Activists sing, speak, march for 'choice'

Pacing through Saturday's snow-fall, pro-life activists picketed the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women to "memorialize" a decade of legal abortions on demand.

Though the protesters out on the sidewalk and the pro-choice advocates inside the clinic leveled cold criticisms toward each other, both agreed confrontation would be undesirable.

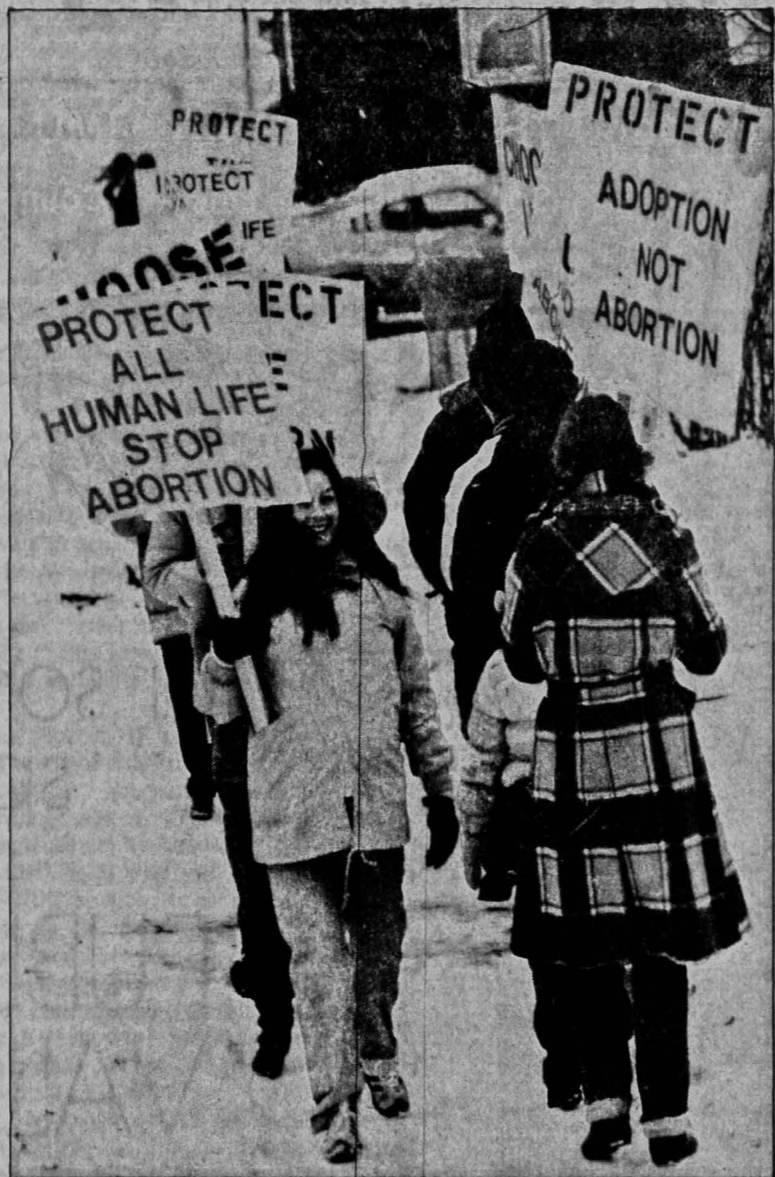

"It does no good to confront them directly," Nancy Caylor, an organizer for the pro-life rally, said from the picket line. "We are both very staunch in our opinions."

To celebrate the January 22, 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion the pro-choice side organized an afternoon march through downtown Iowa City with speakers lauding the freedom of women to control their own bodies.

"We have no interest in each other's rallies," Debbie Nye, Emma Goldman clinic abortion service coordinator, said Saturday morning while looking out her front window at about a dozen demonstrators.

THE CLINIC WASN'T open for business Saturday because of the many preparations that had to be made for the pro-choice rally.

Celebrating 10 years of choice for women seeking abortion, about 140 people gathered at the Blackhawk Minipark in downtown Iowa City Saturday to hear speeches, sing songs and march.

Iowa City attorney Clara Oleson spoke on the legal impact of Roe vs. Wade, the Supreme Court case that led to the legalization of abortion on Jan. 22, 1973.

The rallyers marched to Old Brick where the celebration continued with entertainment and speeches from state Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, and Deb Nye, one of the founders of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, the event's sponsor.

Iowa City's rally was one of many held across the nation Saturday. Supporters of the pro-life movement picketed outside the Emma Goldman Clinic earlier Saturday, emphasizing the battle that has been waged between the two groups during the last decade.

"A lot of people are tired of it," Nye said Sunday. "I'd like to stop talking about it too, but as long as there are anti-choice people who are actively pursuing their views, we have to continue."

Oleson started the afternoon by recalling the efforts made to legalize abortion in the 10 to 15 years before

Spy satellite falls to sea; 'it's all over'

United Press International

A renegade Soviet spy satellite burned through the atmosphere Sunday, blazing a radioactive trail above the middle of the Indian Ocean and disappearing far from land, U.S. space trackers said.

The fiery demise of the main chunk of Cosmos 1402 ended a three-week international death watch, but the saga of the space derelict will not end until next month when a second, smaller radioactive piece is expected to plunge to Earth.

In its final orbit, the runaway satellite tumbled over the United States, Scandinavia and the Middle East before the fragments flamed through the sky. A Pentagon official in Washington said it "completed its burn" at 4:21 p.m. Iowa time.

The spacecraft blistered through the globe's air layer — the final act in the "critical decay" of its orbit — within sight of U.S. forces on the British-owned island of Diego Garcia about 800 miles southwest of India.

The heaviest portion of the satellite, estimated to have weighed about four tons, completed its burn at a point above Earth's surface at 25 degrees south latitude by 84 degrees east longitude, about 1,800 miles southeast of India, officials said.

THERE WAS NO indication whether any of the vehicle actually touched the planet.

"In all probability, most of the satellite broke up on re-entry, but it is impossible at this time to know whether any of it reached the surface," a Pentagon official said. "We may never know."

A Pentagon statement said U.S.

forces will "watch for increased levels of radiation in the atmosphere, but it is impossible to say at this time what the results of this effort might be."

"This is our last statement on the main body of Cosmos 1402," the U.S. defense agency said, closing down an operation that had been running since the first week of January, when officials first disclosed the Soviet spy-in-the-sky had gone out of control.

The remaining portion, thought to be the nuclear reactor that powered the sensitive radar and other electronics aboard the satellite, is still wobbling through the skies. U.S. experts said the 100-pound atomic pile and related hardware — weighing several hundred pounds — will likely come back to Earth sometime during the second week of February.

"IT'S ALL OVER," said Jim Holton, a spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency that laid plans to cope with any radioactive debris that struck the United States.

"We now have taken our several hundred people on standby off alert, and the Department of Energy is advising their Nuclear Emergency Search Teams who have been on standby in Las Vegas to unload their special aircraft," he said.

The North American Aerospace Defense Command had forecast earlier Sunday the satellite would re-enter the atmosphere at 4:22 p.m. Iowa time. It was a minute off.

Diego Garcia is home to U.S. naval and air forces, and Pentagon officials said U.S. servicemen on the remote island reported a 40-second visual sighting of the burning satellite.

Law school funding gains more support

By Tom Buckingham
 Staff Writer

Political needs may succeed where educational considerations have failed during the last three years. Funding for a new building for the UI College of Law may soon be secured.

The Iowa Legislature will give the UI the go-ahead for the new building in this session because both Gov. Terry Branstad and the legislators need to create jobs for Iowans, Rep. Richard Varn, D-Solon, said.

"The politics in it is obvious. Gov. Branstad is under a lot of pressure because of his promise to create 180,000 jobs, and he has to show some progress toward that goal."

Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said it is "a happy coincidence" that the UI needs a new law school built at a time when there is a need to create jobs.

"The (state Board of) Regents have asked for these buildings for quite a while and now they can be called jobs programs," Lloyd-Jones said.

RANDALL BEZANSON, UI vice president for finance, agreed that political concerns are going to play a large part in the legislature's decision. "At this stage, a very important thing is to get people to work. I think the economy is a compelling reason for the project."

The regents have asked for funds to build a new Communications Arts center at the University of Northern Iowa, a new law school at the UI, and a new agronomy building for Iowa State University — in that order.

Branstad recommended to the legislature Saturday that all three buildings be funded through academic revenue bonding. Student fees would be used to pay part of the bonding costs.

The proposal to give the UI a new law school first reached the legislature in 1979. Last year, bonding authority for the building was approved by the senate, but stalled in committee in the house and never made it to the floor.

Lloyd-Jones said she has been inquiring among her fellow legislators and has found nothing but support for the building proposal. "My understanding is that it's pretty well agreed that it will go through. I would be very surprised if anything came up to stop it."

UI's Brcka sees a busy retirement ahead

Variable cloudiness today and tonight. Highs today in the upper 30s. Lows tonight in the upper 20s. Mostly cloudy Tuesday with a chance of rain or snow. Highs in the high 30s.

Leonard Brcka, the man who keeps track of the UI's money, says it's harder to retire than it was to get hired 36 years ago.

"When I started, it was easy to go from a part-time job to a full-time one," the UI controller and secretary said Friday. "But now, I've got reporters, photographers and all kinds of things to deal with before I can retire," he joked, referring to interviews with the UI Office of Public Information and The Daily Iowan.

Brcka, who has been responsible for the UI's financial operations — its Business Office, Payroll Department, Cashier's Office, inventory and student loans — for 20 years, will retire June 30.

Keeping track of the number of figures, money and people at an institution the size of the UI is no small matter.

Brcka said computers were being used here when he began in the Statistical Services Department (the forerunner to the present Administrative Data Processing Department) in 1947.

Thanks to the current computer system, "shuffling paper" is kept to a minimum, he said.

"This institution is fortunate to have one of the finest administrative data processing departments in the country. For that reason we've been able to computerize practically all of the business transactions on campus.

"OUR MONTHLY PAYROLL includes 17,000 people — and amounts to over $26 million monthly," Brcka said. "You don't realize the size of it until you see that figure."

At the State Board of Regents meeting last Thursday in Ames, President James O. Freedman expressed the UI's appreciation of Brcka's work over the years. "Mr. Brcka is a splendid individual who has rendered the university splendid service. He will be a great loss to us," he told the board after its approval of Brcka's retirement.

Even though his job is all business, Brcka isn't. On weekends, he sometimes straps on his saxophone or picks up a clarinet to play in dance bands. He's played in western Wisconsin, eastern Iowa and southern Minnesota, and was a musician in the U.S. Navy and the UI Band.

Brcka said he's not worried that retirement will leave him little to do. "Nope, I won't get bored." He leaned back in his chair in his Jessup Hall office, pointing to four color photographs behind him — lake scenes taken from

Baker mulls presidential bid

WASHINGTON — Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said Sunday he hopes for an early announcement by President Reagan concerning whether he will seek re-election, and would seriously consider running himself if Reagan does not.

Top White House aides do not expect Reagan to make an announcement until after Labor Day. Reagan has been noncommittal. Baker announced he would not seek a fourth Senate term, but would possibly run for president in 1988.

Pentagon asks more money

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is drafting a fiscal 1983 supplemental budget request seeking to restore money for the MX and Pershing II missiles, it was reported Sunday.

The Washington Post said Defense Department officials may seek $1.3 billion in supplemental funds for the controversial MX system and an unspecified amount of money for the Pershings. The Pentagon had no comment on the report.

Brown turns down post

WASHINGTON — Former Defense Secretary Harold Brown declined appointment Friday to President Reagan's special commission examining the future of the controversial MX missile because of a possible conflict of interest.

Brown, who served as President Carter's Pentagon chief, said in a letter to Reagan he has a contract with TRW Inc., a military contractor, as an occasional consultant. Brown offered his "voluntary services as a consultant" should Reagan or the commission want it.

Tax hike won't be sought

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said Sunday the administration will not seek higher taxes this year or next to help reduce burgeoning budget deficits.

Instead of raising taxes, Regan proposed further cuts in the non-defense portion of the federal budget. "If you do tax too much, you kill incentives to save and to invest," he said.

Cranston outlines priorities

WASHINGTON — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said Sunday his top priorities if he were elected president would be to seek a meeting with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov and try to negotiate a nuclear freeze.

Hotel parking is next city problem

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

Now that it has resolved the problem of deciding on a developer for the downtown hotel, the next source of anxiety for the Iowa City Council is figuring out where Hilton Hotel guests will park their cars.

