Bush hits the road in lowa for GOP

United Press International

Vice President George Bush, campaigning for Iowa Republicans, criticized Democrats for making what he called personal attacks against Ronald Reagan and said he is convinced the president will seek re-election

"It is my firm belief he is going to run again for president." Bush told about 330 party faithful Monday who had paid $25 a person to attend a Des Moines fundraiser for Terry Branstad, Iowa's GOP gubernatorial candidate.

"I'm absolutely convinced he should run again, and I believe the country will be better off if he runs again for president," he continued.

Bush blamed Democrats for the country's economic troubles, stating, "Every poll that I've seen show the people don't blame the president."

'When Carter-Mondale took over in 1977, they inherited an inflation rate of 4 percent and interest rates of 12 percent," he said. "When they left, inflation was at 12 percent and interest was at 21 percent.

HE DEFENDED Reagan's New Federalism proposals for returning some programs to the states and said critics who think local governments do not have the honesty or the skill to handle the load are misguided.

'The administration trusts the people and we think it's time people in Washington trust them more," Bush

Bush found support and even a warm pat on the back from eastern Iowa farmers later on Monday. He discussed the farm economy and ways to build grain exports during a meeting with about 24 farmers from Iowa's 1st Congressional District in Eldridge, Iowa.

'There wasn't a farmer in the meeting that would blame the present government," said Roy Keppy, who hosted the vice president on his 240acre hog farm. "We took some blame ourselves. We're the ones that over-

KEPPY SAID farmers overproduced, thinking they would sell to the Russians - until the 1980 grain embargo ended that possibility. The farmers stressed the need to reopen that

'We have the ground and the technology to produce," Keppy said. 'We need a world market. We need to do everything we can to get the grain abroad and feed the hungry people of

Jack Parsons of Louisa County, spokesman for the National Corn Growers Association, said the farmers had words of praise for the corn setaside program announced by Agriculture Secretary John Block last

"The administration was complimented on getting the farm program in place and ready to go by October with some upfront money in it," he said. "With that in place, we can get to the task of selling this monumental corn crop in the field."

The ballyhoo over the orchestra's un-

Faculty loss, shortage is 'fact of life'

Key faculty leave UI, but exodus of teachers hasn't become reality

By Jane Turnis

Despite years of predictions that a faculty exodus will occur and the quality of the UI will decline because of inadequate faculty salaries. the number of faculty members to leave from 1977 to 1981 remained stable.

Although the report on resignations from 1981-82 is not yet available, the UI maintained an average of 79 faculty resignations for the five-year period prior to this year.

More than half of those resigning have left to accept positions at other educational institutions causing some faculty members to maintain that faculty flight may be a threat at the UI. Others consider mobility a "fact of life." Kenneth Moll, a speech pathology professor and former acting vice president for academic affairs, said faculty losses are to be expected. "WE CONTINUE to lose good people, and anytime you lose faculty, it affects the quality of the university. But it's just a fact of life. We See Faculty, page 6

School of Engineering feeling the effects of industry's high salaries

By Mary Tabor

A drop in the number of doctorates granted in engineering has left a shortage of qualified personnel to fill faculty openings, the dean of the UI College of Engineering said Monday.

Dean Robert Hering blames the scarcity of engineering faculty on the high salaries offered by private industry and the unattractiveness of faculty positions.

"At the present time there are approximately 2,000 faculty positions open in engineering colleges across the country.

"These are authorized, budgeted positions. This doesn't even reflect additional shortages for which authorization for hiring hasn't been made," Hering said.

The large number of openings - about 10 percent of all engineering faculty positions in the United States - is due largely to the tempting sums of money corporations offer graduates with bachelor's degrees, Hering said.

Israel begins withdrawing from Beirut

Israeli troops departed West Beirut Monday, but diplomats said the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin has insisted on leaving an Israeli "presence" in the Lebanese capital despite the expected arrival of 1,200 U.S. Marines on Wed-

President Reagan, who had demanded Israeli troops leave Lebanon's capital before the Marines were deployed, said through a spokesman in Washington that West Beirut was 'primarily under control' of the Lebanese government.

Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said the United States was 'encouraged' by Israel's progress in pulling its troops out.

The State Department said 1,200 Marines were expected to land in Beirut Wednesday, 400 more than previously announced. Another 600 Marines will remain offshore aboard 6th Fleet ships in reserve.

The Israelis, using some 100 C-130 cargo planes and helicopters, ferried their troops and heavy equipment out of West Beirut Monday.

DESPITE the substantial pull-back, diplomats said Israel was insisting on maintaining a "presence" at the airport. One Italian source said it is unlikely the Israelis would compromise.

"I think the Israelis will stick to the bitter end to these conditions and perhaps add demands for a presence at the port, too," he said.

