missiles into a residential quarter of the Christian port of Jounieh, 12 miles north of Beirut, wounding at least 12 people, military sources said. Jounieh is controlled by Israel's Christian militia allies.

One rocket hit a Red Cross hospital ship, the M.S. Flora, anchored in Jounieh harbor after it unloaded relief supplies, killing one crewman and injuring several others, the International Red Cross in Geneva said.

At 11 p.m., seven more of the giant rockets roared into the eastern sector. Casualties and damage estimates there were not known.

The new air strikes — the sixth against Beirut in as many days — came as U.S. envoy Philip Habib met with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon for 2½ hours in Jerusalem.

THE OFFICIALS refused to comment, but an Israeli official said Habib told Begin he was making progress in his attempts to negotiate an exodus of all 6,000 PLO guerrillas from West Beirut.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Israel have demanded the total military and political withdrawal of the PLO from the war-torn nation.

Earlier, Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., had a 90-minute meeting with Begin to urge the prime minister not to order an invasion of West Beirut.

Tsongas said he told Begin: "The carnage will be like our Alamo.... You are going to look at a generation of terror." He called the meeting "distressing," and said, "It is difficult to see how this is going to work out."

A congressional delegation that reported Sunday that PLO leader Yasser Arafat had agreed to recognize Israel also met with Israeli officials but was given a cool reception.

Iran attacks civilian targets

LONDON — Iranian war jets returned to action Tuesday and bombed civilian targets and oil installations in Iraq's major oil port of Basra as Tehran's invasion to topple Iraqi President Saddam Hussein entered its third week.

In a communique, Baghdad claimed that its helicopters strafed Iranian positions east of Basra, killing seven Iranians and destroying an Iranian tank and three ammunition depots.

Racial violence hits Liverpool

LIVERPOOL, England — Gangs of black and "mixed-race" youths hurled bricks at police and fire fighters Tuesday in a resurgence of racial strife, which rocked the Toxteth district of Liverpool last summer.

There were no reports of injuries or arrests in the clashes, which followed an attack on a policeman Monday by eight members of a street gang seeking the release of a black youth detained after a burglary.

Gandhi, Reagan to talk policy

NEW DELHI, India — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi left for the United States Tuesday to try to convince President Reagan that India is not a Soviet ally but a misunderstood friend of the West in need of financial aid.

Gandhi left on a chartered jet for the 17-hour trip to New York. She will meet Reagan Thursday after a formal welcome at the White House and full ceremonies on the South Lawn.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia — A skydiver who plunged 9,000 feet to the ground when his twin parachutes failed to open suffered a broken back and internal injuries but will probably not sustain serious permanent damage, a hospital official said Tuesday.

Approximately 40,000 people watched in horror as Charles Amiraault's main parachute failed to open and then became entangled in his reserve chute during a skydiving exhibition jump Monday.

Califano to head investigation

WASHINGTON — Joseph Califano, a Washington insider with ties to both Lyndon Johnson and Alexander Haig, took the job of special counsel Tuesday in the House investigation into charges that Congress members and pages engaged in drug use and homosexual activities.

The Justice Department is investigating whether criminal charges are warranted, and the ethics panel probe, which Califano will run, could decide to expel members of Congress if they are found guilty of the charges.

Reagan to visit Des Moines

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will speak to the National Corn Growers Association Monday in Des Moines, where he may visit a farm during his overnight stay, the White House announced Tuesday.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan will fly to Des Moines Aug. 2 for a mid-afternoon speaking appearance. Aides indicated Reagan probably will announce a decision on extending grain exports to the Soviet Union for one year before he travels to Iowa.

President meets press today

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, who will hold his first nationally broadcast news conference in nearly a month today, prepared Tuesday for an expected wide range of questions from the economy to the Middle East wars.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes announced that Reagan will meet the press at 7 p.m. Iowa time. Reagan met with top aides to discuss policy positions he will discuss at the news conference.

Oehler asks appearance be canceled

By Jennifer Marme-Ruggeberg
Staff Writer

Iowa City attorney Jay C. Oehler, accused of mismanaging two trusts for personal gain, requested Tuesday that an Aug. 2 court appearance be canceled because he is unavailable that day and because the hearing would "involve the same claims and allegations" that have already been made.

Those allegations were made in a suit filed April 2 by Francis J. O'Connor and Rolland E. Grefe, who succeeded Oehler as trustees of the Gertrude M. Murphy Trust and the Wagner-Murphy Foundation.

The suit names Oehler and nine corporations he was involved with, and asks for more than $1.5 million — including a $1 million personal damage claim against Oehler.

The Murphy Trust was set up as a personal income trust for Murphy, Oehler's former secretary. The Wagner-Murphy Foundation was established to benefit law students at the UI or at other accredited law schools. O'Connor and Grefe charge that, under Oehler's management, neither Murphy nor any law students benefited from the trusts. Instead, they claim in the suit, Oehler used the trusts for personal gain. Oehler has denied those charges.

The trusts consist of two downtown Iowa City properties (now Gringo's restaurant and the Fieldhouse bar) and farm property west of Iowa City.

O'Connor and Grefe requested and received an order from Johnson County District Court July 14 requiring Oehler to appear in court next Monday to be examined under oath by attorneys for O'Connor and Grefe.

Oehler states in papers filed Tuesday that

Lack of fire exits for disabled 'appalling'

By Jeff Beck
Staff Writer

Public officials in recent years have made it possible for more handicapped people to get into buildings. Now, they have to provide ways out, the chairman of a state task force said.

Dr. Joe Freilinger, chairman of the Fire and Life Safety Task Force for the Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, gave a presentation to area firefighters, police officers and others on fire safety for the disabled.

At the Iowa City Recreation Center Monday night, Freilinger called safety and escape conditions for handicapped people "appalling" in most buildings.

He said there are seldom two accessible escape routes for handicapped people in the event of a fire. In multi-story buildings, especially, disabled people are often vulnerable because elevators cannot be used in most fire situations, Freilinger said.

Yet, most states "are not doing much" in terms of recognizing and correcting these problems, he said.

"MY INTENTION is to make you aware of the problems.... I don't pretend to know all the answers. I don't even know all the questions. We need a lot more research, study and experience in these areas."

Several handicapped people at the meeting voiced their own fears.

Sharon Van Meter, coordinator of the UI Office of Services for the Handicapped, said the elevator in Calvin Hall would be closed in the event of a fire and "if there were handicapped students in my office, I don't know how they would get out."

Teresa Young, an employee of UI Psychiatric Hospital who is confined to a wheelchair, said: "When I was in school and we had a fire drill I did not leave the building. People told me if there was a real fire the janitor would get me. Thinking about it now, I wonder if the janitor would have come."

Freilinger, who is a volunteer firefighter and an employee of the Department of Public Instruction, said hundreds of children have died "when the janitor did not come to get them."

He said for these problems to be solved, police, firefighters and civic officials have to propose answers and the public has to be aware "fire does not always happen to the other guy."

HE PROPOSED a number of ways for individuals to improve fire safety conditions in their homes and businesses. They include:

- Installing and maintaining a smoke alarm.