"That's a good question," Councilor John Balmer said Sunday. "Once the hotel is in place ... there is very likely going to be a parking shortage."

Several councilors said one solution being considered is the addition of two levels of parking to the Dubuque Street parking ramp. The ramp, which is already capable of holding 450 vehicles, could be increased by approximately 200 spaces.

"I think we're going to have to address this problem very shortly," Balmer said. "And we're going to have to be in step with the hotel project."

He added that, although the ramp addition will alleviate some of the city's short-term parking problems, "We still are going to have some long-term potential parking problems."

One possible solution which should be considered, Balmer said, is using the parcel next to the hotel for parking. Armstrong's department store, named by the council last summer as the preferred developer of that site, has had trouble coming up with financing for the project and several councilors now believe the store will pull out of the deal.

"I THINK WE are going to have to give it some real consideration," Balmer said. "I don't think it's anything we should toss aside lightly."

"If you look at the space we have available ... we're really constrained. This whole parking issue is one my personal top priorities."

Mayor Mary Neuhauser said using the lot next to the hotel would be only a short-term solution. "It's too valuable a property to be used just for parking," she maintained.

One of the alternatives Neuhauser said she would like re-examined is an old study on the possibility of underground parking on Iowa Avenue. "I'd like to, at least, take another look at it. The first thing we have to do is guarantee the people in the hotel a place to park."

City Manager Neal Berlin said underground parking is an "exceedingly expensive" alternative.

He added that he will be coming to the council in February with a proposal for updating the city's comprehensive parking plan.

Among the things the city staff will be looking at is the future demand for all-day parking and also parking near the downtown business district.

A small child was abducted from a blue and white door car Saturday, according to a report received by Iowa City police late that afternoon.

The child was described as four to five years old, wearing a blue and white stocking cap and a blue coat. Information given about the child was that the person riding the passenger seat was female and was last seen going west on 10th Street.

No reports of a missing child have been received from parents.

Dorm res for free

By Mary Tabor
Staff Writer

UI dorm residents could be themselves munching a sandwich between those crackers they serve in the cafeteria, according to the Iowa City County Department of Social Services. Five pounds of free cheese and five pounds of free butter are waiting for dormitory resident who earn $722 a month, according to the guidelines for the January of the surplus commodities program. Students living in apartment-style dormitory housing who do not meet income guidelines have been asked to collect the cheese for themselves.

But up until now the cheese has been that students who live in dorms and carry a board of directors. The explanation for the procedure came from Gwen Cedar Rapids district office of the Department of Social Services. Apparently they (dormitory residents) always were supposed to be in charge.

"People at the top make the rules," she said. "They do what they want to do."

THE DISTRIBUTION PROGRAM targeted toward all those through the income guidelines, written in the social central office, just didn't reach in this area.

"It was simply miscommunication," Hall said.

Nothing is being planned for the cheese distribution in the future, according to Cindy Davis, provision being added is to cheese and butter for distribution at the Iowa City Recreation site closest to the UI campus.

An additional 40 boxes of butter are available to accommodate students show up. This site is available at 10 a.m. and 10 p.m.

Ten named in gambling charges

By Karen Herzog
Staff Writer

Ten people, including seven area businessmen, have been indicted by a federal grand jury for alleged participation in an Iowa City gambling ring, government officials in Des Moines said Friday.

The indictment caps a one-year FBI investigation of the gambling operation, which allegedly featured high-stake betting on a gamut of amateur and professional sports.

If convicted, most of the defendants face a possible five-year prison term, a $20,000 fine or both. They have been summoned to appear before the U.S. magistrate on Feb. 23 at 1:30 p.m. for arraignment.

CHARGED IN THE INDICTMENT

- Christopher S. Wilke, 34, owner of Wilke's Lounge in Iowa City;
- Rudolph W. Scheler, 44, a bartender at Wilke's;
- Dale Mottet, 42, owner of Hawkeye

Cab Co. in Iowa City;

- Jackie Bowles, 56, an Iowa City real estate agent;
- Dennis M. Petersen, 33, former co-owner of Dewey's Auto Salvage in Iowa City;
- Mary Ann Kramer, 37, formerly of Iowa City and now living in Clear Lake, Iowa;

- Harry Kral, 52, a Solon insurance agent;
- Donald Ellis, 30, an officer of Solon State Bank;
- Brian J. Girard, a 23-year-old UI student, originally from Fort Dodge;

- James Hudson, owner of Cadillac Window in Winslow, Ill.

The gambling operation may have extended into Illinois. The indictment charged Kramer with two counts of transmitting bets and wagers across interstate lines by telephone, which is punishable by a maximum five-year prison term, a $10,000 fine or both. Hudson, an Illinois resident, and Ellis were each charged with one count on that offense.

Petersen and Hudson were also charged with traveling and using interstate facilities between Iowa and Illinois to distribute proceeds of the gambling enterprise. The maximum penalty for crossing state lines to distribute gambling proceeds is a $10,000 fine, five years in prison or both.

AN FBI AFFIDAVIT filed in U.S. District Court by Pete Klismet, a special agent of the Cedar Rapids bureau of the FBI, identifies Petersen as the head of the operation and Kramer as the bookmaker.

The affidavit also identifies Wilke's Lounge as a headquarters for high-stakes poker players and as the place where many of the bets in the alleged operation were placed.

Local officials and FBI officials raided the homes of Kramer and Petersen, and served a search warrant on Scheler at Wilke's Lounge Nov. 6. They seized gambling paraphernalia, line sheets with betting odds, checks totaling $17,000 and $1,068 in cash.

During an October raid of an alleged gambling operation in the Quad Cities, FBI Special Agent John Wellman confiscated a three-page list of bettors implicating the Iowa City suspects.

THE LIST WAS labeled "Junkmans" on all three pages. According to the affidavit, Klismet believed the notation was a reference to Petersen, who, with his father, was the co-owner of a Coralville "junk yard."

Petersen and Kramer "have operated a gambling operation in the Iowa City area for several years," the affidavit states.

The FBI investigation indicated betting activity began to diminish early last summer, but the operation reportedly remained intact because leaders anticipated the upcoming pro football season would be fruitful.

In November, Klismet said the alleged operation was "functionally independent." The amount of money that was involved in the operation's dealings has not been disclosed yet, but Klismet said federal law requires agents prove at least $2,000 was bet in one day before charges can be filed.

according to local authorities.

Several male "punk rockers" threw snowballs at the back of Gringos, 115 E. College St., late Saturday night, and may have broken one of the restaurant's windows, according to a complaint filed with Iowa City police. The complaint stated that one of the men was wearing a skirt.

Iowa City police received a complaint that a male exposed himself to an Iowa City woman late Saturday night. The anonymous caller told police she noticed a light outside her window and then saw that a man with black hair, about 6 feet tall, was exposing himself in the beam of a flashlight.

The left rear tire and wheel of a Honda Civic parked in the lot just north of Currier Residence Hall were stolen sometime Saturday night, but were found Sunday afternoon dumped in a corner of that same lot, according to UI Campus Security.

The man who reported finding the wheel told police he had found several other tires in the same spot. Police believe they belong to several other

Iowa City cars which have had tires stolen from them.

Iowa City police were sent to the Sigma Chi fraternity, 703 N. Dubuque St., Sunday afternoon after a complaint was received that fraternity members were throwing snowballs across the street. Upon arriving, police records state, officers "sent the children back indoors."

A second-floor window on the west side of the UI Main Library was broken sometime Saturday night, probably by a snowball, according to UI Campus police. Damage is estimated at $25.

Dorm residents eligible for free butter, cheese

By Mary Tabor
Staff Writer

UI dorm residents could soon find themselves munching a surprise between those crackers they sneak out of the cafeteria, according to the Johnson County Department of Social Services.

Five pounds of free cheese and one pound of free butter are waiting for any dormitory resident who earns less than $722 a month, according to new guidelines for the January distribution of the surplus commodities.

Students living in apartments and married student housing who meet the income guidelines have been eligible to collect the cheese for the last few months.

But up until now the thinking had been that students who live in the dorms and carry a board plan would not need the free food, Cindy Davis, secretary for the Johnson County Department of Social Services, said Friday.

"People at the top make the decisions," she said. "They don't tell us why they make new rules."

The explanation for the change in procedure came from Gwen Hall at the Cedar Rapids district office of the Department of Social Services. "Apparently they (dormitory residents) always were supposed to be eligible."

THE DISTRIBUTION PROGRAM is targeted toward all those eligible through the income guidelines. The rules, written in the social service's central office, just didn't reach people in this area.

"It was simply miscommunication," Hall said.

Nothing is being planned to publicize the cheese distribution in the dorms, according to Cindy Davis. The only provision being added is to order more cheese and butter for distribution at the Iowa City Recreation Center, the site closest to the UI campus.

An additional 40 boxes of cheese and 10 additional boxes of butter will be available to accommodate whatever students show up. This site will open Wednesday at 10 a.m. and close at 2 p.m.

"We figure we're going to run out this month," Cindy Davis said.

"It's news to us," June Davis, information coordinator for UI residence services, said when asked about the new eligibility guidelines. She said because she was unaware of the details, she could not anticipate how dormitory residents will react.

THIS SURPRISED REACTION was shared by Steve Bowers, associate director of UI residence food services. "Geez, I had no idea," he said.

All people who live in UI dormitories, except Mayflower, are required to carry a board contract. But, Bowers said, "They all have refrigerators. So I'm sure some will take advantage."

Executive vice president of Associated Residents Halls John Campbell disagreed, saying he didn't think many students would participate in the give-away.

"The residence hall food service provides enough that there's no need to go to an outside source," he said. "Dorm residents are not hit by the economic disaster as much as those living in apartments."

Bowers laughed about the possible effects of the cheese hand-out on meals in the residence halls. "Maybe we'll take cheese sandwiches off our menus for a while," he said.

A GROUP OF UI students living in an apartment is considered to be one household, but each individual dormitory resident is considered to be a single-person household.

Households with one to three members will receive five pounds of cheese; four to six members, ten pounds of cheese and seven or more members, 15 pounds of cheese.

The income limit for a single member household is $722 a month; two in a household can make $959. Three can earn up to $1,197.

A household of four can earn $1,434 and be eligible; five, $1,671; six, $1,908 and seven, $2,146. The top monthly income for a household of eight is $2,383; for nine, $2,627; ten, $2,865.

Eleven in a single household must have a monthly income less than $3,103 and 12 can earn up to $3,341.

Social security, pension plans, railroad retirement do not count as income under the new guidelines. Neither do supplementary security income and state supplementary assistance, unemployment compensation or income received by people under 16 years of age.

Driver receives jail term, fine

An Iowa City man will spend 40 hours in the Johnson County Jail and pay a $150 fine for driving his car while intoxicated and having possession of marijuana, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Daniel K. Hofmann, 28, of 518 Indian Lookout Mobile Home Community, was sentenced Friday to 48 hours in jail on the drunken driving charge, but received credit for eight hours he has already served.

Hofmann, who pleaded guilty to both charges Jan. 5, 1982, was ordered to pay the $150 penalty for having marijuana in his possession.

Social Security: Legislators view bailout plan as both a cure and an illness

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A $168 billion prescription for Social Security's ills goes to Congress this week, carrying doctor's orders from political leaders but with strong objections from some who must swallow the bitter pill.

The House Ways and Means Committee begins hearings Feb. 1 on the bailout plan endorsed 12-3 by the president's National Commission on Social Security Reform Jan. 15. In the Senate, commission members Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., intend to introduce the bailout package this week.

Congressional leaders hope to have a bill on President Reagan's desk by Easter to ensure a steady flow of checks to 36 million elderly and disabled Americans. Unless Congress acts, the system's old-age fund will run short of cash to pay $1 million July checks.

The package would raise $168 billion by 1990 through payroll tax hikes, a six-month freeze on benefits and taxes on checks for well-off pensioners.

IT WOULD ERADICATE two-thirds of the system's 75-year revenue gap. Eight of the 15 commission members urged Congress in a supplemental report to raise the rest by hiking the 65-year retirement age to 66 beginning in 2015; a ninth supported the change but did not sign it. The panel's five liberal Democrats urged a small tax hike in 2010 if the system reports it.

The report was immediately endorsed by Reagan, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and the bipartisan congressional leadership. But criticism came before the report's ink was dry, with the sharpest squawks from federal workers, the nation's biggest retiree group, and some businesses.

The three commission dissenters objected to the hikes and said the report does not address Social Security's long-term problems.

