The extra $153,000 of Community Development Block Grant money that Iowa City was awarded in January will all go into the sewers if the Iowa City Committee on Community Needs has

In a meeting held Wednesday afternoon in the Iowa City Public Library, committee members agreed that although there were eight other projects worthy of funding, they would ask the Iowa City Council to give priority to the repair of the Rundell Street-Creekside area storm sewer drainage system.

A poor drainage system in that area has resulted in a four- to six-block area being periodically flooded, some residents say, for 20 years.

"The people of Creekside have been asking for this for a long time. I think it would be irresponsible not to back it. We said we would do it and the city council said they would do it," committee member Gina McGee said.

The additional money was given to the city as a result of 1980 census data that showed the number of lowerincome people in the city had grown. CDBG funds are federal moneys used to benefit families with low or moderate incomes.

Some of the projects that saw their chances for funding go down the drain included: a sidewalk improvement project for the Creekside area, a Family Life Center for the elderly, and money for self-help community projects.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS had been taken on a tour of the area earlier this year and were impressed by the problems Rundell Street residents had, ex-chairwoman Margaret Bonny said. Although homes in the area are on high ground and generally stay dry, the area's streets are submerged at times, she said.

Iowa City had received a total of $671,000 in CDBG grants in November, two months before the additional $153,000 was awarded.

Projects funded by the initial grants were a housing rehabilitation and weatherization program, Systems Unlimited group homes for handicapped children, sidewalk improvements, and an Independent Living Center.

Having decided where their priorities lie, members of the committee were dismayed at the fact that the

Winter returns as snowstorm socks city

Six inches of sparkling snow helped bring 'We would like to have their Iowa Citians back to mid-winter reality, making them forget the recent weather which committee chairman Mickey Lauria seemed to be calling for an early spring.

At least one more inch of snow is expected during the day, "but the wind is going to be the big thing," said Denny Frary, meteorologist for KCRG news. The winds should be gusting up to 40 mph throughout the day, he said, and "about another inch, possibly two at the outside" is expected.

A travelers' advisory was in effect most of Wednesday, with highways nearly 100 percent snow and ice covered. Iowa City schools were closed also.

Today's temperatures are expected to be 15-20 degrees, falling from zero to five below tonight.

BOTH UI CAMPUS Security and Iowa City Police Department officials said there have been no major problems due to the snowfall. There have been a few minor automobile accidents and some snowmobile riders caught taking their machines onto city roads, but there have been no major accidents. "Most of the people in cars have forgotten that it does get slick when it snows," said Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller.

"This is not unusual (during) changes of weather - most particularly when you get your first snowfall," he said of the few problems that did occur. "The thing I was most impressed by was the people's forbearing attitude. By and large they're pretty goodnatured about (the weather). People sort of take it in their stride in Iowa City.

Last year during one of the major snowstorms, Miller said Iowa City police had to escort visiting nurses and doctors to their appointments. "This year we just haven't had such calls."

Lee Tippe, an assistant city attorney, said the Iowa City Public Works Department kept up with the snowfall Wednesday. "They've been pulling a pretty long day. The trucks will probably finish up about 6 p.m." and begin again at about 6 a.m. today. "If it keeps snowing, then they'll probably call them out (earlier)," he said.

Viet refugees recall migration to lowa

Salvador troops attack city

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador - About 2,000 troops backed by U.S.-supplied warjets launched a counter-attack Wednesday on the outskirts of rebel-held Berlin, the biggest city ever to fall into leftist control.

Witnesses said U.S. warjets and army mor-tars pounded the rebels' advanced positions outside the city, which was captured by guerrillas Monday after 34 hours of fighting. Relief workers said 60 civilians were killed in the takeover.

Jobs rate to include military

WASHINGTON - The 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States will be counted Friday as part of the nation's overall labor force in a new alternative jobless rate issued by the Labor Department.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates the first-time addition of armed forces members as workers will cause a decrease of one-tenth or two-tenths of a percentage point in what the overall jobless rate would be otherwise.

DETROIT - Despite the optimistic predictions of auto companies for 1983 sales. most dealers do not expect the new car market to take off for at least another year, a survey showed Wednesday.

Ward's Auto World magazine surveyed a random sampling of 600 dealers out of 20,000 across the country. It called these dealers the "survivors" of the four-year slump that claimed 1,267 casualties in the 1982 model year alone.

Tests void mom-for-hire pact

CHICAGO - Tests proved Wednesday a defective baby born to a surrogate mother was not fathered by the man who paid her $10,000, voiding the contract and leaving an uncertain future for the baby and a $50 million lawsuit. Tests conducted by Sparrow Hospital in Lansing, Mich., made public during a taping of the Phil Donahue Show, showed that Alexander Malahoff was not the father of the baby born to Judy Stiver of Lansing. The tests released Malahoff from any responsibility for the child. Malahoff earlier filed a $50 million suit against Stiver.

Compulsive eaters find support

By Susan E. Fisher aff Writer

Nine individuals form a circle with their chairs.

A young man leans on the edge of his chair and addresses the group. He says, "Hi, my name is Tom and I'm an over-eater. "Hello, Tom," the individuals chant in unison.

A meeting of Overeaters Anonymous has begun.

Several days each week, UI students and Iowa City area residents meet in the Wesley Foundation, 120 N. Dubuque, to discuss their feelings and problems related to compulsive overeating. The meetings are open to the public, although the members wish to remain anonymous.

The non-profit organization patterns itself after Alcoholics Anonymous. 0.A. members perceive their problem as a disease that cannot be permanently overcome by will power alone. However, society doesn't accept over-eating as a disease, one member eater, 'Go on a diet; you'll lose weight,' but it's so much more than that. It's a substance abuse."

MEMBERS OF THE organization are encouraged, but not required, to participate in various aspects of the program. The emphasis is on recognizing over-eating as a problem and identifying the sources of conflict through a series of admissions called "the 12 steps." The self-help group also suggests that members commit themselves to "abstinence," a three-meala-day diet plan.

However, one member explained, dieting is not emphasized by the organization. She said, "Losing weight is not the main part of the program. The important thing is learning to deal with yourself and to get a peace of mind."

The national organization of O.A. was established in California over 15 years ago. In 1976, it claimed a membership of over 2,500 branch groups. A Californian transplanted

According to a member who was a part of the original group, at least 100 compulsive over-eaters have been helped by the local groups.

> ANOTHER MEMBER, a UI student, attributed much of the problem to pressure to "look thin." She said, "Being fat is very unpopular in society. Practically every article in every magazine is about being thin, and you never see any fat models."

> Similar concerns are expressed at the meeting. The leader, appointed for the week, opens the discussion by speaking on his experiences as a compulsive over-eater. The leader then turns to the cirle of individuals who share their feelings with each other. All members introduce themselves by first name only and make a short statement declaring their unity with the group.

begins another member, a UI student The group acknowledges her statement. "Hi, Jane," a chorus of voices replies.

For a few minutes, the young woman vents her frustration. She begins to talk about her efforts to abstain from over-eating.

"IT'S SO HARD to let go of something that seems to be so innocent, but I guess I can't handle it." Some of the members nod. One individual turns slightly in her seat and folds her arms

It is another member's turn to speak. She smiles, and then frowns slightly. She begins, "I used to suffer from depression I don't know ... but now I guess I feel the way alcoholics feel about sobriety; I'm feeling better for longer periods of time."

In about an hour, the circle has been completed. The members have risen and joined hands. They begin to recite the "Lord's Prayer." They conclude the session, saying, "Keep coming "Hi, I'm Jane. I'm an over-eater," back, it works."