As the airlift was under way, French and Italian peacekeeping troops took up strategic positions around the Chatila and Sabra refugee camps, site of the massacre of hundreds of Palestinian civilians by Christian militiamen.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, hoping to quell fears of another slaughter, had asked the peacekeeping troops to move in quickly.

The number of bodies recovered from the massacre that began Sept. 16 stood at 335 Monday - 311 reported by the International Red Cross and 24 reported by the civil defense.

But hundreds of men, women and children remained unaccounted for. Estimates of the total dead have

THE ISRAELI cabinet, bowing to domestic and international pressure, was expected to set up a judicial inquiry commission today to investigate any Israeli involvement in the State-operated Israel Television said although none of the ministers in Begin's coalition government opposed a statutory inquiry, the scope of the probe has not yet been determined.

But the report said Begin has indicated "everything will be open to investigation" and neither the political nor the military levels of the Israeli government will be spared.

The deployment of the peacekeeping troops in Lebanon has been delayed since last week by the continued Israeli presence in Beirut. While Israel has made no promise to leave East Beirut it has vowed to be out of the Moslem western sector by late Wednesday. White House spokesman Speakes said the United States expected "the Israeli Defense Forces to be out of Beirut by mid-week, including the airport area. No (Israeli) force of any military significance is expected to remain in the airport area.

U.S. OFFICIALS believe the Jewish holy day, Yom Kippur, delayed the Israeli pullout from West Beirut, which the Israelis invaded Sept. 15 after the assassination of Lebanese Presidentelect Beshir Gemayel.

The Marines were the only peacekeeping troops not yet ashore. The full French and Italian contingents, numbering roughly 2,200 troops, were already in Beirut.

Italian ambassador Franco Lucaoli said he felt confident of an agreement that would get the Israelis out of key areas in Beirut to allow the full deployment of the multi-national force.

'The Israelis would be stupid not to recognize that we all have an interest in a stable, independent Lebanon. I think we are on the verge of an acceptable agreement," he said.

Gemayel, who took office last week, was reported Monday to be planning a trip to Europe and the United States to drum up support for the removal of all foreign troops from Lebanon -Israelis, Syrians and Palestinians.

The orchestra's management has taken steps to change this impression. Earlier this year, they named the distinguished Italian conductor, Claudio Abbado, to the post of principal guest conductor - a position which includes several subscription concerts and a tour or two - and has implemented a 'repertory system' of conductors. whereby the majority of the orchestra's concerts are dividedamong a fewer number of directors in this case, five: Solti, Abbado, Erich Leinsdorf, Leonard Slatkin, and Rafael Kubelik (Kubelik was music director himself for three seasons, from 1950 through 1953).

Hancher to host 'world's greatest' orchestra

It remains to be seen whether this strategy will restore a measure of spontaneity to the orchestra's performances, but I believe the appointment of Abbado is a correct move, and history bears this out.

THE ORCHESTRA was facing a similar situation in 1969; subscribers and critics alike were complaining about the swollen renderings that they were being given by the music director of the time, Jean Martinon, Solti was then brought in, but another conductor was named at the same time to the post of principal guest conductor: Carlo Maria Giulini, now music director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

Giulini brought a Mediterranean warmth and smoothness to counter Solti's blood and thunder, and the combination served to spark the orchestra to some of its greatest performances.

Abbado brings a comparable depth of operatic experience to bear on his new assignment, having just come from a very successful stint at La Scala, the famous opera house in Milan (where Giulini also worked earlier). It seems likely, though prediction is a risky business (especially with artists), that Abbado's velvet glove will complement Solti's iron fist very nicely.

The orchestra will be conducted at Hancher by Reynald Giovaninetti, a French-born and trained musician who made his debut with the orchestra in 1980. I remember him well from a fiery and lyrical performance of Puccini's Tosca he conducted at the San Francisco Opera a few years ago. Given the Chicago Symphony's vast technical accomplishments, his program, which includes Berlioz' stupendous masterpiece Symphonie Fantastique, proves to be an exciting one indeed.

.. for those who can afford to go, that is: the ticket prices, unfortunately reflecting orchestral tickets everywhere, are pretty stiff: $23-$13 for students. Ouch. But go, go, GO! This promises to be the orchestral event of the semester, and even the cheap seats in Hancher sound good. See

Shcharansky begins fast

MOSCOW - The mother of imprisoned dissident Anatoly Shcharansky said she does not think her son will survive a hunger strike he began Monday to protest his isolation from relatives and friends.

Shcharansky, 34, was sentenced in 1978 to three years in prison and 10 years in a labor camp on charges of spying and anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. He was active in the recently-disbanded Helsinki Watch Group, which monitored Soviet human rights violations.

