Reagan vows action soon on jobs plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan said Wednesday the economic recovery is "flexing its muscles," but too many unemployed Americans are suffering the lingering pain of the recession and he vowed quick action on a new jobs plan.

Reagan told a news conference he hopes to work out a compromise in "a few days" with congressional Democrats on his $4.3 billion plan to boost employment by speeding up federal construction work. He expressed hope the final package will be on his desk by March.

But the jobs program would not be "just a quick fix" to trim the nation's 10.4 percent unemployment rate, he said. The president's initial plan would create nearly a half-million jobs. There are 11.4 million Americans out of work.

DURING THE 35-minute session, Reagan also:

- Said he has full confidence in embattled Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne Gorsuch and he believes the agency's relationship with the firms it polices in its toxic waste program "is what it should be."

- Stood his ground on the EPA's refusal to turn over subpoenaed documents to a House subcommittee, which led the House to hold Gorsuch in contempt, saying the material was exempt from congressional scrutiny on grounds of executive privilege. He added, "We would never invoke executive privilege to cover up wrong-doing."

- Acknowledged U.S. military activity in the Mediterranean, but said the action was not unusual and not taken in response to any specific maneuvering by the radical Libyan regime of Moammar Khafady.

- Said he is "confident" an acceptable compromise will be worked out to shore up the Social Security system, and said it "ill-behooves" government employees to criticize the plan for forcing new-hires to join when all other Americans must pay taxes to the pension program.

- Declared he will resist efforts to eliminate the scheduled 1985 adoption of tax-indexing, which is designed to keep inflation from pushing taxpayers into higher brackets, repeating his argument that government for too long has used inflation as a hidden tax.

- Expressed solid support for Kenneth Adelman, his nominee to head the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament agency, and said he would try to convince reluctant senators to approve the nomination because "I believe the young man is eminently qualified."

Reagan wore a deep blue pin-stripe suit and blue tie as he faced reporters in the White House East Room for the 16th news conference of his term.

IN AN OPENING statement, he took note of new economic indicators announced Wednesday — a nearly 36 percent rise in housing starts from December to January and a 0.9 percent increase in factory production last month — and said, "As a result of the economic program already in place, the recovery is beginning to flex its muscles."

"But far too many Americans are still unemployed. The question before us of course is how to ease the burden upon us without jeopardizing the economic recovery," he said.

Reagan outlined his plan to speed up already-planned building projects worth $4.7 billion to provide 470,000 jobs, add $2.9 billion to fund supplementary unemployment insurance for workers whose benefits have run out, and add $300 million in

Highlights:

Jobs

Reagan hopes to work out a compromise with Congress in the next few days, and have a bill on his desk by March, that would include more than $4 billion in federal expenditures to provide 270,000 new jobs, $2.9 billion to fund supplementary unemployment insurance and $300 million in additional "humanitarian relief."

Arms control

Reagan plans to push ahead with his proposal to the Soviets to eliminate all land-based intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe — the plan Vice President George Bush advanced during his recent trip to ease the concerns of European allies. He called the Bush trip a "great success."

Social Security

Reagan said he is confident Congressional will okay the compromise plan to save the Social Security system, despite a provision that would bring new federal workers into the system for the first time.

Middle East

Reagan said he would back a bigger multinational peace-keeping force in Lebanon if it would aid in removal of PLO, Israeli and Syrian troops and speed peace in the Middle East.

AWACs planes

Asked about word from U.S. defense sources that the United States had sent AWAC to Egypt and ships to the Mediterranean in response to a Libyan military buildup on its border with Sudan, Reagan insisted the military movements are routine.

Taxes

Reagan said he would not consider a repeal of indexing, under which tax rates beginning in 1985 are scheduled to be adjusted to account for inflation. He said that because of lower inflation, indexing is not going to be very important anyway.

EPA controversy

Asked if he had "complete confidence" in EPA administrator Anne Gorsuch, Reagan replied: "I certainly do." Gorsuch has been cited for contempt of Congress by the House for refusing under a claim of executive privilege to turn over documents on how the EPA used the Superfund toxic waste clean-up program.

Gun control

Reagan repeated his long-held belief that gun control laws are not an effective means of gun control. "The guns aren't making people criminals," he said. "Criminals are using guns."

"humanitarian relief."

He stressed the plan would have a "minimal net impact on budget deficits," because "we would be spending more now and less later."

DEMOCRATS IN Congress have endorsed Reagan's package, but want to go farther, especially in terms of providing more relief to the suffering — by adding about $1 billion for summer youth jobs, nutrition aid for mothers and children and weatherization.

Reagan said those concerns would be addressed in a second group of proposals he will send Congress later to provide tax breaks to business for hiring the longer-term jobless and also help workers displaced by changing technology.

Intensive negotiations have been conducted between the White House and Capitol Hill on the package, and Reagan suggested progress has been made.

"I can't say we have agreed on every comma and period, but they have been very receptive," he said.

In addition to jobs and the economy, the session also focused on the EPA controversy and a variety of foreign affairs.

County documents may be microfilmed

By Suzanne Johnson
Staff Writer

The problem involving an overabundance of documents in the Johnson County Clerk of Court's office may be alleviated in July through microfilming.

When ongoing negotiations between Clerk of Court Mary Conklin and several firms are completed, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors will select a firm to microfilm the records now overflowing into an unlocked garage and into a small storage room piled high with dockets.

Lack of accessibility is the primary problem presented by the records stored outside the immediate office. Nancy Willis, an attorney with Security Abstract Company, 150 E. Court St., said she is sometimes unable to confirm an indexed offense because the actual document cannot be found in the piles of records in the small storage room.

The garage is not an adequate storage area, Conklin said, because the filing cabinets are beginning to rust and the documents could rot or become mildewed.

Although three or four years ago a staff member worked solely on microfilming, very little has been done since, Conklin said. "I had great intentions of continuing when it was possible, when it was feasible to have my staff members microfilm, but it just hasn't been that way."

FOR THE LAST two years Conklin has received bids from the Jorm Micro Lab, Cedar Rapids, at $30,000. Their bid this year was considerably higher — $50,000. The increase, Conklin said, is because she wants more records put on film than in previous years.

"But I have added a lot of documents to it — to what was there before. The documents I have added would get my records up to within 10 years.... According to the (Iowa) Code I can microfilm and destroy records 10 years past the judgment."

However, before the copied documents can be destroyed, a court order approving the action must be obtained.

Conklin attributes the board of supervisors' refusal of her request for funds to microfilm in the past two years to her proposal to do the microfilming without destroying the original documents.

"I've always been a little reluctant about destroying them.... In fact, I've had reluctance in the past, and that may be one of the reasons why the board refused my request the last couple of years, because they said I was defeating the purpose by microfilming and keeping the records."

ALTHOUGH CONKLIN has been turned down for the last two years, she said the board approached her this year. Before the microfilming is okayed, two more bids must be submitted to the board.

Which firm will do the microfilming is the remaining question. No work may begin until the onset of the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, Conklin said.

Another less favorable alternative to County Clerk of Court Mary Conklin stands amidst court records which have been piled into a small storage room in the Johnson County courthouse. The county is investigating the possibility of microfilming the records and those like it which are being stored in a garage outside the courthouse.

sending the documents out to be processed would be bringing in temporary staff to do the work in the clerk's office, Conklin said.

"However, I feel very certain that even if given the money for this, the amount that we have to do would take years to do... two, three, four years maybe."

Conklin fears this approach to microfilm conversion would bring great turnover.

"Because people would get tired of it, there's no doubt about it.... Let's face it, I think it would be a very boring job. I know it would be. I've done it in the past myself."

Johnson County Supervisor Betty

Ockenfels said the proposed move toward microfilming is a mutual one between Conklin and the board.

After the backlog of microfilming is dealt with, Ockenfels said she hopes it will be kept up to date.

Diemer calls student's charges of privacy invasion 'humorous'

By Kristine Stemper
Staff Writer

A state representative facing an ethics charge filed by a University of Northern Iowa student government leader said Wednesday the issue is being blown out of proportion.

"The legislators all think it's funny," said Rep. Marvin E. Diemer, R-Cedar Falls, of the complaint filed with the Iowa House of Representatives Ethics Committee January 28, charging him with invasion of privacy.

Diemer was accused by Jim Hessburg, vice president of the UNI Student Association, who wrote him January 14 asking his stance on raising the Iowa drinking age. As a response Hessburg received a letter dated January 24, in an envelope addressed to him but obviously intended for someone else's eyes.

The letter, addressed to UNI student Dana Barrer, read: "I am enclosing a copy of a letter I received from Jim Hessburg. Please review the letter and let me know what year Jim is in at UNI and any other information you can give me."

ACCORDING TO UI Student Senator Bruce Hagemann and UNISA President Rusty Martin, Diemer donated $25 to Barrer's unsuccessful campaign against Martin last year for UNISA president. This year Barrer is running against Hessburg for president.

Probably nothing substantial will come of the ethics committee's investigation of the matter, Diemer said Wednesday. "Basically down here in the legislature we get a lot of correspondence." Writing to others to get information about constituents who write lawmakers is "just a routine thing... legislators do it all the time," he said.

But Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, disagreed. "When somebody writes me a letter (to ask for a stance on an issue), I don't ask who they are. To my knowledge I have never done what Marv has done. I certainly don't ask for background or anything else."

Diemer said, "I think you're making a mountain out of a molehill. It was just one of those things; it's a humorous thing down here. The

UI Hospitals names new anesthesiologist

By Paul Boyum
Staff Writer

A man who considered it his patriotic duty to become a mechanical engineer is expected to be appointed as head of the UI Department of Anesthesia today.

John H. Tinker, of Rochester, Minn., one of the country's leading experts in cardiovascular anesthesia and coronary artery disease, should get approval from the state Board of Regents to head the department, one of 16 branches in the UI College of Medicine. Tinker, 41, will leave his position as chief of cardiovascular anesthesia at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester to take the position at UI Hospitals April 1. He described his position at Mayo as head of a division. He was in charge of eight operating rooms, 7 anesthesia staff members as well as residents and nurses.

As head of anesthesia here, Tinker will work with 60 faculty and staff physicians in the department. Widely known for his research, Tinker is expected to contribute to the department both clinically and academically, acting Head of Anesthesia Peter Jebson said.

"WE'RE BEHIND his appointment 100 percent. He has our full support," Jebson said. "He'll bring a flavor of academic anesthesiology that is well needed in the department. He's an acknowledged expert and I'm very op-

U.N. reports on executions

GENEVA, Switzerland — At least 2 million people have been arbitrarily executed in 39 countries over the past 15 years, a United Nations report said Wednesday. The report by the U.N. Human Rights Commission said 2 million was a "conservative estimate" since many of the executions, usually politically motivated, were not reported.

Iran, South Africa, Guatemala, Colombia and Argentina were given particular attention among 39 countries whose governments were said to have carried out executions without fair trials.

U.S. AWACs sent to Egypt

WASHINGTON — The United States, in response to a Libyan military buildup along its border with Sudan, sent four airborne command posts to Egypt and moved the aircraft carrier Nimitz to the central Mediterranean, defense officials said Wednesday.

President Reagan approved the decision over the weekend to dispatch the Nimitz from its station off the Lebanese coast to waters near Libya and to send Airborne Warning and Control System planes to Egypt, administration officials said.

Lavelle turns in records

WASHINGTON — Fired Environmental Protection Agency official Rita Lavelle evaded one congressional subpoena Wednesday, but her attorney accepted another and turned over her 1982 appointment books to a GOP-led Senate committee.

Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., chairman of a House Public Works subcommittee, continued negotiations with the administration to gain access to other disputed agency files and avoid further contempt of Congress action against EPA chief Anne Gorsuch.