- Verifying that facilities are in compliance with state codes by alerting officials to fire hazards.
- Being aware of escape routes and having unannounced fire drills occasionally.
- Learning how to use a fire extinguisher and keeping one in the home.
- Considering the use of handicapped-alert notices in windows for firefighters. He noted there are drawbacks to this system. It can be a tipoff to burglars — "Here is somebody we can rip off easily."

Three Iowa City firefighters, including Chief Robert Keating, and three Coralville police officers heard the presentation — apparently with some surprise.

"It's something to stop and think about, and just being aware will help.... He opened my eyes to some additional programs that exist," Iowa City Firefighter Roger Hansen said.

"FLEXIBLE MONEY ACCOUNTS"

The University of Iowa Credit Union Announces
a New Concept in Savings Programs

July's Maximum Rate:

13.00%

Now your money can earn high rates of return based monthly on U.S. Treasury Bill yields, with your funds fully insured up to a $100,000.00 by the NCUA, a branch of the Federal Government. You can write drafts against your balance at any time with no early withdrawal penalties. The Credit Union's new "Flexible Money Account" has two different plans. You choose the program that best suits your financial needs!

Flexible Money Account I (Limited Transactions)

- * Minimum balance of $5,000.00 earns 11%, $7,500.00 earns 12%, $10,000.00 earns 13%.
- * No Maturity Dates or Early Withdrawal Penalties
- * No Brokerage Fees or Service Charges
- * Dividends Compounded Monthly on the Average Daily Balance for the Month
- * Drafts and Deposits in Minimum Amounts of $500.
- * Dividend Rate Changes Monthly, Based on the Prior Month's Average of Short Term Government Securities Yields

Flexible Money Account II (Unlimited Transactions)

- * Minimum balance of $5,000.00 earns 10%, $7,500.00 earns 11%, $10,000.00 earns 12%.
- * No Maturity Dates or Early Withdrawal Penalties
- * No Brokerage Fees or Service Charges
- * Dividends Compounded Monthly on the Average Daily Balance for the Month
- * Unlimited Drafts and Deposits
- * Dividend Rate Changes Monthly, Based on the Prior Month's Average of Short Term Government Securities Yields, Minus 1% Point

Plan I will work like a 'Money Market Fund' account, but all of your money will be federally insured, moreover, you can operate through a local institution with personal service. Plan II will be very similar to your normal checking account and much like our regular share draft account, but with much higher dividends. With either plan, you will receive a single combined monthly statement which will show all your transactions; your monthly dividends, and any funds 'swept' from the high yielding savings account to cover your drafts as they clear.

It's not complicated! If the "Flexible Money Account" looks interesting, stop by the University of Iowa Credit Union today for full details.

Preceded Branstad's funds far exceeding Conlin's

By Jeff Beck
Staff Writer

If funding is any indication of support, Republican Terry Branstad has shown strong evidence of moving past Democrat Roxanne Conlin since the primaries.

Finance disclosure statements issued Monday reveal Branstad received more than twice as much money in contributions as Conlin did between May 21 and July 20.

Overall the Branstad fund raising effort is far ahead of Conlin's, which is in the red.

Susan Neely, Branstad's press secretary, said the large lead in fund raising gave the Republican candidate "a perception of strength, of having the stronger campaign."

In the latest reporting period, Branstad received $162,114.60 from 2,500 contributors while Conlin took in $79,054.43 from 1,933 contributors.

Since the beginning of the year, Branstad has raised $371,324.25 compared with the $244,261 raised by Conlin.

WHILE BRANSTAD'S campaign is in the black, Conlin's bills for the period exceeded her campaign assets by about $11,000. She also has a $50,000 loan, which she took out before the primaries.

But, Jeff Morley, Conlin's press secretary, predicted that despite difficulties this summer, the fund raising campaign will meet its goal of $700,000 to $800,000.

"You always like to have your bills paid ... but we are not overly concerned about the situation. Summer is a hard time to raise money, and we've laid a lot of money in advance for materials," Morley said.

Morley did not connect the disclosure that Conlin and her husband paid no state income taxes with the Branstad's lead in contributions. He said donations to the Conlin campaign will increase significantly in the fall.

Branstad's fund raising goal is one million dollars and donations are on schedule, Neely said.

She said Branstad's lead in contributions will allow for continued television, radio and newspaper advertising.

BUT, MORLEY said Branstad's lead in fund raising is an advantage that can be overcome.

"We are not surprised by that (Branstad's lead). Republican candidates historically raise more money than Democrats .... We fully expect to be outspent. We just want to raise enough money to have a competitive campaign," he said.

One difference between the candidates' fund raising campaign, thus far, is that Conlin has accepted more money from out-of-state individuals and groups — mostly in Texas and Washington, D.C.

She has received 25 contributions of $100 or more from out-of-state sources, including $1,500 from the Women's Campaign Fund of Washington, D.C., and $200 from former Vice President Walter Mondale.

Branstad's only out-of-state donations have come from an uncle in Minnesota and a personal friend in Washington, D.C., Neely said.

SHE SAID, "We are not in the practice of soliciting or accepting contributions from out-of-state special interest groups .... Mr. Branstad has only accepted out-of-state contributions from relatives and personal friends."

"He feels that when you are running for governor, the focus is definitely Iowa and what you are going to do for the people of Iowa. He does not want any outside influences affecting the campaign."

But Morley said the out-of-state contributions make up an "insignificant amount" of Conlin's fund raising.

He said she received some out-of-state donations because "the race has got national attention because Roxanne is a very attractive and interesting candidate."

Morley said contributions should not be an issue in the campaign. "The only time we mention it is to remind ourselves we have to work harder."

Poisoning deaths unusual among children

By Jeff Beck
Staff Writer

Although most calls to poison control centers involve children, deaths in those cases are "pretty unusual," according to Robert Dick, director of the UI Poison Control Center.

In 1980 — the most recent year for which statistics have been compiled — there was only one death of a child less than 5 years old. There was also only one death of a child between 5 and 14 years of age, Carson Whitlow of the state health department's bureau of statistics said.

However, there were 23 total deaths in 1980, most occurring in people between the ages of 15 and 64. There were four deaths in the 15 to 24 age group, 11 deaths in the 25 to 44 age group and five deaths in the 45 to 64 age group.

This incongruity also exists on the national level, according to Mark Fow, director of the National Clearinghouse for Poison Control Centers.

He said medical technology has progressed considerably in recent years, reducing the number of fatalities in accidental poisonings. But not all poisonings reported as accidental actually are such, he said.

MANY CASES involving overdoses of medications and sleeping aids are impossible to distinguish as suicides and are reported as accidental, Fow said.

Only 1 percent to 2 percent of children in the nation die in poisoning cases, though more than 60 percent of the estimated 4,000,000 poisoning incidents involve children, he said.

The Preventive Packaging Act of 1970 has had an impact on the number of child poisonings and fatalities, he said. Since regulation of the terms of the act began, poisonings of children have decreased by more than 50 percent.

"It's a problem that is staying with us. Overall there has been improvement in incidents of accidental poisonings, but we must deal with the factor that many people swallow chemical substances intentionally," Fow said.

Medical improvements and a better educated populace are the reasons for lower fatality rates in accidental cases today, Dick said.