Embryo experiments decried

LONDON - British doctors Monday condemned Dr. Robert Edwards, the test-tube baby pioneer, for carrying out experiments on 14 to 15 "spare" human embryos, most of which died.

Edwards obtains eggs from women at his clinic and fertilizes them with male sperm. He inserts some of the fertilized eggs into women but apparently retains others for experimentation. Edwards said he feels "no hesitation" about using embryos in his research.

Salvadoran officer arrested

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador - A Salvadoran judge Monday ordered a military officer held for questioning because of testimony that he was the "intellectual author" of the slaying of two U.S. agrarian advisers.

Two national guard corporals last week confessed they killed Michael Hammer, 42, of Potomac, Md., and Mark Pearlman, 32, of Seattle, Wash., and Salvadoran Agrarian Reform Institute Director Rodolfo Viera on

Wilson to face murder trial

WASHINGTON - A federal judge ruled Monday that renegade ex-CIA agent Edwin Wilson must stand trial Nov. 22 on charges of illegally exporting explosives and bombmaking devices to Libya.

Wilson was also ordered to stand trial, at a date still to be fixed, on charges he conspired to murder an Egyptian opponent of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy. Federal prosecutors say Wilson was to have been paid $1 million for arranging the assassination, which never took place.

Convention bureau may get tax funds

By Doug Herold

Preparing for the prospect of a 5 percent hotel-motel tax being levied in Iowa City next April, the Iowa City Council agreed at its informal meeting Monday night to allot 25 percent of the revenues to the Iowa City-Coralville Convention Bureau. Councilors agreed on that percentage after four members of the bureau gave a lengthy presentation on their organization and their plans for revenue monies. Mayor Mary Neuhauser proposed the council decide on a dollar figure to be "taken off the top" of the taxgenerated funds, "something like $25,000.

But other councilors - concerned they would be alloting money from an unknown amount - overrode that idea, and the council finally settled on a 25 percent commitment for the first three years of the tax.

THE PROPOSED hotel-motel tax, which is slated for a voter decision in November's general election, may generate $89,054 according to city finance department estimates. At that level of income, convention bureau benefits would total $22,054.

The pledge agreed upon by the council is identical to the percentage promised by the Coralville City Council in September. Coralville voters also will decide on a 5 percent hotel-motel tax in November.

Expected revenues from the Coralville tax have been placed between $200,000 and $420,000. Bureau President Renee Jedlicka described the services provided by the organization and passed out sample welcome packets to the council.

Councilor Larry Lynch replied: 'Why! You spoil sport.

BEFORE THE bureau finished its presentation, the council agreed it would discuss other possible uses for hotel-motel tax revenues at next Monday's informal council meeting. "We're really going to have to get out and sell (the proposal)" Lynch said.

Neuhauser agreed, saying: "I think it's important for people to know that it only applies to hotels and motels and not to people's apartments." The council also heard recommendations Monday from the the city's Riverfront Commission on salient projects needing funds in 1983. The council will begin budget hearings next month. The budget priorities of the commission include: · Completion of the Rocky Shore Drive bicycle-pedestrian trail.

 Acquisition of additional public park land along the river. Procuring conservation easements between the Coralville Reservoir dam and the gravel works on Sand Road. Providing river bank plantings and erosion control measures on city property abutting the river.

Profits come first

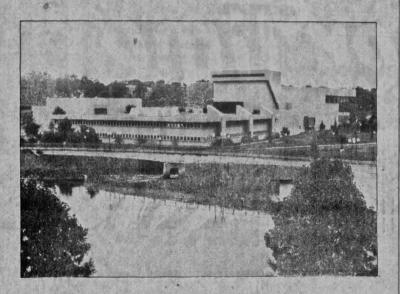

A bill approved by the Senate Commerce Committee would strip cities of much of their control over cable television franchising requirements and give it to the Federal Communications Commission. Despite some appearance to the contrary, the proposed law is very much in line with the Reagan philosophy of expanding business markets through deregulation.

The fact that deregulation of the burgeoning cable TV industry would come about as the result of shifting control of cable franchise enforcement from local governments to the FCC only belies Reagan's platitudes about giving "the people" more control over services in their own communities.

What the Reagan administration really wants is more freedom for U.S. industry. In the case of cable TV, that freedom would be better served by the Reagan-packed FCC than by the stringent requirements of cities like Iowa City, which demand high levels of accountability and public access from their franchises.

Cities like Chicago and St. Paul have for years wrangled with competing cable companies over franchise requirements. Consequently, they still have not been wired for service. Moving control over cable to the FCC and then setting low enough standards could open such major markets to exploitation. If that means poorer service than could be negotiated by local commissions, too bad.