Commission chairman Alan Greenspan says the plan's "formidable" political support should ease its way through Congress. But he concedes the plan has something for everyone to dislike, and warns that tinkering with one provision could cause the deal to collapse.

THE PLAN'S MAIN PROVISIONS:

- Hike the scheduled 6.7 percent cost rate for employers and employees to 7 percent in 1984, and move part of a scheduled 1990 tax hike to 1988. The tax hike next year would cost a $20,700 worker $1.21 a week in 1984, the commission says.

- Delay the July cost-of-living increase until January 1984, and pay it in January from then on. The effect would be softened for the neediest recipients. The American Association of Retired Persons says the average single pensioner would lose $132 this year and the average couple, $222.

- Tax half the benefits of 4 million better-off pensioners — single retirees earning $20,000 or more and couples earning $25,000 or more, not counting Social Security. A single taxpayer with $30,000 in outside income and $6,000 in Social Security would be docked an extra $689; a couple with $40,000 outside income and $13,000 in Social Security would have to shell out $1,416.

- Require new federal employees to join Social Security next January, and require coverage and taxes from employees of non-profit groups, who are now exempt. State and local government workers could no longer drop out.

- Require self-employed workers to pay the full combined employer-employee tax rather than the three-quarters they now pay, with half deductible as a business expense.

William Armstrong

Plan isn't fair; ignores history

By Sen. William Armstrong
 For United Press International

In 1970, an average worker paid $297 in Social Security taxes. His employer paid an equal amount.

In 1980, that worker and his employer again equally paid out $767 in Social Security taxes — a 250 percent increase in the decade. Yet, during that same 10-year span, the real pay of working men and women fell while Social Security benefits soared 50 percent more than the cost of living. And by 1990, Social Security taxes for the average worker and his employer will, under current law, increase another 250 percent to $1,900.

Now the National Commission on Social Security Reform is recommending new taxes as well as acceleration of tax increases already scheduled. Can such increases be justified?

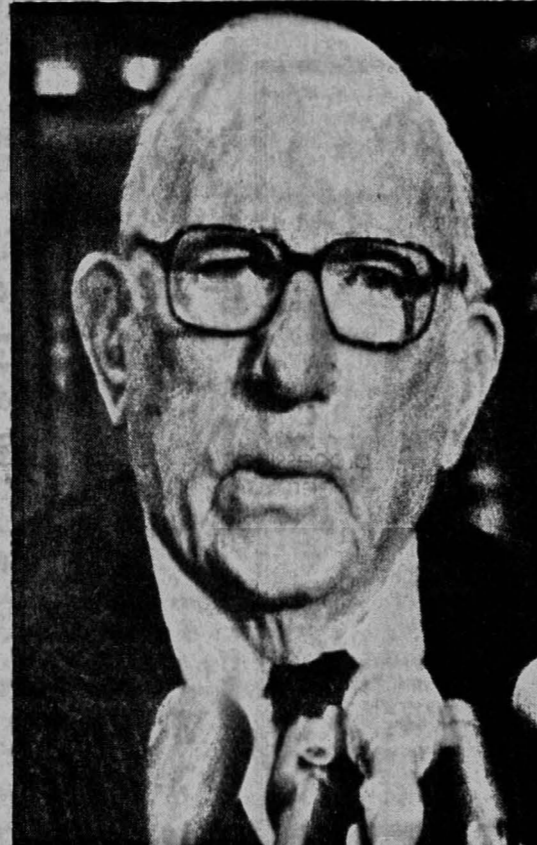

I do not think so. The vast majority of workers, small businessmen and women and retirees are not likely to think so, either. I expect there will be howls of outrage when Middle America discovers what the National Commission has recommended and some political leaders have already endorsed. Hopefully, grass roots lobbying will be sufficient to convince Congress to amend the Commission's plan to make it more workable, fairer and more sound economically.

IF SUCH AMENDMENTS are ignored, Congress will be repeating the same basic mistake made in 1977. At that time, legislation was enacted that purported to shore up the financial solvency of the Social Security trust funds for the rest of our lives.

But instead of focusing on basic systemic difficulties of the trust funds — especially the growing ratio of retirees to taxpaying workers, and the benefit increases far outstripping the cost of living — Congress concurred the largest tax increase in history.

As this issue develops, I expect strong support from employees and from businessmen and women. They have important economic interests at stake. However, I am increasingly convinced that support will also be forthcoming from retirees and the elderly. Based on many conversations with senior citizens, I doubt they will take a narrow or selfish view. They have much more at stake than merely their personal well-being. They are also concerned about their children and grandchildren. The last thing they wish is to leave a heritage of economic wreckage and unfair retirement system.

Sen. Armstrong, R-Colo., was elected to his first term in 1978. Armstrong, 45, a conservative, is a member of the Senate Finance Committee and National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Claude Pepper

Saving system requires sacrifice

By Rep. Claude Pepper
 For United Press International

Like the other 11 members of the commission who endorsed the compromise, I made concessions in the interest of getting an agreement that, I believe, is fair, will gain the approval of Congress and will thereby preserve the Social Security system — and faith in it — as far into the future as we reasonably can see.

I agreed to go along with the one-time, six-month deferral of the COLA (cost-of-living adjustment) this year as the price for getting the Republicans to drop two other proposals that would have been pure benefit cuts: a lowering of the amount of benefits that a person gets retiring at age 62 (it is now 80 percent of what one gets at 65, and would have been cut to 76 percent), and a reduction in the ratio of benefits to average wages (it is now about 42 percent of wages and would have been lowered to 37 percent).

I went along with the taxing of benefits (when adjusted gross income exceeds $20,000 for an individual and $25,000 for a couple) after ascertaining that this would affect only about 10 percent of the people on Social Security.

THEY ARE THE ONES who could best afford such a tax and many have indicated that they are quite willing to pay it. It is in keeping with similar taxes already on Civil Service retirement benefits and on unemployment compensation, would be applied to only half of benefits and will be earmarked for the Social Security fund.

The acceleration of payroll taxes is something that, according to polls, most workers have indicated they would accept if they had to choose between higher taxes or cutting benefits. I agreed to go along with the acceleration when the Republicans agreed to a refundable tax credit for the employee portion of the tax increase being moved up from 1985-1984.

I am not happy with the COLA delay, with the acceleration of payroll taxes or with the new taxing of benefits. I know that many of the others, especially the elderly, will not be happy with these concessions.

Rep. Pepper, D-Fla., was first elected to the House in 1962. Pepper, 82, also served in the Senate from 1937 to 1951. He is chairman of the House Rules Committee and a member of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Britain's water workers strike

LONDON (UPI) — About 29,000 water and sewage workers went on strike nationwide at midnight as contract talks broke down, raising fears for the health of millions of Britons and their recession-plagued industry. Talks adjourned late Sunday with union officials "bitterly disappointed" with a mediator's offer for a 7.3 percent wage hike — less than half the workers' original 15 percent demand. Officials of 10 water board authorities said they were pleased with the 7.3 percent figure.

New talks are scheduled for today. "Save water in every way you can," newspaper advertisements urged. Supermarkets reported a boom in the sale of mineral water. The 29,000 blue-collar water and sewage employees work in the state-run industry in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. The workers in Scotland are members of a different union and are not involved in the strike. The water workers' average weekly wage is around $217. The 2.5 million residents of Manchester, 180 miles northwest of London, were urged to boil tap water. "IT IS PURELY a safety precaution," a North-West Water Authority official said. Filters in water treatment plants have to be cleaned manually and one or two of the 50 plants in the Manchester area may not be serviced, he said. An overtime ban also means burst water mains are not being repaired and some householders already have to carry water from emergency hydrants in the street.

The government plans to put 15,000 troops on stand-by in case of emergency, but water engineers say the army could not possibly run the national water and sewage service. The water workers say they would withdraw even emergency service if troops are used. Contamination of drinking water is the major concern, but water workers say they will maintain essential supplies to hospitals and others at risk such as kidney patients, who need gallons of water for dialysis machines.

OPEC accepts limits 'in principle'

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — OPEC oil ministers agreed in principle Sunday to cut oil production and limit the amount each country can produce in a bid to prop up prices threatened by a world oil glut. Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti said the new OPEC production ceiling would be "between 17 and 17.5 million barrels" — down from the current 18.5 million barrel ceiling set in December. Calderon Berti insisted that OPEC's $34 base price would remain in force. "Prices will not be cut," he said.

But after a full day of meetings, there was still disagreement between Saudi Arabia and North African producers Algeria and Libya on prices for top-quality oil. The ministers are to resume meeting today. The authoritative oil production journal Middle East Economic Survey called the emergency meeting one of the most crucial in the cartel's 22-year history. Analysts have cautioned the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries could collapse if agreement isn't reached on production ceilings to avoid a price-cutting war by producers squeezed by shrinking world demand. GULF STATE DELEGATES said the Saudi Arabian daily quota would be 4.5 to 5 million barrels, while Iran's would come to around 2.5 million if a formal agreement is reached. Saudi Arabia already has cut production to an estimated 4.5 million barrels from an 11 million barrel daily capacity to defend the $34 official OPEC benchmark price. Iran, in an open challenge to the dominant Saudis, has been aiming for 3.2 million barrels a day — nearly triple the quota of 1.2 million barrels it accepted last March. Under the agreement in principle reached Sunday, Libya would receive a daily quota of around 1.2 million barrels, sources said. The dispute over price differentials involves a demand by Saudi Arabia and its Gulf allies that Algeria, Libya and Nigeria charge at least $3 per barrel more for their top-quality oil. Currently, the three countries charge only $1.5 above the $34 base price. The Gulf states complain this gives them an unfair market advantage.

Missiles may be moved closer, Soviets say

ROME (UPI) — A Soviet official hinted in an interview to be published today that Moscow may deploy missiles closer to the United States if NATO goes ahead with the deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe. Vadim Zagladin, first deputy chief of the Soviet Communist Party's international department, also said diplomatic efforts underway might allow for the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. The State Department said it would have no immediate comment on any of Zagladin's statements.

"Today we have arrived at a new stage," Zagladin told the Rome newspaper Paese Sera. "Contacts are underway between Afghanistan and Pakistan and a political solution that ends the external intervention and allows for the withdrawal of our soldiers is possible." When asked if a solution to the Afghanistan problem was near, he replied: "It's difficult to say, even because we are not participating in the talks. I know, however, that the Afghan government wants to reach a political solution as soon as possible."

Are you confused by all the new $2,500.00 accounts competing for your savings and checking dollars? You don't have to be. The University of Iowa Credit Union's "Flexible Money Market Account" is simple, straightforward, and easy to understand. If you have been shopping around, here are some points to consider:

- 1) We don't offer two different plans, one for savings and one for checking, with two different interest rates. You can choose whether to use your "Flex Account" only for your savings, or with unlimited transactions, just like your everyday checking account. If you choose the latter, we'll provide you with 50 drafts and an automatic teller card free of charge. Either way, you'll earn our top dividend rate.
- 2) The dividend rate changes monthly, not weekly or daily as some institutions do. You'll always know what your funds are earning, without subscribing to the Wall Street Journal.
- 3) We won't offer a high "promotional" interest rate to attract your business, and then lower the rate 4 or 8 weeks later. We were the first financial institution in the area to offer this type of account on July 1st, and our dividend rates have ranged from 9% to 13%.
- 4) Your money earns dividends from the date of deposit, not just on your "average collected balance". Your deposits go to work for you the day we receive them.

Is survey reliable?

A study produced by the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils and published last week has caused concern and stirred controversy among faculty at Iowa State and the UI. However, the validity of the survey in rating the nation's graduate schools seems questionable.

The survey was essentially a poll of faculty members from 228 colleges and universities, in which they were asked to judge the "quality" of other graduate programs. Both Iowa State and the UI received average ratings in most departments, leading some teachers and administrators to voice concern at an apparent lack of excellence at the state's largest universities.

But other educators have expressed skepticism over the survey's reliability, pointing out numerous inequities not taken into account. These include the time-lag between departmental change and when that change becomes known in academic circles, the correlation in people's minds between departmental size and ability, the lack of visibility for schools that cannot send faculty members to conferences, the lack of a widespread reputation for smaller schools, the lack of specific knowledge of a department by the raters and geographical bias — the traditional tendency to rate schools on the coasts highly.

Many fields of study — some of which are among the UI's strongest programs — were not included. And significantly, a separate section of the study indicating the respondents' familiarity with the schools they were rating showed that, in general, the least well-known departments were rated most poorly.

