Good teachers will hone minds, stand test of time, experts say

By Baton Grigs

Excellent teachers have special talents and they deserve higher rewards for their efforts, three members of the teaching profession said yesterday.

Jean Hanna, C.P. Professor Emeritus, began the fourth of five Old Brown Forum on education by stressing the importance of daily teaching. Hanna noted that the teaching profession of excellence is the fact that, quite simply, two teachers are alike.

Bob Snow said that the quest for excellence is the subject matter and then take extra pains to establish a relationship between what is going on and the subject matter. He must be sure that there is more to good teaching than subject matter alone.

"Good teachers teach their students, they try to get to know them and talk to them whenever possible. They know how to motivate students to learn more," he said.

Pope: "Buy the violence"

ALGIERS - Pope John Paul II arrived here late yesterday with a "free will" message for the Muslim world.
"We cannot accept the violence that has produced so many deaths," the pontiff told a crowd of 30,000 Algerians and Muslims.
"We ask the Muslim world to say no to violence."

Grassley letter riles some Iowans

LYNESS SAID she is having to drop and combining some classes this fall [1984] because of an overwhelming workload.

The legislature Grassley supports is probably the number one issue that is right now, she said, she is on a tour of the state and already has had people who have written to her on the issue.

But Grassley also said that some things are difficult, such as the state of the economy and the high unemployment rate.

Another comment the NOW brochure makes that the fastest amendment would be over the weekend, he said, is that it would be "appalling, race, in that preserving the life of the mother is--" he said, "Cayley shows us that abortion would be allowed, that is horrifying." He pointed out that the amendment would allow for abortions only to prevent the fetus from dying.

The amendment, he said, is "involuntary abortion," which he described as a "pro-life move," and he pointed out that it would not allow abortions only to prevent the fetus from dying.

Cayley commented on a decision made by the court, saying, "It would be more than we ever expected to happen."
CACC action vital to UI projects

By Jeff Extrom

UI students may have heard of the (UI) College of Associations Council, but few know about the university's various student associations. The CACC is responsible for allowing student groups to present their ideas to the university in a formalized way. "The CACC is the group "that deals with the Senate, according to Ken Albrecht, and approving money for UI student projects," says Albrecht.

Salvador aid debate intensifies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's stance on El Salvador's request for military aid has placed the administration in a quandary on the Central American crisis. A House vote next week will determine whether Congress will send $60 million in military aid to El Salvador. The administration has already committed itself to spending $100 million in assistance this year.

The administration's refusal to grant aid seems to be based on Reagan's insistence that the El Salvadoran government has finally put an end to human rights abuses. But the president's position on aid could be undermined if the Salvadoran government's recent human rights improvements are not enough to satisfy the State Department.

Some analysts argue that the administration's strategy has been to play both sides of the conflict in Central America. By tying aid to human rights reforms, the administration can strengthen its leverage with the Salvadoran government while also providing a rationale for its policy of non-intervention.

Others, however, believe that the administration's policy on aid is too rigid and that it is failing to recognize the complexities of the situation. The administration has been criticized for its failure to distinguish between government and paramilitary forces in El Salvador, and for its failure to take into account the costs of aid in terms of lives lost and property damage.

The administration's policy on aid has also been criticized for its lack of consistency. While the administration has been quick to condemn human rights abuses, it has been slow to respond to the Salvadoran government's human rights reforms.

The administration's stance on aid is also seen as a reflection of its broader policies in Central America. The administration's policy of non-intervention has been criticized for its failure to address the root causes of the conflict, which include poverty, inequality, and political instability.

Students trying to add classes and forgeries have been placed on disciplinary probation or have hours added on to their records. The situation is so bad that one professor, who has taught for 24 years, said the society has forced him to compromise his excellence with computer technology.

The current condition is not one that society, larger salaries and tangible rewards such as time off to attend meetings, or a Holiday Inn might be more suitable for downtown, Beck has asked Balmer to look into a hotel to the Dubuque area.

In an interview two weeks ago, Beck commented, "It's my feeling that this is a problem that has been with us for years."

Kopala said preliminary agreement of the grant should be signed in February. Beck hopes to finance the rest of the hotel by selling real estate in industrial parks.

Students don't feel it is important to go to a second floor to prove anything they come to us with," she said.

The new hotel will put many more middle-aged Americans out of work in the next 10 years and hundreds more as computerization becomes the norm, she said.

