Officials: Mayflower to be only new dorm

Price: 20 cents ©1983 Student Publications Inc.

By Dan Hauser

With this spring's record enrollment figures and the decision to purchase Mayflower Apartments, UI officials do not see the need to purchase any new dormitories in the future to combat the rise in student housing needs. "I doubt if we would build one now with Mayflower," said Alan Skelley, UI Residence Services business manager. "It would take an increase in enrollment and in predicted enrollment. We would have to be assured over the next 10 or 20 years to keep it

"We were offered Mayflower at an advantageous price," UI Associate Vice President of Finance Casey Mahon said Sunday. Mahon said the purchase of Mayflower at $19 per square foot was beneficial, adding that a new dormitory would be at least $60 or more per square foot. Mahon said the UI wouldn't consider a new dormitory because it would conflict with its rate structure for fees.

"IT WOULD not be consistent with our policy to provide moderately priced housing for students," Mahon Skelley said a new dormitory would not be practical if the UI didn't have students to fill it up 10 years from now. He expects the enrollment figures to go down in the next few years. "It would be pretty expensive for just 10 years of Skelley gave an example of how much a new dormitory would cost, saving that in 1965 Rienow Hall was built for more than $2 million. For a dorm the size of Rienow to be built today, Skelley said, it would probably have to be purchased with 40-year revenue bonds. He said most of the existing debt will be paid off in 2008 for bonds issued in 1963, 1965 and 1966.

EPA worker claims files were erased

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A former Environmental Protection Agency official said Sunday agency computer disks are routinely erased, and a House chairman said he will investigate whether deletions were made to keep information from Congress.

Despite the administration's agreement with a House subcommittee to provide full access to disputed EPA toxic waste enforcement files, the outcry on Capitol Hill about the embattled agency's handling of the $1.6 billion Superfund toxic waste cleanup program showed no sign of subsiding. One subcommittee chairman called the agreement a "charade" and a Republican senator joined the criticism.

"I think that we have a problem in some of the appointees who do represent the president's views," said Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I. "Those aren't my views. They aren't the views of many Republicans in the Senate and House and I don't think they're always the views of the American people.'

Chafee, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," announced Rita Lavelle, fired two weeks ago by President Reagan as the EPA official in charge of Superfund, will appear before the Repubican-dominated subcommittee he chairs Wednesday.

LAVELLE EVADED subpoeonas from two House panels last week. Her attorney James Bierbower said, "I am trying to meet with various comittees subcommittee the enforcement files. to see which get her first." agency computer disks are routinely erased. "When a disk gets full, you wipe it off to put something else on it,' Ingold told United Press International. Ingold said in one case what had been on a disk "were working notes that I wrote and which were subsequently stolen before I wiped them off the disk." He said what he eliminated amounted to "about a page and a quarter of notes to be used by Lavelle for a meeting on management problems."

Congress is investigating the use of agency paper shredders to destroy subpoenaed documents. The agency has acknowledged shredding copies, but not originals.

Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., chairman of the House Public Works oversight subcommittee, said he wants to know whether material his panel has subpoenaed may have been altered or destroyed in shredders or computers.

LEVITAS NEGOTIATED the agreement with the administration for access to Superfund files as part of its investigation of potential political favoritism and mismanagement in the toxic dump cleanup program. Six House panels are conducting investigations

EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch, who was married in federal court Sunday to Interior Department official Robert Burford and will be known as Anne McGill Burford, was voted in contempt of Congress by the House Dec. 16 for refusing to give the Levitas Asked if deliberate erasures and Eugene Ingold, fired as a Lavelle deletions to subpoenaed documents assistant when Lavelle was, said may have been made, Levitas said: "We have not closed the book on that."

EPA chronology

The following is a chronology of major events related to the growing controversy over toxic waste cleanup enforcement by the Environmental Protection Agency:

• Dec. 16: The House votes 259-105 to cite Administrator Anne Gorsuch for contempt of Congress for refusing to turn over toxic waste enforcement files to a House public works subcommittee headed by Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga. The Justice Department files suit to block the action.

Rita Lavelle, EPA's chief of toxic waste enforcement, tells a House subcommittee she did not order an investigation of EPA whistle-blower Hugh Kaufman, or want him fired. Subcommittee chairman James Scheuer, D-N.Y., produces statements from two EPA officials directly contradicting her.

 Dec. 30: The House asks U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith to dismiss the Justice Department's attempt to block the contempt prosecution of Gorsuch

• Jan. 10: Scheuer announces he is "leaning very heavily" towardprosecuting Lavelle for perjury for her statements about the Kaufman case.

• Feb. 3: Judge Smith throws out the Justice Department lawsuit and urges he administration and congressional leaders to work out a deal for access to the confidential EPA documents being withheld. Department officials announce they will try to reach a compromise with House leaders.

Crisis in science education seen

By Rochelle Bozman etro Editor

Presidents'

Day

The United States is experiencing a crisis in science education and all the appropriations Congress can heap on the problems won't make them go away automatically, three science education experts said Sunday.

Congressmen should spend more time debating how money could best be spent to improve science education rather than trying to outbid one another in an attempt to give science programs possibly the biggest finanial boost in U.S. history, Robert Yager, UI professor of science educaion and president of the National Science Education Center, said at Sunday's Old Brick Forum.

Yager said there are currently more than 30 bills before Congress proposing various sizes of allocations to help salvage the United States' position in science and technology, which is quickly eroding to countries with better science education programs.

'It is not just the Democratic side of Congress that is talking about the crisis," Yager said. Most congressmen are eager to have their names attached to the bill that will provide millions of dollars to revive the lagging U.S. science programs.

ONE BILL, proposed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., would provide $1.5 billion for science education programs, Yager said. If such a measure were approved, the funding level would exceed any single-year appropriation for science education, including those in the 1960s when the United States scrambled to catch up with Soviet Union space technology after the launch of Sputnik I.

But while congressional leaders haggle over the price, "little attention is being given to how the money will be spent," Yager said.

Yager, along with UI Professor of Science Education Vincent Lunetta and John Penick, coordinator of the UI Science Education Center, said they are "concerned" that the same kind of reckless spending will take place in the coming years without regard to true quality education.

"I want to see money targeted. Let's decide first what we want to do ... and countries, lack of commitment to teaching science and dissatisfied students in existing programs, Yager said.

He sometimes wonders how anyone could throw coat hangers at people because they hold a certain belief, but Jeffrey Renander finds strength in knowing the UI is more liberal than "the real world."

The 29-year-old UI law student began publicly supporting the pro-life movement on campus about 16 months ago. Before that, he stood behind the curtain as a "support in principle" member of the UI Right to Life Committee.

Renander said he had heard stories about committee members being harassed by a student who threw coat hangers on their table at the Union, and by others who shouted obscenities.

But he wasn't actively involved with the group until Oct. 21, 1981 - the day he filed a complaint with the UI Stu-

Profile dent Judicial Court because the student senate had denied Right to Life's $144 budget request.

THEN-RIGHT TO Life President Judy Reed had asked Renander to handle the legal briefs involved with the case. "He took off with the ball and ran," Reed said.

Renander and Reed, a UJ nursing student, became a team. He wrote the legal papers and she checked the facts pertaining to the pro-life movement. His three years of law school training helped a great deal, but it was the adrenalin that came from his conviction to the pro-life movement that kept him going.

While student senators argued that they could not justify funding Right to Life because a majority of UI students are pro-choice, Renander argued that a student government at a public university could not withhold mandatory student fees from a group because of its philosophy.

After the UI Student Judicial Court ruled in favor of the senate, Right to Life took its case to the UI Committee on Human Rights and received a different ruling.

The committee stated the senate violated UI human rights policy, and recommended student government See Renander, page 8

BELFAST, Northern Ireland - A 20-yearold policeman walking to a candy store died in a hail of gunfire Sunday when Irish nationalists staged a gun and grenade attack on a police station.

An official for Northern Ireland's police force, the Royal Ulster Constabulary, said the grenade explosion just after midnight Saturday caused no damage to the station in Warrenpoint, site of a terrorist ambush which killed 18 British soldiers in 1979. The outlawed Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the attack.

Federal fund loss could hike bus fare

By Mark Leonard Staff Writer

City

Another increase in bus fares is a possibility city officials might have to consider if federal transit funding to the city is cut

If approved by Congress, President Reagan's budget proposal for the Department of Transportation makes deep cuts in transit funding - cuts that could reduce Iowa City's federal funding from $250,800 to $37,700.

If Iowa City's allowance is cut to $37,700 this year, it will possibly be $37,700 more than the city gets next year, because the Reagan administration has proposed that no federal operating assistance for transit be funded in 1984.

If the transit funding is cut this year, city councilors said Sunday that bus fares, which were just increased Jan. 1 to 40 cents, might have to be raised again to make up nearly $200,000 in lost revenue.