In short, the survey was based on subjective opinions, and amounted to a summary of schools' reputation in academic circles. An arguably more significant study would be one based on a set group of objective criteria such as those suggested by UI Graduate College Dean D.C. Spriestersbach: program accreditation, how graduates fare, and the faculty's ability to secure external funding.

Some of the objection in Iowa to the study's reliability might be chalked up to sour grapes; what highly-rated school would complain? Unfortunately, the survey does have influence — the shame is that this opinion poll may well affect the choices of prospective faculty and students as well as have an impact on funding decisions in the future.

Bouquet for Branstad

While President Reagan continues to resist any increase in federal taxes — even in the face of a looming deficit — newly-elected Gov. Terry Branstad seems dedicated to a more practical approach toward budgetary woes here in Iowa. In a move that fellow Republicans may criticize as moderate, Branstad included in his budgetary proposals a one cent increase in the state sales tax. The measure is a good one for these difficult economic times.

Last week house Democrats issued a report predicting that maintenance of current state programs will require increased funding of more than $217 million, while the expected increase in revenues is only $35 million. An additional annual intake of $150 million to $160 million from the penny increase will go a long way toward bridging that gap. Moreover, a recent Iowa poll showed that of the three major taxes — property, sales and income — Iowans preferred an increase in the sales tax, which is not levied against such necessities as food and prescription drugs.

Branstad calls for the allocation of much of the proceeds into four categories: job creation, energy relief, human needs and maintaining educational excellence. Couched in such general terms, the categories cannot be evaluated with any precision, but they represent appealing priorities.

Democratic legislators consider the proposal both a victory and a sign of the governor's willingness to consider a fundamental change in the way the state is run. Other proposals concern private liquor sales, taxation of residents by local governments and such novel revenue-getters as pari-mutuel betting and a state lottery.

In short, Gov. Branstad and the new Democratic majority are stirring up the legislative dust and forcing a reevaluation of some of the basic assumptions underlying Iowa government. For a state that has had but one governor for the past 14 years, nothing could be more healthy.

El Salvador deception goes on

By Mark Swanson

ONCE AGAIN, it is time for President Reagan's semi-annual deception about human rights in El Salvador. As a result of the International Security and Development Act of 1981, every six months the president must certify to Congress that the government of El Salvador:

1. Is making a concerted and significant effort to comply with internationally recognized human rights.
2. Is achieving substantial control over all elements of its armed forces so as to bring an end to the indiscriminate torture and murder of Salvadoran citizens.
3. Is making continued progress in implementing essential economic and political reform.
4. Is committed to holding free elections at an early date and to that end has demonstrated its good faith efforts to begin discussions with all major factions in El Salvador that have declared their willingness to find and implement an equitable political solution to the conflict.

Presidential certification of these points is legally required for continued U.S. military aid to El Salvador. In addition, the Reagan administration agreed to include an assessment of the progress of the Salvadoran government in investigating the murders of four American churchwomen and two American labor lawyers. Despite overwhelming evidence to the contrary, the Reagan administration has made this certification twice already. A point by point review of El Salvador's progress in meeting these conditions demonstrates that the country does not meet the legal requirements for U.S. military aid.

• Human Rights: The administration's claim that killings have decreased in number in recent months is hardly adequate to suggest that there is now a greater respect for human life in El Salvador. Because the administration's figures come from the Salvadoran army, it is hardly surprising that somewhat lower death tolls are being reported. Numerous international organizations have documented the continuation of institutionalized violations of human rights. A U.N. General Assembly resolution of Dec. 3, 1982, states: "The General Assembly... observing that the elections in El Salvador, as they were held last March, have not led to the cessation of violence or to any improvement in the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms in that country... Expresses its deepest concern about the continued and unabated violation of human rights and at the resulting suffering of the Salvadoran people.

'AH, NOT TOO MANY, AT ALL! THAT SHOWS A DISTINCT IMPROVEMENT IN HUMAN RIGHTS, MR. SCHULTZ.'

• Control of armed forces: The recent rebellion of a Salvadoran Army colonel in defiance of the Defense Minister shows the weakness of control over the armed forces of that country. Although the colonel involved was removed from his post, his reassignment to training in the United States is considered a highly prestigious move, and many observers expect him to return to El Salvador in a much stronger position.

Abuses by the military continue. In October 1982, five of the top political opposition leaders not in exile were abducted by the security forces (The New York Times, Oct. 27, 1982). At that time, Reagan administration officials warned El Salvador that this action might jeopardize U.S. military aid, a warning the president has since ignored himself.

• Reforms: The land reform program of El Salvador has long been the United States' main justification for giving aid. In April 1982, however, the Constituent Assembly repealed the remaining portions of the land reform program. As a result, there is no land reform program whatsoever in El Salvador today, a fact that should in itself require an end to U.S. aid today.

• Elections and dialogue: In March, 1982, the Salvadoran government held elections for a Constituent Assembly. This was the major justification used by the Reagan administration in its July 1982 certification. However, it is abundantly clear that these elections were anything but free. All the leaders of the major political opposition group, the Democratic Revolutionary Front, the FDR, were unable to run in the elections because they have been publicly targeted for assassination.

The dialogue encouraged by the certification law is perhaps the best opportunity for peace in El Salvador. The FDR has repeatedly stated its willingness to enter into negotiation with the Salvadoran junta, as urged in peace initiatives by the leaders of France, Mexico, Venezuela and the Catholic Church of El Salvador. Negotiations have been consistently rejected by both the Salvadoran junta and the Reagan administration.

• Murder of U.S. citizens: The trial of the five guardsmen charged with the murders of the four American churchwomen more than two years ago has once again been delayed. Government authorities have refused to investigate strong evidence that these murders were ordered by officials high in the government. If a trial ever does take place, it is clear that it will be nothing more than a publicity stunt.

The investigations into the murders of the American labor consultants has followed a similar course. One of the two men charged has disappeared from the country and the other has been released due to "insufficient evidence." This took place after Constituent Assembly leader Roberto D'Aubuisson defended the two men as "my colleagues and my friends" on Salvadoran TV.

Clearly, the certification of El Salvador now submitted by the Reagan administration ignores reality. Continued military aid will not end the war in El Salvador; only a negotiated political settlement has any chance to do that.

Now is the time for Congress to insist on such negotiations by rejecting the president's certification. However, Congress will not take such action unless pressured to do so by the American public. If we do not act now, we run the risk of becoming involved in a war as bloody and unjust as Vietnam.

Swanson is a UI undergraduate in anthropology and a member of the El Salvador Solidarity Committee.

How to gain the early advantage

ON HALLOWEEN 1982, a former aide to California Sen. Alan Cranston spooked a party of liberal political activists by masquerading as his former boss. With the help of a bald man's mask, he circulated among the amused crowd, trumpeting his presidential candidacy and pretending to buttonhole representatives of political action committees. To Los Angeles partygoers, the Cranston act was never taken seriously.

But what seemed a big joke last fall is no longer a laughing matter. The lean senator, little-known to voters outside this state, captured the first straw poll at a recent California Democratic convention.

More important, Cranston's early success indicates how a few politicians can turn the presidential nominating contest into an exclusive affair before the rest of the country tunes in.

Today, membership in the club of presidential candidates goes to those who, above all, are early birds at mustering political dollars. Even though federal matching funds will be unavailable until early next year, former vice president Walter Mondale has already submitted his initial request to the Federal Election Commission. Four other Democrats with registered presidential campaign committees — Cranston, former U.S. representative Rubin Askew and Sens. John Glenn of Ohio and Gary Hart of Colorado — need raise only $5,000 apiece in each of 20 states to join Mondale.

FOR DEMOCRATS, the likely prospect of a December endorsement by the AFL-CIO has also stepped up the campaign schedule. Should federation president Lane Kirkland call a vote, a simple majority of union executives will be able to determine the recipient of big labor's delegate-lobbying and get-out-the-vote operations. Kirkland wants clout in 1984 and unions will have undue influence on the size and behavior of the Democratic field.

Meanwhile, candidates are under new pressure to get an early start at grass-roots organization. Presidential primaries will probably be fewer in 1984 than in 1980, with party caucuses choosing more delegates to the national convention. (The primary season will also be five weeks shorter; candidates will need substantial state organizations in place in the event that "the big momentum" comes their way.) Elected officials, under new Democratic Party rules, will also have automatic delegate seats at the nominating convention; those candidates who haven't helped to raise funds for these delegates will find themselves out of favor.

Alan Cranston is one candidate who's mastered the intricacies of this process to his advantage. In addition to numerous forays into Iowa and New Hampshire, he visited at least 35 states last year, purportedly on behalf of fellow Democrats. His "Democratic Leadership Circles," established to aid senatorial candidates, raised $2.9 million.

WHILE MONDALE seems to have the edge among representatives of organized labor, Cranston has hired the public relations firm of Vic Kamber, a former AFL-CIO activist, to run his campaign. The three-term senator already holds a substantial union following in California.

Indeed, mean California base will probably mean favored access to substantial sources of funds, organization and delegates. California is expected to send 17 percent of the delegates to 1984's Democratic convention, a fact that, even if he loses, could give Cranston enormous influence over party decisions.

But such power would, unfortunately, say more about Cranston's understanding of modern campaign finance and organization than about the Californian's national popularity. In fact, future presidential candidates may require little more than sophistication in campaign techniques to compete. What they stand for will mean less and less.

For now, as Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas admitted last weekend, the primaries are a year off but "the players have already stepped on the field." Latecomers won't be welcome. While hardcore Democrats might enjoy the new game, it seems rather undemocratic for the rest of us.

Compassion needed

To the editor:

It was hard to detect any compassion coming from Liz Bird's editorial "Freedom to choose" (DI, Jan. 19). By using words such as "the self-righteous few," Bird probably just fuels more tension. While debate on the issue is healthy, it seems that the two opposing extremes are often the only ones to speak out. What is accomplished is further alienation.

My hunch is that there are more folks than Bird insinuates who do believe that abortion is the taking of human life. And these folks know a desire to protect that life — as they would want to protect the dignity and well-being of those making the decision to have an abortion. I refuse to label that self-righteousness. Many of them are the same individuals who are working with the poor and homeless or are working for an end to the military violence in the world.

These women and men do recognize the compassion among those who support a woman's choice to have an abortion. They don't label abortion a "war on the unborn." They are not just a bunch of men who want to control women's bodies. And they are interested in protecting life after the womb too.

Unfortunately, not enough of these folks have stepped into the forefront. Until they do, debate and subsequent action will remain in the "I'm right, you're wrong" state.

Until we start coming together and recognizing that there is truth, concern and goodwill on "both sides" of the issue, we'll remain suspended where we are and abortion will probably continue to escalate. If there are millions of people who never have to choose whether to have an abortion, it should be possible that this could be true for millions more. That could be achieved with combined efforts. It would seem that choosing not to have to make the "choice" might be the best choice of all.

Draft resisters

To the editor:

In response to Jeffrey Renander's two points he made concerning refusal of financial aid to draft-resisters (DI, Jan. 20).

First, I agree that males of college age should be called men, just as females old enough to enter the job market should be called women (as opposed to "the girls in the secretarial pool," or "that girl engineer").

Second, it is obvious that some working class males do go to college, or there wouldn't be such a need for financial aid to students in the first place. Virtually everyone who isn't from an upper class or middle class family receives some type of financial aid. Those males who don't receive aid are not only unaffected by the new law, their parents can probably afford to get them out of a jail sentence — or even prosecution — if they refuse to register.

Those who do not see this law as blatantly discriminatory against lower income males are either hopelessly naive or callously insensitive to the plight of those less fortunate pacifists to whom our white elitist military will not grant conscientious objector status.

Draft resisters are not necessarily unwilling to serve their country, but rather refuse to participate in a system that may force them to murder other people.

Rally

Most Saturdays the clinic is open and usually the pro-life picketers are there to spend several hours carrying signs decrying the evils of abortion.

The clinic's clients, who must pass through the pro-lifers, react differently. Some have been very hostile. Once people go through the difficult decision process involved with abortion they aren't likely to be turned around by a group of demonstrators, Nye said.

"It seems an ugly slap in the face to be confronted in such a way," she said. The reason the Emma Goldman Clinic became the target of the pro-life pickets is because of its feminist outlook, Nye said. About twice as many abortions are performed at the ETP (Early Termination of Pregnancy) clinic, but no protests are held there.

"THERE IS A FEAR of sex at the base of the (pro-life) movement. They think a woman is out of control if she is not bound to one man in marriage." Putting the life of an unborn baby before the mother makes women "third-class citizens," Nye said.

Pro-life rally organizer Jeffrey Renander disagreed with the charges that his was an anti-feminist movement. "Look at the number of women working for equal rights for unborn children," he said.