"We have a lot better medical care for poisonings. If a child becomes involved with poison, there is a greater possibility of saving him from serious injuries," Dick said.

THE POISON control center, which services all Iowa, received more than 7,000 calls in fiscal 1981.

Seventy-nine percent of the calls to the center in fiscal 1980 — statistics in this area have not yet been compiled for 1981 — involved persons under the age of 17. Seventy-one percent involved children less than 5 years old, Dick said.

"To the best of my knowledge, poisonings of children with serious outcomes are declining on a percentage basis," he said.

He said the center distributes literature on making poison inaccessible to children and stresses that all people suspecting a poisoning should use the information line.

Dick said a small percentage of all calls require hospital stays and action often can be taken in the home to prevent serious injuries after ingestion of poison.

Humanities cuts aimed elsewhere; UI teaching, research unscathed

By Jonathan Brandt
Staff Writer

Like many areas of government, the National Endowment for the Humanities doesn't receive as much funding as it has in the past. But according to UI personnel who work in the humanities, the cuts have had little effect on the UI.

While supporting the administration's budget cutbacks, William Bennett, Reagan's controversial appointee to head the National Endowment for the Humanities, has chosen to emphasize scholarly research and the teaching of the humanities at the undergraduate and secondary levels.

Mary Jane McLaughlin, a research coordinator in Educational Development and Research, said because of Bennett's different emphasis, cuts in research and teaching "have been held to a minimum, which benefits the campus."

MCLAUGHLIN SAID last year general public projects received a 54 percent cut while research suffered a 17 percent cut. "Certainly there has been no change in individual research grants, which are our main contact here," Professor Linda Kerber of the UI History Department said.

Kerber was a participant in the first annual UI humanities symposium held this spring, at which Bennett spoke.

Jay Semel, director of project development for Educational Development and Research, said, "Bennett's emphasis on teaching has benefited the U of I in two ways: Shortly after taking office one of his first visits was to the U of I to speak at the humanities symposium. Also, the National Endowment for the Humanities has established a series of seminars for high school teachers of the humanities. U of I English professor Miriam Gilbert was one of the first people invited to teach a symposium."

HOWEVER, if the Reagan administration has its way with next year's budget, all areas of the humanities will experience cuts although the emphasis will remain on research and teaching. The administration's proposed budget for next year totals $96.6 million, compared with the current budget of $130.6 million.

McLaughlin said cuts in aid to museums "is one of the most potentially serious areas facing universities." If the cuts in this area go through, the UI Museum of Natural History and the UI Art Museum may be forced to find alternative funding to make up the cuts.

Despite the efforts of the administration to pare this year's budget to about $70 million, Congress restored most of the cuts, McLaughlin said, there has been some speculation about maintaining current levels of funding.

"The problem is that the cuts are supported by the head of National Endowment for the Humanities," McLaughlin said. "So there has to be a public ground swell like happened last year to get the cuts restored. But it's hard to do that every year."

Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said, "I'm not so much concerned about Bennett as by the Reagan administration. I'm deeply concerned about the threat of significant cutbacks in the humanities. Such cuts would be terribly nearsighted."

Architect will advise supervisors

In an effort to determine the best location for an office building for the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, the board will hire a firm to evaluate possible building sites.

Five of the six local architectural firms contacted by J. Patrick White, county attorney, were interested in investigating the costs, advantages and disadvantages of potential sites.

White attributed the firms' interest in the project to the sluggish economy and to the opportunity to serve their home county.

The firm the board elects to do the work will evaluate the following three alternatives:

- Building an office facility at the Johnson County Care Facility.
- Remodeling Iowa City's old public library to provide the county administrative offices.
- Building a new office between Capitol and Clinton streets south of the Johnson County Courthouse, or building it west of the courthouse.

The firms' estimated cost of the project study varied, but ranged from $1,500 to $5,000.

White told the board not to make its decision on the basis of money because the figures are estimates. All the firms have had experience in building for counties before, he said.

All the interested firms are prepared to make a presentation to the board on Tuesday or Thursday, White said. But the board will decide what further action needs to be taken at its Thursday formal meeting.

101 gas odyssey

Cars line up Tuesday along South Gilbert Street to cash in on the $1.01 gasoline that was on sale from 4:30-6:11 p.m. — 101 minutes — at the Deep Rock Service Station in conjunction with radio station KKRQ. The gas station took a 15 cent to 20 cent loss on the estimated 2,000 gallons they sold in the hopes of finding new customers.

Reagan certifies Salvador aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan told Congress Tuesday that El Salvador's government has made enough "tangible" progress on human rights and political reforms to remain eligible for up to $366.4 million in U.S. military and economic aid.

"There are tangible signs of progress by the Government of National Unity, and we believe a firm base has been established for further progress in the months ahead," the State Department said in a 50-page report accompanying the formal certification.

As the report was sent to Congress Tuesday, the Senate voted 95-2 to ask Reagan also to certify that El Salvador's government has made "good faith efforts" to investigate the December 1980 murders of four American churchwomen and two agrarian advisers, and taken "reasonable steps" to investigate the 1981 disappearance of freelance journalist John Sullivan of Bergen, N.J.

IN SENATE debate, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., charged that a failure by the El Salvador government to fully investigate the murders reflects "the bankruptcy of the administration's policy."

Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, the senior Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, criticized the "incredibly slow progress" in the investigation.

The administration report, prepared in advance of the additional requirement, said "the Salvadoran government has begun proceedings under Salvadoran law to bring to justice those accused" in the murders, and that the department is "satisfied" with cooperation received on Sullivan.

For U.S. aid to El Salvador to continue, Reagan is required by Congress to certify twice a year that the nation is "making a significant and concerted effort to comply with internationally recognized human rights, achieving substantial control over all elements of its own armed forces, making continued progress in implementing essential economic and political reforms, and committed to holding free elections at an early date."

THE ADMINISTRATION report said the right-wing government that took power after El Salvador's March 28 elections is continuing U.S.-supported land reforms, although it has suspended part of the land distribution program for a year.

It noted that 11,238 additional provisional land titles have been issued this year, evictions have stopped and some 2,000 farm families have returned to their farms since June 1.

Iowans attack Reagan decision

By Elizabeth McGrory
Staff Writer

President Reagan's decision that the Salvadoran government has made enough progress on human rights and political reform to warrant eligibility for further military aid has drawn attack from Iowans.

The report Reagan based his decision on is "written fantasy," according to Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, his press secretary Barry Piatt said.

Today Harkin will introduce a motion in Congress to de-certify the report on the basis it is "null and void," Piatt said.

Without the certification, the United States cannot continue giving El Salvador aid. Harkin has said the report is not accurate. Facts were made to "fit the legal requirements of law."

Harkin has "monitored the situation" in El Salvador carefully, Piatt said. He visited the country last spring, talked with the Salvadoran people, and has met with people in and out of government.

HARKIN FOUND that the human rights bureau was making "very little or no progress," Piatt said. "Congress expected a truthful report," and did not receive it.

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, said the conditions in El Salvador are "very, very poor." And the certification does "not warrant a clean bill of health."

But while he said he does not oppose military aid to El Salvador, he thinks "it is an appropriate time to de-emphasize military assistance and put a greater emphasis on economic assistance."

He said, "political problems are more readily dealt with to provide bread rather than lead."