Congress is cool to aid proposal

By Dan Hauser Special to The Daily Iowan

Although President Reagan is asking for nearly $1 billion in cuts to the 1983 student loan program, it may be some time before legislators learn how that would affect students.

Congress has not yet come up with a plan on how the cuts should be analyzed, and will not know how the cuts will hit students in the program, said Joe Fredericks, legislative assistant to Rep. Cooper Evans, R-Iowa.

The plan, which would reduce the Department of Education's budget by 15 percent, will receive no support from Congress, Fredericks said. "I don't think it will receive consideration." Rejecting Reagan's plan, Fredericks said lawmakers are considering a plan that would allow Congress time to study the student loan program's effectiveness before approving more changes for the program.

FREDERICKS SAID that during the past several years, Congress has not been "too dramatic with the cuts" and has allowed the program to grow. From 1979 to 1981, there has been an average growth of about 11 percent in the student aid program.

John Moore, UI director of admissions and student financial aid, said less money will go a little further next year because the interest rate for loans has gone down.

This year, the prime rate is hovering between 12 and 14 percent, while last year it was at 19 percent.

Moore believes that "Congress is not supportive of cuts of direct grants" and Fredericks agreed, saying the grant program will be least effected. The hardest hit segment of the cuts would be funds allocated to pay for the interest made on the loan programs.

IF THE CUT does occur, however, Moore said all students receiving aid would be effected because instead of changing the eligibility rules, as has been done in the past, all loans would be cut correspondingly with the percentage of cuts the program suffers. Each student receiving a loan, if the proportionately. For example, if a student was receiving $1,500 in aid and the loan program is cut 50 percent, the student will then receive $750.

"Don't listen to the sad news ... don't prejudge your own eligibility," Moore urged students who might be wary of turning in applications after the proposed loan cuts. "If you think you need help, apply for it.'

Fredericks stressed two points taken by Congress in reaction to Reagan's proposed budget. "First of all, we don't support Reagan's cutbacks," Fredericks said. Second, Congress would like to wait to study the effectiveness of student loan programs and

It's a boy

What had been just a political football, tossed about by the Lowa State Corrections department and pregnant inmate Nancy Browning Cabbell, is now an 8 pound 15 ounce baby boy. Cabbell, the 26-year-old inmate whose wish to keep her baby with her at the Iowa Correctional Institution for Women at Mitchellville, gave birth to her son at the UI Hospitals Tuesday at 10:09 p.m., prison superintendent Susan Hunter said.

The mother's request to care for her own baby and build up "that motherchild bond" was denied by Hal Farrier, state corrections director. He said the prison lacks the appropriate nursery facilities

Cabbell's attorney, Randi Youells, who is deputy director of the Legal Services Corp. of Iowa, plans to appeal the decision.

City gets new fire truck

Iowa City has a new $112,806 fire truck.

The truck, which will be able to pump 1,250 gallons of water per minute, is housed at the Central Fire Station. It will be put into action shortly after mounting of emergency equipment and training by fire department personnel.

Fire Chief Robert Keating said no additional fire truck purchases are planned in the near future, but added there will be a need 10 to 12 years down the line

Keating said he would like to see the city purchase an aerial ladder, which can be controlled by one fireman.

Attached to the top of the ladder is a multi-directional nozzle and television camera, which can be safely manipulated from the ground.

'The big thing about this truck is that one person can do all these functions instead of four or five people," Keating said.

Number of bus riders continues to grow

More people are riding the bus than according to Iowa City transportation.

"People are aware that the bus is a good bargain," he said. The Iowa City bus system has the second largest number of riders in the state. Since the transit system was established more than 22 million passenger trips have been taken.

Students apply for resident assistantships

Some 250 students are vying for 40 fall 1983 resident assistant positions in the UI Residence Halls, said Rosanne Proite, coordinator of the centralized selection committee

Proite said first round interviews began Monday with about an equal number of men and women hoping to be selected for one of the R.A. positions. Three rounds are held with eliminations being made after each. First-round interviews consist of a head resident and several current R.A.s interviewing a group of applicants.

The job pays $3,100 this year, but Proite said next year's salary has not been set. Half of the positions available are on men's floors. Proite said the selection process should be completed by March 15.

Public hearing set for Manville downzoning

After a one-day delay, the Iowa City Council Wednesday set the public hearing on the proposed downzoning of Manville Heights for March 8.

The council was scheduled to set the public hearing Tuesday night, but announcement of the scheduling was not posted 24 hours in advance as required by state law.

As a result of the council's action, no new building permits can be issued for Manville Heights, an area of the city near Hancher Auditorium and Iowa City Park.

Manville Heights residents prompted council action by attending its Jan. 24 meeting. The residents were angered over apartment builders trying to construct new dwelling units before the area is downzoned.

Before the zoning change comes back to the council it first has to go to the city's Planning and Zoning Commission

Senior Planner Doug Boothroy said the commission will set its public hearing date at tonight's meeting.

Committees approve 1-cent sales tax hike

DES MOINES (UPI) - After more than two hours of partisan bickering and parliamentary maneuvering, the House Ways and Means Committee approved Wednesday a 1-cent sales tax hike that would take effect March 1.

Democrats fought off a Republican attempt to delay the tax hike to April 1, but the Republicans will try again when the bill reaches the House floor this morning.

Later, in a much quieter mood, the House Finance Committee approved the bill by a party-line vote of 7-4

In the Senate, the bill moved like a hot knife through butter by clearing the Ways and Means and Finance Committee with little Republican opposition.

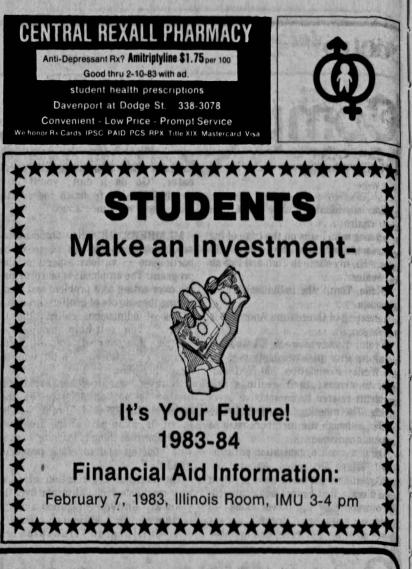

Senate Democrats did shoot down an amendment to exempt vending machines from the penny increase. That amendment drew some laughter after Sen. Arthur Small, D-Iowa City, said Iowans would be seeing vending machines in jewelry stores dispensing $10,000 rings.

There was little laughter on the House side of the Capitol. Unlike their counterparts in the Senate, House Republicans are trying to kill the March 1 date and they used every parliamentary means to do it. But Democrats let loose their own parliamentary arsennal to stave off the GOP attack.

The Democrats decided early to limit debate to an amendment to change the March date to April 1. At one point, amid a flurry of conflicting motions, Ways and Means Vice Chairman Dave Tabor of Baldwin issued a controversial ruling to end all debate.

Rep. Wayne Bennett, R-Galva, an assistant minority leader, described that ruling as a "gag order.'

Gov. Terry Branstad had proposed the 1-cent sales tax hike, but he originally called for it to take effect April 1.

Israeli tanks threaten U.S. lines; halted by Marine armed with gun WASHINGTON (UPI) - A U.S. Marine company commander halted three Israeli tanks trying to cross American lines in Beirut Wednesday by climbing aboard the lead tank with his pistol drawn and loaded and ordering the Israelis to leave the area, the Pentagon said.

The three British-built Israeli Centurion tanks departed without further incident. ending the 50-minute confrontation, the Defense Department said.

