MASH bash brings out Alda best

By Jeffrey Miller

A casual visitor to the Fieldhouse bar on Wednesday night might have been shocked to see several older men in drag, an apparently critically wounded war veteran and a helicopter walking around among the polo pony- and alligator-clad students who usually occupy the tables and dance floor.

But, as for everything in this universe, there was a reason: It was the Fieldhouse's "MASHmania"

Sponsored by the bar, radio station KRNA-93 and television station KGAN-2, the "MASH bash" was a wake for the passing of the CBS comedy series, as well as a benefit for the Iowa City/Johnson County and the Grant Wood-Cedar Rapids offices of the Red Cross and a chance for area residents to play doctor or patient or helicopter - for the

"MASH" episodes were shown on the big screen in the front room; "MASH" posters were given away at the door; "MASH" fans took part in a costume contest on the dance floor, with $250 prizes awarded to the best "Hotlips," the best Klinger and the best "theme" costume.

The "MASH bash" originated with KRNA's operations manager Robbie Norton. "I got the idea on the way ick from the Peach Bowl, he said "We had bought time in the final episode of 'MASH,' so I thought: 'Hey - why don't we do something to go with that?

"I called Channel 2. We had a real good rapport - they had thought about doing the same thing. So what was left was finding a place to do it, and The Fieldhouse was the only real venue. It had to be big, it had to be a bar, it had to be a place that was promotions-oriented, and the Fieldhouse fit all of that.'

Char Bishop took care of KGAN's end of the promotion. "I came up with the 'MASHmania' slogan," she laughed, "and I chose the "MASH" shows that are showing in the front room. They're eight of the 10 Alan Alda said were his favorites in that TV Guide article a couple of weeks ago.

"It's been a pretty coordinated effort all the way. You all have to get involved to get together and pull something like this off."

The doors were supposed to open for the "MASH bash" at 8 p.m., but by 7:45, almost 100 doctors, nurses and friends stood in line outside the Fieldhouse. Manager Bob Newmaster and assistant manager Tom Johnson both expected a large

Lawyer for UI asks dismissal of tenure suit

By Mary Tabor

Contending the court has no jurisdiction, an attorney representing the UI asked an Iowa District Court judge Thursday to dismiss the denial-oftenure case filed by Asa Black, an assistant professor in the UI Department of Anatomy.

In the UI's special appearance, Iowa Deputy Attorney General Elizabeth Osenbaugh said because the decision of the UI agency reviewing Black's tenure is not final, his appeal does not merit a judicial review.

Black filed suit in January against the UI, Iowa, the state Board of Regents, UI President James O. Freedman, John Eckstein, dean of the UI College of Medicine and Terence H. Library use dispute remains unresolved

By Mike Heffern Staff Writer

It is still uncertain whether residents of unincorporated regions of Johnson County will have their library cards revoked at the end of this fiscal year. The possibility of revocation brought three members of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors and the county attorney before a regular meeting of the Iowa City Library Board Thursday afternoon in the Iowa City Public Library. But the meeting did not determine whether 4,000 county card holders will be able to use the Iowa City Library for free as they have in the

One certainty in the contract dispute between the two boards is that the supervisors will not pay the $107,617 requested by the library board so rural Johnson County residents can continue to use the city's "state of the art"

TUESDAY THE SUPERVISORS authorized a public hearing notice which makes it almost impossible for the supervisors to change the amount they will give to the city by way of a contract with the library board. Deputy Auditor Art Stanley said Thursday that the board approved $90,000 -$1,500 more than a directive given last Thursday - to be spent on library service for rural residents.

The 90,000 is still $17,617 less than the library board requested from the supervisors and now it is up to the library board's discretion to prohibit rural use. Library board members made room on their agenda to discuss that possibility with the supervisors. The amount paid by Johnson County wished the discussion would stop before the figure got back to Cedar Rapids what we're getting in Iowa City," Sehr said.

That's because they're getting such a good deal," Lolly Eggers, Iowa City Library director, replied. "Counties across the country are not paying enough for library service," she said.

LIBRARY BOARD President Edwin J. Zastrow said costs for Cedar Rapids library services are bound to go up in the next two years as the city prepares to move into its own new library. "Their good deal will end within the next 24 months," Zastrow said. "Mark my word."

Thomas Carney, director of the Cedar Rapids public library, said in a telephone interview Tuesday that library costs are less in Cedar Rapids "Because we are located in an 80-yearold building that's paid for." Carney said there is "not an equitable comparison between the two" library systems. He said the Iowa City library has been used as a model for the new Cedar Rapids facility.

'There is no doubt that this is a fabulous library," Sehr said. But he said he looks at the library levy "as a farmer" would - and he said the rural population looks at the library system in a different way.

"This is a rural levy," Sehr said, See Library, page 6

Although another hearing will be conducted Tuesday about the mandatory injunction, Johnson County District Judge L. Vern Robinson granted Head's attorney, Tom Riley, permission to videotape Head's deposition with a court reporter in attendance.

WHETHER THE deposition is taken locally or in Houston, where Head is undergoing chemotherapy, depends on Head's physical condition, Riley said. Head's present white blood cell count is 300, far below that of a healthy person, which ranges from 3.7 to 10.5 thousand per microliter. Immunity to infection decreases substantially when the count is below 500.

Head's attorney, Tom Riley, filed the petition for mandatory injunction in an attempt to obtain the name of a woman referred to only as "Mrs. X," who is the only known donor whose tissue matches Head's.

Head's disease was in remission until about August 1982. When he suffered a relapse, he contacted the only four hospitals in the United States that maintain substantial bone marrow donor identity banks, a group that includes the UI Hospitals.

All four hospitals checked their data banks, but only the UI Hospitals had the name of a compatible donor. In what would be an apparent violation of UI Hospitals policy, Head was told of Mrs. X's existence before she was See Donor, page 6

Oil prices hailed as boon

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, Cabinet officers and the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board all hailed lower oil prices Thursday as a boon to the U.S. and world economies that could lower both inflation and interest rates. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said they will reduce foreign debt of oil importing nations, and Fed Chairman Paul Volcker said inflation will come down.

Des Moines works to avoid EPA sanctions, mayor says

By Mark Leonard

Although Des Moines is still in jeopardy of losing close to $150 million in federal sewer funds because it has failed to meet air quality standards, Des Moines Mayor Pete Crivaro said Thursday he is satisfied the city will soon come into compliance.

But Des Moines had better act fast as the Iowa Environmental Quality Commission said Wednesday that the city still did not meet standards set in the Clean Air Act and could face possible economic sanc-

Although no firm decisions have been made by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, one penalty that could be invoked is a loss of federal funds for a wastewater treatment facility. In addition, Des Moines could have its highway funding cut and face a moratorium on industrial development.

BUT, IT IS the federal sewer funding that would hurt Des Moines the worst, as the city has been promised all of the sewer money going to the state during the next five years.