Councilor John Balmer said he is not worrying about the cuts at this stage because of the strong opposition decreases in transit funding would receive in Congress.

"I don't view this thing with alarm," he said. "I don't think we should get real exercised yet."

Balmer said increases in bus fares and the transit levy, plus reductions in the city's transit budget, are all possibilities the council could look at. Mayor Mary Neuhauser said the city will have to lobby its congressmen to prevent the cuts.

"WE'RE GOING TO have to fight them on this one," she said. "If this happens, we would really have to make severe cuts plus possibly raise transit fares. If it happens, it is really serious.

Councilor John McDonald said the cuts could have a "disastrous" effect on Iowa City as well as many other cities throughout the country.

"Hopefully, Congress is going to take a long hard look at that," he said. "We'd have to make up that money somehow.

McDonald said he does not think the proposal has much chance of getting through Congress. "I would certainly think there would be an awful lot of pressure put on congressmen across the country.

In a memo to city councilors, City Transit Manager Larry McGonagle said he is preparing a list of options that the city could institute to reduce the transit budget.

He recommended that city officials contact representatives in Washington, D.C., to inform them of Iowa Citv's negative reaction to the President's proposal

'New Federalism' tide mulled by city officials

By Tom Buckingham Staff Write

President Reagan's "New Federalism" is sending cities across the nation scurrying to find alternate means of acquiring funds that used to be provided by Uncle Sam.

Although Iowa City has not been directly affected by Reagan's program, Mayor Mary Neuhauser said city officials are having trouble coping with the confusion the new program is causing

"The greatest difficulty we're having with Washington is finding out what's going on. They're just turning over programs to the states without any guidelines."

The recent turnover by the Environmental Protection Agency of millions of dollars in sewer development funds (that Iowa City was eligible for) to the Bank are particularly hard hit. Neuhauser said. "There's an increasing call on the city programs and we're having trouble meeting our obligations President Reagan has suggested a way for cities to handle the loss of federal monies without having to sacrifice their current programs - to establish "urban enterprise zones." Such zones would encourage private investment in cities through tax, property, and wage incentives.

IOWA CITY IS in "quite good position compared to the rest of the state," to attract businesses, Neuhauser said.

The Reagan administration is hurting its own plan to help cities by opposing industrial revenue bonds, Perret said. The bonds are offered to

Although efforts to bring heterosexuals face to face with homosexuals to discuss stereotypes aren't always productive, members of local gay organizations say their groups offer educational and social benefits for both.

Few people attended a "Gay-Straight Rap" meeting Tuesday night, but members of the UI Gay People's Union still considered the event to be a success

"I would say there were about 18 or 20 people at the meeting and I don't think any of them were not members of our group," said Professor Robert Kus, a GPU member and a professor at the UI College of Nursing

Another group member, Gary Goldman, said "I greeted people at the door and I didn't see any new faces - but that still doesn't take away from the usefulness of the meeting."

THERE HAVE BEEN similiar "rap" meetings in past years with low attendance, but Goldman said, " The purpose of these meetings is to help inform the general public about some of the sterotypes about gay people that aren't true. So if the meetings succeed in helping even a few people overcome their fear, hate or ignorance about gays, then they certainly are a success."

A spokeswoman for the Lesbian Alliance said more women are involved because "I feel that we are more politically active than GPU. We tend to be more involved with issues like rape, lesbian mothers and other social issues that involve our members." Goldman agreed. "The Lesbian Alliance is a much more active group than ours. I believe that one of the reasons for this is that they are affiliated with Women's Resource and Action Center. And on the whole I feel it is easier for women to become involved with organizations than it is for men." GOLDMAN SAID his group tries to fulfill a different need than the Alliance does. "I feel basically

A leukemia victim filed a petition for mandatory injunction Friday against UI Hospital Director John Colloton and a UI doctor in an attempt to make contact with a suitable donor for a bone marrow transplant.

William Head, of New Orleans, La., filed the petition because doctors have said he will die in six weeks without the transplant.

There are only four hospitals in the United States with substantial bone marrow donor identity banks, and the UI Hospitals is one. According to the petition, all four hospitals checked their data banks for suitable donors and only the UI Hospitals found the name of a donor who is compatible with Head.

UI Hospitals officials asked the donor if she would participate, but didn't tell her an actual leukemia victim who needed her help exists, the petition states.

The donor, who lives in California, declined to participate, possibly because of her distance from Iowa City, or because she is unaware that an actual leukemia victim exists, the petition states. The woman, referred to in the document as "Mrs. X," had her blood type characteristics typed during an unsuccessful effort to locate donors for her son, who was dying of leukemia. After her son's Women and Alcohol Week to promote 'to your health' theme years," Adix said.

By Jeff Eichenbaum Staff Writer

Women and Alcohol Awareness Week begins today, featuring a multitude of topics, talks, films, discussions and a day of workshops dealing with women's problems with drinking, lifestyles, health and other issues, and a day of workshops based on the theme, "To Your Health!'

Awareness Week is sponsored by the Steering Committee, a group comprised of members from the Women's Resource and Action Center, the Mid-Eastern Council on Chemical Abuse, the Johnson County Health Department, UI Residence Services and other local groups.

According to Steff Neuman, a WRAC staff member, one of the "major events of the week" will be Thursday night's lecture, "Women and Alcohol," by Brenda L. Underhill, executive director of the Alcohol Center for Women in Los Angeles. Underhill will also hold a discussion Friday.

The reason for holding Awareness Week, Neuman said, "is primarily out of a concern for women involved in alcohol abuse. A lot of treatment programs aren't geared for women and we want to put information out to women about resources available in the community for help.

"It's not a teetotaler approach," Neuman said, 'It's knowing how to use (alcohol or drugs) or how

DES MOINES (INA) - Approximately 61 percent of the adult population of the United States participates in some form of gambling, according to recent studies.

Of this percentage, approximately 13 per-cent gamble with friends in some type of social setting, while about 48 percent take part in some form of legal or illegal commercial gambling establishment.

These estimates are contained in a 101page report prepared by Richard Searl, a special agent for the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation. The report was prepared as background information on pari-mutuel betting.

Hig dea

The Iowa Senate passed a pari-mutuel bill last week sanctioning betting on horse and dog racing in Iowa. The odds seem better than 50-to-50 that the measure will also clear the House in a couple of weeks.

Bingo is now permitted in Iowa as well as other forms of social gambling. Horse and dog racing are illegal. Although sports bookmaking is currently illegal, the DCI report notes there is "considerable activity" in this area.

"Recent sports betting in Iowa has most notably occurred during the college and professional football seasons, but also occurs during the baseball and basketball seasons as well," the report states. ILLEGAL BOOKMAKING activity is centered primarily in the metropolitan areas, but does extend to rural communities, according to the DCI report.

"The dollar value of this activity varies considerably with the sports seasons, but conservative estimates indicate it to be several million dollars per month.

"A recent investigation by the Division of Criminal Investigation, in the Quad-Cities area," the report continues, "revealed sports bookmaking to be doing an estimated $1 million worth of activity per week during the fall football season.

Deaths in India massacre mount

Assam massacre

China Nowgong district Bhutan Assam Burma India 300 miles

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) - Thousands of Assamese tribesmen massacred at least 800 Bengali immigrants with axes, spears and arrows and torched 15 of their villages in the worst election violence in Indian history, the Press Trust of India said Sunday

Witnesses earlier counted 253 bodies, many of them decapitated or mutilated. The semi-official news agency said there were at least 800 bodies and the toll might rise to 1.000. The killings began Friday night and continued into Saturday morning. It based its death toll on accounts by its own reporters who visited the villages and counted the bodies.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi announced she would fly to the violencetorn northeastern state of Assam Monday to make a personal inspection of the devastated villages.

"Rice fields between Nelli, on the national highway, and the affected villages, are strewn with thirsty and exhausted wounded, their wounds smeared with mud," a correspondent of the Indian Express newspaper reported.

MOST OF THE victims were women and children, officials said, who were hacked to death with machetes and other crude weapons because they could not run fast enough to escape the 'systematic and well-planned' slaughter

The confirmed death toll from 20 straight days of violence in Assam, where elections are under way to replace presidential rule with an elected government, was about 1,200 peo-

Threatened Sudan fighting weak economy, civil unrest

United Press Internationa

Sudan's charges that it is facing a Libyan military threat come as the eastern African nation is weakened by massive debts, inflation and political unrest in its southern provinces.

A Libyan military build-up on the Sudanese border has not been confirmed by independent observers, the United States sent AWACS surveillance planes to nearby Egypt and the aircraft carrier Nimitz to the waters off Libya last week.

The Reagan administration said Egyptian and Sudanese intelligence agencies had uncovered a plot by Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy to invade Sudan and overthrow the pro-American government of President Jaafar Numeiry.