Reagan to appeal rules block

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration decided Wednesday to appeal swiftly a court ruling that blocks rules requiring federally funded clinics to notify parents if their teenage daughters obtain birth control help. Thomas Donnelly, acting secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, said the government believes the rule is legally sound.

The regulation was scheduled to go into effect Feb. 25, but a New York federal judge granted an injunction to block its implementation pending a trial.

Councilors disagree on noise law's need

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

Last fall, some members of the Iowa City Council expressed displeasure with the city's new noise ordinance, although only one councilor, Clemens Erdahl, voted against it.

After seeing the ordinance in place for five months, Erdahl is still against it. "I'm still happy with my vote," he said Wednesday.

Erdahl listed three areas of the noise ordinance with which he has trouble, the first area being unequal enforcement. "Students are more visible and likely to have complaints against them than others."

The ordinance, he said, is also class-biased, in that it favors the richer segments of the Iowa City population, which is able to afford larger, better sound-insulated and more isolated housing.

IT IS ALSO too qualitative, Erdahl said. "One person's noise is another person's music."

Councilor Larry Lynch, however, said that isn't necessarily the case. "I think a person playing a stereo loud ... when it bangs into my head against my will, it's taking away my freedom of choice."

Lynch said council members were after "something precise and enforceable" when they enacted the noise ordinance.

"I think it's worked very well so far," he said.

He added that the ordinance is not directed against any one group. "It's not just the students we're dealing with, it's dogs and cars ..."

Police Chief Harvey Miller said the noise ordinance is "a little more specific" than previous laws the police had to go by, since it sets acceptable decibel levels.

Miller, however, would not say whether he thinks the ordinance is necessary. "If they (the council) want a noise ordinance fine. If not, the world won't come to an end."

HE ADDED THAT no studies have been made to determine the impact of the new ordinance on police officers' time. Miller did say there were an unusual number of noise complaints after it was first enacted.

Erdahl knows, even though he is opposed to it, the noise ordinance will probably not get repealed any time soon. "It's going to take three other people to start feeling like I do. I just think it is quite a bit of governmental interference."

One vote that could possibly sway Erdahl's way is that of councilor John McDonald. In an interview last November, McDonald said his vote in favor of the noise ordinance "bothered (him) more than any other" and that there was a "distinct possibility" it would be repealed.

Now three months later, McDonald said he is taking a wait-and-see attitude. "I would like to wait some more before making a conclusion ... the police did not get into totally enforcing it last fall."

McDONALD SAID, however, he still has reservations over whether the ordinance is enforceable. He said that in talking with people in other communities with similar ordinances, he has found the noise situation has improved, in most cases.

"I want to see if the situation (in Iowa City) is better than we had before," McDonald said.

Mayor Mary Neuhouser said the "real test" of the noise ordinance will come this summer when more enforcement is used on vehicles, barking dogs and stereos.

She added that she will be talking with police and other officials to see how they think the ordinance is working.

"I'm certainly willing to look at it and see if any adjustments need to be made," she said.

Police arrest suspect in rural home burglary

By Suzanne Johnson
Staff Writer

A Michigan man is suspected of burglarizing a rural Iowa City home Tuesday because his shoes match footprints found in the snow at the scene of the crime.

William F. Weber, 18, was arrested Tuesday after police matched his shoes to footprints found leading from the burglarized home at 15 Westview Acres, R.R. 6, to the house across the street where Weber is staying temporarily, according to Johnson County District Court records.

A screwdriver in Weber's possession matched marks made in the door jamb where the intruder gained entry.

Donald Bolvin, who resides in the burglarized home, said minimal damage was done to his house, and property valued at about $200 was stolen. He declined to disclose what was stolen.

Weber made his initial court appearance Wednesday and was released in the custody of the Sixth Judicial District Department of Correctional Services.

A woman whose husband died in a 1981 car accident filed suit Wednesday against Smith and Company, the bar he was at before he died.

Linda R. Dittert filed the suit involving dram shop liability in Johnson County District Court individually, and on behalf of her son.

In the petition, Dittert states Smith and Company, 1210 Highland Court, served liquor to her late husband, John M. Dittert, to the point of intoxication or while he was in an intoxicated condition.

As a result of his intoxication, Dittert was killed in an accident Feb. 20, 1981, the suit states.

Lorna K. Smith, the owner of Smith and Company, said Dittert had only a couple of beers while he was there.

A Coralville woman was fined $20 Wednesday after she was found guilty of failing to comply with school attendance laws.

Iris Brady failed to send her son John, 12, to Kirkwood Elementary School, according to Johnson County Magistrate Court records.

The complaint states Brady failed to place her son in school even after she was advised to do so.

Marriage continues to be plagued by economic, emotional pressures

By Tom Buckingham
Staff Writer

Although the virtues of the "traditional American family" are being extolled by religious and political leaders, the institution itself is still in rough waters.

The divorce rate still hovers at 50 percent and shows no signs of abating, and societal pressures are putting a heavy stress on intact families, according to UI Associate Professor Hallowell Pope, who teaches three courses dealing with the family.

Economic stresses, which are prevalent among families, given the double-digit unemployment rate, pose a problem "because they get intertwined with emotional problems," Pope said.

Other things that often cause stress include different job schedules, sexual problems, and children.

Ironically, when a couple has children they are less likely to get divorced, but they are more likely to be unhappy, Pope said. "A marriage is less happy with children because they cut down on the companionship that's shared between the husband and wife."

FRED KERSEY, head of the Marriage and Family Counseling Center, said although people often don't admit it, economic problems are often the root of their marital trouble. "They can't put a finger on it and say 'It's because of Reaganomics,' or 'We're fighting over money,' but it increases the stress in the relationship."

People in such situations often find that in order to cope they need to lean on their spouses for support. In many of the cases Kersey sees, however, the feeling is not always mutual. "A lot more people are trying to cling on to relationships, but unfortunately, it's usually one-sided."

The divorce rate, which increased dramatically with the entry of large numbers of women into the work force during the 1950s and 60s, will continue to remain high because there are economic and social alternatives to marriage now that did not exist before.

"There are alternatives, women are not bound to marriage because they have access to the job market," Pope said.

Despite the fact they only have a 50-50 chance of having a successful marriage, people are still flocking to the altar in droves. The major reasons the popularity of marriage has endured are that it offers companionship, sex, and children, Pope said.

"COMPANIONSHIP is the major reason. Sex is also a prime reason even though sex is available without marriage." Most people would also like to have children at some point in their lives, Pope said, and to most people marriage provides the most attractive environment for having children.

There is a tendency to look twice before taking the plunge among would-be lovebirds though, according to Deborah Quesal, who teaches "Courtship, Marriage, and Alternative Life-styles" at the UI.

Students are, in general, more conservative about their love-lives, she said. One aspect of that conservatism is the increasing number of people co-habiting rather than getting married. Such "trial" arrangements are becoming an added step in courtship, she added.

The marital ideals of the 1960s and 70s, which saw so much emphasis put on finding "fulfillment," seem to have fallen by the wayside under the pressures of the 1980s.

"In the 70s the economy was stronger, and it was easier to concentrate on esoteric ideals. Now it's just back to basics."

Gun control group lacks members

By Kirk Brown
Special to The Daily Iowan

The lack of a highly-charged, emotional issue is giving the Students Against a Violent Environment trouble finding members to lead its crusade for handgun control, self-appointed president John Climmer said.

The group was formed by two former UI students last year. However, neither of them has remained active this year, so Climmer has taken over leadership. Even though Climmer is the only active member, the group was given a budget of $138 from the UI Student Senate.

"I had a table set up with some brochures and a sign-up sheet earlier this year and about 80 people signed a petition. Out of those 80 around 20 people attended a screening of a film I showed. So far though, no one has made any effort to contact me and become actively involved in the group," Climmer said.

Climmer believes the lack of active members may be because of competition between the handgun control group and other student groups. "Things like nuclear disarmament and the EL Salvador situation are more emotional issues than gun control so it is easier for student groups involved with those issues to gain members."

CLIMMER SAID another reason his group hasn't attracted many members is that Iowa has a relatively low murder rate and people aren't as concerned with gun control as they might be in different regions of the country.

According to Pete Goodman, UI Student Senate treasurer, the money Climmer's group received was what he termed "seed funding."

"He (Climmer) has put some of his own money into the group and has shown resourcefulness in trying to gain new members and that is one of our main criteria when giving money to new student groups," Goodman said.

If the group ever gets going, Climmer said it will support views held by a national handgun control lobbying group, Handgun Control Inc.

"Handgun Control Inc. is a national organization that is headed up by Pete Shields, whose son was killed in a random handgun killing in 1974," Climmer said.

"The goal of Handgun Control Inc. is the strict control of the sale and manufacture of cheap handguns. Contrary to what a lot of people think, they are not out to take away the rifles from hunters or anything like that. They only want to restrict the use of small handguns which are useless for everything except easy concealment and up-close killing — they are in every sense of the word killing machines."

THERE IS currently a handgun bill before Congress, but Climmer has little hope of seeing the bill approved. "The National Rifle Association spends millions of dollars every year in lobbying to prevent gun control legislation from being passed. In fact, one of our Congressmen from Iowa, Rep. (Charles) Grassley, received nearly $60,000 from the NRA last year."

Climmer listed several of the common fallacies about gun control that he said the NRA promotes, including the importance of handguns for protection of the home. "People believe that handguns in their home will help to prevent burglaries. But the main goal of a burglar is to break into a home when no one is there, and oftentimes the handgun itself is stolen and then ends up being sold on the streets."

Climmer also said a large number of people are injured or killed each year from household handguns as a result of family arguments and accidents.

responsibility, male or female."

Capt. William R. Southwick, assistant professor of military science and an enrollment officer, said "We're looking for a well-rounded student." He said physical ability, athletics and school activities are also important characteristics for potential ROTC recruits.

Last year the top three cadets, based "strictly on performance," were females. About 15 percent of the UI battalion's enrollment is female.

Bob Stavnes, a UI journalism major, said he joined ROTC because "my finances were in chaos. ROTC helped me out financially and allowed me to continue my education."

Another ROTC member, Joe Sullivan, a UI junior in liberal arts, said, "I was always interested in the military. I get aid for school and have a better chance for a job when I come out." He added that on-the-job training and experience is beneficial.

ROTC enrollment up; economy cited

By Jeff Eichenbaum
Staff Writer

Enrollment is up this year in the Hawkeye Battalion of the U.S. Army's Reserve Officers' Training Corps, according to Maj. D.M. Vibbert, UI assistant professor of military science.

More than 120 cadets are enrolled in ROTC programs at the UI, Vibbert said, showing a "continuous upward trend" over the last few years. He said past enrollment was "significantly lower."

"The economy has affected us from the standpoint that you have people in school now who would (otherwise) be working, and as the student body enlarges, there are more kids who will select this form of instruction."

"Scholarships are also up," he said, "and so are the number of people applying for them." Nationwide, about 4,000 scholarships were awarded this year; about 13,000 people applied.

The scholarships are "a good deal," Vibbert said. "We don't care how much your parents make — there's no needs statement. We pay for tuition, books and $100 a month is given to the student."

Two-, three- and four-year scholarships are available to ROTC members; each has different requirements, Vibbert said. "The nice thing about the four-year scholarships is that the first year is a trial period," Vibbert said. "If they don't like it, they can walk."

VIBBERT SAID the ROTC program has been at the UI since 1874. "The program as we know it today dates back to 1917."

The traditional method of studying military science through ROTC is to start as a freshman in MS:I and progress one level each year, Vibbert said. "So as a senior you'd be in MS:IV and ready to graduate both from school and ROTC."

"We're looking for people with maturity, leadership and people that can accept responsibility, male or female."

Snow is bear-able

A 12-foot tall snow bear stands guard over the back yard of Harley and Marilyn Conrad in Tipton, Iowa. The chilling creation is the work of the Conrad's daughter Ann Conrad-Horstmann, left, who had the help of her sisters Gail, seated on the right, and Ruth, standing. The beast took four hours to build.