The bill that passed the Senate Commerce Committee is supported by Iowa's two Republican senators, Roger Jepsen and Charles Grassley, as well as by the administration. What their action says, in other words, is that the right of corporations to make money supercedes the right of localities to regulate and enforce even such vital services as telecommunication.

The Music Building and Hancher: is the theater beginning to cater to pocketbooks ans prestige rather than to the people of

Asking too much

The Chicago Symphony is one of the world's premiere orchestras, and its visit to Iowa City is indeed an honor.

It would be more of an honor, however, if the people who live in Iowa City could afford to see its concert tonight.

Ticket prices for the Symphony's performance are, for this city, outrageous: $23 for the best seat in the house, $13 for the cheapest if you're a student. If you're not, add two dollars.

The problem of high ticket prices is not one that can be laid on anybody's doorstep. Transportation and equipment costs for a body the size of the Chicago Symphony are immense, making high prices almost a necessity. And Hancher authorities cannot be faulted for trying to bring the best acts they can.

But the extraordinary cost of the Chicago Symphony tickets (four to five dollars more than for the Cleveland Orchestra in October) unfortunately contributes to the impression that Hancher's avowed mission of art at reasonable prices for all members of the community is so much lip service - that what really matters is money and those who have it.

The issue of art for the elite is one that has been with us since the days of the patronage system, when art — what we now consider "great art" - was commissioned and paid for by the powered and

While the creation of art has been somewhat liberated from that system, the presentation hasn't. In the large cities that serve as "cultural centers," the performance and exhibition of art is dependent upon massive contributions from wealthy individuals and corporations. And in many cases, that hasn't dented prices that are unaffordable to most who live in the community.

This has not been the case with Hancher in its 10 years. The hall's uncomfortable upscale tone aside, Hancher has provided the UI and Iowa City with a remarkably diverse array of events that have been, for the most part, well within the budgets of undergraduates living off parental stipends and graduate students making below-minimum wage.

The exorbitant prices of the Chicago Symphony, then, should be viewed at this point as an exception. But the worry is that that exception is the beginning of a trend.

Hancher officials would be wise to keep in mind their stated responsibility to the community. Neither education nor service is provided by an event that costs $25. As great as the Chicago Symphony is, it and other organizations that are prohibitively expensive to most people do more to harm the cause of the arts in Iowa than they do to help it.

And Hancher is supposed to serve the people of Iowa — not pocketbooks and prestige.

Union display is anti-Semitic

N THE BASEMENT lobby of the Union, near where various student organizations often set up canvassing stations, is a most offensive presentation. Sponsored by the campus Palestinian society, the General Union of Palestinian Students, the display consists of a desecrated Israeli flag with the star in the center used as a hub for a ring of added swastikas and pictures of Adolph Hitler and Menachem Begin. The inscription reads: "Who is who? I am

The similarity seen between the two by GUPS is that both have used terrible force against innocent civilans for bringing about their objectives, especially in light of the recent atrocities

OTHERS HAVE expressed the same notion. About seven years ago, the United Nations passed a resolution stating that Zionism was a form of racism, and an article in The Daily Iowan by staff writer Nasir Raza described Begin as a "racist Zionist." But this is not the case. The problem in the Middle East is not racism - by Israelis, Lebanese or Palestinians - but something more basic; religious fundamentalism.

People on all sides have been unwilling to compromise on very significant issues - matters of life and death for thousands of individuals — because of what is most holy is everyone living in peace and understanding according to the gods of all three faiths.

The Union display does not contribute to any appreciation of what is currently happening in the Middle East. It obfuscates the issues involved and alienates the public. Instead of helping to create a climate of concern, bringing Arab and Jew together in revulsion at the massacres at Beirut, the exhibit comes across as anti-Semitic propaganda.

Losing chronicler of a generation

T'S LIKE LOSING your favorite teacher. Come next year, millions of faithful Doonesbury readers will have to look somewhere else for wisdom each morning. At 34, cartoonist Garry Trudeau is taking a much-deserved sabbatical.

Yet as much as we'll miss Trudeau's work, 20 months of freedom may produce something more remarkable than Doonesbury itself. Besides, even sages need an opportunity to put things in perspective.

Trudeau has undoubtedly been the leading chronicler of the Baby Boom generation. He's shepherded us from the early confrontations at home and school in the 1960s into the wholly different world of the Reagan era, noting and illuminating our every move.

It all began 15 years ago when, with the encouragement of a sports editor, the lanky sophomore from Saranac Lake, N.Y., walked into The Yale Daily News Office in New Haven, Conn., with a proposal to draw a strip called "Bull Tales." Before long, Trudeau was winning peers' accolades for his caricatures of such stereotypes as football players, radicals and social dilettantes, following them later in Doonesbury through work, Vietnam

"He really had our number." reminisced Mark Zanger, the Yale student leader who was the prototype for Megaphone Mark, "particularly when he wrote that 'even revolutionaries enjoyed choclate-chip cookies.'

