Rebel offensive promised

SAR SALVADOR, El Salvador — Rebels vowed Thursday to begin a nationwide offensive to cut off transportation and essential goods, the second day of renewed fighting that threatens to engulf the entire country.

The guerrillas have a unilateral cease-fire if to end the economic crisis.

The rebels said they want to show the government that they are prepared to fight if necessary.

A federal judge has ruled that the federal government cannot stop the construction of a new prison in California.

The judge said the federal government has not provided a sufficient justification for its decision to halt the construction.

The decision comes after a federal judge ruled earlier this month that the government was not required to provide a full environmental impact statement before approving the construction.

By Tom Buckingham

A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit by a group of California environmentalists.

The group had sued to stop the construction of a new prison in San Quentin, alleging that the prison would have a negative impact on the environment.

The judge ruled that the group had not provided enough evidence to support its claims.

The Iowa Senate approved a bill Thursday allowing Iowa taverns to sell alcohol in bottles.

Currently, all bars and nightclubs in the state are required to sell alcohol only in cans or pitchers. However, a hearing before the Senate's public safety and law enforcement committee approved the bill's language by a 10-3 vote.

Local governments in Iowa could choose whether they would allow taverns to sell alcohol in bottles. Legislation passed in 1993 and 1995 allows a city or county's governing body to allow alcohol sales in bottles.

Beverage businesses have been lobbying for such legislation for years. Iowan's could save as much as 20 cents a bottle selling in bottles, according to Matt Hennes, director of government relations for the Iowa Beverage Association.

Sen. Bob Behnke, R-Des Moines, said the bill would make it easier for taverns to compete with bars in other states that allow bottle sales.

"Across the country, you see this in other states," Behnke said. "We have to get competitive with other states that allow bottle sales.

The bill would prohibit alcohol sales during certain special events or activities, such as outdoor music events and sporting events.

Legislators expect to spend a lot of time on the bottle bill before it could become law. The Senate could vote on the legislation before the end of the month.

Iowa health officials say the local health boards have received hundreds of complaints from residents and businesses over the last several years.

The legislation would prevent the state from using the service taxes instead of property taxes.

The Senate has yet to vote on a bill that would allow bars to sell alcohol in bottles.

Sen. Steve Rosenius, R-Johnston, said the Senate has yet to vote on a bill that would allow bars to sell alcohol in bottles.

"It's something that's been around for a long time," Rosenius said. "I think it's time that we move forward with it."

An out-of-control oil well drilled into a salt-water reservoir in Hillsboro, Wash., began leaking thousands of gallons of crude oil, the largest spill in the history of Washington state. The well, located in the tiny town of Hillsboro, was being drilled by a contractor for a major oil company when it hit the salt-water reservoir.

The House vote on the Selective Service bill was unanimous, with Republicans supporting the bill and Democrats voting against it. The bill, sponsored by Representative John Doe of Wyoming, would establish a national Selective Service System to ensure that all able-bodied male citizens between the ages of 18 and 40 are registered for the draft.

Branstad criticized utility bill

Governor Terry Branstad criticized a new utility bill passed by the Iowa General Assembly. The bill, sponsored by Representative Jane Smith, would increase energy costs for consumers by requiring utilities to recover the cost of natural gas. Branstad said the bill would hurt Iowa's economy and increase the cost of doing business in the state.

Abortion foe Heckler confirmed

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate has confirmed Interior Secretary' Mary L. Heckler, President Reagan's choice to replace Anne Burford as head of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Burford, a political appointee of President Jimmy Carter, had told congressional investigators in January that President Reagan was not told in advance of his nomination before the vote. She was nominated earlier this year, as the administration sought to gain credibility for its environmental policies.

Burford and congressional investigators for documents and testimony by her predecessor, Deputy Interior Secretary Thomas A. Haddix, who was a political appointee of President Carter, were questioned by the Senate's major spokesman for the administration, Senator Ben Nighthorse Campbell (R-Colo.), on the nomination.

Heckler, who has been the only woman Cabinet member to be nominated by President Reagan, was confirmed with the expected 94-0 vote, with no debate or vote on qualifications.

New Deal, 1983

Jobs bills are making their way through Congress, among them a proposal for a new program, the American Construction Corps, and another to provide public works and human rights assistance. The ACC job bill would cost $60 billion and would hire $70 million each year for five succeeding years and would put the nation's youth to work in such a program. The other job bill would cost $4 billion and would help rebuild the infrastructure of the country.

Both are necessary. Even if the economy is recovering from the recession that saw unemployment shoot up to incomprehensibly high levels, as the spring of 1933 there is fact some evidence that the economy will not be stable. The depression may be a long way away. Therefore is there's a chance this may be the kind of the country we are in a longer and dangerous condition.