Peter Snow, UI professor of political science, agrees more emphasis should be placed on economic aid rather than military aid.

He said the situation there has improved. The first one and one-half years were "so terrible," he said. But now, "far fewer people are getting killed and tortured," he said.

BUT ONCE a person is killed, he said, it is hard to tell if he or she was killed by the government or guerrillas.

He added the United States must respect the elected officials in other countries. "El Salvador elected a conservative" government on March 28 in a "more or less honest" way.

Joel Barkan, UI political science professor, said he is not surprised Reagan approved arms sales to El Salvador.

Elliott Abrams, U.S. associate secretary for human rights, "acknowledged the horror situation" there, but the government is "determined to give aid," Barkan said.

Burl Henry, member of the UI El Salvador Solidarity committee, said he expected Reagan to approve arms sales to El Salvador. He added that there is "not much of a human rights policy in the Reagan administration."

Democrats introduce bill criticizing Watt for letter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of Democratic senators asked their colleagues Tuesday to "repudiate and denounce" Interior Secretary James Watt for writing the Israeli ambassador to urge support for administration energy policies.

The resolution, introduced by Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., picked up 10 co-signers, some of them the Senate's leading liberals.

One of them, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said Watt should resign and that if he does not President Reagan should dismiss him.

In his June 17 letter to Ambassador Moshe Arens, Watt said if "the friends of Israel here in the United States really are concerned about the future of Israel, I believe they will aggressively support the Reagan administration's energy policies."

"If the liberals of the Jewish community join with the other liberals of this nation to oppose these efforts, they will weaken our ability to be a good friend of Israel," Watt wrote. That line, perceived as a threat, was sharply protested by some Jewish leaders.

The White House has disassociated itself from Watt's letter and declared it "does not reflect administration policy." However, Reagan has indicated he still has full confidence in Watt.

The Moynihan resolution says, "America's commitment to the security of Israel is not conditional upon popular support for the energy policy or any other policy of this or any other administration."

Starch block dangers

"If you like potatoes, pasta and bread, but you want to lose weight, you need STARCH BLOCK" — so proclaims the display prominently placed at the outside corner of the store, where pedestrians ambling through the Old Capitol Center's second floor will be certain to see it.

The advertisement is a wordy one, explaining how the pills function: they inhibit the intestines' production of an enzyme which breaks down starch, a complex carbohydrate, so that starch molecules will pass through the system rather than being absorbed.

The ad also reports the use of the product on a test group that successfully lost more weight than a control group receiving none, pronouncing that "no undesirable side effects were reported."

The display neglects to mention subsequent consumer complaints of stomach trouble — including nausea, cramps, vomiting, diarrhea — or experts' concern that the pills might inhibit the breakdown and digestion of molecules similar to starch molecules, but nutritionally necessary.

All of this caused the Food and Drug Administration to take notice. The FDA concluded that the drug's long term effects had not been satisfactorily documented, insisting that the manufacturers discontinue marketing or producing starch blockers.

But retail stores can legally continue to sell their stock of the product. Some local stores have voluntarily halted sales. The General Nutrition Center has not. In fact, the pills are being offered at a reduced price as a "Manager's Sale" item.

Those wanting a safe way to lose weight should avoid starch blockers until they are conclusively shown to have no serious side effects. Meanwhile, the General Nutrition Center could better reflect its status as a health food center if it removed its remaining supply of the pills — or at least displayed a warning that the product has failed to receive FDA approval.

Clinch River vote

Sometime in August the U.S. House of Representatives is expected to vote again on whether to continue funding the Clinch River Breeder Reactor. The last time around, in July 1981, the vote was 206-186 in favor of this monstrous waste of tax money, with Democrat Neal Smith and Republican Cooper Evans of Iowa voting with the majority. There is no excuse for these two to repeat their error in judgment.

Over the last decade the federal treasury has poured more than $1 billion into the Clinch River project, the estimated total cost of which has risen from $400 million in 1970 to at least $3.4 billion today. And over the last decade, arguments made to justify the reactor's completion have convincingly been proven wrong.

First, the demand for electricity has leveled off in most parts of the country in the last 10 years, belying the supposed need for much additional generating capacity. Second, supplies of uranium, thought to be short 10 years ago, have increased greatly, coupled with the logical decrease of cost. (The breeder reactor will, in theory, produce more nuclear fuel than it consumes as a by-product of the fission process.) Third, the original design for the demonstration project has been outmoded by technological developments in the last 10 years, making further investment in it practically useless.

Not to be forgotten, the problem of nuclear waste disposal still has not been solved, and the prospect of ever-greater quantities of highly radioactive fissionable materials floating around is extremely disturbing.

Cooper Evans wants to represent, in the next Congress, a 3rd District that will include Johnson County. Surely he, along with Smith, will want to demonstrate better judgment on the next Clinch River vote than he did on the last.

Shame on CBS

CBS is once again practicing its brand of liberal guilt. Whenever a news show is criticized, the network goes through a ruthless ritual of self-examination to prove that it did do wrong, but it meant well.

CBS' latest confession comes with News President Gordon Sauter's in-house examination of "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," a documentary charging that the military distorted enemy-strength figures during the Vietnam War, a program that was attacked as a "smear" by TV Guide.

In a CBS memorandum, Sauter declares: "CBS stands by this broadcast," although his examination did uncover several instances of manipulated interviews and shoddy editing on the part of producer George Crile and his team.

Obviously, CBS and Crile could have done their jobs better to begin with. But the real guilt CBS should feel over the incident is its knuckling under to TV Guide.

TV Guide's position as public watchdog over the media is laughable. Headed by Nixon-Reagan crony Walter Annenberg, the magazine has exercised an editorial policy over the years only a feather to the left of Conservative Digest. And its monopoly over TV coverage gives it access to millions of homes that would otherwise have no use for an ideological journal of any sort.

With power unequalled by any other magazine, TV Guide has repeatedly used its pages to condemn TV news' negative reporting of political and military malfeasance, particularly under a Republican administration. Its inflated charge of "smear" concerning the CBS documentary is neither the first nor the worst of its attacks on news shows that fly against conservative dogma.

CBS should have taken more care in the preparation of "The Uncounted Enemy." But in capitulating to the politically motivated criticism of TV Guide, the network has doubled its harvest of shame.

Is opposing junta un-American?

The Reagan administration has proposed a total of $61.3 million in security assistance and military aid to El Salvador in the coming fiscal year. Before aid can continue, twice-yearly certification to Congress is required that El Salvador is making progress in improving its civil rights record. The deadline for the next certification is today.

By Paul Dougan

CONSERVATIVES ARE fond of labeling those who oppose a hawkish foreign policy as "un-American." or, better still, "anti-American." As an American opposed to U.S. policy in El Salvador, I'd like to discuss patriotism in that context.

We should first of all notice the brutal nature of the Salvadoran government. People shouldn't be confused into thinking that Salvadoran human rights abuses are simply an ugly but unavoidable side-effect of a civil war the junta has been "forced to fight."

First, it's the Salvadoran government that's been the aggressor. Second, as former U.S. Ambassador Robert White notes: "The (Salvadoran) military avoid combat whenever possible. Ninety five percent of the killing ... consists of dragging unarmed people from their houses and slaughtering them in cold blood." This is the kind of government Washington is supporting: this is how U.S. military aid is used.