Breaking and entering reported by churches

By Quentin Pittluk
Special to The Daily Iowan

Two incidents of breaking and entering were reported by separate Iowa City churches Tuesday.

Trinity Episcopal Church, 320 E. College St., received approximately $500 worth of damage to three doors which were apparently pried open with a screwdriver. Iowa City police records show nothing appeared to be taken, though attempts were made to enter both the minister's and the secretary's offices.

St. Paul's Lutheran Chapel, 404 E. Jefferson St., had a small amount of change taken from the minister's office after someone pried open the door sometime Monday night or Tuesday morning, Iowa City police records show.

In addition, the First United Methodist Church received a broken window Monday night. The window replacement will cost from $150 to $200. Iowa City police records state nothing appeared to be taken.

Accident: A traffic accident that occurred Tuesday resulted in nearly $1,900 in damages. Charged with failure to stop with assured clear distance ahead was James Robert Rotter of 708 Dearborn St., whose car sustained approximately $1,000 worth of damage to the front.

John Michael Kintz, 422 Hawkeye Ct., was heading west on Burlington Street when Rotter hit the rear of his car, causing $900 worth of damage.

Injury: A 12-year-old lad was treated and released for second-degree burns on his arms and face after throwing a firecracker out of his home window. The youngster from the 200 block of Mahaska Drive was taken to Mercy Hospital Tuesday evening.

Police beat

Theft: Cedar Falls resident Alicia Luckritz reported to Iowa City police Tuesday that her purse had been stolen. Her brown canvas purse contained $40 in cash, a driver's license, checkbook and Continental Automatic Flash Camera.

Loss: A wallet containing $90 was reported lost Tuesday, along with a membership card to the UI Credit Union, according to Iowa City police reports.

Theft: A woman reported a $30 calculator and $18 in cash were stolen from the women's room in Macbride Hall. Stephanie McPherson, 804 Benton St., forgot her backpack in the toilet stall. When she returned, her pack was there but the calculator and cash were missing.

Lost cattle: Five black, whitefaced cattle were reported to be on the roadway 3.5 miles east of Iowa City. The owner was made aware of the problem.

Burglary: William Weber, of Auburn, Michigan was arrested for second-degree burglary in connection with a burglary at 15 Westview Acres Tuesday evening.

Fire report: Christine Luzzie of University Heights called the Johnson County Sheriff's office concerning a vehicle on fire. An Iowa City officer in the vicinity checked the area and found a smoldering car, but there were no injuries.

Legislative update

The Iowa Senate began debate Wednesday on the pari-mutuel betting bill that would legalize gambling on horse and dog races in the state.

If passed, only one track for horse racing, to be "centrally located," would be constructed, but Johnson County residents might be able to attend dog races held as close as Cedar Rapids.

Milton Carter, business director of Hawkeye Downs in Cedar Rapids, said Wednesday, "We're looking forward to a dog track. We already have the track — it would be ready to go."

Carter, who has worked at Hawkeye Downs since 1958, said he expects three dog racing tracks would be established in the state if the bill meets approval.

Some political fancy-footwork took place during the debate Tuesday before the Iowa Legislature Joint Education Appropriations Subcommittee approved $64 million in bonding for three building projects at the three state universities, Rep. Richard Varn, said.

The Senate subcommittee tried to add an additional $200,000 in bonding for a veterinary medicine laboratory at Iowa State University. In response, Varn proposed an $850,000 addition for utilities at the UI, and Rep. Michael Connolly, D-Dubuque requested more money for the University of Northern Iowa, "to even things up a little."

The trick worked — Varn's and Connolly's amendments failed, and the ISU laboratory project was dropped.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker, puffing a cigar, announces new money supply targets to Congress Wednesday. The targets should keep the government on about the same policy course it has been following to slow inflation.

Volcker announces Fed target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker Wednesday announced new money supply targets for 1983, saying they should allow the economy to recover without rekindling inflation.

Fed officials said the new targets are about the same as last year's, except they have been adjusted for changed conditions in the financial world.

Since the money supply grew faster than the Fed's targets last year, Volcker said, achieving essentially the same targets would mean slower growth of money during 1983 than actually occurred in 1982.

That is in line with the Fed's long-range policy of gradually slowing money growth to keep inflation down.

Announcing the new targets in an annual report to the Senate Banking Committee, Volcker strongly indicated the Fed will, as it has during the past year, apply them flexibly.

Volcker said rapid financial changes and uncertainty as to how long their effects will last have shown "the need for judgment and a degree of flexibility in pursuing the objectives we set for ourselves."

AMONG THESE changes have been the rapid growth of new kinds of bank accounts on which people can write checks and still earn high interest rates. These have altered the Fed's figures on different parts of the money supply.

At the same time, Volcker said, Americans during the past year have wanted to hold more of their assets in the form of quickly spendable bank accounts.

Economists have suggested several explanations for this, including the existence of the new accounts and public uncertainty about the future, particularly about unemployment.

A decline in the "velocity" of money means money "turns over" less rapidly. Because people do not spend it as fast, a given money supply does not have the same effect on economic growth or inflation.

Volcker said current interest rates are "consistent" with recovery this year and that lower rates would help long-range recovery in future years, but that quick efforts to reduce interest rates might raise them rather than lower them. The best way to bring them down, he said, is to keep inflation and public expectations of inflation down.

NOW-WE'LL PAY YOU TO ATTEND MEDICAL SCHOOL

In fact, we'll even pay you more than $550 a month while you attend. That's in addition to paying for your full tuition and required books and fees. It's all part of the Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarship Program. How does it work?

If you're selected for a Physician Scholarship—from the Army, Navy, or Air Force—you're commissioned as an officer in the Reserve. While you're in school, you'll serve 45 days a year on active duty, gaining valuable medical experience. After graduation, you will serve three or more years, the length depending on the requirements of the Service selected and years of scholarship assistance received.

As an Armed Forces physician you'll receive officer's pay and benefits, and enjoy the advantages of working regular hours. You'll also see a diversity of patients and have opportunities to use sophisticated medical technology. But most important, while you're in medical school we'll help pay the bills. For more information, send in the coupon. There's no obligation whatsoever.

legislators all think it's funny."

UI STUDENT Senator Polly Rock said, "It might be standard procedure, but it's not ethical procedure." If it is standard practice, she said, "we're in trouble because none of our private lives or our political workings are safe."

Hagemann, who co-sponsored a senate resolution denouncing activity similar to Diemer's, said "that may have kind of a chilling impact" on people writing to their legislators. "I think that's awful. What's right is to answer questions when people ask you questions on where you stand on an issue. To try to investigate (Hessburg) is pretty weird."

The student governments of Iowa State University and UNI also passed similar resolutions.

The UI senate resolution reads: "... such investigations of private citizens are clearly unethical either for Rep. Diemer or for any elected official ... the UISS calls upon the Iowa House Ethics Committee to reprimand Rep. Diemer and thus demonstrate to the public that these practices will not be tolerated."

UI Student Senator Tom Drew said, "It's not certain yet that there were any wrong-doings. I just want to see an investigation." If Diemer is found guilty, Drew said, "he should be severely reprimanded."

UI Student Senator Tony Almquist abstained on the resolution vote. "I thought it was just an isolated incident. I think he made a stupid mistake, (but) it's something that doesn't really concern the U of I."

timistic about the department's future."

Tinker's rise to success began in high school during the days of the space race. The Soviets had launched their first Sputnik spacecraft during Tinker's final years in high school. He decided to enter the University of Cincinnati as a mechanical engineering major.

"It was almost a patriotic duty to go into engineering at the time. I eventually began to like the biological sciences better and by my junior year I had switched into pre-med," Tinker said Wednesday.

"My engineering background is why I deviated into anesthesia in the first place. I loved to play with gadgets and that type of thing and there's some of that involved in anesthesia."

Tinker said the position at UI Hospitals was one he could not pass up. "The spot was the next logical step in my career," he said. Jebson said the search committee had narrowed the field to two or three candidates before selecting Tinker.

"I'M AT A STAGE in my career where I want to help younger people push their own careers forward. With fewer resident positions available, the field of anesthesia will be able to attract larger numbers of really first-class residents."

"I'll have my choice of some of the best and brightest students." And Tinker knows what "bright" means. He was first in his class all through medical school.

After receiving undergraduate and graduate degrees from Cincinnati, Tinker did post-doctoral work in anesthesia at Harvard University. He served in the Army for two years at a military hospital.

He took a staff position at the Mayo Clinic in 1974, and rose through the ranks while keeping a busy lecture schedule and publishing numerous articles and medical textbook chapters.

Tinker is a consultant to the Journal of the American Medical Association and an examiner for the American Board of Anesthesiologists and the American College of Anesthesia.

Local roundup

UNI plans new rodent haven

They have to get the rats out before the University of Northern Iowa can tear down the Old Administration Building.

But these aren't your average rats. According to Albert Gilgen, professor and head of the UNI Psychology Department, the 1,000 animals in the rat lab represent 16 different strains of laboratory rats.

This "extremely valuable facility" is one of only four such rat labs in the world, Gilgen said. Other places include Tokyo, Pittsburgh and a U.S. government lab.

The experimental rat colony, now housed in the aging structure, would be moved into part of a vacant 11,520 square foot warehouse if the state Board of Regents approves UNI's proposal today.

The proposal is for the university to purchase the Daisy Dairy Inc. property at 9301 University Ave., Cedar Falls for $190,000.

"The relocation of this colony removes another obstacle to demolition of the Old Administration Building which, if the Communication Arts Building is funded by the legislature, will be demolished at the close of spring semester," the proposal states.

Fowl federation features gobble game

Turkey callers will have a chance to strut their stuff when the 1983 All-Iowa Turkey Calling Contest is held March 4-5 at the Five Seasons Center in Cedar Rapids.

The contest is part of the annual meeting and convention activities of the Iowa Wild Turkey Federation.

Also featured during the two days of festivities will be seminars on wild turkey calling, hunting and biology. Among the speakers will be former turkey calling champion Dick Kirby and Shirley Grenoble, an author and turkey expert.

Roger Raich, director of the Iowa Wild Turkey Federation, said Wednesday they hope to have 25 to 30 turkey callers enter the contest and added there will be a separate division for junior callers.

When asked what the judges look for in turkey calling, Raich said, "Well, you've just got to know how to imitate a turkey."

He said for only $5 a person can get into both the turkey calling contest and the turkey seminars as well. It's a bargain at any price.

Students oppose bill prohibiting aid to draft resisters

A law that prohibits students who fail to register for the peace-time draft from receiving financial aid has been proposed by Congress and has met opposition by UI students involved in the Student Coalition Against Registering for the Draft.

Jim Korey, a member of SCARD, said, "I know of a number of people who won't receive financial aid" because they fail to register. He also said students "shouldn't be forced to go against their judgment and register."

John Moore, UI director of admissions and student financial aid, said the proposed law will not take effect until July 1 if it is passed.

Korey said it should not be up to the UI to find students who have not registered for the draft nor should it concern UI to punish these students. "Education is not the place to punish non-registers."

Cranston to speak on cuts in student aid

California Sen. Alan Cranston will speak at 4 p.m. Feb. 28 in the Union, UI Student Senator Tony Almquist told members of Associated Residence Halls at an ARH meeting Tuesday night.

Almquist said Cranston, the first major party candidate to announce his run for the 1984 presidency, will address proposals by the Reagan administration to cut federal programs for college student aid. Feb. 28 has been declared "Student Aids Awareness Day," Almquist said, in connection with Cranston's visit.

The visit will be Cranston's second visit to Iowa City, his first since officially declaring himself a candidate for president on Feb. 2.

UNI, regents set negotiation schedule

A timetable has been set for contract negotiations between the University of Northern Iowa faculty union and the state Board of Regents.