"It would be disastorous if we lost that money," Crivaro said. "There would be an outcry like you have never heard before.'

Iowa City, which has been trying to secure funds for a new $50 million wastewater treatment plant, would be a probable beneficiary if any of Des Moines

Discussion about draft registration raises significant legal questions

Jim Jacobsen, a member of the Draft Education Project, and Peter Shane, UI associate professor of law, present a discussion on draft registration Thursday. The discussion was part of a three-part examination of the draft being sponsored by the Association of Campus Ministers.

By Susan E. Fisher

Important legal questions surround the administration of the Selective Service registration, Peter Shane, UI associate professor of law, said at a draft registration discussion held Thursday.

Shane, along with Jim Jacobsen, a member of the Draft Education Project, spoke as a part of three-part examination of the draft sponsored by the Association of Campus Ministers.

Although, Shane said, some critics have argued that the legal defenses of protesters Gary Ecklund and Rusty Martin are based on technicalities, he said the cases have more legal significance.

"The cases are every bit as much a question of conscience as much as a question of morality."

ONE OF THE VITAL questions that has arisen from the adminstration of registration laws is the use of social security records, said Jacobsen. He said the use of 'massive' computer records to track down portant implications about the government's impingement on the privacy of

The registration administration's willingness to examine the individual's records is an indication of the "new posture" the Selective Service has taken, according to Jacobsen. He said the federal government has centralized much of the control over the draft that had been delegated to the states in previous years.

"Both the governor, national guard and local authorities have lost nearly all of the power that they formerly enjoyed as a func-tion of the Selective Service," he said.

He said much of this turn toward centralization came about as a part of an effort to "clean up" inequities in the draft since the Vietnam War. For example, the local draft board was eliminated because "most, if not all of the underhanded action that occurred in individual cases" could be at tributed to the draft boards.

HOWEVER, THESE changes are not necessarily for the better, he said. He said the registrant must prove that he has registered.

The individual is his own file and unless he maintains his own record of registration, he is assumed under the law to have not registered." Most people are unaware of these regulations, Jacobsen said.

Since the laws are new, another vital legal question may be asked about the registration process, according to Shane. How clearly the law must be written will also be examined by the courts. In the Martin trial the Iowa chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union is asking the courts whether not registering for the draft can be considered a "continuing offense" if the law requires individuals to register within

Eminent men' lead the UI for 136 years

By Mary Tabor

qı be fl

Welcomed into anything but an "ivory tower" existence, James O. Freedman was inaugurated last fall and joined "the long line of eminent men" who have confronted the presidency of the UI.

The UI was founded 136 years ago, and since that time it has had only 16

Many issues troubling the rest of the world cross the UI president's desk. Virgil Hancher, who was president from 1940 to 1964, must have realized this at his 1941 inaugural address when he said, "To stand in succession to the long line of eminent men who have administered this university is a chastening experience.'

Two UI presidents were faced with student unrest during the war in Vietnam. Howard Bowen, who succeeded Hancher in 1964, said in his inaugural address, "We are being required to adjust in a very short time to almost cataclysmic social changes.'

With about 14,500 UI students enrolled in 1964, Bowen pointed to a rapidly rising number of people reaching college age, as well as an increasing proportion of those wanting to

TO MATCH AMERICA'S increasing involvement in world affairs, the role of the university was forced to expand. 'Universities are not placid ivory towers these days," Bowen said in a letter discussing his resignation in

His resignation, coming after only five years as UI president, surprised many Iowans, The Des Moines Register reported Jan. 29, 1969.

Taking office in the heat of the antiwar protests, Willard "Sandy" Boyd, never had an inaugural ceremony.

When asked to suspend classes Oct. 15, 1969, Boyd instead declared it a 'Day of Inquiry" for the UI to "devote itself to the discussion of issue involving the Vietnam War."

In 1972, Boyd telegraphed President Richard Nixon imploring him to 'reverse the escalation" of the war in Boyd echoed what has been a continuing theme for UI presidents, the centrality of a liberal education, "We are shaped by the past The liberal arts role is pivotal and it will always stay that way.

FREEDMAN'S INAUGURAL speech also mentioned this: "We must instill in our students a devotion to learning that will inform the rest of their lives ... Walter Jessup, UI president from 1916-44, passed on these words: "The tunities for human contact, in the modern college with its endless opporclassroom, in sports and recreation, dormitories and fraternities, is a great laboratory for the development of the right social spirit." As far back as 1871, George Thacher, the fifth UI president, said in his inaugural address, "The American college's one comprehensive objective is to assist the student in laying a broad foundation on which he may proceed with the work of self-education in any or every direction, after his connection with the college or university shall have closed.'

The collected speeches of many of the 15 past UI presidents line the shelves of the restored president's office in Old Capitol. Since 1970 the office of the president has been in Jessup Hall. UI presidents have lived at 102 Church St. since 1912.

Famous names appear in UI yearbook

UI students in all fields will be in elite company when they graduate. They will be following big name actors, authors, athletes, singers and renown achievers in many areas studied, graduated or taught at the UI.

Actor Gene Wilder, playwright Tennessee Williams, all-pro football player Alex Karras, jazz vocalist Al Jarreau, NBC news anchor Tom Brokaw and opera singer Simon Estes all are UI alumni.

Jerome Silberman graduated from the UI with a bachelor's degree in communcation and theater arts in 1955. The stage name he eventually chose was Gene Wilder.

Mary Flannery O'Conner, best know for, Wise Blood, A Good Man is Hard to Find and Everything That Rises Must Converge, got a master's degree at the UI in 1947 and wrote and worked in the UI Writers' Workshop.

FRANK O. LOWDEN, second only to Herbert Hoover in Iowa political prominence, got his bachelor's degree at the UI in 1885 and was also class valedictorian. He went on to become Illinois governor from 1917 to 1921 and then lost two close races for the Republican presidential nomination, in 1920 and 1928. He turned down the nomination for vice president on the Calvin Coolidge ticket in 1924.

George Horace Gallup, born in Jefferson, Iowa, came to the UI where he recieved his bachelor's degree in 1923, master's degree in 1925 and doctorate in 1928.

Rumor among graduate students at the time had it that Gallup tried more than 50 methods of polling before developing the best and most accurate way to determine popular opinion on

The Gallup Poll then gained prominence after being used to accurately predict predidential elections. Gallup also founded the Quill and Scroll, a national honorary society for high school journalists.

ALTHOUGH THE UI has had some fine athletes, Alex Karras will always be a standout. Karras, a Hawkeye football player, was football squad in 1956 and 1957.

Karras went on to a pro football career with the Detroit Lions and also did television commentary and movies.

Two famous singers who graduated from the UI were jazz singer Al Jarreau and international opera star, Simon Estes.