Some have tried to justify aid by claiming that accompanying U.S. instruction will "professionalize" the Salvadorans, thus reducing human rights abuses. After voicing this argument, Time magazine, Feb. 22, even goes so far as to quote a U.S. Army spokesman regarding Salvadoran troops training at Fort Bragg: They are "very sensitive to this (human rights) issue. It is a topic of conversation to them, as well as a topic of training." Supposedly, then, those units with the most U.S. instruction should be fighting the cleanest war.

THE PET PROJECT of U.S. advisers in El Salvador is the Atlacatl Battalion. Fifteen alone are assigned to the training of this "rapid reaction force," that is flown into battle by U.S. helicopters.

On Jan. 27, both The New York Times and The Washington Post reported a major massacre in El Salvador. Their stories were based on first-hand observations and interviews with survivors.

A peasant woman explained: "The troops entered the village one morning and, after herding the residents into two separate groups — men divided from women and children — took them out and shot them." She mentioned hearing soldiers say they had specific orders via radio to "go ahead and kill the children too." Local peasants had compiled a list of 733 dead. Other estimates placed the toll as high as 926.

Guest opinion

Who is responsible for this unspeakable carnage? Raymond Bonner of The Times notes the killers' calling card scrawled upon a wall: "The Atlacatl Battalion will return to kill the rest."

My, how "professional." And so "sensitive" too. I'd call the Salvadoran military what they are — sadistic perverts who regularly commit the most heinous atrocities imaginable — but I'm afraid I might hurt their feelings.

ALL THIS TRANSLATES into direct U.S. support for some of the worst criminals on earth. As ex-Ambassador White states: "The military and economic elites of El Salvador ... insist that the Reagan administration secretly agrees with their terrorist methods."

Returning to my original theme, is opposition to this "un-American" — giving guns to a gang of thugs so they can rape 8-year-olds, dismember peasants and cut pregnant women open?

Fortunately, most Americans disagree. Recent polls show from 60 to 72 percent against military aid to El Salvador. Almost 90 percent are opposed to the introduction of combat troops.

Washington's reaction to this clearly-expressed anti-war sentiment is revealing. President Reagan himself speaks disapprovingly of the "Vietnam Syndrome." The very term implies the public is suffering from some psychological ailment. It is more than a little strange that those who insist their every action is devoted to democracy should have such disdain for public opinion. Are the majority of Americans "un-American?"

WHILE PATRIOTISM stems from certain positive qualities such as loyalty and love of one's homeland, it is also something that can be, and frequently is, abused. At what point does patriotism become a blind and fanatical nationalism with all its evil implications? "My country right or wrong" is a viewpoint that puts morality in the back seat — an odd sort of virtue.

Conservatives would do better to ask whether the Salvadoran junta is "un-American." None of the freedoms we associate with "Americanism" exist in that nation, the recent electoral farce notwithstanding. This deplorable state of affairs is extremely well documented in the Report of Human Rights in El Salvador, released earlier this year by the American Civil Liberties Union and the Americas Watch Committee and now available in paperback.

The report emphasized that things are getting worse in El Salvador, not better. Nor is there any prospect they will improve, barring negotiated settlement or a rebel victory. Does anyone seriously believe that the Christian Democrats, reduced to begging even to be included in the new government, will now be able to control the depraved and domineering Salvadoran military?

The fact is, no amount of fervent flag-waving will ever sanctify the Salvadoran slaughter. To the conservatives we say: You can take your garbage and wrap it in the flag. It will still be garbage. It will still stink. And you'll dirty the flag in the process. You're the ones who are "tearing down our country."

Dougan is a member of the El Salvador Solidarity Committee

To the editor:

I was delighted by James J. Treires' "defense of one small word." (DI, July 14). Since Karl Kraus is no longer with us to help distinguish between an urn and a urinal, I'll take up this burden.

He says he would be just as outraged if "gay" were used to apply to heterosexual activity. Well, his outrage is three centuries too late and a dictionary short.

Treires quotes Webster's Collegiate Dictionary in support of his contention that the word "gay," correctly used, has no sexual connotation. To complete his argument, he mentions that he found a similar definition in a very old dictionary "picked up in a London bookstore." I can't say I have spent much time in London bookstores, but I did buy a dirty book in Travis City, Mich., (the Victorian erotic classic My Secret Life), and noticed that the author repeatedly used "gay" as applied to a number of homosexual and heterosexual encounters. This was written in the 1860s.

If it takes a dictionary to convince Treires, then I suggest when he graduates from the Webster Collegiate to the Oxford English Dictionary, he should look at some of the citations on "gay." There is, for example, a citation from 1637 in which the word is used as a euphemism for sexual acts. A reading of such standard English authors as Alexander Pope and Thomas Macaulay will reveal precisely the use of "gay" to which Treires objects.

Treires seems to think that if The Washington Post uses the word "gay" to indicate sexual proclivities, then "the word is imminent danger of extinction." I would draw the interested reader's attention to a passage in Wittgenstein's Blue Book: "it is sometimes impossible for a child to believe that one word can have two meanings."

Not only children are incapable of absorbing the fact that words are sometimes ambiguous. Treires is clearly a disciple of the Edwin Newman school of journalism — his rather pompous recommendations as to how we should speak are not always consistent with traditional English usage.

Higher goal

To the editor:

On June 29th, The Daily Iowan ran a story called "United Way Increases UI Goal," which may have caused some readers to wrongly conclude that United Way had singled out the UI and increased its goal disproportionately.

Such is not the case. We at United Way were pleased when the UI exceeded our goal of $75,000 last year and we have every hope that the $78,000 contributed by UI faculty and staff will be exceeded in this coming campaign.

The higher UI goal is an attempt to set goals in a more rational fashion. In the past, United Way goals represented a compromise between our best estimate of what a given group of employees would contribute and the needs of the agencies we serve. This year we applied a new formula in goal setting.

We determined that the average contribution per employee for Iowa City's major employers was somewhat more than $12. The goal we projected for the UI therefore assumes that each employee will give that amount on the average. We know that many at the UI give considerably more and that some can be expected to contribute elsewhere, but we believe the average contribution generated by this formula is a reasonable target to aim at over the long run. (The $12 per employee is approximately 45 cents for each agency).

We at United Way hope to work with the university community to raise funds for our member agencies in a way consistent with university policies. We hope that by working together with faculty, staff and students we can assure that the needs of the community are met.

Moll finishes 'year of transition'

By Connie Campana
Staff Writer

It's time for UI administrators to begin changing roles again as a new UI administrator arrives on campus Sept. 1.

Kenneth Moll will step down as acting UI vice president for Academic Affairs when Richard Remington officially assumes his title in the fall.

His year as an acting UI vice president has been "a year of transition," Moll said, because of the change in the UI presidency.

Former UI President Willard Boyd announced his resignation in March 1981 and left to head the Chicago Field Museum in July.

This has not been Moll's first year in the UI administration, however. He spent the previous five years as associate dean of faculties.

In the fall Moll will return to teaching and research in the department of speech pathology and audiology. He became a faculty member in the department in 1960 and had served as department chairman for eight years.