If the reports of the Libyan plot are true, they could not come at a worse time for Numeiry, a Moslem army general who took power in a 1969 coup and has survived several challenges to his rule. Government corruption is reported to be rampant, making life more difficult for the average Sudanese already hurt by high inflation and frequent shortages to 76 cents

The devaluation caused a rise in prices that triggered student demonstrations, forcing the government to shut down schools temporarily.

Numeiry ordered stiff fines or lashings for people "who take part in illegal gatherings or disrupt domestic security," and mandated 10-year jail sentences for protestors who used weapons.

But he also tried to ease the economic pressure by raising the starting salary of workers from $259 to $298 a year.

Numeiry also faces trouble in the independent southern region, composed of three provinces granted wide-ranging self-governing powers.

The regional government was set up in 1973 to end a rebellion by the non-Moslem south against the Moslem north that had lasted for almost 20 years. In January, 13 people were killed and three others injured at the railway station in the southern town of Arvat

A Sudanese official, quoted by Cairo's Al-Akhbar newspaper Sunday, blamed the incident on Libya. e real culprit in this painful incident wa

Sudan owes international lenders about $7 billion, which is more than its total export income. Creditors including the United States earlier this month rescheduled a $500 million payment due this year.

ruler of Libya, who exploited some grudging elements in the south" to carry out the slayings, the official said.

Egypt, which has scores of military advisors in Sudan, is extremely concerned by threats to its southern neighbor. Surrounded by hostile Libya to the west and a former enemy, Israel, to the east, Egypt cannot tolerate a hostile regime to the south.

U.S. worsen Arens: Ties to

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Moshe Arens, named Israel's defense minister to replace Ariel Sharon, said in an intervew published Sunday the degree of frustration and anger in Israeli-American relations is perhaps at its worst in history

In an interview with The New York Times, the Israeli ambassador to Washington said the problem is that American officials have "idealized notions" about how quickly a negotiated solution can be achieved in Lebanon

Arens said the United States had benefited from Israeli military gains in Lebanon last summer. But, he added, "You have got some people in the administration who would like to pick up the dividends and kick us in the teeth at the same time.'

Arens, in the interview conducted Wednesday in Washington, said the degree of "frustration and impatience and anger" in Israeli-American relations was perhaps the worst in history.

"I THINK there is a great deal of impatience here, a feeling that things could be moving faster, and this impatience is giving rise in some quarters to suspicions that Israel is stalling," said Arens.

'People have provided a rationale that maybe Israel feels this is a way of postponing any negotia-tions with King Hussein (of Jordan) but this is totally unfounded '

The administration has urged Hussein to enter the talks with Israel under President Reagan's Middle East peace calling for a Palestinian entity in association with Jordan on the Israeli-occcupied West Bank

Arens said there is "considerable room for optimism" on U.S.-led negotiations for the removal of Israeli the Palestine Liberation Organization and Syrian forces from Lebanon, but that the talks were complicated because of the number of parties involved.

'Maybe worst of all," he said, is the problem that the Lebanese government has so many factions that they have trouble "arriving at a consensus."

Chicago race heats up at finish politicians are reluctant to predict the outcome of Tuesday's Democratic mayoral primary

The voters are playing their cards too close to the vest this year as they consider Mayor Jane Byrne, State's Attorney Richard Daley and Rep. Harold Washington.

The polls show Byrne ahead but slipping as she tries to hold the reins of the nation's "Second City." But none of the candidates puts much stock in the polls.

"There is something going on out there that I can't put my finger on," said Alderman Ralph Axelrod. "Sometimes I get the feeling that people wearing a Byrne button are secretly for Daley and people who say they are for Daley are for Byrne."

In some wards, both Byrne and Daley forces claim to be comfortably misleading the politicos or truly haven't made up their minds.

"I MAY HAVE to flip a coin," said an administrator for the Board of Education late last week while riding home from work.

There is no confusion, however, about voter interest. The race is the hottest topic of conversation in town, despite the opening last week of the White Sox' Florida training camp. Election officials say applications for absentee ballots are running about the rate normally expected for a presidential election, and a turnout of 1 million or 70 percent - is predicted.

One major reason is racial tension. Washington is the first black candidate given a serious chance of becoming mayor and supporters of his herited a fiscal and civic mess and han- of defeating the Democratic survivor.

CHICAGO (UPI) - Even veteran ahead, indicating voters either are opponents - especially Byrne's dled it competently. workers - have been using that fact in > their search for votes. Washington, while he has wooed white voters, is counting of getting an 80 percent turnout of blacks and reaping 80 percent of their votes. If he can achieve that, his supporters argue, Daley and Byrne will split the white vote and finish No. 2 and No. 3.

The campaign has been an unusual one for Chicago, with the tone set primarily by television rather than at the grass-roots level.

BYRNE, WITH the help of consultant David Sawyer and a campaign fund of more than $4 million, developed and marketed through 30-second spots new image.

Her commercials portray her as a no-nonsense businesswoman who in-

Daley and Washington have hammered relentlessly at that image, repeating at every opportunity that the city, its schools and its transit system all face potentially devastating financial problems later this year.

United Press Internation

And while the usual battling was going on in the wards and precincts, there has been no shortage of "dirty tricks."

Daley's campaign chairman, Sen. Dawn Clark Netsch, charged Sunday Byrne's workers were responsible for distribution of mimeographed flyers reading, "Dump the bitch; vote for Rich," in three Northwest Side wards where the battle is fierce. The mayor's es scoffed at the suggestion.

Two arrested in Seattle slayings

SEATTLE (UPI) - Two young Chinese men were in custody and police sought a third suspect Sunday in the execution-style murder of 13 Asians found hog-tied and shot through the head at a high-stakes Chinatown gambling club.

Police think robbery was the motive for the savage slaughter - the worst in Seattle's history.

Benjamin Ng, 20, and Kwan "Willie" Mak, 22, Honk Kong natives living in Seattle, were booked on 13 counts of homicide hours after the massacre. Ng was in bed when police arrived. Mak called detectives and surrendered. Police declined to describe the third suspect, still at large. Police were tipped to the blood-bath when its lone survivor, retired cook Wai Chin, 62, was seen staggering in an alley near the private Wah Mee Club about 1:45 a.m. CST. None of the residents of surrounding buildings had heard anything, police said.

CHIN, SHOT IN the neck, was in serious condition and remained under heavy police guard Sunday at Harborview Medical Center.

When police arrived at the club and pried open its self-locking door, they found the bodies of 11 men and one woman strewn around five felt-topped wallets strewn about the gambling gaming tables. Their hands and feet club. The victims' pockets were empty were bound behind them and strung too. together. Each was shot in the head several more than once.

One, John Loui, was alive when police arrived, but died later at Harborview Medical Center.

A 13th victim was found unbound in a separate office.

Police Capt. Mike Slessman said the gambling room was covered with so much blood, "we were all worried about falling in it - it was that thick." Several of the victims, all Seattle residents, were wealthy restaurateurs and businessmen. Police found empty

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Prompt military action by President Reagan headed off a threat to the African nation of Sudan and pushed Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy "back in his box," Secretary of State George Shultz said Sunday

"As far as we know, the threat (to Sudan) that was clearly present has receded," the secretary said.

But Khadafy - with a history of "reprehensible behavior" - represents a continuing threat to his neighbors and to other nations, and America's policy is to see "his options are limited," Shultz said.

The secretary spoke out as the nuclear-powered carrier Nimitz moved away from the shores of Egypt - the eastern neighbor of Libya and northern neighbor of Sudan - and special U.S. radar planes arranged to end what officials described as an "exercise" with Egypt.

The Nimitz, called from duty off the coast of Lebanon, and the Airborne Warning and Control Systems jets were ordered into the region last week by Reagan in response to a Libyan buildup near the Sudanese border.

SHULTZ, APPEARING ON ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," did not comment directly on the movement of the American forces.

Pentagon officials, however, said the Nimitz, which had been cruising 100 to 200 miles from the Egyptian coast, was returning to a holding pattern off the WASHINGTON (UPI) - Soviet leader Yuri Andropov's latest arms control offer was "the sleeves from his vest," Secretary of State George Shultz said Sunday, but he stressed he does not think the talks with Moscow have hit a dead end.

President Reagan's "zero option," Shultz said, "is a global proposal." He rejected Andropov's offer to pull back medium-range missiles from the European front as merely shuffling a nuclear threat to other parts of the globe.

During an interview on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," Lebanese coast and the AWACS would leave Egypt by mid-week.

Reagan last week played down the U.S. military movements, saying during his Wednesday press conference that the dispatch of the planes was "not unusual." Administration officials said, however, the radar planes went into action on appeal from Egypt amid indications a Libyan coup was being plotted against land-locked nearby

"There is a long history of reprehensible behavior on the part of Khadafy," Shultz said, adding, "I expect that he will continue to cause trouble.