A name many students will recognize is James Van Allen. Born in Mt. Pleasant, Allen did post-graduate work at the UI during the middle to late 1930s. Van Allen became a professor and head of the physics department in 1950. Allen is known for discovering the Van Allen Belts, working on many projects and writing articles on his discoveries and work in evolves, and stresses equality

By Paul Boyum Staff Writer

The UI celebrates Foundation Day today to recognize the date in 1847 on which the creation of the first state university in Iowa took place. But the university was not truly open to all Iowans until the first black student was admitted in 1878.

Alexander Clark Jr. entered the UI College of Law, and when he received his law degree he became the first black to graduate from the UI.

At a function held Wednesday to honor UI black leaders in athletics, scholastics and community service, one of the organizers said it is important to create a positive image for blacks at the UI.

In the 105 years that have passed since Clark began his studies at the UI, blacks have done much to improve their image, faced numerous challenges and overcome many obstacles. And while leaders in the Iowa City black community of 1983 admit they still face problems, the barriers to equality their predecessors

hurdled certainly make life here easier

"BECAUSE OF THE university's very splendid faculty and adequate facilities for learning, Iowa University seems to be the selected university for most of the educational-minded Negroes in the South. They have done well here and out into the world," wrote Myrtia I. Harrison in her 1944 term paper "Negroes at the University of Iowa. The positive attitude toward education seems to have held true over the years for blacks, but while they were achieving in classes, the housing situation presented a challenge many found tougher than the books.

"The chief Negro problem of the university is the housing situation," wrote Sister Mary Constance Murray during the summer of 1945. "There is no official ruling against Negro students living in the university dormitories, and yet during the past year for the first time a Negro girl lived at Currier Hall.'

The housing problem was a touchy one, as outlined in a letter to a dean at Northwestern University from former UI Dean of Men Robert Rienow, written in the spring of 1939.

"About the housing of Negro students ... I hope you realize how difficult it is to answer a letter like this without committing oneself to some things that one would not desire to face publication.

"Of course, I think you and I both recognize that we do face a certain element of race prejudice, and while we have no regulations at this institution forbidding any assignment of Negro students to dormitories, we have just not done so and faced no trouble.'

ONE BLACK WHO has observed many changes started as a student here 43 years ago.

Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for student services, came to the UI as freshman in 1940 and, except for a period during World War II, has lived in Iowa City ever since.

He said the most significant changes he has seen are the allowance of blacks in residence halls, the intense

ing Martin Luther King Jr.'s death in 1968, and the efforts to bring black faculty to the campus

Hubbard said the UI is becoming a better place for black students every year. "It's getting to be a more socially congenial place. There are more cultural contacts available now. It was always open academically.'

An earlier tribute to blacks at the UI came in 1928 when a man named George Baker of Davenport, Iowa, responded to a letter from a black named Leon Harris of Moline, Ill.

HARRIS HAD written a letter to Baker asking him to attend Harris' daughter's graduation from the UI that spring. Harris had praised the UI for its openness to black students.

Baker's response read:"I have your most interesting letter of June 1. You have the right attitude, education will, in time, break down intolerance and race prejudice. The sympathy of all right-minded people is with you and your co-workers in your effort to upbuild your race."

Students mulled 'urgent' issues

By Kristine Stemper

Although UI Collegiate Associations Council and Student Senate are soundly established traditions at the UI, the roots of student government don't run quite as deep as many college "traditions.

The oldest records available of student government actions come up in the 1950s in the UI Archives.

During the 1950s, according to the actual minutes taken at the meetings held in Old Capitol, the most urgent matters facing the UI student govern-

• The representatives were asked to sponsor a "Big Ten Beauty Contest at Iowa City in 1956. Plans are that the queen would be presented at the spring party." All responded, "We would be glad to." A few months later, a tentative Miss SUI Pageant Board was appointed, declaring that the winner would be "presented" at the winter formal dance.

· "We need a secretary," announ the 1955 student government President Mark Putney. "She must be able to type and take shorthand and must be dependable. The rate of pay will be 85

• Dec. 12, 1956, it was resolved that a 'new addition to the Union will contain a room for commuting students to eat lunches. There is no adequate place to have a temporary lunchroom at the present time.'

• Jan. 16, 1957, it was recommended and approved that "the university shovel their sidewalks as soon as possible after a snowfall." The representative who brought the idea up was appointed to the one-man snow removal committee.

• Also in 1957 it was "seriously questioned" whether a raise in tuition was necessary. The UI wanted an increase of about $40 per student to allow them to finance the construction of new buildings on campus.

• It was recommended that the UI consider charging a fee for university parking. Representatives wrote to other Big Ten universities to check out their policy was on this matter. • It was recommended to the University Parking Committee that beginning freshmen in the fall term of 1957 not be permitted to bring cars to Iowa City, with the exception of handicapped or married students. This was later ammended to include sophomores. "All violators (should) be expelled."

County roads, thawed by spring-like weather, are causing problems for rural Johnson County residents. To lessen the problem County Engineer O. J. "Bud" Gode has initiated a proposal to embargo heavy truck traffic from problem areas of

"Obviously we are having a different than usual February," Gode told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors at a formal meeting Thursday before the resolution was unanimously approved. The early spring weather requires the enactment of the weight limit embargo early this year, Gode said.

The embargo is an annual procedure which limits heavy traffic by setting weight limits in accordance with how much the county engineer thinks the roads can bear. Gode can arbitrarily set a tonage figure down to four tons. "We generally set the limit at eight to 10 tons to allow the school buses to run," Gode said.

This year's problems with soft roads is more acute than in the past, Gode said. An added burden is an increase in the number of "frost boils" brought on by quick thaws.

snow and rain that freezes into "lenses of ice" underneath county roads, Gode said. When they melt, portions of the road can turn into an impassable slough or mire, easily aggravated by heavy truck traffic. Additional use can ruin that portion of road,

'We've got about three tractors chasing aroung the county with little back blades trying to work the frost boils down," Godes said. But it's going to be worse this year, I think, than we've ever seen it," he said.

"There is just more of them than we've ever had at this time of year. There is still frost in the ground so they haven't started

Other area counties are having similar problems. As an example of how serious the frost boils can be, Board Chairman Donald Sehr said, "The Linn County Engineer said the other night they had somebody stuck in one of their (frost boils) and the person got out of the car and was almost stuck in it.' The embargo resolution goes into effect immediately and can last up to 90 days, according to the Iowa Code. The penalty for violation is a fine determined by a complicated procdure outlined in section

EXECUTION OF the law has been a problem in past years and Carl Chadedek, owner of Chadek Trucking Service, told the board he has lost business because he has abided by the embargo in the past. At this time of year Chadek's trucking firm is involved in carrying large loads of lime out to county farmers for them to spread on their

"What gets me is I stay off (the roads) and they call somebody else and that same day the load goes out and I've lost the load and the guy laughs up his sleeve that I wouldn't go and I've lost the business." Sehr said,"I really know that to be true."