The Emma Goldman clinic takes the brunt of the pro-life protests because "this place represents pro-abortion activists," Renander said. "The ETP physicians don't enjoy performing abortions."

At one point during the morning protest, police informed the pro-life marchers that callers had complained they were exceeding their 12-person limit. About 15 marchers carried placards in front of the Dodge Street clinic.

"WE HAD TO FILL out a five-page permit with the city planners for 12 pickets, but the other side can block public sidewalks with hundreds of marchers. It's blatantly unfair. I hope Mr. (Neal) Berlin (Iowa City manager) is not trying to silence one side."

Berlin said Sunday Renander was told he'd be treated the same as anyone else. "We've been limiting the number because of the residential area" in which the clinic is located, Berlin said, while the downtown area could accommodate all members of the pro-choice rally.

Pro-life enthusiast Joyce Kline brought her 8-year-old daughter Molly along to the rally. "We want to make whatever impact we can. People don't speak up enough," she maintained.

As many people opposed to legalized abortion do, Kline mixed religious fervor with political goals. "The bottom line is, I'm a Christian. I believe it is murder."

Saturday night the pro-life group set down their "Adoption, Not Abortion" placards and picked up candles for a half-hour vigil on the steps of Old Capitol.

the court decision. "The victory was the first of many that the women of this country will celebrate," she maintained.

"IT WAS NOT a fluke. The nine people who decided the issue did not set the agenda. Anger for years led to the decision. Roe vs. Wade was women's Vietnam."

Oleson asked the crowd to pause in silence for the women who died because of unsafe and illegal abortions. She said her maternal grandmother died at the age of 29 in Tampa, Fla., in 1903 after attempting an abortion.

"I hope we will never again have to grieve for women who die like that," Oleson said. "Today we will march so that something like that will never happen again."

As the crowd marched along Clinton Street to Old Brick, they carried signs and wire coat hangers to protest efforts by pro-life groups to take away abortion rights. They sang "All we are saying is give women a choice," and chanted "Not the church, not the state, women will decide our fate."

When the rally participants settled in at Old Brick, they listened to messages of encouragement as well as warnings that the rights and privileges won 10 years ago can still be taken away.

"Just one person in the right spot can make it very difficult for us," Doderer told the crowd. "Politics is where you get things done on rights to abortion." Doderer said the key political supporters of the pro-life movement in Iowa were defeated in the November elections. She said many were defeated at the national level as well and encouraged the crowd to become active in politics.

"LAST YEAR WAS the first time they didn't get some whittling away of abortion rights (at the state level) and it's time we get rid of the last obnoxious people who do not believe in women's rights," Doderer said.

Janet Lyness, Vice President of the Iowa National Organization for Women, said the reproductive rights lobby day held in Des Moines Wednesday was successful. She drew laughter when she said Gov. Terry Branstad's aides had told a lobbying group from NOW that "We're free to call on him any time and talk with him." The aides said Branstad wants to keep channels open to the pro-choice supporters but Lyness noted that he is speaking to anti-abortion groups around the state.

Nye said the celebration was a success. "It's a morale booster for people who have been working for the pro-choice movement during the last 10 years or more. We have been on the defensive and we don't need any reminder of our opposition."

Law

FORMER GOV. ROBERT Ray had supported the funding proposal last year, just as Branstad is doing this year. But the employment question is the "new element" this year that will allow the measure to pass where it failed last year, UI Associate Vice President for Finance Casey Mahon said.

"Iowans need to be put back to work. There are benefits involved from both a educational and a economic viewpoint." And the UI will lobby hard for the new building, said William Hines, dean of the UI College of Law. "I expect it to be pushed very hard. As in past years, there will be a well-organized effort."

Hines, who is "moderately optimistic" that the UI will get the law school, said that although the state budget is strained, new construction will be an investment in Iowa's future. "The new law school is an investment in future prosperity, which will produce leaders for the future, and it's also a public works project."

Although they were ranked in order of priority by the regents, the legislature will group all three buildings together so funding will be granted or denied to all three, depending on how the legislature votes, Varn said.

IF THE BONDING program is approved by the legislature, the UI will be able to begin construction on the new law school "in a matter of two months" Bezanson said.

The construction could begin that soon because the planning and design of the building has already been done, Bezanson said. The building would be completed within two to two-and-half years, according to estimates that have been given to the UI.

"Over the years, you have a week or two for vacations. We're looking forward to having more time to travel, visit relatives." The Brckas' children live in Wisconsin, Texas and Oregon.

BRCKA GREW UP in northeast Iowa in the town of Britt, then came to the UI as an accounting major. His schooling was interrupted by almost four years of service in the Navy during World War II. He spent that time at the Great Lakes and the pre-flight school in Iowa City.

"I was fortunate not to be involved in any of the combat part. I had several friends sent out to sea; some didn't get back," he said.

Brcka has been at the UI since he received his accounting degree in 1947. He worked as an accountant, auditor and manager of the Business Office before becoming UI secretary in 1958 and controller as well in 1963.

"I've been thinking about this (retiring) for some time. We have a stable, dedicated staff right now. It's a good time to leave."

"The excitement of working here is watching the development of the institution," Brcka said.

"But the association with people — that's the most difficult part of leaving."

Groups plan rally

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Community action groups from 19 cities are gearing up for a one-day lobbying campaign by the unemployed in the nation's capital.

The groups, which met Saturday, hope to draw at least 1,000 jobless people from about eight states to lobby Congress for major jobs programs, extended unemployment benefits and relief from mortgage foreclosures.

The planned lobbying effort, being coordinated by two groups working for the unemployed in the Mon Valley and in Philadelphia, is to take place about March 15, a spokesman for the Philadelphia group said.

"We're tying that into the federal budget process. That's when (Congress) will be deciding how much money is available for jobs programs," said John Dodds, an organizer for the Philadelphia Unemployment Project.

Organizers of the Washington visit plan to break unemployed lobbyists into groups of 10 or 12 and "place them in the offices of key congressmen."

"We'll be forcing Congress to deal with real people rather just statistics," Dodds said.

Wisconsin wrestling Coach Hellickson believes intimidator responsible for Iowa's success in mat program. At least Hellickson thought it was a factor Sunday night when the Badgers were drilled, 37-10, by the Hawkeyes in Madison.

"Our guys seemed to take a seat in most of the matches, but it might have been mental," Hellickson said. "When the average competitor comes out on the mat, he obviously intimidates. Simply, where a comes from can have an effect. Iowa's program has been successful for so long that there is an intimidation factor. Just that black and gold sing sometimes be a factor."

HOWEVER, Hellickson believes Iowa team isn't as strong as he thought. "Soft spots, and I use that lightly, could hurt them."

"They don't appear to be as dominant in as many weight classes as teams. But that's not to say they're at the end of the season."

Saturday night the Hawks' rather easy victory over L State, 36-4. It appears Iowa's major challenge will be Feb. 19, when they entertain No. 3 Iowa State. Saturday night, the Cyclones tossed a defeat by No. 4 Oklahoma State, 17-16.

Iowa Coach Dan Gable said that he plans to pick up his tempo shortly in preparation for dual against Iowa State, the tournament, Feb. 25-26 in Iowa and the national tournament March 12 in Oklahoma City.

Picking up the tempo, words, means two-a-day practice. "We're starting to become tense as a team," he said. "You beat LSU as bad we did, you're to be impressed. We didn't look tonight."

Iowa's next action is Friday, Illinois. Northwestern visits Hawkeye Arena next Saturday.

After her squad's spirited victory over Northwestern Friday night, Wisconsin women's basketball coach Edwina Quall feared a Badger victory against Iowa Sunday.

But that wasn't the case as the Hawkeyes, 68-47, in the Hawkeye Sports Arena. Wisconsin now 6-0 in the Big Ten and 13-1 overall. The Badgers weren't the only team to defeat Iowa last weekend.

"The difference was the freshmen hit, ours didn't." The words of Minnesota men's basketball Coach Fred Roeth spelled out the difference between Iowa's 273.6-271.6 win over the ranked Gophers Friday.

"I don't think Minnesota's last week thought that we were as we are," said Iowa Coach Edwina Quall. "But after the second usually dawns on them."

Wisconsin wrestling Coach Russ Hellickson believes intimidation is partially responsible for Iowa's successful mat program. At least Hellickson thought it was a factor Sunday when the Badgers were drilled, 37-6, by the Hawkeyes in Madison.

"Our guys seemed to take a back seat in most of the matches, but a lot of it might have been mental," he said. "When the average competitor steps out on the mat, he obviously can be intimidated. Simply, where a wrestler comes from can have an effect."

"Iowa's program has been successful for so long that there has to be an intimidation factor. Just wearing that black and gold singlet can sometimes be a factor."

