Armstrong's decides against store here

By Karen Herzog

Because of a costly investment in another store in Dubuque, Armstrong's has pulled out of preferred developer status in the construction of a new downtown store in Iowa City.

"By request of our bankers, we are making no capital commitments for at least one year,' Armstrong's President Allan Peremsky wrote in a letter to Iowa City Manager Neal Berlin.

Although members of the Iowa City Council were not surprised by Armstrong's decision, some were disturbed by the reasoning behind the pull out.

News of the Dubuque purchase last November upset some councilors because, they felt, the store's primary obligation was to Iowa City, where the company had already bid on the downtown project.

"They gave no indication they were actively seeking to locate elsewhere," Councilor John Balmer said. "We were led to believe they were pursuing Iowa City as the No. 1 priority to

While Balmer said he had heard rumors of the purchase, Armstrong's representatives did not notify councilors to tell them of the plans for a store in Dubuque until Armstrong's had already been selected as the preferred developer of the Iowa City site.

"THAT DIDN'T HELP." Balmer said. referring to the abrupt announcement that Armstrong's had other interests. "We put in a lot of time negotiating the purchase, making Iowa City look attractive to them."

But as time dragged on and Armstrong's representatives informed the council they were See Armstrongs, page 6

Dakin's neighbors also were upset about the overnight changes made in their neighborhood, located near City Park. "Does it matter if we're all up in arms about this?" one resident asked the council.

The consensus seemed to be that no one wants two new buildings of condominiums in the Manville Heights area.

"I know it's very frustrating," Mayor Mary Neuhauser said. A "trade-off" may have to be made: building new apartments in order to carry out the goals of the city's comprehensive plan, she said.

RESIDENTS CERTAINLY don't want their neighborhood to change while they sleep. Sunday night's destruction party at the house on Ellis Street was illegal, because the permit had not been issued until Monday.

A fee double that of the permit is the punishment, City Manager Neal Berlin said. "You can't force them to put back the See Council, page 6

Passage of hospital bonding bill pushed

The addition of five more floors to the inpatient tower of the UI Hospitals may become reality sooner than expected, if state legislators can push a bonding approval bill through both houses this week.

"There's a feeling that it needs to be done quickly," state Rep. Michael Connolly, D-Dubuque, said Monday.

Connolly, who chairs the House subcommittee working on the bill, said, "The way the market is now, that could save a million to a million and a half in the letting of bids.'

But Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said the argency with which the bill is being run through committees is raising eyebrows.

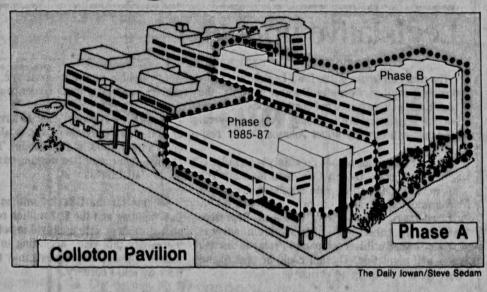

"Anytime a bill tries to go through like greased lightning, you get suspicious," she because it came so soon. I've never heard so many questions. They (the subcommittee) didn't even have material for us today." Dennis Nagel, director of state relations for the state Board of Regents, said the bill could be debated upon by both houses as early as IF THE BONDING request is approved this week, construction of the $24 million Colloton Pavilion Phase B could begin by mid-March, Nagel said. There is a 45-day waiting period after bids are let before work can begin.

The addition, to be built on top of Colloton Pavilion Phase A, would replace 140 beds in the UI Hospital complex that no longer conform to modern-day code requirements.

Rusty Martin's much-publicized draft nonregistration case took yet another curious twist when the U.S. Justice Department used information taken from his Freedom of Information Act request to register him.

According to a national agency that advises on the uses and abuses of the act, Martin, president of the University of of Northern Iowa's student government, filed an FOIA request to see a file containing information about him gathered by the FBI.

But when he filed the request, he was forced to provide information verifying his identity. Martin said he had no idea this information would in turn be used to fill out a Selective Service form, constructively registering him for

The sequence of events began with his Aug. 1981 request to the FBI, which was answered by "a standard letter saying 'we don't have enough information to know who you are, send us the names of everyone you've been associated with since 1975 and all the activities you've been involved in,' " Martin said.

"I DIDN'T WANT to give them a file to get a file," he said.

Because of the confidentiality surrounding the FBI's compiled information, "if a person wants their file, it doesn't mean they'll get their file," said Doug Hokenstad, principal legal investigator in the Omaha office of the

But apparently all James H. Reynolds, then-U.S. District Attorney in Cedar Rapids, needed to register Martin without his cooperation was his address and Social Security number, which he garnered from the FOIA request.

Martin sent a letter to the Selective Service asking his constructive registration for the draft be considered void.

"His is the first and only example we have ever heard of before or since," said Diana Autin, executive director of the Fund for Open Information and Accountability. "The FOIA (Freedom of Information Act) is not supposed to be used to set up a special file or to penalize

OPEC meeting collapses

GENEVA, Switzerland - OPEC's emergency meeting to set production and pricing policies collapsed without agreement Monday, but oil ministers considered calling

The African producers refused, saying they could not be expected to raise prices in face of declining markets.