The State Department called in Israel's ranking diplomat to express grave concern about the latest incident, the sixth and by far the most serious between Israeli troops and the Marines in Lebanon.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said he will recommend a commendation for the officer, identified by the Pentagon as Capt. Charles B. Johnson, 30, of Rock Island, Ill., for his "extreme courage" in the face of "threatening moves" by the Israeli tanks.

"We reject the allegations of the State Department spokesman that there was any attempt to cross the American lines or to challenge the Marines," the Israeli Embassy replied in a statement. "There was no such attempt.'

AN ISRAELI OFFICIAL said the tanks were patrolling the road in accordance with an agreement worked out Sunday between Israeli and U.S. officials. He suggested the Marine captain may not have realized the Israelis were permitted in the area.

The Pentagon gave this account of the incident, which it said occurred at 9 a.m. Beirut time (1 a.m. Iowa time):

The tanks approached from the south toward the Marines' "Lima" Company headquarters position adjacent to the Lebanese University library. Johnson told the Israeli tanks to halt while they still were about 300 yards in front of him.

"The lead Israeli tank stopped within a foot of him."

Johnson asked to speak with the Israeli commander, a lieutenant colonel, who dismounted from the lead tank after five minutes. The Marine told him the tanks could not proceed. The Israeli said he would proceed through the U.S. area to the railroad tracks, adding he wanted to see the Marine "general."

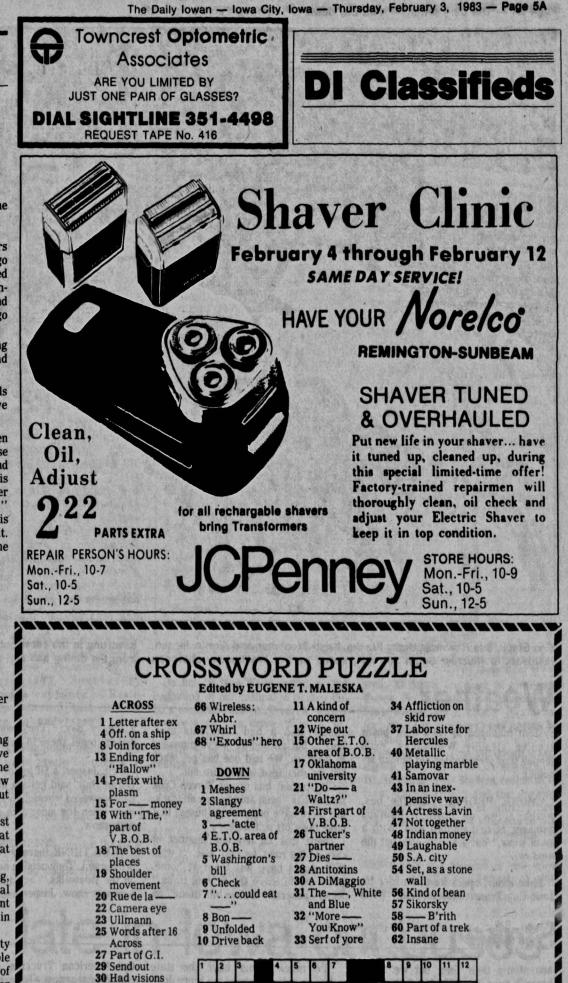

THE PENTAGON said the two officers argued and the Israeli said he would go through U.S. lines "anyway, and mounted his tank. At this point, the company commander drew and loaded his weapon and stated that the tanks would have to go through him to pass."

Weinberger quoted the captain as saying the tanks would proceed "over his dead body.

The lead tank moved away several yards and "the other two tanks began to move forward toward the U.S. positions.

"The Marine company commander then mounted the first IDF (Israel Defense Forces) tank with his weapon drawn and told the senior Israeli officer to stop his tanks. The IDF lieutenant colonel, after speaking on the radio, stopped his tanks." A Pentagon official said Johnson drew his sidearm, a .45-caliber pistol, and loaded it. He said it was the third time the same Israeli officer clashed with the Marines.

Study reports that lowa ranks last, Alaska is first, in federal spending

WASHINGTON (UPI) - From Social Security payments to defense dollars, the overnment spread $603.6 billion among the tates last year, with Alaska getting the most per capita and Iowa the least, the Census Bureau reported Wednesday.

But the first-ever detailed ranking of federal spending also revealed a remarkable degree of even-handedness, government analysts said, with 42 states falling within 25 percent of the $2,591 national average in federal dollars received for each man, woman and child.

"Direct payments to Social Security recipients may be concentrated in Florida and defense procurements in California, but overall when you look at total federal dollars, there is a surprising leveling that takes place," said census analyst John Coleman.

The report covered the 94 percent of federal spending that takes place in the 50 states and excluded spending in other countries and interest paid on the national debt. "I would not have thought it would be that close," Coleman said, since each one of the major influences on spending - from geographical distribution of the poor, of retirees, of defense contractors and federal installations - "is independent of the other.'

THE RANKING OF federal spending per state on a per capita basis for 1981 and 1982 was the first ever produced by government, ordered by Congress to determine "where the money was going," Coleman said. Earlier statistical breakdowns were far less specific, he said.

Federal spending within the United States grew 7.4 percent from 1981 to 1982, compared to the increase in the inflation rate, year-over-year, of 6.1 percent, the report said.

The biggest winner when the total spending was divided among the population was Alaska, with $4,533.26 received in federal dollars for every inhabitant. With its relatively small population and big defense installations, the first-place ranking was to be expected, analysts said.

In volume of spending, California was first, with $75 billion received in federal salaries, welfare and defense spending, 11.9 percent ahead of 1981. Distributed among California's population, the 1982 spending was $3,100.25 per

WHEN RANKED according to spending per person, Virginia, with its massive federal employment in the area of the nation's capital was in second place. New Mexico was third highest, Connecticut fourth, Maryland fifth and Hawaii sixth. On the low side, Iowa received the least federal dollars per person in 1982, at $1,792.22. Indiana was second-lowest, at $1,849.16 per capita.

In terms of the volume of spending, Wyoming received the fewest federal dollars in 1982, only $1.04 billion. Vermont was second-lowest with $1.16 billion in federal dollars received.

Although federal salaries, Social Security and welfare payments remain fairly stable year after year, the volatile awards of defense contracts, federal highway or development spending can turn one year's winner into next year's loser.

That occurred for Wyoming, which received the seventh-highest total of federal dollars per capita in 1981 but fell to 39th place last year.

No to DOD

to this code?

During the last fiscal year, Department of Defense funding at the UI has more than doubled over the previous year. Although Duane C. Spreistersbach, UI vice-president of educational development and research, is correct in saying that this amount is minimal in comparison to the total amount of research money the UI received - $2.4 million out of $70 million - it does indicate a disturbing trend.

A study completed by the American Friends Service Committee reveals that "after a relative decline in the number of military contracts accepted by colleges and universities ... the decreasing trend is reversing. In fact from mid-1980 to mid-1981, the sum of military contracts to colleges and universities topped the total of all corporate gifts to education." And the trend is increasing. President Reagan's budget for the next fiscal year includes a 17 percent hike in research and development funding, with two-thirds of the $47 billion going to defense-related programs.

There has been some discussion as to whether the research done on campus is "basic" or "applied" - are the studies primarily done for general purposes that could have a multitude of applications or just to help the military? This point is arguable, but it should be noted that the DOD is mandated by Congress only to finance projects with direct military applications. Any extra benefits of the research fall outside the parameters of the grant. The question then becomes, does weapons-related research advance the public welfare? The answer must be a firm "No." Research on campus should help alleviate the causes of war, not make it more efficient. While it is acknowledged that universities are finding funding from other sources more difficult to come by, nevertheless the UI and other colleges should refuse all money the DOD spends to bolster its military programs.

