Reagan asks freeze to reduce deficits

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan, warning that budget deficits are "certainly on the horizon," requested Congress to work with him in "very serious" efforts to cut the deficit. Reagan offered proposals to stem the budgetary growth, but added: "National security demands a strong military plus a strong economy.

Democrats offer own proposals

WASHINGTON UPI - Democrats, largely ignoring President Reagan's and the GOP's proposal for a special tax cut, held their own budget summit on Tuesday, urging a more serious approach to reducing the budget deficit.

Custodian arrested in raid guilty of drug possession

A U.S. custodian, arrested during one of Iowa's largest drug raids, was charged in the January 26 court hearing with being guilty of possession of marijuana Tuesday, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Livingston Morrow, Jr., of 60 Archer Lane, was one of 40 people arrested during the Jan. 26 undercover operation that led to the raids in six local homes.

During the search at Morrow's residence, which he shared with Carol Bartles, who was also charged with possession, police found two bags of green marijuana. The bags were determined to be marijuana.

Also in Johnson County District Court Tuesday, Iowa City woman who was the victim of a burglary and assault and was granted restitution from her husband.

Study: Iowans will lose millions in aid

Iowa is one of the least affected states - $10 million out of $540 million through 1984 as the result of Reagan administration efforts to cut two program grants, according to a study released by the National Security Affairs Department.

Although Iowa is one of the least affected states - possibly because of the state's unique advantages can work to your advantage.

Store loss shifts city priority to hotel

By Mark Leonard

Although completion of the development at the corner project was once the Iowa City Council's No. 1 priority, council members now say they're more concerned about another project: the hotel in the downtown area.

In October, when the preferred site for the downtown hotel was announced, members were concerned about the property's location. The site was taken up by an university property. But in January, when the preferred site for the hotel was announced, there was no university property in question.

The hotel in the downtown area will take the place of the Thistle Inn, which was renovated by the university. The hotel is expected to open in 1983.

Health premium plan considered

D. Jeff Hatten

With insurance claims against the county at an all-time high, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors is considering a proposal to renew health plan coverage for its employees.

L. Craig Dameron, director of the county Health Insurance program told the supervisors the current plan offer would expire in April, and "I think this would have a real impact on the group health insurance market for the employees to save some money, for limited financial services, providing them with a new program that offers the best available health needs, according to Dameron."

The county's insurance premiums have gone up food for the county over the past several months, and a report to the supervisors said "As a result of 4 percent increase in the cost of an insurance policy for the county's employees, the board is considering a new health plan that offers more comprehensive coverage at a lower cost."

UNDER CONSIDERATION are plans to provide coverage for the county's employees to continue to receive comprehensive medical care at a lower cost. The board of supervisors is scheduled to meet the first week of March to consider the proposal.

The county health department has had a proposal for the past two years that it could be improved if it were approved by the board. The proposal includes coverage for all employees at a lower cost.

The health department has had a review of the proposal for its employees for more than two years and it now appears as the current plan is not meeting the needs of the employees.

Dameron said the current plan is "too expensive" and that the proposed plan would provide better coverage at a lower cost.

The proposal includes coverage for all employees and it is expected the board will approve the plan in the next meeting. The proposal is expected to be approved by the board in the next meeting.

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) - Thanks of death, rage were heard among American Indians and their supporters in New Orleans Wednesday night as Indian tribes denounced a speech by James Watt, U.S. Interior Secretary, made earlier in the day before the National Congress of American Indians.

"This is the first time that the Indian people have been lied about by a public official," desperate one of the leaders of the Indian National Congress of American Indians.

Watt's speeches, his announced plan to cut back on the Indian reservation, and his failure to listen to the Indian people, have caused a great deal of distress among the leaders of the Indian National Congress of American Indians.

"We are not going to let this situation continue," said one leader. "We are going to fight back, and we are going to fight hard."
Students debate necessity of ERA in battle against sex discrimination

By Krysten Stumpf

Battle between conservatives and liberals in the U.S. has become a way of life. And today, two Iowa students told researchers that the struggle continues.

"It's amazing how the courts always seem to be on the side of the winners," said Linda Little, a U.S. student major and former high school debate captain.

"But, in the end, we've always managed to adapt," said Frank Hudson, a political science major. "We've always found a way to make it work."

A current employment issue is the debate over the Equal Rights Amendment, which currently has the backing of both liberal and conservative groups.