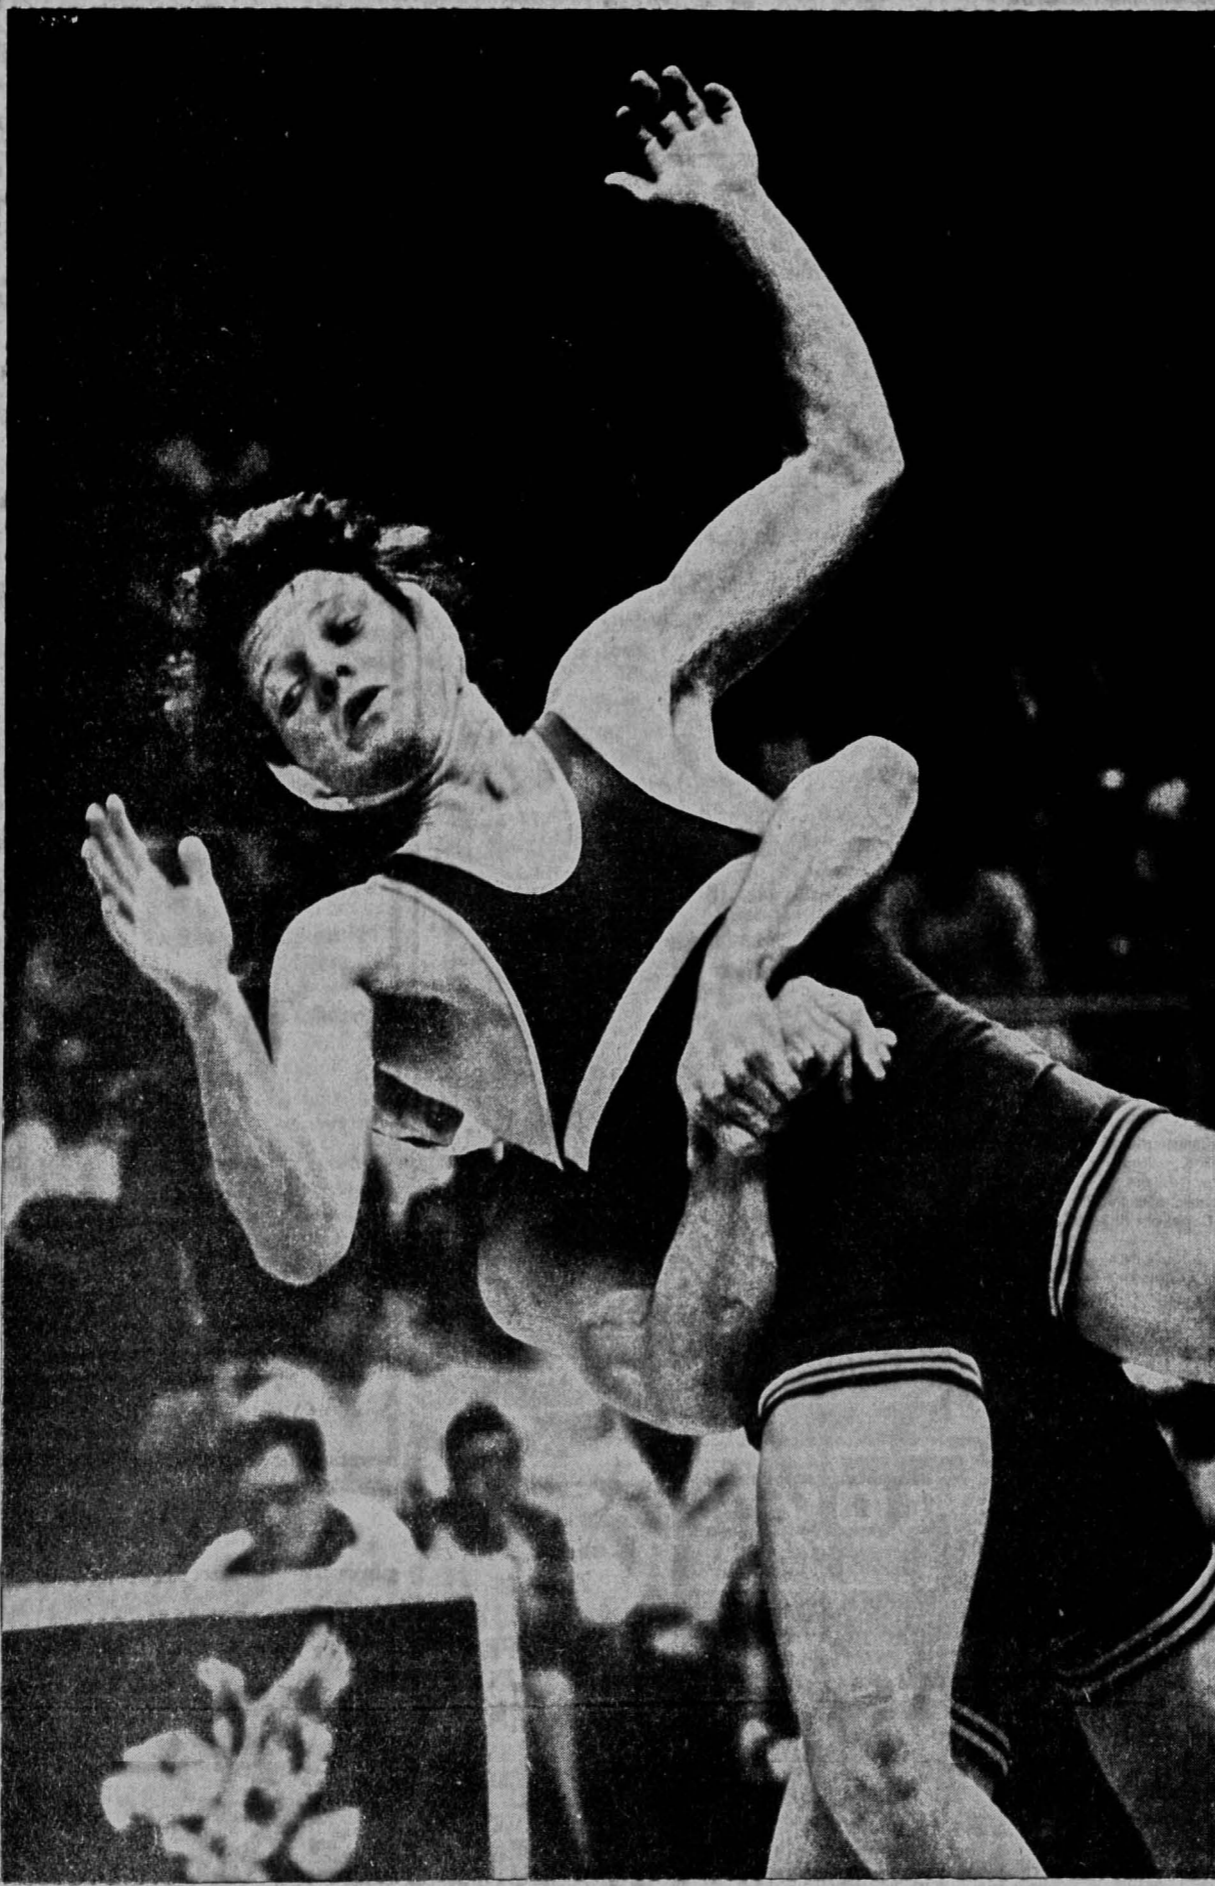

HOWEVER, Hellickson believes this Iowa team isn't as strong as past ones. "Soft spots, and I use the word lightly, could hurt them," he said. "They don't appear to be as dominant in as many weight classes as past teams. But that's not to say they won't be at the end of the season."

Saturday night the Hawks scored a rather easy victory over Louisiana State, 36-4. It appears Iowa's next major challenge will be Feb. 19, when they entertain No. 3 Iowa State. But on Saturday night, the Cyclones were tossed a defeat by No. 4 Oklahoma in Ames, 17-16.

Iowa Coach Dan Gable said Saturday that he plans to pick up his team's tempo shortly in preparation for the dual against Iowa State, the Big Ten tournament, Feb. 25-26 in Iowa City, and the national tournament March 10-12 in Oklahoma City.

Picking up the tempo, in other words, means two-a-day practices. "We're starting to become more intense as a team," he said. "Anytime you beat LSU as bad we did, you have to be impressed. We didn't look too bad tonight."

Iowa's next action is Friday night at Illinois. Northwestern visits Carver-Hawkeye Arena next Saturday for a dual.

Louisiana State's Mike Clevenger is thrown by Iowa's Tim Riley during Riley's 7-2 win in the 118-pound class. Pins by Rico Chiapparelli and Barry Davis helped the second-ranked Hawkeyes past the ninth-ranked Tigers, 36-4.

Duhe's thefts thwart Jets' title hopes

MIAMI (UPI) — The Killer Bees will be descending on California.

The Miami Dolphins, sparked by three interceptions by A.J. Duhe and a superb effort from their "Killer Bee" defense, earned their fourth Super Bowl trip Sunday with a 14-0 victory over the New York Jets in the AFC title game.

The Dolphins, 2-1 in previous Super Bowls, will face the NFC champion Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVII next Sunday at Pasadena, Calif. The teams last met in a Super Bowl 10 years ago and Miami won 14-7 to complete the only perfect season in NFL history.

Duhe set up Miami's first touchdown, in the third period, with his second interception of the game and then dealt the Jets their death blow with a 35-yard interception return for a score with 12:52 to go.

DUHE, who began his pro career as a defensive lineman, had only two career interceptions before picking off three passes on Sunday.

The Dolphins' defense, nicknamed Killer Bees for the six starters whose last names begin with the letter "B," completely throttled the Jets' offense, which had ranked third in the AFC.

The Dolphins intercepted Richard Todd five times and set up the game's first score, a seven-yard burst up the middle in the third period by ex-Jet Woody Bennett. The Dolphins, who had an interception wiped out by a penalty on the previous play, got the ball on the Jets' 48 when Duhe took a pass off the fingertips of Jets' fullback Mike Augustyniak.

"I WAS JUST really excited," Duhe said. "We wanted to prove to America that we could beat the Jets three times in the same season. People said we couldn't do it and we wanted to show them that we could. I was lucky. A couple of throws just happened to come my way and I did some good reading on a couple of others."

"On the first one, it was just a tipped ball and I pulled it in. I guess the Jets

"thought the fullback could beat me but I didn't think so. They sent the fullback down the middle of the field and he had me beat for awhile, but I recovered and picked it off when it bounced off his hands."

"On our second touchdown, I just read the play perfectly. I batted it up into the air and once I got my hands on it, nobody was going to stop me."

Miami Coach Don Shula credited Defensive Coordinator Bill Arnsparger with a superb game plan in keeping the Jets under wraps.

"BILL ARNSPARGER and the rest of the defensive coaching staff did just a tremendous job in getting us ready, not only for this game, but for the playoffs in general," Shula said. "We gave up 13 points to New England and 13 points to San Diego and we held the Jets to nothing today. That's tremendous defense and Bill Arnsparger is the reason."

"This team just got better and better as the playoffs approached and today was just fantastic. We're looking forward to the Super Bowl. I'm just so proud of this football team for what it has accomplished. We believed in ourselves when nobody else would. We stuck together."

The shutout was the first in AFC title game play since the Dolphins blanked Baltimore 21-0 in 1971.

IN SHUTTING down the Jets' offense, Miami held Todd to 15 completions in 37 attempts for 103 yards. Wesley Walker, who had been a thorn in Miami's side for the past five years, was held without a reception until the final minutes, when he caught a pass for a one-yard loss. Freeman McNeil, the NFL's leading rusher, managed only 46 yards in 17 carries.

Young Badgers gain respect in upset of Iowa

By Melissa Isaacson
Assistant Sports Editor

To the rest of the basketball world, or at least the Big Ten, the results of the Iowa-Wisconsin game must have come as quite a shock. Those who watched it, however, could only shake their heads.

If the Badgers weren't getting any respect before, they deserve some now. Because aside from beating No. 10 Iowa, 65-62, a feat which deserves some accolades in itself, the young, inconsistent Badgers showed the poise and maturity of a Big Ten first-division club, something they haven't been since the 1973-74 season.

"It was simply a case of Wisconsin coming out and wanting to win the basketball game," said Iowa Head Coach Lute Olson. "We didn't play badly. Wisconsin just played a great ballgame."

NOT EVEN Steve Carfino, with his six baskets from three-point range and his 22 points, could help the Hawkeyes. "Carfino came through like a champ, but he couldn't do it all," Olson said.

After Thursday's emotional, one-sided victory at Minnesota, the obvious question of a letdown was raised. Psychologically, it's an unlikely possibility; physically, however, it's another story.

Senior co-captains Mark Gannon and Bob Hansen, who ordinarily combine for about 25 points per game (in Big Ten play), scored just 10 points (Gannon, six Hansen, four) Saturday.

COMMENTING ON Gannon's play, Olson said: "Defensively, he did a good job. Maybe we expected too much out of him with the effort he expended Thursday. With Mark, it's more strength than intensity — which he never has a problem with — and he was a half step behind (Saturday)."

The Hawkeyes shot just 46 percent from the field in their sluggish first half and just 43 percent for the game. Iowa came out slow at the outset and two Sellers free throws with about four minutes remaining gave Wisconsin a four-point lead which they held onto until halftime when it was 33-29.

Perhaps the biggest story in the first half was the rebound margin, as the shorter Badgers held a 19-7 edge. That, along with a weak Iowa inside game, gave the Badgers a lead which they never relinquished.

Wisconsin Head Coach Steve Yoder call the win the biggest of his college coaching career.

"THE BIGGEST difference I felt was on the boards," Yoder said. "I felt that if we didn't rebound with Iowa, we wouldn't be in the ballgame. Our defense really kept them out of the inside. It was a great team win and a game we really needed to win."

The Hawkeyes showed some initiative in the last half of the last half, but by that time, the Badgers could taste the upset.

"When we were down by 10, we realized we better get after it or it would be curtains, but by then it was too late," Olson said.

With seven seconds remaining, Iowa was still in the ballgame behind by three, but Carfino, who had hit four crucial second half three pointers, was well-covered. Michael Payne ended up with the ball and heaved a shot from

Poor shooting plagues Hawks in loss to Wisconsin

By Thomas W. Jargo

After her squad's spirited victory over Northwestern Friday night, Wisconsin women's basketball Coach Edwina Quall feared a Badger letdown against Iowa Sunday.

But that wasn't the case as the Big Ten leaders coasted past the Hawkeyes, 68-47, in the Carver-Hawkeye Sports Arena. Wisconsin is now 6-0 in the Big Ten and 13-1 overall.

The Badgers weren't the only team to defeat Iowa last weekend. Friday night, Minnesota left town with a 73-62 victory over the Hawkeyes, who now find themselves tied for last place in the conference with Purdue.

Minnesota lost to Northwestern Sunday, dropping the Gophers out of a first-place tie with the Badgers.

THE TWO IOWA losses extended its conference losing streak to 18 straight, including five straight this season.

The Hawkeyes fell behind early in both games, and unsuccessfully had to play catch-up. They also continued to have shooting problems, hitting only 40 and 34 percent from the field against Minnesota and Wisconsin, respectively.

The Badgers used a fullcourt press with a man-to-man trap, forcing 26 Iowa turnovers. "I felt Iowa panicked a little against the press," Qualls said.

Iowa Coach Judy McMullen disagrees. "Minnesota probably gave us more intense pressure than Wisconsin," she said. "I thought there were times we could have broken away for an open pass, but we weren't responding quick enough."

MICHELLE LOWMAN, Wisconsin's 6-foot-3 center, raised havoc for Iowa in the middle. She blocked 11 shots in the game, thwarting several Iowa scoring opportunities.

Sisters Theresa and Janet Huff led the Badgers with 17 and 16 points respectively. Theresa Huff also pulled down a game-high 15 rebounds. Faith Johnson added 12 points for Wisconsin.

Iowa was once again led by forward Donna Freitag, who had 12 points and nine rebounds. Robin Anderson had 11 points to assist Freitag.

Against the Gophers, Iowa struggled to make up eight to 12 point deficits throughout most of the first half. It finally cut the margin to three, 36-33, at halftime.