Elaine Kalmar, negotiations chairwoman for United Faculty, said the final negotiation session will be Monday Feb. 21, beginning at 4 p.m. A United Faculty meeting will be held Feb. 23 when members will decide what action to take concerning the 1983-85 master agreement.

They can vote to approve a negotiated settlement if one has been reached, accept the fact-finders recommendations or vote to go to arbitration.

The parties have agreed on an arbitrator should they need one. Neil Gunderman of Wisconsin has been selected to preside over the hearing which will be held Feb. 25 if a settlement is not reached by then.

The arbitrator's decisions are binding on United Faculty and the regents. Gunderman has three options on any article submitted to him. He can agree with United Faculty's best final offer, agree with the regents final offer or agree with the fact-finders recommendations.

By law, the process must be finished by March 15.

Tuck-in service enters the limelight

Two UI students operating an unsuccessful bed tuck-in service found themselves the subject of a television report last week.

According to Roy Snyder, who operates the tuck-in service with a friend, Keith Hinman, he received a phone call from an acquaintance working at television station KCRG last week, inquiring about what kind of success their tuck-in service had enjoyed.

"We haven't had any business at all but I told him we were busy with runs almost every night," said Snyder.

"Then he asked if they could bring down a film crew Sunday night and film us in action and I told him yes."

Snyder then asked a high school friend, UI student Laura Nelson, if she would agree to be tucked in. She consented and on Sunday night Hinman and Snyder, wearing three-piece suits, tucked Susan into bed, told her a bedtime story, and sang a lullaby.

"It was all really funny," said Snyder. "We hadn't had any interest at all except for a couple of prank phone calls and we end up on the 6 o'clock news."

Union is brought up to fire standards

As part of a large UI project to upgrade fire deficiencies in several UI buildings, the Union is presently undergoing construction to bring the building up to code.

Burger Construction Company was contracted by the UI to complete the work in the Union and several other buildings. Work on the Union, which is due for completion in May, is estimated to cost the UI $281,000.

Richard Gibson, director of facilities planning, said contingencies, design, and administration fees could add 25 percent to this cost.

The project is being funded by the UI. "I can think of many things we would rather spend this money on," Gibson said. "We're only spending this money because we have to."

Gibson said the work consists of the addition of fire doors, stairs, and exit lights, "basically to improve the escape routes." A fire alarm system is also being installed.

"Architecturally, this will mean losing some openness," Jean Kendall, director of the Union said. "It will change the looks of the building considerably."

Trash collectors get a holiday

It's official: No trash will be picked up by the city this Monday in observance of George Washington's birthday.

Tuesday, however, the city's sanitation department will do Monday's route in addition to half of Tuesday's route. By Wednesday, everything will be back to normal.

Also on Feb. 21, all city offices in the Civic Center will be closed.

The Iowa City Public Library, however, will be open during its regular hours and city buses will operate on their normal schedule. Also, the Recreation Center will be open for activities.

For those upset with parking around Iowa City, people will be given one day to get revenge as parking meters in the city will not be enforced.

Finally, the city landfill will close at noon Monday, but will reopen for regular operations Tuesday. The Senior Center will serve congregate meals and remain open from 10:30 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Trips offered for spring break

Four glorious trips to New York, Texas, Florida and Utah are being offered by University Travel for the quickly-approaching spring break.

Only 25 seats remain on a round-trip Amtrak charter to The Big Apple which includes hotel accommodations for only $298. And, if four people sign up together they will get $25 off the total cost of the trips.

Hotel reservations in Padre Island, Texas, are available through the travel service for $119, but bus transportation will cost an extra $115.

It's that important?

For years, viewers of soap operas have been laughed at for complaining that their favorite show has been blanked out for a presidential press conference.

But thanks to the decision of the Iowa Television Network to blank out part of last night's Indiana-Iowa basketball game for President Reagan's press conference, the issue of political intrusion into television has been raised far more immediately and effectively.

Virtually since their inception, television networks have tended to view every appearance and utterance of the president as taking precedent over anything else going on the country — the coverage of President Reagan's Valentine's Day foray this week is one of the more absurd and vivid demonstrations of this practice.

Such a policy is more or less necessary for television. The president is an attractive visual representative of all America, and it's much easier for television to focus on an individual symbol than to examine the various bodies and systems that make the whole work.

But this policy also gives the office of the president power beyond that defined in the Constitution. The role of television in the creation of the "imperial presidencies" of Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon has been noted by a number of critics; every president since has attempted to use to his best advantage the privilege afforded by the networks of free access into every home.

What makes the loss of the Indiana-Iowa basketball game to a Reagan press conference, though trivial on the surface, a serious issue is the fact that to a great many people in this area, the game was news more immediately important than what the president has to say — especially given that the other networks broadcast the briefing.

That presidential statements are news is beyond question. But whether they are news that requires the attention of every major broadcasting outlet to the supersession of any other news is an issue that local broadcasters, if not national networks, should begin to examine.

Walkman ban rejected

It is not uncommon to see Iowans jogging, biking, farming or even walking to classes while wearing headphones — the use of walkman-type radios and tape players has increased dramatically during the past two years. This week two state senators, including Iowa City's own Art Small, were caught listening while lawmakers were debating new legislation.

The issue being discussed was a proposal by Sen. George Kinley, D-Des Moines, to ban pedestrians from wearing headphones when they walk or run on Iowa's streets and highways. Other lawmakers added prohibitions barring automobile and bicycle riders from using the portable stereos.

Small and his colleague Tom Slater, D-Council Bluffs, donned headphones to demonstrate how absurd they felt the proposal was. As Slater listened to jazz singer Michael Franks on tape, the senator called the debate going on around him "ludicrous."

His assessment of the discussion is correct. Portable stereos are an affordable and practical method of carrying around one's music. With the increase of car-tape player thefts and the general consensus on the obnoxiousness of boom boxes, these small devices are a godsend.

It is true that wearing headphones can be dangerous when the individual is in a potentially hazardous situation and the volume is cranked up too loud. But as Small has pointed out, it is no more perilous than driving with car speakers blaring away.

Therefore, it is up to the individual to behave in a responsible manner while listening to music and engaging in an other activity. This includes setting the volume at a reasonable level. Kinley's proposal was patently absurd, and we welcome the senate's decision to reject it.

Beefing up diets

Meals featuring beef have normally been described with adjectives like "hearty." But the increasing popularity of certain competitive meats, notably fish and poultry, combined with the ongoing calorie-consciousness of many overweight Americans, may soon give rise to beef dinners that are more "hardly" than hearty — as in "hardly any calories at all."

Such beef-industry organizations as the Cattleman's Association are now promoting the concept of "lite beef," and encouraging restaurants to offer more low-calorie beef meals. If their promotions are successful, the prime rib dinner and its potato-and-sour-cream accompaniment will be joined on the menus of America by such calorie-conscious concoctions as the "Western Lite Broil." This meal, served to many interested Iowa cattlemen at a December banquet, includes four ounces of thin-sliced lean beef cut from the round, sirloin, or flank; a salad featuring olives, mandarin orange slices and oil-free lo-cal dressing; a bran muffin; and sesame seeds. In a country where an estimated 70 million individuals consciously diet at least part of the year, such fare may become popular, even in the most prestigious restaurants.

Such a result could have serious international repercussions. Can American youth, motivated to eat for years by stories of people starving in other countries, believe anymore in their own cultural superiority when faced with a plate of lite beef, bran muffin and sesame seeds? If the frenzied eating orgies of the Romans made them soft and unfit to defend themselves against the encroachments of their enemies, can a nation of emaciated wraiths fare any better in matters of national defense?

The long-term effects of lite beef should remain a meaty issue for some time to come.

'ARISE, SIR DUMP!'

Consumer group fights utilities

By Jim Schwab

IOWA CONSUMER groups are beginning to reach the promised land of utility legislation after years of wandering in the desert. Led by the rapidly growing Iowa Citizen/Labor Energy Coalition, which now boasts 88 affiliated organizations, they will be spending most of this week in Des Moines fighting off a counterattack by utility lobbyists. At stake is the most significant utility reform legislation in Iowa in the last decade.

Under its new chairman, Ned Chiodo, D-Des Moines, the House Commerce Committee has been constructing a bill that meets many of IC/LEC's key priorities for restraining both utility costs and the power of utility companies. The four-year-old organization had succeeded in winning only minor portions of its energy program from the General Assembly before this year.

The most serious battle will probably center on the treatment of excess capacity in the rate base. Most Iowa utilities have overbuilt their electric generating facilities, and consumers have pressured the Commerce Commission to penalize them for poor planning. Until recently, utilities were used to a steady growth rate of 5 to 7 percent in their annual peak load — the maximum amount of electricity demanded during any one-hour period — and extrapolated this rate into the distant future in planning power plant construction.

CONSERVATION EFFORTS by customers, added to a slower rate of economic growth, altered this. In 1981, according to the Iowa Energy Policy Council, not only did the rate of growth in electricity consumption decline, but the actual amount consumed fell by about 3 percent. The utilities, which when the Louisa coal-fired plant opens later this year will be saddled with excess capacity above peak load running from 23.4 percent (Iowa Southern) to 80.7 percent (Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric), now face a major pricing dilemma.

Utility profits are by law a

reasonable rate of return on a rate base that consists of capital investments. Customers are paying for a combination of amortized capital costs, profits and current operating expenses.

Utilities seeking to recover the costs of excess capacity are providing added incentive to customers to conserve by charging higher rates than utilities that planned more wisely. The result for Iowa's utilities is conservation that aggravates the excess capacity problem, and an increasingly aggressive stance by the Iowa State Commerce Commission in penalizing utilities for excess capacity.

ALTHOUGH THE FINAL version of the Chiodo bill is still in committee, it now seeks to deny utilities any profits on excess capacity above a 15 percent reserve margin. The result would be a major change in the pattern of Iowa utility regulation, yet consistent with the historical rationale of allowing a return on "used and useful equipment." Unneeded generating capacity does not conform to that rationale.

In part because increased conservation would only enlarge an excess capacity ratio for which they are already being penalized, utilities can be expected to resist another significant portion of the bill, which defines utility service to include conservation. This redefinition would mean that investments in reducing the need for electricity or natural gas would be considered equally valid components of the rate base with traditional investments in generation and distribution equipment.

In other words, if a $200 million program of no-interest weatherization loans, rebates for the purchases of more efficient air conditioners, and home energy audits would forestall the need to build a $500 million power plant, consumers would be better off allowing the utility to earn profit on the smaller investment.

THIS CONCEPT recognizes that consumers do not use energy strictly for its own sake, but to perform such tasks as heating and cooling homes, cooking, or washing clothes. If less energy at less cost can do the same job, consumers have more money to spend or save elsewhere. The utilities' difficulty, however, is that they should have done this before they built the extra capacity. Now, they can only preserve their profit margin by continually increasing rates as the public conserves, because the same huge costs are spread over fewer kilowatt hours.

As a further measure to ensure this does not happen, the bill creates an office of consumer rate counsel, independent of the Commerce Commission, to represent consumers in rate hearings. The bill places this new advocate with the attorney general's office, and allows Iowa to join 35 other states with similar agencies.

The last decade of rising utility costs, however, has another side. Increasingly, there has been a human toll as more Iowans have had to cope with high energy bills. The growing concern with winter shutoff regulations is a manifestation of this human side of the energy planning problem.

Shutoffs were not addressed in the original draft of Chiodo's bill. As a subcommittee of the House Commerce Committee listened to Iowans in six field hearings around the state, however, it became apparent that while support was strong for structural reform in Iowa's utility laws, shutoffs had generated some of the deepest anger.