"Our approach, I think, is let him see that his options are limited and we know what's going on and to conduct ourselves accordingly."

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said on CBS' "Face the Nation," the administration "deserves great credit" for its handling of situation. The military maneuvering, he said, represented "a textbook case of how you deploy an effective deterrent quietly and in a manner not to be provocative."

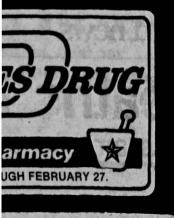

ment of Pershing II and cruise missiles, now set for late this year, if the Soviets eliminate their missiles.

Shultz said Andropov's proposal would only move the weapons "from the European theater to the Far Eastern theater.

"That proposal was not a big hit in the Far East, by a long shot," said Shultz, recently returned from an Asian trip.

"The proposal of Andropov - if somebody had made that to me when I was a businessman, I would have said he proposed to give me the sleeves from his vest," he said.

Shultz turned aside a suggestion the talks in Geneva are stalemated, saying, "I think it's quite apparent that the Soviet Union does not want to see the Pershing IIs and the ground launched cruise missiles deployed in Europe."

Invasion of privacy

Put yourself in Jim Hessburg's place.

As vice president of the University of Northern Iowa Student Association, Hessburg wrote to state Rep. Marvin Diemer asking his position on a bill to raise the state's legal drinking age from 19 to 21. In return, Hessburg received a letter asking what year Hessburg was in school and "any other information you can give me." The letter was not intended for Hessburg - it was supposed to be sent to Dana Barrer, Hessburg's opponent in the upcoming UNISA presidential elections. Hessburg has filed a complaint with the Iowa House Ethics Committee charging that Diemer's attempt to "investigate" him was unethical.

Anyone would feel indignant at such a flagrant invasion of privacy. A constituent has the right to sound out a representative's stand on an issue without fear of recrimination. Diemer justified his action by saying he received a lot of letters from "weirdos." But Hessburg's letter was a straightforward request for the legislator's position on an issue — there was no reason to believe he was more of a "weirdo" than any other constituent.

Diemer has said that the incident has been blown out of proportion, that a request for information about constituents is a "routine thing" that takes place "all the time." Thankfully, this opinion is not shared by other legislators.

What aggravates the matter is Diemer's attitude toward the issue. He has called Hessburg's complaint "funny," saying it is a "humorous thing down here (at the legislature)."

Diemer's constituents should be worried at his lack of respect for rights of privacy, and they should expect that any request for information from their elected representative may result in an investigation of their personal lives.

The ethics committee may take no action on the complaint, but at the very least Diemer owes Hessburg an apology, and an assurance that such action is not "routine." Diemer may find the whole incident "humorous," but the right to privacy is no laughing matter.

Why not surrogates?

A young Michigan woman recently gave birth to a deformed child - the product of a sperm implant, donated according to contract. Neither she and her husband nor their client would accept responsibility for, or legal custody of, the child. After an ensuing court bttle, culminating in a series of blood tests, it was determined that the donor was not the biological father. Only then did the parents vow to care for the child as their own.

The publicity surrounding the incident has brought on a rash of unjust criticism of surrogate motherhood. Columnist Carl Rowan (DI, Feb. 16), for example, calls the practice sordid and abominable. After extolling the virtues of "real motherhood" Rowan reduces surrogates to the level of prostitutes, wondering aloud how any woman could, for a price, endure the many hardships necessary to give birth to a child who will be reared by

With those words to the Senate Budget Commitee, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger revealed that the biggest "hogs" in this town are not those marvelous offensive linemen of the Washington Redskins, but the men who make up the Pentagon hierarchy.

They take the arrogant line that they have first call on this nation's resources, and that only after they waddle away from the trough can teachers, doctors, nutritionists and others gather a little leftover slop for the country's education, health, food, housing and other needs.

Weinberger encases the Pentagon in a pigsty of fear: The Soviet Union constitutes a grave "threat," and he sees a need for $245.3 billion in the fiscal year beginning last Oct. 1 to meet that "threat," and everything else must give way to this "national security" need.

What's more, Weinberger has the backing of President Reagan, who guarantees that the Pentagon's "hogs" aren't carrying any lard, but that the military pig skins are touching bare bones

Fear - especially fear of the Russians - is so much a part of our national psyche, so much an influence on our public policy, that this would seem to be an irresistable argument. But to their credit, many of our lawmakers, Republicans and Democrats, safe." are resisting it.

FIRST, BECAUSE THEY do not accept Weinberger's claim that the Pentagon can demand what it "needs" for weapons systems, some exotically impractical, without giving concern to the nation's other needs. Second, because congressmen do not believe that the Pentagon budget is so lean and bony that a lot of lard cannot be squeezed out of it.

gressmen know that it is human nature for an admiral who thinks he needs 80 submarines to ask for 160 "just to be

But, most of all, the 98th Congress is not going to buy the Weinberger-Reagan oinks of fear because Congress knows that national security involves a lot more than what is in the Pentagon budget.

It has been shown in space, in a wretched war in Lebanon and elsewhere, that in terms of weaponry we have a wide superiority over the Soviet Union - a superiority that reflects superior education, better scientific research and industrial much money for a Dense-Pack MX missiles mess that nothing is left for basic research in our great universities, or if budget deficits remain so high, pushing interest rates up so far, that even the military-industrial complex is forced to operate so far below capacity that it must abandon developmental programs that reach into the future with regard to security needs.

SURELY IT IS NOT too much to expect Weinberger and the military joint chiefs to understand that our security will be fleeting if they take so much money that nothing is left for scholarships and the other programs that will enable our institutions to produce enough mathematicians, physicists, engineers and so on.

A wise admiral or general will know that the development of a brilliantly productive scientist does not begin in college, but perhaps in kindergarten with some badly-needed milk and bread and decently-paid first-class teachers.

Thus the food stamps and highways that Weinberger refuses to think about when he draws up his defense budget are a lot more important to building a strong and secure America than are a lot of the toys of death that some in the Pentagon are demanding. It is "compassionate" of Weinberger to order all military bases to shelter the many Americans who are jobless, hopeless and out in the cold this winter. But "hitting the SAC" in Omaha is no solution to any poor family's housing needs

We are fortunate to have a legislative branch that knows this and has powers independent from the executive. We have someone to tell the Pentagon hogs that there are some other important animals on the farm.

It is hard to understand a person willing to go to such extremes to help realize another couple's dreams for approximately $1,000 per month it is hardly a get-rich-quick scheme. Few are the people who will give of themselves in such a unique manner. But those who do deserve praise and not scorn. After all, thousands of babies each year are brought to term by mothers who know they will never see them. Should these children be aborted merely because they will be reared by adoptive instead of biological parents?

Couples unable to achieve pregnancy have every right to seek out a desirable surrogate, make whatever contribution is possible. and contract for their child's pre-natal care. For many, such an arrangement is more comforting than adopting the child of a mother they will never meet, and a father who may be unknown even to her.

The Michigan incident, while illustrating an additional risk of surrogate parenthood, will be the exception and not the rule. Custody disputes can be remedied by more complete and competent drafting of contracts.

When the legal niceties are ironed out, the benefits of surrogate parenting will outweigh the costs. Unlike processes such as testtube babies and the not-so-futuristic concept of cloning, surrogate parenthood is a practice that, while making dreams come true, maintains the humanness of human life.

foot was in a cast from a basket Digressions ball injury and both arms were welted from grease spatters. When my boss fired me for filching ham during break, I celebrated for a few hours before the mood of liberation wore off and worry took its place. The recession had hit Chapel Hill hard. Hundreds of recent graduates loitered around town, most of us scared to leave the collegiate nursery. Every job opening within 50 miles attracted a small army of Ph.D.s. Even Burger King radiated an atmosphere of 'publish or perish.'

After the waffle shop, I hunted jobs unsuccessfully for months. I had two near misses: changing diapers on a 21year-old hydrocephalic in a state institution, and killing dogs at a blood research lab.

My mental health withered quickly under the twin lathe of boredom and poverty. I couldn't sleep or control my nerves, and my sense of humor vanished into spite.

By now all the doors in my apartment were punched in - something that would end up costing a fortune in forfeited security deposit

My brother urged me to see a psychiatrist. I went to the university outpatient clinic and was assigned to a young resident.

TWICE A WEEK at $2 an hour, I discussed childhood, dredging up every pre-pubescent humiliation I could emember. I felt like an anthropologist toothbrushing a burial mound for ancient relics of disaster. I had studied Freud in college and knew which areas to stress: anality, fantasies about my mother, penile catastrophe for Dad.

After awhile, I was willing to confess anything just to purge the anxiety of depression

The psychiatrist listened silently, even sullenly. Was he composing shopping lists? I felt guilty subjecting him to my whining racket, but I also resenwith this in mind, I began getting mad whenever possible. Obscenity, rudeness, cruelty - I felt as if I'd been given a mandate that applied far beyond the doors of my apartment.