"We're trying to work it out," said Hudson. "But, in the end, we've always managed to adapt."
Abuse of power

In the 1980s and early 1990s it was common for draft resisters and those actively involved in the anti-Vietnam war movement to access FBI files on themselves and their political and personal activities. The bureau's purpose for keeping such files is unclear, although some political activists believe it was being used to track dissent and stifle political activity. There were no attempts to secretly release the files of anyone else. The files were destroyed after the war and the bureau stopped collecting information on draft resisters and political activists.

Unfortunately, some of these files have been lost or are yet to be found. The FBI destroyed a large amount of personal information, not only on anti-war activists, but also on their own agents and employees.

Central to these reforms was passage of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), which was later expanded to include the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and the National Security Agency (NSA). FOIA was passed to put the CIA out of the dark ages of espionage and to allow the public to know what was happening in the world.

PASSAGE OF THE AMENDMENTS TO THE FOIA

As a result, the amendments to the FOIA have been hailed as the biggest step forward in the history of American government. They were passed to allow the public to know what was happening in the world, and to ensure that the government is accountable to the people.

THERE IS A GAP BETWEEN WHAT THE AMENDMENTS PROMISE AND WHAT THEY DELIVER

There is a gap between what the FOIA promises and what it delivers. The government is not required to make the information public, and there are numerous exemptions that allow the government to keep information secret.

Jobless and health

Calls for a national health insurance program are usually greeted with cries of "tory socialism." But a new approach makes the case for such a program more convincing than ever. Roosevelt, president of the United Auto Workers, disclosed the House Committee on Education's subcommittee on health care reform had produced a draft proposal that could have been implemented in 1945. The proposal, drafted by a panel of experts, called for a national health insurance plan that would cover everyone.

The proposal was modeled on the British National Health Service, which has been in operation for over 60 years. The plan would have provided universal coverage, and would have been financed through a mandatory payroll tax.

The proposal was not acted upon, but it remains the benchmark for any future efforts to reform the American health care system.

Letters

Dear Editor,

I have been a fan of Craig Wright for a long time. He is a brilliant and visionary individual who has made significant contributions to the field of blockchain technology.

Wright was a key player in the early days of Bitcoin, and was one of the first to recognize the potential of blockchain technology beyond cryptocurrencies. He has been a vocal advocate for the adoption of blockchain technology in a wide range of industries, including supply chain management, healthcare, and finance.

I believe that Wright's work has been instrumental in advancing the field of blockchain technology, and that he deserves recognition for his contributions. I urge you to consider featuring Wright's work in your publication.

Sincerely,

Donald Johnson

Fry’s recruiting wish rings true

By Steve Patterson

As big as the recruiting weekend was, it pales compared to the excitement it will bring to the Big Ten schools.

"The recruiting weekend was huge," Iowa head coach Hayden Fry said. "We're going to have a really, really good recruiting weekend, and it's going to be exciting."

Despite the lack of a coaching change at Iowa, the Hawkeyes still managed to reel in some top talent.

In addition to the usual suspects, Iowa also snagged a few surprise recruits.

"We had some real surprises," Fry said. "We had some kids that we didn't think were going to commit, and they did."

Overall, the Hawkeyes were pleased with their recruiting efforts.

"We're really happy with how our recruiting went," Fry said. "We had a good weekend, and I think we're going to have a good season."

Taylor to remarry?

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) - Elizabeth Taylor announced yesterday she will marry twice more in the next three months, according to Congressman Linda Lee, who attended the ceremony.

Lee said the ceremony took place at a private residence in the Mexican capital, and that the newlyweds, Taylor and husband Michael Wilding, were married in a small, informal ceremony attended by family and friends.

Lee said the ceremony was solemn and lasted less than an hour. She said the couple exchanged vows and rings in a simple ceremony with few guests present.

Taylor, 52, has been married six times, including to Richard Burton and Elvis Presley. She has three children from previous marriages, and is known for her philanthropy work.

The couple, seen in 2001 in this file photo, declined to comment on their plans to remarry, citing privacy concerns.

Taylor has been married three times:

1. To actor Michael Wilding in 1952-1954
2. To actor Richard Burton in 1964-1974
3. To actor Ryan O'Neal in 1975-1979
4. To actor John Warner in 1984-1986
5. To actor Liam Gilligan in 1992-1993
6. To actor Richard Burton in 1994-present

Taylor has also been linked to several other high-profile relationships, including with actor Montgomery Clift, and he is known for her philanthropy work.