EXISTING COMMERCE Commission rules prohibit shutoffs when temperatures fall below 20 degrees Fahrenheit, and prescribe certain conditions under which they can be postponed, including medical problems. Yet IC/LEC documented last fall that Iowa Power and Light Co. of Des Moines had failed to comply adequately with notification requirements in shutting off power to more than 11,000 customers in Altoona, Avoca and Adair during 1982. The Commerce Commission, contending it has no power to fine the utilities for violating regulations, merely required the company to revise the notice it used.

The utilities may now be faced with a new law giving power to the Commerce Commission to fine them for such violations. Consumers in the field hearings, however, were going further in advocating a complete ban on winter utility shutoffs, a notion that had never before received serious consideration by either the commission or the legislature.

On Feb. 11, however, the subcommittee reviewing the bill voted to add a moratorium on all utility shutoffs between Nov. 1 and April 1, unless a utility could prove a customer could pay the bill. And the subcommittee voted to add a section repealing the utilities' existing exemption from the Consumer Credit Act, which sets limits on the methods creditors can use to collect bills.

REP. MICHAEL GRONSTAL, D-Council Bluffs, expressed the majority sentiment for the committee by saying, "I don't want to read in a newspaper in Iowa that someone has frozen to death because of some administrative hassle. And I don't want to see anybody in the state freeze to death because of our inability to deal with the problem."

Still, consumer groups see themselves at the beginning of a struggle, rather than at the end. The legislation must still pass both houses and win Gov. Branstad's signature. After that battle has been won, IC/LEC and its allies still see major battles over rate increases before the Commerce Commission, national fights over the Reagan administration's plans for gas deregulation, and further efforts at reform, such as getting an elected Commerce Commission. For the first time, however, not all of its struggle is uphill.

Schwab is a UI graduate student and a board member of the Iowa Citizen/Labor Energy Coalition.

Farts not funny

To the editor:

So Jeffrey Miller feels that comedian Joan Rivers is a liberating force in television because she does comedy about her sex life and fart jokes (DI, Feb. 1). That's interesting. As a comedian, I tried to serve as a liberating force in the Union Wheelroom and I just got kicked out for being obscene — twice.

Joan Rivers is neither innovative nor a feminist. She is merely a woman performing a woman's version of the same crass sex jokes that have made Buddy Hackett and Shecky Greene famous. If Rivers is great because of her candidness, Rusty Warren must be an absolute genius.

It has taken me several painful years to realize that merely being sexually open on stage isn't good enough any more. I used to do a routine about my virginity. It was very open and truthful. But it was not funny. Comedy and sex and the bathroom have been done to death by thousands of comedians. It is time to find new topics and new techniques, and Joan Rivers is not the answer.

Crime of passion

To the editor:

After reading the article, "Miller makes pitch for 6 more officers" (DI, Feb. 7), I was sympathetic to Police Chief Harvey Miller's request for additional officers for the force. However, after a recent occurrence at 12:45 p.m., I can appreciate the Iowa City Council's position of questioning the need for six additional officers in this time of economic hardship.

It was then that I and my accomplice were apprehended by two police officers, each with a patrol car, for the insidious act of "public games": throwing snowballs from public property at a friend on the Pentecost sidewalk. After receiving a reprimand of inordinate length, which included verbal citations of the possible legal repercussions of such a flagrant violation of the law and a discourse of the hydrological system and the proper role of snow in that system, I thought the Iowa City Police Dept. needed a continuing education program much more desperately than additional officers.

With the police not being able to respond to calls during 38 days during the past year because of officers being tied up with other duties, let's hope this is just a singularity of police patrol action. Better yet, let's review fully this issue of additional police manpower and subsequent funding of the $22,000 necessary for each additional officer on the force in the future. With us as private citizens being forced to operate in a more efficient and effective manner, I don't think it is asking too much of the taxpayer to seek the same in patrolmen.

Wasted energy

To the editor:

J.C. Wilke is taking a two-year sabbatical to crusade against a "fundamental right," (according to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1973), a woman's right to choose whether to have an abortion. Before Roe vs. Wade, women seeking abortions placed themselves in grave danger, legally and physically. But no, after women have known the triumphant feeling of freedom over their own bodies, they will never go back to the past. As would be seen, outlawing this, as any other fundamental right, would put the legal system in turmoil.

So, my suggestion to Wilke (or sooner his followers as I'm sure he won't be reading this — it's off to another crusade date for him) is not to waste time and worthwhile lecture committees' funds on preaching to get legislation that could never last anyway. Such fine speaking skills, time, and energy could be much better utilized on a crusade for world peace, against world hunger, or closer to the heart, for birth control and against child abuse in such areas as those of high poverty.

Iowa's Jim Thomas, No. 20, searches for a shot as Iowa's Steve Carlino, right, and Greg Stokes hurry into position to defend during first half action of the 15th-ranked Hawkeyes' 58-57 upset win over top-ranked Hoosiers in Bloomington Wednesday night. Stokes scored 22 points to lead the Hawkeyes who are now within two games of first-place Indiana in the Big Ten title race.

Iowa's stunning win answers all prayers

By Melissa Isaacson
Assistant Sports Editor

Who would have ever believed it? The Iowa Hawkeyes may actually start looking forward to playing the Indiana Hoosiers, and in Bloomington yet.

In an extremely impressive 58-57 victory over the Hoosiers, Iowa's second over Indiana this season and fifth in the last six games, the Hawkeyes answered every prayer Lute Olson could have possibly had.

Not only was it another pressure win — the third in a row for the Hawkeyes, but they again had the pleasure of spoiling the No. 1 position for Indiana. In Iowa City, the Hawks' win dashed the Hoosiers' hopes of clinching the top spot and Wednesday night in Bloomington, it ruined their chances of holding onto it.

INDIANA HAD BEEN named the best in the country by United Press International on Tuesday.

Ironically, the Hawkeyes used defense to beat a team coached by the man who practically invented it. There was no glitter involved; just an honest blue-collar job turned in by a group that's turning close games into a weekly habit.

"It was a great win for our guys," Olson said. "The approach we've taken with them is that if you continue to play hard enough for long enough, good things are going to happen to you."

Hero-wise, just start from the top of Iowa's starting line-up and work your way down because all five made key contributions.

If Ted Kitchel does not make the All-American team this season, he may send a nasty letter to Iowa's Michael Payne.

IT WAS PAYNE who gave Kitchel fits two weeks ago on national TV in Iowa City and it was Payne again, along with some help from Greg Stokes, who put the clamps on, ahem, the Big Ten's leading scorer Wednesday night in Bloomington.

Kitchel was held scoreless in the first half and managed just six, on 2-for-13 shooting, in the second half. He also committed six turnovers.

Payne also contributed the final Indiana and Kitchel epitaph in the form of a blocked shot with 10 seconds left in the game.

Olson had said before the ballgame that if Randy Wittman got hot early, it could pump up his confidence and create a snowball effect.

BUT NOT EVEN the fifth-year senior with his uncanny accuracy, scoring 20 points in the first half and finishing with 33 to tie his career high, could get the Hoosiers over the hump.

Greg Stokes, aside from leading the Hawkeyes in scoring with 22 points on 9-for-16 shooting — if that wasn't enough — tore down nine rebounds and picked off steals like a little man.

All of which brings us to Steve Carlino, whose dramatic steal and open-court lay-in in the closing seconds of the first half tied the game at 28 and gave the Hawkeyes some big-time momentum at the start of the second half.

The first 20 minutes, however, were probably less than Iowa co-captain Bob Hansen could have hoped for personally. Held scoreless in the first half, the second-half drama had his name written all over it.

THE HAWKS WERE doing fine in the first five and a half minutes of the second half, opening up a seven-point advantage. But that soon dwindled and six minutes later, the Hoosiers had clawed back and then some, taking a three-point lead on a Kitchel jumper.

Carlino came back hitting one of his patented three-pointers and the teams were tied. But two Wittman baskets later, the Hawks found themselves behind once again and it was, in the immortal words of Lute Olson, "senior time."

Hansen rose to the occasion in true upperclass form, hitting three clutch shots in a row, the third of which, a high arc shot over 7-foot-2 Uwe Blab believe it or not, gave Iowa a two-point lead which they would never relinquish.

Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, not normally given to praise, had some nice things to say about Hansen.

"Hansen's a helluva competitor," Knight said. "He's a kid I've really enjoyed watching play. His three baskets down the stretch really broke our backs."

Cincinnati a bearcat to Gophers

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Marc Wilson scored the go-ahead basket with 46 seconds left and sank two free throws with 12 seconds remaining to lift Minnesota to a 49-46 victory Wednesday night over Cincinnati.

Cincinnati opened a 44-41 lead with 4:01 left on Dwight Jones' basket. Consecutive field goals by Minnesota's Roland Brooks and Tommy Davis gave the Gophers a 45-43 lead with 3:06 to go. The Bearcats, who used a deliberate, offense, regained the lead with 2:15 remaining on Myron Hughes' basket.

CINCINNATI LOST the ball out of bounds on its next possession and Wilson scored to make it 47-46. The Bearcats' Kevin Gaffney missed with 30 seconds left, Wilson grabbed the rebound and was fouled to set up the Gophers' final two points.

Minnesota center Randy Breuer, who scored in double figures the previous 25 games, was held to four points. Wilson led Minnesota, 15-6 on the season, with 14 points while Brooks added 12. Gaffney had 14 points and Jones 13 for the Bearcats, who fell to 11-12 on the year.

Redskins' Gibbs easy winner for Coach of the Year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Washington's Joe Gibbs, who for more than a decade wondered if he'd ever get a chance to guide a professional team, Wednesday was named a runaway winner as UPI's NFC Coach of the Year.

Gibbs, who led the Redskins to the world championship in just his second season as an NFL head coach, received 50 votes in balloting from 56 writers, four from each NFC city. Bart Starr picked up three votes for leading Green Bay to the conference playoff semifinals, Dallas Coach Tom Landry received two votes and Bud Grant of Minnesota was named on one ballot.

"For a long while, my biggest fear was that I wouldn't ever get a shot at an NFL head coaching job," admits Gibbs, who lost his first five games with the Redskins last year only to post an 8-3 record for the remainder of 1981.

"I was passed by a couple of times and I always had confidence in myself that I could do the job."

GIBBS, 42, had 17 years of coaching experience before being hired by the Redskins, including 10 under current San Diego Chargers' coach Don Coryell. The graduate of San Diego State came to the NFL in 1973 as offensive backfield coach for St. Louis under Coryell and the Cardinals posted a 42-27-1 mark in Gibbs' five years as an assistant. He served as offensive coordinator for Tampa Bay in '78 under John McKay before returning to Coryell in 1979 as the Chargers' offensive coordinator.

After his roller-coaster rookie year with the Redskins in '81, Gibbs helped Washington evolve into the league's most consistent team this year. Using a 'one-back offense (fullback John Riggins) and confusing motion by the tight end, the Redskins notched an 8-1 record during the regular season, losing only to Dallas, then reached Super Bowl XVII by whipping the Cowboys 31-17 in the conference title game.

"I THINK I HAVE my priorities set pretty well," Gibbs says. "Football is not No. 1. First is God, then family and friends, and then football, No. 3."

The Redskins, a young team with more than half the roster filled with free agents, reached the No. 1 spot in the NFL Jan. 30 with a convincing 27-17 triumph over Miami, combining Riggins' record-setting running and a stifling defense for their first Super Bowl title.

"Going into this season our schedule was rated the toughest in the NFL and we had a lot of unproven players in key positions," Gibbs reflects. "I guess you could say we arrived earlier than expected."

Diamond gear out of this world

NEW YORK (UPI) — Imagine baseball uniforms that look as if they were made for Capt. Kirk and the Star Trek team.

They may be here sooner than you think. Using the same technology that NASA used to develop a line of safety equipment for travels in outer space, the Mizuno Corporation of Osaka, Japan, has come up with a line of futuristic baseball uniforms that are designed according to the safety needs of a player's position.