WHILE HE SOON began to tackle bigger targets - Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter, among others - Trudeau never lost sight of the rest of us and how we managed the ebb and flow of each year.

Perhaps no character better personifies this universal ordeal than Joanie Caucus, the unhappy wife of an inveterate bowler. Initially, "Ms. Caucus" leaves her husband, goes to Walden Puddle and takes a job at a local day-care center where she converts many of the girls, including star pupil Ellie, to feminism. Subsequently, Joanie goes on to law school and falls in love with a Washington Post reporter named Redfern. Today, both pregnant and a full-time campaign manager, Joanie is worried about her age and the need for amniocentesis.

If the strip adds up to anything, it's probably that "the personal is political." That is, concern about our own lives should foster a similar concern about those of others. The presence - or absence - of this homespun philosophy permeates every character in the strip, from Michael Doonesbury on down. In an apolitical age, Trudeau's is a badly-needed contribution to the conscience of a genera-

'Garry has been a spokesman for the children of the '60s and done a great deal to politicize kids in the 1970s," said Joe Wheelwright, the cartoonist's roommate at Yale. "He's also introduced the latter goup to some of the world's harder realities.'

MOREOVER, TRUDEAU has sought to provide explanations of a much-divided age group and to broach issues that, until even recently, were considered taboo. Only two weeks ago, for example, he gracefully confronted the emergence of gays as a political force in the United States.

Glen & Shearer

That Trudeau will step aside in January hasn't surprised his friends. Many had known that his 12-year contract with the Universal Press Syndicate would expire in three months. allowing his characters, as Trudeau explained it, the chance to adapt to a new

Indeed, to a large degree, catching up is what Trudeau has planned for himself. Unfettered by a daily deadline, he'll be able to free his energies for the substantial demands of screenwriting, which he adores. Trudeau has already finished one film comedy about the national press corps and is now considering a collaboration with friends on a musical version of Doonesbury. The theater might tap a potential that Trudeau has possessed since, as a teenager, he first put on plays at home.

Most of all, the husband of NBC's Jane Pauley wants a child His closest friends are crossing their fingers that his sabbatical will turn into a paternity leave. To become a parent, more than anything else, could guarantee Trudeau the lifelong role as a generation's chronicler.

Critic lambasted

To the editor: I don't know how The Daily Iowan does it, but they always seem to have a no-mind commenting on films, art, theater and music. Where do you pick up these morons, anyway?

The latest shining example of this is Tom Doherty and his review of Pink Floyd's The Wall (DI, Sept. 20). Doherty must have been the only one snoozing in the entire audience. Maybe there wasn't enought narrative dialogue for your "critic," but it would have been more than noticed if the projectionist "screwed up."

Doherty, take a literature course of the simplest level - you need to learn how to follow a story line. Maybe Tron is the "best stoned viewing in town." Obviously, you like to fry your mind so you can get thrills from a video game instead of using it to understand the torment of a British rock idol.

For all those who have not seen The Wall, it is a fantastic work of art. The animation, subtle and flamboyant, is frighteningly realistic and surrealistic; the editing is sensational; the story, if one has half a mind at all,

can make you leave the theater in deep

The Wall is worth seeing more than once. Stick that in your pipe and smoke Gave Wallen

I came home recently and reached for my light switch, and realized it was time to get a job. My electricity had been cut off for non-payment of the

Like everyone else, I have been biding my time between classes and Calvin Hall (financial aids), waiting for the money to come in. What has occurred to me will by and large be commonplace for disadvantaged students in the future.

The present administration has made it a priority to build up the defense budget first, with programs such as social services, the arts and education becoming secondary. Many federal aid programs are ear-marked to be cut in half. So unless your parents are mainstream (i.e., middle or upperclass), your best bet is to get a job. Get some work-study, co-op, or take a year out to work

We are entering an era when the disadvantaged individual is going to have to work his or her way through school again. My advice is to get a job, because as Reagan said before, "There is no such thing as a free lunch.' Reginald Williams

Abortion response

To the editor:

I am writing in response to Paula Klein's article on abortion (DI, Sept. 23). She brought up several points which deserve further comment.

First, in spite of those on both sides who try to make it so, abortion is no more of a moral issue than any other civil rights question. Recognition that a fetus is alive and is human requires only common sense - faith is not a prerequisite. Second, the issue of abortion in the United States is far from settled, and we should all be thankful that the Supreme Court does not have the ultimate power needed to declare it so These things take time, and the first step is that of bringing to public attention the fact that wrong is being committed.

For instance, we all know of the time when black people in this country were not considered human beings. After a civil war and over 100 years of court battles we are only now righting those wrongs. So how can people pretend that the issue of abortion became a closed case with the Supreme Court decision of 1973?