In a story called "Wastewater plant funds uncertain" (DI, Jan. 23), it was incorrectly reported that David Perret supports a "Cadillac plan" for lowa City's wastewater treatment facility because Des Moines has received funds for such a plant. Actually, Perret opposes this type of plant for either city, but believes Iowa City and Des Moines are similar in that both cities are through with the planning stages of plant development.

Also, due to incorrect information listed on a police document, it was incorrectly reported that a complaint was received that the Sigma Chi fraternity was throwing snowballs across the street. Actually, the fraternity at the address is Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Also, due to a production error, headlines on two stories about the weekend's abortion rallies were transposed.

Branstad fends off critics of state budget proposals

DES MOINES (UPI) - Gov. Terry Branstad, defending his proposed budget from criticism by Republicans, said Monday anyone who analyzes state finances will understand why he wants to in-

Last week, Branstad asked the Iowa Legislature to approve a 1-cent sales tax increase as well as boosts in the state's minimum income tax and motor use

The governor's fellow Republicans voiced the loudest objections to his plans. They want to reduce the overall state budget as much as possible before considering a tax increase.

"I share that basic philosophy," Branstad said at a news conference. "I think after they have had a chance to analyze and review the entire budget, they'll see what we're faced with. They don't know what we went through the last six weeks in preparing this budget. We really had no other choice.

THE GOVERNOR also defended a plan by the state Board of Regents to issue $83 million in bonds next year to build four new buildings at the three

Branstad said there was no comparison between the regents' bonding and a proposal by Democratic gubernatorial candidate Roxanne Conlin to issue $300 million in bonds to rebuild the state's highways and Branstad had sharply criticized that plandas "mortgaging the state's future," but he said the regents' bonds are of a different type.

from fees and tuition at the universities and not from general tax revenues.

"I prefer to avoid bonding if possible, and I'm oposed to general obligation bonds like she proposed,"

The building program is part of Branstad's plan to increase employment in the state. He said 2,500 people will be put to work building a new hospital and law school at the UI, a new agronomy building at Iowa State University and a classroom addition at the University of Northern Iowa.

ALTHOUGH THERE is no guarantee Iowa firms will be the lowest bidders, Branstad said he expects "a vast majority" of the workers on the projects will be Iowans.

• Urged the legislature to pass state Comptroller Ronald Mosher's accounting changes, which he said the state needs to balance the fiscal 1983 budget this June. Democrats are opposed to many of the changes, but Branstad said he expects they eventually will approve them.

 Said he wants to begin the sales tax increase by April 1 to raise $38 million for the state by June 30. That money will be used to improve cash flow so the state can pay its school aid on time, Branstad said.

• Refused to comment specifically on the Iowa House granting a $9,000 pay raise to its chief clerk. He referred to his past opposition to large pay increases, but said he is reluctant to comment on the legislature's internal business.

State argues sales tax hike

DES MOINES (UPI) — Passage of Governor tax measure through the legislature, Palmer said it Terry Branstad's 1-cent sales tax hike is almost a could be delayed a month or two while lawmakers certainty, legislative leaders said Monday, but approval may not come in time to meet the governor's proposed April 1 deadline.

Branstad wants the tax increase early in order to build a $38 million reserve in the treasury by June 30. The governor said the cushion is needed to improve Iowa's cash flow so the state can pay its school aid and other bills on time.

But Sen. William Palmer, D-Des Moines, said April 1 may be too soon to expect a sales tax hike to take effect.

House speaker Don Avenson, D-Oelwein, says the tax hike bill must be approved by the Iowa Legislature in early March to take effect April 1. House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said her committee will be able to make the deadline.

However, Palmer said he does not expect to get the tax hike bill from the House until March and his committee will go slowly in passing the bill.

THERE IS GROWING concern, Palmer said, that the state is following the federal government in creating a large long-term debt. Instead of rushing a pause to examine the state's financial structure. He acknowledged that each month's delay in the tax hike would cost the state treasury about $13 Partisan bickering broke out over the tax increase on the Senate floor Monday between Minority Leader

Calvin Hultman, R-Red Oak, and Majority Leader Lowell Junkins, D-Montrose. Hultman pressed Junkins to reveal a timetable for the sales tax bill, but Junkins said he was still working out support for the measure within his own party.

He said the tax increase might need Republican sup-

Palmer, in an interview, said he thinks there will be 15 Republicans, in addition to most Democrats, voting for the tax hike in the Senate.

Republicans said Monday they may try to attach amendments to the sales tax bill calling for exemptions on heavy machinery and utility bills, as well as an expiration or "sunset" date. "If they don't like those amendments, then let them pass the tax increase and we can blame the Democrats," said Senate Minority Leader Edgar Holden, R-Davenport.

Legislative update

The first two weeks of the Iowa Legislature's session are, in Rep. Minnette Doderer's words, the 'pomp and circumstance" of congressional activity. But the legislators are beginning work on several bills that will directly affect Johnson County resi-

"One of our major bills is the utility reform bill," Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said Monday. The bill would change utility rate regulation, requiring government approval before prices could be hiked. Lloyd-Jones said the Iowa House of Representatives will meet with officials from several investor-owned utilities companies Friday to discuss rates and regulation. The bill could be sent to the

The "Belt Somebody" slogans have caught the eye of some Iowa lawmakers who would like to require child safety seats in automobiles. Lloyd-Jones will chair the subcommittee working on that bill. A hearing is slated for Jan. 31.