The new uniforms were unveiled Wednesday by the Curley Bates Co. of Burlingame, Calif., the exclusive importer and distributor of Mizuno baseball and footwear products in the United States.

MADE WITH A special all-weather polyurethane material — the same fabric used in ski outfits — the new uniforms are one-piece outfits designed to keep players cool in the hot spring and summer months and warm on chilly fall evenings.

A safety feature in the form of reinforced padding in specific areas is the major selling point of the uniforms. Each uniform is constructed a little differently, according to position. For example, an infielder's uniform would have special padding to cushion knee and shin areas from critical spiking injuries and a catcher's uniform would have extra padding in the thigh, hip and chest areas to protect against foul tips.

ACCORDING to George Sheldon, president of Curley-Bates Co., the concern for safety evolved from the head-first slide made popular by two players under contract to Mizuno — base stealing king Rickey Henderson of the Oakland A's and Pete Rose of the Philadelphia Phillies.

"Ballplayers are bigger, stronger and faster than ever," Sheldon said, "and therefore the risk of injury from a collision or other accident is also greater."

"Yet, surprisingly, little attention has been paid to added safety measures in baseball. In addition, young amateurs imitate the play of players like Henderson and Rose, resulting in countless unpublicized injuries. Many of these can be prevented through the use of equipment designed with added safety in mind."

Although the design of the uniforms

Judge rejects Strachan's plea

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A federal judge Wednesday modified, but refused to reduce, the three-year drug trafficking sentence of former Saints running back Mike Strachan.

Strachan, who played collegiately at Iowa State, had written to U.S. District Judge Veronica Wicker asking for the sentence reduction because he had "lost everything" and his family and business interests were adversely affected by his prison stay.

"I'm sorry, but sentences are meted out to wrongdoers and not to families," Wicker told Dennis Dannel, the attorney who appeared on behalf of Strachan.

Wicker granted a request to modify the sentence, making Strachan eligible for parole after he has served one year of his term. The original sentence would have mandated a minimum of 22 months before parole eligibility.

DANNEL CHARGED that Strachan, serving his sentence at Maxwell Air Force Base near Montgomery, Ala., has suffered excessively because of widespread publicity and is being treated less fairly than white collar criminals.

"We believe things have happened to Mike that have not happened to the average person charged with a similar violation," he said.

"Mike is different. Mike didn't steal, he didn't rob. He had a habit, a cocaine habit."

Wicker said she was disturbed by Dannel's implication the government was persecuting Strachan and still was convinced the three-year sentence was fair.

DANNEL TOLD the judge Strachan has realized his mistakes while in prison and would be an asset to the community as a volunteer in drug prevention programs if he were released.

Dannel presented the judge with a letter from state Appellate Judge Israel Augustine Jr. calling for an early release so Strachan could work in the judge's youth drug program, and called Rev. Arthur Clay to testify.

"I think a person like Mike Strachan, because of the notoriety... could be a tremendous force in helping us with young people."

About the only area the Hawkeyes did not excel in was at the free throw line where they continue to struggle, hitting 13-for-22 for 59 percent while Indiana was 10-for-11 for 90 percent.

The win gives the Hawkeyes momentum going into Columbus, Ohio, for Saturday's game against the Buckeyes.

"In the second round, the majority of games we'll be playing will involve a revenge factor," Carfino said.

Hansen, who predicted a 9-0 Iowa record in the second half of the Big Ten season, already had the Hawkeyes in second place — if only overnight. "We're now two games out of first place with six to go and anything can happen."

Waymond King, who curiously did not give the pregame prayer as Olson had indicated Tuesday, talked about Iowa's confidence going into the game.

"We were looking at the program and it said that Indiana had won 13 times in five years at Assembly Hall. Coach Ros (Assistant Coach Jim Rosborough) said to mark it out and put down 14."

is bound to upset traditionalists (what, no pinstripes?), the players are in favor of any changes that might cut down on injuries.

"CAREERS HAVE BEEN cut short by injuries which might have been prevented had such steps been taken," said Bob Boone, catcher for the California Angels who attended Wednesday's unveiling of the new uniforms. "Today's average pro career is about six years, and if an improved uniform can extend that lifespan, then I'm all in favor of changes."

Boone, a member of the Players Association's executive committee, is also part of a newly-organized Safety and Health Committee that is looking into ways of reducing injuries. He likes the work Mizuno is doing in the field.

"The best thing about them is that they're making an effort to improve things," Boone said. "Some of their ideas are adaptable at this point."

Since any change in equipment or uniforms must be approved by the Rules Committee, it may be a while before the new uniforms will be seen on a major league level. But Mizuno hopes to test the new uniforms on the college level this year.

HENDERSON, WHO SET a major league record with 130 steals last season, will play this season with some newly-developed, shock absorbent padding sewn into the shoulder and chest areas of his jersey. He expects it to greatly reduce his chances of injury from head first slides. Henderson separated his shoulder in a head-first slide after setting the record last year and missed two weeks of the season.

"I expect the extra padding will reduce my fear of getting hurt and give me even more confidence," said Henderson, who also attended the new conference and breakfast.

Another safety device that Curley-

Bates will market in the U.S. this year is a highly shock-absorbent honeycomb padding, which can be sewn into baseball hats and gloves and applied to protective pads and footwear.

Invented by Curt Landi of Supracor Systems, Inc., in Palo Alto, Calif., the honeycomb padding was utilized by NASA to construct the loading bay doors on America's Space Shuttle. It is stronger than conventional materials as well as lighter and more flexible. Mizuno will construct some baseball chest protectors from the material and Boone hopes to be giving one a test by mid-season.

Basketball

THE CONTROVERSY surrounding Muscatine High School athletics continues.

School Superintendent Arthur Sensor earlier this year demanded the resignation of high school basketball Coach Bill Sturms, who refused to resign. Athletic Director Steve Waterman did resign, however, and charged that Sensor used threatening and unethical methods in attempting to get Sturms resignation.

Sensor denies using any unethical action and said he asked for Sturms' resignation as coach, but only so he could keep Sturms as a classroom teacher.

Now there are allegations that a possible replacement for Sturms, Cal Wulfsberg, has already been given a tour of the building. Wulfsberg is a former UI basketball player and son-in-law of Iowa Coach Luke Olson.

The Muscatine Board of Education has scheduled a meeting on Mar. 8 to look into the controversy. No decision has yet been made on whether or not the meeting will be closed or open to the public.

Women's gymnastics

COACH DIANA CHAPALA is not sure whether she will take a full team to the Wisconsin Invitational Friday night in Madison, Wis. It will depend on the condition of junior Laura Laponsky, who hyper-extended her right elbow last Friday against Indiana State.

Indiana State, Illinois, Wisconsin, Ball State and Iowa will be some of the squads competing in Madison, and Chapala says she doesn't feel that any of the teams will run away with the title.

Wrestling

THE CONDITION of 134-pounder Jeff Kerber is still questionable for Saturday's dual against Iowa State. Kerber is currently wrestling with an ankle injury and probably won't start against the fourth-ranked Cyclones.

Baseball

A CALIFORNIA-BASED group failed to pull together the required assets Wednesday, forcing Kansas City Royals owner Ewing Kauffman to cancel a sale of 49 percent of the team.

The group, headed by Michael Shapiro, was given until 5 p.m. Wednesday to raise the reported $10 million needed to buy the share of the team and another $1 million for possible cable television rights. In addition, Shapiro was to show that he had control of $25 million in assets.

THE LOS ANGELES Dodgers won their arbitration case with pitcher Steve Howe, the club announced Wednesday.

Howe, who has a three-year major league record of 19-17 with a 2.38 ERA and 38 saves, had reportedly asked for $450,000 a year and the Dodgers had offered $325,000.

THIS NEWS FROM Las Vegas, and it's bad if you're a Cubs or Twins fan. The St. Louis Cardinals and the Milwaukee Brewers are 3-1 picks to repeat as champions of the National and American Leagues respectively.

Mel Exber of the Las Vegas Club, who last year listed odds for the divisional baseball championships, Tuesday released odds for the various teams' chances for making it into the World Series. Here are the others.

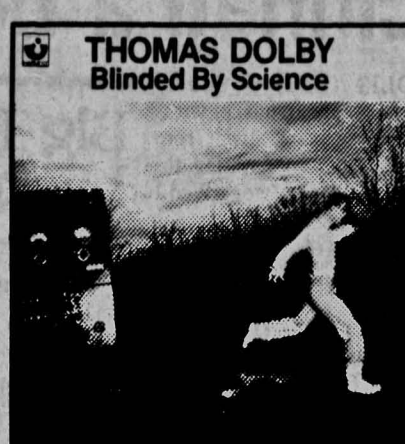

National League: St. Louis Cardinals, Atlanta Braves and Los Angeles Dodgers, 3-1; Montreal Expos and Philadelphia Phillies, 6-1; San Francisco Giants, 10-1; San Diego Padres, 15-1; Pittsburgh Pirates, 20-1; Houston Astros, 30-1; New York Mets, 40-1; Cincinnati Reds, 100-1; Chicago Cubs, 200-1.

American League: Milwaukee Brewers and New York Yankees, 3-1; California Angels and Baltimore Orioles, 4-1; Chicago White Sox and Kansas City Royals, 6-1; Boston Red Sox, 12-1; Oakland A's, 20-1; Detroit Tigers, 30-1; Texas Rangers, 50-1; Cleveland Indians and Toronto Blue Jays, 60-1; Seattle Mariners, 100-1; Minnesota Twins, 200-1.

Iowa tennis coach served good news

By Mike Condon
Staff Writer

Iowa tennis Coach Steve Houghton received some good news earlier this week from organizers of the Northwestern Invitational tennis tournament. Indiana's coaching staff said they were not bringing a team to the 32-player open draw event, so Iowa was given the opportunity to bring one additional player.

"After Indiana pulled out, they had a drawing among the teams and we were one of the three that was allowed to bring a fourth player," Houghton said. "We will be taking Jim Nelson as our fourth player along with (Mike) Inman, (Rob) Moellering and (Sunil) Reddy."

NELSON HAS BEEN excited all week because he is a Chicago native. Being able to go home and perform in front of his friends and family will be a big plus for him, Houghton said.

"This will be good experience for Jim," Houghton said. "It will give him an opportunity to play against some of the Big Ten's top players."

Northwestern Coach Vandy Christie is baffled as to why the Hoosiers pulled out of the meet. "We are looking into the reasons because the sponsors of this event were under the impression that all of the Big Ten schools would be playing," Christie said. "We have to impress on Indiana's coach and athletic director the importance of having all the teams play in the meet."

It is coincidental that the Hoosiers' women's squad also pulled out of a similar meet held last weekend in Chicago. Christie said he doesn't know if the two cases are related.

CHRISTIE SEES THE meet as a chance for the coaches to get a good look at their opposition before the Big Ten season gets into full swing. "This meet will be a good indicator for the Big Ten," he said. "It is also important because it is vital that the players gather up wins for District Four consideration as far as post-season play is concerned."

Wheeler says Iowa favorite in 'low key' triangular meet

By Steve Riley
Staff Writer

Compared to last weekend's Cornhusker Invitational and next weekend's Illini Classic, this weekend's men's track double-dual meet will be a low-key affair.

The Bradley Braves and Western Illinois Leathernecks roll into the Recreation Building Saturday to meet Iowa at noon. "Bradley and Western Illinois both have respectable teams but we should be favored," said Hawkeye Coach Ted Wheeler.

The fifth-year coach said the meet is important to his team, because it will determine who will run at next weekend's prestigious Illini Classic. "It's important, because we will do what we have to get ready for next weekend," Wheeler said.

HIGH-FLYING sophomore Ronnie McCoy says he will long jump this weekend after missing most of the season thus far with knee and hamstring injuries.