Gode said, "It is difficult to get enforcement from our local sheriffs office because they are worried about making it stand up in court. But the embargo is no better than the law enforcement.'

Supervisor Richard Myers said, "I honestly believe that vigorous enforcement from the sheriff ought to be obtained on this." Myers said cooperation from the sheriff should be expected and if the sheriff is not able to prosecute he should be called before the board to find out what is the

Congress considers federal budget; future of student aid is uncertain

By Dan Hauser

Students anxiously waiting for word on what portion of the federal budget will be devoted to financial aid will have to wait until at least May 15, an Iowa congressional legislative assistant said Thursday.

Milan Yager, legislative assistant for education for Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, said committees are now busy at work in Washington looking over President Reagan's proposed budget.

But Congress will not get into the "knock down and drag out" session until after May 15 when they decide upon their first budget resolution for fiscal year 1984.

Yager said 35 committees are in action and "some of the committees are not even going to consider the (proposed Reagan) budget," meaning there is a chance the for by the president may not occur.

He said congress is busy going over the budget and making "target assumptions" as to what funds will go where.

CONGRESS IS STILL considering certain aspects of the Reagan budget such as his idea to place a need test for all students applying for financial help, Yager said.

Until May 15 students concerned about their future financial aid have the chance to voice their opinions in Washington D.C. Yager said in Rep. Bedell's office the mail flow has been "incredible." Yager said Bedell averages about 3,000 letters a week.

"Congress has received some of the heaviest mail, but it is not particularly on education," Yager said adding, the average student does not know what the Reagan

Jim Meyer, press secretary for Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, said although Tauke's office has not been flooded with mail it is important for students to recognize the impact of letter-writing. "Petitions don't carry as much weight as letters.'

Meyer said it is effective if the congressmen can sit down and read a student's letter that is not a form letter. Petitions do not possess as much impact as an individual hand-written letter, which he described as having "very good impact."

"Five or 50 letters are hard to tell a difference, but with 5,000 you have to listen to your constituents," Yager said.

Yager said, "it is unfortunate that the priorities have to cutback on education that will make our country grow. Education should be one of our highest priorities."

Pound for pound

Students seeking to lose a few pounds may find solace in the giving of affection.

One kiss can burn up six to 12 calories, depending on its intensity, according to a New York newsletter edited by a dietitian. The newsletter, Environmental Nutrition, published its first love energy story about five years ago following reports that Italian nutritionists were using a computer to make the calculations

Using those calculated averages, Kathleen Carpenter and her partners estimated that someone who exchanged three kisses a day and made love twice a week could lose more than nine pounds a

Oh no — it's the dream

Snoozing students under exhibits in the Ohio State Library may soon be rudely awakened by security forces if they continue their afternoon naps.

Library officials are considering hiring a security staff to keep the exhibit area clear of sleepy-eyed students. William J. Studer, director of university libraries, thinks such a force is necessary. "Whether it is proper for students to sleep there is a value judgment, but it goes beyond that when 50 to 100 people are asked to move and either they don't move or they are rude to those who ask them to move.'

Studer said he thought a student group might volunteer to police the area, "but so far there hasn't been any response so it looks like the security staff is the only realistic way of getting this problem solved.

The library staff members who have been waking the students weren't hired for that purpose, he said. "We tried signs, all kinds of signs, and they don't work. People just take them off the wall and sit on Leslie Nardone, evening library staff supervisor, doesn't view the sleeping students as a cause for concern. "There is not enough seating in this library, so as long as it doesn't impede the traffic flow, I don't see it as a problem," she said. "Students do this campus-wide and although it might not be attractive, I'm not sure we're here just for appearances. -From The Lantern.

Getting wed in the rain

The minister chose not to show up, the onlookers laughed and it was pouring rain. But that didn't deter William Webb Selley, 33, from marrying Jean Ruth Johnson on the Plaza of the Americas in Gainesville, Selley even did a little singing in the rain before the impromptu ceremony, serenading the crowd with harmonica and

"God told me to do this marriage this way," Selley said. "This is a non-legal wedding. We decided to do it outside of the courts." Selley said he and his 35-year-old bride couldn't get a marriage license because state officials refused to allow them to make a pre-nuptial agreement.

The couple's vows included a pledge never to destroy their life support systems and environment and to perpetuate health and enjoy life on Earth.

By 10 p.m., the bar was packed. The stench of cigars being smoked by the ersatz Klingers/Hawkeyes/Flaggs seeped into the pores of anyone who stood in one place for longer than 10 seconds. "We're probably 150 busier than usual at this time on a Wednesday," assistant manager Johnson said. "We're getting close to capacity."

With KRNA jock Bart Goynsher's announcement of the Hotlips contest, the front room poured en masse into the dance floor area. Fortunately, the contest judges - nurse Jan Lovett (filling in for a friend who is a real Army nurse), Iowa City Community Theater managing director David Willis and Ottumwa mayor Jerry Parker — were all in high spirits and ready to work.

Each Hotlips had her own contingent, but contestant 140, a dead ringer for Loretta Swit, won the hearts and minds of the audience - and the judges.

"Her name's Elsie Ross! I was sitting with her at the bar!" one older man screamed. "People stop her in restaurants and say: 'Do you know who you look like?' That's her real hair! She's almost 50 years old, too - got her second grandchild on the way! She's got to win! Stop the contest!'

Apparently, 15 minutes of fame were all Elsie Ross needed - no one saw her the rest of the night. The winner of the Klinger contest, Kayvan Shahabi, faced a good deal stiffer competition, particularly from a 40-year-old gentleman who could wear a fur like you wouldn't believe. Many in the crowd booed his selection, but that didn't faze

"I borrowed the clothes from a friend," he said on his way to pick up his $250 check. "Today's her birthday and she wanted a birthday present, so I did this for her. The money? The money is mine!'

The "MASH" theme contest seemed almost anticlimactic after the pitched battle over the Klinger selection. Several unconvincing doctors, several fairly convincing Radars and a very convincing Colonel Flagg paraded before the judges.

It was quickly evident, however, that the grand prize winner was either go-from some boys who had evidently had too much testosterone in their beer, the judges chose Rosie - actually Brenda Piper, a student at the UI.

'I'm not really from Korea," Piper said. "My mother was born and raised in Seoul, but I'm from Des Moines. The dress, though, is an actual Korean gown - she brought it back with her."

By midnight, the Fieldhouse was back to the way it might be on any night. The bouncer was showing some rowdies from the audience the way to the door; the dance floor was being used for dancing; the polo ponies and alligators were resuming their places of prominence.

Shahabi, Drahozal and Piper were still milling around having their pictures taken and talking to representatives of the sponsoring media, but they were only the sideshow now.

About 20 people were still sitting in the front room watching Margaret get bombed on the final "MASH" episode of the night. It was the way you thought Hawkeve Pierce himself might have wanted it to end.