But Minnesota pulled away in the second half, building insurmountable leads of up to 19 points behind forwards Laura Coenen and Cindy Kuhlman. Coenen, tabbed as a preseason All-American by Street and Smith magazine, and Kuhlman, each poured in 20 points. Kuhlman also had a game-high 13 rebounds.

MARY DRESSEN and Debbie Hunter added 18 and 12 points respectively for the Gophers.

Freitag was the only Iowa player in double figures with 16. She and center Kim Nelson led the Hawkeyes in rebounding with 10 apiece.

McMullen said it wasn't a case of Iowa not playing well, but it was two "good, talented teams" forcing Iowa players to make mistakes. "A lot of credit is due to the opposition," she said. "Wisconsin played very well. They did a good job defensively."

McMullen has been pleased with the Iowa gymnasts defeat defending Big Ten champs

"The difference was that Iowa's freshmen hit, ours didn't."

The words of Minnesota men's gymnastics Coach Fred Roethlisberger spelled out the difference in No. 7 Iowa's 273.6-271.6 win over the sixth-ranked Gophers Friday.

"I don't think Minnesota or Illinois last week thought that we were as good as we are," said Iowa Coach Tom Dunn. "But after the second event, it usually dawns on them."

The Hawkeyes, boosted by school record team performances in both the floor exercise (46.5) and the pommel horse (46.2), jumped off to a 92.7-89.55 lead after the opening two events.

DUNN BELIEVES the fact that Iowa can get off to an early lead is a factor in Iowa's 4-0 mark so far this season. "We've never had a pommel horse team like this before," Dunn said. "It's really a big plus."

"By getting an early lead, it keeps us relaxed and I think it tends to put a little pressure on the opposition. We hope to capitalize on the fact that we have such strong floor and horse teams the rest of the year."

Like last week's win over the Illini, the Hawks went 5-for-5 on the pommel horse. "That was very satisfying," Dunn said. "I expect it on floor exercise and it's great when we can do it on pommel horse. I was pleased with pommel horse as a whole, but especially with Brad Smith and Joe Leo. "Dan Bachman was a surprise on the rings," Dunn said. "It's his weakest event. He'd never scored over a nine before and tonight he hits a 9.2 and wins it."

IOWA HAD problems on the parallel bars again and Dunn said his team will focus on the event in practice.

"I feel that we have good p-bar men," Dunn said. "We just can't hit. Basically, we're just going to have to do more routines in practice."

"We had our best meet of the year," said Roethlisberger, whose Gophers fell to 2-1. "We had a chance to win the meet in the last two events but we dropped the ball again."

The win was a big one in that the Hawkeyes and the Gophers are in the same region for qualifying for nationals and one of the criteria used is head-to-head competition.

"This win was a big one for us," Leo said. "It is a real good indicator to the (NCAA) selection committee that we're still irritated about last year."

IOWA WILL host defending Division II national champion Wisconsin-Oshkosh Saturday at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena. "We're going to get in some of our sixth men," Dunn said. "We want to get a look at everyone so we can set our best line-up for later on this season."

Hassard uses opening meet to check runners' progress

By Steve Riley
Staff Writer

The Hawk-Eye Opener, held Saturday, was the first meet of the Iowa women's track season and more than a few eyes were opened when an Illinois State distance runner of all people, stole the show at the Recreation Building.

Illinois State's Wendy Van Mierlo blazed through the three-mile run in 15 minutes, 27.10 seconds, easily outdistancing Iowa's Jenny Spangler. In fact, Van Mierlo lapped Spangler, although the Hawkeye sophomore All-American ran a respectable 16:15.80.

Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said Van Mierlo probably had another Iowa All-American — Nan Doak — on her mind before the meet. The only problem was that Doak was held out of the meet, nursing a slight injury.

"I THINK Van Mierlo got charged up to run against Doak, but when she found out she wouldn't run, her adrenalin was still going," Hassard said.

The real purpose of the non-scoring meet with Illinois State, Northern Iowa, Western Illinois and Northeast Missouri State was "to see how people are at this stage of the game," Hassard said.

Iowa freshman sprinter Vivien McKenzie drew some attention. She won the 60-yard dash in a quick 7.06, then came back to win the 300 in 36.28. Her 600 time was the closest to the national-meet qualifying standard — 7.02 — of the afternoon.

A few other individuals were the targets of Hassard's praise. He got together with the distance runners before the meet to set some goals; Spangler and Maribeth See did the best job of hitting them. "In the distance area, Spangler and See both hit their splits under what they shot for."

ALTHOUGH HE WAS pleased with some performances, he admitted that it was too early to start resting on laurels. "A lot of work has to be done."

Key points in distance events let Hawks beat Notre Dame

By Steve Riley
Staff Writer

It seems that overconfidence by some Notre Dame distance runners at least partially led to the Irish defeat at the hands of the Iowa track team Saturday in South Bend, Ind. Iowa won, 73-54.

Notre Dame's distance runners were supposed to be superior to Iowa's and maybe even the difference in the meet. But the Hawkeyes scored 16 valuable points in the four distance events.

"The attitudes of the distance runners from Notre Dame helped our people," said Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler. "They expected to sweep the mile, 1,000, 800 and two-mile. These events are where we won the meet."

IN PARTICULAR, victories by Mike Clancy in the mile and Dan Waters in the 1,000 yards were the keys. "Mike Clancy basically set the tone for the meet," Wheeler said. "He won the first running event, which is very important."

Waters, a freshman, was impressive in his 1,000 win. "(Iowa's) Evan Clarrissimeaux and a Notre Dame runner were battling it out and they wore each other down, and I just outkicked them at the end," he said.

Other notable Hawkeye feats came from Jeff Kostrubala and Norm Balke in the shot put, Gary Beelman in the 600, and Mike Cunningham in the high jump. Freshman Kostrubala set a personal record and continued his assault on the school mark with a 54-foot, 2-inch toss. Balke bettered his personal record by about two feet in that event.

BEELMAN, ALSO a member of the Peach Bowl football squad, placed second in the 600 despite having trained on the track for only 11 days, according to Wheeler. "That was incredible," the coach said.

When Cunningham, a freshman, won the high jump, he beat Notre Dame's Chuck Constable, who jumped 7-2½ last season.

Indiana, Southern Illinois soundly beat Iowa tankers

By Mike Condon
Staff Writer

A word of warning to Big Ten swimming followers: the Indiana Hoosiers are hungry to regain the supremacy that was theirs for 20 years before Iowa collared the past two conference crowns.

Hoosier Coach James "Doc" Counsilman had his squad primed and ready Friday night in Bloomington for those same Hawkeyes responsible for putting Indiana's dynasty on hold. The Hoosiers won all but three events in the meet and blew the defending Big Ten champions right out of Royer Pool, 80-33.

"They have just a tremendous amount of depth," Iowa Coach Glenn Patton said of the Hoosiers. "They were quite well-rested for this meet... There is no question that Indiana is the favorite to win the Big Ten meet."

INDIANA'S TOP performances were turned in by two impressive underclassmen. Sophomore Tony Anderson won the 200-yard freestyle in a time of 1:40.80 and freshman Rojer Madruga continued his domination of the distance freestyle events, winning the 1000 in 9:23.74.

The top Iowa performance was turned in by backstroke David Ross. The junior from Waterloo took the 200 backstroke in a time of 1:54.81. Other Hawkeye winners included Alan Hays in the 500 freestyle and the 400 freestyle relay of Martin Svensson, Bryan Ferris, James Lorys and Matt Wood.

Patton's major worry at this point in the season is keeping the freshmen from losing confidence in the master plan of the Iowa program, which has the team peak for the Big Ten and NCAA meet.

"WE HAVE A very young team and we have to convince the younger guys that we have a plan," Patton said. "The upperclassmen have been through this the past two years, so it is no problem for them. I think we will be a very tough team by the time the Big Ten meet rolls around and I think we can give Indiana a run for the title."

Saturday, the Hawks were in Carbondale, Ill., to meet another well-rested team in Southern Illinois. The Salukis came away with an 82-31 win over a tired Iowa squad. Ross swam a 52.8 backstroke leg in the 400 medley relay and Patton said Ross was strong throughout the weekend. The 400 freestyle relay of Svensson, Ferris, Lorys and Wood also had the top time in the Big Ten this season with a 3:06.90.

ALL-AMERICAN Tom Roemer didn't compete last weekend and all Patton would say about the situation regarding an earlier redshirt decision was: "We're close to making a decision on Tom but nothing is yet final."

Badgers defeat improved Iowa squad

By Steve Batterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Wisconsin 164.85
Iowa 163.9

An 11-point improvement wasn't enough for the Iowa women's gymnastics team Saturday, as it dropped its opening dual to Wisconsin, 164.85-163.9.

The bottom spots in the line-up were responsible for much of the increase in scoring. "Our fourth and sixth spots really did well," said Iowa Coach Diane Chapela. "I was really glad to get Holli DeBoer back. She did a good job for us."

"This was one of the best meets we've ever had. We had a few falls again, but the improvement was there. We showed a lot of Vault — 1. Tie between Tremain (I) and Wagenman (W), 3. Stearns (W); 8.7.

Uneven bars — 1. Bollinger (W), 2. Sipe (W), 3. Laponsky (I); 8.65.
Balance beam — 1. Tremain (I), 2. Sipe (W), 3. Tie between Laponsky (I) and Wagenman (W); 8.55.
Floor exercise — 1. Laponsky (I), 2. Sipe (W), 3. Bollinger (W); 8.85.
All-around — 1. Sipe (W), 2. Laponsky (I), 3. Tremain (I); 33.85.

class." The Hawkeyes, 0-1 in duals, won three of four individual titles. Linda Tremain won the balance beam and the vault and Laura Laponsky took first in the floor exercise. "WE TURNED IN good performances, but Wisconsin is much improved over last year," Chapela said. "All six of their gymnasts score in the eight's consistently. We will be there shortly."

Iowa started strong on the vault, but had some problems on the uneven bars to give the Badgers, now 3-1 on the season, the lead. "We had some good sets, but we're not quite to the point that Wisconsin is at yet," Chapela said. "We made up a little ground on the balance beam and we were just a little down going into the last event."

"I thought we could make it up with our floor exercise squad," she said, "but four of our six gymnasts had falls which cost us a half-point each so we didn't score up to what we usually do. Other than those, we executed very well on the floor exercise."

ONE OF THOSE falls was a costly one as all-arounder Marianne Martinsen, in her last tumbling pass, fell and tore some interior ligaments in her left knee. The injury will sideline her for the remainder of the season. "That was really a heartbreaker," Chapela said. "She was looking really strong in every event. The confidence was there and she was really aggressive. It's just a shame."

Chapela said the team will spend much of its time perfecting routines in preparation for Friday's dual at Ohio State.

Women swimmers dunk Northern Illinois

By Jill Holkinson
Staff Writer

The Iowa women's swim team once again utilized a "tremendous team effort" to beat the Northern Illinois Huskies, 88-61, Saturday in the Field House pool.

The Hawkeyes swam the meet without free-styler Donna Strilich, who received four stitches in her toe Friday.

During the meet, Hawkeye Patricia Campion was also injured when she dove into the shallow end of the pool after a race, hurt her lip and became dizzy. Due to Strilich's and Campion's injury, Coach Peter Kennedy had to move some swimmers around to different events. "The meet might have been a little bit closer but our women really did the job," Kennedy said.

THE HAWKEYES finished first in 11 of 17 events and in five of those events, captured second-place finishes.

"Finishing first and second in several events really helped," Kennedy said. "A key point in the meet was the first and second-place finishes in the 50 breast."

The Hawkeyes were led by All-American Jodi Davis, who set an all-time pool record in the 200 back with her winning time of 2:11.02. Wenche Olsen established another pool and all-time Iowa record in the 200 breast. Iowa diver Diane Goldworthy set a new pool and Iowa record in one-meter diving.

Hawkeyes Adrienne Steger won the 1000 free and Kay Kirkland, filling in for Strilich, won the 200 free. All-American Kerry Stewart was a winner in the 50 breast. Campion won the 200 fly. Carolyn Connolly won the three-meter diving event and Jennifer Petty, who was out the first part of the season with a shoulder injury, captured first in the 100 free.

"PETTY IS coming along real well," Kennedy said. "She should drop in some excellent swims for us."

The Hawkeyes were led by Karen Peterson, a freshman from Peoria, Ill. She established a new pool record in the 50 fly with a time of 26.1, one tenth of a second away from the NCAA qualifying time. Peterson also won the 50 free and swam on Northern Illinois' two relay teams. According to Kennedy, Peterson is swimming exceptionally well.