"DURING THE fall Remington has asked me to help him on a part-time basis," he said.

In the spring Moll said he wants to spend more time "revitalizing myself in my own field and getting some research started again."

He said he will probably not start teaching until next year.

The year's biggest challenge, Moll said, has been dealing with "the unexpected increases in enrollment we've had, in face of reduced or limited resources."

Some courses don't have enough sections, the faculty needs to deal with increased instructional demands and some labs have insufficient space or equipment, he said.

The most important part of taking charge of academic affairs is "to have been a faculty member and come up through the ranks," he said.

Teaching and doing research helps in understanding the needs and roles of the faculty. "That is the primary thing,"

MANY PEOPLE are saying that higher education is entering a phase of new problems, Moll said. "Certainly there are challenges. But we will deal with those."

Moll said he has great confidence that the UI will remain a strong university because it has the flexibility to respond to change.

"Change is essential. The university can't stand still. One has to take a long-range view of the future."

It doesn't mean administrators don't recognize immediate problems, he said, but the larger issues that arise need time too.

"A former professor of mine once said, 'One is so busy dealing with the critical that they have no time for the merely important.'"

Moll came to the UI in 1956 as a graduate student in speech pathology because the UI was and still is "one of the most renowned universities" in the field, he said.

SPEECH PATHOLOGY "was born here at this institution. The first doctorate was given here in the 1920s." His own emphasis is research in basic speech production rather than clinical study, he said.

"Generating the knowledge that underlies the functions has always been a fundamental principle of the program here at the university."

Moll said he gained experience in speech and speech pathology during high school as a debate coach and for two years in the army working in hospitals.

Regents

cluded staff members.

Neu said although the personnel may have been considered, "we acted just like we would have" without the bill.

UI Assistant Vice President for Finance Mary Jo Small said the bill "may well have been a factor in Richey's proposal" to require board approval for any changes in professional and scientific pay plans.

This proposal could have served as a "defense against the personnel bill," she said, and show that there was board oversight in some personnel matters.

During the May meeting, Neu expressed concern about taking actions only to prevent other controlling bodies from performing that action.

"Within the regents there are differences of opinion" as to whether self-censorship is a good thing, Small said. It's difficult for an outsider to determine if the regents practice self-censorship, she said.

"The regents are always going to be pulled in different directions."

The legislature is one of many segments the regents must be aware of, Jorgensen said, as well as students, faculty, taxpayers, and administrators.

Although she wouldn't call it self-censorship, Jorgensen said: "We don't want to get the legislature upset. That doesn't serve us well."

The regents are a governing body for the university "established by the legislature and accountable to the legislature," Casey Mahon, UI associate vice president for Finance, said.

The regents "do their reasonably best to get along" with the legislature and executive branch and usually do so "without too much trouble or friction," Neu said.

D.C. Spriestersbach, UI vice president for Educational Development and Research, said, "It would not be in our interest to be totally isolated in an ivory tower." The legislature is "certainly one of the realities the board has to deal with."

Drinking

"PERSONALLY I think it's kind of a bogus thing. Where do you decide that 21 is the magic age to be allowed to drink?"

He also said as a result of the older drinking age some bars might be forced to close because of the decreased business.

Miller said raising the drinking age would have a "very minimal" effect on the police department.

"Our analysis shows that with the exception of fights and some noise problems, and although we recognize it is a serious problem, that it only results in 10 percent or less of the calls to the station," he said.

He said one problem in Iowa City is that "there are too many bars here." Miller said license requirements for bars should be tightened further.

Berry said, "There are so many bars now that I don't think the police can give them all protection."

IOWA CITY Council member John Balmer said tougher license requirements would "try to attempt to get owners to police their own establishments a little better," he said.

Deputy City Clerk Marian Karr said the city has issued 63 liquor licenses, 38 class C beer licenses (for carry out stores that sell beer), and 11 class B licenses (for establishments that sell only beer).

The grand total comes to 112 establishments selling beer or liquor in Iowa City.

Balmer said the idea of tightening license requirements for bars "sounds good to me," but he said the only thing the council can now do is "withhold the bar's license if they do not adhere to the law."

A case in point is Micky's, 11 S. Dubuque St., which will have its license suspended for a 14-day period because an employee sold beer to a minor. The council will discuss the suspension at its formal meeting Aug. 3.

"It's an obvious problem and one we should be concerned with," Balmer said. "We don't want to hurt business in the area to any great degree, but we should do whatever it takes to make it more difficult for young people to have this sort of influence."

the U.S. Congress. "If we don't have representation in the states, then how do we have representation in Washington, D.C.?"

In addition to the term controversy, Poulsen has also been involved with the city in trying to get $1,000 a month rent for a water main running under his property at 810 First Ave.

AS OF JULY 1, Poulsen figured the city owed him $6,305.17, which includes interest at an annual rate of 17 percent compounded monthly. He claims the city does not have an easement for the 16-inch main.

"They'll be getting another bill the first of the month," he said.

Poulsen said if the city does not start paying the rent that he will "block the main off and knock a hole in it." Then he will tap the main to supply water to his property.

He said the city has not contacted him about that matter or about damages caused to his restaurant by sewer overflow from recent heavy rains.

"They're running storm water in the sanitary sewers," he said. "They're spending money elsewhere when we have problems right here and right now."

Poulsen said he is not considering taking legal action against the city at the present time.

"Why would I want to initiate a lawsuit against the city when it's their obligation to take care of it?"

Chicago's Bump Wills, left, managed to complete a double play throw against Montreal Tuesday at Wrigley Field, but the Expos' speedy Tim Raines tried his best to break it up. The Expos won, 4-3, behind catcher Gary Carter's three-run homer.

Expos' win is 1,000th for club

CHICAGO (UPI) — It would figure that the winningest pitcher for the Montreal Expos would be the one to finally notch the club's 1,000th victory in the history of the franchise.

Further, it would make sense that right-hander Steve Rogers would do it on the road.

Rogers, 13-4, won for the 12th straight time away from home, leading the Expos to a 4-3 triumph Tuesday over the Chicago Cubs. It was the Cubs' fourth straight loss, their seventh in eight games against the Expos and dropped them 21 games below .500.

Gary Carter's three-run homer in the first proved to be the winning blow for Rogers, who scattered nine hits in pitching his eighth complete game of the season.

"ACTUALLY, THE EARLY lead didn't help me much. I went out figuring that I had the lead and it was more difficult to get in the groove," said Rogers, who joined Philadelphia's Steve Carlton and Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela as 13-game winners in the National League. "It wasn't pretty but I'll take it."

Rogers has won all 10 decisions away from home this season. He hasn't lost on the road since losing to Atlanta last Aug. 23.

"I'm not aware of it unless you (the media) bring it up," said Rogers, who also continues to lead the league in earned run average. "We have been playing well on the road so it would figure we would have some pitchers above .500 on the road."

Rogers had to struggle to get the win. He yielded an RBI single to Keith Moreland in the first and a RBI single by Leon Durham in the third. Durham's RBI double in the eighth — his third hit of the game — narrowed the lead to 4-3.

THE CUBS HAD the tying run at second with two out in the ninth but Rogers got Ryne Sandberg to bounce out to end the game.