Reagan administration is reconsidering how to channel $60.3 million in extra military aid to El Salvador because of congressional opposition to its initial plan, congressional sources indicated

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger Tuesday told the House Foreign Affairs Committee he is sending the money from a special fund in the Pentagon budget that provides for "unforeseen emergency" aid.

"There is a pattern here of using emergency funds for more and more military assistance to get us deeper and deeper in El Salvador," another congressional source charged.

Not self-incriminating

The U.S. Supreme Court gave state drunk driving laws a needed shot in the arm Tuesday. A 7-2 decision - written by freshman justice Sandra Day O'Connor - overruled the South Dakota Supreme Court in holding that a driver's refusal to submit to a blood alcohol test for intoxication could be used later as evidence against her or him at a trial on drunken driving charges.

The case involved a driver who, when stopped as a suspect, said he would not submit to the test because he knew he was too drunk. He was already driving without a license as the result of a previous drunken driving conviction.

Such irresponsible individuals — and even first-time offenders - should not be allowed to conceal their wrongdoing in the cloak of the Fifth Amendment, which provides that "no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

Justice O'Connor's opinion construed Fifth Amendment considerations out of the case by saying that because a driver's refusal to take the test is a matter of free choice, not coerced by an officer, it is thus not protected by the privilege asgainst self-

Although such a distinction may involve a bit of judicial sleight of hand — drunk drivers would seem to incriminate themselves whether or not they refused — the result cannot be argued with.

Iowa is one of several states that has used a refusal-as-evidence law to help toughen sanctions for drunken driving. First-time offenders in Iowa now receive a mandatory jail stay, in addition to automatic license revocation. A decision that furthers these and other states' efforts should be lauded. There is never an excuse for drunken driving - for nothing is more deadly.

Don't poke the snake

If you poke a snake with a stick, you shouldn't be surprised if it bites you. And that would just give you an excuse to poke it harder. The same sort of situation arose last week when the United States sent the flagship of its Mediterranean fleet, the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Nimitz, into the Gulf of Sidra, which Libya claims, with the rest of the fleet cruising nearby.

Ostensibly, this was to dissaude Libya's leader Moammar Khadafy from staging a coup in neighboring Sudan. The coup, which has problematic chances of success in any case, never came off. But what was the U.S. plan if the coup did occur? Would that line in the Marine Hymn about "the shores of Tripoli" gain fresh meaning? Or would the United States just give material and advisory support to Egpyt, Libya's sworn enemy and a close ally of Sudan?

Much is made in Washington of Khadafy's "mad dog" attitude and "crazy schemes." And most of his schemes are just that. But the crazier a scheme is the less chance it has of working, and none of Khadafy's have worked yet. His repeated attempts to merge with neighboring states have all failed, and his attempt to annex Chad was a fiasco. With a record like that, why take his latest fantasy seriously? Or was the Reagan administration just trying to divert attention from domestic problems and focus it on a trumped-up problem involving an unpopular international figure?

No one thinks of Khadafy as a nice guy. The world would be a better place without such an individual being in charge of a country with such resources and wealth as Libya. But does the U.S. government really think the world will be a better place, or see us with more respect, if we carry through on repeated hints and innuendo and actually attack Libya after we have provoked them into some outrageous act?

Does libel limit press freedom?

hibiting effect on the press and violate the intent of the First Amendment, according to a revised policy on libel adopted by the American Civil Liberties Union.

The ACLU, in a late 1982 statement of policy, recommends there should be no right to sue for libel when injured parties are public figures and when the matter concerns their public position or status. Further, any individual, public or private, should not be protected by libel laws if the subject matter of the attack is of "public concern," defined as "anything having an impact on the social or political system or

The rationale behind the policy deserves consideration. The central argument is that libel laws violate the First Amendment and restrict free speech. The union defines a free society as one "where a marketplace of ideas exists in which all points of view compete for recognition." Libel laws inhibit this.

In several memorandums leading up to the decision, the ACLU pointed out that current law functions to protect the rich and powerful; only they have the resources to initiate a libel action. Ira Glasser, the ACLU's national director, lists cases where libel actions have been threatened by powerful individuals or institutions with the sole purpose of suppressing justifiable criticism.

AS GLASSER WRITES, "the number of these kinds of suits is growing rapidly, and placing a kind of 'poll tax' on vigorous criticism." The press is inhibited by fear of libel action, and may decide not to risk publishing a valuable story. Thus the press, instead of carrying out a role of public "watchdog" and reformer, effectively helps maintain the existing power structure.

The ACLU is correct in its concern for the liberties of the powerless. But the radical changes it proposes could lead to a different kind of abuse of power that arguably would be just as

The ACLU says that "whether viewpoints or ideas are right or wrong, obnoxious or acceptable, should not be the citerion." So any statements, even if they are calclated lies, would be protected by law, provided they related to the vaguely-defined notions of 'public position," "public status," or 'public concern."

For much of the American media, little would change; social responsibility is an integral part of their "Vigorous criticism" philosophy. might indeed be stimulated and investigative journalism would be less inhibited. But there are sections of the new freedoms even more than they do existing ones.

IF TRUTH IS no longer an important consideration, lies can flourish - and lies can damage reputations and destroy careers. Some public figures may be powerful, but should they not also have liberty - the liberty to go about their business without being subjected to lies?

It is already clear that the tabloid press is catering to a great public appetite for lurid stories about all kinds of public figures. Without even the threat of libel, this tendency will surely

For, as the Hutchins Commission's Report on a Free and Responsible Press pointed out in 1948, "Freedom of the press to appeal to reason may always be construed as freedom of the press to appeal to public passion and ignorance, vulgarity and cynicism." It may also be construed as freedom for some journalists to be slovenly in their work and to rely on rumor and innuendo rather than research - if the subject is a public figure, he or she would be fair game.

Freedom of the press should not be absolute; it should not be placed on some pedestal above other freedoms media that would undoubtedly abuse that this country should value and with

FOR THE ISSUE of truth is crucial, and the ACLU statement nowhere addresses this satisfactorarily. It seems somewhat inconsistent that an organization of its nature should be so cavalier with another aspect of liberty - the freedom to protect oneself from damaging lies. Admittedly, the ACLU's main concern is with legal rights, and this freedom is not a legally defined right, but in a responsible society it should be an ethical one.

By ommitting any discussion of that right, the ACLU appears to be suggesting that a victim of lies should have no redress. Theoretically, victims also have the right to free speech, but in practical terms, it may be hard to find a forum for reply. The "marketplace of ideas" may exist in theory; in reality the market has been cornered

There are serious flaws in the existing libel system. Suits are expensive, long and drawn-out, they usually fail and they may be used to stifle legitimate criticism. But rather than doing away with any form of legal redress, it would make more sense for the ACLU to explore other ways in which an injured party could respond. More than 30 years ago, the Hutchins

Commission saw defects in the libel system, suggesting: "As an alternative to the present remedy for libel, we recommend legislation by which the injured party might obtain a retraction or a restatement of the facts by the of-which press freedom might sometimes fender or an opportunity to reply."