N RESPONSE to the New Wave's GUEST press statement, in which we opinion stated opposition to the UI's policy ment and Research's Summary of gifts, grants and contracts accepted by the University of Iowa reveals that DOD contracts accepted by the UI totaled $1.2 million in 1980-81 and $2.6 million in 1981-82: in one year the DOD funding had more than doubled. It seems unlikely that a funding increase of this size could be unnoticed by the vice-president in charge.

What has been demonstrated is a case of administrative doublespeak. At this point, the UI has yet to address either the moral or political conflicts presented by their increasing involvement with the DOD. Instead, they have attempted to dismiss New Wave's charges by demonstrating both ignorance and apathy concerning the DOD's intention in applying the research being carried out here.

It seems this attitude is not only practiced, but indeed is actual policy in the case of "basic" research. In the December 1982 Spectator, Spriestersbach explained, "Basic research is research that studies phenomena to understand them without any thought about what the new understanding might mean." This viewpoint would seem particularly useful to the UI or to the DOD in cases in which it is unfavorable to examine the moral and political issues of the use to which the research is put.

WE, AS STUDENTS, oppose the UI's policy of disregarding the application of research being conducted for the Pentagon.

Now we find the biggest question facing our campaign is this: When will the UI, in considering student response to New Wave's efforts and the growing concern for the issue of military ties, find it in its own best interests to respond to the real conflict presented by its actions?

The most recent polls are saying that President Reagan's popularity has reached a new low, with more and more people perceiving him as a friend of the rich. His new budget, added to his quickly-retracted remark about repealing corporate taxes, is likely to do little to change Americans' perceptions.

The budget, as expected, amounts to more of the same - the same increases in military spending, with the same freezes or cuts in social programs. Reagan stressed that federal spending overall would not rise, but as many have pointed out, this stability would be achieved only by the social program cuts balancing out the Pentagon increases. If the budget goes through, the average American family will be paying out about $753 a year to support the military - about $90 more than last year. Much of this increase will go toward paying for new weapons like the MX - the 'Peacekeeper'' - and the B-1 bomber.

Meanwhile, the poorly-off will have to pay for their crimes, whether that crime is being old, sick or unemployed. Elderly Medicare recipients will have to pay more toward the cost of hospitalization — from $17 to $28 a day more for the first two months. The poor will also have to pay more to visit a doctor. This is designed to discourage "over-use" of medical facilities - all those idle layabouts who have nothing better to do with their time than lounge around hospitals and doctors' offices.

There's also more of the same disregard for the long-term wellbeing of the country. To combat soil erosion, the budget seeks funds amounting to 6 percent less than the minimum amount estimated by the Soil Conservation Service as necessary to prevent further deterioration of soil and water. The Environmental Protection Agency would suffer significant cuts, meaning a reduction in its ability to fight water and air pollution although the politically sensitive Superfund to clean up toxic waste would be increased.

Members of Congress have predicted that the budget will get a 'fair hearing," but Budget Committee member Sen. Lawton Chiles added that "there will be major changes ... in order for it to pass." Let's hope he is right; the country cannot afford to go on paying for the closing of the mythical "window of vulnerability" while more and more people are suffering.

But somehow, it seems unlikely that this president will ever face the reality of the suffering his policies have caused. Anyone who could suggest that "we might come closer to balancing the budget if all of us simply tried to live up to the 10 commandments" has to have left reality far behind.

system for selecting convention delegates - demands fierce organization. Broadly-based voter appeals are almost unnecessary to win support in the precinct caucuses. As Jimmy Carter's campaign of 1976 showed, a couple of good, solid supporters in each precinct are more valuble than slick advertisement and media

The precinct workers have an enormous hold on the selection process; they actually get a chance to appeal to the "voters" directly, just before they vote to elect representatives who will start to select the delegates.

A successful Iowa campaign is one of very directed palm-pressing, meeting and befriending a relatively small number of involved amateur pols. Political capital is everything, and Cranston has gotten a jump only on those vaccilating souls who are back in the dust, imagining some upswell of grassroots support. Cranston has goten a nose lead on Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., and Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.

What's your excuse?

To the editor:

Students who marathon for Muscular Dystrophy do so for the philanthropic aspect, the weight loss or the resume building - those that don't have all the excuses.

The "I can't dance" excuse is a favorite. Bouncing is considered acceptable dancing, and can pass for punk by most standards. Besides, everyone is too worried how they are moving to notice that you have no rhythm or are stepping on toes. If your excuse is "I don't have time," tally the number of hours a week you spend watching TV, drinking downtown, or accomplishing nothing. Thirty hours, well spent, is nothing from a schedule.

"I can't get pledges" is a common excuse. By persuading friends, parents, friend's parents, and parents' friends to donate for a good cause, you'll discover how easy it is to dance for dollars. The minimum amount to pledge is five cents, which after 30 nours becomes $1.50. This amount will barely cover a hamburger, but will help research MD.

Another feeble excuse is "I don't have a partner." Ask a friend, bribe fund-raiser and is available to Iowa politicians almost on demand Hart was also George McGovern's 1972 campaign manager, and doubtless made some friends while learning the technique of national campaigning. He learned first-hand the ways of the Iowa caucuses, when McGovern surprised everyone by taking more of Muskie's in-the-bag support than anyone had expected.

Mondale is the only candidate with more political chips to cash than Hart. Mondale has several years' head start, and has had some real power as senator and vice president to exercise in his own interest. Mondale has been carefully calling in political debts, setting up an organization as deep and wide as any the state has seen in recent years.

In Iowa, both Mondale and Hart have a big jump on Cranston. As one Iowa Democratic political organizer put it, "Mondale and Hart have the bones of fine political organizations in Iowa. They've done their homework.

Cranston is popular, but no one owes him anything. He has a long way to

SO CRANSTON HAS announced his search for a dry place to stand just in time to find all the high ground in Iowa already claimed.

Iowa has the power to turn minor candidates into major ones, and to throw the front-running babies out with the bath water. Hart and Mondale have understood that for a long time. They've been working the small group of political shakers and movers long enough that a one-two finish is virtually assured, even at this premature date.

conditions

Hart is looking to the caucuses to overcome his status as an unknown member of a very large pack; Mondale is hoping for the sort of strong victory that would send everyone running for cover.

So Cranston's apparently early entry comes, in fact, too late. It's doubtful whether he can use Iowa as his springboard. There is little room left for the sort of organization he will need. Hart is entrenched; Mondale is laying back, making no mistakes and many friends.

And here comes Alan: First to declare, last to run.

After the floor exercise competition the wrestlers and their cheerleaders pranced out to center stage. The band struck up a lively tune and the poor gymnasts had to concentrate while this ruckus was going on. The wrestlers continued to warm up as Coach Dan Gable babbled about an ex-Hawkeye wrestler now on the Northwestern team. Group reports UI computer needs

By Jane Turnis

In order to keep quality faculty, attract first-rate students and keep up with information systems at other universities, the UI needs more computer equipment, according to a task force of faculty, staff and administrators that prepared a study on the matter

The UI has $35 million invested in information systems now, which cost about $15 million yearly to use. That includes computers for student use and faculty teaching and research, word processing and office systems, 12,000 telephones and video equipment in 20 departments.

The UI Office of Information Technology took a closer look at computer, telephone, and video information systems at the UI in a study presented to UI President James O. Freedman last year.

There is one computer for every 75 UI students. The group recommended that the number of student-used computers be increased to one per 25 students within three years, and stated that the ratio might have to be one per three students within the decade

Increased enrollments in the UI Colleges of Engineering, Business Administration and Computer Science justify the need for more computers per student, the report states.