Carter's blast — his 21st of the season — came on a 3-1 pitch after Andre Dawson and Al Oliver had singled off Randy Martz, 4-7.

"This is a big win for us. We had a tough time getting to 1,000," Carter said. "I've been hitting with much more confidence and I'm more relaxed."

Carter's homer was against the wind and hit the leftfield foul pole fence.

McClain fights critics, schedule

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — At a university that prides itself on intellectual elitism, Dave McClain stands out.

He is a 44-year-old country boy from the Ohio backwoods: the owner of a marbly-mouthed drawl and a stable full of "shoots, gosh dangs and gee whizzes."

His addiction to tired axioms — "I'm tickled pink" and "knock on wood" are favorites — and his insistence on rapping his head to emphasize the latter perpetuate his image as the stereotypic football coach.

But Dave McClain is no dummy.

He is smart enough to know a lot of eyes heretofore blind to Wisconsin football will be watching the Badgers this fall, and not so naive to think all the new followers will be pulling for them.

"WE'VE GOT A LOT of people out there still wondering if last year was a fluke and I'm sure a lot of them still think it was," he says, fidgeting with two paperweights on his desk.

"We'll just have to prove them wrong, I guess."

The glass-encased paperweights hold ticket stubs to his two most memorable games. One reads: Wisconsin 21, Michigan 14. The other: Wisconsin 21, Ohio State 20.

The monumental upsets, accomplished last year within a month at one another, ended two decades of humiliation for Wisconsin, which had not beaten either team since 1962.

They also catapulted the Badgers to a 7-4 record and a season that ended with a bowl game for the first time in 19 years. Wisconsin lost to Tennessee in the Garden State Bowl.

RUBBING A HAND over his face — a face that has aged dramatically since he took hold of the losing program four-and-a-half years ago — McClain insists the success carries no added pressure. But he admits: "A lot of people don't think we can win it all this year, and I can see their reasons."

The reasons are many.

Among them are the loss of several key players on both sides of the ball and the odds against matching last year's sweep of the Big Three — Michigan, Ohio State and Purdue, who committed suicide in 1981 with a composite of 14 turnovers against Wisconsin.

The biggest reason, however, is the schedule.

THE BADGERS OPEN the season at Michigan, come home for a pair of non-conference games against UCLA and Toledo, then travel to Purdue and Ohio State on successive weekends.

"On the road at Michigan, at Purdue and at Ohio State," McClain muses. "Those are our first three league games. Needless to say, we're going to have a pretty good picture by the third game of where we stand."

Orioles call Boddicker up from minors

By Matt Gallo
Staff Writer

When opportunity knocked Monday night, former Hawkeye baseball player Mike Boddicker heeded the call.

The Norway, Iowa, native, who pitched for Iowa from 1975 through 1978, was called up to the major leagues by the Baltimore Orioles Monday night. He had been one of the top pitchers at Rochester (N.Y.) of the Class AAA International League, compiling a 10-5 record with a 3.68 E.R.A. in 19 appearances. This will be Boddicker's third stint with Baltimore, previously pitching there in September of 1980 and 1981, hurling in three games for an 0-1 record and 5.54 E.R.A.

Although Boddicker, a 24-year old righthander, was called up by the Orioles Monday, it may be a while before he throws for the Orioles. "He won't be eligible to play until he's activated," said John Blake, assistant public relations director for the Orioles. "Earl (Oriole Manager Weaver) wanted him to work out with the club for a couple of days before he pitches. He'll be in uniform today though."

BLAKE SAID THE Orioles called up Boddicker because Baltimore has two double-headers next week and they will need an extra pitcher. He said the Orioles will probably go with a six-man rotation for a short time. Currently the O's have nine pitchers on the roster. Blake said Baltimore will drop someone who doesn't pitch to make room for Boddicker although he refused to disclose who that player would be.

Boddicker will probably be used as a long relief pitcher for Baltimore, Blake said, pointing out that the Orioles have one of the top pitching staffs in the major leagues, with former Cy Young Award winners Jim Palmer and Mike Flanagan along with Scott McGregor, Sammy Stewart and

Dennis Martinez. "We have a tough pitching staff to make," he said. "It's very rare for a pitcher to start off in the starting rotation for the Orioles. Flanagan and Dennis Martinez both started off in the bullpen."

MIKE CALLED HIS mother, Dolly, at about 11 Monday night to inform her of the promotion. She said she is proud of her son, although not necessarily because he is a good baseball player. "Mike's just a plain, ordinary kid. I like him better for the kind of person he is more than a ballplayer," she said. "I'll tell you. I hope for the best. I don't let myself get too excited. I just hope he stays healthy because I know he tries his hardest."

"I used to be a National League fan and so did Mike. I liked the Cubs and Atlanta, but that was before Mike signed with Baltimore. Now I'm an Oriole fan," she said, adding that she doesn't have any plans to go to Baltimore to see her son perform. "I'll probably go see him when he comes to Chicago."

IOWA BASEBALL Coach Duane Banks was looking for the advancement to come. "I wasn't surprised at all," he said. "He's had a great year in the International League. My only question is why he wasn't brought up earlier."

Hawkeye Assistant Coach Steve Duncan was pleased with the Orioles decision to promote the former Hawkeye. "He's one of the best pitchers we've had," he said. "We'll use that in recruiting. It helps us sell our program when kids like him do well."

Boddicker will join Texas Ranger catcher Jim Sundberg, as UI alumni in the majors. Other former Hawkeyes doing well in the pros include Chuck Johnson, a pitcher for Chicago White Sox AAA farm club Edmonton, and Rich Carlucci, pitching for Cincinnati AAA farm team Indianapolis.

Rangers' Zimmer is fired by owner

United Press International

Don Zimmer, on borrowed time as manager of the Texas Rangers for more than a month, has been notified of his dismissal by owner Eddie Chiles, with the formal announcement of his firing to be made shortly, it was learned from club sources Tuesday.

Zimmer will be paid the balance of his contract which runs through 1983.

Chiles gave Zimmer the privilege of recommending his successor and Zimmer named one of his coaches, Fred Koenig. But another of his coaches, Darrell Johnson, who like Zimmer once managed the Boston Red Sox, is believed to be favored by Chiles and General Manager Paul Richards.

Zimmer barely survived as manager after an almost all-day meeting with Chiles May 24. He was given a reprieve but the meeting eventually resulted in the firing of General Manager Eddie Robinson.

THE RANGERS entered Tuesday night's game against the Milwaukee Brewers in sixth place with a 38-56 record.

Zimmer, 51, began his major league managerial career with the San Diego Padres in 1972. He replaced Johnson July 19, 1976 as manager of Boston and began a five-year stint. He was named Texas manager Nov. 12, 1980 and led the Rangers to a 57-48 record in last year's strike-shortened season.

He will be the fourth major league manager fired this year. The others were Bob Lemon of the New York Yankees, Bob Rodgers of the Milwaukee Brewers and the John McNamara of the Cincinnati Reds.

ZIMMER WAS in uniform in the dugout Tuesday night in Arlington, Texas. He did not take the line-up card to the umpires before the game, but that move was not uncommon.

During the game he stayed in the corner of the dugout, his foot propped on the steps in his usual stance.