Bonding for the UI's $24 million new College of Law building and the $1.7 million remodeling is expected to meet with approval in both the house and the senate this year, according to local representatives. The bonding requests may reach the senate floor by mid-February.

Three study abroad with grants

By Kristine Stemper

Two UI professors and a graduate student recently received Fulbright Scholarships, which are awarded to scholars allowing them to travel around the world to study, teach and increase awareness about other cultures and languages.

Peter G. Snow, UI professor of political science, Leopold LaFosse, UI professor of music, and Ioanna Deligiorgis, UI teaching assistant in linguistics, received grants that will allow them to work in various parts of the world. Peter G. Snow, UI professor of political science, also received a grant to study abroad.

Snow spent last February and March in Argentina where he studied the process of judicial recruitment. He left Argentina four days before the inva-

The Argentine government felt that they had been "negotiating for 149 years" with Britian over ownership of the islands, and no progress had been made so an invasion took place.

"The islands are worthless in most respects," Snow said. They are mainly used for raising sheep, fishing and collecting some oil. "THE ARGENTINES feel that the British stole those islands one-and-a-half centuries ago ... it's of tremendous psychological importance. The whole issue was psychological."

"The Argentines haven't changed their position at all" since the invasion, he said. "They still say the islands are

Snow was granted a three-month stay but left early because his research had been completed. Had he known the invasion was about to take place he would have staved another month.

LaFosse, who recently left for Brazil, will spend the semester teaching violin and chamber music to students at the University of Mines Gerais in Belo Horisonte.

He will also be involved in conducting a workshop for the youth symphony orchestra. LaFosse's degree is in violin pedagogy.

Deligiorgis will spend next semester and the following summer in Rumania where she will be working as a senior researcher making translations of two contemporary Rumanian novels.

SHE IS A RECENT candidate for a master's degree in linguistics, having taken her exams before leaving the United States. During her stay in Rumania she will also be conducting research on Rumanian linguistics.

The Fulbright Scholarship was developed after World War II because the United States wanted "to increase awareness about other cultures and languages," according to Joseph Brisben, UI associate director of public information.

The International Communication Agency, a government organization, provides grants to those involved in lecturing, advanced research, graduate study and teaching, he said.

Scholars must apply for the grant and provide recommendations from professionals in their field of study.

The Fulbright Scholarship is named after J. William Fulbright, a retired United States senator from Arkansas.

In 1981 the UI Hospitals were accredited for a one-year period and last July nine recommendations were made during an interim inspection of the physical plant only. In 1980, a Joint Commission team made 88 recommendations for improvements - most of which dealt with fire and safety codes.

Beck said a recently-completed project to install fire doors in older sections of the hospital will greatly improve code compliance.

Art advocate Allen dies; local memorial created

By Suzanne Johnson

Local artist and photographer Benita E. Allen, 71, a staunch supporter of the arts for 25 years, died at home Saturday after a lengthy

A memorial service will be held at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at the George L. Gay Funeral Home, 2720 Muscatine Ave., with Rev. Roy Wingate of Gloria Dei Lutheran Church officiating. Allen's body has been cremated, and a memorial fund has been established at the Iowa City Hospice, Inc., 500 Market St. Allen, who was born Oct. 14, 1911, in St. Petersburg, Russia, was a British citizen. She acquired her degree in music from London University, and was an actress in the British theater while she lived in England.

From 1954 to 1964, Allen, who came to the United States in 1949. worked as a secretary in the UI Art Department. She worked with the Johnson County Arts Council, and taught a painting class at the Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St., after it opened in Sept. 1981. Allen was forced to stop teaching when she became ill last spring, said Lori Benz, program specialist for the Iowa City," Benz said. In addition to her painting class, Allen coordinated art exhibits at the center, and placed her own work on display. "Her last exhibit here would have been last spring." The last art exhibit included paintings her class had done in addition to her own watercolors.

A large number of Allen's photographs were shown at the Johnson County Arts Council and at the Older Americans Day Fair

Allen was the site manager for the Congregate Meals Program at the First United Methodist Church, until the program was transferred to the Senior Center, where she continued to volunteer her time.

The local artist also taught photography through Kirkwood Community College and participated in the Johnson County Council on Aging. For several years, Allen served as the photographer for the Iowa City Community Theater.

Allen is survived by her husband Arthur, of Route 6; her sons, David Heal, of Iowa City, and Collin M. Heal, of Crystal Lake, Ill.; a daughter, Alethea Ferguson, of Newton, Kan.; eight grandchildren; one great grandchild and her brother Robert Broadbent, who lives in Sault Ste. Marie, Canada.

Step toward safety

It is reassuring to know that the state Board of Regents is concerned with the health and safety of the UI's faculty, staff and students — the regents have just approved $102,500 in funds to create an Office of Occupational Health Services whose function is to monitor existing and potential health problems on campus.