Of course, mean-spiritedness didn't help much. But I often wonder how much control I had over it.

After six more months, I finally got a job lifeguarding at a resort. Instead of sleeping till noon to postpone the daily ritual of boredom, frustration and hangover, I was up at dawn vacuuming the pool. The other lifeguards laughed at my jokes, the little kids liked me, and the women guests were more than kind.

In less than a month I went from dreg to self-styled Apollo. After a year of hating myself, perhaps a little egomania was healthy

FROM LIFEGUARDING, I moved on to hydraulic sales, then to elementary school teaching, and finally to the Iowa Writers' Workshop.

Eight years have passed between recessions, and I have been quite lucky in the interlude. But when I think back

Unemployment in this country is a triple bind. The work ethic implies that oblessness equals worthlessness. Then the government, which is a chief proponent of the work ethic, makes it impossible to get a job.

The final irony is that in America, character is supposed to blossom under adversity.

Instead of whining about unemployment, we are expected to square our jaws like Ronald Reagan in Death Valley Days and tough it out. If you succumb, as I did, to a less than admirable disgruntlement, you have yet another reason to feel bad.

I wish I had a solution for those who are unemployed now. The truth is, it's a rotten deal and there's not much to be done about it beyond waiting till you find work.

If, in the meantime, you're finding it hard to keep the jaw squared, don't worry. The jaws in Washington are square enough for all of us.

Letters

Looking backwards To the editor:

I would like to personally thank all of those serious scholars, the somewhat credible, if not altogether believable creationists, the host of letter direction to face. The blistering blasts scribblers, and of course, the enduring copyists, whose droll task it must have been to splatter all of that precious ink over the editorial pages of the DI (Feb. 7); their efforts were, in a word, unbelievable.

Surely we will always recall the truly momentous day that creationism, and its antical opponents took up no less than one-and-three-quarters of sheet in the very heart of the opinion section. Amazing though it might be, I find it heartening that there is still humor abounding in unexpected quarters of Reagan-run America. History, I was told as a child, is vital.

But at any rate, I must say that it is a delightful change of pace to find grown-up, mature, reasonable men and women spending so much time, effort, and argument over what we might have once been, rather than mucking and soiling themselves with the sordid affairs of everyday life that affect us all and portend what we will all someday become.

Indeed, it is much more thrilling, is it not, to cheer the good rousing brawl between the evolutionists who cling to their quadrupeds, and the creationists who clutch at their troubled texts and whatever shreds that remain of William Jennings Bryan. Ah, the battle could rage for years, and the dust remain unsettled for centuries, if not for slightly more pressing troubles.

Backward is always an easier of hot air coming from the present are much easier to bear that way, I agree. But as far as ancestry goes, I too hope to someday be an ancestor that people will look back upon with a sigh of gentle satisfaction, and with benign, if rather belated, gratitude for having perpetuated the race. I would be extremely distressed if, by some chance, due in part to the backwardsightedness of some certain persons whom I need not mention, the world suddenly changed due to a cataclysmic "event" occurring between the two, currently existing "great" superowers

Sizzling review To the editor:

There were so many errors and bits of nonsense in Fran Ufkes's review of the Roger Wagner concert (DI, Feb. 15) that I found myself asking why I have to pay, even indirectly, for such trash.

Leaving aside the areas of subjective judgement and taste, there are a number of factual errors that need comment.

Most disgracefully, Ufkes mistook the double bass for a cello. My children knew better at the age of five. One hardly expects renaissance music to be "classically precise," and her "renaissance Gregorian Chant" is a ludicrous contradiction in terms. John Voland is often bad enough, but for this poor soul I can only recommend a basic introduction to music course, or no further assignments. Perferably both.

Admittedly, for Ufkes's "lovers of popular classical music," and for many of the rest of us, it was certainly an enjoyable and interesting afternoon. (Ufkes apparently enjoyed an evening concert too.) However, as a so-called "vocal ensemble purist" I can assure her that the program contained many Wagnerisms guaranteed not to please. I suppose your critic was there. I assure you she didn't need to be. Peter Allen

Fans spoil victory To the editor:

On Feb. 10 I was able to attend my first basketball game at the new Carver-Hawkeye Sports Arena. For me, the Iowa fans tainted what would otherwise have been an extremely enjoyable night. It seems to me that the Hawkeye fans have forgotten the meaning of sportsmanship and, while they can be called Hawkeye fans, they certainly cannot be called sports fans.

As each member of the Purdue team was introduced, the fans booed him loudly. I have witnessed similar behavior on the part of partisan crowds while watching televised matches and have always been disgusted by it. I thought the Hawkeye fans were beyond that

I suppose that I should be grateful that we did not see our cheerleaders holding up sarcastic placards as "who cares" and "so what" that we saw during the introductions at the Illinois game. The Purdue team was labeled on our scoreboard, as "visitors." At the very least the behavior of the Iowa fans demonstrated appalling bad manners in the welcome that we extended to those visitors.

I appreciate the fact that one of the advantages of playing at home, especially in basketball, is that you will play before a crowd that should, at least, be totally supportive. However, there is no excuse for a crowd being totally tasteless. For the crowd to demonstrate no sportsmanship at all reduces the contest to the level of gladiatorial combat and, for my money, that is well below the level of a sporting contest.

We won. For me, however, the sweet taste of the team's win was all but cancelled out by a large section of the crowd that was unable to demonstrate any sportsmanship. K.C.Pringle

Lawmakers, residents discuss legislative issues

By Kristine Stemper Staff Writer

Local people got a chance to discuss horse races, tax increases, mandatory infant seats and liquor sales with state legislators Saturday at a public forum

Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma, Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, and Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, were in Iowa City to address questions about legislative issues that concern area residents.

So far this year Brown feels that everything is going smoothly. "I've seen more happen up there (at the state capital) in the last six weeks than I have in the last year.

The 1-cent sales tax increase, which was approved early in the legislative session, was well supported because "everyone understands" the necessity of its passage, Doderer said. But "we're not out of the woods yet on our deficit. We still have to pass some more bills. We're going to have to find some other taxes to raise."

future, "I think we will see certain downward adjustments in the budget' to compensate for the lack of funds. Pari-mutuel betting, which would allow horse and possibly dog races in the state, was approved by the Senate last week. Brown supported the bill. "I don't think the government should be that restrictive. It's an optional 'tax'; I think we should give it a chance. Eventually we'll come to a compromise with the House," he said.

If approved, the state's general fund would benefit from a tax on the total bets collected. The bill stirred up controversy in the legislative chambers, however, when opponents charged that enforcing drug-use laws and examining animals would cost the state more than it would earn during the first two years of legalized betting. The Iowa House of Representatives is expected to make several changes in the bill before it is voted on.

LLOYD-JONES SAID she will not support the bill when it comes up in the Small said, "The one thing I will try to fight for is that the state doesn't get involved" in financing the betting. He noted that Quad City Downs Inc., in East Moline, Ill., has gone bankrupt three times.

The legislators discussed Iowa's state control of liquor sales. It is a large source of the state's revenue, but if they could get the same amount of profit from it, they agreed it should be turned over to private sales.

'I don't have any objections to turning it over to private industry as long as we get the same amount of money,' Doderer said.

"I sort of have a problem with the state being in the liquor business just as in the gambling business. I bet there's more money being transferred

THE STATE GETS about $80 million annually from the liquor sales, according to Small.

The amount of money going toward school aid will not be brought up until mid-March or April. "We know we're going to fund schools," Brown, chair of the Senate Education Committee, said but. "I'm waiting for Sen. Small on the Appropriations Committee to tell us how much we can spend.'

Lloyd-Jones mentioned the "Buckle Up Baby" bill which was passed by the House last week. The bill requires infants up to two years old to be restrained in an infant car seat and those two to five years old must be in a car seat or have a seatbelt on.

The public forum was sponsored by the Legislative Committee of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce and the Johnson County League of Women Voters.

pressed. "I thought we made Indiana look a step slow (in Iowa's 58-57 win last Wednesday), but Ohio State made us look five steps slow," Olson said. Indeed, it seemed like every time Ohio State would set up in a half-court offense, one of the Buckeye big men would plant himself, like a tree with deep roots, in front of the Iowa point guard allowing the fleet guards to drive by uncontested.

Iowa's Steve Carfino was often on the bad end of those drives. "Their two quick guards really posed problems for us." Carfino said quietly. "Our basic problem was their high-post screen. State, for all practical purposes, had the game won when they went into the lockerroom with a 42-31 lead. The Buckeyes also dominated the Hawks on the boards, 23-12, in the half, which at least in part, contributed to their 11point advantage.