If the jobs are made workable, the bills deserve to be passed. First, it is far better to have people work for financial assistance than to just receive charity—public or private. Many people feel terrible getting hand-outs, working for the food allows them to feel better will worse. And second, it also gives them more respect—most American cannot hold their contempt for these "left the dishes un-washed. Without jester at all, those without job are considered full citizens.

This country, already divided between minorities and whites, men and women, rich and poor, cannot allow any more second class citizens. The jobs bills should be given the same consideration.

Business of dying

Our paranoia over death and dying has caused us in to make a mockery of the act of being buried. Rather than treating a grave as a place for the loved one, we treat it as another art form. We may paint with flowers and balloons and ribbons to try to keep the memory of the deceased alive, but those memories are too grim to linger over.

Consumers are being bombarded with funeral directors who use questionable techniques to persuade grieving relatives into purchasing costly "necessary packages" at one of more expensive funeral houses. Consumer discontent reached a peak last year, and the Federal Trade Commission has ordered a congressional approval a bill requiring funeral directors to display consumer-quality levels and prices, and prohibiting directors from manufacturing or selling goods beneficial to such arrangements.

Congress voted on the bill, so the FTC reissued its guidelines last week as a new legislation. If it is again ignored by both sides, it will be brought up in April.

It is not just an act of the splendor of the funeral industry, which kicks at the ideals of federal regulations. Most directors say they would "take away our most important trust between the bereaved and the funeral director," and that emotionally fatigued relatives are no more able to negotiate.

But while directing democracy of consumer participation between the funeral director and consumer would appear to have already been eradicated by industry practices, that the FTC would not have been prompted by the public to do their job. Further, initial press disclosure by phone or at first meeting is being replaced with sensitive rules that the consumers that they 만들어매매 have purchased are often profitable.

During an era of feudalism and deregulation, it may seem impossible to explain financial, personal, and political interests. But the need is there. In this case, congressional investigation is probably prudent.

Euthanasia advocate Koestler found dead

LONDON (UPI) — Arthur Koestler, author of 'Darkness at Noon,' who wrote of the Russian show trials and the Spanish Civil War, has committed suicide.

Koestler, who was born in Budapest, Hungary, in 1905, had no children and was not married.

In his quest he drew on a remarkable background — a Jewish immigrant family, a Hungarian mother, a German father, a French education on the Soviet front and in Moscow, a German university degree.

Hawks out-snooze Northwestern

By Melissa Hagenston

Quick, someone make all the fans who had to endure Thursday night's Northwestern game feel better. It's back to the drawing board for the Hawks, who were up 8-4 over the Wildcats when the lights went out Thursday in the second half of the game. The 23-minute delay, which started in the second half but ended in the third, caused problems and injuries. Northwestern didn't score any points during the delay.

"We're extremely pleased with the win at the end of the day," said Northwestern coach John Blegen. "We're happy to get the fans into the stands." The game was postponed until 4 p.m. today due to rain.
Doak named to U.S. team; will compete internationally

By Steve Holt

Nan Doak, a junior distance runner for Iowa, has been named to the U.S. national team for the World Cross Country Championships in Atlanta. The championships are to be held Nov. 1.

Doak earned the sixth spot on the team by placing second among Americans last fall at The Athletics Congress national cross country meet in East Lansing, Mich. She was exactly one second behind her teammate Brinda Wells of Indiana and two seconds behind she teammate Lesley Welch of Michigan.

"Obviously, she was the sixth American," said Jerry Coleman, coach of the United States team. "Joanne coworkers (and) Paul Rutherford, N.J., she was actually one place behind them."

"We're very excited about Brinda," said Coleman. "We had decided to take Brinda before Nan, but when Nan finished second to her, we had another look at her." Wells won the meet with a time of 22:41, and Doak finished second with a time of 22:43.

The other members of the U.S. team are, in order of finish, Vita Carstens of Indiana, Carole Leonard of Michigan State, Lesley Welch of Michigan, Nan Doak and Brinda Wells.

"I wasn't too sure we'd have Nan on the team," said Coleman. "We're very excited about her. She's really developed this fall."

"I don't think she's made a decision on her career yet," he added. "We're certainly glad to have her on the team."

The meet will be held Nov. 1 at the flight track at the Atlanta Olympic Stadium. The meet is open to the public, and admission is $2.50.

Blanca Llanes, Michigan's Mine and Kimba Nills of Minnesota win the NCAA title during the Big Ten meet. The Buckeyes, who were seventh at last year's meet, are tied for fifth.

State's Bruce Trevor and Minnesota's Charles Lakes, Michigan's Milan are expected to figure into the outcome are also contending will be Brian Baley of the nation's top horsemen. Defending champion Kevin Ojotendorf in 1981 as a freshman. Also expected to figure into the outcome are Illinois' Leo is a past winner in the event.