The UI has a moral responsibility to protect the well-being of its workers and students. This includes everyone - scientists and technicians who handle radioactive materials, secretaries and administrative assistants who pore over computer terminals, and faculty and students who may suffer the effects of daily exposure to toxic substances used in lab experiments and building construction. In many of these instances an interested observer could find safety lapses occurring almost daily on campus, whether it be a microbiology professor cleaning up low level radiation with bare hands and a sponge or an overloaded typist suffering from migraines after too much work at the word

Up till now there seemed little one could do to prevent these abuses. In fact many of the problems seemed built into the system because of the lack of resources plaguing numerous departments. It is good to know the Board of Regents and the UI are working to remedy this situation, and it is to be hoped that the whole UI community will cooperate. The creation of the new health office is a needed step towards a safer work environment for everyone.

Rethink weed control

Should the Johnson County Board of Supervisors renew its weed control contract with the company that has been spraying county roadsides for the last three years? This question, scheduled to be taken up by the board this week, raises the more relevant issue of whether the county should proceed with essentially the same weed control program, based heavily on spraying ditches with acidbased herbicide, or modify the program to eliminate unnecessary use of the poison.

First, one provision of the contract should be changed if spraying is continued (as seems probable): The company that does the spraying, Binns and Stevens of Oskaloosa, should not be paid per pound of herbicide used, but by some other measure such as per mile of roadway treated. There is no reason to encourage the company to apply heavy doses of the chemical weed killer simply to maximize profits.

But just as important, the board should consider a more balanced approach to weed control along county roads. A program incorporating light spraying of weeds where needed with mowing and hand cutting of the ditches in other areas would be both more economical and environmentally sound. For even though the chemicals being used -2,4-D and 2,4-DP - are considered low in toxicity, toxic they are and their use should be limited wherever

Unfortunately, there is little incentive for the board to give more weight to environmental concerns in its deliberations. For while it must consider the interests of farmers and hay fever sufferers, who hate weeds, and its mandated responsibility under the Iowa Weed Law to control noxious weeds, there are few to argue against spraying and nothing in the law to compel its judicious use as long as the chemicals involved are legal.

Nevertheless, the board should take this opportunity to preserve such environmental integrity as still remains in Johnson County by modifying its weed control program.

Taxing consumption

The latest tax "reform" scheme run up the flag pole by the Reagan administration is a so-called consumption tax. The rationale for such a tax is that the United States, by allowing taxpayers to deduct things like interest payments on loans and by taxing things like interest earned on savings accounts, encourages consumption and penalizes saving — saving that could be used to finance such things as plant expansion and modernization.

There is a lovely but deceptive symmetry to such a plan. It is true that the rate of saving is much lower in this country as compared, for example, with Japan. It is true that increased saving would provide increased capital to finance economic growth. But, like all of the Reagan administration's tax proposals, this newest offering provides caviar for the rich and dog food, if that, for the poor.

What it would mean is that a comfortable couple, who can save $5,000 of their $25,000 income, would be taxed only on the $20,000 they spent. But a poor couple, with four children who spent all of their $25,000 income on luxuries like food, braces, clothing and housing would be taxed on all of their income. And the rich, who can save even more of their income and who get many things like cars and expense accounts as company perks, would fare even

One other group might benefit: those who are getting CARE packages from West Germany. But it is not clear how many more people Joe Zedler and the five other West Germans who sent the 11 packages to nine Detroit families can support. But perhaps enough people in Europe and Japan can be persuaded to join Joe and his friends - possibly CARE packages would not be considered taxable income and their consumption would therefore not be taxed.

Superfund is only the beginning

knows that Times Beach was a disaster waiting to happen. But the question remains whether the federal government will be able to prevent the recurrence of such a fiasco.

Times Beach, a once-unremarkable trailer park town along Missouri's Meramec River, has earned a berth in the American conscience, just downstream from Love Canal. Last month's severe flooding spread deadly dioxins from stables and roadsides in Times Beach to neighborhood backyards, leaving residents with not only fear of the invisible but also uncertain futures. Discoveries of dioxins in nearby Imperial, Mo., and affluent Frontenac, as well as allegations of contamination at possibly 100 other sites, have made many Americans suddenly aware of the impartial nature of toxic pollution.

Even its congressional critics acknowledge that Anne Gorsuch's Environmental Protection Agency has been reasonably responsive to the needs of Missouri's victims. The agency has set aside $500,000 for preliminary cleanup of the Imperial site, and another half-million dollars for medical screenings to be conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and the Missouri state government. (In all, the EPA has allocated $2 million of its two-year-old, $1.6 billion Superfund to the Missouri disaster, with $1 million going to soil testing at Times Beach and Imperial.) Missouri congressmen claim that the agency has also been attentive to their requests.

YET PROCRASTINATION will probably remain the chief theory of toxic disposal enforcement for some time. With as many as 30,000 hazardous waste sites festering throughout the United States, only those that are exacerbated by crisis - like a flood may receive prompt and badly-needed attention. Missouri's dioxin dilemma, after all, has been a source of controversy for almost a decade.

Last September, for example, the

Glen & Shearer

U.S. Public Health Service and EPA regional officials concurred on the need for immediate action at two Missouri sites. Seven-year-old warnings from the Centers for Disease Control notwithstanding, EPA headquarters ostponed testing until November. Similarly, final tests were begun at two Imperial sites in late November — but only after Michigan Democrat John Dingell's House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations chastised the EPA for ignoring preliminary evidence of high dioxin contamination in soil samples

Indeed, as Dingell's panel concluded in a recent report, toxic waste law enforcement has fallen far short of congressional intentions for the Superfund, which was to rely in part on fines against "source" industries. Hindered partly by repeated staff reorganizations, Gorsuch's "voluntary compliance" program has led to a disturbingly low number of prosecution referrals to the Justice Department.