Every time an Ohio State player went to the boards, he acted like it was a life-or-death situation. "There again, they showed their quickness to the ball." Olson said. "The disappointing thing to me was that many times it was their guards getting the rebounds." Tony Campbell, the velvety smooth yet strong junior forward, led the Bucks in rebounding with 11. "I'm really concentrating on rebounds this season," he said.

WHEN IOWA CAME out in the second half, it was without starting forward Mark Gannon, who has a hyperextended left knee. "The funny thing about that was all he did was turn to block out on the boards and his knee gave out on him," Olson said. He added that the chances are slim of Gannon playing in the upcoming three-game home stand.

Hawks wrestle the fight right out of Cyclones

By Jay Christensen

Iowa and Iowa State's wrestling teams may be headed to similar tournaments but opposite directions following the No. 2 Hawks' 26-11 win over the No. 4 Cyclones Saturday in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Hawkeyes, who finished up the dual season with a 17-1 record, now turn their attention to the Big Ten tournament in the arena Friday and Saturday. Iowa will be shooting for its 10thstraight conference championship and barring some unforseen disaster. should be an easy winner.

But the story is different for the injury-riddled Cyclones, who now face No. 1 Oklahoma State, No. 3 Oklahoma, plus highly-rated Nebraska and Missouri in the Big Eight Conference tournament in Ames.

"IN 34 YEARS previous to this in wrestling, I've had to forfeit weights only twice," said veteran Iowa State Coach Harold Nichols. "This year alone, I've forfeited six times. Now if I could get somebody in there, I'd would get them in ' One of the wrestlers Nichols is missing is 177-pounder Perry Hummel, who left the squad last week. However, Hummel, a three-time All-American. may be back. "Give me a call Tuesday and I'll tell you whether we'll have Hummel or not," Nichols said. "His status right now is that he didn't want to wrestle anymore; he quit. I personally haven't talked to him since last Monday, but a lot of the wrestlers and other people have.

State, if the Cowboys - 21-17 winners over Oklahoma Saturday - survive the Big Eight tournament.

'In the past, it's been Iowa and Iowa State, but now there is another team in the picture," Gable said. "So we're going to have to break them in the national tournament, unless Iowa State can break them in the Big Eights. "If Iowa State is going to win the nationals, they're going to have to do very well in the Big Eights to build their momentum and confidence again.

Where if Oklahoma State really sails through there, we're going to have to be ready or Oklahoma State is going to be the champs."

with 190-pounder Ed Banach, who suffered his third defeat of the year to rugged Mike Mann of the Cyclones. It just depends on who you talk to on what may happen if the two meet a fourth time in the national tourney.

"You asked the question of whether Banach might mentally be down right now because of getting beat by Mann three times," Gable said. "That may be for a normal person, but I think a GABLE'S OTHER concern rests guy like Banach will be able to see that he's making progression in scoring. That has to help him a little bit.

"If he was blown out today, we would have had a really hard time convincing him that he could win the national championship at that weight.

Banach, Iowa's all-time winningest and pinningest wrestler, had never lost at home prior to Saturday's 10-9 setback to Mann. Nichols believes his wrestler has more than proved himself against the tough Banach.

Gymnasts break record; wait for NCAA invite

By Steve Batterson Assistant Sports Editor

All Iowa men's Gymnastics Coach Tom Dunn wanted his team to do this weekend was to go out and get a couple of good road scores that would put the ninth-rated Hawkeyes on solid footing in their bid for an NCAA berth. But what he got was his team breaking the Iowa school scoring mark, not just once, but twice. The Hawkeyes weren't expected to have much trouble in sweeping three duals this weekend and they didn't.

Iowa defeated Illinois-Chicago, 276.6-262.35, on Saturday night and went on to score a 277.25 in defeating Wisconsin

"I really didn't know what to expect going into this weekend," Dunn said, 'I think everybody was starting to lose a bit of confidence after we lost three duals and we had a couple of low scores. We've turned that around now. These scores confirm that we have a fine team and that we can compete with anyone. I think that we can score a bit higher, too."

THE WINS, which raise Iowa's record to 11-3, also helped Dunn to settle line-up problems. "This was the same line-up we used when we beat IIlinois and Minnesota, so I think we'll stick with it." Dunn said. "It seems to have the right chemistry so we'll use it against Iowa State and for the Big Ten meet.'

Iowa senior Brett Garland said the return of Ron Rechenmacher to the Hawkeye line-up gave the team a boost. The junior, who missed three meets with torn ligaments in an elbow, competed in three events.

"On paper, it doesn't look like it would hurt our score that much with him out," Garland said, "but I think everyone felt more comfortable with Ron in there.' DUNN SAID IT was a team effort that made the difference. "We got what we've been working for, just some good, solid consistent performances," he said. "We didn't have any gymnast score a personal best at Chicago. Actually, I thought we hit better at Chicago than we did (at Wisconsin), but the judging in Chicago was as strict as we have seen this year."

Iowa did pick up a couple of personal bests at Madison, the most impressive being Joe Leo's 9.85 performance on the pommel horse, breaking his own school record.

Dunn said he got his first indications of a high score from a smile on one of the judges faces. "It was one of those 'What can I take off?' kind of smiles," Dunn said. "He then gave him a 9.9."

The game plan for the Iowa women's basketball team last weekend was to neutralize the strong inside play of both Indiana and Ohio State by using a match-up zone defense. It did just that, but the results were the same as the Hawkeyes lost Big Ten contests to the league's co-leaders at the Carver-Hawkeye Sports Arena. The Hoosiers slipped by an upset-minded Iowa team, 65-59, Friday night. Then on Sunday, the Buckeyes dominated the Hawks, 72-57, before a record crowd of 627 Hawkeye fans. Ohio State lost to Northwestern Friday night and are now tied with the

IOWA NEUTRALIZED the inside games of both Indiana and Ohio State, but it was clutch free throw shooting by Hoosier's All-American Denise Jackson, and strong outside shooting by the Buckeye's guard court that accounted for Iowa's losses.

Iowa was leading by five, 50-45, with just 10 minutes to go in the game. But Indiana Coach Maryalyce Jeremiah went to her money players, Jackson and guard Linda Cunningham, down the stretch.

Jackson, the Hoosier's leading scorer, connected on 11 of 15 free throws for her game high 21 points. The 5-foot-11 junior combined with Cunningham to hit five free throws in the final minute after Iowa cut the lead to one to ice a Hoosier victory.

Hawks third at Illinois Invitational; Hassard unhappy with team effort

By Steve Riley Staff Writer

Women's track Coach Jerry Hassard didn't like what he saw in Champaign, Ill., Saturday - from his own team or the competition at the Illini Invitational.

The Hawkeyes placed third to Big Ten teams Wisconsin and Illinois. "Wisconsin's strong, but we knew they would be,' Hassard said. He added that Illinois "looks to be improved."

Although three Iowa track athletes won their events Saturday, Hassard was not happy with the overall results. "We're going to have to put out more in order to do what we can do," he said. "We've been hearing what can be done, but we're not seeing it.'

While some members of the Iowa track team were weakened by the flu Saturday, triple jumper Mike Lacy showed the strongest form of his career.

The competitive junior beat Owen Gill's school indoor record in that event by 1¼ inches, going 49 feet. In doing so, he topped three-time Missouri Valley Conference champion Len Spicer of Bradley by three inches. "That 49-foot figure moves him up to another level mentally," remarked Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler.

Lacy is proving himself stronger the more jumps he takes. He chalked up his winning mark on the fifth of six jumps.

Houghton pleased with lowa's play at Northwestern singles tournament

By Mike Condon Staff Writer

Iowa's tennis Coach Steve Houghton is not upset over the fact that his four entries in the Northwestern Invitational singles ournament didn't fare well. Rather, Houghton left Chicago feeling good about his squad.

"I was really pleased with the way we played," Houghton said. "We were not overwhelmed by any players in the field. Last) weekend was good experience for our squad. There is no question we'll get better.

"NELSON PLAYED two tough three-set matches against No. 1 players from Wisconsin and Michigan State," he said. 'He hurt his knee during the tournament and has been on crutches the last couple of days. He'll see the doctor tomorrow but I don't expect him to be out for any extended period.'

Junior Mike Inman said Iowa's players were hurt quite a bit by the draw. "It was really strange that we drew so many of the No. 1's from other schools," he said. "I thought we did pretty well as a team but personally, I felt I could have played better. I usually start out a lot slower and come on strong towards the end of the season.

The Hawks may have received an additional break with the rising tempertures that have hit Iowa City. "We will try to get a couple of days outside before our spring trip," Houghton said. "It would really be an advantage for us if we were able to work outside before the trip so the guys could get re-adjusted to playing on an outdoor surface.

IOWA WILL BE in action again on Friday against Iowa State at 9 a.m. and against Northeast Missouri State at 5:30 p.m. in the Recreation Building.