THE COMMISSION recognized that financial compensation for libel is largely irrelevant, yet that is what most suits now hinge on. A retraction is more appropriate; a change in the law could make this the penalty, and thus the deterrent.

The commission also recommended that "the proposed remedy should operate quickly, while the issue is before the public." This suggestion is more problematical, because there is no way to enforce time limits on court cases. But without the possibility for huge financial gains, perhaps lawyers could speed up the process. Other alternatives might include a press council with some real, legally enforceable powers, though this could create some legal problems of its own.

But instead of considering alternatives, the ACLU has chosen a purely libertarian path — one that places one freedom above all others. Its many valid criticisms should be studied, but its recommendation tips the balance too far in favor of another powerful group - the press.

As the Hutchins Commission noted, From the moral point of view, at least, freedom of expression does not include the right to lie as a deliberate instrument of policy." At present, freedom of expression does not include that right from the legal point of view either; the law should remain that way until a genuinely fairer system can be devised.

"And this is the Action Newsdesk Center Report. Well, Kathy, our top story tonight concerns the amazing results of that mayoral primary in Chicago. 'Well, Ted, this reporter has learned from reliable sources that for the first time in Chicago's history dead people were turned away in droves from polling places in Tuesday's mayoral primary, which doubtlessly harmed the chances of nasty incumbent mayor Jane Byrne and second generation hack Richard M. Daley, both of whom came out strongly in favor of dead rights. One poll-watcher I interviewed, denigrating the importance of these reports but not denying them, said the media was 'opening up a real can of fish' with its reports, adding that 'We weren't trying to deny them their rights, they were just depressing the other voters.' Patrick McAdaver, head of the Chicago chapter of the Thanato-American Action League, was unavailable for comment. This is Ron Airhead, Action Newsdesk Center.

When asked why those sites were chosen, Begin replied 'So they'll get eaten by bears or drown.' The Reagan administration was quick to praise Begin for 'moderating' his most recent proposal, which called for a Palestinian homeland on the surface of the Sun. Hawks in 4th place after first day action

With the first day of the Big Ten Swimming Championships in Brown Deer, Wis. over, the Iowa women's swim team holds a 10-point lead over Indiana for fourth place.

Defending champion, Ohio State, is in first place with approximately 315 points, followed by Michigan with 280. Minnesota 230, Iowa 178 and Indiana

"We swam very well (Thursday) night," Iowa Coach Peter Kennedy said. "It looks good for us at this point for the battle for fourth with Indiana. It's difficult to predict if we can hold onto fourth. Indiana has a good team and it will depend upon how we maintain ourselves overall in the next two

"I DON'T THINK we have a chance of moving into third place and its going to be a hard battle to stay in front of Iowa was led in the first day of the meet by its breaststrokers in the 50vard event. Wenche Olsen swam a 30.41 to capture second place and Kerry Stewart finished third with a time of 30.54. Hawkeye Cathy Bohan took seventh place and Michelle Thomas placed ninth. The winner of the 50-yard breaststroke was Ohio State's Teresa Fightmaster whose time of 29.90 established a new Big Ten record.

IN THE PRELIMINARY 50-yard breast stroke, Stewart and Olsen qualified for the NCAA meet with times of 30.28 and 30.34 respectively. Olsen also placed seventh in the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 2:10.19 and teammate Jennifer Davies "Davies' swim in the 200-yard individual medley preliminary heat was awfully good," Kennedy said. "We were surprised in a sense (that she qualified for the consolation race)." Hawkeye Nancy Vaccaro finished third in the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 58.14 and Jennifer Petty placed 14th. In the 200-yard backstroke, Jodi

Davis took eighth place with a 2:09.78 time and Iowa's 200-yard medley relay team of Vaccaro, Davis, Stewart, Vaccaro and Strilich finished third with a time of 1:48.14, which also qualified them for the NCAA meet.

IN THE ONE-meter diving competition, Kelly Johnson took seventh. Diane Goldsworthy finished 11th and Carolyn Connolly placed 16th.

A new Iowa record was set by Donna Strilich in the 50-yard freestyle. Her time of 24.27 gained her fourth place.

The Iowa basketball team came out hot and the fire kept on burning until it breezed to a 93-63 win over the Badgers Thursday night at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena in a game that probably wasn't as close as the score indicates.

"When you get shell-shocked like that, it's hard to think straight," Yoder said in brief comments after the game. 'Iowa came out ready to play. They shot well and played tough defense. There just wasn't any way we could

THE BADGERS HAD plenty of trouble handling Iowa's Bob Hansen, who led both teams in scoring (24 points) and assists (9). When the senior connected on two free throws with nine seconds remaining in the first half, he became the 16th Hawkeye to score 1,000 points in his career. The shots gave Iowa a 46-25 lead at intermission.

"I think I'm more proud of the assists than of the points," Hansen said. "It will probably mean more when I'm old and gray. It's great, I'm just glad I did it tonight when the team played well."

The game was a far cry from the 65-62 Badger win at Madison where Wisconsin shot 58 percent from the field. It was the Hawkeyes turn Thursday, as Iowa connected on 36-of-65 shots for 55.4 percent.

TENACIOUS DEFENSE in the early going proved to be too much for a young Wisconsin team, "I thought we did an excellent job of sustaining our defensive intensity," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "We hoped our press would bother them a lot and it did. Once they had finally broken it, they had a hard time getting geared into their offense. The only problem the Hawkeyes seemed to have was slowing Brad Sellers, the flashy 6-foot-11 sophomore who scored 21 points, 14 in the first half. "Our one problem in the first half was Sellers and that continued in the second half," Olson said. "We cut off (freshman point guard Ricky) Olson in the first half and (Cory) Blackwell in the second half." Iowa held Olson, who averages 11 against Illinois and Purdue, but the points per game, to a lone field goal.

Badger effort. "We played one of our poorer ball games," the first-year coach said. "All you have to do is look at the turnovers. You just can't give a ballclub like Iowa the ball 10 more times. Our team didn't quit, though. I suspect Iowa has got it going now."

After a loss last week at Ohio State, coupled with losses by Big Ten leaders Indiana and Ohio State Thursday, the victory over the Badgers is more than

But Olson isn't ready to say Iowa is back in the Big Ten race. "I don't know and I don't think anyone knows," he said. "All we can do is play our game as best'we can. I've always thought it the season and I still think it will."

"WE NEEDED THIS win tonight," said Andre Banks after an 11-point performance. "Every game is a big one for us now. The other schools may be losing but we have to come out and win it for ourselves."

After scoring 18 points, Iowa's Steve Carfino said the Hawkeyes aren't looking too far into the future. "Right now, we're just taking one game at a time," he said. "I haven't felt we put two good games together yet. We won two first half of the Illinois game was terrible. That's what we'll concentrate on with Minnesota.'