The purpose of the U.S. Constitution has always been to ensure equal rights for all. Over the years we have clarified it to protect the rights of blacks and women. We must now deal with the question of equal rights for human beings in an early developmental stage.

Let us not be as naive as our forefathers who were unable to deal with differences in color or in sex. Let us remember that the rights of an individual should only be protected until such point as they impinge on the rights of another. Jane M. Lewis

Display protesting massacre draws students' complaints

By Kristine Stemper

Members of the General Union of Palestinian Students believe it is difficult to make a distinction between Menachem Begin and Adolf Hitler, according to a controversial display they set up in the Union

"Right after it (the display) was put up there were several complaints," Phillip Jones, associate dean of student services, said Monday.

A discussion over the display, which lasted several hours, resulted because some Jewish students felt it was discriminating against them. Jones explained that it was a protest against Israel, not American

Members of the Palestinian group "had a discussion about the symbolism of the swastikas" that were "interlaced with the Star of David" on the Israeli flag, Jones said.

The display showed Begin and Hitler with a question mark between them and the slogan, "who is who, I am confused" next to it.

The statement "Zionism equals Nazism" was also included, and was the main theme of the exhibit, according to Eyad Farsakh, a member of GUPS. Farsakh said the display was used to "show our opinion of the Israeli government and regime right

THE EXHIBIT is a reaction to the slaughter of approximately 1,000 Palestinian refugees in West Beirut last week, he said.

Members of GUPS wanted to show their belief that the Israeli government "is one that is based on racism and trying to manipulate the Palestinians under a peace agreement that doesn't give them (the Palestinians) full rights," Farsakh said.

He said the Zionists in Israel are a political party and have their own economic system, and added that it is important to distinguish between Israelis, the Jewish religion and Zionism. "Not every Jew has to be a Zionist," he said. The relation between Nazism and Zionism is that "they both say they are a

If there are many complaints showing that "the offensiveness is beyond the reason of free speech, than it will be removed." Forced removal of a display does not happen often, Jones said.

UI Student Senator Bruce Hagemann said, "After the massacres that occurred the previous weekend, I can see why the Palestinian students would want to draw the parallels" between Zionism and Nazism. Maybe something "a little shocking" is what is required to get people to act, he said.

Group to examine male roles and alternatives to stereotypes

By Paul Boyum

Power and success are considered traditional male goals, but the UI Counseling Service is offering a new discussion group for men seeking alternatives to stereotypical male roles.

Starting in mid-October "The Male Experience" will give men a chance to openly discuss their views on topics ranging from alternative lifestyles to pressures of society on men, according to Ron May, senior staff psychologist for the counseling service. May will lead the eight-week discussion with Sam

Cochran, an intern with the service. May said an exact starting date has not been set but the first meeting will be held during the week of Oct. 11. 'There has been a movement under way for a number of years," May said. "We felt it was a good time to start a group here in Iowa City." THE IDEA is for the group to support men who have made a commitment to an alternative lifestyle. May said many would like to openly discuss their feelings with other men but can't because of pressures in society to conform to "traditional" May said he hears many men complain about their inability to talk to men with similar interests. "They say, 'I never meet men who talk about anything but sports' and they would just like to talk to other men who share their concerns," May said. As the women's movement encouraged supporters to improve the role of women, the new men's movement seeks to help men become aware of alternatives, May said.

May wrote a proposal for a workshop "to enhance men's lives," which he hopes to present this spring. The proposal said "A first step in the change process is awareness - awareness accompanied by opportunities for experiencing in a supportive setting can be the beginnings of significant change.

"SOCIETY'S definition of 'male' has trapped many men into roles that contribute to stress, sickness and premature death." May said many men experience an emotional constriction that causes them to keep their feelings inside. But he said, "It's acceptable to be vulnerable to their feelings. They can relieve themselves of stress.'

An Iowa City minister who has been involved with the men's movement for a number of years said he is glad to see the new group forming. Rev. David Schuldt of the Wesley Foundation, said Iowa City had a similar group several years ago but interest drop-

Tuition hikes coupled with cutbacks in financial aid and other economic pressures have spurred political interest at the UI, said Maureen Smith, vice chairwoman of the UI Democrats.

"Students are becoming more aware that the candidates they vote for can make a serious difference in the quality of their lives," Smith said.

Kevin Taylor, director of Campus Programs/Student Activities, said students are concerned about the recent educational issues like cuts in student aid, the tuition hike, and lack of funds for campus

"When an issue affects them, that's when students get involved," said Taylor, who advises the Student Senate. "The most important thing is to get people to vote - that's when students matter.'