"While enrollment for the university as a whole has grown 15.4 percent since 1977, engineering is up 67 percent, business administration is up 78 percent, and computer science is up 350 percent," the report states

BUT OTHER departments need more information machines as well, some say. "At this point, we don't have the most beautiful arrangement," Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said Wednesday.

"Some departments have the resources or can make a strong enough case to acquire them (computer terminals). Others are just now realizing how they could make use of them," Laster said

UI faculty members are increasingly relying on computers to analyze data and texts, write grant applications and prepare manuscripts. While one in five have desktop units now, the Faculty Needs Committee of the task force would like to secure computer equipment for most faculty members.

The first step toward that goal would be to assure each department access to a terminal and printer. The report recommends that each department pay for its own computer terminals, but that the UI pay for connecting them to the its Weeg Computing Center.

Professor Thomas Kent, of the UI Pathology Department, said early planning at the UI has resulted in an impressive information system.

Kent, who had just returned from a visit to the University of California-Los Angeles, said, "at least in the medical school part, their stuff was archaic compared to ours. I realize now how spoiled we are."

Kent praised the UI's farsightedness in establishing sophisticated information systems early. "Other universities have been planning, too. Iowa is looking ahead. I'm very impressed with what this institution has done.'

The report will be used by administrators in planning future information system additions and changes.

YOUR COURSES ... or HIS?

What will happen if the Reagan Budget is not amended by your member of congress and senators?

 THREE Important financial aid programs — The Supplementary Educational Opportunity Grants, The State Student Incentive Grants, and The National Direct Student Loans - will be abolished.

 ALL Applicants for the Guaranteed Student Loans will be required to pass a need test, regardless of income.

THE current GSL origination fee of 5% will be doubled.

 ONLY those students who can contribute an amount equal to 40% of educational costs from their own income and job earnings will be eligible to receive Pell Grants.

The expected increase in work-study funding can never compensate for these cuts. Last year, letters from students and parents turned the tide, and defeated a set of extremely deep education cuts. Unless a similar outcry occurs this year, these cuts may be approved.

Even teaching assistants need a little assistance

Two different workshops for T.A.s are being offered Saturday by the Graduate Student Senate. The sessions could be well attended because bad weather forced one workshop scheduled for Wednesday night to be called off and a session held Tuesday night drew only five participants.

There are about 1,700 T.A.s at the UI, according to John Picone, president of the Graduate Student Senate. Picone said the workshops are designed to give first-time and returning T.A.s a chance to overcome anxieties they may have about teaching and to prepare them for situations they might meet while leading classes.

At session I, participants watch a short videotape of a good lecture and a bad lecture. After evaluating the lectures, T.A.s. get a chance to give a short presentation and have it taped.

"Most people have never seen themselves on tape before," said Gary Althen, a program assistant in the Office of International Education and a workshop organizer. "You notice certain things and realize there are some things you like and some things you don't."

Group discussions allow participants to discuss topics such as nervousness, use of notes, when to be humorous or how to effectively use a blackboard. Articulation and diction as well as self-awareness are also important, Althen said.

SESSION II features presentations by H.D. Hoover, Cynthia Larson and Nicholas Colangelo. Hoover, professor in the Iowa Testing Program, will discuss testing procedures and exam preparation. Larson, a core literature graduate assistant, will lead a group discussion on how to conduct classroom discussions.

Colangelo, associate professor of Counselor Education, will give a talk on what makes a good teacher. Colangelo was named M.L. Huit Award winner last year as best faculty member, Picone said.

An important topic to be discussed, Colangelo said, is teacher/student relationships outside of class. "There are no made-to-order ways to avoid it. "It's best to think about it before there is an instance of it though," Colangelo said.

Althen said some faculty members have encouraged teaching assistants to attend the sessions. Ted Sjoerdsma, chairman of the Computer Science Department, said people from his department have been pleased with the sessions.

"The ones who went the first time said it was excellent," Sjoerdsma said. "It was especially good for new T.A.s. The demand for good communicators is still hard to fill. These workshops provide T.A.s with the mechanics needed to be more effective." Foreign students benefited from the workshops, Sjoerdsma said, because many were unsure how difficult it would be to work with students.

'It will be emotional because everyone wanted me to go to Illinois," Payne said, "but it doesn't really matter if Bruce is there or not." But Banks, well Andre can't hide his enthusiasm. And he can't forget his last trip to Illinois' Assembly Hall either.

He was an All-State all-everything for Chicago's Mendel Catholic High School, playing in his first state tournament. His team was playing Quincy and the Blue Devils had star guard Douglas, one of a handful of players in the state thought to be better than Banks.

AND WHAT do you know, Mendel beat the famous Blue Devils. "That's where my career started," Banks said. Andre hasn't forgotten, and when he steps onto the Assembly Hall court he'll get that special tingle reserved for moments like that. "My family is going to make the trip," Banks said. Nervous? "No, I think it will help me play better because I want to do well in front of the home fans. "It's a tough rivalry that we have to win," Banks added, "because if we don't, I'll have to go home this summer and hear them talk about it."

Gophers win in double overtime

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) - Tommy Davis sank two foul shots with no time remaining to force a second overtime and No. 18 Minnesota then rolled to an 89-80 double overtime victory over Ohio State Wednesday night in a Big Ten game.

Davis scored 22 points, all after halftime. He had five points in each of the two overtimes.

With Ohio State leading 72-70 in the closing seconds of the first overtime, Minnesota raced downcourt to attempt a last shot. Davis launched a 25-footer at the buzzer but Ohio State's Larry Huggins stepped in front of him on the shot for a foul. Ohio State contended time had expired before the shot. Davis made the two free throws to force another overtime.

MINNESOTA took command in the second extra period, jumping to a 78-72 lead and lengthening it to 87-74 before the Buckeyes closed in the waining seconds.

Minnesota's 7-foot-3 Randy Breuer had 26 points. For Ohio State, Tony Campbell had 22 points and Troy Taylor 19.

Minnesota, 14-3 overall, is 6-2 in the league and in first place by a half game. Ohio State drops to 12-6 and 4-4.

BANKS HAS been filling in teammate Greg Stokes on the strengths and weaknesses of Winters. "Efrem is great," Banks said. Gee, thanks Andre. But the Hawkeye who will be assigned the primary responsibility of keeping an eye on the 6-foot-9 freshman will be Michael Payne.

"Winters' range is about the same as Payne's, 15-17 feet, mostly inside, some up at the high post," Olson said. "But the biggest problem that Michael

Thursday, the Illini will counter with their usual man defense and an occasional 3-2 zone. But their main weapon will be Derek Harper, last week's Big Ten Player of the Week for his 25 and 29 point performances against Michigan State and Michigan, both Illini victories.

ILLINOIS, 4-3 in league play and tied with the Hawkeyes for second place, have been counting on Harper all season and the 6-4 junior has more than come through.

Curiously, however, Illinois Coach Lou Henson looks to Harper more for his defense. "Night after night, he is one of the best defensive players in the nation," Henson said. Olson said that when Carfino and Bob Hansen are in the game at the same time, Carfino will be on Harper.

Payne knows Harper and compares him to Douglas. "Bruce and Derek are alike in that they're sure of themselves but in a constructive way...Maybe they're cocky, but in a way you like to see in a player."

'Super' star Riggins on free agent list

NEW YORK (UPI) - Super Bowl MVP John Riggins of the Washington Redskins and defensive end Kim Bokamper of the Miami Dolphins are among a list of 252 players who are now free agents under the terms of the National Football League's Collective Bargaining Agreement, the league announced Wednesday.

The players, including 20 members of the Super Bowl champion Redskins, can now receive offers from any other club in the 28-team league. The list includes two players - quarterback Craig Morton of Denver and linebacker Dan Lloyd of the New York Giants who previously announced their retirement.