Gable, the seventh-year coach who has won six national crowns, likens this year's team to past ones.

"This team has some people who have never been heard of before." Gable said. "But we've brought them along and they are in contention."

Three Iowa freshmen, 150-pounder Jim Heffernan, 167-pounder Rico Chiapparelli and 177-pounder Duane Goldman, are the unknowns Gable speaks of. But since the first Iowa-Iowa State meet on Jan. 15, the freshman have been impressive.

BUT THE TRUE strength of this Iowa team rests with four wrestlers, 126-pounder Barry Davis, 158-pounder Jim Zalesky, 190-pounder Ed Banach and heavyweight Lou Banach. Com-MAYBE GABLE IS saving his rebut- automatic berth to the national tourna- bined, the four have a 109-6-1 record.

All are expected to get No. 1 seeds. The fifth Iowa wrestler courting a. No. 1 seed, according to Gable, is 134pounder Jeff Kerber, the defending conference champion at the weight. Kerber's return to the line-up follows an ankle injury. Mark Trizzino was his replacement, but he lost 13-7 last week

Michigan State Coach Grady Peninger said the battle for second 'should be between Minnesota and us. On paper, we're favored to get second but the luck of the draw and seedings change a lot of plans."

Peninger, for one, is picking Iowa to win not just the Big Ten tournament, but the national meet as well. He thinks the Hawkeyes are much improved since a 27-23 loss to No. 1 Oklahoma State back on Dec. 18.

"I DON'T THINK Oklahoma State

"If we finish in the top half, I think could beat Iowa again in a dual meet," Penninger said. "I'm from Oklahoma State and I wrestled for Oklahoma

> Two other teams that are expected to do well are Ohio State and Wisconsin, but after that, mediocrity rules. For example, Indiana Coach Doug Blubaugh said earlier this week that he plans to forfeit two weights. "I don't even have the bodies to put in there,"

The toughest weight class in the tournament is believed to be 177 pounds, with the top seed probably going to Ed Potokar of Ohio State. Minnesota's Mike Foy, also highly-regarded, pinned Goldman in the Midlands tournament. But if it means anything, an Iowa wrestler has won that weight class the Ellen Mosher, the Minnesota women's basketball coach, dispelled rumors Thursday that she was being considered for the Iowa coaching position.

"Let's say I'm not interested enough to apply," Mosher said in a telephone interview from Minneapolis. "I would certainly listen if (Iowa Athletic Director Christine Grant) contacted me about the job. A lot of (media) people have contacted me, but no one from the Iowa administration."

Mosher and her Gopher squad host Iowa Sunday in a Big Ten match-up, but she is putting her emphasis on tonight's match-up with Northwestern. Minnesota is third in the conference behind co-leaders Ohio State and Indiana, and Northwestern is right behind in fourth.

"IT'S NOT A knock on Iowa," Mosher said. "I'm just concentrating on the next team we're going to play. I hope we don't have a letdown against Iowa. They're going to be loose and ready to play because they have nothing to lose. It will be a difficult game for us because we have to win.'

When famous bowler Don Carter invited 23 Kingpins to the First Lite Beer Bowling Tournament, it seemed like a great idea.

It was the guys who drink Lite Beer from Miller because it tastes great, against the guys who drink it because it's less filling. And once again, the All-Stars proved they're in a league by themselves.

After a lot of pins (and quite a few Lite Beers) went down and the smoke finally cleared, the score was tied, with only one man left to go. Rodney Dangerfield.

All he needed to win it was one pin. A klutz situation. Rodney, in top form, got the same amount of pins as he gets respect. None.

So the First Lite Beer Bowling Tournament ended in a draw. And the argument over the best thing about Lite was left unsettled.

But there was one thing everyone agreed on. It was truly everything you always wanted in a bowling tournament. And less.

Question remains whether Walker a happy millionaire

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) - Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker reports to the New Jersey Generals' training camp this weekend, but the question persisted Thursday whether he's happy or sad over the turn of events that made him an instant

Jack Manton, the attorney who negotiated Walker's uprecedented USFL contract, which reportedly calls for $8 million over the next three years, says he believes Walker is "totally happy.

But University of Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, whose trust Walker violated when he initially denied signing a contract with the Generals, said Walker 'made a mistake, and he admits it.'

WALKER WAS NOWHERE to be found Thursday to resolve the question, but a spokesman for the Generals said Walker will hold a news conference in Orlando Fla., Saturday when he reports to training

Walker, who gave up his final season of eligibility at the University of Georgia Wednesday to sign the three-year contract making him the highest-paid player in pro football history, reportedly will visit with his family in Wrightsville, Ga., before going to Orlando with his fiancee. Cindy DeAngelis.

A call to Miss DeAngelis' apartment Thursday was answered by a man who said he was "only looking after the apartment and had no knowledge of their

Walker, the three-time All-America and 1982 Heisman Trophy winner who rushed for 5,259 yards and scored 52 touchdowns in three college seasons, will have only five days to practice before the Generals of the new USFL fly to Los Angeles March 4 for their March 6 opening game.

GENERALS' COACH CHUCK Fairbanks said Wednesday it was uncertain whether Walker would be ready to play in the first game. Walker, slipping away just prior to a news conference announcing he had signed with the Generals, let Manton talk for him Wednesday. In a statement read by Manton, Walker apologized for earlier denying he had signed with the Generals

- asking for "forgiveness." Manton said Walker received his first-year salary and signing bonus, in cash, in advance and the contract was guaranteed by New Jersey owner J. Walter Duncan, "whose wealth has been investigated and is without question." He said the contract called for all cash and no deferred payments.

"HE (WALKER) received a check today that contained seven figures, endorsed it, then gave it to his mother and told her to put it in the bank," Manton said. "He has purchased no material things, and I know of no immediate plans to do so.' Dooley said he did not blame any one person for Walker passing up his final season of college

"There's enough blame to be shared by many," said the obviously saddened coach. "It's a sad day for college football and a sad day for pro football ... He made a mistake and he admits it.

The mistake Dooley referred to was Walker signing with the Generals on Feb. 17 with the understanding that he had 24 hours to change his mind. Walker used that verbal "escape clause" two hours later, but was informed by Dooley Tuesday night that the action ended his college eligibility.

COLLEGE OFFICIALS expressed concern over the USFL violating its own rule and signing a player before the end of his college eligibility. Some coaches reacted by banning the USFL from contact with their players.

Bill Curry of Georgia Tech and Jerry Stovall of Louisiana State took that action Thursday.

"The reason is our players are here for an education in the winter and spring quarters as well as the fall," Curry said. "I've been concerned with the USFL pulling our guys out of school anyway, even those who are eligible, before they finish their degree regirements.

"I have sent Mailgrams asking each USFL team not to contact our players and not to come on our campus," Curry said. "Furthermore, I've instructed each of our players that they must let me know if they are contacted by any pro team or any agent."