Freshman high jumper Mike Cunningham is questionable for the meet. Distance runner Dan Waters won't see action due to a stress fracture of a foot and co-captain pole vaulter Steve Brewer is still out with ankle problems.

Jake Schoof's Bradley squad's strength lies in a triple jumper named Len Spicer. Spicer has won three out of the last four Missouri Valley triple jump titles, and possesses a best of over 50 feet. Iowa's gritty junior Mike Lacy is now rounding into top form in that event; he captured third in the Cornhusker meet last weekend.

LEE CALHOUN'S Leathernecks could trouble the Hawks in a few events Saturday. Garon Grigsby has clocked 1 minute, 11 seconds for 600 yards, setting up an interesting confrontation if Iowa freshman Caesar Smith runs that event. Smith ran 1:11.27 last weekend in the slow heat.

Another outstanding Western Illinois athlete is Wendell McKemey, who has run the 300 in 31.1.

Gymnastic indicators point to improved Hawkeye team

By Robert Ryser
Staff Writer

It has been a long, uphill climb to success for the Iowa women's gymnastics team this year, and after dodging some tough obstacles, the top may finally be in sight.

The individual scores of the gymnasts prove to be one of the best indicators that the Hawkeyes have been improving since the beginning of the season.

Holli DeBoer is one of the best examples of this individual improvement. DeBoer was scoring 32's in all-around in her previous three meets, then scored a career high 34.40 against Indiana State and 34.15 against Iowa State last weekend.

"I can't remember the last time somebody scored back to back 34's on this team," said junior all-arounder, Linda Tremain.

COACH DIANA CHAPELA admitted that she had to think awhile before she could remember the last time someone had accomplished that feat.

Freshman A.J. Greene has increased her all-around scores since the beginning of the year. Greene had scored in the 30's in the early season before recording her season high, 32.25, against Iowa State, Saturday.

The greatest improvement has come with freshman walk-on, Christy Spear. Spear, who recorded a 26.85 in the San Francisco Invitational Jan. 6, scored a career high, 32.80 at Iowa State.

Tremain, who has scored in the 33's this season recorded a season high, 33.90.

"We had a really good weekend," Tremain said. "Everybody scored their season high on all-around (Saturday). I'm not sure about past teams here, but I don't know the last time that was done. I think we are really starting to build."

"LOOK AT THE critical injuries we have had," Chapela said, "and then look out here. They don't give up. They're full of heart and desire, it's a pleasure to come out and coach these kids."

"The girls have been practicing very well. I know I say that a lot, but it's nice not to have a bad practice."

Greene has been practicing a sukahara vault, her original vault before she injured her knee, and is hoping to have it ready for the invitational Friday night in Madison.

Chapela said she doesn't foresee any one team running away with the Wisconsin Invitational title.

"ALL THE TEAMS have been scoring in the 160's, it all depends on if I take a full team or not," Chapela said.

The condition of Laura Lapovsky's injured elbow is still not determined.

"It's one of those day by day things," Tremain said. "I don't think anybody knows what is going to happen."

Chapela said that if Lapovsky wasn't able to compete, she would be looking for individual performances.

"I think we can be up there (in the first three places in each event) with everyone else," Chapela said.

"We've got girls that can place in regionals," Tremain said.

The Hawkeyes host Northwestern Feb. 25, in the Field House, with the Big Ten meet two weeks later in the Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

WHAT TO DO
IF YOU SMELL
NATURAL GAS

Natural gas itself is odorless. We add a strong, pungent smell to it before it's delivered to your home. The purpose of adding the odor is to make it easy for you to detect even small gas leaks quickly. If you smell natural gas, here's what to do:

- 1 Open doors and windows. If the odor is very strong, evacuate the building, then...
- 2 Call Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company from a neighbor's phone (to prevent sparks that may result when you use your own telephone).
- 3 Turn off the main gas valve, if you know where it is and can do it safely.
- 4 Avoid producing any fire or sparks. Don't turn any electrical switches on or off... do not smoke.
- 5 Have only qualified Iowa-Illinois people turn your gas back on and relight appliances that have pilot lights.

And here are some tips on using gas safely:

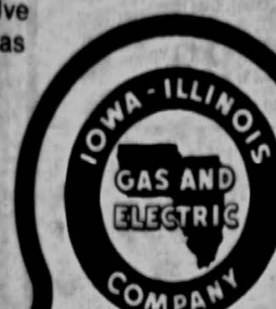

- 1 Be sure gas appliances are properly installed, adjusted, vented, inspected and repaired by qualified people.
- 2 Make sure a shut-off valve is installed near every gas appliance and remains accessible.

- 3 Follow manufacturers' instructions for operation and care of your appliances. Use appliance only for the purpose intended. (Don't use an oven for additional heat, for instance).
- 4 Teach small children not to play with gas appliances.
- 5 Keep things that burn easily, like curtains and flammable liquids away from open flames.
- 6 Keep burners clean.
- 7 If the flame on an appliance goes out, do not relight it unless you know the proper procedure for the appliance involved. If the flame continues to go out, call for service.
- 8 Keep an approved fire extinguisher handy and know how it works. In an emergency, soda and salt can be used to put out a grease fire. Or you can smother it with a large pot lid.
- 9 Please take a few moments now and explain these suggestions to all your children.

Please cut out this ad and hang in your furnace or kitchen area as a handy reminder.

Arts and entertainment

Poor acting may wash out new soap

By Jeffrey Miller
Arts/Entertainment Editor

BECAUSE OF the necessary reliance on continuing story instead of quickly identifiable characters, the prime time soap is the most difficult genre in which to predict success.

"Dallas," "Dynasty," "Falcon Crest" and "Knots Landing," which are now doing very well, all began very slowly; "Flamingo Road," on the other hand, started off nicely in the ratings, thanks to its big-name cast, but quickly fizzled.

It's hard to say, then, whether NBC's new prime time soap "Bare Essence" (Tuesdays, 8 p.m., KWWL-7) will last longer than the six weeks for which it's currently scheduled. If quality has anything to do with it, though, this rancid story of love and power in the perfume industry will fade quickly.

Based on a CBS miniseries broadcast last fall, the NBC production of "Bare Essence" was obviously thrown together at the last minute, as soon as star Genie Francis was free of her contract with CBS. The technical work is atrocious: the lighting washes out anything not in close-up; post-production dubbing is hilariously out of sync; stock clips are incorporated with all the finesse of a third-grader.

AND, AS BEFITS something this jury-rigged, the performances seem to be merely turned in on the way to the Jacuzzi. As bad as you might expect Francis, who plays confused heiress Tyger Hayes, to be, Jaime Lyn Bauer (Tyger's friend Barbara) and Jessica Walter (Tyger's archrival Ava Marshall) are worse — Walter's Southern accent is so ex-cruciating it makes you wish General Sherman would have marched to her house.

Bad acting, however, has never kept anyone away from prime time soaps. What sets "Bare Essence" so far beneath its companions in the genre is the tone taken in its production.

Though prime time soaps appeal out of necessity much more to a male audience than daytime soaps do, they still have to have some contact with the women in the audience.

The creator/producers of "Dallas," "Knots Landing" and "Falcon Crest" (Lorimar), for example, had previously presented family shows that appealed primarily to women

("The Waltons," "Eight Is Enough"), while the Spelling-Goldberg juggernaut had, with "Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island," acquired practice in putting together programs that combined wealth and romance in a formula that attracted female viewers as much as any of the guest hunks.

But "Bare Essence" is produced and directed by Walter Grauman, a long-time TV director noted mostly for his work in male-oriented action series and TV movies, particularly as one of producer Quinn Martin's house directors in shows from "The Untouchables" and "Dan August" to "Streets of San Francisco."

SO WHILE "Bare Essence" is on the surface a story of women battling in and for positions of power (a distinction it would seem to share with "Falcon Crest"), the women here, unlike those of "Falcon Crest," are boring and stupid. The only characters who show any development or excitement are men: the heartbreaking villain Niko (Ian McShane) and Tyger's genial father figure Hadden (John Dehner).

Grauman's production has a form, then, that doesn't follow its function: "Bare Essence" should be a show about women for women; instead, it's a show about men that's really for no one.

Given a different producer, "Bare Essence," even with its acting problems, might generate enough steam to propel viewers back to their sets week after week. But as it is, the show is simply all wrong, a perfume made with nasturtiums instead of roses.

Notes from local news: We'd like to bid a fond farewell to KGAN-2 weekend anchorman Chris George, who is moving on and up to Seattle. George is perhaps most noted for his hair, which looks like an Elvis pompadour surrounded by spikes, but he is also a fine reporter whose sense of humor and intelligence set him apart from most newscasters in this area — or elsewhere. More than one viewer will miss him.

Meanwhile, KGAN is continuing with their outlandish straw polls on every subject from unemployment to horse racing. These polls prove absolutely nothing and in the process provide Northwestern Bell with an extra $750 to $1000 a week (each call costs 50 cents).

The rationale still being pumped by the station is that these polls are being done "because KGAN cares about us." If it really cared, though, KGAN would quit giving eastern Iowans the opportunity to spend something for nothing in the guise of "news."

Actors learn that they must make films, then plug them

By Vernon Scott
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — To tour or not to tour, that is the question faced by movie stars when studios ask them to hit the road to plug a new picture.

The answer is almost always "yes" if the star owns part of the film or gets a chunk of the profits. Superstars, however, are above hustling on the hustings, even for their own pictures.

Warren Beatty, Robert Redford, Barbra Streisand, Burt Reynolds and Clint Eastwood trust their reputations to coax audiences away from TV sets and into theaters.

Other performers are asked to help out by making appearances on TV talk shows, chatting with the press and posing for pictures on the eve of a film's release.

THERE IS NOTHING in it for the performer financially. His hotel, transportation and meals are paid for by the studio or producer.

The star is pampered, often accompanied by a press agent, met at each airport by a film representative, transported by limousine from hotel to TV and radio stations, and sometimes wined and dined by local bigshots.

Often, the media attention helps at the box office. Sometimes it doesn't. In addition to the personal publicity garnered by the star, a profitable picture naturally increases his value.

Some stars are conscious-stricken when touring for a picture they know is a turkey. Others could not care less, confident the personal publicity is a career investment.

But a real bomb has almost no chance of luring even a publicity-starved actor into a tour.

The choice is often difficult.

BARBARA HERSHEY, who heads the cast of The Entity, a new and terrifying psychological horror film, went to Europe to publicize the movie at a film festival and is conducting interviews on its behalf.

Usually a self-effacing, almost secretive soul, Barbara got up her gumption, prepared to ward off personal questions about her past, and set sail, hoping to discuss only the merits of The Entity.

"In the past, I refused to tour with pictures because I thought my job was just to act," she said. "Ideally, films should speak for themselves. But I realize they can't do that unless people go to see them."

"The title of this picture, The Entity, suggests a pure horror film and that's not what it is. The genre is horror but the emphasis is human, not special effects. There are no monsters, no ax murders, no blood."

"The violence is strictly psychological and deeply frightening."

In The Entity, Hershey portrays a real life woman who believes she is possessed by a demon who repeatedly abuses and rapes her. Her psychiatrists are convinced she is a loony, but others come to believe in the occult nature of her bizarre experiences.

IN THE INTEREST of overcoming the picture's title and to allay reservations that The Entity is just another cheap horror film, Hershey has come forward.

"I'd never publicize a picture I wasn't proud of," said Hershey, who did nothing to help Take This Job and Shove It, a movie she would like to forget.

"Who wants to encourage people to see something bad or that doesn't represent your best work? You lose credibility when you promote a bad picture."

"No one starts out to make a poor film. But you can get a wonderful script and talented people, and still fail. Sometimes the writer, director and actors have different destinations in mind."

"I just finished The Right Stuff, a story about the astronauts and their families. It's got a big cast of small roles and the actors use different methods, but we all had the same destinations and it works."