HOWEVER, BECAUSE of the strict rules regarding free agency movement, very few players are expected to sign with different NFL teams next year. Some are expected to jump to the new United States Football League, however.

The new Collective Bargaining Agreement, which was agreed upon last November after a 57-day players awarded to Washington.

A full list of NFL free agents..... ... Page 2B. strike, established a compensation plan - from first-refusal rights to two first-round draft choices - depending upon the salary paid to a player who signs with a new team.

A player's credited seasons and the dollar offer averaged over the length of the contract is the formula for figuring out compensation. The more seasons a player is in the league, the higher the dollar offer has to be for compensation to be applicable in those areas.

FOR EXAMPLE, if Riggins, an 11year veteran, were to sign a contract for an average salary of $170,000 per year, and the Redskins did not match that offer, Washington would be entitled to a third-round draft choice as compensation. If Riggins' salary averaged out to $185,000 per year, a second-round draft choice would be required as compensation and if his salary averaged out to $200,000 a year, a first-round draft choice would be

Armstead speedy threat to lowa

By Steve Riley Staff Writer

The Northeast Missouri State track team, which runs into Iowa at the Recreation Building Saturday, has a wispy connection with the Washington Redskins, the Super Bowl champs.

The 'Skins featured Northeasts' alltime best quarter-miler, Larry Jones, as a kick returner in the mid-1970's.

This year's Bulldog track squad showcases its second-best quartermiler of all time, Ray Armstead. Armstead has run the quarter in 46.13 seconds outdoors, good enough for third-place in last season's NCAA Division II championships.

Indoors, Armstead runs 600 yards, which he has clipped in 1:09.69 already this season. "He's been a real consistent performer for us the last two or three years," said Armstead's coach, Ed Schneider.

THE BULLDOGS also possess wealth in the field events. Meaty Alec Meinke has uncorked the shot 58 feet, 8¾ inches. Northeast has a doublethreat in the triple jump in Freddie Thompson (48-1134) and Darren Blair (48-83/4). Gerald Tanner has high jumped 6-91/4.

These seem like pretty decent performances coming from a team that practices by running around a basketball court. It has no indoor track Still, Iowa, which is stronger than last year, drubbed Northeast in last year's meet, 831/2-461/2.

Ted Wheeler's team was beaten by 31 points, placing second to Iowa State last weekend in the Big Four meet, but Wheeler said those results are deceiving. "The fact of the matter," he said, "is that with (pole vaulter) Steve Brewer out and (hurdler-long jumper) Ronnie McCoy out, and we didn't have (triple jumper) Owen Gill, well that's at least a 20-point turnaround.

"AND WHO GOT those points?" Wheeler continued. "Iowa State. And, in those circumstances, Drake and

UNI weren't picking up anything, so it was going to be very hard for us to win." He added that the Cyclones are 'one of the fine teams in the country."

Wheeler said the injured Brewer won't compete again this weekend and McCoy, who had a slight hamstring pull, "will be running something." He said Gill is "going to have some work done in the hospital on a leg.'

Schneider said Iowa's depth will be the determining factor in the meet. "We're not going into the meet necessarily thinking we can beat Iowa," he said. "They seem to be strong in the areas we've been strong in. But if we do well against them, fine.'

By Steve Batterson Assistant Sports Editor

To borrow a phrase from Hayden Fry, a battered and bruised bunch of Iowa men's gymnasts will head toward Michigan this weekend to tackle five teams, including highly-rated Oklahoma.

The Hawkeyes, 5-0 on the season and rated ninth in the nation, will be hardpressed to maintain their perfect record, according to Coach Tom Dunn.

"In terms of the Big Ten race or qualifying for nationals, it is important that we win four of the five meets," Dunn said, "but I'm not going to risk another injury to the young people who are hurt and jeopardize them for later in the season when we'll need them more. On the other hand, I'm not throwing in the towel either.'

IOWA WILL BE without all-arounder Ron Rechenmacher this weekend while Stu Breitenstine's status will be determined by a doctor this morning. Breitenstine is recovering from torn ligaments in a finger and Rechenmacher tore ligaments in his elbow prior to a win over Wisconsin-Oshkosh last weekend.

"I think I'll be able to go on three events," Breitenstine said, "and the floor exercise, vault and rings are some of my better events so I don't think missing the workouts this week will have too much of an effect." Dunn will take 12 gymnasts on the trip and will use Friday night's meet with Michigan State and Western Michigan at East Lansing to determine his strongest nine-man line-up for the Sunday meet in Ann Arbor. In addition to Oklahoma, the Hawkeyes will challenge Kent State as well as the host Wolverines.

"WE'LL PLAY it pretty safe Friday night," Dunn said. "We'll be giving some of the guys who haven't had a chance to compete yet a chance." Michigan State is 1-3 on the dual season and scored a 262.15 last weekend in a loss to Ohio State.

pick up two wins against the Spartans and Broncos. The focus of attention this weekend will be the meet at Michigan Sunday afternoon.

ponent," Dunn said. "Michigan is scoring real well, but they are a seniororiented team and should be scoring better than they have been. "Even with the injuries, I believe be close to Oklahoma's range, but it will be tough," Dunn said. "We definitely have to let them make the mistakes.'

THE SOONERS have already defeated defending NCAA champion Nebraska this season and Coach Paul Ziert bases his program around strong all-around competitors, including Scott Wilbanks, a transfer from Oregon, Mark Oates and Mike Sims.

Michigan was expected to be a challenger in the Big Ten with seniors occupying eight of nine starting positions, but the Wolverines (0-4) reached the 270 mark for the first time last weekend (270.5) in a loss to

"They just haven't seemed to jell yet," Dunn said, "but I have the suspicion they'll be real strong at home this weekend. They still remember when we beat them two years ago up there for the first time in 20 years. We've had a lot of improvement from our fourth, fifth and sixth spots and that gives us a solid base which is important if we're going to do well this weekend."

The struggling Iowa women's gymnastic team takes on nationally-ranked Illinois State in Normal, Ill., Sunday.

The Redbirds, currently ranked 19th by the National Statistical Service for Gymnastics, defeated the Hawkeyes in the Field House last year and are looking every bit as tough this year, according to ISU Coach, Paul Meyer. The Hawkeyes, still without a win this season, will have their hands full. Iowa finished third with a 147.9 score in a triangular meet last Friday in Columbus, Ohio. Ohio State won the meet at 178.7 and Illinois finished second at 169.95.

Freshman A.J. Greene, after a disappointing performance on the balance beam, scored a personal high 8.5 on floor excercise.

'She (Greene) was not pleased with beam routine, but she came right back and did a great job," Chapela said. Chapela feels her team showed a great deal of character last weekend, but added that her gymnasts still need

Iowa Coach Diane Chapela saw good points in that meet that could help the Hawks Sunday in Normal.

JUNIOR LINDA Tremain, who had been sick the entire morning, showed up at last Friday's meet five minutes before it started, and competed in all four events, scoring an 8.6 on floor excercise

"That is a perfect show of her heart, desire and determination," Chapela said. "Even if she wouldn't have been able to compete, she was at least there to build up confidence in their routines. "WE WERE having doubts about tricks that we were nailing in practice," she said of the traingular meet last weekend. Chapela has been trying to build up the gymnasts' confidence through repetition and positive reinforcement. She said that confidence comes from overlearning a routine, and mentioned that it helps some of the individuals to repeat their routines as many as 10 times in one practice.

"All our meets will be tough from here on," Chapela said.

The Redbirds are led by senior captain Gina Chiavini, who Meyer describes as "a competitive leader." "She's a real competitor, especially when the money is down and we need a strong performance.'