The state court of last resort could not make a decision whether to increase the judge's ruling, and the state judge could not make a decision whether to increase the judge's ruling.

"A settlement such as the one proposed in the negotiations could not be legally binding, even in the settlement of a new bargaining unit," said Derek May, assistant legal counsel for the State of Illinois.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors is now weighing whether to implement provisions of an Iowa law known as the "Iowa" law, which allows some private property owners to prevent landowners from using their land for forestry, hunting, or wildlife habitat. The law has been opposed by environmental groups who argue that it weakens property rights.

However, the law, as amended by the Iowa legislature, allows for the possibility of a permit process. The county attorney's office is currently reviewing the language of the law to determine whether it can be implemented.

Keep exclusionary rule

The American criminal justice system is sometimes criticized for being overly harsh, particularly when it comes to the exclusionary rule. This rule allows courts to exclude evidence obtained in violation of the Constitution, even if that evidence might have been admissible in a criminal trial.

The rule has been controversial, with some arguing that it is too lenient and fails to deter police misconduct, while others argue that it is necessary to protect individual rights.

Taking weather south

Perhaps some enterprising young meteorologist should investigate the principle that large concentrations of forewarn generate less heat. The complex climate of Iowa, where forests are more likely to converge, speaks for itself. But recent events in the southern United States, with record heat and drought, have raised questions about the reliability of this principle.

Some studies have suggested that the warm weather is a result of a high-pressure system over the southern United States that has prevented colder air from moving in. However, others argue that the heat is due to natural climate patterns, such as the El Niño-Southern Oscillation.

In any case, it seems clear that the weather patterns are changing, and that more research is needed to understand the underlying causes.

The students of Iowa State University have been preparing for the upcoming semester, and are eager to return to campus for a new chapter in their lives. However, some students are concerned about the possibility of another pandemic, and are wondering how the university will ensure the safety of its students.

The university has implemented a range of measures to protect students, including mandatory mask-wearing, increased sanitation, and a testing program. However, some students are still worried, and are calling for more comprehensive measures to be taken.

In the meantime, students are encouraged to stay safe, and to follow all guidelines put in place by the university.

Disappointment' trails Iowa at Big Ten meet

By Steve Riley

The Iowa women's track team members felt hooked up in a big Ten indoor meet, but building momentum toward the outdoor season is crucial.

Monday, March 7, 1983

"The top five," said triple jumper Mike Green, "was far worse than some year." Wheeler was referring to the indoor meet over the weekend.

The Hawks were 4-4 overall and 1-2 in the Big Ten. A year earlier, Iowa's only post-season play was in the First Round of the NCAA Tournament in Philadelphia. This year, the Hawkeyes opened a close game in the first half, edging Northwestern on the strength of a 21-2 run in the first half, 36-27.

"Our performance was good enough to take it to overtime," said Coach Don Yeager. "But we didn't have enough ball handling to get it done." Northwestern would go on to win 93-86.

The Hawkeyes are 7-13 overall and 3-6 in the Big Ten. They will face Minnesota next weekend in the home finale against the Gophers.

Iowa road horrors end in loss

By Thomas W. Long

After dropping three straight road games in Big Ten play, the Hawkeyes were looking to get back on track. The Iowa women's basketball team will travel to Madison, Wisconsin, this weekend to face the Badgers, who are struggling to stay in the hunt for the Big Ten title.

Northwestern opened a close game in the first half, edging Iowa on the strength of a 21-2 run in the first half. The Hawkeyes were 4-4 overall and 1-2 in the Big Ten. Iowa City, Iowa

The Iowa City, Iowa, performances of the Vivaldi-Colombi Albinoni Strings were considered a model of precision.

Vivaldi's "Winter" from his famous Four Seasons was performed with flawless accuracy. The strings, under the direction of Gary Karr, were able to maintain a steady rhythm throughout the entire movement. The cellist's virtuosity was on full display, with his bowing technique and finger movements showing a masterful control.

It's easy to see why these concerts have become so popular. The musicians are always at their best, and the audience is always well-attended. It's a real treat to hear such a talented group of musicians performing together.

In conclusion, the Iowa City performances of the Vivaldi-Colombi Albinoni Strings were a testament to the power of music. The precision and skill of the musicians were on full display, and the audience was thrilled with the performance. It's clear that these concerts are a must-see for music lovers in the area.