Smith said the direct impact of economic issues facing students is causing them to take a second look at the legislative candidates who will represent

A MAJOR AIM of the UI Democrats is to educate students about the candidates as well as increase student awareness that their vote counts, she said. Booths have been set up around the campus by the UI Democrats, as well as other student organizations, to encourage students to vote.

The educated students are "looking deeper at the candidates. They're asking for principles," said John Baker, chairman of the UI Student Senate's State Relations Committee.

In working with the UI Office of Public Information, the senate committee meets with candidates to find out just what their stand is on university issues. "They have to respond to university interests,"

Baker said. "Their position is something people should know about." Because students account for 28,000 people in a community of 50,000, students "could really make a difference," Taylor said. "I think students realize

Baker said that in the 1980 race between Democrat Lynn Cutler and Republican Cooper Evans for 3rd Congressional District representative, the margin between the two - 6,000 votes - was almost exactly the number of students in the UI dorms.

If students vote this semester, Smith said, the results will indicate students can make a difference in politics.

compete with other institutions, and also compete with the private sector now," Moll said.

Obtaining and keeping competitive faculty salaries is obviously important in high-demand areas such as engineering, business, computer science and medicine, but a gradual erosion in other areas could be critical to the UI's overall reputation, according to Leo Davis, chairman of the UI Department of Chemistry.

"If you don't have quality professors in the College of Liberal Arts, you lose the whole basis of this educational system," Davis, former Faculty Senate president, said.

"I think it (faculty mobility) has been a significant problem at Iowa for a number of years. We have lost some of the best and brightest - and many have been lateral moves. Many people aren't moving to more prestigious institutions - but to institutions that simply realize the worth of good faculty," Davis said.

DAVIS SAID his department is losing professor to the University of Michigan. "They're in a very depressed state, economically right now, yet they can still offer a better

Davis said the UI should look at more than who is leaving when assessing

'Inchon' a must for trash aficionados

Inchon. Produced by Sun Myung Moon. Written by Robin Moore and Laird Koenig. Directed by Terence Young. Starring Laurence Olivier, Jacqueline Bisset, Ben Gazzara. Rated PG.

Inchon is in the bloated tradition of multinational, big-budget war films (The Longest Day, A Bridge Too Far) that reenact epic military encounters at only slightly less cost than the original operation.

Financed to the tune of a reported $48 million by the Reverend Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, Inchon makes Heaven's Gate look like a good investment. Some poor schmuck at O'Hare is going to have to sell a lot of flowers to make up for this gobbler.

The film is based on one of the most exciting military assaults of the century: General Douglas MacArthur's landing at Inchon, southwest of Seoul, on September 15. 1950. It was a brilliant amphibious attack that, together with the Eighth Army's advance from the Busan Perimeter, broke the back of the North Korean invasion.

SINCE THE Korean War has never recieved the A-picture treatment lavished on World War II and Viet Nam (though there have been several fine B-pictures like Sam Fuller's The Steel Helmet and Lewis Milestone's Pork Chop Hill), the concept behind Inchon is not all that half-baked.

Sir Laurence Olivier walks through his part as MacArthur with the commitment he brought to his characterizations in The Betsy and The Jazz Singer. His artistic degradation in these films is almost heroic; he is reportedly trying to earn enough money to secure death. The British government should really consider a special pension.

Ben Gazzara and Richard Roundtree play gritty soldiers who repel the commie hordes with the help of Toshiro Mifune (casting a Japanese as a fighter for Korean freedom is as ludicrous as it is offensive). Jacqueline Bisset, perfectly coiffured and ravishing among the wreckage of war, provides the most attractive mise en scene in the film.

THE LATE David Janssen's role as a war reporter was cut out of the final print: Inchon has spent the last two years on a shelf waiting for a distributor, and Janssen's posthumous presence would have dated the film.

Many people have refused to go to Inchon. not so much because of the unanimously negative reviews, but because of antipathy to the film's producer and "special advisor," the Reverend Moon. Actually, Inchon is a must for trash aficionados Sheldon's Bloodline) has created a megabuck contender for the next edition of 100 Worst Films of All Time. Naturally, all the major things - acting, cinematography, and even stunt work - are uniformly bad. But it is the smaller stupidities that may make this a must on the junk circuit. General MacArthur's staff aide has blow-dried hair. There is a smudge on the camera lens during one scene. The post-production dubbing is aw-Anachronisms abound: many of the South Korean backgrounds - roads, scenes inside of Seoul Station, and numerous buildings - were constructed in the mid-1970s under Park Chung Hee's New Community

Despite rumors of mind-altering, subliminal Moonie messages on Inchon's soundtrack, this movie deserves the support of a discerning public, if only because the Reverend Moon can do less damage as Joseph E. Levine than as God.

On the line

It's Founder's Day and we're saluting the founder of the On the Line contest, O.T. Line.