'Doc" Councilman and his squad best beware of the Iowa Hawkeyes when the Big Ten championships roll around in two weeks. Coach Glenn Patton's crew took a large step forward Friday by soundly defeating arch-rival Iowa State, 71-42, in the Field House pool. The Hawks jumped on the Cyclones from the start. Iowa's 400-yard medley relay team of Dave Ross, Chris Coveney, Matt Wood and Bryan Farris dropped over a second off of their best time. Their time of 3:25.44 was quite pleasing to Patton. "THE 400 MEDLEY relay is really starting to come around," he said. Add to that the performances of James mance should assure him a place in the fast heat.

Hays may have come up a bit short in his quest to garner a spot in the first , heat but Patton is confident that Hays will have one of the fastest times in the second heat of the 1,650.

"Lorys had just a fine swim," Patton said. "He was real strong in the 1,000 and then came back and had a big win in the 500.

IOWA STATE DID have some bright spots though. Senior All-American Jim Barron was impressive in winning both the 200 individual medley and the 200 breaststroke.

Iowa backstroker Ross may have hit on the reason for the Cyclones' lackluster performance. "I thought we looked more rested than Iowa State," he said. "We felt pretty confident going into the meet but we thought it was going to be much closer than it was.'

Patton says that practice is basically over for the season. The squad will come in every day to stretch out and work on technique, Ross had this to say about the buildup for the conference meet: "I wish it wasn't two weeks until the meet. But I'm sure we'll be ready when the time comes."

Uison named top wrestler; Roehlk captures fourth title

Glen Olson, a sophomore from Niles, Ill., received a $200 scholarship after winning the Most Outstanding Wrestler Award in the intramural tournament, Saturday in the Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Olson won his 150-pound weight class by defeating Daniel Mari, a freshman from Eddyville, Iowa, 9-4. There was no scoring in the first period, but both wrestlers were aggressive and in good position. Olson escaped early in the second period and took Mari down with a single leg. From that point on, Olson dominated the match, letting Mari up and taking him down three times.

THE MATCH WAS not as close as the score indicated and the two wrestlers were not as evenly matched as those in other weight classes were.

The 158-pound championship featured two of the best matched wrestlers in the tournament. Brad Unsliken, a junior from Iowa City, defeated senior John Campana of Des Moines, 6-4, taking him down in the final seconds of the third period.

Campana, who wrestled for two years at Notre Dame and was second in the National Catholic Tournament in 1980, basically beat himself.

Campana executed a smooth single leg takedown with 10 seconds left in the first period to lead Unsliken, 2-0. But in the second period, after Unsliken had escaped, Campana tried an unorthodox move and was taken down.

Campana reversed Unsliken with five seconds left in the match and then mysteriously let him up, making the score 4-4. Unsliken, who qualified for the Junior College Nationals last year, got the winning takedown with just one second left.

THE 142-POUND match, where junior Scott Blumenshine defeated freshman Dave Roan, 5-1, was the only other close match of the tournament. Sophomore Gregg Durbin of Morning Sun, Iowa, defeated Dennis Kooker, 9-2, in the 177-pound championship. Durbin took control from the start of the match, scoring a takedown in the first period. Durbin let up Kooker twice in the second period, scoring on both occasions with double leg takedowns. Durbin, who didn't have an offensive point scored against him, clearly dominated the match.

Brian Brazell also dominated his opponent, sophomore Terry Flawden, 12-4, in the 190-pound championship match. Brazell, who placed sixth in the Iowa State Tournament for Cedar Rapids Washington last year, got a roar from the sparce crowd after executing a lateral drop late in the third period.

THE HEAVYWEIGHT match, which featured last year's match-up, three-time intramural champion Jon Roehlk against Sophomore Kurt Schumacher ended with a smash early in the first period as Roehlk executed a lateral drop on Schumacher, pinning him in 35 seconds.

Epic summarizes Gandhi's spirit

By Richard Panek Staff Writer

ANDHI IS its own best simile: Making the life of the Mahatma into a movie is like, well, making the life of the Mahatma into a movie.

"No man's life can be encompassed in one telling," admits a disclaimer at the start of this film. But Gandhi, now playing at the Campus 3, tells its complex story so simply and directly that it does capture the humanity of one of this century's most inspirational religious and political leaders, Mohandas K. Gandhi.

"Generations to come," says a radio announcer near the start of the movie, quoting Albert Einstein, "will scarce believe that such a one as this ever in flesh and blood walked upon this earth." These words set the tone for the movie, which opens and closes with Gandhi's funeral.

BETWEEN THOSE reminders of his mortality, Gandhi covers the Mahatma's public career. From his South Africa crusade against racism in 1893 through decades of peaceful protests against England's rule of India to his assassination in 1948, this epic summarizes the spirit of Gandhi's philosophy without forgetting that its subject was, after all, "flesh and blood."

As Ben Kingsley plays him, Gandhi has both a sense of humility and a sense of humor. During his first speeches about civil rights and human dignity, his smile binds him to his audience by reminding them of their mutual failings. By the movie's end, after a lifetime of moral victories, that smile becomes a grin of conviction. Even when he performs superhuman deeds — philosophical and physical feats akin to contemporary miracles this Gandhi still seems human.

Like all epics, Gandhi uses symbolic acts to suggest the sweep of history. But this movie, unlike other epics, has the advantage of a hero who has the knack of finding the one act that will most excite his supporters while upsetting the opposition.

WHEN GANDHI STAGES a public burning of the identification passes the South African law requires only Indians to carry, for example, he earns his first widespread publicity.

Years later in India, he organizes a bonfire of English fabrics to underscore the absurdity of his nation's economic subservience.

And when civil war splits India shortly after it wins its independence, only Gandhi's fast-unto-death can stop the street fighting.

All these acts of courage are true as well as being cinematic. By focusing on these protests, John Briley's script and Richard Attenborough's direction emphasize both the miracles and the

But the epic form has its limitations

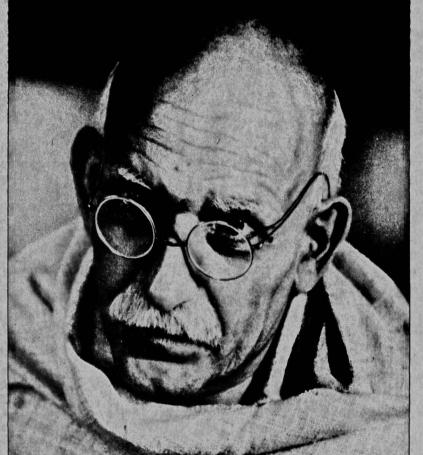

as well. Although it benefits from the symbolic power of the protests, Gandhi suffers from having to explain the gaps between them. The film relies on minor characters to summarize the events of several months or years in a couple of sentences.

Similarly, Gandhi features two journalists (played by Martin Sheen and Candice Bergen) whose sole function is to ask the Mahatma about his philosophy. And when Briley and Attenborough can't find a visual equivalent for Gandhi's grace, they revert to words of praise from his admirers or words of hatred from his adversaries.

These shortcuts mar the movie, but they don't seriously damage it. Gandhi overcomes more narrative problems than most epics — the fact that the film exists is almost achievement enough.

Its rendering of one man's 56-year, flesh-and-blood spiritual quest in three hours and 20 minutes (including intermission) makes Gandhi a triumph.

British pluck and dash humors Entertainment today audience at 'Canterbury Tales' At the Bijou man.

By Hoyt Olsen Staff Writer

NYONE FAMILIAR with Geoffrey Chaucer's Canterbury Tales can readily appreciate the difficulties involved in incorporating the collection into a stage adaptation.

The first problem is Chaucer's framing device: the tales are not offered by Chaucer himself, but by a mixed collection of medieval characters united in pilgrimage, whose own personalities, backgrounds and interaction form an integral part of the fun — and meaning — of the tales.

Second, the two dozen tales Chaucer completed before his death include treatises on morality, pious tales concerning saintly lives, romances of knights and ladies, allegories, beast fables, and "fabliaux" which feature coarse, often sex-related, humor variously related in styles ranging from the courtly and elegant to the rustic and bufoonish.

SO HOW COULD the seven-member cast touring in the New Vic Theatre production of Canterbury Tales, presented at Hancher Auditorium last Thursday night, manage all that?

With infectious good humor and considerable British pluck and dash — sometimes a little something plucked from Monty Python with a dash of Benny Hill. And succeeding quite splendidly, thank you veddy much and pass the stirrup cup literally.

Before the play began, between the first two tales, and during the regular intermission the audience was encouraged to come onstage to drink a spiritladen punch from stirrup cups and mingle with performers who stayed in character. This helped establish participatory camaraderie between performers and audience — a necessary thing, for few audiences have been required to join the action in the ways last Thursday's Hancher audience was. Chaucer's framing was maintained with a suitable updating. The performance was ostensibly the 604th annual Geoffrey Chaucer Storytelling Competition, the participants members of the local vicarage, with the Vicar himself performing as emcee and the audience serving as judges.

complete Cook's Tale is also related through song). Audience members drawing lots before the performance allegedly determined the order of telling but since the resulting order seemed ideal, one may reasonably suspect that the drawing was rigged.