Known as a disciplinarian, Zimmer was unable to get the same results from his club as he did the previous year. The Rangers, a young team that lacks quality pitching, went on a 12-game losing streak at the end of April.

More than money luring schools to 'exclusive' rights

Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott has said that Iowa will not go to exclusive radio rights for athletic broadcasts in the near future.

However, many schools, including Iowa State and Purdue have found that the contract is a very lucrative way to attract interest and big bucks to their schools.

Iowa State Sports Information Director Butch Henry said the Ames school signed a contract with KIOA in Des Moines for more than the money reason. "One of our biggest reasons was that we wanted to guarantee a source for basketball coverage," Henry said. "Our coverage dwindled during the 1979-80 season so much that we felt we had to do something or else we might be without any coverage."

"WHO (A 50,000 WATT station in Des Moines) did some of our games

when Iowa wasn't playing, but the number varied with each year," Henry said. "The money we receive ($25,000 per year for three years) is secondary to the contract. The station is required to provide us with over $100,000 in promotional items each year."

In other words, the Des Moines station is flipping the bill for bumper stickers, billboards and schedule posters that ISU had been deducting from its athletic budget. Some would argue the ethics of a station paying to promote one school, but KIOA General Manager Ed Wodka doesn't see a problem.

"We are kind of in a pseudo-partnership with the university," Wodka said. "I think it's time that fans and other stations realized the day of the free lunch is over and very soon you won't be able to see the Super Bowl or the World Series on free television, either."

WODKA SAID his station does plan on rebidding for the Iowa State rights when the contract expires in two years.

"Everytime you come up with something exclusive it makes your ad message more effective. All of the people are listening to one signal."

For years the Big Ten had a rule encouraging free enterprise in radio broadcasts, but the rule was suspended several years ago and four conference schools have gone to exclusive rights.

Joining Ohio State, Northwestern and Indiana this year will be Purdue, who recently signed a contract with Host Communications to set up a network to cover the Boilermakers.

THE REASON, according to John DeCamp, director of promotions and public relations at Purdue, is simply money. "Over a period of three years we'll make $228,000 and that will pay quite a few bills," DeCamp said. "We also went with it because we thought we could make our network stronger. We have tremendous competition with Indiana and Notre Dame here."

Nebraska, the lone school in the Big Eight with more than one station, announced last Wednesday it would sell rights to Cornhusker football to KFAB in Omaha beginning in the 1983 season.

"We have been having trouble getting space for our stations on the road," said Don Bryant, Nebraska sports information director. "This year when we play Iowa, 13 radio stations will be doing the game and no game in the world deserves 13 radio stations. It's getting so no one has the facilities to handle that many stations."

Video games

Baseball, the grand old game that it is, takes the spotlight this weekend. Sunday at 1 p.m., ESPN (Cable 32) will telecast the Hall of Fame induction ceremony live from Cooperstown, N.Y. The program will be rebroadcast Sunday at 6 p.m.

Action begins today in wrestling tourney

By Jay Christensen
Sports Editor

More than 1,200 wrestlers from across the country begin competition today in the United States Wrestling Federation's 12th annual national junior tournament at the Iowa Field House.

The four-day event, billed as "the biggest wrestling tournament in the world," features competition in Greco-Roman and freestyle. Sixteen mats will be used, with over 2,000 matches expected to be staged.

All the wrestlers involved were high school students during the 1981-82 school year and each had to qualify through state tournaments. Each state federation is allowed 33 contestants who may compete in both Greco-Roman and freestyle.

There are 11 weight classes — 98, 105.5, 114.5, 123, 132, 143, 154, 165, 178, 191.5 and heavyweight divisions in each style. The top six finishers in each weight division receive awards.

Favorites fall in IM coed tournament play

The number of teams still alive for the intramural coed softball tournament championship dwindled to four Tuesday evening following first-round action in the coed tourney.

The two undefeated teams in the tournament, Peppers, 4-0, and Sophists, 5-0, both fell by the wayside as did the team with the worst record in the tourney, Melanges, which was 2-2 prior to Tuesday.

Bushwackers raised its record to 5-1 with an 8-7 win over The Blue News and will face Win or Lose, we Booze (5-1) in the semifinals Thursday at 5 p.m. Win or Lose, we Booze knocked off Peppers, 7-3, to advance.

Burning desire

Philadelphia Eagles' defensive end Leonard Mitchell, a first-round draft choice in 1981 from the University of Houston, attempts to escape the heat at the Eagles' training camp in West Chester, Pa. Mitchell, who spent most of last season injured, wasn't alone, as temperatures topped 90 degrees.

Williams lifts East to win over North

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Andre Williams, a sophomore at the University of Pittsburgh, scored 20 points and Syracuse recruit Rafael Addison added 16 to lead the East men's basketball team to a 116-109 victory over the North Tuesday in the first game of basketball competition at the National Sports Festival.

The West and South played Tuesday night.

Williams, a 6-foot-9 forward from New York, scored 12 points in the first quarter as the East took a 31-22 lead. The East used its speed advantage to increase its lead to 47-31 on a three-point play by Michael Brown of East Orange, N.J., midway through the second period.

The North came back to within 58-56 at halftime, led by Marcus McKinney of Hammond, Ind., and Ronald Harper of Dayton, Ohio.

BASKETS BY Gerald Wilkins and Iowa's Greg Stokes at the start of the second half gave the North a 60-58 lead and the teams exchanged the lead through the rest of the third quarter, which ended with the East ahead, 85-81.

The fourth quarter started with dunks by Harold Pressley and Ed Pinckney, which gave the East an 89-81 lead. The closest the North got thereafter was 114-109 in the last 20 seconds of the game.

Pinckney and Pressley, who will be teammates at Villanova this fall, each scored 15 points for the East. Addison had 14 and Sugar Ray Hall had 13 points.

THE LEADING SCORER in the game was Wilkins, from Atlanta, who had 26 points for the North. Harper had 19 and Eric Turner, a sophomore at Michigan, had 15 points.

The game was played under international basketball rules, which include a different rule for player substitution. Six players from each team are designated by their coaches to play in the first quarter, while the remaining six team members play in the second quarter.

Sportsbriefs

Packers' camp opens

Former Iowa football star Ron Hallstrom will be among 88 players attending the opening of Green Bay's training camp, today at St. Norbert College in West DePere, Wis.

Hallstrom is listed at 6-foot-6, 286 pounds on the 1982 roster. He will wear number 65.

The Packers were 6-2 over the final eight weeks of last season, a record bettered only by the New York Jets, San Francisco 49ers and Cincinnati Bengals.

Of the 88 players listed on the roster, 61 are veterans and 21 are first-year players.

Complete rehabilitation

San Diego Charger owner Eugene V. Klein told reporters Monday that running back Chuck Muncie would be released from a drug rehabilitation center in time to report to training camp with the rest of the Charger veterans Aug. 1.

Head Coach Don Coryell said his rushing star had been given a clean bill of health by the unidentified treatment center.

"I understand he came out with a clean bill of health," Coryell said. "No dependence, no trace of anything."

Klein had said that Muncie would not be allowed into the team's La Jolla training camp until he sought help for a problem with cocaine.