MIKE FLAGG, a 6-foot-6, 240-pound tight end from Cedar Falls, regarded by some as Iowa's top prep football player last year, plans to sign a national letter of intent with lowa on Feb. 9.

After a visit to Notre Dame last weekend, Flagg picked Iowa over the Irish and and Colorado.

Several other preps in Iowa, including Davenport Central running back Marshall Cotton, are favoring the Hawks. Cotton, a 6foot-1, 185-pounder, is mulling over offers from Iowa, Wisconsin and Nebraska. Some observers believe Cotton is a finer prospect than Flagg.

The Hawks are also after Kerry Burt, a 6-3, 205-pound wide receiver from Waterloo West, who is reported close to a decision.

Benson's recital displays clavichord's capabilities

By John Voland Staff Writer

What would one call a woman who: a) wears blue formal gloves to her own recital; b) specializes in music written for the most intimate keyboard instrument around and chastises loud audiences; and c) reads 16th-century poetry in between musical selections?

Eccentric? Loony? Ready for an interview with David Letterman? Perhaps; but for myself I call her refreshing, even fascinating.

Joan Benson, who "performed" a recital last Tuesday night at Clapp Recital Hall, did all of these things and more - she opened the door to a much quieter world where the soft, subtly shaded tones of the clavichord (about which more in a moment) spoke, to one contemporary, of "the dappled moonlight on the shores of a burbling springtime brook.'

信約

Obviously, times have changed a bit one young audience member was induced to leave when her coughing became uncontrolled (didn't anyone cough back then?) - but not so much as to totally eclipse the clavichord's expressive capabilities.

THE CLAVICHORD produces sound in a different manner than either the louder, brasher harpsichord, which plucks the string, or the piano, which hammers the string and immediately retracts. Instead, it uses small metal hammers called "tangents" that are always in the up position, against the their attention to wander.

Thus, a note played simultaneously strikes the string and defines the pitch by defining the length of the string. Not much volume is available due to the short trajectory of the tangent, but with the clavichord, touch becomes as important, if not more so, as it is with the modern piano.

Benson is a perfect advocate for this instrument; when she is not playing (in a rather individual but highly committed fashion), she is explaining to, cajoling and measuring the audience for reaction and involvement. This strategy is more necessary with the clavichord because of its understated appeal and the tendency for modern audiences, used to the high-decibel assaults of Berlioz and Mahler (not to mention the Plasmatics), to allow

SHE ALSO PLAYED the fortepiano, precursor of the modern piano and a favorite instrument of Mozart. Its particular timbre and mechanics have been mentioned in these pages previously, so I will not take up space with its modus operandi except to note that Benson's playing strategy was quite different from the one evidenced in the earlier recital; it was softer, more dynamically oriented (many soft/loud effects) and altogether freer in timbre and approach - which, considering the nature of Benson's general playing, was appropriate and pleasant enough not to be willful or annoying. The music she performed was almost entirely devoted to a panoramic presentation of the clavichord's capabilities. The first group, a selection of 15th-, 16th- and 17th-century chorales, dances and fantasias, showed off the instrument's wistful intimacy, earliest important composer to conits ability to communicate directly on a personal basis with player and listener. Not until Chopin would the piano be able to boast such poetic qualities.

An elaborate and convoluted fantasia by Bach's eldest son, Wilhelm Friedemann, showed what forces were rendering the clavichord's subtlety obsolete: this was music that needed to be "shouted" much more forcefully than the instrument could. The Beethovenian adumbrage of the more dramatic sections of the work was beyond the clavichord's ability to express, though Benson gave it the proverbial college try.

AFTER THE INTERVAL, Benson essayed a work by another Bach -Carl Philipp Emanuel, of whom the New Grove's says: "C.P.E. Bach...was almost certainly the ceive his music solely in terms of the clavichord.'

His music for the instrument, as displayed in the "Free Fantasie in C" Benson played, fully exploited all its expressive possibilities from softest to loudest, from vibrato to powerful chords. Yet even here one sees the implication of keyboard development beyond this very pretty but very softspoken instrument. The violence and passion of Beethoven was at hand and the clavichord would go the way of the sackbut, the crummhorn and the portative organ.

But the instrument has a ideal proponent in Joan Benson: she is without doubt the Barbara Woodhouse of early keyboard music and practice. and I hope to hear more from her in the future.

Architecture collection on display in Cedar Rapids

By Suzanne Richerson Staff Writer

The current exhibit of architectural perspective drawings and plans on display at the Cedar Rapids Museum of Art bears the title Between Traditions and Modernism. It could have been named Looking Backward with as much accuracy, for the show contains only a peremptory nod to the modernist ideal.

The drawings and the portraits that accompany them are part of the collection owned by the National Academy of Design. They reflect the spirit of conventional architecture during the first quarter of the 20th century, during which time most of the public or

His drawing of a rotunda with symetrically extending colonaded wings behind a reflecting pool only hints at the modernism of Eero's later translation of the same motifs. The excitement of the John Deere headquarters building in Moline with its reflecting pool and clean lines combines the concepts of classicism without imitating its specifics.

Newman album laced with irony

Since debuting in 1969 with his selftitled, thoroughly unpopular pop masterpiece, Randy Newman has been one of music's most enigmatic, shrewd, confounding and provocative composers. As well as one of the very best

And while his last two LPs (1977's Little Criminals and 1979's Born Again) were all too often steeped in unbecoming bitterness and unredeemed cruelty, this year's Trouble In Paradise presents Newman again as the more humane, albeit cynical, craftsman that made 12 Songs, Live, Sail Away and Good Old Boys such undiluted pleasures.

Probably the most "American" of serious contemporary pop songsmiths, Newman carries a musical lineage that runs from Stephen Foster through turn-of-the-century ragtime through Depression-era laments through Sinatra-type crooners ("Lonely at the Top"), much of which is, in turn, blended with modern pop. Trouble In Paradise is easily Newman's most commercially accessible (and stylistically diverse) effort ever and represents his best shot at popularity since Little Criminals.

THE ALBUM KICKS off with the raucous "I Love L.A.," yet another of Newman's patented celebrations of American locales. Much like Good Old Boys' "Birmingham," the tone is defiantly tongue-in-cheek (as opposed to the bittersweet "Baltimore" or the tragicomic story of Cleveland's famous flaming Cuyahoga River, "Burn On")

Records

Driven by Waddy Wachtel's crunching rhythm guitar and aided by the backing vocals of Fleetwood Mac's Lindsey Buckingham and Christine McVie, "I Love L.A." is the hardestrocking tune that Newman has yet recorded.

Newman's fascination with miscreants, perverts, ne'er-do-wells and bigots comes to the fore in the powerful "Christmas in Capetown." Much as Lou Reed passionately embraces drug abuse to expose its horrors, Newman time and again ("Yellow Man," "Rednecks," "Sail Away" and now "Capetown") adopts the bile-fueled vernacular of prejudice to demonstrate the gaping holes in its logic.

Such posturing is effective, but it's also problematic: by promoting (at face value) socially unacceptable ideals there is a danger of backfire. For every person who senses and appreciates the implicit irony in these songs, there is at least another who uses "Heroin" and "Kill Your Sons" as soundtracks for drug abuse or a bigot who cheerfully sings along with "We're rednecks, we're rednecks/We don't know our ass from a hole in the ground/We're rednecks, we're rednecks/And we're keeping the niggers down." Having said that, the fact remains that "Christmas in Capetown" is an extremely moving composition.