The Knight's Tale — which is epic in scope, dealing with the love rivalry of two knights and including a bloodthirsty tournament and a deathbed farewell was least successful in the retelling. It was also the most serious, which explains a great deal about why the remaining tales were selected over other possibilities. The bawdy Reeve's and Miller's Tales — the former centering on two university students who revenge themselves on a cheating miller through some bedchanging maneuvers with his wife and daughter; the latter highlighted by the nighttime discovery of a licentious priest that the cheeks fair Alison offers through the window to be kissed are not the ones he had in mind ("Strange, I know she does not have such stubble on her chin") — shook peals of laughter from the audience.

BUT THE EVENING'S most spectacular moments occurred during the cast's frequent forays into the audience. Audience members were asked to hold the horse during the Reeve's Tale and were trampled by mad pursuit over the seats as a knight tried to escape marriage to a hag during the Wife of Bath's Tale; an unfortunate gentleman on the front row was wrestled to the ground for staring too closely at the Miller's wife, while the Miller himself regularly assaulted comely wenches in the audience with passionate embraces SCRIPTWRITER Phil Woods selected four of the most memorable tales for performance: those of the Knight, Reeve, Wife of Bath, and the Miller (the in-min publicité embraces.

The play was designed first and foremost as the Miller's show, and Micky O'Donoughue, who played the role (as well as co-directing the play with "Vicar" Anthony Milner), faithfully stole the show and seemed to enjoy himself thoroughly in the process.

During scene changes he entertained the audience with jokes not to be found in the Tales but matched to their spirit nevertheless: "This woman advertises for a passionate lover. The next day she answers the door, and there's an armless and legless man. 'How can you be a passionate lover without arms or legs?' she asks in surprise, to which he replies 'I rang the doorbell, didn't I?'''

The Tales, and the talented ensemble of the New Vic Theater, certainly rang the doorbell last Thursday night.

Life and works of Lewis remembered at UI concert

By John Voland Staff Writer

resenting a retrospective of a man's life within the confines of a single afternoon (or day, or week) is impossible, even if the life was sadly cut short, as Peter Tod Lewis' was. It spills, overfull, into the surrounding lives, times, thoughts.

That said, the memorial concert dedicated to Lewis Saturday afternoon at Clapp Hall gave the audience a glimpse of several different facets of Lewis' creative output and left a token of his presence. Early (the "Sweets for Piano" from 1965), late ("Bricolage" from 1979), and still later ("Gestes III: Douceurs" from 1980) works were all represented; the composite portrait was of a genial, curious man whose music poked under corners and looked at the sky and then told, in a dense and humorous tongue, what it had seen there.

LEWIS' MUSIC IS thoroughly contemporary: Electronic media (tapes, synthesizers) are employed to fill out and define acoustic/traditional elements. Sometimes difficult, often implicit, this music requires concentration and the willingness to explore. Work went into the creation of it, and work must go into the comprehension of it. This is the voice of modern artistic thought: besieged, splintered, esoteric and wonderful.

Our loss, and the loss of the musical world, is sharp and great: Peter Tod Lewis was a very talented man.

His "Bricolage," for a battery of percussion and tape, opened the program. Michael Geary came on stage, took a trapezoidal piece of wood in his hands, and beat out soft rain-sounds in varying intensities and rhythms ("Rain"); moving to "traditional" percussion, he beat out a multifarious sound composed of bells, xylophone, cymbals and wood blocks ("Chorale").

A march of sorts, turned in against its own rhythm, was defined by bass drum, snare and highhat, then exploded ("Rhythmus"). Vibes, taped strings and light splashes of bells painted a solitary thoughtfulness that was in turn chuckled over and forgotten ("Harmonie," "Melodie"). Geary, as in his appearances with the Center for New Music, was phenomenal.

Donald Martin Jenni took over on piano for the "Sweets," which emerged, in spite of its episodic plan (ten separate "sweets"), as a whole thought, just as he had promised in his notes on the set ("this is a single and singular composition").

IF THE WORK was less convincing than what came before and after, it may be due to its fairly early date and its exploitation of the piano's sound; it seemed Lewis was after something the piano could not provide. But Jenni gave it his considerable all, and the images — jazzy, violent and moody by turns — came across very clearly.

"Gestes III" was an intimate, ballad-like duet between Lewis (singing and playing piano) and his synthesizer; a story, maybe, of what man is and what he has made. This brief work, more than any other, gave a picture of Lewis the man, singing to himself and listening, fascinated, at the results.

Lewis' Second String Quartet, titled "Signs and Circuits," was the afternoon's most powerful experience, alternating as it did between tapeaugmented violence and restrained, ruminative late Romanticism a la Shostakovich. A dichotomy was set up between anything-goes Modernism (wide, nauseous vibratos, playing on the bridges, glissandos, tapping and hitting the instruments, and so on) — what I took to be the "signs" of things contemporary — and the quiet reflections — the "circuits" — in that tradition seemed to be flowing through these passages.

Lewis remarked in his notes for the piece that "the work (should) be allowed to unfold, to grow, to surprise me and you. There is great joy in this." The Stradivari Quartet obviously agreed; their performance was committed, gutsy, kaleidoscopic, and, of course, joyous.

Which adjective could, after the concert and walking home in the springlike afternoon, could describe my own encounter with the muse of Peter Tod Lewis. May his memory live on.

Abel Gance's

GANCE'S NATIONALISTIC view of Napoleon Bonaparte portrays him as a great revolutionary who wants to bring about a revolution in peace but will go to war for that end.

Less doubtful than Gance's politics is his mastery of the technical aspects of the young motion picture art. Napoleon might have changed the face of motion pictures had it not been for its length (originally six hours; now four) and another technical innovation that took the thunder out of Napoleon's cannon - sound, introduced with a much more audible bang in The Jazz Singer the same year.

At the center of the odyssey that finally brings Napoleon to the neighborhood theater are two hardworking individuals - filmmaker Gance and historian Kevin Brownlow, the reconstructor of a film long thought irretrievable.

Life for the struggling artist was not easy. Gance started his career in the fledgling seventh art of moving pictures as an actor (he portrays the small role of the eloquent revolutionary Saint-Just in Napoleon), but tuberculosis, germinated by poverty, slowed his entry into the directorial realm.

HIS FIRST BIG success, the threehour film J'accuse (I Accuse), was released the day after Armistice Day - surprising, in that its pacifist tone was a cry against the futility of war. The rapid cutting prefigured the mastery of montage Russian filmmakers would display in the 1920s. But Napoleon, 10 years later, was Gance's crowning achievement. Here was the style to complement the subject - every innovation, except sound, that would have been developed in the next 30 years was to have been showcased in Napoleon. Gance shot scenes in 3-D, which he later discarded along with color sequences that he felt would detract from the action.

Intact, however, from the day of its world premiere in the Paris Opera house are the Polyvision scenes during the last sequences - three screens, in the style of Cinemascope, that Gance felt could display the physical, mental and emotional in each scene, in addition to giving the audience panoramic views of the troops readying for battle. (The Polyvision loses some of its power on the Astro's screen, but it still amazes.)

Polyvision is hardly the film's only surviving innovation. Gance strapped the camera to the backs of horses, suspended it from overhead wires and mounted it on a huge pendulum. These excesses make up for the somewhat languid pace of a film planned as the first of three films portraying Napoleon's life.

ALTHOUGH THE symbolism seems a bit cliched today, it astounded that " first audience (Charles de Gaulle was present), which gave Napoleon a standing ovation. There are silent films, but few as bold. Gance finally received his due be his death in 1982, thanks to ano hard-working individual - K Brownlow. Brownlow first saw as two-reel version of Napoleon child; he has been trying since to m a complete print of the film, which cut into a 80-minute vers highlighting Napoleon and Josep romance for the original U.S. rele Brownlow's exhaustive research turned up four hours of that original six-hour epic, and he is still looking fragments to make the film more plete. What we see today is invalu evidence that greatness can overlooked, that innovation can passed over, and that some films like fine wines - it takes years them to achieve their potential.

The Members to stage local show movement's acknowledged vanguard, the Members combined The Clash's socio-political consciousness and respect for Third World musics, The Sex Pistols' unbridled angst and The Damned's devil-may-care good humor into a sound that was still their own. A recording contract with Virgin Records yielded two fine LPs - The Sound of the Suburbs (1979) and 1980-The Choice Is Yours - and a whole bers' failure to "break" the U.S. market teamed with Virgin's increasingly erratic distribution deals (the two were not unrelated) resulted in the band being cut loose.