O.T. started this baby a long time ago in a bar not so far away. You see, the oldster had a way with picking the winners. He had such a good time that he set up a contest that lives on to this

Don't look for any marching bands, drill teams or floats to hit the streets of Iowa City in honor of Founder's Day, O.T. didn't want that. He believed that this contest would be enough to let his memory live on forever. Kind of sad, isn't it. He died innocently, with the odds in his hands and a bookie at his throat on a cold November morning several years ago.

BUT WIPE AWAY those tears and charge ahead into this week's contest. The Hawkeyes have finally bolted into West Virginia at Pittsburgh the win column and this week's Wisconsin at Purdue Homecoming contest against Washington State at Tennessee Northwestern looks like a dandy. To help you celebrate the good folks at Star Port are providing an eight-gallon keg to the winner

Three people have already claimed a keg and you can add your name to the list by giving this week's contest a try. But if you want to be like O.T., you have to follow the rules. To predict the winners, circle the team you believe will win and enter the score for both teams in the tiebreaker.

Also, if you're under 19, sorry, and The Daily Iowan employees are forbidden to enter this contest. Deadline for entry blanks is 5 p.m. Thursday in Room 111, Communications Center.

NEW YORK (UPI) - For the third consecutive week, Pittsburgh narrowly maintained its No. 1 college football rating Monday in balloting by UPI's Board of Coaches while Washington slipped ahead of Nebraska into the No. 2 position, just three points behind the Panthers.

Minnesota was the lone Big Ten team in the poll, locked in a tie for 20th with San Jose State. Both teams have 3-0 records.

Pittsburgh, coming off a 20-3 victory at Illinois, collected 19 first-place votes and 586 points from the 42 coaches who comprise the Board while Washington, a 37-21 winner over pesky Oregon, received 18 firstplace votes and 583 points.

Two weeks ago, the Panthers, the preseason choice as the No. 1 team, outpointed the Huskies by three points and last week Pittsburgh, now 3-0, owned a two-point bulge over Nebraska.

The Expos scored in the second inning when Tim Raines singled home Chris Speier, who had doubled. In the seventh, Tim Wallach hit his 25th homer to reduce the lead to 4-2.

The Cardinals last won the National League pennant in 1968, the year before the league split into two divisions. St. Louis was one of three league teams along with the Chicago Cubs and San Diego Padres — who had never won a division championship.

No time like the present for Card fans

After several near misses in the past decade, it looks as if this could be the year of the Redbird. Yes, sports fans, long suffering Cardinal fans finally have something to cheer about. The news just came over the wire. The St. Louis Cardinals are in the playoffs for the first time since And what a great year to make the playoffs. With pro football, that fall demon that annually steals much of the glamour associated with the baseball playoffs, on strike, the Cardinals can have all of the headlines on their drive to the World Series championship.

What better way to wake up in the morning than to open up to your Matt Gallo favorite newspapers' sports section and read the banner headlines "Cardinals sweep playoffs; Series next" with a cup of coffee?

This reporter can think of no better way to start the day.

ST. LOUIS CARDINAL fans are a breed apart from other fans. Cardinal fans are easy to spot. They're the ones who sport their red baseball caps to

When St. Louis is 151/2 games off the pace, true Cardinal fans still show

St. Louis fans aren't fair weather fans like some other teams (i.e. California Angels, Houston Astros, New York Yankees, Atlanta Braves). Remember all of the Oakland A's fans that sprouted up last year when they were winning? Where are they now that the Athletics are challenging for sixth place?

It's not as if St. Louis fans have had nothing to complain about. Just last year the Birds had the best record in the National League East, but because of the split season they were politicked

SOME CARDINAL WOES have been of their own making. What true St. Louis fan can ever truly forgive them for trading away such stars as Harry Caray, Steve Carlton, Rollie Fingers, Ted Simmons and Terry Kennedy?

How about the 1968 World Series when the Cards led the Detroit Tigers 3-1 only to fold up the tent in the last three games of the Series?

Tribulations abound, but Cardinal fans don't "abandon ship." It's doubtful that a nuclear bombing of Busch Stadium and a bizarre murdersuicide by announcers Jack Buck and Mike Shannon could change a true St.

Louis Cardinal fans' allegiance.

For, you see, a Redbird fan is born that way and never changes. Some call it an affliction. This reporter prefers to look upon it as a blessing. Ever hear Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda say he bleeds Dodger Blue? Don't believe him. Lasorda, like all other humans, bleeds Cardinal Red.

Whether the 'Birds play the Dodgers, Giants, or Braves makes no difference. The Cardinal train is rolling now, and it doesn't stop until the ritual World Championship parade goes through the streets of St. Louis. Let the Budweiser flow freely, because this is the Year of the Cardinal.