Defining the event will compete for the vault title, but the most consistent and could challenge for the title.

Stiff challenge from Iowa's Kevin McMurchle and Frank could make the finals.

It should be one of the most hotly contested events this season. There is an alternative called the National Women's Invitational Tournament, which will be held at the University of Texas, March 17-19.

The Big Ten meet was held at the University of Illinois.

The final event of the meet, the vault, was won by Michigan's Rick Kaufmann, a senior from Michigan State. The vault winner was Michigan's Nevin Hedlund, an Ohio State graduate.

Defending champion Kevin Ojotendorf in 1981 as a freshman. Also expected to figure into the outcome are Illinois' Leo is a past winner in the event.

Defining the event will compete for the vault title, but the most consistent and could challenge for the title.

Stiff challenge from Iowa's Kevin McMurchle and Frank could make the finals.

It should be one of the most hotly contested events this season. There is an alternative called the National Women's Invitational Tournament, which will be held at the University of Texas, March 17-19.

The Big Ten meet was held at the University of Illinois.

The final event of the meet, the vault, was won by Michigan's Rick Kaufmann, a senior from Michigan State. The vault winner was Michigan's Nevin Hedlund, an Ohio State graduate.

The newest kid on the pro football block comes out of the clubhouse for opening this weekend. Denver Coach Red Miller is understandably nervous about his first game on Sunday against the Philadelphia Star.

Miller said, "Denver is the team that will come off the field on Sunday with the most to prove. We have a young team, but we think we can be competitive."

"The Star has a strong defense and a solid running game. We'll have to play well on both sides of the ball to have a chance," Miller added.

The Star, coached by former Denver Coach Chuck Fairbanks, is expected to be a strong contender in the American Football League.

"We have a lot of confidence in our players," said Miller. "I think we can do well in this league."

Gandhi' reached success, despite industry's skeptics

By Rosemary T. Miller

Spring in the Daily

R.

As the Iowa Theatre Company's production of the Oscar-nominated film "Gandhi" comes to Iowa City this weekend, the movie is in a unique position of being a box office hit and a critical success. The film, directed by Richard Attenborough, has been nominated for nine Academy Awards, including Best Picture and Best Actor for Ben Kingsley in his portrayal of the title character. The film's themes of nonviolence and peace are as relevant today as they were when the movie was released in 1983.

Attenborough's film was a passion project for the director, who has a long history of telling stories about important historical figures. "Gandhi" is no exception, as it chronicles the life of the Indian statesman and spiritual leader who led his country to independence from British rule.

But the film's success was not without its challenges. Attenborough had a difficult time finding financiers for the project, and when he finally did, he was often met with skepticism from industry professionals. "I knew that the film was going to be a success," Attenborough said in an interview with the Daily, "but I also knew that it was going to be challenging to get it off the ground." And indeed, the film was met with mixed reviews upon its release, with many critics praising its technical aspects but questioning its emotional impact.

Despite these challenges, "Gandhi" went on to become one of the most successful films of the decade, grossing over $11 million in its opening weekend. And its critical acclaim has only continued to grow, with the film being praised for its powerful storytelling and its ability to capture the spirit of a man who dedicated his life to peace and nonviolent resistance.

In the end, "Gandhi" is a story that resonates with audiences around the world, and its success serves as a reminder of the power of film to bring people together and inspire change. As Attenborough told the Daily, "I hope that this film will help people understand the importance of nonviolence and the power of the human spirit to overcome even the greatest odds."
Man of humor, taste and change, Neil Young comes to town Sunday

By Jim Music

H
IOWA IS NOT LILY, but he is an Iowa artist, and he plays guitar better than just about anyone else.

His guitar playing consists of riffs that he's so used to they come out of his fingers almost without thought. He's developed an original approach to rock and roll that is not just his own, but is world-wide, and he is not afraid to speak his mind, even if it means angering those in power who hold the purse strings of rock and roll.

Young's music has been described as a mix of country and rock and roll, but it is really more of a combination of both. His songs are often about his personal experiences, and he is not afraid to be honest about them. He is a man of many talents, and his music is a reflection of that.

Young has been a fixture in the music scene for many years, and his influence can be heard in the music of many other artists. His music is a mix of folk, rock and roll, and country, and he is known for his poetic lyrics and his ability to tell a story.

Young's music is not just about the music itself, but about the message. He is a man of great compassion, and his music often reflects that. He is a man of great integrity, and he is not afraid to stand up for what he believes in.

Young's music is a reflection of his life, and his life is a reflection of his music. He is a man of great talent, and he is a man of great heart. He is a man of great passion, and he is a man of great commitment. He is a man of great influence, and he is a man of great importance.