Northern Illinois' Jenny VanAlsheyne set a new pool record in the 50 back with a time of 28.3 and Clare Foster won the 400 individual medley. The Huskies 200 medley relay team also set a new pool record.

"OVERALL, WE were really pleased with the women," Kennedy said. "Several women dropped in some good swims on Saturday."

Hawkeyes

three-point range, but it was partially blocked and it was curtains for the Hawkeyes.

One curious note is that reserve forward Jerry Dennard did not make the trip to Madison or Minneapolis. Kurt Stange, the only non-scholarship player on the team and usually designated the position of starting back on road trips (because of a Big Ten rule which only allows 12 players suited up on the road

Dennard missed practice last Monday but according to Assistant Coach Jim Rosborough, that had nothing to do with the fact that Dennard stayed home. "Kurt was with us this week and worked hard with scout team stuff so we decided to take him instead," Rosborough said.

ALL OLSON would say on the matter was: "He will be with us tomorrow I assume."

team's defense. "We've been holding teams to below their scoring averages," she said. "Our team defense is the best part of our game right now."

MCMULLEN MADE one line-up change this weekend, replacing point guard Lisa Anderson with Holly Andersen. Andersen played the off-guard spot while Angie Lee moved to the point.

McMullen says Lee has been playing more aggressively at the point, and is hoping Lisa Anderson will be more of a sparkplug off the bench.

How many George Millers are there?

By Craig Wyrick
Staff Writer

Could it be possible that there are two George Millers in Australia who make feature-length films? It would seem as unlikely as two Steven Spielberg making movies in America. Let's examine the evidence, Jack Webb-style — just the facts, ma'am.

One Miller directs the fast-paced, apocalyptic visions of Mad Max and The Road Warrior (which thrilled Bijou patrons last weekend), movies that revel in nihilistic violence. The other Miller (who we'll call Miller II) is more oriented toward the family fare, as his The Man from Snowy River demonstrates. Could the same man have directed these three films?

The evidence against lies most particularly in the subject matter. Snowy River is based on a famous Australian poem by A.J. "Banjo" Paterson as popular with school children Down Under as Paul Bunyan is to American tobs. The poem relates the story of a boy and his horse in the Australian outback who capture a notorious wild stallion, bringing the boy into manhood, during the 1880s.

THE FILM TELLS the love story between the title character, Jim Craig (newcomer Tom Burlinson), and Jessica Harrison (Sigrid Thornton), adding a possessive father who won't allow his daughter to run off with this poor boy. But this is no ordinary father: He is played by Kirk Douglas.

Just to make his business trip to Australia all the more productive, however, Douglas has a dual role — he plays his own reclusive brother, Spur, the only real friend Jim Craig has.

Douglas gives a fine performance as the bitter Mr. Harrison, who won't acknowledge the existence of his brother, a tough guy character that Douglas has spent a lifetime perfecting.

Sadly, though, his role as the eccentric Spur isn't the coup de grace it was made to be. Douglas looks rather out of place with his foppish hair and is too heavily immersed in his other persona to pull off a spicy character. It's a job that should be left to Laurence Olivier.

But wait — before you conclude that there are two Millers, you should note the similarity between Snowy River and The Road Warrior (and, for that matter, with most Australian films that reach our shores): exquisite cinematography, something that seems to thrive in the beauty and desolation of Australian wilderness. The Man from Snowy River takes us into the mountain ranges of Victoria, Australia, a place rarely seen by American eyes (we are usually treated to the vastness of the desert).

AND THE FINAL chase scene, with horses instead of cars, is choreographed as well as the smash-up climax of The Road Warrior, though it doesn't have quite as much excitement (something that would be hard to duplicate) or violence (which makes it acceptable to children).

So, you ask, now that you've read this far, is George Miller I trying to prove he can make a children's movie as well as his violent films? After a hard day of shooting The Road Warrior, does Miller relax by making a young adults movie instead of drinking a Coors Light? The answer is simple — no. There are two George Millers making films in Australia, believe it or not.

It might be nice if they'd change their names to protect the innocent.

Entertainment today

Nightlife

Those of you who don't have tickets to tonight's Bowwow concert at the Crow's Nest will just have to wait for Jim Musser's review and Mel Hill's pictures in Wednesday's DI. Those of you who do have tickets, however, should be in for a howling good time (as Dr. Musser's preview indicates). Remember: They want candy — and no hounding for autographs. Doors open at 8 p.m.

At the Bijou

Because of popular demand, the Bijou is adding a showing of Carlos Diegues' Xica today. The story of an eighteenth-century slave woman in Brazil who conquers her masters through the use of what genteel folks would call "her feminine wiles." Xica has earned the praise of critics for both its political and its artistic sensibilities. 4:30 p.m.

• We've heard Luchino Visconti's The Damned described as "disgusting," "sick" and "perverted" from people who think of Sid Vicious as a suitable teenage role model. Visconti's lurid portrait of the rise and fall of Hitler's Vaterland features Dirk Bogarde and Ingrid Thulin as munitions manufacturers seduced and beguiled by a transvestite (Helmut Berger), a leather-clad dominatrix (Charlotte Rampling) and other nutty Nazis.

The Damned was one of the first — and one of the most controversial — X-rated movies. It's also one of the best, as the director's vision of a nation gone berserk is riveting to the end. This is not a movie for the faint at heart — but then the Third Reich wasn't a bundle of laughs, either. 6:45 p.m.

• Joseph Losey's The Prowler is one of several film noirs from the 1940s and early 1950s dealing with the murderous desires of extramarital lovers. Van Heflin stars as a cop who falls for the wife (Evelyn Keyes) of a disc jockey and plans a way to off the hubby (John Maxwell). Losey's direction and Dalton Trumbo's script (based heavily on the works of James M. Cain) keep the action moving through the neon-lit mean streets of an empty world. 9:20 p.m.

• Not at the Bijou but also worth a look tonight is Stanley Kramer's On the Beach. Perhaps the least palatable exercise from Mr. Message (probably because it's hard to be too serious about the end of the world). On the Beach presents the story of the last survivors of World War III, who are facing extinction from radiation. With Gregory Peck, Ava Gardner, Fred Astaire and Tony Perkins. Presented by the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament. 7 p.m., Shambaugh Auditorium.

Television

In tonight's spine-tingling conclusion of "Malibu," Stan (William Atherton) slides into a hot tub with Dee (Valerie Perrine); Linda (Susan Dey) slides between the sheets with Art (Chad Everett), who's trying to slide out of a $5,000 tennis match with Tom (James Coburn), while Jay (George Hamilton) and Gail (Ann Jillian) slide through slime and try to destroy everyone. Remember Troy Donahue? And Bridget Hanley ("Here Come the Brides")? They're here too. Pass the Hefty bag. 8 p.m., KCRG-9.

• After Joe Piscopo's wonderful impersonation last "Saturday Night Live," how fitting it is that Joan Rivers should return as guest host of "Tonight" tonight. More Liz Taylor jokes, to be sure, and she should have more fun than humans are allowed with her guests Cher and Henry Winkler (fresh off his Jerry Lewis imitation on the Cerebral Palsy Telethon last weekend). 10:30 p.m., KWLL-7.

• Movie on cable: The critics scoffed, but Ken Russell's bombastic film of the Who's bombastic rock opera Tommy is about as perfect a translation as could be made. See Mom (Ann-Margret) wallow in a room full of baked beans! Hear the Doctor (Jack Nicholson) tell Tommy to take the cure! Touch the Pinball Wizard's (Elton John) supple wrist! Feel the Acid Queen (Tina Turner) tear Tommy's soul apart!

Some of Russell's big-screen frenzy, as well as the stereo sound, will be lost on the tube, but it'll still be a hoot. With Oliver Reed, Robert Powell, Eric Clapton, Peter Townshend, Roger Daltrey as Tommy and Keith Moon (who else?) as his wicked Uncle Ernie. When to fiddle about? 12:40 a.m., Cinemax-13.

White House budget rises 29%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It will cost $3.8 billion to run the White House this year, up 29 percent from the last year of the Carter administration, due mainly to pay raises for the staff at the 182-year-old executive mansion — a combination of home to the first family, a museum and an office building.

Average pay for the house staff of Rex Scouten, who oversees three ushers, an administrative assistant, accountant, seven maids, nine housemen, a maitre d', six butlers, three chefs, three cooks, a laundress, a housekeeper and assorted electricians, plumbers, carpenters and painters is $25,698.

Congress trimmed President Reagan's request for nearly $300,000 for entertainment by $78,000, allocating only $205,000 for black-tie and other affairs in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, an article in U.S. News & World Report said.

Bowwowwow barks here tonight

By Jim Musser
Special to The Daily Iowan

The Crow's Nest, which moved to its new, larger facility on New Year's Eve with plans to present more national and international recording acts, takes its first major step in that direction tonight as British punkers Bowwowwow assault the stage.

Formed in 1980 as the brainchild of notorious rock Svengali Malcolm McLaren (New York Dolls, Sex Pistols), Bowwowwow teamed Adam's original "Ants" (guitarist Matthew Ashman, bassist Leroy Gorman and drummer Dave Barbarossa) with a precocious 14-year-old (then) vocalist, Annabella Lwin. In keeping with McLaren's track record, Bowwowwow wasted no time in setting out to outrage the industry.

THEIR FIRST recording, Your Cassette Pet, was released in 1980 in England on cassette only. The featured track ("C-30 C-60 C-90") espoused the glories of home taping, and the second side of the tape was left blank to encourage just that.

(McLaren is the Billy Martin of rock 'n' roll. The same fiery brashness and E.T. Barnum-like flamboyance that have allowed him repeatedly to take unknowns and ram them into the public spotlight have also tended historically to alienate quickly the very subjects of his affection. Predictably, he is no longer associated with Bowwowwow, and recent interviews show the band members making no attempt to mask their resentment of their former mentor.)

The band signed with RCA Records in 1981, and their debut LP (See Jungle! See Jungle!) revealed the Sacrifice You), "Sinner! Sinner! Sinner!" and "Golly! Golly! Go Buddy!"

1982's The Last of the Mohicans EP showcased Bowwowwow's first Stateside hit, a rock disco remake of the Strangeloves' 1965 smash, "I Want Candy." The subsequent LP, I Want Candy, included the nifty "Baby, Oh No," remakes of six songs previously recorded by the band, and the zoned-out "Cowboy" ("Give me a cow/give me a boy/give me a cowboy").

Never one to let a dead horse go unflogged, the ousted McLaren (and Harvest Records, the band's first label) capped off the year by releasing 12 Original Recordings, which was made up of material culled from Your Cassette Pet and various early singles.

BOWWOWWOW IS CURRENTLY on tour to support their soon-to-be-released third LP, When The Going Gets Tough, The Tough Get Going. Additionally, they will make their feature film debut (as themselves) in the recently-completed Scandalous with Sir John Gielgud.

The group's "live" shows have drawn rave notices from England to Japan. To quote the Village Voice's Robert Christgau: "Those who think the records clumsy should know that the shows are intense and endearing. Those who don't will be there anyway."

The opening act will be the Killer Bees, a highly touted reggae band out of Shreveport, Louisiana.

The Bowwowwow show is entirely sold out — tickets will not be available at the door. The main room will be opened for admission at 8 p.m.; the Killer Bees will start around 9 and then all hell should break loose. Have fun, campers.

Pigs will dive despite delay, promoter vows

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Three pigs scheduled to take a 4,000-foot plunge in a controversial sky diving act never got off the ground Sunday because the clouds were too low for parachuting.

But the show's promoter vowed the pigs would make the dive later, despite threats of legal action from humane society officials who monitored Sunday's event.

"I'm going to jump the pigs.

Period," said promoter Walter Sill of Nashville, Tenn. "I want to get this thing in a courtroom."

About a dozen humane society supporters carried signs in a peaceful protest outside the Central Florida Fairgrounds, where several hundred people attended "The Great American Pig-Out" outdoor music festival.

Humane society officials said they were prepared to file criminal charges against Sill if the pigs took the plunge.

Four veterinarians and an assistant state's attorney were at the festival, said Mark Paulhus, regional director of the Humane Society of the United States. The charges would have been filed through the state's attorney, who would decide if they were warranted.

The 12-pound pigs — Ralph, Betty and Mabel — were supposed to take the dive strapped to three sky divers. Ralph, who was shown to the press, was dressed in a sweater, scarf, helmet and goggles in preparation for the dive.

Last weekend, Sill canceled another pig jump in St. Petersburg under threat of legal action by local humane groups.