PAUL SIMON contributes his vocal presence to the LP's single, a bouncy pop romp entitled "The Blues." Here Newman brilliantly anticipates and undercuts Simon's saccharine tendencies by first introducing Simon with a listing of all the complaints you'll be hearing from him ("He's gonna tell you 'bout his dear old mother/Burned up in a factory in Springfield, Mass.," etc., until he culminates with "He's got the blues, this boy ... "), so that when Simon finally enters with "When I was nine years old/My daddy ran away ...," the effect is hilarious.

But Simon's lamenting of his distant past becomes more immediate with: "A year ago, I met a girl/I thought we'd hit a massive groove/But she dumped me/And all we'd hit were the blues." A great tune and a fine guitar solo by Dean Parks (ex-Steely Dan).

'Same Girl'' and Side Two's "Real Emotional Girl" are poignant piano and vocal ballads in the Newman tradition, as is the album's closing ode to Viet vets, "Song for the Dead."

'Mikey's'' depicts a bar scene with an Archie Bunker-type "man out of time" on a half-drunk search for a missing wife/girlfriend — "I ain't mad or nothin'/I just wanna talk." Newman achieves further tension by underlaying his vocal ranting with a dissonant Bernstein-on-Broadway, Big-Applenervous staccato piano.

IN THE OUTRAGEOUS "My Life is Good," Newman assumes the identity of a boastful, name-dropping parent in conference with his son's teacher. The braggadocio peaks with a fictional encounter with "Mr." Bruce Springsteen ("a very good friend of ours") at the Bel-Air Hotel: "And you know what he said to me?/I'll tell you what he said to me/He said, 'Rand, I'm tired, how would you like to be the Boss for a while?'/Well...YEAH!/Blow, Big Man, BLOW!"

'Miami'' is still another great, if unflattering, page in the Newman Travel Guide. Featuring an adventurous arrangement that can only be described as a lurching, Caribbeanflavored Rag, "Miami" is presented as a seedy haven for gangsters, vegetating oldsters and degenerates who have traded their snow shovels for coke spoons.

Newman plays a repentant wastrel on "Take Me Back," a stomper that rides a ska-styled Farfisa, R & B horn charts, a galloping guitar line and Jeff Porcaro's sterling drum work back (we can only hope) into Randy's baby's arms

The good-timey "There's A Party At My House" is classic rock 'n' roll that takes off from a "Don't Be Cruel" intro and closes with a slightly kinky lyrical twist.

Randy Newman is a genuine national treasure, and Trouble In Paradise is a great and rewarding (if a bit difficult) pop work - well worth the three-year wait.

Liz update

In response to a letter from Patrick Lackey in yesterday's DI, here is the word on Elizabeth Taylor's new sweetheart, Victor Gonzalez Luna:

Luna is a 55-year-old divorced father of four from Guadalajara, Mexico, He and Liz met at a memorial service in September and have been making the rounds since. Liz has even had Luna stay at the Puerto Vallarta home she shared with Richard Burton - the first man since Burton to do so.

The romance is fairly serious, but there are two impediments to any marriage in the near future: Liz' bad experience in her separation and divorce from Senator John Warner, and Luna's four children, whom Liz has no desire to mother. True Liz watchers know, however, that no matter how serious the affair, a corner of Liz' heart will always belong to Dick.

Finally, as to Lackey's unseemly concern with weight: Luna is in trim, athletic shape, and Liz herself is down to a relatively svelte 128.

This is the first in a biweekly series of Entertainment today updates on the life and loves of Liz - a life almost as fascinating as Patrick Lackey's own.

Dance

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet concludes its Iowa City stay tonight with a performance at 8 p.m. in Hancher Auditorium. The program includes Vicente Nebrada's "Our Waltzes"; Oscar Araiz' "Family Scenes," set to the music of Poulenc; the pas de deux from Gorsky's "Le Corsaire" and Paddy Stone's "The Hands." Tickets are available at the Hancher box office.

Nightlife

At Maxwell's: the triumphant return of Akasha...at Gabe's: fusion jazz with Full House...at the Crow's Nest: dance your booty off with the Front Lines...at the Sanctuary: the mellow sounds of Brian Stawarz.

At the Bijou

Le Crime de Monsieur Lange is a Jean Renoir/Jacques Prevert fable about the triumphs of socialism during the worldwide depression of the 1930s. A pulp fiction writer, exploited by his publisher, forms a collective to run the company when the publisher leaves the company in the throes of bankruptcy.

M. Lange not only succeeds in reviving the company, he also revives the passion in the publisher's former mistress. Unfortunately, that's when the boss decides to return. But only for a while. Le Crime de Monsieur Lange almost ranks with Renoir's Rules of the Game as a cinematic classic. 7 p.m.

 And speaking of the depression, Frank Borzage's Man's Castle presents the story of a love that triumphs over economic woes. Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young star as the man and woman who find that their feelings for each other are the only escape from the destitution and despair of the Hooverville where they live. Borzage made the most romantic movi

Hollywood ever produced, and this is one of his best. 8:45 p.m.

Television

Political commitment expressed in poetry

Flowers from the Volcano by Claribel Alegria, translated by Carolyn Forche. University of Pittsburgh Press, 1982, 87 pp.

North Americans generally think of El Salvador as a battleground. For Claribel Alegria, it is the place of her dreams. Although she was born in Nicaragua, her family moved to El Salvador when she was very young. Since then she has lived in various parts of the Americas and Europe, but Alegria still considers the war-torn Latin American country her homeland. Flowers from the Volcano is a selection of Alegria's poetry chosen and translated by her friend and fellow author Carolyn Forche, who has also written a substantial amount of poetry about El Salvador.

This is the first opportunity for most North American readers to become acquainted with the work of Alegria, whose first book Gathering the Tribes won the Yale Younger Poets Award for 1976 and whose second, The Country Between Us, was the Lamont Poetry Selection for 1982.

Alegria's poetry is highly personal and political, a fact which attests to her commitment to human rights in Latin America. The word, rather than the gun, is her weapon.

THIS IS NOT to say Alegria is the Che Guevara of the literary set. Her revolutionary act is in bearing witness, not espousing rhetoric. The facts themselves, simply described, must provide the impetus for change:

Someone brought them to Palma the size of an iguana they ate insects and rats the climate was favorable they started to grow they left rats for chickens and dogs they ate more than one lonely donkey children turned loose on the streets the gutters were clogged as they fled to the fields.

In these first lines of poetry, the tone of the book is set: bleak, but not without hope; morbid, but with a spark of life fighting to ignite. Much of the force of Alegria's poetry resides in the unique characteristics of the Spanish language, a problem Forche readily acknowledges in the book's preface. Yet Forche manages to do a remarkable job of conveying the tone of the works.

IT HAS BEEN five years since the author and the translator met, but this volume evidences their kinship of spirits. Both have been active in bringing world attention to the brutal political repression in El Salvador. But in this work they have stopped being publicists and sing together as poets:

They still dress up on Sundays for High Mass in the Cathedral. It has been this way for forty years. They meet in the vestry as they go out they walk to the cafe near the park for vanilla sweets and to gossip among themselves. Thank God they are virgins! (All men are alike) At twelve each goes to her home.

Flowers from the Volcano is a bilingual edition with Alegria's poems and Forche's translations on opposite pages, making it easy for the reader to compare. The University of Pittsburgh Press has done a fine job of making the volume easily readable and relatively inexpensive.

IF YOU PURCHASE the book, though, it should be for the power of the poetry itself. Alegria does not write to entertain the the reader, but to bring one to a passionate awareness of what is happening in the world: My dead arise, they rage. The streets are empty but my dead wink at me. I am a cemetery, I have no country and they are too many to bury. As this example illustrates, the poems in Flowers from the Volcano are well worth reading. While they might seem a bit gruesome to the average reader's taste, life in Latin America is not the same as it is in Iowa City Book provided courtesy of Prairie Lights Bookstore.