THE IMPLICATIONS of this negligence alone should be apparent: If the $2 million expenditure for several Missouri sites thus far indicates the potentially exorbitant cost of a cleanup, the EPA may not be able to address even its 418 designated sites, let alone thousands of others that need attention. But some Gorsuch critics worry as well that highly political "top priority" cases such as Missouri may strap other important EPA divisions. State natural resources chief Fred A. Lafser told The New York Times that the EPA has 'practically dismantled" its pesticide enforcement programs in some states to bolster investigations in Missouri. 'Even if you only have 1 percent of your resources left, you'd probably try to deal with this," said William Drayton, a former federal environmental official who heads "Save EPA" in Washington. "To do that, whatever remains of other priorities are stripped For her part, Gorsuch has maintained that a "streamlined" EPA can meet Congress' original 1970 mandate for the agency. She could also say that the excessive staff turnover and reorganization of 1981 has slowed dur-

Is Bible both factual and inspired?

By Tom M. Miller

N A RECENT Guest Opinion, Roger Mills held that the Bible is divinely inspired but not factual (DI, Jan. 18). In particular, he believed that the Bible does not provide exact historical accounts. In that I believe the Bible to be both inspired by God (2 Timothy 3:16) and factual (Matthew 5:18), I would like to respond to his position.

Throughout the article, Mills 'assumes," "guesses," "supposes" and "suggests." Yet he is bold enough to state that the Bible is "at times inconsistent." Could it be, in the midst of his assertions, that he might be incon-

For example, he assumes that the first five books of the Bible were not written until the "8th century B.C." Certainly not all historical-critical scholars hold to such a late date. Neither do they all believe that four different authors wrote the Pentateuch. Many scholars beleive that Moses alone wrote the Pentateuch.

These scholars include John Whitcomb (Th.D, Grace Theological Seminary), Henry Morris (Ph.D, University of Minnesota), John Klotz (Ph.D in biology, University of Pittsburgh, now professor of science at Concordia College and church pastor in Illinois), Paul Zimmerman (Ph.D in chemistry, University of Illinois) and R. McCone (Ph.D in anthropology and sociology, Michigan State University). Many more could be listed.

LIKE SPINOZA, they also believe one should know biblical Hebrew and learn as much as possible about the culture that existed during the biblical period. I might add that Jesus knew Hebrew and the culture; he also believed that Moses wrote the Pentateuch (Matt. 19:7; 22:24; Luke 20:37; John 1:17; 3:14; 9:29).

In answer to the supposition of two different creation accounts, a concise response could simply be that Genesis II is a recapitulation of Genesis I. Wellwritten literature often recapitulates; it is no surprise, therefore, that Moses would use such a style of writing. On the surface they seem to differ, but in reality they are complementary.

Chapter One portrays the totality of creation and reveals God as a transcendal being; Chapter Two captivates the heart with its details, addressing itself more to the feelings than to the intellect of the reader.

Also, in order for a work such as the Bible to be historical and factual, Mills seems to suppose that it must be exhaustive. Historical accounts are seldom exhaustive. Likewise, Moses was not exhaustive; he was selective. For instance, from where did Cain's wife come? Simple: she descended from Adam and Eve.

Is it impossible for God to perform a miracle? How absurd for finite man, with such a limited reference point, to presuppose that miracles cannot oc-

I BELIEVE THE original manuscripts were God-breathed and therefore true, even in the areas of history, science, psychology and so on. Christianity does claim an external verification through evidence, but it also claims an internal witness through God. Because I can believe the Bible externally, I can also believe the Bible when it tells me how I can solve the internal problems of sin, guilt and death.

Many people believe the Bible is great literature, but that it was never breathed by God. But if the Bible is not the word of God, can we realistically call it great literature? After all, the Bible cliams to be the word of God more than 3,000 times; and if it is anything less, then we have been lied to more than 3,000 times. That is not very

Similarly, many people believe that Jesus was a great man but not God. But if Jesus was not all he claimed to be, can we realistically call him a great man? We are faced with a decision: Either Jesus was a liar or a

Misconstrued To the editor:

Liz Bird's editorial shows she doesn't understand the pro-life movement (DI, Jan. 19). She makes several inaccurate or unfair statements about it.

First, Bird says pro-lifers are a tiny minority. The fact is that antiabortionists are a majority. A 1980 CBS poll showed that 50 percent of Americans support a pro-life constitutional amendment, with 39 percent opposed. KGAN-2 of Cedar Rapids recently conducted a poll on the Supreme Court's pro-abortion decision. Of 2,500 callers, 58 percent opposed it. Bird's claim reflects polls that don't distinguish between support for abortion in some cases and support for the abortion-on-demand mandated by the Supreme Court.

Second, Bird misconstrues prolifers' use of terms. "Pro-abortion" simply means "in favor of permitting abortion." Pro-lifers use "proabortion" because "pro-choice" doesn't indicate what this moral choice

Third, does Bird really not see the

The report said key programs such as employment and training, community services, Centers for Disease Control and economic development have been cut by more than 50 percent.

