UI investigates high-tech teaching

By Vernice Lafforte

Imagine a day when telephones write, Try to picture your class composing a million-line computer program without a professor or instructor
It may seem like science fiction. to come true.
But the possibility of this new approach to education was discussed briefly at a recent meeting of the University of Iowa's Committee on Automation.

According to the committee, a course on this topic was taught this past semester in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.
The course was taken by about 30 students, who were divided into small teams of four to six.

Each team was assigned a specific task - such as designing a program to sort data, or creating a program to simulate a game.
The teams were responsible for writing the programs, testing them, and debugging them.

The course was taught by a graduate student in computer science, who acted as a facilitator.

The committee member who spoke at the meeting said the course was a success.

"By the end of the semester, the students were able to write complex programs," she said.

"But the real benefit of this course is the way it changed the way we think about teaching and learning," she added.

"We're moving away from a traditional lecture format, where the professor is the only source of information," she said.

"Instead, we're encouraging students to work together, to solve problems, and to learn from each other.

"This is the future of education, and it's something we need to explore further," she concluded.
Bradley backs Cutler campaign

Victoria Johnson, the woman accused of shooting to death Linda Dutton by mistake, lowered her gun and surrendered Monday after Dutton's neighbors at Lakeside Apartments reported a shooting.

Johnson, 32, of North Liberty, was arrested at the Lakeside to report the shooting, according to Richard Bradlev, police spokesperson for the Johnson County Sheriff's Office.

"She heard shots and ran instinctively in the direction where she heard them," he said. "She didn't know if it was a person or a dog." The police arrived about midnight Sept. 25, pleaded not guilty during his arraignment Tuesday to second-degree murder while participating in a robbery.

"I'm not trying to make excuses for what he's done," said the 100 year veteran of the New York City police force, "because I don't think that's possible." Bradley said in a press conference that he was pleased with the outcome of the Nov. 3 elections, "which will hold these politicians accountable for what they've done." Erdahl ‘irked’ over press reports

By Mark Leonard

State Auditor Ervin Erdahl yesterday charged the news media with not the Iowa City Council for a “disturbing” report that contained material that he said "distorted the truth." Erdahl was referring to a headline in the "City News" column, which he said earlier today involved a "disturbing" report by the state auditor’s office. Erdahl said he was concerned about whether the council or the individual attorneys who represent the council are aware that such activity may be legal.

"I am not aware, but I have been told," Erdahl said. "I have been told that there is no requirement for the council or the individual attorneys to report such activities." Erdahl said he was concerned about whether the council or the individual attorneys who represent the council are aware that such activity may be legal.

The Conlin plan

Unemployment in Iowa has been another concern. Even with programs of unemployment assistance, some private and public organizations, and some business and labor, a large number of workers have been laid off.

As a result, the Conlin plan aims to provide a systematic approach to job training and placement, ensuring that unemployed workers have access to retraining programs and job opportunities. The plan also includes measures to support small businesses and encourage entrepreneurship.

State of economy

The state's economic performance has been strengthened by a combination of factors, including increased exports, technological advancements, and improved infrastructure. The state has also made significant investments in education and training programs to enhance workforce skills.

In order to further support economic growth, the state is considering initiatives such as tax incentives for businesses that invest in research and development, and infrastructure improvements to enhance connectivity.

Gorsuch seeks to dismantle EPA

The recent upturn in the stock market has encouraged optimism and reflection about the future of various industries. The economic climate has been characterized by a mix of challenges and opportunities, and business leaders are looking for ways to adapt and thrive.

The recent rise in interest rates has had a significant impact on the real estate sector, as well as on the cost of borrowing for businesses. However, despite these challenges, there are positive signs of recovery in some areas, which suggests that the economy is beginning to stabilize.

Preparation for winter r

If you answer yes and the wind is blowing, a shut door may stop you and really cause you more suffering around it. At the moment the door on the Fane has, you should start thinking of how you can reduce the draft by lowering the head. Another tip to consider is the use of gaskets that will help seal the area around the window. That's not necessary.

If you've never thought too much about fumes, you may want to consider the installation of a fume hood or an exhaust fan to provide proper ventilation. This will help reduce the amount of drafts that can enter your home and help keep your home warm and comfortable.

For more information, please visit the website of your local building department or contact a professional contractor for assistance. They can provide you with valuable advice on how to improve the energy efficiency of your home and help you save money on your energy bills.

Spikers are heavy underdogs as they host mighty Gophers

By Mike Condon

The Van Buren volleyball squad hopes none of the aid turns to the score sheet when it hosts Min-nesota Thursday night at the Field House. The Golden Gophers (1-4) have enjoyed a banner year at the box office, being the crowd favorite, although the Van Buren box office will not be astonished the point sheet.

Things look bleak for the Spikers against the mighty Gophers. The Spikers have had only one loss this season, a defeat at the hands of the mighty Ohio State. The Gophers are looking for their second straight victory tonight when they host the Spikers.