STOVALL WAS THE second Southeastern Conference coach to take such a step, following similar action by Emory Bellard of Mississippi State on

'Chan' is a quirky comedy

By Stephen Barr Special to The Daily Iowan

HE REAL MYSTERY of Chan is Missing. which is showing Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the Bijou, is not who or where is Chan but how this film ever got made and why there aren't more like it.

An independent feature produced for a little over $20,000, Chan Is Missing gets more mileage out of its subject matter and its stylistic limitations than any of the well-financed and over-produced pictures up for an Oscar this year.

Chan is Missing was the discovery of last spring's New Directors/New Films series at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, one of the few showcases for independent work in this country.

A series of articles by Vincent Canby in the New York Times brought the film to the attention of audiences and exhibitors, and it wasn't long before the film began an extended run at one of New York's prestigious art-house theaters.

THE FILM IS a quirky comedy with a detectivestory backdrop. It follows Jo, a middle-aged cab driver, and Steve, his nephew and "Number 1 Son," as they search through San Francisco's Chinatown for the mysterious Chan, whom they have entrusted with $4,000 in an effort to get their own taxi medallion, and who has apparently absconded with the loot.

Jo and Steve pursue Chan with a Philip Marlowelike patience and precision, encountering crazy characters like a chef in a Samurai Night Fever Tshirt singing "Fry Me to the Moon" and a social worker discussing cross-cultural misunderstandings. But the more clues they dig up, the less they seem able to solve the mystery.

Chan Is Missing ultimately takes up issues of the status of Chinese-Americans and the problems of assimilation. In fact, Chan was directed by Hong Kong-born filmmaker Wayne Wang with a core crew of seven Asian-Americans. It is the first feature of this kind made in America, and there isn't a single karate chop in the entire movie.

THE FILM WAS funded by grants from the American Film Institute and the National Endowment for the Arts and seems to have been shot with short ends of black-and-white film stock. But the graininess of the image, as well as the unsteady camera, uneven performances and often unclear sound, don't detract from the film's inventiveness or its engaging and insightful quality.

With high interest rates, high unemployment, and fewer and fewer production starts, the enormous investment in Hollywood features must be insured to go a long way. Independent features, without benefit of powerful distributors and astronomical ad budgets, have little chance in the marketplace once completed. The foolish hysteria that goes into making Annie or Best Friends or even Tootsie looks even more absurd in light of Chan is Missing, which does so much for so little.

Yet how realistic is it to think that there could be 500 Chans for one Tootsie? Hollywood filmmaking is an industrial practice, while independent filmmaking is a labor of love.

So rather than condemning all that comes out of Hollywood, it seems better to rejoice when there is the opportunity to see a film like Chan is Missing. And the only mystery that remains is what will happen with Wang's next project now that he's attained notoriety. He is planning a horror film set in Hong Kong for CBS.

Fellini's film mixes images of innocence and madness

MARCORD MEANS "I remember." That 'I" is director Federico Fellini, the memories recall a year in the life of a easide village on the eve of World War II. and the effect of the film is neither nostalgic nor

Instead, Fellini mixes images of innocence with moments of madness to suggest both the frailty and the volatility of that era. Amarcord, which plays tonight through Sunday at the Bijou as part of the Italian Images of Fascism series, stands at a historic crossroads

Fellini understands the importance of the past in shaping the future. Amarcord opens with a witchburning ritual to celebrate the start of spring and closes, one year later at the end of winter, with a

Fellini fills the cycle of the seasons between those two scenes with equally ancient rites. They evoke both laughter and horror, often at the same time.

CONFESSION, FOR EXAMPLE, is fearsome yet funny. Aware of the priest's obsession with masturbation, the village schoolboys bluff their way past his

The less formal rituals are also enduring. In the evening, when the townfolk stroll along the main plaza, everyone has a role to play. The children aggravate the elderly, the men ogle the women, and

But the past, however, persistent, must fade. The Grand Hotel, once the most elegant building in the village, now stands shuttered. When some of the schoolboys gather on its front steps to dance by themselves in the morning fog, they look like ghosts going through the motions.

The opulence of the hotel is no longer enough. Instead, the villagers would rather row out to sea and watch the passing of an ocean liner from America. When it blasts past them, in the movie's most famous scene, it's big and bright and beautiful - but obviously bogus.

THE TOWNSFOLK cheer its appearance anyway, just as they cheered, earlier in the film, at a Fascist rally. It's not idealism that makes Fascism attractive, says Fellini, but the image.

Fellini undercuts the ugliness inherent in the rally scene by focusing on a fantasy of one of the schoolboys, who dreams of marrying a schoolgirl while Mussolini presides. That combination of ceremonies - a political rally for tomorrow's dictator and the ancient rite of marriage - makes the appeal of Fascism chilling, yet comprehensible.

In a less benevolent mind, the pride in the past and the phantoms from the future could have combined in a poisonous present.

But here, individuals are victims of both the events around them and their own idiosyncracies. In the Amarcord that is Fellini's memory, history is

This weekend on television

qı b€ fl

After you recover from the thrill of Bo and Luke's return to "The Dukes of Hazzard," you can get even more thrills from tonight's "Dallas." Holly (Lois Chiles) gets the drop on J.R.'s (Larry Hagman) illegal Caribbean oil shipments; Katherine (Morgan Brittany) helps Bobby (Patrick Duffy) get the drop on Pam and Mark (Victoria Principal, John Beck); Miss Elly (Barbara Bel Geddes) helps Clayton (Howard Keel) get the drop on a new house in Dallas. Go, Miss Elly, go. 8 p.m., KGAN-2, WHBF-4.

 "SCTV" tonight looks wonderful: poltergeists take over for Guy Caballero and Edith Prickley just when they're getting ready for the epic miniseries "The Long Hard War" and the biggest variety special of all time, "The Night of the Prime Time Stars." You don't suppose Ali MacGraw will show up, eh? How about Rick Moranis and Dave Thomas - please? 11:30 p.m., KWWL-7.

Our lives are good: Along with hosts Jeff and Beau Bridges (whose father Lloyd, as many of you may remember, es muy macho), "SNL" this week brings back old fave Randy Newman. Will he have the award-winning Randy Newman Band (a.k.a. Toto) with him? Or the boy who's got the blues (Paul Simon)? Or the guy he's replacing as Boss (the name of that friend is Mr. Bruce Springsteen)? Find out tonight. And hey, Bobby - get the rope! 10:30 p.m., KWWL-7.

 We can't pass this one up: If you really want goosebumps on your goosebumps, stay up for KGAN's late show, Godzilla on Monster Island. Old Radioactive Breath teams up with new kid in town Anguirus to save Tokyo and all the world from Ghidra and Gigan. A triumph of style and substance, with sensitive direction by Inoshiro Honda. 12:25 a.m., KGAN-2.