It said losses in federal aid have grown every year and by 1985, if current spending continues, federal assistance to states will fall to a level below that set by the Great Society programs of President Johnson.

Leyden said nutrition programs were cut most severely in the South, and highway programs were slashed most deeply in the Western regions.

Overall, hit hardest by the budget cuts was the Middle Atlantic region. New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania had the highest reductions in six of 35 federal aid programs to state and local governments.

DAKIN SAID he is concerned that the city is "turning what is a very beautiful residential area into apartments. It seems they're changing the character of Manville Heights."

Residents said Monday night they want to challenge the building permits issued for the two condominiums. They also want a moratorium placed on the neighborhood which would restrict the issuance of any building permits to within the current density zoning.

ACCORDING TO U.S. Attorney Robert L. Teig in Cedar Rapids who has handled Martin's case, the FOIA wasn't used to gather information for the investigation into Martin's case. It was simply used to register him without his consent. Such constructive registration was dis-intended by the Justice Department to help avoid "complicated political trials" and still "take the soap box out from underneath" the very vocal non-registrants.

Local 'Carmen' appearance reflects opera tour trend

Is opera burning?

Fact One: Seats at the Metropolitan Opera in New York run from $17 to $52. Standees can sample the mixed pleasures of leg cramps and Andrea Chenier for $10. Behold the merchant princes ..

Fact Two: In 1982 there were 11 world premieres, including five in this country, of thoroughly modern operas. None of them, needless to say, were at the big-time triumvirate: the Met, the Lyric Opera in Chicago or the San Francisco Opera.

Fact Three: There are more regional opera houses (the Des Moines Metro Opera, the Tulsa Opera, Portland Opera Theatre) in existence now than at any other time in American history.

Fact Four: The larger houses have training companies (San Francisco's Western Opera, the Lyric's Chicago Civic Opera) that tour as-yet unbaptized portions of the country with reduced forces and less experienced singers. Prognosis: Not yet, but I

All the foregoing serves as background to introducing the New York City Opera's training/touring group, the NYCO National Company, to Iowa City. They will perform Bizet's perennial favorite, Carmen, at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Hancher

THE NATIONAL COMPANY cast includes Melanie Sonnenberg as La Sultriness, Aaron Bergell as the heroic-but-suggestible Don Jose, Candace Goetz as that paragon of home-spun virtue, Micaela, and Carlos Chausson as the GQ-prototype bullfighter

During a telephone chat with Sonnenberg, the main topic of conversation was the future of opera in the U.S. "Regional opera is the way I see the trend going," she said. New singers are given chances; new operas are heard (more than once, even); a loyal audience can be — and often is — established; costs are kept down to the barely tolerable level. And the big-namers? "People will always pay to

THOSE ADJUSTMENTS range from personal gesture to technical effect. "The acting style changes as the hall gets larger," Sonnenberg said. "And the different technicians in each hall aren't familiar with the show — follow-spots on the chorus instead of the tenor, that sort of thing.'

Carmen is double-cast for the tour, with different singers each night, to alleviate some of the strain on vocal cords and tempers. The casts, according to Sonnenberg, are " ... quite a mixture, from pros with big-house credentials to real beginners for whom this is the professional debut. The interaction is really exciting.

The lamentable thing is the torpor of the repertoire - the National unfortunately doesn't take any of its parent company's adventurousness on the road with it. "The audiences decide what we tour with," Sonnenberg said. Great. Arbitronitis hits high culture (Arbitron being a computerized rating scale radio and TV stations use to determine audience

WHICH LEADS US back to the future of opera: If all these regional companies are going to give us umpteen Carmens and Traviatas, aren't they merely prolonging the death rattle of the genre?

Certainly, the positive aspects of having a truly indigenous operatic "farm system" to groom singers, conductors and (hopefully) composers far outweigh the negative. But the chance of reviving neglected works and sponsoring new ones seems too good to pass up, and if the major houses, either directly or through their junior partners, don't set the agenda for the country, audiences ignorant of the operatic catalogue beyond the chestnuts will remain that

So, Carmen Wednesday night. Bring your hankies but leave the pic at home.

Burton's distinct jazz formula contributes to spirited album

By Alex Wilding-White

In the world of music reviewing, some artists have a knack for making a life difficult for your average critic-about-town. Presenting neither radical new ideas nor tried-and-true commercial formulas, and offering nothing that stands out and screams for attention, these musicians can cause critics to grind down dozens of pencils trying to convey their merits and/or faults.

Enter vibraphonist Gary Burton. While he may not be remembered as an "outstanding figure" in jazz, he has nevertheless carved out a distinct style, at once individual but solidly grounded in the idioms of post-World War II jazz. Meticulous in his craft, spirited in his playing and tasteful to the end, Burton is at the very least a shining example of how to do it

With this in mind, Burton's new album Picture This - his first with his quartet (now consisting of Burton, bassist Steve Swallow, drummer Mike Hyman and saxophonist Jim Odgren) since the 1978 Times Square — should come as no surprise to his fans. All the components of Burton's style are much in evidence here, and Picture This is but another excursion through those stylistics as it explores a variety of moods and themes from one track to the Picture This differs from Times Square only in its emphasis on a more spacious approach to the arrangements - the hard bop overtones of the previous album have for the most part been shelved.