"I went on tour for The Stunt Man a couple of years ago because I believed in that picture. I was convinced people would think it was just an adventure film about stunts. And it certainly was more than that."

"Touring is hard work. I did 11 interviews in one day in Spain for The Entity. In Europe the media tries to exploit your personal life even more than they do here. When it comes to that, I just quit talking."

ABC blows away ratings with 'Winds'

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The Winds of War" owned practically every television set in the United States last week, boosting ABC to unparalleled heights in the ratings race and scoring points of solid gold for the vital February sweeps period.

Despite sneers from many of the critics, Herman Wouk's massively hyped, $40 million, 18-hour megaseries became the most-watched television program in history, with ABC research estimating 140 million people sat up for all or part of it.

The top 10 programs for the week ending Feb. 6, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1. Winds of War, Part VII (ABC).
2. Winds of War Part II (ABC).
3. Winds of War Part IV (ABC).
4. Winds of War Part III (ABC).
5. Winds of War Part V (ABC).
6. Winds of War Part VI (ABC).
7. 60 Minutes (CBS).
8. Magnum P.I. (CBS).
9. The Love Boat (ABC).
10. The Fall Guy (ABC).

Marshall rouses black consciousness

By Opal Moore
Special to The Daily Iowan

Praisesong for the Widow by Paule Marshall. G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1983, 256 pp.

So many have no regard for their Blackness. I want to alert them to the danger of not acknowledging what has gone into making us. — Paule Marshall

PRAISESONG For the Widow, the third and most recent novel from Paule Marshall, who is currently teaching in the Writers' Workshop, reaffirms a passion in the writer that reverberates throughout her work. That passion is in the desire that her writing inspire black people toward a more conscious preservation of self — an idea that can be studied in sociological argument, political rhetoric and, fortunately, novels.

Praisesong is a portrait of Avatara Johnson, a black, middle-aged, middle-class woman. On the surface, she would appear to have acquired the accoutrements of "the good life": sufficient money in the bank; a house in suburban White Plains, N.Y.; a vacation cruise once a year.

BUT IN SPITE of her acquisitions — or perhaps because of them — Avey is uneasy; her mirror reflects a stranger. It is from this point that Avey's life begins to unfold as she begins to realize that her future will be dictated out of the past.

In flashback, Marshall explores the story of Jay Johnson, Avey's deceased husband. Avey recalls the uncomplicated symbols of their original happiness, the language of their love spoken in easy gestures, the intrusions of racism and struggle, their eventual success.

In her recollections, however, Avey is forced to discover the regrettable nature of the price her husband paid — a slow draining of love and creativity. She recalls the moment Jay ceased to resemble himself — a spiritual death that occurs long before his physical demise. This is the real point at which Avatara Johnson's widowhood begins.

FOR AVEY, all the details of the past have been repressed except in dreams, and it is a dream that finally arises and urges her to return to retrieve the valuables that will save her:

"But this is not another Roots story. No, no. Sure Avey has to explore her past, but it is not a literal exploration. I am a kind of ancient worshipper. I really am. I have a feeling that there is a need for the people who have lived before us to be revered. When I was nine, I met my grandmother for the first time. It was a trip to Barbados, and MaDadda — that's what we called her, MaDadda — when she took one look at me she says to my father, 'Now, where did you get this one with this fierce look?' You know, there was a sense that I had come to replace her — take up where she would leave off."

Avey's journey to the island of Carriacou is itself a kind of middle passage with its own kind of agony, the merciless stripping away of the skin of pretension. In her healing, she is reintroduced to the simple gestures that renew, gestures that eluded Avey and her husband in their last days.

The culmination of her journey is her discovery of the preciousness of beginnings, not necessarily the momentous historical events, but more the history preserved in our movements, our inflections, the ways in which we dispense our joys, contain our sorrows, show reverence to those who have come before us. Regardless of how poor or ordinary these things may seem to outsiders, they are the beginnings that define us, protect us from usurpation.

AVEY'S JOURNEY to Carriacou is less a journey to a place than it is a journey to a point of view, a vantage point that will prevent her from being engulfed by the corruption of society and preserve her. Avey has a sense, when she emerges, of her legacy and how she will pass it on:

"America makes the immigrant into a 'bland amalgam' but once we are aware of what has gone before us, no one can take from us what is special, unique. When I visited Senegal, I went to the house of slaves. Six million died there awaiting the trip across the Atlantic. Six million. My identity is intimately joined to these people."

Actress testifies Fleming added spark to Marx's life

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Actress Sally Kellerman said Wednesday that Groucho Marx obviously loved Erin Fleming and testified it appeared the ex-showgirl gave the comedian new life.

"From my point of view, they seemed well-matched. Erin did not seem to dominate him," Kellerman said.

"I saw Erin completely involved with Groucho, giving someone Groucho's age life and rejuvenating his career."

Following her 15 minutes of testimony, the actress told reporters outside court that she thought the Bank of America lawsuit accusing Fleming of cheating Marx out of more than $400,000 was "a bit of an injustice."

"Groucho obviously loved Erin," she explained. "I think he would have given her anything she wanted." Kellerman, who starred in the film version of "MASH," said she first met Marx and Fleming at a party at her house and said they got together several times after that at both homes, sometimes for special Passover celebrations.

"HE HAD A twinkle in his eye," she recalled when asked to describe his demeanor in his final years. "He loved to call me Hot Lips and give me a big kiss."

She said Marx was constantly with Fleming and said the two often sang duets at parties.

"He was always putting his arm around her and giving her kisses," she added.

The testimony further bolstered arguments against the lawsuit filed by the bank, the executor of Marx's estate. Several defense witnesses, mainly celebrities and people who worked with the comedian, have testified that Marx and Fleming had a warm relationship and that he was well aware of any money she received from him.

Earlier in the day, a secretary who worked at Marx's house for most of the last two years of his life said Marx thought Fleming kept him alive and made him realize that other people cared.

DENA BROWN, a legal secretary for Groucho Marx Productions, the firm Fleming set up to handle the entertainer's show business affairs, said Marx often told her, "If it wasn't for Erin, I don't think I'd be alive now. She's keeping me alive."

"She kept the man alive," Brown agreed. "She was the spark in his life."

"Before Erin came along, Groucho said he'd just watch TV, that he didn't think anyone cared about him anymore."

"He would always tell me, 'The fans still love me, Dena. I didn't realize it until Erin came along.' She made him realize that he was a living legend."

Earlier testimony indicated that Fleming had helped revitalize Marx's career through such projects as syndication of his "You Bet Your Life" TV series, concert tours and albums.

Brown, who was hired by Fleming in March 1975 and maintained an office at Marx's house until 1977, shortly before his death at age 86, said Fleming often refused Marx's offers of gifts.

"HE WOULD ASK what she needed," she said. "She'd say she didn't need anything, that she had everything she wanted. 'All I want is Groucho's love,' she would say."

Brown insisted, contrary to statements from witnesses called by the bank, that Marx maintained command of his financial and personal affairs in his final years.

"Groucho signed everything that went out of the house," she said. "I took the bills to the accountant and brought back the checks for him to sign. Groucho ran the household. He was the boss."

"He wasn't senile. There was nothing senile about Groucho. No one could ever pull anything over on him."

Eric Clapton, who once played to audiences who proclaimed him "God," has left some fans lukewarm to his later offerings. His new album, Money and Cigarettes, is good basic rock 'n' roll — even though it probably won't inspire cries of "Clapton is God."

Vitality, magic mark new Clapton album

By Allen Hogg
Special to The Daily Iowan

FOR A MAN whose guitar playing with the Yardbirds, John Mayall's Bluesbreakers and Cream incited graffiti proclaiming him God, Eric Clapton has had a rather unremarkable solo career.

With the exception of his 1974 "comeback" 461 Ocean Boulevard, the consensus about his work has been: "Sure, it's pretty good. So what?"

In some ways, this is also the case with Money and Cigarettes, Clapton's latest release. While his guitar work is hot, the album is once again slanted in favor of his laid-back baritone vocals. And Clapton's original songs still tend toward the standard blues/rock "I love you baby" stuff.

But in other respects, Money and Cigarettes, which marks his recovery from the various ailments that have hampered him over the past few years, is the most vital work Clapton has done in a long time.

The album features the best band Clapton has ever assembled for a solo album: renowned studio musician Albert Lee on keyboards and guitars, Muscle Shoals Rhythm Section drummer Roger Hawkins, bass master Donald "Duck" Dunn (of Booker T. and the MG's and Blues Brothers fame), and slide guitar wizard Ry Cooder, whose ferocious licks are the best Clapton has had to work with since he and Duane Allman dueted in Derek and the Dominos.

AND THEN THERE is the music itself. Though it is perhaps too straightforward, behind its outward simplicity lies a force that traps the listener with its magical quality.

Take, for example, the LP's first single, "I've Got a Rock 'n' Roll Heart." Clapton's voice has never been more alluring, a seductive purr describing himself to his would-be lover. "Here's what you're getting," he warns her, "and I don't want to change."

He then swings into a chorus that won the heart of this reviewer: "I get off on '57 Chevys/I get off on a screaming guitar." The song is, in fact, conspicuous in the absence of any screaming guitars; but no matter — the excitement comes through in the purity of the theme.

"Ain't Goin' Down" is another gem, a Clapton original that gives what message this album has to present. "I've got to step outside of myself," he proclaims. "I've still got something left to say." Musically, the tune is reminiscent of Dylan's "All Along the Watchtower," and the guitar play between Clapton and Cooder is overpowering.

NATURALLY, THE whole album can't maintain this intensity, but it never lets up too much. Bandleader Johnny Otis' "Crazy Country Hop," for example, was a fairly silly song choice, but even it is redeemed when Clapton hams up the goofy chorus: "Ooh wee, oh oh/Ooh la la, let's rock and roll!"

Another cover, R.G. Ford's "Crosscut Saw," is the worst instance of Clapton being low key, but the song itself is such a great Freudian farce that its presence on the album is completely justifiable.

As its title suggests, Money and Cigarettes is simply good basic rock 'n' roll. And while it may not inspire cries of "Clapton is God!," nobody who hears it should be saying "So what?" either.

F. Lee Bailey says he'll sue Newsweek

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (UPI) — Attorney F. Lee Bailey said Wednesday he would file suit against Newsweek because the magazine used the phrase "beat the rap" to describe his acquittal on a drunken driving charge in California.

Bailey, who is currently representing Albuquerque lawyer William Marchiondo in a libel suit against the Albuquerque Journal, said the phrase "is well known to them as a statement that you were guilty, but you got off."

"I called them on it the first time they did it, and they apologized and promised it wouldn't happen again," he said.

The phrase occurs in the Feb. 14 issue of Newsweek in an article containing an unfavorable review of Bailey's television show, "Lie Detector."

The article said in part: "Just two months after he published an account of how he beat a drunken-driving rap that nearly cost him his paycheck as spokesman for a leading vodka brand, the noted trial lawyer-novelist-aviator is bidding for our attention as the host of a new TV show."

Bailey said he believed part of the dispute results from the magazine's assignment of a "rude and arrogant" reporter to cover his driving while intoxicated trial last April.

He said his attorney in Washington D.C. has already notified Newsweek to "start your retraction. You will be sued."

record

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne Gorsuch met with President Reagan Thursday for a discussion of the agency's role in the release of information on the agency's files concerning the Vietnam War.

The Oval Office meeting, following a declaration Wednesday that the agency would no longer claim executive privilege, was the first of its kind since the agency's creation in 1970.

Negotiations between Gorsuch and the House Committee on Environment and Natural Resources, led by its chairman, Representative Howard D.N.J., and the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, led by its chairman, Senator J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., were held in the White House.

Gorsuch's request, following a declaration Wednesday that the agency would no longer claim executive privilege, was the first of its kind since the agency's creation in 1970.