"TANGLEWOOD '63" starts Picture This off in swinging fashion with its opening vibra-harp melody, smooth modulations and good saxophone counterpoint by Jim Odgren built on drawn out, reedy tones. Along with "Skylight" and his cover of Chick Corea's "Waltz," "Tanglewood" highlights Burton's chief assets: a clear, lucid tone; impeccable phrasing; and arrangements that leave plenty of room for the other members of the band to display their talents. This last is especially welcome in the case of saxman Odgren. While he doesn't possess a great range of talent, what Odgren does know he uses well: His tone is full enough to round out Burton's arrange-well, too. His "Tierra Del Fuego," is, as the name suggests, a good romp through salsa-flavored jazz. It, along with the aforementioned "Skylight," also by Odgren, are the album's only two originals, as covers allow a musician like Burton more room to move as a stylist.

It is on the ballads in particular that Burton shows his real worth. Carla Bley's evocative "Dreams So Real" is given the full, sumptuous sound it was intended to have - the quartet's economical interplay is true to the spirit of the song. This intelligent use of space is similarly commendable on the Charlie Mingus tune "Duke Ellington's Sound of Love."

OVERALL, Picture This is a fine addition to Burton's distinguished discography, but it is not without its problems. Mike Hyman is a promising young drummer who provides a solid percussive backbone to the selections here, but his patterns become erratic in places, especially during his solo spots in 'Tierra Del Fuego.

Steve Swallow's choice of electric bass also poses problems. Swallow's linear sensibility complements Burton's playing well, but he tries too hard to play lines more suited for an acoustic bass. The result is a thin and sometimes distorted sound that seems out of place on several tracks ("Tanglewood '63" in par-

Drug use a concern to college recruiters

CHICAGO (UPI) - The recruiting of high school football players has intensified in recent years because of the increased competitive nature of college football and the effect the sport has on an athletic program's financial health.

While recruiting has become more competitive, the recent disclosures of drug abuse by pro athletes has some Big Ten coaches warning that more intense interviewing of prospective athletes must be done.

The coaches, who face a national letter of intent signing date of Feb. 9 this year, said more selective recruiting may occur because they want to ensure they are signing players who do not have a background in drug usage.

ILLINOIS COACH Mike White said coaches today are more careful than ever before to try to recruit athletes who meet academic requirements.

"I guess we also are going to have to do our job in checking out an individual's character more than ever. It's a difficult thing, some times you can't detect when someone has been involved with drugs," White said. "I can tell you this. Coaches go have the players with the talent but want to go after those with the proper character.'

Former Indiana Coach Lee Corso, fired in December by the school, said he has always tried to land players who have strong personalities and aren't involved with drugs. He indicated coaches cannot always be "100 percent positive" of someone's background but can do as much as possible to tell a potential recruit they won't tolerate

"I CAN TELL you this. There was a player not so long ago that I went after. He had all the talent in the world but had a potential problem along those lines," Corso said. "We backed off and didn't get that player. He went elsewhere. I can tell you that now he isn't playing for that institution."

Corso added that drug rehabilitation is a "fine thing" but the main duty is to stop it before it becomes a problem."If you go out and recruit and look the other way, you are not only hurting the young man you are trying to get to come to your school," Corso warned, "but you are affecting others on the team. I go out and talk to high school coaches, counselors, anyone I can find at a school, to tell me about a particular young man. It's worth it."

Because recruiting is such a competitive business, many times assistant coaches do most, if not all, of the legwork to try to sign a potential All-American.

CORSO SAID this is sometimes unavoidable but he has made sure at Indiana that he has met a studentathlete's family before any recruit signs a letter-of-intent.

"And I think that's done all over the Big Ten. You can hear things from coaches but they can't tell you what's inside of someone. They can say he isn't likely to be influenced by drugs but until you go and look the man in the eye, you are just relying on someone else's information," Corso said.

White recruited Dave Wilson out of a California junior college several years ago. Wilson went on to rewrite the record books at Illinois and was drafted by the New Orleans Saints.

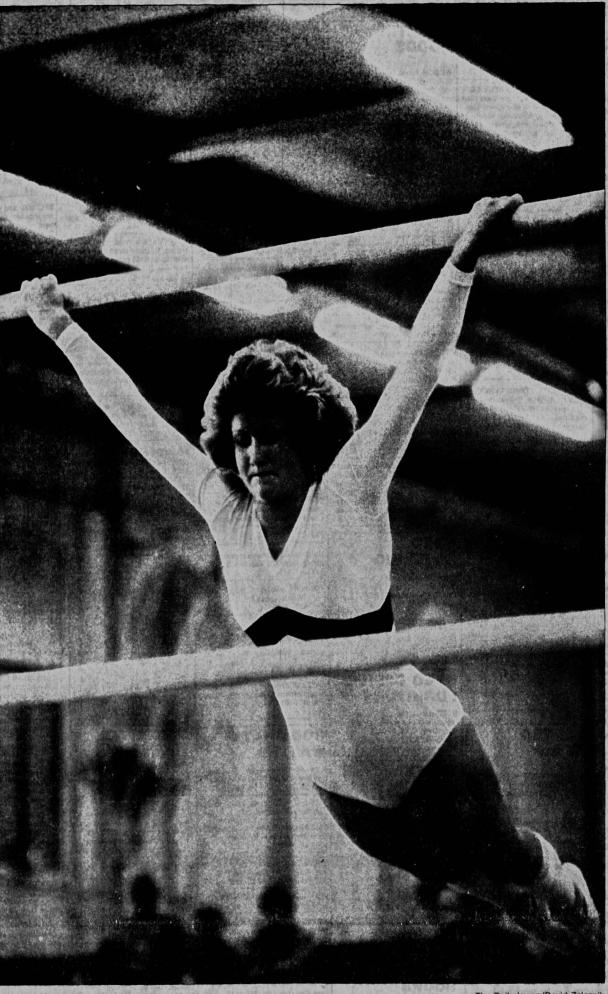

WILSON WAS the subject of published reports of drug usage while with the Saints but White denied Wilson used any drugs at Illinois.

"He didn't use any drugs to my knowledge," White said. "What you have to realize is the tremendous peer influence that goes on in sports. You can tell a player over and over again about it but in the long run he has to make up his own mind.'

Northwestern Coach Dennis Green said coaches who make it clear while they are recruiting of their standards and policies are more certain to avoid any problems.

"You may lose that blue chip prospect but you want players who are willing to work hard with a clear head, at least that's what we are doing at Northwestern," Green said.

Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said the league has been a forerunner in drug education for all sports, not just football."We have had a special advisory commission set up before all of the publicized reports," Duke said. "Nothing is fool proof but the league presidents have felt that the better you educate and inform the less chance you have to encounter serious drug problems.'

NEW YORK (UPI) — UCLA gained six additional first place votes from last week and held onto the No. 1 spot for the second straight week Monday in the United Press International's Board of Coaches college basketball ratings.

Parallels abound in Super Bowl foes

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - The Miami Dolphins and the Washington Redskins are headed for the Super Bowl after emotional victories over bitter rivals last weekend. Now it remains to be seen which club can rekindle its competitive fires for Sunday's title game at

The Redskins made it to the Super Bowl for the second time in their history Saturday in an emotion-filled 31-17 upset of the Dallas Cowboys in the NFC title game.

RFK Stadium in Washington was in near-hysteria as the Redskins built a lead, saw it dwindle to just four points and then pulled away to win. Dallas had handed the Redskins their only defeat in the strike-shortened regular

JOHN RIGGINS RAN for 140 yards and two touchdowns to carry the Redskins past Dallas, which lost in the NFC title game for the third consecutive year.

Miami earned its fourth Super Bowl berth on Sunday, turning in a spectacular defensive effort in throttling the New York Jets, 14-0. Linebacker A.J. Duhe had a championship gamerecord three interceptions, setting up Miami's first touchdown and scoring the second from 35 yards out to spark the Dolphins' victory.

It was the third time that the Dolphins had beaten the Jets this season, the first time an NFL club has accomplished that feat since Green Bay defeated Baltimore three times in 1965. Miami, 2-1 in previous Super Bowls, defeated Washington 14-7 in Super Bowl VII in 1973.

REDSKINS QUARTERBACK Joe Theismann felt his team finally proved it was for real with Saturday's victory over the Cowboys.

"If we are a fluke, you can put the words 'NFC champion' right behind. We beat one of the best offenses in football," Theismann said.

Theismann is confident that Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs will rise to the challenge of matching wits with Dolphins Coach Don Shula.

"I'm sure coach Gibbs will study the They're hard to beat."

films and come up with some kind of game plan to be successful against their great defense," Theismann said. "Turnovers have been the key for both our clubs throughout the season and if you were going to parallel two teams one from the AFC and one from the NFC - you'd probably say the Miami Dolphins and Washington Redskins are the same kind of football teams."

"MIAMI HAS that excellent defense that is talented and has a good scheme," Gibbs said. "Their entire team has a toughness about them.

Still, Gibbs welcomes the chance to battle for a Super Bowl ring.

'Everyone wants a Super Bowl ring," he said. "The money goes quickly and you really never know what happens to it. But the pride and the memories are what will stay around. This is something that doesn't happen often, an opportunity many teams never get.'

Miami players felt they had something to prove against the Jets.

"THERE WAS A LOT of talk about us not being able to beat the Jets three times," Duhe said. "People were saying that it couldn't be done and that we were lucky when we beat them 20-19 here last month. We were really psyched for this game - we really wanted this one badly — and it's like a dream for it to happen to me the way it did.

"But now it's on to Pasadena for the Redskins. Washington is a great football team - they were just tremendous against Dallas on Saturday - and I look forward to playing against them. We're going to go out to Pasadena and meet them at the 50, shake hands and get it on - and may the best team

"I didn't get down on myself and that comes from what has been happening here. We pick ourselves up. We play as a team. This game was important and next week against Washington will even be more important."

"It seemed to me that we were all over the field against the Jets," said defensive back Gerald Small. 'Sometimes it looks like we had 20 guys out there. There was a lot of cheap stuff going on but we didn't go for it. They wanted to pick fights but we kept our minds on the game and that was the way to Pasadena. We couldn't let the Jets beat us. We were motivated.'
